THE ADVERTISER, LONDON, ONTARIO, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1908—TEN PAGES

THREE KILLED AT KINGSCOURT STRUCK BY G. T. R. EXPRESS

David Loughhead, Wife and Child Meet Instant Death.

ON THEIR WAY TO CHURCH

Terrible Accident on the Sarnia
Branch 35 Miles From London.

While attempting to cross the Grand Trunk tracks at Kingscourt, a flag station about 35 miles west of London, on the Sarnia branch, Sunday afternoon shortly after 2 o'clock, David Loughhead, a well-known farmer living on the fourth concession of Warwick Township, just west of Kingscourt, and his wife and little daughter were instantly killed by being struck by No. 3, the Lehigh Express. Dr. Chapelle, of Wyoming, the coroner, was notified, and will hold an inquest at Kingscourt this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

On Way to Church.

Loughhead and his wife and child generally attend the Bethesda Church on the sixth concession, Warwick, on Sunday afternoons. They were on their way to the church when the accident happened. When they reached the crossing No. 3 was coming from the east, and there was a freight standing on the tracks just west of the station.

Was Watching His Horse.

Loughhead, according to statements made by eye-witnesses, drove up to the track. He did not seem to pay much attention to the east track, watching his horse to see what effect the train on the west track would have on it, as it was nervous. As he reached the track, the scream of the whistle on No. 3 warned him of the danger. He attempted to hurry his horse, but before he could respond, the rig was struck fairly in the centre.

The three inmates were hurled up the track. The bodies were thrown many feet, alighting on the north side on the frozen ground.

Loughhead's body was thrown 100 feet, while the others were not hurled so far.

The crew of the freight train and the agent at Kingscourt, W. Lamont, rushed to the Loughheads, but when they arrived all three were dead.

The express backed down, but on arriving nothing could be done.

Inquest Ordered.

Coroner Chapelle, of Wyoming, was sent for, and arrived on the scene in a short time.

After viewing the bodies he ordered an inquest, naming Monday afternoon at 1:30, as the hour.

They were then taken to the home of the dead man to await interment. The bodies were not badly mangled, and there were few surface indications of the horrible accident. Almost every bone in the bodies of the three victims was broken.

The horse was instantly killed. It was struck by the engine and hurled under it, being badly cut up. The rig was smashed into fragments.

Dr. Chapelle, the coroner, when interviewed by The Advertiser, declared that an inquest would be held.

"It is a very sad tragedy, and we must discover whether there was any carelessness on the part of any person," he said. "We want to get at the facts of the case, and find out just how the accident happened. We want the facts."

Misjudged Speed of Train.

It seems that Loughhead must have seen No. 3 coming, but thinking that it was a freight, as the express was very late, he misjudged the speed at which the train was travelling, and was caught in a trap while trying to keep his horse from shying at the freight train on the other side of the track.

As a matter of fact, No. 3 was 75 minutes late, and would pass Kingscourt long after the proper time, or the time at which Loughhead was accustomed to see it pass.

The Lehigh Express is due to leave London at 11:22, but owing to the snowstorm and the cold it was one

CITY COUNCIL MEETS TONIGHT

Niagara Power Question Is Likely to Come Up Once Again.

There is little business to be transacted at the meeting of the council this evening, although the Niagara power question, which comes up periodically, will likely cause a debate of some duration.

Every alderman looks at the question from a different angle, and as a result the differences of opinion are liable to keep the aldermen talking for some little time.

The appointment of an assistant treasurer will probably be made to-night. So far as can be learned Mr. W. S. Saunders will get the place.

The naming of three senators for the Western University will take place. Several names have been suggested, among them being Mr. R. A. Little, Dr. A. O. Jeffrey, Principal Radcliffe, of the Normal School; Rev. Dr. Ross, A. W. White, Ald. W. J. Stevenson and Ald. Geo. W. Armstrong.

SWEDISH ROYALTY LANDS AT PORTSMOUTH

Portsmouth, England, Nov. 16.—The King and Queen of Sweden, who have come to England as the guests of King Edward, landed here this afternoon and shortly afterwards boarded a train for Windsor. Full naval honors were accorded their majesties, and the imposing fleet of 28 warships assembled in the bay, fired a royal salute. The Prince of Wales boarded the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, on which the king and queen crossed the channel from Cherbourg, and welcomed the visitors on behalf of King Edward.

U. S. SUGAR TARIFF

Consumers Greatly Interested in Hearing
Before House Committee.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Consumers of sugar were particularly interested in the hearing today before the ways and means committee of the House of Representatives for the presentation of arguments for higher or lower tariff on sugar and its manufacture.

The fight for the free entry of sugar was before the committee today on the claim that the consumer does not get any benefit from the present duty. It also was claimed by those who are opposing the so-called "sugar trust" that the present rate of duty on raw sugar is no longer required for protecting the American sugar growers on the ground that the sugar is raised in this country as cheaply as abroad.

DEATH OF ENGINEER PEARSE

A Well-Known Grand Trunk Railway-man Passes Away.

The death occurred at the residence of his father, 442 Central avenue, on Sunday, of Mr. William Pearse, well known G. T. R. engineer, in his 35th year.

The late Mr. Pearse had worked throughout the Southwestern States, and had also lived in Sarnia for about six years. A year ago he returned from the south, and had been ill ever since. In Sarnia he was particularly well-known, and was an ardent worker in the Methodist Church there. His wife died seven years ago, leaving no family.

Mr. Pearse was a member of the A. F. and A. M., and also of the Brotherhood of Railroad Firemen and Engineers.

He is survived by his parents, two brothers and four sisters, as follows: Messrs. Robert and Charles, of this city; Mrs. W. H. Poole, of the North-west; Mrs. Chas. Johns, of St. Thomas; and Miss Maggie and May at home.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday at 3 o'clock, from his late residence, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pearse, on Central avenue, to Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

WEATHER NOTES.
The area of low pressure which was over Florida on Saturday moved very quickly northeastward, giving heavy rain, with moderate gales, in the Maritime Provinces during Sunday morning.

A shallow depression which developed over the great lakes during Saturday caused light snow in both Ontario and Quebec.

BENNETT'S WILL CLOSE THE DOORS

Vaudeville Has Proven a Losing Venture in London.

BILLS COST TOO MUCH MONEY

Attendance Has Increased 60 Per Cent
This Year, But Expenses Have Been Relatively Great.

After a four years' struggle in London, Bennett's Vaudeville Theatre has decided to give up the fight, and the theatre will be closed permanently a week from next Saturday, or Nov. 23.

This decision was arrived at on Friday last, but was withheld for business reasons until today. The house will be turned into a moving picture theatre.

No official statement from the company is forthcoming other than that the people of London do not want vaudeville, and the house is to be closed.

Has Lost Money.

It is said that the theatre has not made a dollar since it was remodelled three seasons ago. That year it lost $5,000. Last season up to the time of closing, which was two months earlier than usual, it dropped $10,000. Thus far this season it has lost its owners $5,000, an average of $500 a week.

The people of London have never taken vaudeville seriously. They appeared to look upon it as a cheap amusement, whereas, though the price of admission is low, vaudeville acts are very costly.

Each show cost between $1,200 and $1,400 per week, exclusive of the house expenses, and these ran up to $500 a week on an average.

Cost of Shows.

The whole trouble lies in the fact that the prices of acts have jumped from 50 to 100 per cent in three years, and the attendance at Bennett's did not grow in proportion.

The people of London wanted good vaudeville, and refused to go to see them, but although the attendance jumped up, it was not great enough to warrant the company continuing New York vaudeville.

"If I could afford it," General Manager Bennett once said, "I would take 1,000 people from London to New York to see a vaudeville show there. Then they would have been able to judge my performances, and they would have been kinder to me."

Sixty Per Cent Better This Year.

The attendance this year has been 60 per cent better than a year ago up to this time, but the prices of the acts have risen out of all proportion.

Mr. C. W. Bennett came to London in 1904 and rented the old London Opera House from Mr. Alex. Harvey. He had uphill work, but he managed to make money out of the theatre. Then he interested a number of local gentlemen in the scheme, and the local house was remodelled. Theatres were erected in Hamilton, Ottawa, Montreal, and one was rented in Quebec. The latter is closed, but all the others are making money.

What It Means.

The closing of Bennett's means that about 25 men will be thrown out of work, including the orchestra. Local hotels, especially the Savoy and Irons, which had the run of the guests, will also be dealt a blow.

A BUSY WEEK FOR THE MAYOR

Many Meetings Are Scheduled to Take Place.

This is a busy week for Mayor Stevely. Tonight is council meeting. Tuesday there is a meeting of the water commission. Wednesday there is a meeting in Toronto in connection with the Niagara power commission and Ontario Union for the treatment of consumptives, and in the evening the board of works will discuss the gas franchise. On Thursday the board of works will meet, and probably another meeting of the water commission. On Friday evening there will be a meeting of the university governors.

Thursday morning No. 1 committee will meet the representatives from the county council regarding a new hospital agreement.

TURK AND PERSIAN

Young Turks Said To Be After Union
With Persian Nationalists.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 16.—The Novoe Vremya publishes a special dispatch from Tabriz, Persia, saying that Turkey has opened formal relations with the Persian Nationalist organization in Azerbaijan Province. A commission of Young Turk envoys, duly accredited, has arrived at Tabriz and been given an imposing welcome. Abdul Hamid, through the Turkish consul at Tabriz, has presented Satar Khan with a Turkish order. Fears are expressed here, the correspondent says, that the Nationalists will secede, and declare a union with Turkey.

Manager Rechnitzer Has Returned But Refuses to Talk of Packing Co.

Saw Many Great Sights During
His Recent Trip to Europe.

Mr. E. Rechnitzer, manager of the Canadian Packing Company, arrived home from England yesterday, where he has been for the past seven weeks in connection with the business of the firm. He was interviewed by The Advertiser, but declared that he would not discuss the firm's plans at this time.

"I have just arrived home and I prefer not to talk about the firm's business for a day or two," he said. "I will be in a position to talk in a short time, but not just now."

Visited Old Land.

Mr. Rechnitzer reported a very interesting visit to the old land. He visited England, Germany, France, Austria and many other points.

"Europe is a very interesting place to visit just now," he said. "There is always something doing. I was at a demonstration of the unemployed at Trafalgar Square in London, and it was a great sight. I thought I would be crushed to death in the jam. There were many thousands of people there, and as a result there was a wild time. I saw a number of the suffragettes. They are making a very considerable row over there.

"They are in earnest about it, and seem bent on getting what they consider their rights. At all events, they are creating an awful stir."

The Kaiser's Talk.

"I was in Germany while the controversy over the Kaiser's indiscreet interviews was on. The people are really angry over the statements made by the Kaiser, and will not tolerate much more of that sort of thing. His indiscreetness was the source of talk everywhere on the street."

"I saw him at a review while I was in Berlin. He is really a remarkable man, impulsive in the extreme, but with a great deal of sense. I saw him salute for five hours at a stretch, almost as fast as he could—really a remarkable achievement."

"I saw many other interesting things during my recent trip, but I am glad to be back. I will discuss our plans shortly."

Judgment Reserved in Garvey Case Evidence Heard by the Magistrate

Testimony Went to Show That Merchants Have Right to Drive on Walk.

After hearing evidence for nearly two hours in the case of John Garvey, charged by Chief Williams with breaking section 17 of bylaw 769, by driving a lorry on the sidewalk in the rear of his store on Carling street last week, Magistrate Love reserved decision for a week, and stated that Mr. Garvey was to be allowed free and uninterrupted use of the sidewalk for loading and unloading purposes in the meantime.

A Big Crowd.

The court room was filled long before the case was called, merchants all along Dundas and Carling streets, being particularly in evidence.

Chief Williams made some remarks about people driving on the sidewalk. "I am here to hear evidence, and not to listen to arguments," said Magistrate Love shortly. "Go on with the case."

Chief Testifies.

Chief Williams was first called, and related the incidents that led to the charge being laid against Mr. Garvey. He was, he said, simply obeying the bylaw in bringing Mr. Garvey up in court.

Mr. Garvey.

Mr. Garvey was next placed on the stand, and stated that his deed, called for a lot 198 feet in depth from Dundas street. That made his property extend about twelve feet beyond the wall of the building on Carling street.

"I bought the store in 1901," said Mr. Garvey. "At that time there was no sidewalk there. I do a business of between $400,000 and $425,000 per year. This means a great deal of loading and unloading."

"For the past twenty-two years I have been in the habit of unloading goods there. Some times we used to unload goods by having a board across the walk, but this was objectionable, and a compromise was arrived at by which we were allowed to drive up on the sidewalk. This matter was taken

Culture of Morals in Public Schools Strongly Favored by Rev. Lanceley

Rev. Mr. Inkster Does Not Believe in Text Book
However.

The London Ministerial Association met in the Auditorium this morning. In the absence of the president, Canon Hague, the vice-president, Rev. A. J. Bowen, took the chair.

The principal business of the morning was the reading of a paper by the Rev. E. B. Lanceley on "The Culture of Morals in the Public Schools." The fact must be impressed on the mind that the culture of morals is the first point in moral training is to inculcate the desire for such training. Then he went on to discuss the points upon which all are agreed.

"Moral training is a necessity, and the time for such training is during youth, while the mind is yet capable of taking deep impression. Never were conditions more favorable for a revival in moral training than at present, with such well-trained teachers, with such excellent school facilities."

Is Non-Sectarian.

Moral teaching in the schools, the speaker went on to say, should be favored because it is non-sectarian. The fact must be impressed on the scholar that moral laws are as inviolable as secular laws, and without this moral training no education is complete. To make a child proficient in the principle of mathematics or geography, and leave him ignorant of the distinction between right and wrong, would, at the best, be but a half education.

"How shall we accomplish the fulfillment of this end?" asked Mr. Lanceley. "By the use of the present apparatus of training, by the reading of selections which teach good morals, and by the study of text books in morals, the speaker considering it absurd that all study of the principles of ethics should be left for the universities."

Rev. Mr. Inkster Differs.

Mr. Inkster, who was appointed to lead the discussion, said that while he agreed with Mr. Lanceley in a great many things he had said, there were some points where he differed, and some points where he did not see that the speaker's solution would be adequate. Moral teaching by text books had been in vogue in Germany for 100 years, yet it is questionable if the German scholars were any better trained in morals than Canadian children. Mr. Inkster does not believe that morals can be taught, and quoted a conversation with Prof. Earl Barnes in which the latter had said: "I do not think that morals can be taught, we need a moral atmosphere." So Mr. Inkster thought that the greatest teacher of morals was not the text book, but the teacher himself.

Inspector Edwards.

Inspector Edwards said he had come to gain a few suggestions. He said there were three types of people whom everyone apparently felt eminently capable of instructing and criticizing—the preacher, the teacher, and the newspaper editor.

Teachers, he said, were experts in their own line, and the best of them had learned to teach, not by what they say, not by what they do. Mr. Edwards disagreed with the writer of the paper who would have put the teaching of the paper philosophers as moral training in the schools, and he seemed to voice the feelings of the meeting when he claimed that the Bible as the greatest moral instrument, was a sufficient guide, and pointed out by instancing the school law how provision had been made for instruction therein.

During the discussion the Ross Bible came in for a good deal of unfavorable as well as favorable criticism.

The First Sleigh Ride of the Season

The first cutter has arrived. It is in the same category as the first robin in springtime.

It arrived Saturday evening, and was a nice, ordinary cutter, drawn by a nice horse.

The sledding was tough, in the words of the small boy on the corner, but the jingle of the sleigh bells made it look as if winter had really arrived.

A few snow flurries today have made it appear more like winter, but the wise weather prophet points out that real winter will not arrive for a few days yet.

A FAST FREIGHT PILED UP ON DOWN GRADE NEAR GOBLES

Rail Breaks as Engine Passes and the Entire Train Is Wrecked—
Toppling Over on Depot and Rolling Van Into Ditch—Nobody Hurt.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Woodstock, Nov. 16.—An eastbound freight train, running down grade at 45 miles an hour, came to grief at Gobles Station on the G. T. R., ten miles east of here last night about half-past ten. The engine of the train apparently broke a rail in passing, as every car, after the engine, left the track, and piled up in a heap, some going 30 feet in the air. The van, containing the brakeman and conductor, turned over and rolled down the embankment. The occupants had a wonderful escape, but they were able to crawl out of the windows uninjured. They got out just in time to signal and stop a second freight, which was rapidly approaching from the rear, and prevent a further accident. So far as is known there was no person killed or injured in the wreck. One car was propelled against the little frame station, and crashed in its front. The station was unoccupied at the time.

Auxiliaries from Toronto and London are working at clearing away the wreckage, but it will be nearly night before traffic can be resumed. The tracks are torn up for a long distance. The van caught fire, but was extinguished by the crew of the second train.

Engineer Homer A. Stott, of 134

William street, London, was in charge of engine 422.

Thirty Cars Piled Up.

In all about 30 cars were piled up and a mass of wreckage west thirty feet into the air, being topped off by a steel coal car, empty. For 250 feet both east and west the tracks were torn up, and nearly every tie was broken, as the cars plowed along. Some of the trucks were buried in the gravel below the level of the roadbed. Good work will be done if the track is ready for traffic by dark tonight. The loss to rolling stock will be heavy, although no estimate can be had now. Many of the cars were literally smashed, and crashed in its front. The

Vicious Negro Given Seven Months Bit Piece Out of White Man's Face

Walter Hewlett Disfigured for Life One Pat Malone—Bo'h
Were Drunk.

