FIND BODY OF SECOND SWIMMING POOL VICTIM

Mayor Will Move To Safeguard Swimmers In Thames

BODY OF ROBERT TAGG TAKEN FROM CITY POOL BY SEARCHING PARTY

Corpse of Becher's Island Swimming Tragedy Is Recovered in Fifteen Feet of Water—Supervisor Left 50 Bathers There When Pool Closed—Inquest on Monday.

DEATH RAFT TAKEN IN DEEP WATER

After an all-night search, firemen, at 7:15 o'clock this morning, recovered the body of young Robert Tagg, only son of Mrs. Charles Tagg, 571 Maitland street, drowned in the Thames River, just beyond the confines of the civic bathing pool at Becher's Island at 9:30 o'clock last night. Lieut. G. J. Bolton and Firemen Fred Kerr and Hurdle made the find.

Dragging operations, begun shortly after the drowning, did not cease until 1:30 o'clock this morning. Work was resumed at daylight. The body was found in fifteen feet of water, about twenty feet from the north end of the ruins of Dexter's dam.

This morning a few children were playing in the pool. A number of small boys were diving from the death raft into waist-deep water within the roped area.

Supervisor's Story.

"I closed the pool as usual at 8:30 o'clock last night, and everything was in order," declared O. Paul, the supervisor. "We blow the whistle at 8 o'clock to give bathers time to get their clothes from the checkroom.

"When I left, there were about fifty bathers in the water, many of them adults.

"I did not know anything like this had happened until this morning."

As usual, the raft, which knocked young Tagg senseless, contributing to his death, was moored to one of the posts mid-stream, to which the ropes are tied. These posts are set in barrels filled with boulders. The pool is bounded by two banks, and the two ropes stretched across the pool. In all, there are six posts, four on shore, and two midway between the two shores.

After-Hour Swimmers.

This morning, one of the posts was upset and was below water. It is common to find this, the supervisors say. Each night, after the pool has been closed, adults, including a number of young men, come to the pool. They are not content to stay in the shallow water, but spend their time in the deep holes west of the pool.

Although the raft was fastened to one of the posts by stout ropes and four-inch spikes, it had been torn away, and taken out into deep water.

Older boys, who come to swim after pool has closed, set the example for the smaller ones. The younger lads, although some of them are far from good swimmers, follow the older ones out into the deep places.

Some of these younger children last night were playing with the raft in deep water. The victim was on one end of the raft and several of his chums on the other. When two or three boys jumped from the raft, it tilted, striking young Tagg on the head. He was knocked unconscious and immediately sank. His chums tried to save him, but could do little, as he did not come up again. Then they rushed to a Grosvenor street home and telephoned the fire department.

A telephone pole is floating in the water just in front of the civic bathhouse. It was brought there yesterday by workmen. Officials at the pool were told that the civic authorities intend to install a telephone at the bathhouse.

Urge Stronger Bonds.

Last year it was suggested that the pool be bounded by mesh wire fences instead of by rope. It is understood that an order for this wire was placed, but later cancelled because it was believed the wire would serve to collect floating refuse and keep the water in the pool stagnant.

Supervisors advise that stronger posts and barrels be used in conjunction with the ropes.

In the evening, they say, a large number of women come to the pool and persist in dragging on the ropes so that they soon become slack and the feeble supports to which they are anchored give way, allowing the ropes to become submerged.

Almost every morning, after the young men have been at the pool, the ropes and barrels are found submerged, and the supervisors are obliged to do repair work before starting their regular duties.

Difficult Work.

It is most difficult to keep the bathers within the limits of the civic bathing area, the officials say, especially the boys in their 'teens. As soon as the supervisor's back is turned they start for deep water.

When they are reprimanded for their disobedience, they reply, sometimes quite heatedly, "Oh, I can swim."

When the body was recovered this morning, Coroner J. C. Wilson was called and ordered it removed to the bathhouse until the undertaker arrived.

A jury was empanelled and viewed the remains at A. L. Oatman's Funeral Home at 12:15 o'clock (noon) today. The inquest proper was ordered held at the police station at 8 o'clock Monday night.

The funeral will be held from Oatman's Funeral Home at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Rev. John Garbutt of Dundas Centre Methodist Church will officiate. Interment will be made at Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

WHERE TWO LONDON CHIL DREN WERE DROWNED WITHIN TWO WEEKS.

The Advertiser photographer shows the scene of the two drownings within the past few weeks near Becher's Island civic bathing pool. X marks the spot where Isabel Storey, 15, went to her death ten days ago. She was seized with cramps and had gone down for the third time before a supervisor reached her. This spot is about 126 feet west of the western extremity of the pool. O marks the spot where young Robert Tagg was drowned last night after the pool was closed. He met death 200 feet from the spot where the girl went down. The water at this point is fifteen feet deep. The Advertiser camera man shows boys playing on the death raft which struck young Tagg when some of his chums leaped from it, knocking him unconscious. Inset is a photo of the boy victim. Signs are posted on shore warning bathers that they venture beyond the limits of the pool at their own risk.

LONDON GROWTH IS GREATER NOW THAN FOR YEARS

Building Permits For 1923 Will Eclipse All Previous Records.

THE SOUTH LEADS

Most Houses Are Being Built in South End, With Northern District Second.

There has been more building in London this year to date than any previous one, and the amount of permits issued will undoubtedly exceed that of any other year, according to Building Inspector A. M. Piper.

The amount of money spent on building last year was a record for the city, but this year is expected to shatter last year's by well over three hundred thousand dollars. $2,605,630 was spent in 1922, and already $2,204,205 has been spent on this year's building, leaving only $401,400 to go to beat last year's record and to set a new one. Up until the end of July last year 347 dwellings were erected in the city, and already this year up until June the same number have been built. "This year's building in the city will break all previous records," said Mr. Piper.

London South Leads.

London south leads in the erection of houses with the north end of the city a close second. Very little work is being done in the west end, but in East London many smaller buildings and garages are being built.

It was difficult to obtain experienced bricklayers for a time, but the difficulty has been overcome, and many good workmen can now be secured. The walls of the larger buildings, such as the manufacturers' at the fair grounds and the Precious Blood Convent on Talbot street have now been completed, and the many brick layers who have been working on these jobs are now available.

A great deal of renovating, plastering, papering and painting is being done in the city homes, and painters report that this is one of the busiest seasons they have ever experienced. Old Home Week is given as the reason for the extra amount of painting of stores and houses.

Mr. Piper attributes the record amount of building of this year to the general growth of the city. "Of course," said Mr. Piper, "people are building now more in speculation than they used to. They buy lots, build, and sell." One year during the war only 75 houses were built, and this year already over 347 have been erected.

CLAMP DOWN LID ON RACING NEWS ON MONDAY NEXT

Crown Attorney and Collector of Customs Receive Instructions.

POLICE WILL ACT

Publications Containing Betting Information Will Be Banned From London.

Crown Attorney J. C. Elliott announced this morning that beginning Monday next the lid on papers publishing racing information will be jammed down tight.

Instructions have been received regarding the provincial enactment of this subject, and E. O. Talbot, collector of customs, received this morning instructions from Ottawa on the matter of the importation of racing publications.

Mr. Talbot said he had seen several of the publications in question, and had been asked concerning their legality. The notice he has received sets the matter out satisfactorily, and states that anyone importing such publications is liable to a heavy penalty.

Chief of Police Birrell stated that he had as yet received no instructions from the crown attorney on the matter, but that as soon as he did, his department would take steps to see that the law is inforced.

The matter of newspapers coming in from outside provinces containing racing information will prove more difficult than that concerning those published within the province. In this case it is possible that a heavy tax will be placed on the journals in question, making the cost of entry into the province almost prohibitive. If this is not done, the circulation of them will have to be stopped at the place of publication.

What the Act Says.

The act, cited as the "Betting Information act," is interpreted as follows:

(a) "Betting information" shall include tips, selections, choices, odds, winning money prices, prices paid to winners, pari-mutuel payments, or any similar intelligence relating to, applicable to, or connected with any horse race, steeplechase, pacing, running or trotting race, whether held within or without Ontario.

(b) "Publish" shall include the act of writing, typewriting, printing or otherwise making information legible, and the act of producing, distributing, selling or offering for sale and disposing of betting information by any means whatsoever.

Under the heads of "Offense" and "Penalties," the act ordains as follows:

(1) Every person who by himself, his clerk, servant or agent, publishes any betting information, as defined by this act, shall be guilty of an offense, and shall incur a penalty not exceeding $500, and in addition thereto may be imprisoned for a period not exceeding six months; and in default of payment of any such penalty, shall be liable to imprisonment for a period of not more than three months.

(2) The penalties imposed by this section shall be recoverable under the Ontario summary convictions act.

The Criminal Code.

The section of the criminal code applying to this case and received by Mr. Talbot is as follows:

"By and amendment to section 235 of the criminal code, everyone is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to one year's imprisonment and to a fine not exceeding $1,000, who

"Imports or brings into Canada any matter, whether printed or in writing, which from the nature of its contents or from other evoidence adduced is not a newspaper published in good faith mainly for the

MAKE IT ILLEGAL TO SWIM IN RIVER WITHOUT GUARD

Mayor To Urge Civic Bylaw To Prevent Drowning Accidents.

MUST BE WATCHED

Mayor Wenige moves today to safeguard as far as it is humanly possible the lives of those who bathe in the river Thames. All persons should be restrained from entering the water in any spot and at any time, unless there is proper and adequate supervision, his worship declares, and he will promptly urge the passage of a municipal bylaw to that effect.

"There should be adequate supervision every day," the mayor stated, "and no person should be allowed to swim in the river when such is not available. This can be accomplished by bylaw."

If such legislation eventually becomes law, as urged by the mayor, the onus of responsibility is then placed strictly upon the shoulders of the police commissioners and the members of the police department, whose duty it will then become to guard the entire length of the river when there are no supervisors on duty and to prevent bathing at any time—day or night.

Last night's fatality at Becher's Island is but another example, the mayor points out, of what might and would no doubt occur again on Sundays if the civic bathing pools are not available and when the children will swim in other and very dangerous spots in the river.

Civic Election Spasms Brought On By the Heat

ALD. WILSON FOR MAYOR?

Ald. William Wilson as a candidate for the mayor's chair next December?

The fiery veteran ex-chairman of the board of works acknowledged today that he had been asked to consider a nomination. He had no definite decision at this moment, however.

"I am not aspiring for the position," Ald. Wilson stated. "Although it is quite correct that I have been asked to let my name go before the electors. Whether I run or not there will be opposition to this mayor. There is no question about that."

Ald. Wilson has more than distinguished himself since the first of the year as a consistent opponent to Mayor Wenige and by reason of his frequent tussles with his worship has earned the title as the "mayor's challenger."

Ald. Wilson has been a member of the city council during the last nine years, barring the occasion when he was nosed out by four votes. He is also opposing the mayor's proposal to construct a new city hall on the McCormick property and promises injunction proceedings if any attempt is made to start this summer.

The ex-chairman attained further fame during the recent election as the one who rose up at the Conservative nomination and nominated Sir Adam Beck.

While making no decision, Ald. Wilson modestly admits that by reason of his long service, he is more entitled to a whirl for the mayor's chair than many others mentioned.

HIGH LIGHTS TO DATE.

Is there any indication that the municipal election in December will prove interesting?

From casual observation at the city hall, one would assume that the campaign will be lively and the participants will "hit the high spots."

The municipal chart bears the following remarks to date:

1. Mayor Wenige has thrown his hat in the ring, and will meet all-comers.

2. Opposing faction has selected E. R. Dennis for the mayor's chair and picked an aldermanic slate for him to lead.

3. Ex-Ald. John Ashton announces that he will be in the race again in ward three.

4. Ald. Gordon Drake predicts that "8,000 people will tell the mayor to stay home in 1924."

5. Ald. John T. May explains that he will have an important announcement to make next month.

6. Ald. William Wilson remarks that "the mayor will not be with us long now."

7. Ex-Ald. H. J. Childs acknowledges that several of his supporters have asked him to consider a nomination, and he essays the comment "that if he enters, it will be to win."

8. Ald. Leonard Douglass says that "he won't run again unless things are different."

Drake Beats War-Drum.

"I'll see that this mayor is trimmed, and he needn't forget that either."

This was the public announcement this afternoon from Ald. Gordon Drake, who added that "Mayor Wenige needn't think that he can trim Drake."

"We'll see next December whether I will have anything to do with the election of another mayor or not," enlarged Ald. Drake. "It just shows how this mayor repays those who had stood by him and given him a fair chance to see what he could do."

"I gave Mayor Wenige my wholehearted support on the bigger issues, and then he turns on me because we differed on the salary question. I supported the industrial area project. I supported him on the fair board, and on his proposal that we start a new city hall during 1923. Now see just what he does. But I'll show him, and I'll tell him so too at the next meeting of the council."

GRAPPLE TODAY WITH PROBLEM OF THE SUNDAY POOL

Public Utilities Commission Meeting To Deal Again With It.

MANY PETITIONS

The Public Utilities Commission are holding high court today at 3:30 to try the case of the swimming pool at the Thames Park civic playgrounds. The greatest secrecy has surrounded the preliminary operations. All the knights who have entered the lists still wear their visors closed and their features are still hidden behind the steel wall of their stony reserve.

"Are you going to discuss the swimming pool question?" they have been asked time after time, to all of which they but return the icy eye of aloofness. "Time proves all things," is their attitude. "Those who live longest will see the most." "In the meantime, run away, and don't bother us with such silly suggestions as that the mayor will order the opening of the pools, or anything like that."

Inundated With Petitions.

Meanwhile, the mayor and the press are being inundated with letters from the citizens of London, asking that the pool be opened, and the mayor, with the courage of these voices from the street, where the dust lies thick on the souls and bodies of the tired city man, and the cool water looks mighty appetizing, Sunday or any other day that he can get time to take a dip.

The analogy of the situation is

CITIZENS APPROVE BRITAIN'S POLICY IN THE RUHR

'Dick the Penman' Has Made Real Study of Human Nature

Richard Rudd Has Traveled From Atlantic to the Pacific.

PICTURE OF HEALTH

Tells of His Acquaintance With Well-Known People.

DICK THE PENMAN.

Why is one half of the world so absolutely ignorant of the way the other half live? Why is there some invisible barrier between them, solid as a wall and dense as the fog on the Newfoundland banks? Did you notice a squarely-built middle-aged man sitting at a writing table in the shadow of a passageway beside the street, writing names on cards? He writes your name on a visiting card in the finest script without any effort and sells them to you, so that you can, if you wish, use them for etching on a copper plate for your own cards.

Yet it is a wonderfully philosophic outlook that studies the passing crowds on the sidewalk. Years of experience in the United States and Canada, and from coast to coast, have lent their wise breadth of wisdom and their sure knowledge of human nature to the gaze of the shrewd gray eyes of the man at the table.

He is R. C. Rudd, the "Penman," an artist with his pen, an artist of mind pictures of the ways of men, and an artist in philosophy. Born in Birmingham, England, years ago he came to Canada when a child at the early age of seven, and faced the horizon of life at 15 years alone. In a reminiscent mood yesterday he showed The Advertiser some of the faces of the jewel of life, that fate has twinkled before his eager gaze.

Fond of Drawing.

"I was always fond of drawing and writing," he said, in reference to his way of earning a living. "I remember when I was a nipper getting a prize at school for writing. It was a copy of "Soucha, the Serf," and I have it yet. I never lost track of the pen work, and always kept my hand in wherever I was, for I have been at all sorts of things in my time," and the deep, thoughtful eyes focussed on the wandering days of youth. "Do you know why I do this kind of thing," he asked, "writing names of people who want designs for their visiting cards and so on?

"In the summer time when the sun shines I don't care about being shut up in an office or any inside or confined work, so I get this outfit, to break monotony. It isn't hard to pack round, and I get considerable amusement watching people and trying to answer all sorts of questions that seem connected with some of them." Mr. Rudd rose from his seat and stretched his arms over his head. "Life is a rum game, isn't it?" as he took the reporter in with one of his comprehensive glances.

"I've seen it under all shapes. I've cooked some in mining, on lake, and sailed on ships. I've been a school master, I've written names in thirty-nine states of the union, and all the time human nature has been my great hobby. I'm afraid," he added, "writing has had to come second."

To talk to Mr. Rudd is to realize the truth of what he says, for he is more philosopher than anything else. His eyes search each new face as it passes, and in the passing picks out the characteristic of the owner. "You've got to get about in the world if you want to have mental balance," he went on in his quiet determined voice. Look at that fellow crossing the street, all strained and taut, racing for the last dollar in America. What's the use; the chances are he won't get it, and he's losing lots of fun. He doesn't know that the wheat's just ready to cut or that a dog sweats through his tongue, or that reading and independent thinking can be any happiness. He'll work like that right to the last gasp, and think that he has really lived."

Not a Radical.