There was a lively time at the police station on Saturday, largely due to the cannibalistic tendencies of Walter Hewlett, a colored prisoner, who was arrested for being drunk.

While being brought to the station, Hewlett fought viciously with P. C. Fysh, striking him on the ear. He had been in the cells long enough to be pretty well sobered up, when Pat Malone was brought in in a very drunken condition.

Hewlett says he was sleeping on a bench in the cells when Malone came in and called him an Indian and pulled him off the bench.

A Fight.

The officers in charge of the station heard a scuffle, and when they went in Hewlett had Malone down on the floor in a corner of the cell and had his teeth sunk in his face.

It was with some difficulty that Hewlett was pulled off, and it was then found that he had bitten a large piece out of Malone's face.

Dr. Belton was at once called, and dressed the wound. Malone will be disfigured for life.

In court this morning Magistrate Love found Hewlett guilty of being drunk, assaulting P. C. Fysh, and of assaulting Malone and occasioning actual bodily harm.

Given Seven Months.

"There is no excuse whatever for your conduct," said Magistrate Love, "and I sentence you to seven months in the Central Prison."

70,000 Attend Pope's Jubilee Mass

Rome, Nov. 16.—A pontifical mass was celebrated this morning at St. Peter's by the Pope, on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of his joining the priesthood. It was the most imposing ceremony witnessed in Rome since the coronation of the pontiff.

There was present not less than 70,000 of the faithful, who had come to Rome from all parts of the world. Following out the democratic ideas of the Holy Father, tribunes had been erected only for his sisters, the members of royal families, the diplomatic corps, and the special missions sent by the heads of state.

The rest of the audience were admitted by ticket. The Papal procession was most magnificent, and brought together a large variety of handsome and rich court costumes. There were thirty-four cardinals and three hundred and sixty bishops in the procession.

Canada was represented by Mgr. Bruchesi, Archbishop of Montreal; Mgr. Sbarretti, apostolic delegate at Ottawa, and others.

The Pope celebrated mass at the high altar, standing above the shrine of St. Peter. At the conclusion of the mass he imparted his solemn blessing to the vast congregation.

Cut to Pieces by a Circular Saw

Ridgetown, Nov. 14.—Mr. Benson Stirling, of this place, met a terrible death today while running a portable circular saw on the farm of a man named Stevens, near Ridgetown.

It is supposed upon Stirling slipped while moving about the saw. He was killed almost instantly, the saw severing his left arm and cutting deep into his body. He leaves a wife and baby.

The Premier to Holiday in Florida

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier will leave for Florida at the end of this week. The Premier has pretty well recovered from his indisposition, but thinks that a vacation trip would benefit him, and remove any ill-effect of the heavy work of the campaign.

Was Arrested for Stealing a Coat

George Stryker, of Chatham, was arrested in that city on Saturday on a charge of stealing the coonskin coat which Mr. John Dillon, of this city, lost on the night of the visit of the Sheffield choir.

Stryker disposed of the coat, and this led to his arrest. He was brought to the city last night, and appeared before Magistrate Love this morning, and pleaded not guilty, but asked to be allowed to reserve election until Wednesday.

This request was granted, and he was remanded to jail until Wednesday.

A Big Grist Before Police Magistrate

Magistrate Love had a busy day today, as in addition to the lengthy case of Mr. John Garvey he had a long list of drunks and other offenders to deal with.

John Palmer appeared on a charge of stealing a crock of butter on the market on Saturday. Palmer stated that he knew the man he was accused of stealing the butter from, as well as he knew his own brother, and asked that he be allowed until Wednesday to find him, and have him in court. He claims he was given the butter to sell, and says he will prove it to the court's satisfaction. He was allowed time to produce his evidence.

John Brown, a vag, was remanded for a week.

Tim Donohue, for being drunk and making himself unpleasant around the house, was remanded to jail for a week to sober up.

Wm. Foley, a drunk, who came home and abused his sisters, was also remanded for a week.

Ed Cookston, charged with being an Indian lister, and being drunk, stated that he was under the impression that his time had run out, and that he was free to take a drink. He was bailed for a week and inquiries will be made. The case of Moses Ellison and Moses Jeff, charged with picking rags on Sunday, was adjourned until tomorrow.

THE GREAT TRANSFORMATION OF SARNIA RAILWAY TUNNEL

Story of Gigantic Work of Construction and Electrification of the Grand Trunk Bore Beneath the St. Clair River.

The electrification of the St. Clair tunnel covers about 20,000 feet or nearly four miles. There is about 4,000 feet of approximately level track at each end of the approaches. There is a grade of 2 per cent for 5,000 feet on each side and a stretch of 1,700 feet in the middle which has just sufficient grade to drain itself.

The work of electrifying the tunnel has been going on for many months and the electric locomotives have quietly eliminated the steam locomotives and taken up the work without any disturbance to traffic, the formal inauguration of which occurred Thursday.

The Power Station.

The power station is situated on the Port Huron bank of the St. Clair River, at a point directly over the tunnel. The building construction is of concrete to the dynamo room floor. The walls above this point are lined with paving block and are corniced and coped with concrete. The roof is of cinder concrete. The dynamo room is lofty and well lighted. The walls are lined with enamel brick to the height of the switchboard, the remaining portion is lined with sand-lime brick. The offices and switchboard room occupy the street front. The basement has plenty of head room and contains the condenser pump groups and other fan groups. The dynamo room floor is so recessed that the auxiliary apparatus in the basement is in view from the dynamo room floor. The boiler room floor is on the same level as the dynamo room basement floor. The striking feature of the power station is the inforced concrete coal bunker. This extends the entire length of the boiler room, and has a capacity of 500 tons. The power station equipment is in duplicate.

Just outside the power station there is a vertical shaft which extends to the tunnel. A reinforced concrete duct chimney has been built in this shaft as a continuation of the power station duct lines. All the feeders pass from this chimney through holes in the tunnel shell into the tunnel. The locomotive feeders tap the trolley and rail at this point, which is the only distributing point for the entire trolley system. There are section breaks and switches for isolating particular sections of the trolley wires in case of accidents, but normally the trolley wires are continuous from the limits of the Port Huron yards through the tunnel to the limits of the Sarnia yards, a distance of 3.7 miles.

In addition to the locomotive feeders there are two feeders for the tunnel lights, two feeders for the Port Huron portal pump groups, two for the Sarnia portal pump groups, a three-phase power feeder and an arc light feeder for the Port Huron yards and similar feeders for the Sarnia yards. These cables are run through the tunnel in ducts which are supported by reinforced concrete beams and secured to the lining of the tunnel shell. There are two of these beams, one on each side of the tunnel. The ducts are covered with a three-inch layer of concrete. The feeders are paper-insulated, lead-covered cables and terminate at the pumphouse switchboards, from which point the arc circuit and the three-phase power circuit continue as bare overhead wires.

In the yards a single catenary trolley construction is used. The spacing of the supporting bridges is 250 feet. There are no obstructions in the nature of intermediate supports, consequently where a number of parallel tracks are electrified, the spans are long, as at the Port Huron passenger station, where one of the spans is a little in excess of one hundred and forty-three feet. The bridges are tied together with guy cables. This enables a lighter structure to be used than if each bridge were sufficiently rigid, without the use of guy cables, to withstand the unbalanced strain resulting from the breaking of several messenger cables and trolley wires.

The trolley wires are 22 feet above the tracks except in the tunnel and short distance outside each portal. The overhead trolley leaves the yards clear of all electrical impediments while the catenary construction with its frequent trolley hangers practically eliminates the dangers arising from the presence of bare circuits.

tons each, and are generally used in pairs. Each locomotive or unit is of 750-horsepower, and one or more can be coupled together, and used as one engine with one engineer.

Protected by Signals.

The tunnel division is protected by a block signal system which extends from summit to summit. The dispatcher's cabin is located at the Sarnia summit, and the other signal cabin at the Port Huron summit. Telegraph orders are used. In addition to the written order the conductor receives a staff when the train enters the block. The switches and signals are locked until this staff is placed in the instrument at the other end of the block. The protection is so complete that not a single accident chargeable to dispatching has occurred during the eighteen years of tunnel service. There is a yard telephone system and a tunnel special telephone line connecting the power station, the two signal cabins at the two portals, the middle of the tunnel and the roundhouse. The dispatcher is the master of the situation. He not only controls the train movements, but the power as well. Any failure of power is immediately reported to him. In case it is trouble with a locomotive he has the engine replaced. In case it is trouble with the distributing system he orders the power cut off, then communicates with the electrical superintendent who takes charge of the repairs. As soon as the repairs have been effected the dispatcher is advised and orders the power turned on again. He is also advised as to any power station trouble that will interfere with train movements. There is no division of responsibility. This arrangement is the logical one since it is the dispatcher's business to get the trains through the tunnel. He must accordingly be supplied with the necessary motive power and be kept advised as to its availability. Likewise in case of trouble on the line he must protect the repairmen by keeping the power off until the proper authority has advised him that power can be turned on again.

Building the Tunnel.

The first preliminary engineering work connected with the construction of the tunnel was boring in the bed of the river to ascertain the nature of the deposit and strata. These borings showed a tough blue clay at all points along the line.

Work on the preliminary drift was begun in October, 1886. A shaft 14 by 6 feet was sunk on each bank of the river to a depth of about 35 feet, or 70 feet below the surface of the river. The drift was pushed out 20 feet on the American side and 186 feet on the Canadian side. These drifts were finally abandoned in July, 1887, after about nine months had been spent upon the work.

The unsuccessful attempt to start the full size tunnel by means of shafts was begun April 20, 1888. These were 23 feet in diameter, lined with brick masonry. These were abandoned when the Canadian shaft was down within 20 feet of the tunnel level.

After the experimental work mentioned above and much careful study of the subject by Chief Engineer Hobson, the shield system was finally decided upon. The shield consisted of cylindrical steel shells, 15 feet 8 inches in length and 21 feet 6 inches in external diameter, made of steel plates one inch in thickness. Each shield was divided into twelve compartments by means of two horizontal and three vertical stays, which were built up to a thickness of two inches. These stays had a knife edge in front and extended back eleven feet, leaving four feet of clear cylinder, into which the end of the tunnel extended. Ten of the compartments were permanently closed and braced of angle iron placed across them. The other two were placed with heavy iron doors, which could be closed at once in case of accident or danger. These doors were situated at the bottom in the centre and through them was passed all the excavated matter. Flush with this heading were 24 hydraulic rams at equal distances around the shield. These rams were eight inches in diameter and had a stroke of 26 inches. By their use the shields were forced forward enough to admit of another section of castings, 18 inches. The power was supplied by Worthington pumps, which were capable of producing a pressure of 5,000 pounds per square inch, which amounted to 125 tons per ram, or 3,000 tons on the 24 rams. These shields weighed 80 tons each.

The engineering work in laying out the line of the tunnel was of the simplest possible description, yet it was carried out with the greatest care, for an error in alignment would not have merely increased the cost of the work, as in an ordinary tunnel, but would have possibly caused the failure of the whole enterprise.

The length of the tunnel from portal to portal is 6,925 feet. The length from portal on the Canadian side to the river bank is 1,729 feet. The length from portal on the American side to the river bank is 2,000 feet. Length under the river bed is 2,290 feet.

The tunnel is a perfect circle with an internal diameter of 19 feet 10 inches.

The grade on the American side is 1 in 50 or 105.60 feet per mile. The grade on the American side is 1 in 50 or 105.60 feet per mile. The total cost of the work was $2,700,000, as expended on preliminary work $ 250,000

Machinery and plant used in construction 250,000
Labor, all classes 900,000
Cast iron for lining 800,000
Other materials 100,000
Real estate, land, damage, legal expenses 110,000
Permanent equipment (tracks locomotives, etc.) 500,000

Approaches 200,000
Engineering, superintendence, etc. 40,000

So accurate was the engineering work that the two shields from the Canadian and American side came together at 11:30 p.m. on Aug. 30, 1890. It was not until Saturday, Sept. 19, 1901, that the tracks were laid and the formal opening took place. There were present in Port Huron on that day all of the Grand Trunk officials, including Sir Henry Tyler, president, General Manager Sargeant, Chief Engineer Hobson and other heads of departments. From that time until a few months ago all trains were hauled through the tunnel by special locomotives built by the Baldwin works at Philadelphia. They are of the "Decapod Tank Freight" pattern and had a guaranteed carrying capacity of 760 tons up a two per cent grade.

Since the tunnel was completed a number of men have lost their lives while taking trains through the bore, among them Superintendent of Terminals Beggs, who entered the tunnel about three years ago to help the train crew whose engine was stalled.

Notes.

The cost of the electrification of the tunnel has been 1,000,000. The Grand Trunk officials will give the visiting newspapermen a banquet at the Harrington between 6 and 7 o'clock this evening. Three of the leading officials of the Grand Trunk Railway, who are in attendance at the reception, formerly resided in Port Huron. They are W. E. Davis, general passenger traffic manager; J. E. Quick, general baggage agent, and James Coleman, master car builder, of the Grand Trunk system. The latter once represented the fifth ward in the common council.

HENEY'S ATTACKER TAKES HIS LIFE

Despite the Close Watch Kept on Him Haas Suicided in His Cell.

San Francisco, Nov. 15.—Maurel Haas, who on Friday attempted to assassinate Francis J. Heney, committed suicide last night by shooting himself in the head with a pistol he had concealed about his person. Haas went to bed at 8 o'clock at the county jail, and covered his face with a blanket.

At 8:40 a shot was heard from his cell, and when the guard entered it was found that he was lying dead on the floor with a bullet-hole in his forehead. A derring-doe was grasped in his hand. His left trouser leg was pulled up, and examination showed a mark on his leg where the weapon rested in his shoe. Haas wore slippers with elastic sides which made this possible.

After he shot Heney, Haas was searched twice, first at the police station and later at the county jail.

He went to bed last night with his shoes on, and again last night when asked why he did this, he said that he would rather sleep with them on. District Attorney Langdon, Detective Burns and Rudolph Spreckles on their arrival at the county jail, after being notified of the suicide of Haas, searched his clothing, and in one of his trouser pockets found a cartridge of the same calibre of the derring-doe with which he shot himself, a .41.

The weapon that Haas used in his attempt to kill Heney was a 38-calibre, and the cartridge found in his pocket could not have been used in that. The opinion was expressed that the pistol was passed to Haas after he was taken into custody. While at the county jail, Haas was in the charge of the police, and a policeman was standing within two feet of his cell when he shot himself. Haas' wife called at the jail yesterday to see him, and two stories are told as to where the interview took place. One says that Haas talked to his wife through his cell door, and the other that they were allowed to go into another room. The conflicting stories could not be reconciled last night. A rigid investigation is being made by the authorities.

The trial of Abraham Ruef, which was interrupted by yesterday's dramatic shooting, will be resumed Monday, it having been decided that the events in the courtroom did not prejudice the rights of the defendant, the jury not being present.

There was some intimation today that the defence would ask for a change of venue, alleging the plea of the inflamed condition of the public mind, but it is thought that such request would not be considered by Judge Lawlor.

At conferences today between Judge Lawlor, Chief of Police Biggy and Sheriff Haggerty, preliminary steps were taken to secure the court from further disorder or violence, and to safeguard the rights of the defendant Ruef.

The vicinity of the courtroom will be patrolled, and a large force of police will be held in reserve.

The plans further provide that in the event of any disturbance the defendants will be quickly and quietly taken from the courtroom.

It is also intimated that Judge Lawlor will exercise his prerogative and continue to keep Ruef in custody during the trial. Precautions have been taken to protect Ruef while confined in the county jail.

Mr. Heney and his family were the recipients of many messages of sympathy and cheer during the day. The messages came from all sections of the United States and some from Europe. One telegram that brought a smile from the pain-drawn face of the prosecutor was a message from President Roosevelt to Mrs. Heney.

A WOMAN'S BACK WAS NOT MADE TO ACHE.

Thousands of Women Suffer Untold Misery Every Day With Aching Backs That Really Have No Business To Ache.

Under ordinary conditions it ought to be strong and ready to bear the burdens of life. It is hard to do housework with an aching back. Backaches come from sick kidneys, and what a lot of trouble sick kidneys cause.

But they can't help it. If more work is put on them than they can stand it is not to be wondered that they get out of order. Backache is simply a warning from the kidneys and should be attended to immediately so as to avoid years of terrible suffering from kidney troubles.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure you in the same way as they have cured thousands of others. Mrs. O. Warren, Radisson, Sask., writes: "I was troubled with very severe pains in my back for years. I tried everything I could think of but they did me no good. A friend told me about Doan's Kidney Pills and after taking two boxes, I have not been troubled since."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 for $1.25, all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AUSTRIA'S NEW CABINET.

Vienna, Nov. 14.—Baron Richard von Bismarck, minister of the interior, in accordance with instructions from the Emperor, has formed a new cabinet, himself taking the office of premier. The Austrian cabinet resigned on Nov. 7 on account of dissensions between the German and Czech ministers, following the attitude of Austria in the Prague and other Bohemian towns.

In the new cabinet Baron von Hoerdtle had been appointed minister of interior, and Herr F. von Georgi, minister for national defence. The ministerial offices have been entrusted to the present departmental chiefs.

UNCLE SAM WANTS TO KNOW

What Japan Proposes To Do as to Manchurian Trade.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Exchanges have been in progress between the American and the Japanese Governments for some months looking to a more definite statement touching the latter's attitude towards Manchuria than now exists. To other nations having considerable interests in Manchuria, Japan has made clear her position in the Asiatic country with much more definiteness than she has to the United States. Officials are careful to state that no treaty between the two countries along these lines is contemplated; simply a clearer understanding with Japan is desired as to what her intentions in Manchuria are. Japan assented to the American propositions many years ago by Secretary Hay regarding the territorial integrity and administrative entity of China, and has indicated her intention of withdrawing all her troops in Manchuria whose presence dates back to the Russian-Japanese war. Baron Takahira, the Japanese ambassador, is conferring with Secretary Root on the subject and today was twice at the state department presumably in connection with the matter.

American businessmen have complained grievously that their trade with Manchuria has not revived since the far to the extent it should have, and this it is believed is a share of the situation which has animated the state department in taking up the question with the Japanese Government. It is alleged that while nominally the country is open to the trade of all nations, the Japanese have their own special restrictions over business operations that practically only merchants from that country can successfully and profitably carry on trade in Manchuria. The Japanese declare that the country is open and free to all nations, and that trade is unrestricted. That conditions are far from satisfactory to the United States is evident from the action of Secretary Root.

PERPLEXITIES OF A TRADE COMMISSIONER.

The Canadian trade commissioner to Japan, Mr. W. T. R. Preston, is realizing that there are some serious obstacles to be overcome before a direct trade between the Mikado's country and the Dominion can be established. It appears that in the Orient there are certain vested interests which have long had a monopoly in the markets of Asia, and when the newcomer appears on the scene they are up in arms. Among these interests are large merchants, who keep big stocks for sale to Japanese or Chinese merchants, and what are known as European commercial agencies, representing European or United States manufacturers. As might be expected, these people oppose any suggestion for direct trade with any country, and Canada's efforts in that direction are naturally vigorously opposed. This hostility has found voice in certain English newspapers published in Japan, which of late have been printing violent attacks on the Canadian commissioner.

In a recent report to the department of trade and commerce, Mr. Preston discussing this point, says:

"One very important member of a foreign board of trade in Japan, a short while ago, characterized the presence of commercial representatives here, particularly the Canadian representative, as unnecessary, unneeded for, and likely to have a disturbing effect upon existing conditions. This opinion had been freely expressed, because, believing the interest of Canada as of the first importance, I found it necessary to suggest that Canadian traders should make an effort outside of the usual foreign business channels to get Canadian commodities on the markets of the east. If a Canadian trade representative would divide his trade inquiries between various European commission agents in the east, his office would soon become a sinecure; he could have a very pleasant time and would be looked upon by a certain class as the proper kind of a government trade representative in the east. But the general result would be that Canadian trade would remain just about where it is; commodities from the United States, Europe and other places with which Canadian products can easily enter into favorable competition, would retain their hold on the market, and any hope of a satisfactory expansion of Canadian trade in the east would fall to be realized. This, frankly, is the situation."

Mr. Preston is convinced that it would be useless for Canadian firms to expect assistance from the British consular service. There is a marked difference, the commissioner says, between the duties of a British commercial attaché in the east, and the responsibilities devolving upon a trade commissioner for one of the colonies. The former is directly charged with protecting the interests of British agents, merchants and manufacturers, whether their headquarters are in Britain (and though they may be represented in the east by commission agencies), or whether they are regularly established British concerns in the east. Any course that is likely to interfere with the volume of their business, or which may possibly affect their business in any way, does not fail to meet with the disapproval of the British trade representative. He considers it as clearly his duty to protect the interests of the British merchant or commission agency, regardless of all other interests, just as it is the duty of a Canadian trade commissioner to advance the interests of the Canadian traders or manufacturers regardless of the interests of those from any other country.

The reasons are, therefore, obvious why the British official representative has no sympathy with the suggestion for direct trade. Manifestly, the trade problems presented in Japan must be considered by the Canadian trade representative only on such lines as are more likely to advance the interests of Canadian exporters or traders, even if these lines point to direct trade as a most satisfactory solution of the question. Direct trade, as Mr. Preston says, will undoubtedly interfere with the business of foreign general merchants or traders in Japan, as well as with foreign commission agencies.

Evidently the commissioner is justified in his conclusion that—

"If Canadian trade is going to grow to the proportions that the geographical position of the Dominion for supplying the eastern market render possible, then the expansion, for the reason given, as well as for others, in my humble opinion, must take place upon the lines of direct trade between the Canadian dealer or producer, and the Japanese dealer or consumer. This has to be done regardless of the criticism or unfriendliness on the part of those in the east who may consider the carrying out of this policy as detrimental to their own personal interests. The question is of too serious a character to be settled in the way that may be pleasing to any section of the foreign commercial life in the east. It may be solely upon the lines in which the interests of Canada may be most satisfactorily advanced."

TAFT AND BRYAN.

The Presidential elections have been followed by a revival of industrial and commercial activity. Of course, Republicans attribute it to the victory of Mr. Taft, and the consequent assurance that there will be no drastic revision of the tariff. This argument is not a valid one, as Mr. Bryan was unfairly and even scandalously treated by powerful interests, which looked upon him as a greater enemy of their special privileges than his opponent. Many large firms openly announced that they would not resume operations, and others threatened a cut in wages, if Bryan were elected. This species of intimidation had a strong influence on the working classes. They were led to believe that their bread and butter depended upon Republican success. Yet the acute industrial depression in the United States coincided with the highest tariff the country has ever known. The inevitable rebound is beginning, and would, no matter what happened to the tariff. Prosperity would be retarded by a period of tariff-tinkering, but it would in the end be sounder and healthier if the customs wall were lowered.

If Mr. Bryan had been elected and had been able to carry a reasonable measure of tariff reform through Congress, cutting out the excrescences and monopolistic provisions of the present schedules, the condition of the country, now that it is emerging from one of those cycles of depression which no tariff can prevent, would become so satisfactory that the Republicans would be robbed of the cry which has frightened the American people into maintaining for so long the abuses of the Republican fiscal policy. There is not much hope that the tariff-revision pledges of the same party in this election will result in substantial reforms, but as Mr. Bryan, if elected, would have been confronted by a hostile Senate, he would have been unable to do more than Mr. Taft, and it is just as well that the Republicans should bear the full responsibility for the fiscal legislation to be enacted by the present Congress.

THE DEADLOCK IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

The political deadlock in Newfoundland suggests an apparent defect in the British system of government. Of the 36 seats in the Legislature, 18 have been won by supporters of Sir Robert Bond, and an equal number by the People's Party, under Sir Edward Morris. When the Legislature meets the present government will not be able to command its confidence. The driving-wheel of the machine will have come to a "dead-centre," and some exterior impulse will be needed to set it in motion again. This may be supplied by the governor ordering a new election, and continuing to hold elections until one party gets a majority of the seats.

Some American newspapers cite the situation as a proof of the superiority of the United States system in one respect. In the American republic the executive department is separated from the legislative, and even if Congress were in a deadlock the administration would not be interrupted. But even in the condition of affairs in Newfoundland an interregnum is not inevitable. The present cabinet may retain office till it meets the Legislature, and if defeated on a vote of confidence, the governor may call upon the other party to form an administration, and then order an election at once. At no time need the governor be without a ministry—a set of men to administer the various departments.

Logically, the British system is full of flaws and defects, but it presupposes common sense in the people who have to work it. On the whole, it has done its work well. And it has this advantage over the American system: the union of legislative and executive authority enables the will of the people to act more directly on the government than when the government is divided into several branches, each in a large measure independent of the other, and often in collision.

It is only fair to say that the Federal Opposition has been strengthened. The loss of Bennett, Fowler, Lefurgey and Pope could have no other effect.

The story that Hon. W. J. Hanna intends to follow Hon. Mr. Brodeur's example by abolishing the patronage list, and allowing Grits to sell something to the London Asylum, is a wicked invention.

Mr. Aylesworth has returned to Vienna to resume treatment for deafness. He came back to Canada against medical advice to take part in the elections. No public man has made greater personal sacrifices from a sense of public duty, and there is evidence that even his party opponents appreciate it.

The Sheffield Choir has sailed for home after two weeks of the strenuous life. The Yorkshire singers have delighted many thousands of Canadians, but the enjoyment has been one-sided. The memory of the discomforts they suffered at Hamilton, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal may wipe out all other impressions of Canada. Some one has blundered.

If denunciation could do it, the Calgary Eye-Opener would have been squelched long ago. Mr. McGillicuddy took the only practicable way—by getting after the individual responsible for the fifth. For this service he should have at least the commendation of journalists whose calling has been discredited by such a sheet as the Eye-Opener. There has been a chorus of praise for Mr. McGillicuddy's courage from the newspapers of the country. Our local contemporary, however, takes him to task, and thereby puts the stamp of its approval on journalism of the Eye-Opener class.

HAPPY IGNORANCE.

[New York Tribune.]
Francis Wilson, the comedian, apropos of certain curios, whereon he believed he had been swindled, said with a laugh: "The one drawback to knowledge is that it reveals so many dupes and swindlers to us. One summer, for instance, I was doing Switzerland. In the neighborhood of Geneva, where the Swiss talk French, I climbed a little peak one fine morning, and on my arrival at the chalet at the top I heard the pretty handmaiden call into the kitchen in excellent French: "Quick, mother, quick! Here's a tourist. Put some more wood on the fire. I know they always like it warm from the cow."

A DIAGNOSIS.

[Boston Transcript.]
Bystander: Doctor, what do you think of this man's injuries?
Doctor (of Irish extraction): Two of them are undoubtedly fatal; but as for the rest of them, time alone can tell.

EVOLUTION.

[John B. Tabb.]

Out of the cloud a silence,
Then a lark;
Out of the heart a rapture,
Then a pain;
Out of the dead cold ashes

THE YORKSHIRE SINGERS.

[Hamilton Herald.]
But hereditary aptitude could not account for the facility of the Sheffield choir singers in reading music at sight—an accomplishment which enables them to master new music quickly and with little trouble. This they owe in large measure to early training in the Tonic Sol-Fa system. Their accomplished conductor, Dr. Coward, bears testimony to this. He told a Herald reporter that nine-tenths of his singers were trained in childhood in Tonic Sol-Fa, and to this fact he attributes their facility in reading music.

PRECISE INFORMATION.

Lodger: Here's a nice breakfast to ask a friend to. Did you lay the table, Mary?
Mary: Yes, sir. All but the eggs, sir.

A SONG FOR NOVEMBER.

[Catholic Standard and Times.]
When croaks croak in the leaden sky
O'er prone grey field and spectral wood,
And all that greets thine ear and eye
Sends eerie echoes through the blood,
Oh, close the door and come within;
Where never winter's chill may win;
Proportioned to thy need of me,
The measure of my love shall be.

When boiling night winds snarl and moan
Round gabled roof and frosty pane,
'Tis not our common hearth alone
'That makes the winds' forebodings vain.
But those twin sparks of fire divine
It feeds from in thy heart and mine;
For here, my dear,
Thy need of me, my need of thee,
The measure of our love must be.

THE HUMAN TEMPERATURE.

[New York American.]
Put to the test of the thermometer, it appears that the normal temperature of the body is almost invariable, regardless of latitude or season. Putting the bulb of the thermometer under the tongue of an Eskimo at the frozen north, or of a man under the blazing sun of the Tropics, we find that in each case, the body being in a state of health, the temperature is about the same, the difference not amounting to one degree. We may say absolutely that the average normal temperature of a human being is 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit, just as we may say that at sea level water boils at 212° Fahrenheit.

MODEST REQUIREMENTS.

[Chicago Record-Herald.]
A steady job that pays me well,
A pleasant home in which to dwell,
A raincoat when it's raining;
A liver that is always right,
A never-failing appetite,
The wit to say things that are bright,
And I will quit complaining.

A chance to travel now and then,
The friendship of my fellow-men,
The luck to never stumble;
Hair that will not forsake my head,
A nose that never may turn red,
Sweet dreams when I crawl into bed,
And I will never grumble.

A manner that the ladies like,
The strength to knock out when I strike,
A bright sun that never shines;
A little richer every day,
Youth that will never wear away,
Three times a year a raise of pay,
And I will cease repining.

To have that which I want without
The sorrows of delay or doubt,
A tongue that's ever ready;
To be from worldly cares so free
That other men will envy me,
To wake each morning filled with glee,
And I will never worry.

UNBUSINESSLIKE METHODS.

[Branford Expositor.]
It is unfortunate that in so many ways the Hydro-Electric Company has shown that it is not a business-like organization. It has asked the municipalities to do business with it by methods which are not current in ordinary business circles. One of the most objectionable is that there is no finality with regard to price, such as a private firm having power to sell would be compelled to give, and another that the buyers which the ratepayers have been asked to vote were all submitted on the "shut-your-eyes-and-see-what-you'll-get" plan, and were voted upon, not by freeholders only, but by the entire municipal electorate.

The near approach of the municipal elections affords an opportunity for a further consultation of the ratepayers, and wherever possible this course ought to be avoided.

THE BEST RESOLUTION.

[La Touche Hancock.]
I'm not a snot,
'Bout my hips,
I'll wear a hat,
High or flat,
Don't need those tips
With my shoes,
Do what I choose
And fix my hair
Just as I care,
I will not squeeze
My waist to please
The public sight
And be a fright.

The show which opens at Bennett's today, is said to be very strong, and consists of some picked acts, which include Sam Watson's faraway circus, the biggest and funniest animal act in vaudeville, Edgar Allen, and his excellent company, will offer Geo. M. Cohan's clever sketch, entitled, "The Fortune Hunter's Misfortune." Chas. Sweet will give some very clever piano playing and singing, Peacock Goldie and Lulu will be seen at their best today with a new act, introducing some unique dancing and singing. Carson and Willard will offer a pretty little act, entitled, "The Dutch in Egypt." Myers and Rosa, champion lasso experts, will also be seen, and the other act to complete a very strong bill will be Misses Mills and Morris, the minstrel misers, offering some very clever up-to-date minstrel ideas. The sheath gown matinee series is now in full swing and it looks as if this week's matinee business will be phenomenal.

"Divorce" Tomorrow.
What promises to be an event of surpassing interest, not only as regards London, but in the making of theatrical history as well, will be the presentation tomorrow evening at the Grand Opera House of Paul Bourget's great drama, "Divorce," the English version of which has been made by Mr. Stanislaus Stange.

IDA CONQUEST,
With "Divorce" at the Grand Tomorrow Evening.

Mr. Fred C. Whitney, who saw this play in Paris, where it created the greatest furore in years, was not only struck by the possibilities of its adaptation for the American stage, but determined to present it as few dramas have been presented in this country.

For this purpose he has engaged Miss Marion Terry, a sister of Ellen Terry, and herself one of the greatest actresses on the English stage, to create the leading role of "Gabrielle Darras." For some years Miss Terry devoted herself to the creation of special roles in London, and she had, up to the time that Mr. Whitney prevailed upon her to come to this country, resisted many flattering offers to show theatregoers on this side her marvellous dramatic ability.

"Divorce" in Paris, and recognizing the possibilities afforded her in the leading role, she accepted Mr. Whitney's offer. In London, therefore, she will make her first appearance in Ontario, and the event is one worthy of particular notice.

Mr. Whitney presents the play here with one of the strongest casts that has ever been gotten together in this country. Miss Ida Conquest, for many years one of the leading women with the Frohman forces, is afforded an opportunity to give full rein to her dramatic talents in the part of Bertha Planat, the nurse; and the other women in the cast include Miss Julia Hanchet and Miss Florence Howard; while the part of the 11-year-old child of Gabrielle, is entrusted to Gladys O'Neill.

The male parts will be portrayed by the three leading actors in America. Mr. Vincent Serrano has the part of Lucien, the son of Gabrielle, by her first marriage; Mr. John Glendinning, who plays Albert Darras, and Mr. Eben Plymton, who will lend all his splendid art to the portrayal of the part of Pere Euvard, the Catholic priest.

Chauncey Olcott, the delightful Irish play, in which Chauncey Olcott will be seen at the Grand on Thursday evening, is one of the most successful pieces in which that popular comedian has been seen in his entire starring career. It is of particular interest from the fact that it is the first Irish play in which the Irish fairies have been an important incidental element to be produced in nearly half a century. The interweaving

STAHL'S WIDOW DEAD

Mysterious Death at Boston of Late Ballplayer's Widow.

Boston, Nov. 15.—While the Boston police were not inclined today to hold any person responsible for the death late last night in a South Boston doorway of Mrs. John Stahl, the baseball widow of "Chick" Stahl, the baseball player, there were still several mysterious circumstances to be cleared up. The most important of these was the absence of a considerable amount of jewelry. In seeking to account for this fact, and for the reason for Mrs. Stahl's presence in the rather poor neighborhood in which her body was found, the police sought a man who was seen to cross Andrew's Square, South Boston, with Mrs. Stahl, just before she entered the hall in which she died. This man is believed to have helped Mrs. Stahl into the doorway, but was not seen to leave the house.