"No, I'm not a radical or a socialist or anything like that," he laughed, "just a progressionist or natural evolutionist. My idea is that when a fellow has the poorhouse side-tracked and when he can look to the future with a reasonable amount laid by, that it is time he got out of the game and gave the other chap a chance. This frantic rush doesn't get you anywhere that's really worth while. About all most of them get is hardening of the arteries and a poor digestion."

Mr. Rudd himself looks the picture of robust philosophy. Slightly grayed at the temples, there is still the rich color of youth in his cheeks, and his hands with which he writes in the wonderful scrolls with so little effort are as steady as a boy's. The reporter suggested that he might know his way about in the ring.

"Well, I used to do a little with the gloves in my young days, but only in an amateur way. Every boy should know how to use his hands, don't you think so?"

He is acquainted with many famous people in their particular lines.

Bobby Leach, who was the only man in the world to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel, was a personal friend of Mr. Rudd's. "I knew Leach very well. He was an English sailor, and I was present when he went over the falls in 1910. He had a steel barrel made, and he was slung inside in a leather harness. In going over the crest part of the harness broke, and he got pretty badly bruised and hurt his knee a bit.

Know the Old-Timers.

Another famous man who was well-known to Rudd was Jack Houdina, the athlete. In 1910, Houdina, seized with a fit of daring, determined to cross Niagara on a rope, holding on to a carriage by his teeth. Half-way across the rope slackened, and he almost lost his life. The Maid of the Mist was sent to his aid, and in picking up the rope, it slipped in some way, so that the resulting jerk almost tore Houdina from his grip. He was a sailor, however, and hung on. He was saved that day, but was killed some years later in the performance of another daring feat.

"Speaking of the ring," he continued, "I've met most of the old-timers. I've seen them in their training camps, and I've sparred with them when they were short of sparring partners. I'm getting along now, but I still move if I'm forced, and put up a fair show. It's a great game in lots of ways, for instance, it teaches you to respect the other fellow and to keep your temper, and that's something in this age of hurry, isn't it?

Mr. Rudd is no stranger to London. He has attended the Western Fair on occasions, and will be present at Western Ontario's premier show this year. He has letters and credentials from all over the continent, and from nearly every town of importance in Canada and the States, showing that he was always a welcome visitor to their exhibitions and shows.

Not An Author.

"How does London appeal to you as a business town?" asked the inquisitive reporter. The watcher at the black table with the steady eyes and the masterful mouth grinned good-naturedly. "That's telling tales out of school," he parried, "but Londoners are pretty much the same as the rest. A city doesn't change human nature, you know. I do just as much business here as anywhere."

"What do I read; what authors do I like best?? I don't waste much time on fiction. World problems interest me more, and I study them. Yes, Jack London knew life, the real life of the wanderer, and he knew the art of sensing faces at one glance just as all do on the road. There's another thing, I never forget a face I've once seen, and I can always bring up a mental picture of anyone whose name I have written, whenever I recall the name."

Richard Rudd, penman, par excellence, sailor, fighter, painter, adventurer and philosopher of the shaded lane, picked up the collapsible table covered with pens and bottles of ink, and cards with their names on. "Time to eat," he observed, and I'm going to call it a day, as far as this part of the work is concerned. "Write a book of my life? Well, not by a long sight. I'm no Jack London or Martin Eden or O. Henry, but I'll tell you all the horrible details if you come along in the morning, and you can do the writing." He straightened up on his strong legs with the table and outfit in his grasp. The setting sun lit the strong, heavy features, and the calm eyes wrinkled in a chummy grin. "So long, old man; see you again sometime—I'll be at the fair anyway. If you're ever in Toronto, come and see me."

WARM OR COLD SURVEY SHOWS PEOPLE EAT SAME

Restaurant Patrons Take All From Soup to Nuts in Hot Weather.

EVERYTHING A RUSH

One of the famous female novelists who has only to sign her name to a chance phrase for it to become immediately accepted as profound philosophy has called the back pages of current magazines "that correspondence school of common sense."

By this, of course, she means the advertisements, which advise the great dyspeptic public to eat Dr. So-and-So's breakfast food and live to be a hundred; to eat more this, and to eat more that, with the ultimate result that even the goutiest individual is said to secure a ripe old age; keep that schoolgirl complexion, and, generally, be in the pink of condition.

Savages Never Feel Ravages.

And after reading what the scientists say about how savages never feel the ravages of cancer, or contract bright's disease, or gout, or bad temper, or the several other dozen things which come from an overworked stomach, the average citizen begins to look around and wonder what is the matter with civilization, as it pertains particularly to his own dinner table.

Hence the following observations and conclusions in local restaurents. First, this blunt fact — with the temperature hovering round the hundreds, the average man and the average woman is going to order everything from the soup on. Winter and summer, the diet is the same. In some restaurents, a little concession is made to the market gardener with fresh vegetables, such as beans, or carrots, and, occasionally, there's fresh cherry pie, or something that sounds equally tempting.

But the trouble seems to be with the diners themselves and not with the restaurant keepers. The business girl who lunches down-town can order a fresh salad of tomatoes and cucumbers, with bread and butter and tea for a price which compares favorably with that of a meal. But does she? Here is a girl with a complexion, which, shaded by a wide-brimmed hat, and seen from the vantage point of the other side of the table appears to be of the cream and roses variety, looked as though it were continually supplied with fresh milk and fruit. But the lady was taking dainty sips of extremely well-thickened soup. She cleaned up nicely on this and proceeded to a plate of fresh roast ham with potatoes and a few slices of beet. With these she ate a slice of white bread and butter, scornfully passing up the brown bread on her plate.

Her dessert was some sort of pie, of which she ate the filling and left the crust. All this was accomplished in twenty minutes exactly, not counting the few minutes for service and one or two parcels under her arm showed that the first quarter of an hour of her lunch time had been spent shopping and that she was leaving the dining-room in a tremendous rush to be back at work in time. At the next table were three ladies of advanced age, all delving busily into meat and potatoes. Over at another table were a mother and a little daughter, of about three. The lady's back effectively concealed what she was eating, but the little girl was engaged with a huge mound of mashed potatoes, over which was poured a thick, rich gravy.

Can Go One Better.

The businessman can go one better. He is able to afford worse, and more of it. He adds a side-order and orders his pie a la mode.

In the home, summer is popularly supposed to be the season of salads, or coal meals; the season when the housewife can let her artistic sense run riot in combining in a salad the rich, bright colors of fresh fruit and vegetables. It may be that this is actually the base, but in the many restaurents where the "masses" eat, the summer menu is simply a reprint of that of winter. Soups, roasts, puddings, pies. The public sits before a helping of steaming soup, with the soup spoon grasped firmly in one hand and a glass of ice water perspiring in the other. Then they remark to their neighboring diner: "This hot weather simply does me out. I don't mind the cold, but I can't stand the heat."

ANGLICANS WILL HOLD BIG OUTING AT CHATHAM

Special to The Advertiser.

Chatham, July 19.—All Anglican churches in Kent county are co-operating in plans for a monster picnic which will be held at Government Park on Thursday, August 23. A central committee, of which W. E. Rispin of this city is general chairman, is in charge of the arrangements at present. Other committees will be appointed within the course of the next few days to take charge of various events for the big day.

DEMONSTRATE WATER SYSTEM

Special to The Advertiser.

Exeter, July 19.—The demonstration of the air pressure water system, etc., given by the provincial department of agriculture, under Mr. Geo. A. Putnam of Toronto, created a great deal of attention in town. The truck upon which it was displayed was visited by scores of interested men and women.

Londoners Hold Varied Opinions On England's Policy Towards Ruhr

Major Hume Cronyn Believes Attitude of Premier Baldwin Is Generally Supported in British Isles—Prominent Citizens Would "Wait and See."

The situation in the Ruhr is evidently becoming worse day by day. Some say that Germany can pay teu reparations out of her holdings in the United States, while others again say that she won't pay while France is in possession of the Ruhr district. The question as to whether it is England's best policy, or duty, to interfere is a vexed one, and difficult of solution. Germany has stated her willingness to pay if France will leave the Ruhr, and the allies, including France, agree to say what she is able to pay and how soon she must complete the payments.

France's point blank refusal to act along lines other than the ones she has chosen brings matters to the point where the equilibrium of Europe is at stake, and the British House of Parliament must decide immediately as to what it will do. Two courses are open to her. She can either forcibly eject France from the Ruhr or drop the reparations matter entirely.

With a view to finding out what the people in and around London think should be done by the mother country, the opinions of several citizens has been asked and are reproduced below.

Major Hume Cronyn, manager of the Huron and Erie, who was home this spring, though unwilling to give any opinion as to the possible effect of any settlement of the question as far as Canadian and American business was concerned, thought that, from his own observations while in England, that the average businessman at home is behind Premier Baldwin in his attitude to the problem. "I think," he said today, "that public opinion in the British Isles is very strongly behind Mr. Baldwin. There seemed to me to be an antagonism against the French that was almost as strong as it used to be against the Germans in the days of the war.

Serious Problem.

"There is no question in my mind that the solution of the Ruhr problem is the greatest single question now before the world. The whole safety of the world depends, I think, on the right solution of the problem. How it is to be accomplished, I can't say, of course, but I realize the seriousness of the situation to every nation in the world today."

The question of the settlement in the Ruhr valley seems to be an extraordinarily delicate one, considering the number of businessmen in London, who withdrew into their shells whenever the subject was mentioned. The holiday season has taken many of the prominent men in London away from the city, and of those who are left the following preferred to follow Asquith's famous advice and "wait and see." Edward Reid, of the London Life; John Moore, of the London and Western Trusts; T. McFarland, of D. S. Perrin's; Herbert Easton, of Jones, Easton & McCallum, and many others.

Feeling that opinions from farmers and country residents would be of interest in voicing an expression on the matter of British interference in the Ruhr occupation and in the reparations payments, several well established and respected farmers were questioned, and the opinions given are as follows:

Victor L. Hogarth, "Ivihoim," Exeter, says: "Let France go to it. England and Europe would gain absolutely nothing by interfering at present, while if she did it would simply show Germany that she cannot be made to pay by force, and she certainly won't from any other cause. France can squeeze Germany and make her pay. If necessary bring it home to Germany by giving Germany some of her own sauce, which she gave to the French and Belgians. I am convinced that interference at this time would be as great a mistake as the signing of the armistice was before Germany realized that she was beaten."

Urges Early Action.

William Ferguson, ninth concession, Caradoc, has this to say concerning the Ruhr:

"At first glance it looks as if it were the duty of England to try and put an end to the Ruhr occupation. At the same time I realize that if Germany finds that she cannot be forced to pay, she has no moral sense of obligation or decency that will prompt her to pay when the pressure is removed. Possibly Beaverbrook is right when he says that for all England can expect to recover from Germany, she would more than outbalance it by close application to Empire trade and let Europe carry on its fight for the survival of the fittest."

J. H. Batten, of Wilton Grove, is another farmer who believes that Europe is beyond the sphere of profitable negotiation as far as the Empire is concerned and says: "I would say from what I have read of the situation that Germany is well able to pay. Stinnes and others in Germany could draw the amount on their own holdings but they are using their money where they can buy out the country at bankrupt prices. Germany has made no effort to pay after three months of the greatest pressure France can bring to bear on her. To me that means that she doesn't intend to pay and unless you wreck Germany and take payment in kind, the reparations are a thing of the past. If France thinks she can do anything with Germany, good luck to her. Meanwhile England's best policy is to put her own house in order and strengthen her empire commercially."

James Burford, one of the pioneer market gardeners of the St. Thomas districts says: "Why should England interfere? No one interfered when Germany was trying to squeeze the very life out of France after the war of 1870. This whole trouble can be put down to that great amateur statesman, Woodrow Wilson, with his "14 points,' in letting Germany out of the war unscratched. I wont stay awake nights reading bulletins if France decides to rip Germany from one border to the other. Meanwhile England is better out of it."

GRAPPLE TODAY WITH SUNDAY SWIM POOLS

that many of the men in the city who are in favor of the closing of the pools, as far as their public utterances are concerned, give a confidential opinion that is absolutely at variance with their public statements.

A "Real Opinion."

One well-known citizen the other day who had given a very strong opinion in favor of closing the pool over the telephone from his house, gave a different version when the reporter met him in his office. "The wife was standing just beside me when you rang me up," he explained "and she is in favor of closing the baths, you understand. Personally, I think that they should be open on Sundays, just as on any other day. But that's just between you and me; and it's not for publication."

So the battle wages. Perhaps some of the stern commissioners themselves are really in favor of a gentle swim on the Sabbath. In any case, they are all going to the mat this afternoon. Commissioner Philip Pocock is the only member of the commission who is out of town, but the rest of the brethren are in good fettle, and looking forward to a little mental exhilaration as an antidote to the hot weather.

Will Move to Open Pools.

At this afternoon's meeting Mayor Wenige will submit petitions signed by several thousands of residents, who ask that the municipal bathing pools remain open on Sunday hereafter.

He will move that the pools be opened, and if this proposal meets with defeat he will move that the commission recommend to the members of the London and Port Stanley Railway Commission that they halt Sunday bathing in front of city property at the lakeside.

"What is sauce for the goose is also sauce for the gander" is the mayor's attitude in this connection, and he maintains that what is permissible on city property in one place should be also permissible at another.

NOTED PORTRAIT PAINTER VISITS WALLACEBURG

Special to The Advertiser.

Wallaceburg, July 19.—Mr. and Mrs. Allan Barr of London, England, were the guests this week of Professhis brother, Mayor (Dr.) S. A. Richsor Lorne Richardson at the home of his brother, Mayor (Dr.) S. A. Richardson. Allan Barr is a noted porknown journalist, and a brother of trait painter and son of the wellthe famous novelist, Robert Barr who taught school in Wallaceburg many years ago.

Allan Barr has been in Canada several months painting portraits for many well-known people in Kingston and Toronto. His wife is the daughter of Professor Secombe of Queen's University.

AGAIN CALLS SESSION OF FINANCE COMMITTEE

Lack of Members May Disappoint Mayor on Salary Discussion.

Members of the finance committee have been ordered into action again this afternoon. Mayor Wenige has called a special session for 5 o'clock to discuss the salary question and prepare a final recommendation for a special meeting of the city council set for Monday night next.

It is just possible, however, that there will be no session, as there is every likelihood that there will be an insufficient number of the aldermen present to constitute a quorum.

Ald. Burdick is in Port Stanley and Aldermen Greer and Judd stated that they were called out of the city on business. Mayor Wenige is very much in evidence at the city hall, however, and his chief opponent in Ward Two—Ald. William Wilson, is thereabouts.

Ald. Drake reported at noon, however, that his business did not permit him to leave at such an early hour and he would be unable to attend.

"It's all very well for the mayor," he stated. "He is getting paid as mayor and can afford no doubt to leave his own personal affairs.

INDIAN FACES A CHARGE OF CONTEMPT OF COURT

Dan Elijah Failed to Appear When Summoned to Appear at Caradoc.

Dan Elijah, Muncey Indian, found himself in police court this morning facing a charge of contempt of court, laid when he neglected to appear before the magistrate at Caradoc, after having been served with a summons.

The charge was laid by County Constable Washington Doxtator, who told the court that he had summoned Elijah to appear on a charge of being intoxicated on the reserve. He had not turned up so a warrant had been issued for his arrest, and he was found at St. Thomas.

Elijah pleaded guilty to the charge, but told Deputy Magistrate Gladman that he had not attended court because he was working to secure money for his fine. He did not say for what fine or how he knew he would be fined, as he pleaded not guilty to the charge of drunkenness.

The case was adjourned until Tuesday at 11 o'clock, bail in two sureties of $200 each being supplied by Alexander Parson, city, and Alex. Elijah, father of the accused.

BELGIUM PLACED IN BAD POSITION OVER RUHR ISSUE

Brussels Is Trying Hard To Maintain a Stand of Neutrality.

RESULTS ARE VITAL

By WILLIAM E. NASH.
Special Cable to The London Advertiser and Chicago Daily News. Copyright.

Brussels, July 20.—Belgium has become the battleground once more as she has been before in history, this time through participation in the great Franco-British diplomatic contest. Each of her two powerful neighbors wants to force her into the strife —England wants Belgium at her side and France wants her on her side. However, they know she has reasons of imperative interest for maintaining her neutrality. Belgium's whole foreign policy since the armistice, when she abandoned the guaranty of neutrality violated by Germany in 1914, has been based on the idea of co-operation between France and England in an entente cordiale, and if that co-operation ceases she will logically find herself obliged to take a painful dramatic step by choosing between them.

By land, Belgium's security depends on France and by sea on England. The time limit for making the momentous decision is short, for by tomorrow a communication is expected from London asking Belgium, among other allies, to sign a common note to Germany, or take upon herself the consequences of separate action.

What the Belgian Government will do it is impossible to state. She is heavily tied up with France, and there are several factors in view which draw her toward Great Britain. What the Belgian Government would like to do is to work out a compromise plan smoothing over temporarily the points in dispute between France and Great Britain and re-establishing momentarily the points in dispute between France and the inter-allied unity of front toward Germany.