The police waited for the result of the medical examination, which was set for this forenoon, before attempting to make any arrest in the case. Up to the time that relatives of Mrs. Stahl notified the absence of jewelry, the police had believed the case to be one of heart failure. But with the advent of robbery as a possible motive, the case appeared to be one of murder. According to Mrs. Stahl's father, John Harmon, the jewelry worn by her when she left home, was valued at more than $2,000.

Mrs. Fred Smith has removed from Talbot street to 710 Waterloo street, and will receive the first and third Wednesdays of the month.

THE AMETHYST CROSS

By Fergus Hume

And Tim was as good as his word. Lesbia reached the cottage to find that her father had left a note saying he had gone to London for a few days. He was always stealing out on mysterious errands, possibly connected with his equally mysterious business.

Of late no odd characters had been coming to the cottage, but Hale was absent much more frequently. On this occasion his absence was welcome, as it gave Lesbia a chance of arranging her plans with Canning. What these might be she had, as yet, no very clear idea. All she intended to do was to explain the situation and ask The Shadow what was best to be done. When she received his opinion, she could then take a step forward into the veiling mists which surrounded her.

While Tim rowed down to Cookham, which he did after landing Lesbia at the bottom of the garden, the girl ran into the cottage. She found that she had it all to herself, as true to his plight and that of George was too desperate to permit of over-nice feelings.

With some color, therefore, she related the whole story from the time that Walker had proposed to the result of her visit to Maud Ellis.

"I was forced to dismiss Mr. Walker," she said in addition, "because my father came back to tell me that Miss Ellis had threatened to have Mr. Walker arrested. I saw Miss Ellis also, as I have told you, and she declares that she can prove Mr. Walker's guilt and will do so unless he marries her."

Canning, with his eyes fixed on her, heard the whole tale without comment. At the end he nodded. "What do you wish me to do, miss?"

"I want you to learn who committed this burglary at Mr. Tai's house, so that Mr. Walker can be cleared."

"But how can I do that, miss, when I am a servant to Captain Sargent? I have my duties to consider."

"I know that," Lesbia faltered, and became downcast, "and then you have no experience in looking into these things. I am sorry you cannot help me."

"I did not say that, miss."

"Then you will?"

The Shadow reflected, but did not take his eyes from her eager face. "Yes!" he said at length. "I will help you."

"Oh, Canning, thank you so much. But how?"

"I can't say, yet, miss. In the first place, I must leave Captain Sargent."

Lesbia rose impulsively. "I don't want you to lose your situation."

"I had intended to give the captain notice long ago," explained Canning, rising in his turn. "What you say decides me. I shall go to London, and in one way or another I may be able to learn who stole the jewels."

"But why in London? They were stolen at Henley."

"Quite so," the two thieves—if Mr. Walker is to be believed there were two—must have taken the jewels to dispose of them in London. Leave everything to me, miss. I was in an inquiry office, once, and know how to go about these matters. But," he hesitated, "it will require money."

"Oh!" Lesbia uttered an ejaculation of dismay. "I have none."

"Can't your father give you some, miss?"

Lesbia shook her head. "He wants me to marry Captain Sargent and so will not allow me to help Mr. Walker. No, my father will give me nothing. What is to be done?"

"I don't know, miss. But I have no money, and I must have at least fifty pounds to work on. I shall leave about the burglary first and then will discover who knocked down Mr. Walker and stole the cross."

He paused. "Has Tim saved any money?"

"No, poor soul," sighed Lesbia. "My father never pays him any wages. I am sure he has not a penny."

"If he had it, there is no one from whom I can borrow, and—here a sudden idea came to the girl, and she flushed crimson with mingled hope and nervousness. "Oh!" she cried. "He might! He might!"

"Who might, miss?" asked the man sharply.

"Lesbia took no notice. "Fifty pounds," she murmured. "It's a large sum of money. Still he might, he—" she stopped again as she saw The Shadow looking at her curiously.

"I want you to leave the house by the back door, and later the sibilant whisper of The Shadow.

In a few minutes Canning presented himself, looking more lean and dismal than ever in his customary suit of ink black. But his haggard face was lighted up with an eager smile. The mere fact that Lesbia had decided to avail herself of his services made him as gay as such a sad personage well could be. Canning was desperately anxious to repay the kindness he had received.

"I am glad to see you," said Lesbia, cordially. "You lost no time."

"No, miss," whispered the grim man, who stood with long hanging arms at the door. "Captain Sargent went to London today with your father, and I came back with Tim at once. I am so glad you want me to help you, miss."

"I need your help very badly," Lesbia sighed, passing her hand across her brow. "Will you not sit down, Canning?"

"In your presence, miss? Please excuse me."

"But you are weak after your illness. Sit down. I want you to."

Thus urged, The Shadow sank softly on to the extreme edge of a convenient chair placed near the door. Here he fixed his sad eyes on the beautiful vision at the window and adored in silence.

Lesbia turned matters over in her mind. She knew that she would have to speak very plainly, and had a natural reluctance to doing so, since Canning was a servant and a stranger.

Still, he was the sole person who could help her, as now that George was out of her life, temporarily, at all events, she felt very lonely. Her father neither gave her affection, nor desired any, and certainly would not put out a hand to save George, much less clear his character. Why should he, when he wanted Walker out of the way, so that his daughter could marry Sargent?

Lesbia thought of these things with her eyes on the floor, and finally determined to confess everything, as her father had done. "I have been thinking of you, miss," she said suddenly, and gave him a new position at once, "you are a gentleman!"

"I was a gentleman!" he replied bitterly, and dropping his use of the word "miss." "Now I am Captain Sargent's valet and a wretched, but I am also your very devoted servant, Miss Hale," he bowed. "Let it remain at that."

"But how did you come to—"

"Don't ask me—don't ask me," said Canning, hurriedly. "Some day you will learn how I came to occupy this position. Meanwhile, get the fifty pounds from Charvington—Lesbia noticed that he spoke quite as an equal of the nobleman—and give them to me. I shall save your lover and make your path straight for you."

"Can you do this, Mr. Canning?"

"Yes," he said simply. "Good-night, Miss Hale. Please say nothing to Tim of what I have said, and say nothing to Charvington. Tomorrow night I shall come for the fifty, and the—"

he paused, opened and closed his hands several times, and then vanished with a sigh. He might indeed have been a veritable shadow from the noiseless way in which he disappeared.

Lesbia remained spellbound. In a flash it occurred to her that she should long ago have guessed that The Shadow was other than he appeared to be. Many things which had puzzled her became plain, and she wondered how a gentleman had sunk so low as to be a spy, and to occupy the position of Sargent's valet. But she had too much delicacy to ask Canning, until such time as he chose of his own free-will to speak out.

Besides, she had much to think about in connection with her proposed borrowing of fifty pounds from Lord Charvington. And unless she could procure that sum, there would be no chance of George being saved from the clutches of Maud Ellis.

The nobleman in question was a cousin of Mr. Hale's and had once or twice been to the cottage. Indeed, Lesbia had reason to believe that Lord Charvington allowed her father a certain sum every quarter, although this seemed strange, in the face of Hale's assertion that he could give her two thousand a year if she married to his liking. Also, there was the business in the city, of which Lesbia knew nothing. Why should a man in business accept an annuity?

It was all very strange, but then everything connected with Mr. Theophilus Hale was strange, and now that Lesbia had her thinking-cap on, she began to mistrust her father. Why did he keep his business secret? Why did he accept an annuity, and then declare that he could give her a large income? Why did he have such shady people at the cottage, whom he scarcely permitted her to see? Altogether, Lesbia became aware that there was something sinister about her father's position. She felt like a watcher of a black cloud waiting for it to discharge lightning. More than ever did she determine to have at least the mysteries of the burglary and of the cross cleared up. The old time of peace had passed away for the girl, and now she felt that she would have to go forth and do battle.

With regard to Charvington, she knew him moderately well. He had always been kind to her, and she had heard her father state that the nobleman was her godfather. It seemed rather odd to apply to him for a loan of fifty pounds, but Lesbia was not only desperate, but also very unsophisticated in worldly ways.

Almost without considering what she was about she wrote a hurried letter, asking him to lend her fifty pounds for six months, and promised to explain later why she desired the loan. She proposed in her own mind to repay the money by selling the amethyst cross when Canning should get it back for her, which she believed he would.

Of course, the whole business was very naive and very childish, and a girl more versed in worldly things would never have ventured to take such a step. But Lesbia, just like a trusting child, asked for the money, and Lord Charvington sent her a check, by return post and invited her to come and explain matters to him personally. Lesbia danced with joy.

"Now!" she said to herself. "George is safe! Thank God!"

HUNDREDS OF ELDERLY FOLKS ARE GETTING RID OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

SIMPLE PRESCRIPTION GIVEN AND FULL DIRECTIONS TO PREPARE MIXTURE.

That the readers of this paper appreciate advice when given in good faith is plainly demonstrated by the fact that one well-known local pharmacist supplied the ingredients for the "vegetable prescription" many times within the past two weeks.

Announcement of this simple, harmless mixture has certainly accomplished much in reducing the great many cases of kidney complaint and rheumatism, here, relieving pain and misery, especially among the older population, who are always suffering more or less with bladder and urinary troubles, backache and particularly rheumatism.

Another well-known druggist asks us to continue the announcement of the prescription. It is doing so much real good here, he continues, that it would be a crime not to do so. It can't be repeated too often, and further states many cases of remarkable cures wrought.

The following is the prescription, of simple ingredients, making a harmless, inexpensive compound, which any person can prepare by shaking well in a bottle. Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Any first-class druggist will sell this small amount of each ingredient, and the dose for adults is one teaspoonful to be taken after each meal and again at bedtime. There is enough here to last for one week, if taken according to directions. Good results will be apparent from the first few doses.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, it was stated today, will leave for Vienna about the first of the year, to remain as long as it may be necessary to restore his hearing, which has been defective for some time.

When in Vienna last summer, Hon. Mr. Aylesworth was assured that his ailment was curable, and he then hastened home to take part in the general election, which was in progress.

He now goes back to the specialists confident that he will be able to return in a few months with his hearing fully restored. As he will be absent during the session his departmental duties will have to be looked after by one of his colleagues, probably Hon. Charles Murphy.

DANDRUFF

AN EASY TASK TO CURE IT WHEN YOU KNOW HOW.

There are three kinds of dandruff cures: Good dandruff cures. Bad dandruff cures. And plain liquid junk.

The first is good to put on the head; the second is good to keep off the head; and the third is good to flush out the sewer.

The owners of good dandruff cures say our remedy will cure you in two weeks or money back.

The owners of bad dandruff cures guarantee nothing, but spend their money buying fakes at the good dandruff cures, which policy they consider is a clever method of enticing the sheekles from the unwary.

Parian Sage is a good dandruff cure.

It is guaranteed by W. T. Strong to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It kills the dandruff microbes, it promotes a new growth of hair, it makes hair soft and luxuriant, and is without doubt the most pleasant and invigorating hair dressing made today.

To every reader of The Advertiser, both man and woman, we want to say these few words:

If you have tried other dandruff cures, hair restorers, and have failed to receive any benefit from them, don't give up hope, try Parian Sage at our risk.

HIRES ASSASSINS TO SLAY MOTHER

Daughter Asks Detectives to Beat Old Woman "Until She Died."

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Plotting matricide in the most cold-blooded manner, in order to obtain $7,000, May L. Otis, 36 years old, carried her plans to the point where she believed four days would see their fulfillment, then was arrested by the men she believed her fellow conspirators.

She was to point her mother out to the man she had hired to commit the crime, that he might make no mistake. She had paid over $100 cash and signed a note for $2,400 to procure the commission of the crime. She had outlined in detail how her mother was to be done to death and had warned the assassin as she for the crime and the money which was to result from it, she exhibited the most intense satisfaction at what she believed the certain fulfillment of her plot.

Shows Greed in Talks.

In all her conversations her greed was uppermost, and before entering up the details of her plan she made sure of the exact amount which she might hope to derive through her mother's death.

Mrs. Sarah Otis, the mother and intended victim of the unnatural daughter, is 57 years old. Her home in Chicago is with a sister, a Mrs. Smith. She lives in the rear of 328 Walnut street. All her life she has worked as a domestic and by economy has accumulated something over $5,000 and kept up a life insurance policy for $1,500. Her daughter, too, always has done menial work. Her home is at 640 Forty-sixth place, and until recently she had worked for the Kline Optical Company, 52 State street.

Plots While on Visit.

In September, this woman went to Maunton, Wis., to visit her father. The daughter joined her there Oct. 22 and remained until Oct. 30. Apparently, from the developments, she was plotting then against her mother, but in no way betrayed her feelings toward Mrs. Otis.

One week ago, soon after her return to Chicago, she visited the Keystone Detective Agency, 234 LaSalle street. She had determined on her plan of action. First she wished to make sure the amount for which she was plotting. The superintendent of the detective agency is Robert C. Stolsman. She insisted on seeing him personally, and told him that she wished merely to ascertain how much her mother's estate amounted to.

Mr. Stolsman agreed to furnish her a schedule of the property, unaware of the woman's purpose. He ascertained that Mrs. Otis was possessed of mortgages amounting to $4,800, the life insurance policy of $1,500 and $1,000 cash in the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank.

The daughter's eyes lighted with greed as she perused the paper on which Mr. Stolsman had scheduled the estate.

"And to think all that should be mine," she muttered. Suddenly she turned to Mr. Stolsman and demanded:

"How far would you go for money?"

Staggered by the question, the head of the detective agency hesitated, then hoping to learn the woman's purpose, said:

"Well, I don't know. I'd go a long way for money."

"And so would I," Miss Otis declared to have the money. "Now, with my mother out of the way, I would get all she has. We can arrange it very easily. She is pretty old, and it would not be hard to get away with her."

Mr. Stolsman pretended to be impressed and willing to undertake the crime.

"But I'll have to think it over," he said at last. "You come back tomorrow."

Tells Detective Chief.

When Miss Otis had departed Mr. Stolsman went to Captain O'Brien of the detective bureau to seek advice. The story was unfolded to Captain O'Brien, who at first refused to credit it. Finally convinced that the private detective was not dreaming, he instructed him to make an engagement with Miss Otis to complete the details of the murder.

The interview between Captain O'Brien and Mr. Stolsman was on last Monday. Tuesday Miss Otis again called at the detective agency and insisted on knowing how much Mr. Stolsman would demand for carrying out the plot, and agreed that the following afternoon she was to pay him $100 cash and sign the note for $2,400.

Mr. Stolsman in return was to have a man ready who would undertake the actual crime.

"Murderer" Is Detailed.

The "murderer" selected was Detective Dennis Mackey of headquarters. All the financial details having been arranged, Miss Otis was instructed by Stolsman to return at 6 o'clock last evening to meet the murderer.

Assigned to the case with Mackey was Detective Peter Fitzgerald. He waited at the street door, while Mackey went to the office of the detective agency to meet Miss Otis.

There she explained to him that she would lure her mother to Chicago within four days and would accompany Mackey to the railroad station at which she would arrive and point her out to him. Then he was to follow her until they reached some dark street, where he was to murder her in any manner that seemed best to him.

"But I want a good job done," Miss Otis warned.

Then, Miss Otis, highly pleased at what she believed the approaching fruition of her plan, left the office. As she stepped from the elevator she was arrested by Detective Fitzgerald. Confronted at the Harrison street police station by Detective Mackey and Mr. Stolsman, she admitted that she had plotted for her mother's murder and expressed chagrin that she had failed.

WILHELM MADE MATTERS WORSE

The Nation Indignant at His Indifference to the Crisis.

Berlin, Nov. 14.—The Kaiser, who is still with Prince Furstenberg's hunting party at Donaueschingen, will leave tomorrow for Kiel, where he will preside on Monday at the swearing in of naval recruits. He will also hold a conference with Chancellor Buelow, which it is expected will settle the question of the latter's retention of the chancellorship.

Chancellor von Buelow carries with him to this momentous interview the support of the Bundesrath and a great majority of the Reichstag, to say nothing of the bulk of public opinion. The Emperor's absence from Berlin and occupying himself in hunting or other amusements in a remote part of the empire while Parliament and the people are in a ferment of excitement, has produced the worst impression and is sharply criticised by newspapers of all sections.

The Conservative party, which is composed of ultra-loyalists, tried to divert the abuse to the chancellor by issuing an official communication upbraiding him for not shielding the Kaiser in the Reichstag, and for not summoning him to the capital in the course of the last momentous day, but the Conservative press, although it generally supports the emperor, does not condemn the Kaiser's apparent indifference in a grave national crisis. The nation now impatiently awaits the outcome of the Kiel meeting, which is expected to end in the resignation of the chancellor, followed by that of the Prussian cabinet.

FROM NEWSBOY TO MILLIONAIRE

Jake Berger, of Winnipeg, Made
Rich Strike in Alaska.

Winnipeg, Nov. 14.—There is always a romantic interest attached to the man who drifts back to civilization from a country where the gold lure is the paramount attraction in men's lives and when the miner in question has returned successful and opulent to his native city, where as a boy he was a street vendor of newspapers, this interest is surely enhanced an hundredfold.