Diplomats Encouraged.

Belgian diplomats and statesmen are working frantically to bring about this result. They profess to be encouraged in their efforts by the arrival in Brussels of another eminent expert in the art of compromise, namely, Foreign Minister Eduard Benes of Czech-Slovakia, who, after extended visits to London and Paris, now has come here to consult with Premier Theunis and Foreign Minister Jaspar of Belgium.

One scheme of compromise in favor here was given to the writer as follows by a member of the Belgian parliament:

1—A summons by Great Britain to Germany regarding the cessation of passive resistance in the Ruhr.

2—Acceptance by France and Belgium, at least by the latter nation, of a proposal for the convocation of a conference of experts to examine Germany's capacity to pay, providing that this same conference be subordinated to the authority of the reparations commission and be made plausible under the treaty of Versailles by a grant of the consultative powers only.

3—The transformation of the Ruhr occupation from an active to a passive stage, with evacuation envisaged as a possibility if Germany grants other satisfactory guarantees as suggested by the late papal letter on reparations.

4—Renouncement by Britain of all claims to reparations in excess of the sum of four billion dollars or sixteen billion gold marks to cover the British debt to the United States.

5—Recognition of seven and a half billion dollar minimum debt to France and one and a quarter billion dollar minimum to Belgium to pay the costs of reconstruction.

On terms such as these, Belgium would be willing to come to terms, irrespective of the attitude of France. If a compromise should fail, however, it is admitted that Belgium would be forced into an ugly position. Despite sympathy for France, the opinion of the Belgian people is not unanimously behind the Ruhr adventure. The country by no means sees eye to eye with France respecting Germany.

Urge Evacuation.

The Flemish ministers in the Belgian cabinet are said to be urging conditional evacuation. The Catholics have been influenced in the same direction by the Pope's letter.

If the Theunis government were to fall again, as is possible any day, Belgium might experience a complete reversal in her Ruhr policy after she had committed the irreparable fault of antagonizing Britain in the matter. Theunis was obliged to promise parliament his cabinet would make no move toward a further rapprochement with either France or Britain without consulting the Chamber of Deputies.

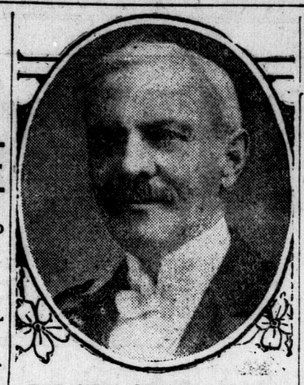

Likewise the commercial interests of Belgium coincide with those of Britain more than with those of France. The port of Antwerp is hard hit by the disturbed conditions in the Rhineland and in the Ruhr. Business is depressed, commerce is languishing, the exchange is ascending and unemployment is increasing through a persistence in the uncertainty as to reparations.

An excess in population of two million souls is said to have grown up in the country side. Belgium realizes more and more that she is not a self-sufficing nation like France. Finally some politicians seem inclined to fear that little Belgium sooner or later will be swallowed up by France if Great Britain decided to withdraw from the entente. A compromise transaction between Britain and France is more possible than most people expect, according to Dr. Benes. Judging by assurances given him, he said, the British note of this week would not be couched in terms capable of bringing about a rupture between the cabinets in London and Paris. He told the writer today that, according to data given him, experts demanded by Great Britain as judges of Germany's capacity to pay might well be accepted by France if they were chosen from the reparations commission in Paris.

CITY SWELTERS, COUNTRY GRINS; HEAT AIDS CROP

Temperature of 90 or Thereabouts Helps Hay and Sends Corn Ahead.

WHEAT LOOKS WELL

The present hot spell, although very trying to townspeople, is producing a broad smile in the rural districts of Western Ontario.

Following the heavy rains which fell over last week-end, the present hot sunny weather is allowing the farmers to get in the remainder of the hay crop in fine shape, while the same factor following the moist condition of the ground, is sending the corn crop ahead splendidly.

Yesterday the thermometer reached the high level of 90 degrees in the shade, and the swimming baths of the city were filled to capacity.

The cutting of all wheat has started in earnest, and the crop looks remarkably well considering the winter killing and poor condition of the young crop when it emerged from the cold winter. There is reason to believe that when the crop averages for the whole province are available, it will be found that the crop has returned a fairly good yield.

Raspberries are another crop which is turning out better than it promised. The long hot spell of June seemed to have dried up the foliage in some patches, and growers were of the opinion that very little fruit would set. The quantities of excellent raspberries reaching the London market bear eloquent testimony to the fact that Sunday's rains have done a heap of good.

The vegetable crops among the market gardens throughout the district look wonderfully fresh since the rains. The late cabbage crop, which had just been set out at the first of the month showed signs of wilting, but since the rains the young plants have recovered from the transplanting and are now forging ahead.

CHILD IS BORN IN TAXI ON WAY TO HOSPITAL

Special to The Advertiser.

Montreal, July 19.—Responding to a hurried summons from a woman residing a mile or so away from the Kennedy taxi headquarters last night, taxi number 163 lost no time in reaching the address given, although keeping within the prescribed speed limit.

"Hurry to the Maternity Hospital, the woman patron explained as she entered the car, and the driver obeyed instructions to the letter, but just before he reached the destination it became evident that a doctor must be summoned at once so he brought one to the taxi, making such arrangements for privacy as he could and the new born came into the world in the car, alive and well, with apparently no ill effects to the mother. Both are being attended to now in the hospital.

A cigar stub thrown from an upstair window at the home of N. P. Pope, 180 St. George street, caused a small fire last night at 6:45. It lodged under a loose shingle and started a blaze, which, however, was extinguished by the city firemen without any serious damage being done.

Report Canada Approves Regulating Lakes Level

Engineers Claim Project of the Chicago Sanitary District Will Increase Water Depth in Some Places by Twelve Inches.

Associated Press Despatch.

Chicago, July 20.—According to a report of a committee of engineers submitted to the district commissioners yesterday, Canada has approved proposals of the Chicago sanitary district for regulating the water level of the great lakes through compensating works in the St. Clair, Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers.

The lake level problem took form recently when an injunction was issued by the federal courts prohibiting the sanitary district from drawing more than 4,167 cubic feet of water a second from Lake Michigan, says the report. Ten thousand cubic feet are required for the drainage system of Chicago. The sanitary district proposes to maintain the present level, or even increase the present level by as much as twelve inches at Montreal, Toronto, Duluth, Superior and other shipping points by means of regulating stations at tributary points.

MINERS PREPARE TO GIVE UP STRIKE

Caledonia Local Awaits Action of Other Districts In Troubled Area.

SYDNEY IS OPPOSED

Canadian Press Despatch.

Sydney, N.S., July 19.—Caledonia local of District 26, U. M. W. of America, voted tonight 99 to 79 to return to work, but to delay action until other local unions had time to canvass the situation.

Provisional President Silby Barrett of District 26 said tonight that he considered the Caledonia action a vote of confidence in International President Lewis, who has called the strike off and in himself as Lewis' appointee.

The Sydney Mines mass meeting was addressed by J. B. McLachlan and other speakers and voted to remain on strike. A meeting of the international officers, Provisional President Silby Barrett and Acting-Secretary-Treasurer Louis McCormick will be held tomorrow to draw up a plan for further action in the district.

Silby Barrett today mailed formal notice to the deposed executive to vacate the district offices and hand over all belongings.

Overthrow System.

"There is no man more loyal to the institutions of this country than I am, but I intend to do all in my power to overthrow the present system of government."

This declaration was made by deposed President Daniel Livingstone, of District No. 26 United Mine Workers of America, at a mass meeting of some three thousand striking miners at Glace Bay.

Livingstone went on to say that the miners had the power in their hands, and when they understood more fully the use of the franchise they would bring it about.

The meeting passed a resolution pledging those present to remain on strike as a protest against the presence of troops in Cape Breton in connection with the strike of steel workers at the British Empire Steel Corporation. Speakers were members of the deposed executive of the district: Secretary J. B. McLachlan; Vice-President A. S. McIntyre; A. Stewart, provincial board member, and other officials.

Union Jacks Flying.

Union Jacks were flying as the miners paraded before the meeting, which was orderly and enthusiastic throughout.

According to neutral observers, the steel-coal strike is in process of disintegration. It would occasion no surprise, it is said, should the men be ordered back to work on the ground that the "teachings" of International President Lewis, who deposed the executive, had made the action necessary in order to preserve the union. The counsel given by the deposed officers to the rank and file of the miners is "remain united whether you continue the strike or go back to work."

At a meeting tomorrow morning these officers will formulate a reply to President Lewis' deposition act, which will, says Mr. McLachlan, "not be complimentary."

PRINCE EDWARD FIGHT IS KEENEST IN YEARS

Thirty Liberals, Thirty Conservatives and Seven Progressives Nominated.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., July 19.—Thirty Liberals, 30 Conservatives and seven Progressives were nominated for 30 seats to be filled by the provincial election on the 26th. Two Progressives are running in the first district of Prince, two in the second and one in the fourth. There is one Progressive in the third district of Queen's and one in the third district of King's. Premier Bell in the fourth Prince has a Conservative and Progressive opponent.

The campaign has been one of the hottest for years. Liberals are stressing their policy of improved finance, good roads and good schools and increase of teachers' salaries by 50 per cent. Conservatives charge the Liberals with broken pre-election pledges. They declare taxes were unnecessarily increased, and promise, if elected, to abolish the $3 poll tax and reduce sessional indemnity, which is now $500.

FINDS GERMAN NOTE DIFFICULT TO DRAFT

Lord Curzon Experiences Trouble In Framing Suitable Reply.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, Eng., July 19.—Lord Curzon is experiencing more difficulty in the preparation of his note to Germany than had been expected. It is now reported that the note and the covering letter may not be despatched to the allies until next week, but whether the trouble has arisen from political friction within the cabinet, as reported in some quarters, or from the inherent difficulty of framing a reply to Germany that would not offend France, is not evident.

SIR GEORGE PERLEY HAS NO PLANS FOR FUTURE

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, July 19.—"I left home for four weeks and I was away eight years," was the manner in which Sir George Perley, former high commissioner for Canada at London, described his return to this country. "I have no home," he added. "My wife and I have been living in trunks. I didn't go to London purposely. I was there when Sir Robert Borden asked me to stay on, and I did. I had a house here, but I rented it from month to month and I finally sold it, so that we have no home here at present."

Sir George declared he had no future plans.

Youth Drowns In Thames While Playing On a Raft In Becher's Island Pool

Robert Tagg, Only Son of Mrs. Charles Tagg, Maitland Street, Knocked Unconscious While Playing and Sinks—Accident Occurred After Civic Pool Closed.

The Thames River at Becher's Island claimed its second drowning victim of the season last night about 9:30, when Robert Tagg, only son of Mrs. Charles Tagg, of 571 Maitland street, fell to his death in the waters midway of the stream after being knocked unconscious from a blow on the chin caused by the raft on which he was playing with other boys upsetting and striking him on the head.

The boy with several other lads near his own age remained in the water after the supervisor had closed the pool for the day and darkness had settled when two frantic youngsters ran to the home of P. M. Millman at 24 Grosevenor street and gasped out, "Bobbie's fallen off the raft, and we can't get him out—he's drowning."

Mr Millman telephoned at once for the firemen, who arrived on the scene within three minutes with the pulmotor, believing that the lad had already been taken from the water.

Volunteers Assist.

Scores of volunteer rescuers assisted the firemen in searching the dark waters for the body of the boy, but when an hour had elapsed the search became less vigorous as they came to realize that after such a lengthy immersion any attempt at resuscitation would be unavailing.

The firemen, however, under Chief Aitken, continued the hunt for the body with grappling hooks. They were aided in the search by the lights of the two fire trucks playing on the waters from either shore.

An Advertiser reporter with a neighbor were the first to break the news to the boy's widowed mother at her little frame cottage on Maitland street, and after she had heard the tidings of her son's death she fainted away.

After she had been revived by neighbors who came to comfort the widowed mother she related a dream she had two nights ago in which she saw her husband, who died on May 4 in Victoria Hospital, in the midst of a vast expanse of water.

Had Premonition.

"It must have been a premonition of what happenen to my boy tonight," she sobbed, as she rested her head on the shoulder of Mrs. Turner, her next door neighbor, and burst into tears. "He was all I had—my only child—and he meant so much to me now that his daddy has gone."

Mrs. Tagg last saw her son playing at the Lord Roberts school grounds. She told him then to be home early, and went on her way, little suspecting that within one short hour he would be at the bottom of the river while his companions dived into the murky depths in a vain effort to bring his body to the surface.

Hundreds of citizens lined the shore on either side of the scene of the fatality, and until midnight scores of anxious mothers were calling The Advertiser office and asking in half-frightened, half-prayerful tones the victim of the tragedy.

Two of the dead boy's chums related to The Advertiser the events immediately preceding the fatal plunge of the Tagg boy into the Thames.

Playing On Raft.

George Zellar accompanied him to the pool and was playing with him on the raft in the center of the stream. "There were about ten of us," he said. "Bob was in the water hanging to one end of the raft, and the rest of us on the other. Two or three of the fellows jumped off our end all together, and the raft struck Bob on the head when the weight came down. We heard him shout 'Oh,' and then he sank and never came up. We tried to get him out but none of us could swim very well, and we had to give it up."

As darkness fell upon the scene the light from the moon threw shimmering pencils of light across the darkened waters, but the beauty of this went unnoticed in the grimness of the moment.

The searchlights from the city fire trucks played back and forth across the stream showing the firemen in long rubber boots, and the many divers continuing their search for the boy's body.

Riverbank Crowded.

By 10 o'clock the riverbank at the foot of Grosvenor street was thronged with hundreds of people; mothers on the verge of tears thinking that it might be one of their children, but silent withal with a secret dread of having some one tell them that such was the case, firemen rushing back and forth adjusting the grappling hooks, and with here and there some small boy turning the feeble light of his bicycle lamp out on the misty stream in the hope of detecting a small body floating there.

In the parlor of the little home on Maitland street is a ukulele which the drowned boy had learned to play, and in the same room is a calendar at which the bereaved mother had looked a few moments before she learned of the death of her son, and said to herself, "August 19 is Bobbie's birthday, and I shall give him a party on that date."

These facts she related to The Advertiser when she had recovered from the first shock of hearing about the drowning.

"He was all I had left," she continued, "and I was counting upon his future so much. He was working in a store downtown during the holidays, and when he came home tonight he looked tired, and I told him he ought to take a rest, but he said he wanted to go out and play with the other boys, and I agreed. I never saw him again after I left him at the school grounds."

Guards On Duty.

E. V. Buchanan, manager of the Public Utilities, in speaking to The Advertiser last night, feels that no blame can be attached to the supervisor at Beechers' Island for the drowning. Mr. Buchanan stated that yesterday there were three life guards on duty and every precaution had been taken to prevent further loss of life following the death of Isabel Storey, who was drowned at that place a week ago. He stated that after darkness settles in, those in charge of the supervised area are free to go home, and that they have no power to stop any one wishing to swim from jumping in any one place in the river.

Mayor Wenige in speaking on last night's tragic death stated that something will have to be done immediately to prevent any further fatalities in the city's civic swimming pools, and that at tonight's meeting of the public utilities commission a drastic move would be made to guard the lives of all citizens who enjoy the privileges of local swimming resorts.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, Eng., July 19.—The House of Lords today unanimously passed the second reading of Lady Astor's liquor bill. Viscount Astor said the bill had been piloted through the Commons by a relative of his, but it was not on that account that he invited the Lords to support it, but because they owed a duty to adolescence.

Claim Wallaceburg Men Smuggled Immigrants

Special to The Advertiser.

Port Huron, Mich., July 19.—William Woodward, 31, and William Kerr, 36, of Wallaceburg, Ont., and ten immigrants, two of them women, are in custody of immigration officials here tonight as the result of arrests by Michigan state police. Charges of conspiracy will be preferred against Kerr and Woodward and the ten immigrants will be deported.

As a result of the arrest of Kerr and Woodward the immigration officials state they are in possession of evidence that an underground system for bringing immigrants from Canada into the United States across the St. Clair River has been operating on a large scale.

While partolling the St. Clair River front at Roberts Landing near Marine City police saw several men disembark from a rowboat and enter an auto bus, which sped away. They overhauled the bus at Anchorville and arrested ten immigrants and Kerr and Woodward.

Officers say Woodward was the owner of the auto bus which he brought across St. Clair River from Port Lambton Wednesday to transport the immigrants to Detroit, where they were to be turned over to members of the alleged immigrant-running ring.

PASS ESTIMATES FOR NAVAL BASE

Opponents of Singapore Project In British House Fear Armament Competition.

U.S. MAY INTERFERE

Associated Press Despatch.

London, England, July 19.—After a spirited debate in the House of Commons tonight on the merits and demerits of the Singapore naval base, the government obtained a victorious vote, carrying the naval estimates, under closure, by 217 to 130.