Such a man is Jake Berger, late of Nome, Alaska, who arrived in Winnipeg yesterday and who is occupying apartments in the Royal Alexandra hotel, a man who has forced his way to the top in the struggle for supremacy at the gold fields. Surrounded by all the elegance that wealth can afford, Berger, nevertheless, reflects in his features something of the rugged life he has lived and shows all the broad-minded and large-hearted traits of the man who has lived long in the open.

In 1898, when the gold fever had reached its height, Berger left Winnipeg on his own account. He was 26 years of age at the time, and confident of his ability to succeed, struck out for the Klondike, going in by way of Chilkoot Pass. From the first it was a case of dogged persistence, and at times it was a grim struggle. Then came the news of a rich strike at Nome, and the young Winnipegger in 1899 joined the rush and found fortune. At first, with thousands of others, he worked with a rocker on the beach at Nome, and later with his partner, J. T. Sullivan, cleared up a million dollars by operating on Daniel's Creek. Afterwards they bought out a company, which is now capitalized at $500,000, and this, with other properties, is operated with the most improved machinery.

MADAME ST. ANDRE ACQUITTED.

Montreal, Que., Nov. 14.—After being locked up all night the jury in the case of Madame St. Andre, accused of attempting to shoot Leon Duchesne, a saloonkeeper, returned a verdict of not guilty. The case has occupied the court of king's bench for several days. Once friends, the two had quarrelled, and Madame St. Andre, it was alleged, drove to Duchesne's place in a cab and fired a revolver shot through the saloon window. Madame St. Andre was formerly an actress.

WOULDN'T ACCEPT LEGACY.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—Because William Hill, of Guelph, refused to accept a legacy of $1,000, his mother applied today at Osgoode Hall to have him declared a lunatic. Mr. Justice Riddell, to whom application was made, did not yield to what must have been a natural inclination to grant a request supported by such convincing evidence, but reserved judgment.

John Noe, a well-known resident of Ingersoll, committed suicide last night by taking carbolic acid. No reason can be discovered for his rash act.

GREATEST OF HEALERS

VICTORY SCORED BY LAMPHERE

Coroner's Verdict Ruled Out as Evidence of Death of Mrs. Guinness.

Laporte, Ind., Nov. 14.—Today was decidedly Lamphere's day in the Laporte circuit court room, where the farm hand of Belle Guinness is on trial for murder of his mistress and her three children.

At 5 o'clock, four witnesses, Drs. Mack, Wilcox and Long and Sheriff Smutner had been examined and the testimony of a fourth was of a nature that proved the death of Mrs. Guinness through positive identification of the adult body found in the ruins.

It is the general opinion that the state has thus far failed to establish its contention as to Belle Guinness' death. The rings said to have been found on the hands of the adult body are being played as strong evidence that the body was that of the Guinness woman, but the defense will contend that Belle Guinness placed the rings on the hands of a cadaver.

A signal victory was scored by the defense in Judge Richter's instructions to the jury that the coroner's verdict must not be considered as evidence of Belle Guinness' death.

Lamphere Brightens Up.

Ray Lamphere entered the court room this morning a changed man. He was not the same Lamphere of the jury examination, listless and apparently unconcerned. The color of his face resembled a fresh tomato and his eyes shone out from sunken sockets like two pieces of burning charcoal would blaze from a sheet of snow.

The prisoner paled at the opening of the prosecutor's case, and it is believed that court adjourned just in the nick of time to prevent a collapse. That the exhortation of the prosecutor greatly affected the prisoner is undeniable.

Judge Richter announced that in fairness to the jury court would be held on Saturday during the trial.

Coroner First Witness.

Coroner Mack was the first witness on the stand today. He was quite uncertain about his answers at times. He testified to the finding of the bodies in the charred ruins of the Guinness home and said one was that of an adult female, the other three of children.

The testimony of Dr. J. L. Gray, who conducted the autopsy on the body of the adult female, found in the upper vertebrae down to the fifth, were also gone. The left arm was burned to the upper third. The right arm was disconnected at the shoulder. The right leg was burned off at the knee. The left leg was burned off at the ankle and most of the flesh to the left knee was burned away. An adult right arm was tightly clenched on a piece of cloth. There was a band ring on the second right hand finger. On the left third finger there was a small diamond ring with the inscription inside, "R. S. to J. S., Aug. 27, 1894."

In the hand ring with the inscription "F. G. to J. S., 3-5-96."

The heart was dilated and all four compartments were filled with clotted blood. The lungs were normal, but appeared cooked. The stomach was empty. The liver was normal, as were the adjacent organs. The back was burned more than the front.

Dr. Gray also testified that with the body were parts of a felt mattress and remnants of a child's clothing.

Dr. Gray stated that he believed that in life the person had weighed 200 pounds. This was about the weight of Mrs. Guinness. Her testimony that a body which had gone through twelve hours of fire would shrink about two-thirds. He said the body of the woman after the weighing 73 pounds. Dr. Gray said the cause of the woman's death was asphyxia, caused by the fire.

Dr. Gray testified that the clenched hand was a post-mortem condition that frequently followed death by suffocation, and cited the case of a woman who had been hanged.

A. Hollander, Chicago, who was suffocated by coal gas, and of the anarchists who were hanged in Chicago following the haymarket riot. He said these bodies after death showed the same condition. He personally viewed these bodies.

The witness admitted that a similar condition of the body followed death due to strychnine poisoning. The trial will proceed tomorrow.

WOMAN BLOWS UP CAB WITH BOMB

Takes Short Ride in Vehicle and Leaves Infernal Machine in It.

New York, Nov. 14.—The explosion of what is supposed to have been a dynamite bomb in a taxicab in front of the Grand Central station on Forty-second street, created excitement in the vicinity about midnight. The cab was wrecked, but so far as known no one was hurt. According to the police the machine was hired by a woman in front of a Broadway restaurant and she is supposed to have placed the bomb.

Diamond Phanaus was the chauffeur in charge of the taxicab. He said he was waiting in front of a Broadway restaurant when a young woman dressed in black appeared and the Grand Central station. Upon arriving at the depot the woman stepped from the taxicab and hurried into the depot.

Phanaus said he looked into the cab and saw what appeared to be a tin box on the floor, and just entered the woman and had just entered the door of the station when he heard an explosion, followed closely by another, but slighter shock.

Forgetting the woman, Phanaus turned to the door again. He found his taxicab had been blown to fragments.

TORTURED BY THIEVES

Contractor Strapped to Tree in Woods and Left to Perish.

Huntington, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Charles Thomas cut his throat and fell to the floor in a dying condition as detectives today burst open the door of the house in which he was hiding. Thomas was removed to the Nassau County Hospital, where it was said he would die. According to the police the man made a statement, in which he said he was one of the men who a few days ago held up and robbed Antonio Borla, a contractor of Amittville, L. I. Borla was tied to a tree in a dense woods and his clothing cut off with razors. His flesh was gnawed by a pack of times. A sum of money was taken from Borla, and the man was left to die from exposure. Borla was told that if he escaped and told anyone of the theft, the robbers would return and kill him. All night the

Archduke Leopold of Austria Stirs Up
Some Old Stories.

Berne, Switzerland, Nov. 14.—Leopold Woelfling, formerly Archduke Leopold of Austria, is prosecuting a journalist here for defamation of character. The journalist in retaliation threatens sensational revelations by promising to read letters from the Emperor of Austria to the Grand Duke of Tuscany.

Archduke Leopold of Austria, the son of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, was cast off several years ago by his father when he became enamored of Mme. Almonici, a Bavarian actress, and married her. Emperor Francis Joseph ordered his name stricken from the army list, and from the role of the Court Knights of the Golden Fleece. He then assumed the name of Woelfling. Divorcing his actress wife in July, 1907, because she joined a sect of vegetarians, and was in the habit of taking sun baths without her clothes, Woelfling married Frau Ritter, daughter of a horse owner. Woelfling is a brother of ex-Crown Princess Louise, of Saxony, whose escapades as the Countess Montinosa made her notorious.

Hamilton Defeats Ottawa 11 to 9 in Strenuous Game at Kingston.

Kingston, Nov. 14.—With practically no wind to impede the game, the Tigers succeeded in pulling off a hard-fought victory by the close score of 11 to 9, and landing the Interprovincial championship.

Despite the large contingent that followed both teams, there were only about 2,000 people enthusiastic enough to face the cold raw weather to see one of the most momentous games of the Rugby season. The teams:

Ottawa—Back, Powell; halves, McCann, Williams, H. Kennedy; quarter, Kile; scrummage, Sheriff, Ferguson, Kennedy; wings, Stronach, Vaughan, Church, Aylmer, Phillips, Ryan.

Hamilton—Back, Powell; halves, Moore, Beggs, Simpson; quarter, Boland; scrummage, Craig, Burkholder, McCarthy; wings, Marriott, Isbister, Grog, Barron, Wigle, Loftus.

Referee—Phil McKenzie. Umpire—Wm. McMaster, of Montreal.

First Quarter.

Hamilton wins the toss and Williams kicks off for Ottawa. The play is very even, the ball being kept at centre field. Hamilton gets in some nice passes for substantial gains. The game is inclined to be rough, Isbister, Barron and Phillips being ruled off. Williams is carried into touch for a twenty yard gain for Ottawa. Hamilton gets the ball and kicks to Kennedy, who is downed by Tope at mid-field. Williams attempts a drop without success and Moore carries the ball back to mid-field. Ballard, Tope and Biggs get away for a twenty-yard gain. Aylmer is ruled off, Ottawa having to play two men short, and the quarter ends with Hamilton in possession, fifteen yards out, there being no score.

Try for Ottawa.

An exchange of punts leaves the position unchanged. Ottawa's outside gives Hamilton the ball. Moore makes a disastrous fumble of Williams' kick, Vaughan securing the ball for the first tally of the game. Score Ottawa 5, Hamilton 0. Several fumbles by the Hamilton backs gives Ottawa several chances which they are not able to take advantage of. McCann is

QUEENS DOWNED
BY THE VARSITY

Toronto Team Scores Twenty to Eight and Ties the Inter-collegiate Series.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—Before a crowd of over 4,000 spectators, and in a blinding snowstorm, Varsity succeeded in tying for the Intercollegiate championship by defeating Queen's, with a score of 20-8.

The teams—Varsity—Back, Dixon; halves, Newton, Lawson and Galt; quarter, Corry; scrummage, Hume, Bell, Ritchie; wings, Hall, McDonald, Lee, Ritchie, Ramsay, Duncanson.

Queen's—Back, Williams; halves, Macdonell, Turner, Leckie; quarter, Moran; scrummage, Bruce, Brewster, Gibson; wings, Gallagher, Lawson, Buck, Thompson, Elliott, Murphy.

Referee—Dr. W. B. Hendry. Umpire—Russell Britton.

Queen's Wins Toss.

Queen's wins the toss and decides to kick with the wind. Lawson makes ten yards on the kickoff, and kicking on the second down Williams is dropped at Queen's 20-yard line. Queen's loses possession on off-side, and after two successive backs have been blocked Galt kicks over for a rouge. Varsity presses hard. A bad pass near the lines gives Varsity a chance, and a muff by Queen's back is returned for not giving yards. It is returned to them, however, through interference by Queen's. Williams makes a nice return on a long punt, Lawson muffs but makes a quick recover twenty yards out. Queen's steals the ball, but again loses possession through interference.

A muff by Queen's ten yards behind the line looks like a sure tally for Varsity, but Williams clears by a long kick. Dixon in returning kicked too high and Queen's is downed twenty yards out. Offside by Varsity gives Queen's a chance. The ball is forced down the field, Williams punting over, forcing Dixon to rouge like an offside. Queen's possession thirty yards out. Newton makes a fine flying catch, but is nailed twenty yards out. Varsity's legs ground on bucks, and Queen's gets possession on Varsity's 5-yard line, and Dixon is again forced to rouge.

Try for Queen's.

An exchange of punts leaves Varsity in possession five yards out. Queen's gains possession on the first down, and Elliott goes over for a try. Turner fails to convert. The game now becomes a punting match, the play remaining even, and time is called with Varsity in possession twenty yards out.

Half time score, Varsity 2, Queen's 2.

Varsity Gets Wind.

Varsity starts hard, playing with the wind, but Queen's puts up a fine game and Dixon is again forced to rouge. This ends Queen's scoring.

Hard work by Varsity brings the ball into Queen's territory, and Williams is nailed ten yards out, and with only five yards to go, Queen's plunges over for a try, which Ritchie converts, thus tying the score. With the wind in his favor Varsity keeps Queen's playing hard on the defensive. Leckie is forced to rouge, and after Galt has twice failed to drop a goal he finally kicks over the dead line.

A Gale Blowing.

Taking advantage of the heavy wind Galt continues to notch point after point. Two touches in goal and two kicks to the dead line put Varsity out of immediate danger of a reversal. Queen's rallies gamely, forcing the play, but Galt, with the wind behind him, relieves easily. Lawson, who has been playing with an injured shoulder, goes off. Again the game is Varsity's, and another dead line is scored.

Galt's Great Play.

Murphy is ruled off, which gives Varsity the advantage. Galt secures Williams' punt and kicks to Leckie, who is downed 20 yards out. Williams punts to Galt, who secures the ball, and with the whole Queen's team between him and the line, makes a zig-zag run of over forty yards for a try which Ritchie failed to convert. The game is all Toronto, and only the time left to save another score. Varsity being in possession of the ball only two yards out.

Final score, Varsity 20, Queen's 8.

RUGBY ROUGES.

Gordon Southam, all the talk to the contrary, persists in his avowed intention of staying out of the game.

Three wins for Toronto Varsity in one day, and two championships, is a record anyone might be proud of.

The question as to the limits of a referee's authority is a very burning one in public school circles during the past few days, the public school soccer series, calling forth a very good test case on the subject. The game stood 1-0 in favor of the Princess team, but towards the close of the game the ball was kicked into touch, and the line man held up his hand to denote the fact. Not unnaturally the defense slackened their vigilance, and the ball was kicked through the goal.

Despite the statement of the line judge, that the ball had been kicked into touch, the referee decided that the goal was not dead, and hence the goal was added. Not unnaturally the rule all decisions of his subordinate officials, it seems to us very unwise that he should exercise the right, except in the case of some very flagrant infraction in the ruling, which was not proved in this case. Nevertheless, the decision stands, so the two teams are now tied in the series. The deciding game will in all likelihood be played at Carling Heights Tuesday afternoon.

Meeting Between the Bolters and the Smaller Organization, Dec. 5.

New York, Nov. 14.—President Powers of the Eastern League, and also the chief executive of the National Association of Minor Leagues, arrived here from Chicago yesterday. A committee representing the two warring leagues, composed of P. T. Powers, J. D. O'Brien, C. H. Havenor, Edward Hamilton, C. A. Chapin and W. H. Watkins, have arranged to hold a special meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria on Dec. 5, at 10 o'clock, to discuss the action of the major leagues. At this meeting all of sixteen clubs in the Eastern and American Association will decide whether peace or war will be the outcome of the tangle.

M'GILL DEFEATED
BY OTTAWA COLLEGE

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—Ottawa College defeated McGill in the final game of the inter-collegiate series here today by a score of 12 to 3. Ottawa played a fast game, tackling and punting fine style, while the following up of the wide did much towards giving Ottawa College the game.

Half-time score: Ottawa College 7, McGill 3.

The Ottawa line was stronger than the locals, and proved dangerous when it had the opportunity. But Ottawa's good play gave them very little chance, while McGill fumbled repeatedly, and it was one of these fumbles in the last half-minute of play which gave the Ottawa the final score.

Ottawa College 12, McGill 3.

DRISCOLL WON FIGHT

Little Englishman Impresses New Yorkers.

New York, Nov. 14.—Jem Driscoll, the English featherweight champion, made his American debut last night at the Fairmount Athletic Club, when he out-pointed Matty Baldwin, of Boston, in a six-round bout. Driscoll showed himself to be a shifty two-handed boxer, and held the upper hand throughout the bout. His style is much on the order of Palmer and Flimmer when those two fighters were in their prime, but he lacked their cleverness, although he may appear to better advantage when he becomes accustomed to the surroundings. He was somewhat nervous during the early part of the first round, but when once settled down he showed himself to be a clever boxer and master of many of the tricks of the ring.

NEW COLLIERIES TO BE OPENED IN THE CROW'S NEST DISTRICT

The Beaver Collieries Will Rival the Famous Crow's Nest Coal Company's Collieries at Fernie and Michel.

Pincher Creek, Alta., Nov. 13.—The citizens of this town and the adjoining neighborhood have for several years been using, when they could obtain them, the coals from a mine about ten miles west of here, known formerly as the Mill Creek mine, now more generally known as the Beaver Collieries. The coals from this property are peculiarly adapted for domestic purposes, and are very much sought after by our people, as they burn with a clear flame, giving out very little smoke, producing no soot in the pipes and chimneys, and last, but not least, they are much longer than any of the other coals produced in this district.

So much were the coals from what are now known as the Beaver Collieries preferred, that the coals from the Crow's Nest coal mines and the Lethbridge coal mines could not be sold in competition against them, even though they were sold at 50 per cent less per ton. The property referred to has fallen into the hands of the Western Oil and Coal Consolidated, a concern that has been operating very largely in the oil field south of here. They have acquired about 7,000 acres of these coal lands and are now opening up the collieries to put them on a basis of one thousand or twelve hundred tons per day. The property is situated about six miles immediately south of Pincher Creek, about ten miles southeast from the Crow's Nest Pass. In a report made last February, Frank B. Smith, E. M. and B. Sc., inspector of coal mines for the Dominion Government, estimates that the Beaver Collieries will produce over 75,000,000 tons of marketable coal. The company recently secured the services of Professor John Bonsall Porter, C.E., and D. Sc., principal of the mining department of McGill University, Montreal, who is reputed to be the best coal expert in Eastern Canada.

Professor Porter has just completed his investigation and it is learned that his report is in every way satisfactory and practically confirms the report made by Mr. Frank B. Smith, who is probably the best-informed coal man in the west. These experts estimate the minimum tonnage of coal to be over 70,000,000 tons, and the facilities for cheap mining are exceptional. The present total output of all the Crow's Nest collieries is a little over 10,000 tons per day. Some of the coal gathered at the enormous deposits of coal on the Beaver Collieries when it is shown that there is sufficient coal on these lands to produce as much as the present total tonnage of the whole Crow's Nest district. For the next 27 years, and Professor Porter estimates that the tonnage might exceed the present estimates by more than a third. The coal is of the highest grade of bituminous coals, and is most easily sought after by the railway companies for steaming purposes, but it is probable that when its qualities are more generally known it will be greatly in demand for domestic purposes. The development of this very valuable property in the vicinity of Pincher Creek adds another element to the progress of the town, as all the supplies for the new collieries will, undoubtedly, be purchased at this point, and it is expected that the company will make railway connection with Pincher Creek Town. There is a considerable increasing demand for the coal of this district on the American side, in Colorado, Idaho and Montana, which are dependent at present on Pennsylvania and Ohio, three times as far distant, for coal and coke, and which, up to the present, none of the colliery companies have attempted to supply, for the reason that they are short on their orders for the local demand. All the colliery companies at the present time in the Crow's Nest district are running double time, and most of them have their total output sold for twelve months ahead. The rapidly growing population of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the development of the mines and smelters of British Columbia, the remarkable railway extension and development of the great west, and the opening up of varied manufacturing industries in the Middle West and Far West of Canada and the United States, have created and are making a demand for fuel which will tax all the colliery companies to their utmost limit of production for a good number of years to come. The wealth of Alberta as a province is scarcely appreciated by the people of the east. This town is in the centre of one of the finest agricultural districts of the west of Canada. It has for many years held a prominent position as a ranching centre, the oil industry is attracting attention from all parts of the continent, the coal is of the very highest grade of bituminous coal, suitable for steaming, domestic and cooking purposes, and lying adjacent to the coal fields are some of the richest deposits of iron ore to be found anywhere in the west. Alberta, particularly the southern part, will in a few years be one great hive of varied industries.

Electricity will be used to cause the salt to penetrate the meat and thus prepare them for market in one-quarter the time the present method requires.

GOVEZ HEADS CUBAN REPUBLIC

The Leader of the Revolutionists Elected President of the Island.

Havana, Nov. 15.—At the close of an election which was conducted with great enthusiasm and complete absence of disorder, it seems certain that Gen. Jose Miguel Gomez and Alfredo Zayas have been chosen president and vice-president, respectively, of the new Cuban Republic, with strong Liberal majorities in the Senate and House of Representatives.

Mr. Magdon said: "I cannot express too highly my appreciation of the enthusiasm and prudent regard for order with which the Cuban people have conducted this important contest. I am absolutely certain that they will loyally abide by the result, establishing to my complete satisfaction their complete fitness to be entrusted with the government of the republic."

At 9:30 p.m. complete official returns from Havana indicated that the city was overwhelmingly Liberal. Few returns had been received from the provinces, but estimates gave the island to Gen. Gomez by from 25,000 to 30,000.

The Conservative leaders generally admit the defeat of their party. Tonight the streets are thronged with rejoicing Liberal crowds. One party, composed mostly of negroes, while passing the cafe of the Hotel Inglaterra, which is a traditional Conservative resort, clashed with a group of Conservatives on the sidewalk. Knives and pistols were drawn and several shots were fired, some of them breaking the windows of the cafe and causing a panic among those seated within.

Lieut. McReynolds, of the marine corps, ran out of the cafe and interposed himself between the combatants. He made a speech in Spanish and succeeded in inducing them to stop fighting.

In Cardenas a slight affray took place, in which two men were injured. Throughout the island an extraordinary early heavy vote was cast, vastly in excess of that cast in the August election, where 182,000 of 450,000 in total registration of 450,000.

Gen. Mario Menocal, the Conservative nominee, received the returns in the Hotel Sevilla. He said this evening that he was confident that he had polled sufficient votes in the provinces to secure his election.

Joseph Miguel Gomez is 53 years of age, and a native of Santa Clara Province. He participated in two Cuban revolts and was one of the commissioners sent to Washington to advise as to a practical method for dissolving the revolutionary army.

In August, 1906, Gomez was arrested, charged with conspiring against the administration of the late President Palma, but was released after one month's imprisonment.

CurlingCAVALRY REGT.
FOR TWO COUNTIES

Armories Will Be Erected at Woodstock, Ingersoll and Preston.

Woodstock, Nov. 14.—A cavalry regiment for the counties of Oxford and Waterloo, with two squadrons of 85 men each, in Oxford, and one in the north, and one in the south riding, and one in Waterloo, is at last an accomplished fact. The preliminary work has been under way for a considerable time, with the result that military orders coming from Ottawa yesterday announced the organization of the Twenty-fourth Cavalry Regiment, with Col. W. M. Davis, of Berlin, as commanding officer, and with headquarters at Woodstock.

The regiment will be recruited at once, and will go to camp for the first time next June, at either Niagara or Goderich. The regiment will be made up of the pick of the young farmers of the two counties, and will without doubt, be a splendid body of men, and a credit to the militia and the district.

The squadrons will be made up by each township contributing a troop of about fifteen men. For each squadron an armory building will be erected by the Government. The first for the North Oxford squadron will be at Woodstock; for South Oxford, at Ingersoll; and for Waterloo, at Preston.

The officers of the regiment are: Lieutenant-colonel, Major Davis, Berlin; captain and adjutant, Capt. A. Lapierre, Paris; North Oxford officers: Major, Capt. J. M. Ross; captain, Dr. Sutherland, Princeton; Lieutenants, H. J. McIntosh, Woodstock; Allan Munroe, Embro; George McDonald, Thamesford; Dr. Sutherland, Embro.

South Oxford Officers—Major T. R. Mayberry, M. P. P.; major, W. A. Edgar, Ingersoll; Lieutenants, Justus Miller, Mount Elgin; F. L. Clarkson, Swainsburg, Wm. Sheldon.

North Oxford Officers—Major T. R. Mayberry, M. P. P.; major, W. A. Edgar, Ingersoll; Lieutenants, Justus Miller, Mount Elgin; F. L. Clarkson, Swainsburg, Wm. Sheldon.

Waterloo Squadron Officers—Major, Francis Moss, Preston; captain, Mr. Clare, Preston; also four Lieutenants. Those who join the regiment supply their own horses. The regiment's dress uniform will be of a light blue, but there will be as well a khaki suit for ordinary wear.

OXFORD MEN IN PRANK

Observe Guy Fawkes Anniversary and Land in the Jail.

London, Nov. 15.—The average English college boy or university man, as he is called over here, is a very different person from the youth at Harvard, Princeton or Yale. He is a very dignified individual, and he does not make half as much noise as our American cousins, at least in public. Sometimes, however, the men at Oxford and Cambridge so far forget themselves that they fall into the hands of police.

At Oxford the undergraduates always celebrate Nov. 5, the anniversary of Guy Fawkes' abortive attempt to blow up the British Parliament, by letting off fireworks in the street. This year the Oxford police arrested a number of undergraduates as the result of this custom. That the ordinary, common policeman should have the impertinence to lay a hand on an Oxford undergraduate has raised a storm of protest from the aristocratic Parents of the offenders.

It was William Neville who has strong ideas about the creation of the brand of gentleman. As the parent of an undergraduate who was arrested, he says, to use his own words:

"The modern plan of employing a clumsy, lower-class policeman to keep high-spirited gentlemen in order, is to take a young man and put him in the hands of the police, and must provoke a breach of the peace, and the poor boys who have no criminal intent, but plenty of the high spirits of innocent and pure youth, found themselves in the police court, concurring in their degradation and shame."

If the wicked Oxford policemen persist in looking up naughty undergraduates when they frequent the streets, let us off cannon crackers, and the opening up of William evidently believes that the university is doomed as a breeding place for English gentlemen.

"In my day the police never interfered with the undergraduates. There were no Nov. 5 rows, and the noisy freshman matured into the sensible and dignified man with a refined manner and a high tone of thought, because he was always treated as a gentleman by gentlemen."

CHRISTABEL PANKHURST.

[London correspondent New York Sun.] Her courage, her skill and her clear sincerity appealed to every man who was present, and through them and the descriptive reports of the trial to thousands of the general public who have hitherto shrugged their shoulders at the girl agitator and dismissed her and her cause with at best a laugh of amusement. Still it must be confessed that no small part of her victory was won by the most ancient and potent of woman's weapons, her beauty and her tears.

Her eloquence and her skill made her appeal, but eloquence and skill can be met with like eloquence and skill. It was in her conduct and her character, these qualities this brilliant girl, doubtless much against her will, added that argument so few men can resist, a beautiful woman's tears.

Here were no tears of plaintive appeal. At no time was her eloquence more successful, more defiant than when it streamed forth half choked by sobs that would not be repressed. That slight and graceful

HAPPENINGS OF A DAY IN BUSY EAST LONDON.

WOLSELEY BARRACKS IS QUITE A CITY

And Yet the People of London Know
But Little About It.

One of the most interesting establishments in the city and at the same time a place about which citizens know very little, is Wolseley Barracks.

The barracks is a city in itself, having a fire department, a hospital, a restaurant, a jail, a library, a billiard and pool parlor, a tailor shop and other departments of a city.

The force is composed of 75 men, the establishment having been cut down from 126 during the past year. Although there is no recruiting going on at present, an order to increase the staff is expected at any time.

On entering the service each man is provided with a full military wardrobe, including underclothing, and also a tunic and other winter clothing. He is also provided with a shaving outfit and other toilet articles.

The recruit is provided with clothing of the best fit in the stores department, and is then turned over to the tailor, who makes all alterations. This system enables the men to appear as natty as possible.

They are then put through their military course, and are trained for practical work. One of the officers in speaking to The Advertiser, stated that the men of such regiments as the Seventh, would be of little use in warfare, as they are merely trained to do the spectacular work, such as trooping the colors. "But three or four regiments in Canada follow that work," he said.

The barracks men are put through a thorough course, and each day a section of the force is drilled in the grounds. They are also trained to receive orders by the signal code, as in the din of battle it is impossible to hear the spoken or bugle commands.

All departments are kept spotlessly clean and orderly. Men who do not bathe regularly are treated to a cleaning in ice cold water by their comrades who scrub them with floor brushes.

In order to avoid any trouble from fire, straw, ammunition, oil and other inflammable materials are kept in separate sheds throughout the grounds. A bugler is always on duty, and should fire be discovered by any of the guards who inspect the buildings night and day, he sounds the alarm.

Ladders are in readiness, and several hundred feet of hose on three reels, can be laid in a few minutes. Fire drills are held weekly, but at no specified time.

There is also a hospital in connection with the barracks, in charge of the military physician. All soldiers are treated in the hospital for any illness. It was in the hospital attendants' sleeping quarters that Corporal Lloyd was murdered by Private Mair.

The cells in which ill-behaved men are confined are built positively stronger than those of the county jail. They are about ten feet by four feet, the walls being over a foot thick. On the wall at the side of each cell is an electric button, by means of which the prisoner may notify the guard if he requires anything. Any sentence of over forty days is served in the civil prison.

The library is run on the same principle as the public library. The men pay a small fee monthly with which new books are purchased. Should the books be kept longer than the allotted time a fine of two cents a day is paid, and if the volume is returned in bad condition it is replaced. There is an excellent reading room in connection with the library, in which the men spend their spare time.

A few days ago a native of Kent, England, standing six feet six inches, applied at the barracks for permission to recruit. As there were no vacancies he was allowed to go.

LONDON MEMBERS ARE UP-TO-DATE

Delegates Return From Attending the Toronto Horticultural Show.

Mr. Baker, president of the local branch O. V. G. A., together with Messrs. Wistow, Fuller, Whitehall, Sharman and Trotter, have returned from Toronto, where they have been attending the horticultural show, and the annual convention of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association, and taking a leading part in the discussion of that body.

That the members of the London O. V. G. A. are up to date is shown by the prizes they carried off from the big Ontario Horticultural Show, the lettuce shown by Mr. F. Whitehall being especially fine. London's householders will do well to see that they secure their green goods and vegetables from members of this association, as they are thereby assured of good weight, full measure and first-class quality.

Miss Gillespie has removed to 379 Maitland street, and will receive on the first and third Tuesday in each month.

REV. MR. CREWS IN HYATT AVENUE CHURCH

Addressed a Mass Meeting on Sunday Afternoon.

Rev. Dr. A. C. Crews, of Toronto, the general secretary of the Epworth Leagues and Sunday schools, preached at the morning and evening services at Hyatt Avenue Methodist Church yesterday and addressed a mass meeting in the afternoon. "What manner of child shall this be?" Luke 1:66, was the text of his morning sermon, in which he spoke on the interesting character of a child, in that there were many possibilities of good wrapped up in its nature.

What will become of the child in after life is dependent on the home training, and the Sunday school is of supreme importance in many cases on account of the lack of such home training.

Dr. Crews was delighted with the number of children present at the morning service.

The text of his evening sermon was, "A Good Character is Great Riches," taken from Proverbs xxii, 1. The choir provided an excellent programme of music.

IMPROVE THE ROADS AND HELP THE CYCLISTS

East End Men Has a Plan to Prevent Wheelmen Being Fined.

An east end businessman has come forward with an idea to improve the city streets. A large number of cyclists are hauled into court daily for riding on the sidewalk, and he believes that were the roads put in better shape the temptation to ride on the walks would not be so great.

The fines collected from the delinquents would, he says, go a long way toward improving the streets, and he will endeavor to have the matter brought before the council.

EAST END NOTES.

Rev. E. W. Hughes, of Tillsonburg, conducted the services at All Saints' Church yesterday in the absence of the pastor, Rev. T. B. Clarke, who is in England.

Bro. F. G. Butt, of Toronto, will exemplify the Robin Hood degree at Court Forest City A. O. F. lodge-rooms this evening. The degree will be conferred on a number of candidates.

AUTHORITIES ARE TAKING NO CHANCES

Are Very Careful Regarding East
London Smallpox Case.

The condition of Mrs. G. Moody, the smallpox patient, who resides at the corner of Price and Muir streets, is about the same, the case being a very mild one.

Dr. Ross, of Hyde Park, the county health officer, is taking steps to look after the patient, and the house is now placarded. The authorities have been unable to learn where she contracted the disease.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

Conducted on Sunday in Centennial Methodist Church.

The regular anniversary services were conducted at Centennial Methodist Church yesterday afternoon and evening. Rev. G. W. Doney preached at both services and also rendered solos.

The church was crowded to capacity and a number were unable to obtain seats. The choir, under the leadership of Mr. Bert Weir, provided an excellent musical programme.

A NEW MAGAZINE FOR WOLSELEY BARRACKS

It is Expected One Will Be Erected Shortly.

It is expected that a new magazine will be erected at Wolseley Barracks within a short time, the amount for the purpose having been put through the estimates before the House dissolved.

There will be much larger than the present one, and the magazine, which is situated a short distance from the men's quarters. A number of other improvements are also to be made.

MANAGER RICHTER WAS HONORED

Presented With an Address in Local Offices of London Life.

Mr. J. G. Richter, manager of the London Life Insurance Company, was most pleasantly surprised this afternoon at the company's offices on Wellington street, when he was asked to step into one of the offices, and on behalf of the staff was presented with a very handsome gold watch and chain by Mr. A. Bretz, city manager of the company. Toronto, while a neatly worded address was read by Mr. J. E. Carson, of Toronto. The occasion of the presentation was the 25th anniversary of Mr. Richter's assuming the duties of manager in London, and the employees took advantage of it to show their appreciation of him. Mr. Richter replied suitably.

The Gas Franchise.

The meeting to consider the gas franchise did not materialize today, but will be held on Wednesday evening instead. Arrangements could not be completed, but a party interested in the matter will be discussed at great length. It is thought that before any franchise is given that the gas fields will be inspected by the aldermen.

Mrs. Deadman Dead.

One of London's oldest and best-known residents died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. F. S. Jarvis, 63 Elmwood avenue, in the absence of Mrs. Jane M. Deadman, relict of the late A. W. Deadman. Mrs. Deadman was 85 years old, and is survived by three daughters and two sons, Mrs. Johnston, of Delaware; Mrs. S. J. Jarvis, and Miss Fanny, of this city; Edward, of California, and F. W. of Leamington. The funeral will be held on Wednesday, and will be of a private nature.