The opponents of the Singapore project bitterly complained that it was against the spirit of the Washington agreement and would lead to competition in armaments and to future wars.

Other members contended that Singapore was unhealthy, could be invaded by land and sea, and could not be defended from the land side. Much play also was made of the fact that the project was compelling Holland to fortify her bases in the East Indies.

Causes Discussion.

The proximity of Singapore to the scene drawn in the Washington agreement also came in for much discussion, but those who favored the project said it was idle to make this the subject of complaint. Commander Bellaires argued that if Japan or the United States had not wished Great Britain to develop Singapore they would have drawn the prohibited area at longtitude 104 degrees east. It was perfectly obvious that unless Great Britain had Singapore she could not maintain a fleet in the Far East.

Lady Astor said if she thought the policy of the government would in any way encourage war she would vote against it heart and soul, but she knew that police forces would be necessary for a long time and Britain needed an army and navy, not for fighting purposes, but for peace purposes.

Captain William Wedgwood Benn declared that the Washington conference would have been abortive had the delegates known of the British intentions at Singapore, but Lieut.-Col. Amery, first lord of the admiralty, in winding up the debate for the government, repeatd his assurance, which he had voiced in the House of Commons on July 16, that it was clearly understood by all the delegates at Washington that Great Britain was retaining full freedom of action regarding Singapore.

Proud of Agreement.

"If the country had reason to be proud of anything it had done in recent years," he added, "it was its part in the Washington agreement and what it had done since. It was proved that Great Britain had welcomed to the full every proposal made by Secretary Hughes and its United States friends. Furthermore, Great Britain alone took immediate steps to disarm herself before the agreement was ratified and, he believed, by so doing had insured the success of the government.

The first lord insisted the meridian 110 was chosen for one reason only, to make clear that Singapore was not in the zone of non-action.

He maintained that Singapore was an ideal position for defence, not for offence, and there was no intention it should be developed for offence. All that was contemplated was that Great Britain would be able to do, not tomorrow, but a decade hence, what constituted the policy of this country during the war before concentration against Germany.

"All we mean to have in far eastern waters," he continued, "is a fleet of the kind and size we contemplated in 1911. Under our reduced one-power standard we must be able to apply that one-power standard wherever our interests are menaced. That means that our fleet must be mobile, and mobility is impossible without naval bases."

GREGORY COMMISSION RUSHES INVESTIGATION

Ferguson States Matter Will Be Cleared Up As Soon As Possible.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, July 19.—Premier Ferguson stated today that the Gregory Commission, which has been engaged in investigating hydro matters for some time, has received instructions to bring its labors to an early conclusion. W. D. Gregory, chairman of the commission, and R. A. Ross, one of the members, saw the premier this afternoon.

"The information compiled by the commission cannot be rendered useless by scrapping," the premier stated. "The staff has been cut down to the limit. Only one accountant has been retained for reference purposes, and the engineering staff is now confined to Mr. Travers and his immediate assistants. Stenographers are compiling the data for the report of the commission, which is expected to be in the hands of the government within a few weeks.

"High pressure orders have gone out," added the premier, "to rush the investigation to completion and to put an end to the heavy expenses incidental thereto."

CHINAMAN KILLS MAN ON VANCOUVER STREET

Canadian Press Despatch.

Vancouver, B.C., July 19.—John Z. Jones, an employee of the British Columbia Electric Railway Company, was shot and instantly killed by Chong Sam Bow on the street here yesterday afternoon. Jones was returning from lunch with a companion when the Chinese confronted him, shouted something that was not understood, and fired at Jones, killing him.

The Oriental was immediately arrested. In a statement to the police, Bow said he shot Jones four or five times. "I do not know him personally, but I saw him a couple of days ago. At that time the man beat me near the city hall for no reason. This man, when I met him today, slapped me. Then I shot him."

ABBE'S COUNSEL PRESENTS CASE

Taschereau Declares Motive of Robbery In Crime Overlooked.

DIDN'T SEE THE WILL

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, July 19.—Rising to heights of impassioned eloquence rarely heard in a court of justice in this city and matching by his rhetoric the interest and intensity with which the case has been followed for the last five weeks, Alleyn Taschereau, K.C., one of the counsel for the defence, concluded his presentation of the case for Rev. Father Delorme, charged with the murder of his half-brother, Raoul, to the jury here this afternoon.

"Did you notice," said he, "when the young (Delorme) girls entered the witness box, before you and at the side of them stood the dummy representative of Raoul, with bloody cap, shirt torn, cravat twisted, clothes stiff with blood, and it stayed there as their brother Raoul. It seemed to me at that moment as though the shade of Raoul Delorme passed through this room and through the voice of his little sisters said to you: 'No—No—No—No. It is not him. I am here to pronounce his innocence and not to seek for vengeance.'"

Goes Into Details.

Mr. Taschereau went over the details of the evidence at great length, but made the most of the defence evidence introduced this morning declaring that it proved conclusively that Raoul had not been murdered at home, but outside.

He sought to demolish the theories of vengeance, hatred and interest given as the motives for the crime, and said the motive of simple theft had never been suggested. He declared that it was impossible to believe that the abbe was guilty of the crime.

Mr. Taschereau, after emphasizing the fact that public rumor, conversations in the streets, halls and elsewhere, newspaper clamors, etc., had been responsible for the instituting of the case, reviewed the case in detail.

He pointed out that Mr. Delorme, father of the abbe, died in 1916, and the abbe had administered the estate from 1916 to 1922, and experts had declared that the value of that estate had been raised in that time to $250,000. In those six years, Raoul, the victim, had never asked the abbe to render to him an account of the estate or anything regarding the state of his affairs.

The police had said there could only be three motives—vengeance, hatred or interest. Neither of the first two reasons could have existed. The question of interest remained. They point to a will, an insurance policy and a deficit and immediately it is the Abbe Delorme.

Overlooked Motive.

But, said Mr. Taschereau, they overlooked another motive, that of theft. This aspect of the murder was, he said, not investigated. He suggested that Raoul Delorme, led away by his friends, might have gone to some place of none too good a reputation. There the murder might have been committed for some hundreds of dollars, for a gold watch or for a ring.

As to the deficit, he said that the abbe had spent about $9,000 in five or six years on automobiles, expensive repairs and trips. He had taken Raoul with him on these trips, but all the figures of the expenses had been debited to the abbe. Again a promissory note payable for $4,000 for taxes was referred to. Raoul had the greater share of the property as between the two brothers, yet the abbe had been debited with the whole amount. Further Raoul's expenses were put at an average of $1,055 since his father's death, but who could say that he did not spend more than that. The abbe had also administered his sister's estate. If all the expenses incumbent on his administration were charged against him, he would necessarily face a deficit.

Quotes Victim.

Had Father Delorme any need of this motive? he asked. He denied it, speaking of the affection that existed between the two brothers. Had the abbe any reason to rob his brother? Against this he quoted a remark of Raoul's to the effect that he "was quite happy that my brother did the work." As to the $25,000 insurance policy he pointed to an answer in evidence of the official of the company in which the insurance was taken out that "he (the abbe) did not seem very anxious about a policy, it was rather a request for information." Further, the abbe would not have inherited all the $25,000 insurance policy. It would have divided among the brother and the sisters. As to the will by which Raoul left his share of the estate in large part to the abbe, Mr. Taschereau said that this was made at the time of the operation on Raoul at Ottawa and was the custom of the college he was attending.

When he had spoken to the abbe about it the latter had said: "Give everything to your heart." Nor was the abbe present when the will was made.

Reviews Crime.

He then went into the history of the crime. He declared that witnesses put in by the crown (the Delorme sisters) had stated that Raoul went out on the afternoon of the crime. But against that evidence the jury was being asked to believe that Raoul did not go out and that he was killed in the house. Mr. Taschereau described that as a physical impossibility. He then went over the Delorme sisters' evidence. Taking the evidence of the crown, he said it was clear as daylight that there was no proof that Father Delorme had committed the crime.

In regard to the defence, he said the evidence brought in this morning proved beyond all doubt that Raoul Delorme could not have been killed at home.

He passed from this to the evidence as to bullets and handwriting. As to the latter he said it could not be known definitely who had addressed the package containing the watch to Detective Chief Lorrain. As to the bullets, he stood up on the testimony of W. A. Jones, expert, who declared that the scratches on the bullets were common to all bullets, and who stated that the bullets found in the victim were fired from two pistols.

Police Hunt For Suspect As Slayer of Little Child

Canadian Press Despatch.

Cochrane, July 19.—With only the very slightest of clues upon which to work, town and provincial police today continued their efforts to locate the murderer of Monica Foster, the 6-year-old girl foully slain here on Tuesday night. Officers of the law are currying the district trying to locate certain suspected persons, and while the police are saying little it is known that they are searching for a man about 35 years of age. Inspectors Blackwall and Moore of the provincial police are here directing the search, and Inspector John Miller of the Toronto headquarters staff arrived tonight to work on the case. The funeral of the motherless victim was held this afternoon to the local cemetery. The inquest, which opened yesterday afternoon, has been adjourned until Monday to await developments.

The child's body was found in a small bush within a stone's throw of her home, and police investigations indicate that probably she had been carried there from the road. Apparently she was struck down while proceeding along a road over a hill, and the finding in the roadway of a 7-lb stone covered with blood provided the first clue to her fate. She had received the full force of this stone upon the left temple, smashing in her head, and there was a pool of blood three inches deep at the spot. Afterwards her throat had been cut with probably the blade of a pocket knife, but she seems to have been dead when this was done.

The girl's absence from home after 7 o'clock on Tuesday evening made her grandmother, who has kept house for her son and his eight children since Mrs. Foster, Jr., died, anxious, and the alarm was raised. Dragging operations were conducted in the lake, the girl having been noticed along the shore earlier in the evening. Alfred Thomas Foster, father of the victim, was at work at the T. & N. O. yard office at the time, but he was relieved and joined the searchers. It was he who made the discovery of the body yesterday morning. Monica was last seen when 300 yards from her home about 6 o'clock on Tuesday evening. During the search which continued throughout the night the father three times passed within a few feet of the spot where his daughter lay with her arms folded across her body, but it was 9 o'clock yesterday before the stone was found.

TRIPLE DROWNING OCCURS IN GRAND

Father and Friend Perish In Going To Rescue of Boy.

OCCURS AT CAYUGA

Canadian Press Despatch.

Hamilton, July 19.—In an attempt to save Bruce Nichol, aged 10 years, from drowning, when he stepped into a deep hole while fishing in the Grand River this afternoon, Archie Nichol, aged 37 years, his father, and Howard Gould, a visitor from Stratford, were drowned with the boy. Mrs. Nichol was on the bank with her sister, Mrs. McKay, Stratford, and heard the frantic cries for help as the three men went down. She witnessed the triple fatality and was prostrated when assistance came. The drownings occurred shortly after 4 o'clock at a spot on the river known as the old lower dam, which is five miles from Cayuga.

While the women remained on the bank, the men waded into the water to fish and Bruce Nichol accompanied his father. Suddenly the small boy cried for help, and a minute later he had completely disappeared from view.

Expert Swimmer.

His father, an expert swimmer, rushed to his assistance and reached the spot when he reappeared. After taking hold of the lad he was heard to cry for help, and Mr. Gould, who also went to the rescue of the boy, had by this time reached the scene.

Whether or not Mr. Nichol was seized with cramps will never be known, but after securing his son, he, too, began to sink into the water. Both had disappeared when Mr. Gould reached the hole.

He, too, was an able swimmer, and when the father and son came to the surface he reached their side. In the grapple which followed all three went down, and cries for help were heard, but no one but the women were in the vicinity.

A few moments later the three went down for the last time.

Attract Residents.

Mrs. Nichol and Mrs. McKay's cries attracted residents and an emergency call was immediately sent for medical assistance. Neighbors directed to the spot were able to recover the bodies in a short time.

Bruce Nichol had been dead for several minutes, but an attempt to revive Mr. Nichol and Mr. Gould was made by means of artificial respiration, but without success. Coroner Dr. Simpson, Caledonia, took charge of the remains, and they were removed to Howden's morgue in Caledonia.

Mr. Nichol was superintendent of the Duro Aluminumware Company and occupied the trustworthy position with the firm for many years. Besides his widow, a son, Norman, aged 12 years, survives.

Howard Gould lived at 29 Douro street, Stratford.

LOCATE DROWNED BODY OF YOUNG ADVENTURER

Believed To Be Remains of Youth Who Walked Niagara Girders.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Edmonton, July 19.—What is believed to be the body of Leo Castle (or Nadeau) 18-year-old adventurer, who is thought to have drowned in the Saskatchewan River on July 15, was recovered this morning. While positive identification has not yet been made, it is practically certain that the body is that of young Castle.

Young Leo Castle, it will be remembered, was believed to have drowned in the course of a chase which followed the stealing of bottles of "pop" from a truck.

The boy was well known throughout the country by reason of his exploits in attempting to gain entry to the United States by crawling across the girders of the Niagara Falls suspension bridge.

ATTEMPT TO WRECK BLACK HOLE PILLAR

Repeated Clashes Occur Between Calcutta Nationalists and Police.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Calcutta, July 19.—Repeated attempts to mutilate and destroy the Black Hole monument here have resulted in numerous conflicts between the police and nationalist volunteers.

The monument, a large pillar, was erected in memory of 117 employees of the British East India Company who lost their lives in 1576—smothered to death in the famous "Black Hole," a room 18 feet square, in which 146 prisoners had been thrust by Surajah Dowlah, a Begnali ruler.

Three of those who tried to damage the monument were sent to jail for one year after they admitted in court that they were determined to demolish the pillar, and other offenders are in prison awaiting trial.

The attempted mutilations have been made by individuals apparently working on their own initiative. In each case they carried a flag and a hammer. A large force of armed police now guard the monument day and night.

WILL DEDICATE HOSPITAL WING AT KINCARDINE

New Building Erected by Ross Robertson in Memory of Mother.

REUNION A SUCCESS

Special to The Advertiser.

Kincardine, July 20.—The fifth day of the Kincardine Old Home Week commenced this morning with a promise of the success which has so far marked the entire week.

The sports' program commenced early. At 10 o'clock the fans were on hand to see the baseball game played on the Kincardine diamond between the "Fats" of Detroit, and the "Leans" of Kincardine.

This afternoon the big event is the dedication of the Ross Robertson Memorial Wing of the Kincardine Hospital, which has been erected by Mr. Robertson in memory of his mother.

Leading citizens, including Mr. Robertson, and J. R. Watson, chairman of the hospital board, will participate in the dedication service.

Tonight there will be community dancing, with a jazz band parading all the streets. The entire town is expected to turn out and participate in the merrymaking. The secretary and other members of the Home Week committee have announced definitely that "curfew shall not ring tonight."

Decorate Graves.

Sunday will see the conclusion of the Old Home Week with the Oddfellows service in the cemetery. God's Acre will be dedicated and the graves decorated. Rev. Dr. Johnston of Calgary, and formerly well-known in London, is to be in Kincardine to preach the afternoon sermon.

Only a few of the visitors are leaving the town before the conclusion of the reunion week. Yesterday the program was a complete success. It was known as Lucknow Day, and scores motored over from that place to take part in the festivities. Community singing was carried on at frequent intervals, and at night the program wound up with dancing for everybody. In addition to this there was a spectacular display of gorgeous fireworks.

Dance All Night.

J. J. Hunter during the afternoon and evening was popularly acclaimed as a singer. Mr. Hunter, who has been a resident of Kincardine for a good many years, is the present secretary of the Old Boys' Association. He inspired all sorts of enthusiasm as the leader in the community singing.

Bands were also there to provide still more and more music. The Galt Band paraded the streets and played at the frequent intervals in the afternoon and evening. The old boys imported a jazz band from Detroit for the dancing in the evening.

Residents played much upon the phrase, "Home Week comes but once a year," and took full advantage of their opportunity to enjoy themselves untrammeled by care.

There were scores on the streets this morning who had not risen early but who had stayed up late. Dancing continued until nearly five o'clock and even after that there were many who were still able to find vent for an exuberance of spirit. A night of reveling apparently left few traces, as all claimed to be feeling fit as a fiddle and ready to start on another day's round of pleasure.

MEXICAN REBEL, VILLA, SHOT DEAD AT RANCH

Famous Outlaw Meets Death at Hands of His Own Secretary.

Associated Press Despatch.

Chihuahua City, Mexico, July 20.—General Francisco (Pancho) Villa, commander of rebel armies in Northern Mexico for ten years, was shot and killed at 8:30 this morning at his big ranch at Canutillo, Durango, by Miguel Trillo, his secretary.

A battle followed, in which Trillo was killed by men loyal to their clain chieftain. According to latest advices received from the ranch, the fight is still in progress. More than 100 casualties have occurred in the sanguinary fighting which followed the shooting of Villa by Trillo.

Trillo was fired upon by other men near the scene of the shooting and was killed a few minutes later.