Death of Mrs. E. Hayman.

Mrs. Eugenia, widow of the late Edward Hayman, of Elmwood, and mother of Mr. Joseph Hayman, of this city, died in Stratford Friday night at the residence of her son, Edward. Deceased, who was 74 years of age, was born in Devonshire, England, and came to Canada, with her husband, 30 years ago, settling in Elmwood. Of late years she has been living with her daughter, Mrs. S. M. Mumma, of Innespark. She leaves four sons and two daughters: Mrs. J. E. Hoffman, Pontiac, Mich.; Mrs. S. M. During the evening the question of granting the franchise to women was debated, the affirmative being led by Mr. Albright, and the negative by Mr. Granger, of the Collegiate Institute. The decision was given in favor of the affirmative.

TWO HOBOS JAILED

Ten Days or Three Dollars Per, and They Didn't Have It.

Two gentlemen of migratory tastes, are at present in durance vile as a result of trying to travel without a ticket. It seems that while viewing the country around Stratford they were rudely interrupted and requested to appear before Magistrate Noble. They were requested either to pay $3 or take ten days' solitude. As they were both suffering from financial embarrassment, they chose the latter alternative, and for a time at least their travels are ended.

GRAND AVE. PEOPLE WANT A SIDEWALK

Alderman Thinks the Residents Have a Real Grievance.

The residents of Grand avenue will ask the board of works for a sidewalk near the Southwestern Traction Company's tracks.

"A number of the residents of that street have complained to me about the condition of the street there," said Ald. Rose to The Advertiser. "Some sort of walk is badly needed. The walk is of clay and in this weather it sticks badly, making walking very bad. It seems as if it is too late this year to lay a permanent walk, but something should be done. A few loads of good clinders would improve matters very much. I intend looking into the matter and reporting at the next meeting of No. 2 committee. We should do something for them, and the committee will probably discuss the matter."

up with the board of works and Mayor Rumball.

Blames the Doctor.

"Have you any knowledge why this privilege which you have enjoyed so long is now objected to?" asked Mr. Rumball.

"The first I knew of it," said Mr. Garvey, "was when Dr. James Wilson came and told me that horses should not be allowed to be driven on the new sidewalk. His property is some distance from mine down on the other side of the street, and I think is not interfered with in any way."

"Horses have been tied up recently, have they not?" asked Chief Williams.

"Yes, we have been trying to please you and the others," said Mr. Garvey. "I have been told that lorry take up?" asked the chief.

Mr. Garvey did not know, but Mr. D. H. Cowan said the lorry was 6 feet 4 inches across.

"There is ample space, at least six or seven feet, for pedestrians, and no excuse for any inconvenience," said Mr. Garvey.

No Dedication.

"There was never any dedication of any part of that land by you to the city?" asked Mr. Graydon.

"Never," said Mr. Garvey, "neither by me nor by my predecessor, Frank Smith."

Mr. Graydon then called Mr. F. G. Rumball.

Mr. Rumball said he remembered when he was mayor that there had been a big discussion at the time on account of the bad condition of the sidewalk. It was decided to put down a walk of heavy enough for teams to drive on it. The property-owners agreed to pay for the extra strength required in the pavement, and also for the extra space between their property and where the line of the sidewalk would run. The walk had been built with the idea of doing away with the loading and unloading of large quantities of goods on Dundas street, as it caused great inconvenience, both to the merchants and to pedestrians.

Council's Intention.

"There is absolutely no question," said Mr. Rumball, "that the intention of the council when the matter was settled, was that unloading and loading should be carried on on the sidewalk. The sidewalk was also made particularly wide, so that pedestrians would not be interfered with in any way."

"Did that arrangement extend right through?" asked Mr. Graydon.

"I think so," said Mr. Rumball. "Mr. John Pritchard said he was a member of the city council at the time the matter came up, and that the understanding arrived at between the merchants and the council was that the merchants were to pay the cost of the pavement between the line of the sidewalk and their stores, and that they were to have the use of it for loading and unloading. No objection was ever made against this during his term of office."

Mr. T. F. Kingsmill, who was one of the deputation to the council, corroborated the statements of Messrs. Rumball and Pritchard. The pavement, he said, was particularly marked out in black and white lines so that the horses would not slip.

No Annoyance.

"Do you suffer any annoyance from Mr. Garvey or anybody else using the pavement?" asked Mr. Graydon.

"Not the slightest. It is in the interests of all of us to keep the pavement in the best possible manner."

Engineer Graydon said the petition was initiated by the council for an eight-foot walk. When they started to build it the merchants came and complained that they would not be able to drive over it. He had suggested that the walk be built heavier and that the merchants make it up to the street. It was particularly understood that if the merchants paid for the extra cost of putting down the heavy grade of pavement they were to be allowed to use it for unloading and loading. The sidewalk was made almost twice as heavy as is usual in order to bear the strain.

"Was the arrangement you have spoken of incorporated in the bylaw for the construction of the pavement?" asked Chief Williams.

"No," said the engineer. "It was not." The public were complaining of the annoyance the loading and unloading caused them on Dundas street and by agreeing to allow the merchants to unload on Carling street, all this trouble was done away with. Had it not been understood that they were to be allowed to load and unload, the merchants would have petitioned against the sidewalk and knocked the bylaw out.

"I will look into this matter thoroughly," said Magistrate Love, "and will give my decision in a week. In the meantime Mr. Garvey will have the use of the sidewalk to load and unload, as he has had for the last nine years. I cannot see that any inconvenience is being caused to anyone or that anyone's rights or property is being injured by what Mr. Garvey is doing."

James Tuffield, a teamster, who was arrested some time ago for driving on the sidewalk, will be given a hearing at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Tuffield's case is almost exactly similar to that of Mr. Garvey's.

KILLS HIS SON

Civil War Veteran Ends Carousal by Slaying His Son.

Fort Plain, Nov. 15.—Alfred Billington, a veteran of the civil war, is a prisoner in the jail at Fond du Lac charged with the murder of his son William, 30 years old, who died today of stab wounds received last night.
Billington, who is 65 years old, and his son lived on a farm a few miles north of Fort Plain. They came here yesterday and spent the night in revelry, which terminated in a quarrel. So far as can be learned there was no occasion for the fight. The elder Billington says that his son attacked him first, knocking him down twice with blows from his fist. Then, it is charged, the father drew a long-bladed jackknife and plunged it into his son's stomach, inflicting a wound about eight inches long across the abdomen.
For six hours young Billington lay without medical aid on the floor of a saloon. When a doctor finally arrived the young man was so weak from loss of blood and neglect that his life could not be saved.

Coroner Vedder, of St. Johnsville, arrived while William Billington was still conscious and took his dying statement. The young man told of the fight and accused his father of having stabbed him. The father listened to the statement in apparent unconcern until he heard his boy flatterly charge him with the crime. Then he became alarmed and fled, but was captured later and removed to the jail at Fond du Lac.

EMPEROR AND DOWAGER DEAD
CHINA MOURNS DOUBLE LOSS

Prince Chang Made Regent and the Little Prince Pu Yi Heir to Throne, Establishing the Manchu Dynasty—Troops Out to Protect Europeans.

Peking, Nov. 15.—Tse Hsi An, dowager empress of China, the autocratic head of the Government, which she directed without successful interference since 1861, and without protest since 1881, died at 2 o'clock this afternoon.
The announcement of her death was official and followed closely upon the announcement that Kuang Hsu, the Emperor, died yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, but it is believed that the deaths of the Emperor and the Dowager Empress occurred considerably before the time set down in the official statements.

An edict issued at 8 o'clock this morning, placed upon the throne Prince Pu Yi, the three-year-old son of Prince Chun, the regent of the Empire, in accordance with a promise given by the Dowager Empress soon after the marriage of Prince Chun in 1903.
An edict issued on Friday made Pu Yi heir presumptive. The foreign legations were notified this morning by the foreign board of the death of the Emperor and the succession of Prince Pu Yi. Troops have been in readiness for several days to quell any disorders that might arise on the death of Kuang Hsu, and the possibility of uprisings was made greater because the death of the Dowager Empress was known to be close at hand.

Two divisions of troops have been held in reserve, and these are now stationed in various quarters of the city. Twenty gendarmes were dispatched to guard the approaches to the legations, but up to the present the duties of the forces have been slight. It was announced that the legation guards were ordered out at the special call of the legations owing to the Emperor's death.

Prince Chun, the regent, has ordered the viceroys and governors to take precautions for the continuation of the administration of the provinces as heretofore, and he has ordered a hundred days of mourning. The court will go into mourning for three years. Peking already has been greatly transformed. All red objects have been removed.

moved and blue has been substituted. The people learned this evening of the death of the Dowager Empress, and although the Chinese are in nowise emotional, they were profoundly impressed by the passing of their powerful ruler.
The foreigners in the city are watching the strange ceremonies with great interest. At the palace, elaborate rites are being observed, and a flood of edicts have been sent forth.

Deathed Ceremonies.

Deathed observances of 3,000 years ago marked the passing of the Emperor and Dowager Empress. They died alone and unattended, although surrounded by circles of abject spectators, who remained a road and a distance from the account of the sacred persons of their majesties they could not be approached. The Emperor died as he lived, without ministrations of any kind or scientific aid. He had refused to permit the services of foreign physicians for months, and although it was said that he had gone back to the old form of medical treatment, it is believed that he received no treatment at all.
The Government has given out that in a lucid interval last Friday the Dowager Empress received Prince Ching, who is a Manchu and a member of the royal family, and approved the edicts declaring Prince Pu Yi heir presumptive, and Prince Chun, regent of the empire. At the beginning of the Boxer outbreak, Prince Ching was lord chamberlain of the court and commander of the Peking field force. It was on Prince Ching that the foreign officials hung hopes of the safety of the envoys. He has held many official positions, and was high in imperial favor.

That the Dowager Empress took this step is discredited, but she is believed to have successfully established the Chun regime, which is the Manchu regime, without obstacle, and the opinion is held here that this solution of the difficulty, which has necessarily confronted the Government, is the best possible.

A Negro Desperado Kills Eight
Then Burns House Over His Head

Sanguinary Battle Follows the Attempt to Arrest Man in South.

Okmulgee, Okla., Nov. 15.—Eight persons were killed and ten others were wounded today in a fight between James Decker, a negro desperado, and officers.

The dead: Edgar Robinson, sheriff of Okmulgee County; Hens Kluber, assistant chief of police of Okmulgee; two negroes named Chapman, brothers; J. Decker, a negro; three unidentified negroes.

The wounded: Steve Grayson, Indian boy, probably fatally beaten; Victor Farr, Sioux chief, shot through shoulder; deputy sheriff, arm broken; seven others slightly wounded.

The disturbance began at the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad station, where Decker engaged in a fight with Grayson and beat him senseless with a rock.

Friends of Grayson called the police. When Policeman Kluber went to the station Decker darted to his house, nearby, and barricaded himself in. When Kluber approached the house Decker shot and instantly killed him. Sheriff Robinson gathered deputies in a few minutes and hurried to the scene. This party contained several negroes whom the sheriff commissioned as deputies.

Great Catholic Missions Conference

Chicago, Nov. 15.—The first American Catholic missionary congress, pronounced by its members as destined to open a new epoch in the progress of the church, convened today here for a four day's session, in the presence of prelates, clergymen and laymen from many parts of the United States and Canada. Pope Pius X. was represented by Most Rev. Diomedes de Falconio, archbishop of Larissa, and apostolic delegate to the United States, who in the initial ceremony presented the apostolic blessing and congratulations. The programme of the congress exercises which are to be participated in by representatives from almost every city in the country. A VICTORY FOR RELIGIOUS TOLERATION

Rev. Mr. Gilpin Preached on the Election of Hon. Wm. Taft.

"It was the true American spirit of democracy that triumphed over the campaign of religious bigotry against President Taft, the Unitarian, at the last election," said Rev. Mr. Gilpin, in last night's sermon in the Unitarian Church. "An effort had been made by some of the evangelical churches to strike a blow at Unitarianism by defeating Mr. Taft. Modern liberal religion has made many inroads upon orthodoxy, particularly through the higher criticism, and a great deal of resentment was stirred up against the Republican nominee."

"But the campaign miserably failed, and it is safe to say that the religion of no future president will be attacked. A great victory has been won for religious toleration. If we listen to the demands of these men, we would have to erase from the pages of history a large number of important names of men who were Unitarians, such as Thomas Jefferson, the president; Daniel Webster, the orator; John Marshall, the jurist; Emerson, Longfellow and Dickens, the writers, and Sir Isaac Newton, the scientist."

"A strong demand is made upon us to divorce religion and politics, and to get rid of the hypocrisy and double-dealing that arises out of this anomalous position. No man wants to know whether his watch has been made by a Methodist, nor should any man want to know if the Panama Canal was built by a Unitarian or a Roman Catholic."

"In last year's report of the board of education, the particular religion of each public and high school teacher is given. This is a vestige of the old days of religious tests that should be done away with. It nobody's business which church any teacher attends. We have a few lessons of religious toleration to learn even in Canada."

THREE KILLED AT KINGSCOURT

hour and fifteen minutes late on Sunday.

Between London and Sarnia it is down grade, and the train would be going at a very rapid rate, probably fully sixty miles an hour, when it passed Kingscourt.

Blew the Whistle.

According to statements made at the Grand Trunk, Engineer Crawford blew the whistle before he came to the crossing at Kingscourt. He saw the rig come onto the track, and endeavored to stop the train, but it was too late, and he struck it full tilt.

While there are but few buildings at Kingscourt, the house and barn on the north side of the track obscure the view somewhat, and a rig is practically on the track after passing the house.

No official statement has been issued by the Grand Trunk Company as yet.

No investigation will be made in view of the inquest, which is to be held this afternoon, when all the railway employees on the trains will be called to give evidence.

Obedied the Rules.

It was unofficially stated, however, that the company's employees obeyed all the rules in connection with the affair, that the whistle was blown, and the bell rung, and the speed slackened when passing a station, and all the rest of it.

SPORTING EDITOR IN COURT

Accused of Criminally Libelling Writer on Another Sheet.

Hamilton, Nov. 15.—Melville M. (Robbie) Robinson, sporting editor of the Spectator, appeared before the police magistrate this morning on a charge of wilfully, falsely and maliciously, criminally libelling Fred C. Mills, the sporting editor of the Times. Robinson pleaded not guilty, and declined to elect. The article which appeared in the sporting column of the Spectator, and to which exception was taken, stated that Mills, referred to as a boxer match at Brantford, and that the fight was "cooked up." This morning Mills swore that he did not referee the match, and was not in Brantford on the night in question. There was considerable talk as to whether Robinson wrote the article. Mills also claimed that the Spectator's sporting editor had been publicly ridiculing him for months past.

Robinson was committed for trial and bail was fixed in the sum of $1,000. No defense was offered.

WANTS HIS RING BACK.

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 15.—A suit to be tried on Nov. 26 between Fred Bellmore, a drug clerk, and Lucy Whitely, has some interesting features. The suit is for the recovery of a diamond ring, which was lost by the plaintiff, Miss Whitely, to seal the betrothal. The betrothal, however, is now null and void, according to indications. Miss Whitely declares she no longer has the ring, and flatly refused to pay the $100 that the plaintiff demands.

CIVIC CONVENTION.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 15.—The joint annual convention of the National Association and the American Civic Association, held under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, opened in this city today, and will continue its sessions until Thursday evening.

The programme is an elaborate one, and during the week some of the most prominent men in civic affairs, as well as men of national fame, will visit Pittsburgh to participate in the deliberations of the two organizations.

The convention will close on Thursday evening with a banquet at the Hotel Schenley, at which Attorney-General Bonaparte and others will speak.

A Pretty Story of the Sheffield Choir CHATHAM MAN ROASTS COURTS

A very interesting story has cropped up out of the visit of the Sheffield Choir to London.

Among the choir singers was a man named W. Burnett, of Sheffield. At the station here he was met by an uncle of his who had come 200 miles to see his nephew, and also hear the choir sing.

This in considered to be the record distance for the choir's trip through Canada. The uncle, whose name is H. Burnett, a man well over 70 years of age, came to London from Stockbridge, Mich. He left England early in 1848, and has as a result, been in America over sixty years. He settled in Michigan, where he has been ever since.

In spite of his seventy years, he is quite a remarkable man. Standing over six feet in height, strong and wiry, he made an imposing figure. His hair is white and his whiskers—well, they were of the fringes variety, but he did not care.

He arrived in London the day before the choir came in and waited.

A Grotesque Character.

His nephew was something over 40 years of age, and his uncle had never seen him, but he wanted to see him and hear the choir.

The old man's garb was picturesque. An old suit, perhaps of the vintage of '75 was the main part of his apparel. He wore also a white flannel shirt, with no collar nor tie, and an old slouch hat. Although it was cold, he had no overcoat.

"I am tough," he declared, when asked about it. "I have worn gloves but once since I came to this country and that was at a Masonic funeral twenty years ago."

He was the first at the depot when the train came in, and he waited for his nephew, whom he did not know.

"The first man who stepped off, a proper young man, well dressed and dandy, was greeted by the old man. By a mere stroke of fortune it was his nephew."

The two shook hands for some minutes, and the young man wanted to remain over night with the old man. "Guess you can't do it son," said the old man. "I live over 200 miles from here, and it's more than a night's journey."

A Dutiful Nephew.

The nephew was attentive to the old gentleman, although his garb was very weird. He took him to the concert and to the banquet afterwards, and sent him away in the morning, happy.

"Guess I will go back to my farm in Michigan," the old man said. "I can't get back to England, although I would like to. Most all my folks there are dead. Well, it was a great trip, and I enjoyed it immensely."

While speaking of the Sheffield Choir, it might be well to mention that Mr. Geo. H. O'Neill received a letter of appreciation from Dr. Harris and Stewart Houston, conveying the thanks of the choir for the admirable way in which he looked after the choir during its stay in London. The arrangements here were well nigh perfect, the letter states.

BOGUS COAL MAN FLEECE SARNIANS

He Sells Black Diamonds But Fails to Deliver—Seeking Missing Husband.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Sarnia, Nov. 15.—The Sarnia curling club have elected officers for the coming season.

The Sarnia Collegiate Institute Literary Society held a meeting Friday night, and an interesting programme of music, singing and an address given.

Owing to the removal of the Grand Trunk shops from Fort Grafton a number of Point Edward residents who were employed by that company have gone to Battle Creek, Mich., to which place the shops were transferred.

An electric light has been placed at the corner of Lochiel and Euphemias streets, greatly to the convenience of residents in that locality.

Birthdays of a Veteran.

C. D. Hitchcock celebrated his 70th birthday on Thursday. Mr. Hitchcock was one of the crew of the schooner Chieftain, which sailed from Sarnia with a cargo of crude oil in 1860 to Britain, unloading at Gravesend. The Chieftain was the only sailing vessel to ever make the return trip from Sarnia to Europe.

James Abraham, the 12-year-old lad charged with accidentally shooting George Seigmiller, the Grand Trunk fireman, was before the magistrate on Friday. The trial was enlarged until the victim of the shooting can attend. Seigmiller will have to undergo a difficult operation for the removal of the bullet, which has been located at the back of the knee.

The Chatham Brass Band was present at the Salvation Army services today, and rendered excellent selections on the streets.

All efforts to locate the burglars who forced an entry into Brittain's store in Wyndham have failed. Since they were traced to the London road they have entirely disappeared.

Anniversary services are being held in the Central Methodist Church today, conducted by Rev. Mr. Manning, B. A., of Windsor.

Successful Swindle. A number of Sarnia residents were swindled by a sharper here on Friday. The stranger visited several houses, stating he had a car of coal for sale at $2.50 per ton. The car had broken down, he said, and he had to dispose of it at the above rate to get it out of the way. He sold several tons, giving a receipt for the cash he received, but the stranger hasn't been seen since nor the coal delivered. The police are anxious to learn of his whereabouts.

Thomas Lewis pleaded guilty Saturday to passing a worthless check on the bartender at the Northern Hotel. He was remanded for a week, as there are other charges to be preferred against him.

Illegal Liquor Selling. John Menasz, a Sarnia reserve Indian, was found guilty at the police court Saturday of supplying liquor to Alex. Gray and Walter James, Indians. In the Gray case he was fined $35 and costs, $10.40, and in the other case a fine of $25 without costs. A notice of appeal has been given by Meass's solicitor.

The lawn bowling club has elected officers as follows: Honorary presidents, Hon. W. J. Hanna, M. P. P., and F. P. Pardee, M. P.; president, A. D. McLean; vice-president, Judge MacWatt; treasurer, D. M. Grant; secretary, W. A. Thrasher; executive committee, Col. Mackenzie, A. R. Smith and Dr. Hayes; auditors, E. P. Bucke and Alex. Saunders.

Seeking Missing Husband.

Mrs. E. T. Evans, wife of the former Sarnia pastor who is said to have run away with his choir leader, came to Sarnia on Friday in search of her husband. Mrs. Evans left her five children in the care of relatives in Wales. She was unable to obtain any trace of her husband, and left for Buffalo, where she will search for Miss Davis at the home of the latter's sister, Mrs. J. D. Williams. Miss Davis's mother is said to be in Cleveland with a daughter, and Mrs. Evans is reported to be with her.

The linen shower at the residence of Mrs. David Milne, South Front street, in aid of the Sarnia General Hospital, was very successful. Some 335 pieces were received for the hospital, besides $56 in cash.

Advertiser Correspondence

A Word of Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

The reports you have given in your paper for the past year or more of the various poultry shows, in which we (London men) have been interested, have been so good that I feel it my duty as a poultryman to write you a few lines of appreciation. Your man who does this work for you must know something about chickens, as the reports you give are the best I have seen in any paper (poultry papers included) and from conversation with a number of fellow-poultrymen I can assure you I am not the only one who appreciates these reports. There are some editors who seem to think that any man can write up a poultry show, and as a result some blunders are made, which to say the least, are amusing to anyone who knows anything about chickens. In the report of one of your local contemporaries on the show Thanksgiving Day, the man who wrote it up said: "Every kind of fowl were represented, from the large Brahmas with tufts of feathers on their legs, to the leghorns, with their beautiful white combs." As a matter of fact the redder a leghorn's comb is the better, and one with a white comb would only be good to travel with some show, like the double-headed baby, or three-legged man, as a freak of nature. Thanking you again, and hoping you will keep up these reports in the future, I remain, yours truly,

S. CHARLTON.

CROKER LIKES TAFT.

Queenstown, Nov. 16.—Richard Croker, the former Tammany Hall leader, was among the passengers who boarded the steamship Lusitania yesterday. He will make a six-months' visit to the United States.

When seen prior to the departure of the steamer, he reiterated that he was out of politics; that his visit to America was of a purely private nature, and that he would not discuss in any way the recent elections, or future possibilities.

He did say, however:

"I think Mr. Taft will be a good president; he has had experience."

Spent Some Time in Detroit and Tells What He Thinks of the Sights There.

Detroit divorce courts did not impress very favorably a reporter of the Planet, published at Chatham, Ont. There was not enough "dignity" or "solemnity" about the proceedings to please him. This is what he says:

"A reporter for the Great Home Journal made use of the Thanksgiving holiday by attending the various courts in the county building at Detroit, which on Monday of each week are the great divorce mills of the State of Michigan."

"The reporter had an excellent opportunity to compare the United States machinery of justice with that of Pretty Wedding at the Home of Mrs. Wm. Reith in Lucan.

At the residence of Mrs. William Reith, Lucan, on the 11th inst., Miss Annie L. Reith, and Mr. Arthur M. Elliott of Lucan, were united in marriage. Rev. Mr. Stevenson (also of Lucan) performed the ceremony, under a beautiful arch of evergreens, chrysanthemums and smilax. Miss Maud Elliott, of London, cousin of the groom, played the wedding march.

The bride was tastefully attired in a gown of white organdy, trimmed with lace, and a duchess satin ribbon, and carried a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums and maidenhair fern. She entered the drawing-room leaning on the arm of her brother, Mr. Arthur J. W. Reith, of Stratford.

The bride's bridesmaid, Miss Flora Reith, of Glen Willow, made a pretty flower girl.

After the ceremony, about thirty guests repaired to the dining-room, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion and partook of an excellent repast.

The popularity of the bride was amply demonstrated by the magnificent array of beautiful gifts. Numerous were the congratulations and hearty good wishes that were extended to the happy young couple.

The bride's travelling gown was of navy blue, with a close-fitting hat to match. After an enjoyable evening was spent in games and music, the happy young couple left for their beautiful home on "Quality Hill," amid showers of rice and confetti, and with the good wishes of all. BIBLE SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

Many Fine Sermons Preached to Further Work of the Society.

Anniversary Services Held in Askin Street Methodist Church—The Services in Other Churches.

Representatives of the Western Bible Society occupied the pulpits of the larger city churches yesterday, and set forth in a convincing manner the work the society is doing all over the world.

Rev. R. J. Bowen, travelling secretary of the society for Canada, spoke in the Methodist Church last night to an audience that completely filled the church. Mr. Bowen took his text from Jeremiah xv, 13. "Thy words were found, and I did eat them, and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of my heart."

"In travelling through Canada from one end to the other," Mr. Bowen said, "one of the facts most impressed upon me this summer was the significance of old boys' reunions. If Canadian people only realized what this means they would be filled with a new sense of rejoicing. I took the trouble to look up the statistics on the subject, and find that there are at present in the United States nearly three million Canadians. The majority of these are young men and women, the life blood of the nation, and they are nearly all holding responsible positions and helping to build up another nation."

Population Leakage.

"Owing to this leakage our population increases very slowly and Canadians may well take heed to the significance of the foreign emigration that is coming to this country. In Montreal there are now 40,000 Jews; in Toronto 15,000; in the west whole towns of foreign peoples. Sixty-seven different languages are now spoken in this country, while the church is represented by men speaking only twelve. In the west there are now whole towns, where the foreign population controls the vote, and it is sad to think that these people are strong enough right here in a Christian country to get what they want, and an instance is recorded of where the children tore down a picture of Jesus Christ and jeered at it before tramping it."

A Query.

"What will Canadians do in a few years if these people continue to increase as they are doing? Canada's young men, going to another country, and their places being taken largely by emigrants from Southern Europe, many of them uneducated, and almost all of them without any knowledge of Christianity. Canada before heading the needs of India, China and Japan should deal with her own problem, which is greater than any of them. Since 1804, when the British and Foreign Bible Society was formed we have sent out nearly 210,000,000 copies of the Bible translated into nearly every tongue known. In Canada we aim to distribute Bibles to the foreign peoples, printed in their own language, and in English, so as to help Anglicize them. This work deserves the support of everyone who is interested in the advancement of his country and in the extension of Christ's kingdom."

Other Sermons.

During the day other pulpits were occupied in the interests of the Bible Society as follows:

Rev. W. E. Hassard, of Toronto, district secretary of the Canadian Bible Society, spoke in the First Methodist Church in the morning, and in Dundas Church in the evening; Rev. R. J. Bowen, travelling secretary of the society, in St. Paul's Cathedral in the morning, and in Memorial Church at night; Rev. W. B. H. Fraser, Presbyterian Church in the morning, and St. Andrew's at night; Rev. Jesse Gibson, Talbot Street Baptist Church in the morning, and First Congregational Church in the evening.

This morning representatives of the Bible Society started a canvass of the city for the purpose of collecting as much money as possible for aiding the work in Canada.

First Methodist Church.

Rev. W. E. Hassard, one of the secretaries of the Canadian Bible Society, spoke in the First Methodist Church yesterday morning. He said that whereas the city of London had given $25,000 to missions last year, it had given less than $500 to the work of the Bible Society.

Mr. Hassard pointed out, that the work of the Bible Society should go hand in hand, for in lands where no missionary or Bible reader is permitted to enter, the Bible gained an entrance, speaking to the people in the tongue in which they were born. Telling of the representative work of the society, who met the steamers from the old land and greeted these people on their first landing with the message of Christ. He told of the great work being done among the foreigners in some cities, emphasizing his remarks by telling illustrations, and ended by an appeal for aid in giving the Word of God in our own land to people of over 70 different tongues.

Anniversary Services.

Special anniversary Sunday school services were held in Askin Street Church yesterday, and were largely attended, especially the rally held in the schoolroom in the afternoon.

At the morning service, Rev. G. N. Hazen, of the Centennial Church, preached, his remarks being particularly to young people. During the service, Mr. Ed. Wyatt rendered a solo most acceptably.

In the afternoon the largest attendance of Sunday school children that has ever been seen in Askin Street schoolroom was present, and listened to a splendid address on Sunday school work by Mr. William Jeffery, superintendent of Wellington Street Methodist Sunday School, and Mr. J. M. Parkinson, principal of the Grand avenue school.

At both the morning service and in the afternoon the Askin Street Sunday

KAISER AND VON BUELOW

Will Talk Over Trouble Today and Clear the Atmosphere.

Berlin, Nov. 15.—Emperor William is due to arrive at Potsdam tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock. He will have an audience with Chancellor Von Buelow during the day, but the hour of this meeting has not yet been fixed. Neither is it known whether the meeting will occur at Potsdam or in Berlin. These points will be decided by his majesty after his arrival.

It is pointed out today in a well-informed quarter that some of the newspapers of Germany have adopted a prematurely optimistic tone regarding the outcome of this meeting. However, officials are hopeful that the situation will be cleared.

The singing was led by Mr. John Ward, and the hymns were splendidly sung by the different classes. Mr. E. W. G. Quantz presided at the organ.

Spoke To Young Men.

In the evening, Rev. E. B. Lancelley, of Dundas Centre Church, spoke to the young men of the church, and urged upon them the performance of duty in spite of all obstacles. Mr. Lancelley exhorted his hearers to be true men and women, and live up to the highest ideals. Mr. Lancelley showed how much misery and unhappiness was caused in the world by people not forgiving one another, and urged all to be like little children who quickly forgive and forget. If this course were generally followed, he said, many persons who are now enemies would become friends.

On Tuesday evening the annual anniversary concert and supper will be held in the schoolroom.

Rev. Mr. Rutledge.

The subject of Rev. Mr. Rutledge's sermon in the First Methodist Church last evening was "Going Up to Jerusalem." The text was Luke, xviii, 31: "Behold, we go up to Jerusalem." From his earliest conscious moment, Jerusalem was the goal of Christ's life, for he knew that somehow his earthly career would end there. Every life is a journey, and life's success or failure depends on the character of the goal towards which we are struggling. The trouble with the average youth is that he simply drifts. He has no clear, purposeful goal. The men or women who have accomplished anything in the world are they who have done one thing well. That is true also in the spiritual life. The goal of every life should be to be like Christ.

In going up to our own Jerusalem there is no time to loiter by the way. Life's serious duties are calling you. You must be about your Father's business. You are not to wait till every speculative question is settled. Life's work is too serious to spend any time imagining how much harm may come to you if you do certain forbidden things. You are a King's son going up to your kingdom, and the king's business demands haste.

There will be struggle, of course, but this should only strengthen and intensify your determination. It was so with Jesus. Whatever the struggle, go forth like men to face them. May God teach us first to see our own Jerusalem and then give us grace to attain it.

Talbot Street Baptist Church.

At Talbot Street Baptist Church last evening Rev. A. J. Vining spoke to a large audience on the subject, "Is Eternal Punishment Reasonable?"

From the Word of God, and from man's experiences in sin here, the preacher showed most conclusively that there is no alternative, but that there must be an everlasting torment for the person who deliberately and persistently chooses the path of sin.

Mr. Vining said: "The two great pillars that will harass the soul of the unbeliever in the after-life are despair and remorse. He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses. Of how much sorer punishment shall he be thought worthy who hath trodden underfoot the Son of God?"

New St. James' Church.

At the New St. James' Church last night Rev. Thomas Mitchell preached the sixth of a series of sermons on the seven deadly sins, taking as his subject, "Luxury." Luxury, said Mr. Mitchell, is the commission of that which is a great deal of effort to produce for the satisfaction of spurious means, that is, the gratification of the senses in the name of charity and humility, political economy condemns it, in the name of utility, and justice condemns it in the name of equity. It is pernicious to the individual and fatal to society. Luxury has done the grave of every nation that has perished. In concluding, Mr. Mitchell recommended to all the simple life, and as the greatest example of that life for all time, Jesus Christ.

A London Student.

Mr. James Moore, of South London, a student of Woodstock College, occupied the pulpit in the South London Baptist Church last night, and preached an excellent sermon on "Friendship." Mr. Moore urged everyone to have as many good friends as possible, but to be most careful in their selection. Bad books, he said, were every one's particular friends, and should be most careful what books they allowed in their homes. Mr. Moore's remarks were listened to with the greatest interest, and the congregation were greatly pleased with him.

of quite a debate. It is now thought, however, that the points of difference between the Trades and Labor Council and the liquor men will be adjusted, and the agitation will be dropped.

Postponed Action.

The report of the committee in charge of the petitions was made, and a large number of signatures were submitted. The delegates were in favor of continuing the work, but negotiations had been entered into with the liquor men, and as these negotiations would be continued this week, it was thought advisable to postpone further action until next week.

Fair Wages

The committee also reported that a number of hotelkeepers have been interviewed, and they were prepared to see that as far as they could fair wages would be paid, and they would deal fairly with union goods.

No Vote Probable.

The other hotelkeepers will be seen this week, and if all the points of difference are smoothed out, as it is expected they will be, the city council will not be asked to submit a vote.

Some of the delegates found fault with the reports in the newspapers, claiming that there has been no thought of secession of any union from the council.

There was a large attendance of members of the council.

DIRECTOIRES DOOMED

Leaders of Fashion in Paris Call Halt on Striking Costume.

Paris, Nov. 15.—Too much of the director style in gowns has offended certain leaders of fashion in Paris, and they have called a halt. They condemned modified expressions of the director for a time, but when the robe androgynous, with its divided skirt, came forth and flaunted itself unsparingly the present revolt started.

The young Duchess d'Uzes leads the women who are demanding a new fashion. They have not agreed upon a substitute for the director further than suggesting that the sleeves of the gown-to-be must be tight-fitting.

The director really was introduced by dressmakers who are not classed in