Men who had rallied behind Trillo then engaged the loyal Villa troops, and a general battle occurred within the ranch.

TORONTO NEWS AGENTS TO FIGHT BETTING LAW

Sam Lichtman, Heading Dealers, Declares He Will Continue Sale of Papers.

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, July 20.—A section of the newsagents and dealers in the city, headed by Sam Lichtman, are showing a disposition to figfiht the foreshadowed enforcement of the federal and provincial acts with regard to the publication of betting information. The warning issued yesterday by Crown Attorney Armour and Deputy Chief Constable Geddes, to the effect that on and after Monday next all offenders against the two acts would be prosecutetd, has had no effect up to this morning.

All papers purchased by The Advertiser yesterday and found to contain betting information, were still available on the news stand. still available on the news stand. The Advertiser was informed this morning at Lichtman's store that all the papers would be for sale on Monday. If they were to be stopped, the courts would have to do it.. It is also understood, that come what may, the locally-published racing sheet would continue, on the principle that the provincial act, which alone affects its publication, is ultra vires.

Less defiant members of the news agency fraternity are taking a more compliant attitude. In default of any direct communication from the law officers, they are continuing to sell the "Verboten" publications, but before Monday they intend to get into direct touch with the authorities to ascertain the exact position.

At the customs office, nothing is being done at present, as no instructions have been received.

CAR AND TRUCK COLLIDE BUT NO ONE IS HURT

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Thomas, July 19.—About 1 o'clock this afternoon a motor car, driven by Thomas O. McKnight, tobacconist, Talbot street, and a Dominion Express truck from London, collided on Hincks street in front of Doherty's blacksmith shop. The truck came out of the yard opposite the shop and hit the front of the car, damaging the radiator and knocking off one of the lamps. Each driver claimed that the other was to blame. Despite the damages, Mr. McKnight was able to drive the car away after the accident.

KIWANIS LUNCHEON IN CHARGE OF SCOTS

Immature Caledonian Picnic Is Staged as Today's Feature.

There was a Caledonian atmosphere to the meeting of the Kiwanis Club at noon today. The members staged a Scotch picnic in miniature with a pipe band and Scotch dancing, as well as a Scotch boost, in which Roy Lyons, George Fraser and Harry McCallum won prizes for a deep and extensive knowledge of Scotland and Scotch.

The meeting was one of the summer's series of stunt meetings. In addition to the Scotch program, W. E. Saunders gave one if his characteristic talks on bird life, providing the members with valuable hints on how to combine natural study with their annual vacation.

A new member in the person of Fred Halls was presented at today's meeting.

Raymond Turner, a young piper, and Lenore Gilmor, a clever little dancer, helped with the Scotch program.

A number of delegates were present at the meeting from Port Arthur, where an inter-city meet is to be held, with Senator James Couzens, formerly mayor of Detroit, to be the principal speaker. A number of the London Club signified their intention of attending.

Dr. Cunningham, convener of the special meeting committee, was in the chair.

CLAIM KNOWLEDGE OF CONTENTS OF NOTE

Two London Newspapers Announce They Have Definite Information.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, July 20.—Two London newspapers today make the assertion that they are able "to state definitely" what the British reparations note will contain despite the fact that the British cabinet was not to meet until 10 o'clock to decide upon the contents with two factions within it reliably represented to be contending for opposite proposals.

One of these, the Daily Sketch, tells its readers that among other points of the note will be three of which it knows. The first is submission of the question of Germany's capacity to pay to an international commission; the second is a request to France to reduce the scope of its occupation of the Ruhr to its January dimensions—the so-called "invisible occupation" in return for which Germany "will be expected" to abandon passive resistance; the third is an offer by Great Britain to cancel the French, Italian and Belgium war debts due her.

The other "definite" information is supplied by the Daily Herald, the Labor mouthpiece, which partly agrees with that which the Daily Sketch publishes.

The Daily Herald says that Great Britain will "demand" that Germany cease passive resistance and will suggest that France in return resume "invisible occupation" and agree to the creation of an international commission to consider Germany's reparations.

DAZZLING LIGHTS CAUSE BAD SPILL AT WALKERTON

Special to The Advertiser.

Walkerton, July 19.—A bad spill took place in front of Mr. Albert Benninger's residence Tuesday night, when a big car came along with powerful lights, dazzling Mr. Otto Klein, who was about to turn the corner. As a result, his car collided with the rear of Northcott's milk wagon. The boy who was driving the rig held pluckily on, but was unable to control the horse, which became frightened and upset the rig, smashing a lot of milk bottles and wrecking the wagon.

CARADOC MAN CAUSES TRAGEDY OF THE WILDS

Mother Hawk Sacrifices Her Family of Five After Nest Is Discovered.

Special to The Advertiser.

Strathroy, July 19.—Mr. Herbert Hickson, who lives in Caradoc near Glen Oak, on Wednesday unwittingly caused a tragedy in the wildwood and increased his store of nature lore. In the morning he noticed a large hawk circling and diving over the edge of a bit of swampy land at the back of his farm. When he went back to investigate what was claiming its interest, he found, hidden in the waist-high swamp grass, a nest with five half-grown young hawks in it. Although they were too young to remove, yet when he disturbed them, they flopped on their backs and fought with beak and claw. Young hawks in a nest were so unusual a sight that he left them.

During the afternoon he took some friends back to show them, but when they reached the site of the nest, they found it utterly wrecked. the five young hawks lying in a row with heads all in one direction, dead, and near them the carcass of a partially-devoured chicken.

Apparently the mother hawk, upon realizing that her home had been located, and being unable to remove her young ones, had killed them, as the head of each disclosed a deep gash.

UNIDENTIFIED BODY IS FOUND IN ST. CLAIR

Special to The Advertiser.

Sarnia, July 19.—The body of an unidentified man was found in the St. Clair river off Port Lambton, today, by George Lafferty, a fisherman. The body was found floating on the surface near the midstream gas buoy. The coroner was called and the body was removed. Death was due to drowning and the body had been in the water at least two weeks. The man evidently was about 65 years old. He wore a blue suit and a white shirt, striped with blue, and a celluloid collar, tan shoes and hose. His teeth were false and one tooth was missing from the upper plate. No reports of any recent drowning had been received.

ALDERMAN JUDD TO FIGHT WENIGE'S PLAN ON SALARIES

Chairman of Finance Committee Considers Recommendations Are Not Fair.

WILL BE ABSENT

Ald. Albert Judd, chairman of the finance committee, informed The Advertiser this afternoon that he will oppose Mayor Wenige's salary recommendations.

"I do not consider that $2,600 is sufficient for the position of municipal assessment commissioner, as recommended by the mayor," he explained, "and I will find it imperative to oppose him again in this instance."

Ald. Judd also urges a complete readjustment of the city hall pay list, and declares that while $5,000 is available for wage increases, and while it is not necessary to spend this money because we have it, he submits that the most of it will be required if all deserving cases are properly attended to.

The chairman stated also that he would not be present at a special session of the finance committee called by Mayor Wenige for this afternoon.

"I will not be able to be there," he said, "and I did not know about it until noon. I think that the mayor would have at least had the common courtesy to ask me first, as chairman of the committee, if the time would be convenient. In any event, I do not favor these sudden-death gatherings. I will not be there."

LOCAL RESTAURANT REFUSES NEGRO MEAL

Kitchener Watchmaker Is Told That His Patronage Is Not Desired.

For the second time within a week a local restaurant has drawn a color line and refused to serve any colored person who entered and desired a meal.

At lunch time today a downstairs cafe on Richmond street, between York and King, told W. V. Franklin, a well-dressed and appearing negro, that they would not serve him. Mr. Franklin asked to see the proprietor, who came from the kitchen and asked what was wanted. He was asked why he refused to serve colored people. He replied with a total lack of courtesy and abruptly:

"Because we don't."

When asked for a reason he would give none.

Mr. Franklin is a watchmaker of Kitchener, and is at present in the city advocating the cause of the negro against the Ku-Klux Klan.

MINERS FAVOR RETURN TO WORK IMMEDIATELY

Stellarton U. M. W. at New Glasgow Votes For Resumption.

Canadian Press Despatch.

New Glasgow, N. S., July 20.—The Stellarton U. M. W. local this morning voted 327 for and 54 against, to return to work immediately. The meeting was a prolonged one and was confined to members of the U. M. W., the only outsider present being ex-member William Murray of Thorburn, but he did not vote.

Alex Stewart of Westville, the deposed international board member, was refused admission to the meeting.

The action of the Stellarton U. M. W. members means that Thorburn will probably follow their action and that all the colleries of Pictou County will be working at least by the first of the week. The voting was by secret ballot and their action in excluding everyone from the meeting except the members who had a right there means that the vote was bona fide.

CHARGES TWO WOMEN IN THE BERRY PATCH

Mabel Doan of West Lorne Is Arraigned In Court For Assault.

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Thomas, July 19.—That the race of Amazons is far from dead was abundantly demonstrated at the county police court in West Lorne today, when five crown witnesses told of seeing Mabel Doan, who resides near that town, charge on two women in a berry patch with a heavy limb for a club, and beat them so severely as to cause them bodily harm, and force them to beat a hasty retreat. The two injured women, who were present at the trial, are Miss Marguerite Loucks and Mrs Francis Loucks.

The three parties were in a berry patch which is near the town, and were engaged in picking fruit, talking the while. Rather doubhtful compliments were passed, and the air and conversation grew warmer until an unsually heated remark set fire to the tinder with the afore-mentioned disastrous result.

No defense was offered, and His Worship Magistrate Maxwell found Miss Doan guilty of assault, and suspended sentence on payment of costs by the accused.

ARTILLERY UNIT MAY BE EMBODIED IN CHATHAM

Special to The Advertiser.

Chatham, July 19.—Two local artillery officers, Major W. George Kerr and Lieutenant W. C. Lamarsh of this city, are interested in the formation of an artillery unit in this city. It is rumored that a proposed scheme for the formation of the unit will shortly be submitted to the military authorities at London. No trouble will be met with in securing men to form the establishment of such a battery, as many ex-artillerymen of the C. E. F. live in and near Chatham.

AVIATOR FAILS IN UNIQUE FLIGHT

Lieut. Maughan Forced To Cancel One-Day Trans-Continent Hop.

OIL LEAK IS CAUSE

Associated Press Despatch.

Rock Springs, Wyo., July 19.—Failure marked the second attempt within ten days of Lieut. Russell L. Maughan, army airman, to span the North American continent between dawn and dusk today, when an oil leak forced him to land here at 5:08 p.m. mountain time. He had traveled more than two-thirds of the United States, a total of 1,925 miles, and he was hurtling toward his goal at a speed of 170 miles an hour, after leaving three of his five scheduled stopping points behind him in his race with the sun, when he was forced to descend.

A tiny stream spurting from an almost invisible aperture in the oil cooler of the Curtis plane necessitated the cancellation of the flight. A similar leak had caused nearly an hour's delay at Cheyenne, Wyo., his third stopping place, shortly after noon today and Maughan was driving his motor at top speed to regain lost time. For more than 200 miles westward from Cheyenne the motor raced smoothly, but at Rock Springs the cooler suddenly began to leak. Maughan passed over the air mail field at 4:58 p.m. determined to continue to Saldura, Utah, the next stopping place.

Forced To Land.

As the fumes from the escaping oil became stronger, however, he turned back, and landed. A brief examination by two pilots convinced Maughan that it would be impossible to reach San Francisco, the western terminus of his flight, before dark.

Bitterly disappointed at the failure of his second attempt to cross the continent, when success seemed almost assured, Maughan made a cursory examination of the oil cooler, and went to a Rock Springs hotel for the night.

Maughan's average speed from New York to Cheyenne, without deducting time for stops was 135.6 miles an hour.

STRIKE COMPROMISE APPEARS DIFFICULT

Dock Workers In British Ports Predict Cessation of Shipping.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, Eng., July 19.—There is no sign as yet of a breakdown in the dockers' strike here. Ernest Bevin, secretary of the Transport Union, said tonight that the situation was full of difficulties owing to the menacing attitude of the hot-headed section of the strikers against those who are wavering.

The sailing of the steamer Saxonia tomorrow from London by way of Southampton for New York has been cancelled. This is the first time Southampton has been effected by the strike. After a prolonged meeting this afternoon at Poplar the strike committee declared there was hardly a man working on the Tilbury docks, and that by Saturday not a tug or lighter would be in operation.

CAR'S WILD CAREER CAUSES CONFUSION

Auto Runs Amuck At St. Thomas and Creates Consternation.

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Thomas, July 19.—A car from Ford City ran amuck on east Talbot street at 2 o'clock this afternoon to the consternation of passersby and the financial embarrassment of the driver, who later settled up for damages to another car struck during his wild ride and for repairs to his own vehicle. The Ford City party were traveling along Talbot steet, and just this side of the Inkerman street corner side-swiped an Aylmer car parked on the north side of Talbot street. The impact apparently broke a radius rod, and the Ford City car careened on to the sidewalk, where it finally came to a wheezing rest, after it had very narrowly missed striking a startled pedestrian. The driver stated that he had been crowded against the parked car by another car which turned the Inkerman corner on to Talbot just as he drove up. A police investigation disclosed no circumstances warranting the laying of a charge against the driver of the Ford City car.

FRIDAY, JULY 20, 1923.

The Minority Have Ruled London.

In fifteen years' municipal voting in London a minority of the ratepayers have elected mayor and aldermen on all but four occasions; on two of these 50 per cent voted, and the majority occasions were in 1921 and 1922, when 58 per cent and 59 per cent voted.

The number of men and women who voted and the percentage of the total is given below:

	Men.	Women.	Total.
1909	6,421—60%	719—35%	7,251—50%
1910	5,997—57%	622—18%	6,789—45%
1911	5,842—48%	383—11%	6,252—41%
1912	6,087—50%	447—13%	6,576—43%
1913	6,742—56%	378—10%	7,164—41%
1914	7,014—62%	812—20%	7,826—43%
1915	8,178—58%	967—23%	8,367—50%
1916	7,531—51%	814—20%	8,345—43%
1917	7,242—42%	560—17%	7,802—45%
1918	7,307—50%	1,433—33%	8,740—46%
1919	4,716—33%	727—16%	5,443—29%
1920	7,475—64%	1,100—26%	8,645—44%
1921	8,519—55%	1,237—25%	9,756—48%
1921	10,373—60%	1,821—36%	11,894—58%
1922	10,907—67%	1,889—34%	12,796—59%

There were 21,827 voters who could have registered their opinions at the last municipal poll.

In only three instances have there been less than 50 per cent of the male voters mark their ballots, and in every year the percentage of total votes registered by the men has been lowered by the small number of women who have taken the trouble to come out and vote.

It is an alarming thing that the affairs of this city should be directed in so many years by a minority vote. In 15 contests, 11 have been decided by a minority of the ratepayers of the city. On only two occasions, in 1921 and 1922, has there been a positive majority of the people using the ballot.

In the years from 1910 to 1922 the city has spent $7,962,384.52, and, despite the fact that the people have been taxed for the purpose of taking that amount of money away from them, on only two occasions have a majority of the ratepayers deemed a municipal election of sufficient interest to turn out and register a vote.

The showing of 1921 and 1922 provide the only two bright spots in the whole list. The thing is serious and almost unbelievable were it not for the proof furnished by the figures and percentages.

Much of the complaint about the way civic affairs are run in London must come from non-voters; the law of averages would make this certain. A ratepayer who does not vote forfeits much of his right to object to what takes place afterward.

Buying Cherries on the Market.

It's one thing to buy a nice basket of big red cherries on the market and quite another to get it home 100 per cent intact.

The first sampler stops you before you get a good start.

"Buying cherries, eh?" (takes three or four). "The wife was thinking this morning it was about time to do some down. What's the price today?" (tries another three or four). "Those seem pretty good. We had a couple of trees in the place we used to live, and we never had to buy any then, and we've missed that old tree." (This time half a dozen in one hand.) "It's a caution how all these things cost."

The next sampler: "I was down in Niagara last week, and you should have seen the big English cherries I got. They say (takes small handful) they're better to eat raw than to can, and it's a fact, too. Nothin' makes such a good pie as our own Canadian cherries. Sometimes when I'm away off on my eats (eight went that time), nothing seems to have the same appeal as a juicy cherry pie. Some folks like 'em with the pits left in, but I don't—it takes too much time cracking the stones on your teeth. They're great, though (another last sample) when they're fresh like that."

Last sampler, friendly and gushing type, has wife with him—"Well, old top, gettin' cherries? S'pose you'll spend the evening shooting the stones out, yes? (Hands wife a few to try and tries himself.) We have the slickest little wrinkle you ever saw for takin' out the pits." Friend wife chimes in, "Yes, and we tie the pits up in a bag separate and put them in the kettle. They seem to give an added (just a few more went out then) flavor to the whole thing."

By this time you are as callous as the man who gives the cold look to his creditors. The back way around to the first street car stop and home, James!

Look a Little Farther Ahead.

London still has the spectacle of good pavements, down only a few years, having great holes dug in them in order to make sewer or water connections to new residences.

An attempt is made to patch these holes, but the patch is never as good as the original pavement, and there is the extra cost of the work.

Our system of making all these things—sewer, water, gas—step along together has not been a good one. It is not hard to point out how many difficulties there are in the way of getting all these things to work together, but the very fact that it is difficult is all the more reason why the problem should be tackled seriously. Its solution is well worth while.

When Mr. E. S. Little was mayor there was a well-arranged attempt made to plan local improvements ahead, and some progress was made at that time.

Absence of enough prearrangement has seen London with streets torn up at the time of Western Fair, when they should be at their best.

It is not too much to suggest that next year's work should be considered very shortly. It can be done, and undoubtedly will yet be done if we are going to make the progress we should.

This Man Wants a "Job."

Another drifter came in today looking for a job or the price of a meal. He wanted to work some place in the city. Curiosity prompted finding out what this man had done this year. His assets seem to be one suit of clothes and an empty purse.

Here is his record so far this year:

In January worked two weeks as a hotel porter, but was discharged because he did not do his work to the satisfaction of his employer. All he did that was wrong was to miss getting baggage over to the trains on time twice in two weeks. One trunk belonged to a traveler and contained his samples. Of course the man considers he was unjustly treated because the manager of the hotel chased him out after the second offence.

After that he secured work as a trucker in a local factory. This "job," as he refers to them all, lasted for three weeks, and might have lasted longer had there not been so much trucking to do. It was not particularly heavy work, but there was a lot of it, and on two occasions he had to stay until half-past five, whereas quitting time was five o'clock, and there was no extra pay allowed for the two half-hours he worked.

This, with a number of idle days, brought him to the first of March, and he decided to try the farm, at which he had had considerable experience. It did not take him long to find a place, and he was to get $25 a month, with $35 a month during harvest. He stayed there until the middle of April, when he heard of a man in Strathroy who might give him a "job" on a building or something. So he quit the farm just about the time he was needed and went to the next place, where he found that the man required would have to have some knowledge of carpentry, a thing he did not possess.

He came back to London and early in May secured another "job" on the railroad. This work was too hard; he was not used to it, and the pay was not what he thought he should get for the amount of labor required. He did well, though, for he stayed there two weeks or more. His next adventure was as cook or guide to a party of fishermen who were going up into Bruce peninsula. What he knew about cooking or guiding could be put down in a small space, and he was fortunate to get back to London alive.

Odd jobs and days off have filled in the time between. He claims to have an eye on some farmer near Thorndale who has promised him a job. If that farmer happens to read this, and identifies the applicant for work, we hope he'll feed the chap well, work him carefully, and not give him his wages until the end of three or six months. It might be the makings of him, because as things are now as soon as he has two dollars and a half in his pocket he wants to see the world.

Two Points to Consider.

France has failed to explain two things, despite all the statements and notes.

(1) Why reparations are coming slower now than before she went into the Ruhr;

(2) Why she has paid nothing to Britain on the enormous sum owing ever since the war.

Where the Strike Hits Hardest.

The spectacle of deposed President Livingstone of the mine workers in Nova Scotia taking a position of open defiance to President Lewis, of the international organization, is not particularly impressive.

The deposed president, after following the international organization for so long, cannot turn now when it suits his purpose so to do, and announce that he has nothing to do with this body with headquarters in United States.

Apart from any other consideration is is plain that the miners on strike are paying the bill themselves. Their union, which has a large fund for recognized and sanctioned strikes, will pay nothing toward the present Nova Scotia trouble, declaring it to be unwarranted and illegal.

Thousands of miners cannot stay on strike without money. They do not make enough to be individually able to stand a siege of payless weeks. The longer the miners stay out, the more desperate will be their position, and the farther back many of them will be financially.

The hardest touch of all is that this suffering does not stay around the mine pits nor at the coal tipple; it goes right home to the wife and family of the miner, and it hits hard and in such a way that it cripples and hurts.

Note and Comment.

Just read about a summer hotel that is built on a beautiful bluff. Folks who've been there say it is run the same way.

Our idea of perpetual motion is trying to handle with a fork all the hay one of those patent loaders shoots up on a wagon.

Making old men feel new by the use of monkey glands is now an established fact. The greater consideration, though, is the use made of these freshened years.

A WORD FOR THE CAREFUL DRIVER.

(From the Chatham News.)

So much has been written in criticism and condemnation of the speeder that it is pleasant to turn for a moment to the contemplation of a very different individual—the motorist who drives as he should drive, with due regard to the safety of other people.

An incident that occurred on King street a few days ago illustrates what we mean.

A little boy crossing the street in somewhat of a hurry did not notice a heavy touring car approaching.

Had the car been speeding—had it failed to observe the traffic rule requiring half speed at intersections—the boy would have assuredly been killed.

But this motorist had sense. He recognized to begin with that he was on a busy street and approaching a busy crossing where there was every risk of accident. So instead of exceeding the speed limit his car travelled slowly.

The result was that the motorist though he could not avoid striking the boy was able to halt his car in time to prevent running over him. In place of a tragedy, the affair ended as a very trivial accident.

Of course the driver missed that peculiar exhilaration which comes of "opening 'er up" and "stepping on the gas." He lost the satisfaction that accrues to the motorist who by breaking the laws against speeding is able to get from one inconsequential place to another inconsequential place in record time.

But he set a good example to all motorists—the example of taking no chances where human life is at stake.

Your Health

WHY IMMACULATE HANDS POINT THE WAY TO HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D., United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

A few nights ago I addressed the nurses who were being graduated from the training school of a great hospital. I had this experience so many times that it seemed to me there could be nothing new to see or to think about.

It is interesting always to see the young women in their uniforms. They look so neat and clean, so attractive and capable, that you seem to understand why today disease is less fatal than formerly.

What impressed me above everything else the other night was the appearance of the hands of the nurses.

Some of them were not small hands. Not all of them were shapely hands. But they were strong, willing and trained hands.

The work of a nurse is hard work. Her hands fetch and carry, they scrub and clean, they are plunged into hot water and into powerful and corrosive solutions. But they are always tender hands, possessing the healing touch.

Every one of these nurses had clean hands, with clean and well-manicured finger-nails. They were immaculate hands.

The success or failure of a hospital depends on the hands of the nurses. Life or death in an operation may be determined by the hands of the nurse. Cleanliness of the hands in certain respects is more important than the skill of the surgeon.

Certain diseases are hand-conveyed. For instance, influenza may be passed on from person to person, carried by the hands. Other diseases of the nose, throat or lungs may be carried by contaminated hands. It is probable that measles, diphtheria, scarlet fever and other contagious or infectious fevers may be transmitted in this way.

No one should sit down to a meal until the hands have been washed with soap and water. We touch the hands of others, we handle door-knobs and other objects, we pick up filth and dirt, unconscious of the seeds of illness which in this way we take into our possession.

Dirty finger-nails harbor multitudes of germs. The cracks and crevices of neglected hands are dwelling places for the agents of disease. Unclean hands are a menace to all of us. Our hands and the hands of those we meet—upon the condition of all hands depend our health and welfare.

I am proud of the nurses I saw, and of the thoroughness of their training. Cleanliness, so essential to the success of the nurse, is exemplified in her hands.

The hands of the nurse show the quality of her preparation. I am glad the hands I saw were such attractive hands, dedicated to high service. No matter what their size or shape, they were beautiful hands.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUESTIONS.

F. E. M. Q.—Would you consider it harmful to take any drug to develop the bust?

A.—Yes, it would be harmful to take any drug unless it was prescribed for you by a physician. Massage the bust with cocoa butter. This will help to develop it.

A READER. Q.—I have a large purple mark on my nose left by a boil. What can I do for this?

A.—Time will reduce this mark. Try fading it with peroxide.

A DAILY READER. Q.—For the past two years I have been bowling continually, which has developed my right arm. Now my left arm is out of proportion to my right arm. What would you advise me to do to develop the muscles of the left arm?

A.—The only way to develop the muscles is to try systematic exercising with the left arm each day.

L. A. W. Q.—Will you kindly state the time of quarantine for smallpox, scarlet fever, chickenpox and measles?

A.—The quarantine in smallpox: Until all crusts have disappeared. Scarlet fever: Until peeling is complete and there are no discharges from ear or mucous membrane. Chickenpox: Usually four weeks, and until all scabs are off. Measles: Five days after disappearance of rash and all catarrhal symptoms have disappeared.

L. L. S. Q.—Will you kindly advise me how to cure a bunion?

A.—Bunions can be easily cured by wearing a broad-toed shoe. Place a pad of cotton between the great toe and second to keep the great toe straight.

ALICE. Q.—Will you kindly tell me what causes a bad breath, and how I can correct this condition?

A.—This may be due to constipation, indigestion, diseased tonsils, decayed teeth or nasal catarrh. An examination is necessary to determine the cause, and then suitable treatment can be prescribed.

R. S. Q.—Can singing cause a goitre?

A.—No, singing will not do this.

REMEMBRANCE AND PROGRESS.

Remember the days of old.—Deuteronomy xxxii., 7.

There are two ways of showing attachment to the past.

One is by sneering at the present, finding fault with every new effort, holding back from every new enterprise, and making odious comparisons an excuse for inaction.

There have always been some people of this kind in the world.

If there were very many of them the world would probably cease to revolve.

They are the old men of the sea, the heavyweights whom the workers have to carry along with them.

But the other way of honoring the past is kind and generous and beautiful.

It pays grateful tribute to the beauty that has faded, and the glory that lives only in remembrance.

It preserves the good things of former days from oblivion, and praises the excellent of earth by keeping their memory green.

It is faithful and true, willing to learn, but not willing to forget.

Fortunate is the community in which this spirit prevails; for there the old and the young are in harmony, though not in unison, and the bright hopes of the future are mellowed by contact with the loyal memories of the past.

TO THE EDITOR.

ONE SIDE OF THE CASE.

London, July 18th, 1923.

Editor of The Advertiser,

Sir: I see by The Evening Advertiser of Wednesday, July 18th, that a meeting of the Public Utilities Commission is to be held Thursday afternoon, presumably to discuss the question of the reopening of the swimming pools on the Sabbath.

I understand that the Utilities Commission, minus the mayor, passed a resolution on July 6th forbidding the use of the pools on Sundays.

Surely the judgment of these four gentlemen was given after due deliberation, and their decision should be allowed to stand for this summer.

Evidently—the mayor "lost out" on this decision. Why does he not show himself "a good loser," and accept the verdict of the commission?

Mayor Wenige claims justification for the reopening of this question, because of the many signatures and petitions he has received, asking for Sunday bathing.

If a change of procedure is to be brought about on the bases of signatures—let all the accredited citizens of London sign for or against Sunday bathing.

The cause which the mayor is pursuing is undemocratic—because based upon the desires of a limited number, probably a minority of the citizens of London.

Let me remind his worship that British jurisdiction is based on majority rule, and allows for at least two sides of a question.

Thousands of citizens who believe in a quiet Sunday and are opposed to Sabbath bathing at Thames Park, have been given no opportunity to express themselves by signature or petition on this question.

The mayor does not seem to respect the wishes of thousands of church people and others, who for the sake of the moral welfare of the kiddies of London, are against Sunday bathing.

If the decision of the Utilities Commission is not final let the mayor arrange a central location in each ward of the city, for signautres to be taken not only for, but against organized Sunday bathing in London.

May I also say "that according to the Lord's Day Act of Ontario it is illegal to bathe in public places near public buildings on a Sunday." I shall be out of the city for a few days, but if you think it worth while I would be pleased if you would give publicity to this aspect of the question.

Although secretary of the Ministerial Alliance, I am not a member of the special committee who approached the commission.

I therefore, pen this letter hurriedly as a clergyman of the city of London, and not in my capacity as secretary of the alliance.

Sincerely,
H. B. STOREY.

RECALLS OLD DAYS.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir,—Notice of the death of Prof. St. John-Hyttenrauch at Windsor on Saturday last came to me as a great shock. We, who had been the greatest of friends sixty or more years ago, drifted apart, and for many years past I presumed that he had passed away.

Mr. St. John came to London from Denmark in the fifties and did much for the advancement of music in those early days. He ranked high as a pianist and was an artist on the clarinet.

In 1860, when Prince Edward of Wales visited London, Mr. St. John was conducting the artillery band, connected with Col. Shanley's battery, of which I was a member, as were also several of the Chadwick boys, Harry Gorman of The Advertiser, Jim Grier, Jack Lawton and others. He organized a choral society and gave concerts in the old city hall, was for some time organist of the R. C. cathedral and gave numerous private lessons to the young citizens of the day. After he accepted the position at Alma College, we saw little of each other and as he was ten years older than I, it was only reasonable to believe that he had gone to rest long ago.

Looking Abroad

By DOUGLAS McREYNOLDS.

A spade of the scientific explorer is about to lay bare the hidden secrets of a spot that for years has been of intense interest not only to archaeologists, but to all students and readers of the Bible, no matter to what creed or race they profess allegiance. For all preparations have now been made for the excavation of a portion of the site of the ancient "City of David" at Jerusalem. The Palestine Exploration Fund, a society which has nearly sixty years of experience behind it, will undertake the work. It has always cherished as the goal of ambition a thorough scientific investigation of this historic area. In its various efforts it has at one time or other enlisted the services of many eminent archaeologists and such famous engineers as Gen. Sir Charles Warren and the late Lord Kitchener. The work in the present instance will be undertaken by Professor R. A. S. Macallister, and the London Daily Telegraph has associated itself with the enterprise.

"The City of David" is no fanciful title. It is the name found in I. Chronicles, chapter 11, as the name given by the Jews to the old hill citadel of the Jebusites, who had thought it impregnable, till Joab climbed up at the head of his men and took it. They mocked David when he advanced with his Israelites to the attack. "Thou shalt not come hither," they said. "Nevertheless, David took the castle of Zion, which is the City of David. And David dwelt in the castle; therefore they called it the City of David."

The site is on the ridge called Mount Ophel, and it is bare. Though it closely adjoins the City of Jerusalem, by great good fortune, from the archaeological point of view, it lies just outside all that region of the city known as Haram, which is sacred in the eyes of Mohammedans. No religious susceptibilities will be excited by the approach of the excavator's spade. The purely legendary Tomb of David is on an adjoining hill.

It was on this site, now practically derelict, that King David dwelt, though his successors built new palaces elsewhere; and though once it lay within the circuit of the city walls, these were never rebuilt on Mount Ophel after the capture of the city by Titus. Thus through the centuries this site has lain untouched, waiting the advent of the scientific explorer, and, indeed, only recognizable within comparatively recent years as the true original site of the first Jerusalem.

The present expedition is not indulging in any extravagant expectations. Professor Macallister has had wide experience, and is not the type of explorer to lose his balance in optimistic speculation. He is not going there searching for any definite object, such as "the Tomb of David," though he has little doubt that the site of the royal tombs of the kings of Judah is on Mount Ophel. Moreover, as Josephus states that David's tomb was twice pillaged and its treasures of gold and silver removed, no one must expect a repetition of the marvels of the Pharaoh's tomb at Luxor.

The object of the expedition is to search thoroughly the acre placed at the society's disposal; whatever is found is certain to throw new light upon one of the most profoundly interesting places in the world. Possibly the prizes may be of the first magnitude, and Professor Macallister has given his opinion that the more completely battered down into the earth David have been, the more certain it the early buildings of the City of is that precious fragments will be found which will tell their tale clearly to the expert eye.

On Mount Ophel, in all probability, stood the Akra, or citadel, which dominated the Temple of Solomon, and was therefore, after one siege, razed to the ground. The foundations of this may be found, for the depression on the western side of Ophel is filled to the depth of more than a hundred feet with the debris of old buildings and the rubbish of centuries. No one can tell what the spade may lay bare, or what inscription may be turned up on tablet or on steel.

Moreover, it must not be forgotten that this rock citadel was a city of venerable antiquity long before the time of King David. The capital of the Jebusites was an important Palestinian town, paying tribute to the Pharaohs of Egypt five hundred years before David led his Israelites against it. A long line of Canaanite kings dwelt there, who acknowledged the overlordship of Thothmes and his successors, and paid tribute to the God Ammon of Thebes long before the Hebrews appeared in Palestine. Moreover, there were intervals of revolt from Egypt, when the power of Egypt waned, and again the Egyptian overlordship was renewed when Seti I. revived its military power.

So it is not only evidence of the glories of the kings of Judah and the life of the humble people under their rule that Professor Macallister may bring to light, but wonderful new evidence also of the proud rule of the Pharaohs. The evidence lies in the ground of Mount Ophel, broken and smashed into fragments, maybe, but patiently waiting the trained eye which can detect its message.

Put away your paper!

Bound to come a-climbing,
Climbing on your lap!

Put away your mending!
Here's a baby boy—
Wants a bit of comfort;
Loving him's a joy!

Put away your study!
There's no time like this
For a little rocking
And a baby's kiss!

Put away your housework!
Hold him close awhile.
He will be repaying
With his roguish smile!

Happy interruptions,

London Climbs Out of Cellar As Hamilton Loses Two Tilts and Slip Back Into Former Gloom

Saints and Locals Start Off On New Deal, Saturday

Rain Insurance Put On Tomorrow For First Time In Anticipation of Crowd.

As a result of an executive meeting of the Southern Ontario League held in St. Thomas last night, tomorrow's big clash between St. Thomas and London at Tecumseh Park becomes the opening game of section B of the second series, the officials, having decided to split the schedule again and give Woodstock and Stratford a fresh start.

The winner of section A will go undecided until July 28, when the postponed game between Woodstock and London of July 11 will be played. A switch was made from the original schedule to permit this, as London was billed for Stratford on that date. The July 28 game has been moved on to Aug. 8, but the date may be changed.

Tomorrow's game therefore gives the locals a chance to take the lead in what is practically a third series. Heretofore they've been playing under the handicap of one loss to St. Thomas on the Saints' home lot in each series. This has always produced a certain strain on the Londoners when playing the other two clubs, as they always went in feeling that they couldn't afford to lose, whereas the Saints, with one game to the good, had a little the better of it from a mental angle.

The record crowd of the season is expected to jam its way into the Park tomorrow afternoon to witness another close tilt between the rival crews. Rain insurance will be placed for the first time. Down and McPhee will again do the hurling.

London touched up McPhee freely a week ago, and Woodstock treated his offerings Wednesday with less respect than they are accustomed to receive.

Tomorrow's game will decide whether the McPhee jinx, as far as the local batters are concerned, has been laid. Local fans are of the opinion that it has.

LOCAL SOCCER REFEREES ASK FOR RECOGNITION

At a largely-attended meeting at the chamber of commerce on Thursday evening, referees of this district appealed for recognition in handling Ontario cup games. London endorsed the action of Toronto and district regarding inter-city games. Noble offered his resignation, but was refused, and receives full support of his fellow-knights of the whistle.

Referees appealed to L. and D. F. A. and City Soccer League for a schedule of games so that selection committee may assure subs and referees at least two days in advance.

St. Thomas was also asked to assist.

It was nearly midnight when President Ed. Wilkins closed the meeting.

Ruth Warms Up To Take Mound

Detroit, July 19. — Babe Ruth, home run slugger, volunteered to pitch in the game with Detroit here this afternoon because of the crippled condition of the New York Yankees' pitching staff. Manager Huggins at first was inclined to accept Ruth's offer, but later decided to send Sam Jones to the mound. However, Ruth has been told to hold himself in readiness.

Before his great batting made it necessary for him to play every day Ruth was rated as the best southpaw pitcher in the American League.

C.N.R.A.A. TUMBLE OFF TOP AS THEY LOSE 4—1

Outhit McClarys, But Hits Are Kept Scattered By Ramsay.

McClarys took a close game from C.N.R.A.A., 4—1, last night, which shook the latter off the top of the Manufacturers' League standing which they've been sharing with the Trans crew.

The railwaymen outhit the stovemen, but their hits were kept scattered by Ramsay, whereas Roberts was hit in pairs and issued hurtful walks at these junctures.

Jinx Year for Champions Gives Benny-Lew Go Angle

I. E. FRANCIS.

He is a member of the Hamilton Collegiate Institute Track Club, a member of the two-mile relay team, and was interscholastic champion. He is entered in the pole vault and 120-yard hurdles in the Ontario track and field meet to be held here Aug. 4.

Leonard Must Make Different Plan This Trip As It Is Decision Affair.

By HENRY L. FARRELL.

New York, July 19.—When Benny Leonard goes into the ring next Monday night to meet Lew Tendler, he may pack along with him the jinx that 1923 seems to have reserved as scourge for champions. Johnny Kilbane, Jimmy Wilde and Jack Dempsey were victims of the jinx in varying degrees, and some who like to wander away from facts and figure fate think that the lightweight champion may be the fourth on the list. Leonard has enough on his hands to beat Tendler without fate stacking the cards against him, and if the breaks go against him it would be no surprise to see the Philadelphia southpaw go home with a title.

In the parlance of the ring, the promoters of the fight say it is a "natural." They point to an advance sale of nearly $300,000, and they reasonably sound off the expectation of a gate of a half-million dollars.

No Ballyhoo Needed.

All the ballyhoo and the steam-up that have become essential in the promotion of big money fights of these times were not necessary to get the public aroused to the well-known "fever point" in the fight. It was not necessary to build up a challenger for the title, as Tendler built himself last summer when he came within an inch of toppling Leonard out from under his crown in their fight over in Jersey, one of the best of all lightweight fights. Tendler had his mental apparatus stopped by the fast vocal mechanism of the champion, and he pulled up when one or two more good socks would have had Benny on the floor for keeps.

Leonard's fighting equipment goes beyond his shoulders, and Tendler has never shown the ability to think as fast as a great fighter should. It is the brain factor in Leonard's favor that is making the champion a 9 to 5 favorite in the betting to retain his title.

Must Fight Differently.

The champion will have to fight differently next Monday night than he did last summer. There was no decision to figure on at the end of the Jersey fight, and all Leonard had to figure on was to be in a vertical position when the fight ended. The coming fight is to a decision, and the judges and referees in New York have shown no great respect for titles in the past. Leonard cannot remain on the defensive, and he will have to do some fighting.

In his fights with Charley White and Ritchie Mitchell, Benny had impressed upon him the danger of swapping punches, and Tendler can sock just as well as the champion. Leonard figures that his last fight with Tendler enabled him to solve the left-hand style of the challenger, and that he will be ready to step from the gong this time instead of being forced to fiddle around for six rounds trying to figure how to get inside right-hand leads.

RANGERS WILL REPLAY BRUCEFIELD SATURDAY

Special to The Advertiser.

Kitchener, July 19.—Although the Ranger soccer team did not defend the protest lodged by the Brucefield Rovers in the second round game of the Ontario Cup, they will replay Brucefield Saturday night as ordered by the committee in charge. The local team may be somewhat weakened owing to the absence of two of the regular men, but they expect to pull out the round winner. Brucefield team protested that in the last game at Brucefield the Kitchener team unnecessarily killed time, thus snuffing their chances of getting the equalizing goal.

WALLACEBURG TUNES UP FOR THEIR SARNIA TILT

Oxford - Cambridge Lacrosse Team Ends Tour In 'Burg Sept. 7.

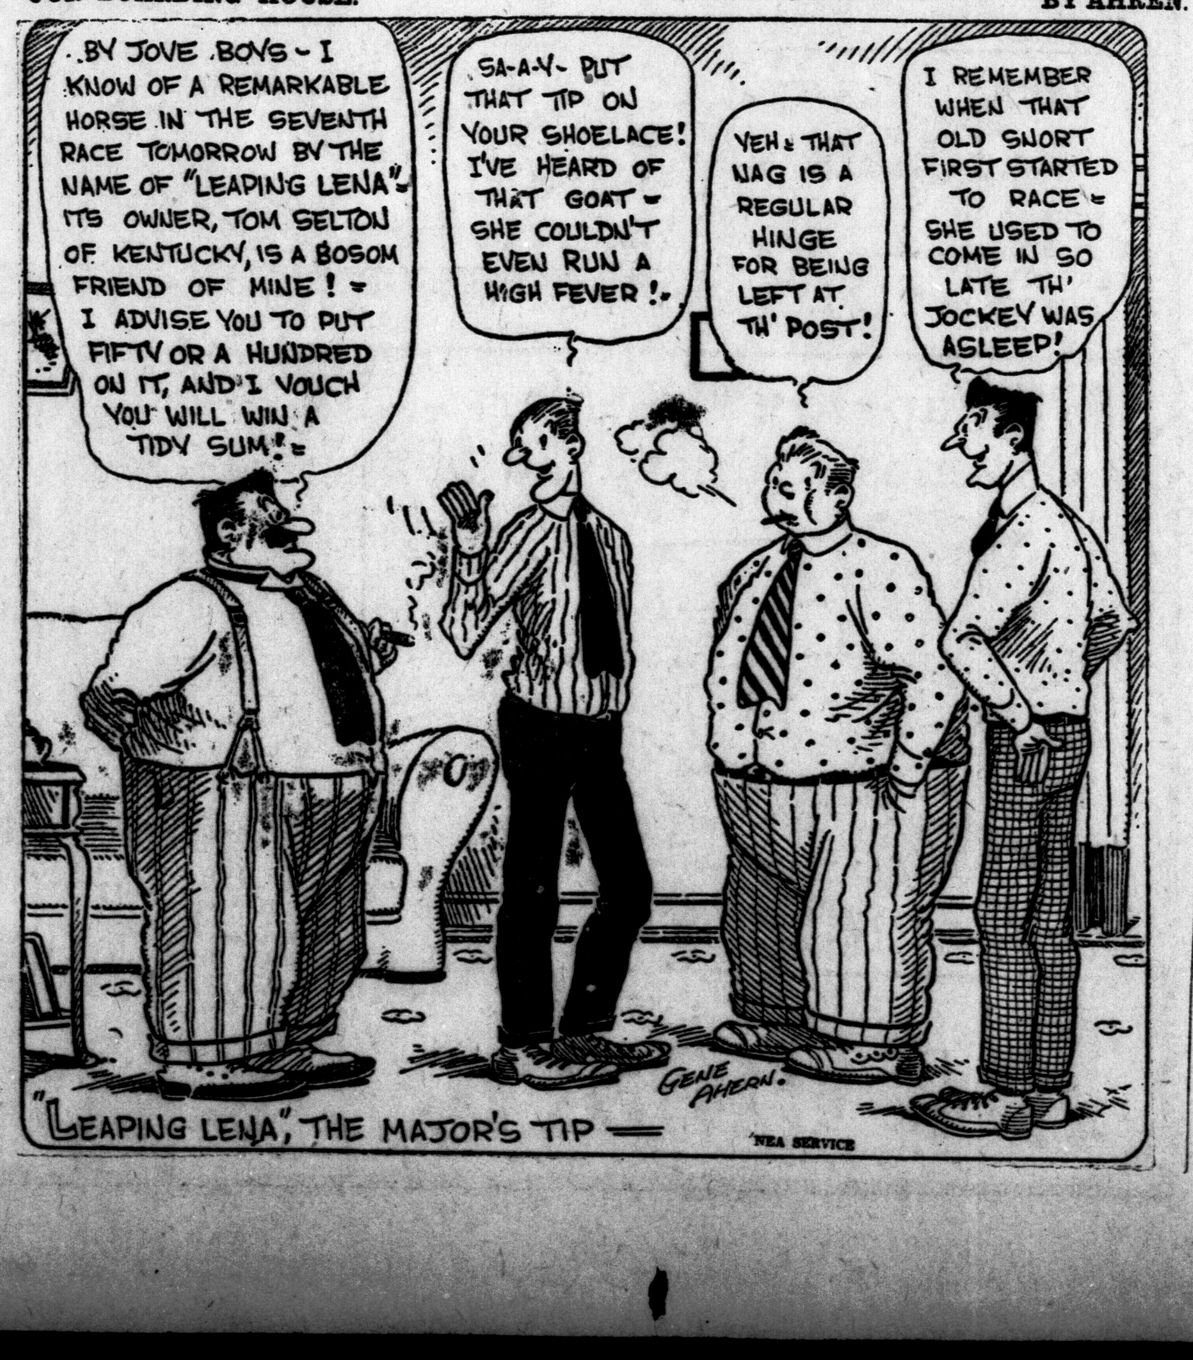

Special to The Advertiser.

Wallaceburg, July 19.—The Wallaceburg Athletic Association have decided to accept the date set by Secretary Hanley, of Sept. 7th, for the playing of the game between Oxford-Cambridge Universities and Wallaceburg. The game will be the last of the itinerary—the visitors coming to Wallaceburg from Sarnia, where they play on Sept. 5th. This attraction is sure to attract a large crowd of fans from Wallaceburg, Chatham and the surrounding district.

Final arrangements have been made whereby Windsor Intermediate lacrosse team will play its next league game at Wallaceburg on July 28th, and further arrangements will be made on that date for the return game at Windsor.

The local intermediates, under Manager Silk, held a fast practice on the Steinhoff Park on Tuesday evening in preparation for the big batttle at Sarnia on Saturday next. It is anticipated that the Glass Town boys will be accompanied by a record crowd of fans. It is hoped that the temporary bitter feeling which has existed recently between these two rival teams, will be thrown on one side, and that a fast and clean game will be witnessed. The game will be under the control of Mr. Hamburg, of Brantford.

FOUR TIE AS THRILLERS OF METROPOLITAN GOLF

Hagen Just One Behind Kirkwood, Bob McDonald and Mac Smith.

By WALTER HAGEN.
Special to The Advertiser.
Copyright.

Canoe Brook Club, Summit, N.J., July 19.—Today's golf in Metropolitan open championship furnished more thrills than any open championship in the past ten years, at least since I have been in tournament play. Inwood was tame in comparison. After yesterday's first round four players tied for first place with the excellent scores of 72. Three of these, Hampton, Kerrigan, Farrell, fell back a little, but Joe Kirkwood and Bob MacDonald took their place. This pair, with MacDonald Smith, have totals of 146. Yours truly is one shot behind.

I did not arrive at the links until 1 o'clock, and was told immediately of a fine round of 70 played by Jim Barnes, which put him in the fight. MacDonald Smith, former titleholder, had registered 74, his total: 146 stood out as a mark for the rest of the leaders to shoot at. Kirkwood and myself got a late start, and only few holes ahead of us was Bob MacDonald. Reports came back to our gallery that he was going like a house afire. He was out in 33 and home in 36 for a 69, which established a new record for his course.

Kirkwood started brilliantly. He was able to do the first time in 33 with bang-up golf. Joe is doing everything well. I tried to keep pace with him, but slipped on a couple of holes and was out in thirty-five—two strokes worse. Joe played like a champion and beat the par by a stroke, taking a thirty-five. This gave him a total of 68. Bob MacDonald's record lasted scarcely twenty minutes. Kirkwood's success was due chiefly to his remarkable putting. The greens were a trifle tricky, and one looked close to get line with putt.

Kirkwood's round was ten strokes less than yesterday. My own playing was what might be called consistent, though one could hardly call it brilliant. I required 39 on the inward half, which ran my score up to 74. I am just one notch behind the leaders. Sarazen has not not been able to get his game working to satisfaction. He did 75, and was rather far back with a total of 152. Cruickshank was another golfer watched closely. His 74 today left him a total of 149.

The danger which threatened from the ranks of the amateurs was eliminated today when Frank Dyer, Metropolitan amateur champion registered 82. While today's golf was spectacular, I believe, it will be just as sensational tomorrow. There are a dozen players who have a chance to win. Of four leaders, MacDonald Smith, Bob MacDonald and myself have all won this title. MacDonald Smith won it nine years ago, when he established a record at Scarsdale for 72-hole tournament play. His total that year was 278.

We look for a busy day tomorrow, as a double round will be played by all the contestants who have a chance to win.

Getsie's Homer and Ruane's Two Triples Feature Fest

Tecs Get Used To Twilight and Maul Two Kazoo Hurlers.

Special to The Advertiser.

Kalamazoo, July 19. — London had little difficulty in evening up the series with the Kazoos this afternoon, when they pounded Sherman off the mound and hit Berger freely, blanking the locals 10 to 0.

The locals were unable to do anything much with Haines, and therefore accepted a shut-out without much of an effort. The visitors piled up fifteen hits on the two Kalamazoo flingers, and nearly all the blows figured in the run making. The Londoners gave Haines splendid support, while the Kazoos were wobbly at critical times.

The visitors started off with a tally in the first inning, when Stimpson strolled and Schaefer produced the necessary blow to send him across. Another happened along in the third, when Buckley, working at first base, singled and Ruane crashed out a triple, and another in the fourth on a single by Buckley and a triple by Ruane. A quartet of counters came in in the sixth, when Stimpson started with a single, Getsie beat out a bunt, Churry got an infield hit and Schaefer's double sent two runs over; then Buckley came through with a hit, sending Churry and Schaefer across. Two more came in the eighth, when Getsie's home run over the left field wall sent Stimpson in ahead of him.

The final tally came in the ninth on Schaefer's triple and Buckley's single.

Fohl Deserves High Credit For Race Browns Have Set

Gambled Intelligently On Odds Twice and Lost—Breaks Still Against Him.

By JOHN B. FOSTER.
Copyright.

New York, July 19.—The St. Louis Browns are beginning to show something unexpected. They are a very good third in an organization that heads three very bitter disappointments. They may not stick there, and on the other hand they may go to second place, where they finished last year.

No matter what happens to their future, Lee Fohl should get a lot of credit at this particular moment, because he has nursed his team through conditions which would have made quitters of some managers and wrecks of others. A more conscientious man does not exist. Fohl has handled teams that came within sight of the championship and lost it.

He almost won the pennant for Cleveland, and was not retained as manager because of one mistake in judgment. There was no complaint as to the way he handled his players, but he was criticized for the way he moved his men in an actual game to determine results.

Criticized Last Year.

Last year Fohl was criticized in St. Louis for exactly the same thing. He moved a king when he should have sacrificed a pawn. He gambled and lost on the chance of a single play. Others have gambled and won. That is the lottery of baseball.

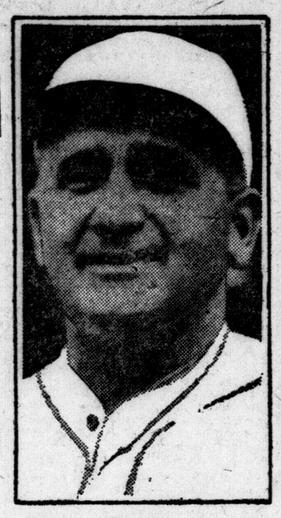

This year Fohl's team began without Sisler, and instead of sitting down and weeping he went to work to instill confidence in his players, praising his youngsters so that they would fight. A young player, who might have made a first baseman with encouragement was frightened off the track by criticism. Other things went bad, and the populace began to roar for Fohl's scalp. The fans did not seem to realize that the problem which this man had been compelled to deal with would have floored less patient men.

Need Pitching.

The Browns, with good pitching, have possibilities in them as pronounced as those of other and higher teams. With Schliebner, McManus, Gerber and Robertson on the infield they are not weaklings, and if their outfield ever gets to its regular clip in batting then they can push their way to the position of runners-up, where they were last season. To do it they must get good pitching, which they have not had.

The Giants have been given a hard chase by the western teams during their home stay. They have won seven games and lost six to Cincinnati, Pittsburg and Chicago, which are their three toughest customers. It is not enough. That ratio might see them through if the other teams can continue to keep Pittsburg and Cincinnati in a condition of subjection, where they saw off against one another all of the time, but depending upon the other fellow to sustain attack is not the McGraw way of winning pennants.

If Cincinnati and Pittsburg should take the bit in their teeth and win two full series, then the New York team would be again at a hard fight. Let either team win seven or eight games in a succession, while the Giants are losing or breaking even, and the September engagement may find them back to the shanty, fighting for all they know how.

LEE FOHL.
The fans of St. Louis may make Fohl's release this year certain. He has had the breaks go against him again.

Special to The Advertiser.

Woodstock, July 19.—On Saturday the Oxford Cricket Club travel to Paris to play an exhibition game against the team of that town. BRANTFORD C.I. JUVENILE LACROSSE TEAM WINS

Special to The Advertiser.

Brantford, July 19.—Before 1,000 people in Tutela Park, the Brantford Collegiate Juvenile lacrosse team defeated Paris by a score of 13 to 2, and by virtue of the victory has been returned group winners. The visiting team gave a much better account of themselves than the score indicates, but superior combination play of the locals told the tale of victory.

For the locals Starkey in goal, Kerr, Ashton and Ziegler were the best, while Strickland, Tough and Cuthbertson shone for Paris. It is expected the locals will meet the winner of the Orangeville-Hespeler-Fergus group in the next flight.

Little Lessons In Golf

BY CHESTER G. HORTON,
Nationally Known Golf Instructor.

The game of golf is in the golfer's own hands.

The golfer can be taught all the niceties of stroke and position, but he must teach himself that delicacy of touch, easy precision and confidence that combine to make the golfer's sixth sense. These come from a co-ordination of mind and body, of muscles and nerves.

Re-education of the average golfer is necessary to attain this perfection. Most players have become so accustomed to using only one side of the body that they can use the other only with effort and without sure speed. Difficulty of movement, or awkwardness, has no place in golf. The player must learn to overcome it.

Down the Line In All Sports

There's been more perspiration spilled over the Dempsey-Firpo mingle than the two dollar gladiators will give off during the engagement, if any.

* * * *

St. Thomas fans, from indications, will not outnumber local supporters at tomorrow's great clash across the raging trickle called by courtesy the Thames. The local fans have begun to realize that St. Thomas and London have revived all their old-time baseball rivalry.

* * * *

It would be passing strange if Firpo should beat Dempsey and the U. S. should have to depend on Wills as the "logical" choice to bring the championship back to the U. S.

* * * *

William Tilden II. has again been quoted as deploring the cheers of tennis galleries when opponents score an ace against him. Gerald Patterson, the Australian, also was aghast at this rude behaviour. "Bill" Johnston apparently doesn't care a hoot what the spectators do, which shows the difference between being always "William" and also being numbered with Roman numerals.

* * * *

Battling Siki seems to prefer to take on opponents in bunches rather than meet them one by one in the ring. He can close up more cafes than a prohibition agent. He appears to have made a great showing in his most recent engagement until the Paris police took it upon themselves to act as referees and make the fighters break clean. They had broken practically everything else before the police arrived. Siki is constantly being robbed of well-earned decisions in this manner. He might even have bested the lion in the biting match, except for outside interference. They just want to give the poor Senegalese elbow room.

* * * *

With the Cincinnati Reds only two games behind the New York Giants and playing the best baseball in the National League, New York fans are becoming alarmed over the plight of the world's champions. Odds are considered to be greatly in favor of the Reds; the schedule forces the Giants to make two more western trips, while the Reds have only one more trip away from home. The Giants have very few games left with the soft teams, while the Reds are practically through with hard opposition; the Red pitchers are going like the best in the league and the Giants' acting like the worst.

The Reds also have been going along at a terrific pace with a team weakened by injuries, and their chances to increase their gait will be proved when Moran gets his full strength on the field. "Just like 1919," New York fans are wailing, and they are beginning to get ready for only one-half of the next world's series and that in the Bronx—where the Yankees live.

The Years Roll On—Terry Grows Up and Miles Sheridan Goes Away To Fight In France

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

Teresa Desmond (Terry), a beautiful imaginative child who worships

Juliet Divine, the stage name of her half-sister. She rides in a gorgeous car and talks of a millionaire,

Terrence Desmond, their father, quick-tempered and unreliable, was formerly a caretaker of a Long Island estate. Forced to leave the estate through an escapade of Terry's, he opened a roadhouse called The Blue Moon, with money advanced to him by Tom Perrin, a prosperous friend of Julia's.

Mary Desmond, Terry's mother and Julia's stepmother, fears "disgrace" in the latter's career.

Mrs. Peter Parmalee owns the house, Silverwood, of which Desmond was formerly caretaker.

Betty Sheen, her spoiled, young granddaughter, whose rudeness to Terry, at Silverwood, the latter will never forget, is engaged to Miles Sheridan, a handsome, likable, young chap. His car breaks down at the door of The Blue Moon, and he meets Terry. Delighted with the child's charm and anxious to atone for his fiancee's past rudeness, supplies the wherewithal to send Terry to a convent for the next seven years.

CHAPTER VII.

THE GRIM REAPER.

The convent was not more than forty miles away, but after she was 12 Terry did not go home for her holidays. Mother came to visit her instead, but could never stay long; a few days at the most.

"Why can't I go home with you?" the child pleaded. Always she was answered evasively, but the true reason dawned upon the girl's mind as she grew older.

The Blue Moon Inn was popular with a rowdy crowd of young men and women, and father drank more and more heavily. His temper couldn't be counted on. Altogether Terry would have been glad not to return, if mother could have paid longer visits, and if Julia had come often to the convent.

But Julia never came. Instead, she sent presents and birthday telegrams.

By this time a great war was going on in Europe, and America had joined. Women were eagerly helping, and when Terry asked mother if Julia were "knitting or something," Mary, slightly embarrassed, said yes, she supposed so. All the girls in the convent school knitted and sewed, and made bandages for the soldiers.

Terry applied herself to this work with secret joy, almost with passion, because mother had read in some paper that the "Prince"—Miles Sheridan—had gone to France. Who could tell that by some chance he mightn't happen to wear a scarf she had knitted?

She might even have tried to get his address, so as to post him a scarf with a note "from Cinderella," if she hadn't felt sure she must long ago have been forgotten.

The Prince had, it seemed, sent mother the whole sum needed for "Cinderella's" schooling, in one big check soon after his adventure at the inn. Then, a few weeks later, he had married Miss Sheen, and there had been no further correspondence.

Terry prayed every night for the Prince's safety in the fighting. And as she prayed, with eyes tight shut, she saw the dark face lit with its brilliant smile, as it had been when he waved his hat for good-bye—perhaps forever! She wondered if Betty Sheen (Terry hated to think of her as Betty Sheridan) prayed, too? It was hard to imagine Betty praying!

One day when Terry was 16, an older girl beckoned her to the garden seat, where three of the class ahead of hers were sitting together. Somehow they managed secretly to get hold of a newspaper, or part of one; the "Society" pages of a Sunday supplement.

"Look at this," said the girl who had called Terry. "Rose and Mame and I think it's the image of you."

The newspaper fragment had been folded very small, and hidden between the leaves of a lesson book. The girl half opened the volume, and Terry peeped in.

What she saw was an enlarged snapshot of a beautiful young woman with a splendidly-developed yet slender figure generously shown in bathing dress. Her head was swathed in a handkerchief-cap, and the big eyes smiled into the camera.

This alluring creature had a background of sands and surf. "Juliet Divine at Palm Beach," the picture was labelled.

Terry bit back the cry, "Why, it's my sister!" she remembered that, for some unknown reason, father and mother and Julia wished the relationship kept secret. Julia's "being on the stage" was the excuse, yet Terry felt vaguely that there was something more.

Long ago at Silverwood the child had seen the resemblance: and now she had grown up (sixteen seemed grown up!) it was more marked.

The snapshot might almost be a portrait of Teresa, not Julia, Desmond, except for the full development of the figure. The younger girl was already as tall as Julia, but she had the sword-like slenderness of a boy.

"I wonder if Jule has war work to do at that place by the sea, Palm Beach," she thought. "Or maybe she's gone there to rest." Terry determined to write and ask, begging Julia to answer, which she seldom or never did.

Julia hadn't changed her address since the day when she first motored to Silverwood in the smart blue car. The only difference was that she'd moved into a bigger apartment in the same house on Riverside drive.

The November before Terry's seventeenth birthday the war ended. Everyone was joyous on Armistice Day. There were rejoicings even at the convent whose peace had not been broken.

It was a happy winter, though Terry began to ask herself what would happen when the summer holidays came. The seven years' schooling specified and paid for by Miles Sheridan would be at an end. Would she go home? Or, would mother have saved up money to keep her at the convent a year longer, according to a secret plan.

"At eighteen your character ought to be formed, and you can go into the world to earn your own living," she had said. "That will be better than staying in a house like ours. You can find a good, quiet place as a stenographer perhaps."

Since then Terry had taken up typing and shorthand with one of the nuns who had had a business education.

"Mother'll tell me at Easter what I'm to do," she thought.

But mother did not come at Easter. She wrote a short letter in an unsteady hand. Her love, and she was so disappointed, she had taken a bad cold.

It was on her lungs, and the doctor ordered her to lie in bed, but her little girl mustn't worry.

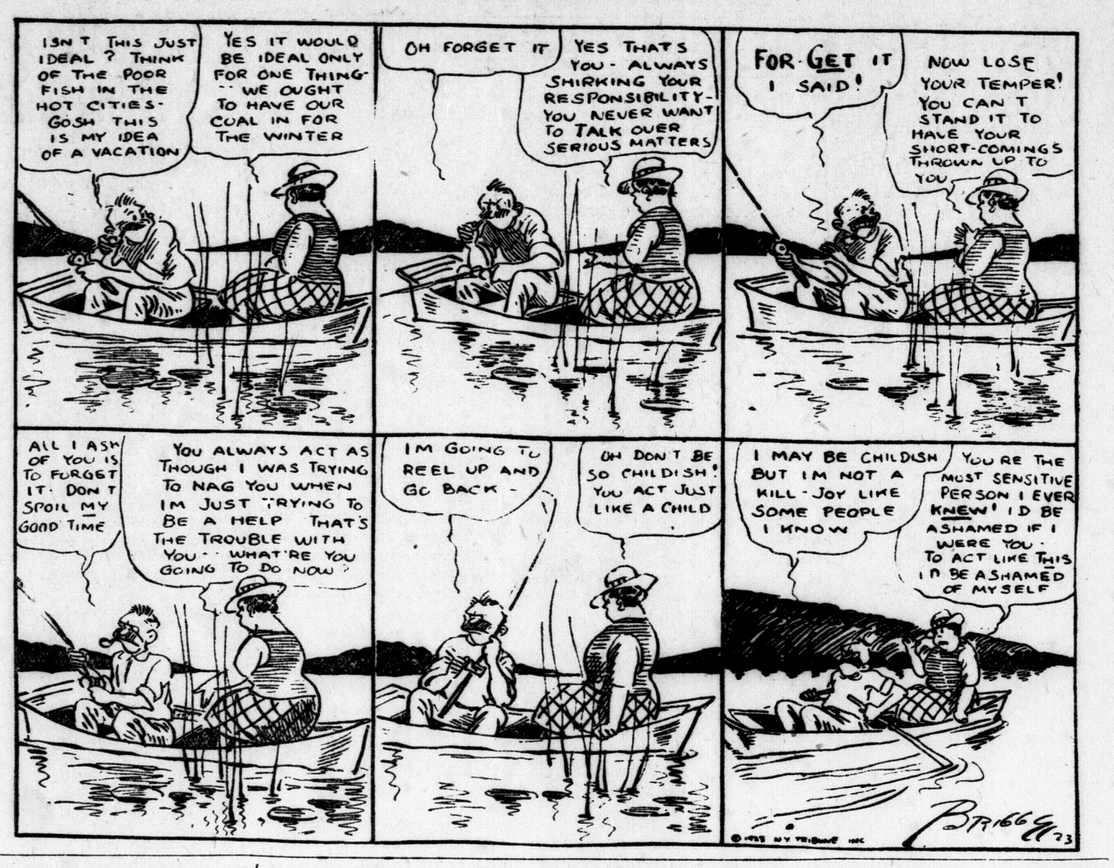

After that a week passed without a word, though Terry wrote every day. Then, one morning, a telegram came for "Miss Teresa Desmond," the first she had ever received.

"Mothr died suddenly, pneumonia. No time send for you. Funeral yesterday. Get couple of mourning dresses my expense. Will send money fare home. Wish you return for good next week, I need your help. Will settle all expenses. Terence Desmond."

Tomorrow's installment brings a sad change for Terry.

Little Nanny Meadow Mouse Feels In Her Bones That Something Is Going To Happen

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

When Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse had finished putting a roof on that old nest of Redwing the Blackbird they had the most comfortable home they ever had owned. Inside they had a soft bed, and they had made that roof so that even in hard rain no water came through. Always when one of them came out it was with great care to make sure that no one was around. Danny would poke his head out, look and listen carefully, then scramble down to the ground as fast as he could. Nanny would do the same thing. They never climbed back to it without first making sure that no one was about. So their home remained a secret.

For a long time they lived in peace and comfort. They made little paths out in the grass of the Green Meadows. The grass grew tall so that it covered these, and made little tunnels of them. This just suited Danny and Nanny. They could come and go as they pleased without being seen by watchful eyes.

The fact is, there were very few watchful eyes near there. You see no Meadow Mice had lived there before, and so Reddy Fox, Old Man Coyote and Hooty the Owl and Redtail the Hawk never thought to look there. Never in their lives had Danny and Nanny known such peace. It seemed too good to be true. They brought up two families in that new home, and sent them out into the Great World to make their living. In fact, it was so peaceful there that Danny and Nanny almost forgot that it was necessary to always watch out. Peter Rabbit was the first one to discover them, and even he couldn't find their home, as you already know.

"I never was so happy in all my life," declared Danny one evening as he and Nanny were starting out to look for supper. "I always used to think that the only place for a home was on the ground or in it. But I wouldn't trade this home of ours for the best home of that kind that I ever saw. Not a single soul has found this new home of ours yet. Birds who build in trees and bushes have more sense than I thought they had. I don't see why we haven't always built in a bush. It was a happy idea of yours, my dear."

They Made Little Paths Out in the Grass of the Green Meadows.

"It isn't that it's in a bush that makes it so safe," cried Nanny. "If we were to build a new nest in a bush it wouldn't be safe at all. The reason this one is so safe is because it is an old nest that everybody knew about. That is why nobody pays it any attention now. If it was a new nest somebody would have discovered it long ago. Everybody expects us to have our home on the ground. That is why I knew right away that this would be the safest home we have ever had. There is nothing like doing the unexpected to fool people. We have been left in peace so long that I just know something is going to happen soon. I feel it in my bones."

"Pooh!" said Danny Meadow Mouse.

Well Miss Hopper we got a very urgent letter here from Miss Romancie Fuss, Engagement Falls, New Hampshire, and I guess we better answer it dear Miss Fuss.

We have your letter asking for the name of a song that goes I am waiting Edgar waiting for the thrilling of your ring not the kind the doorbell jingles that don't get a girl a thing What I hope you'll gimme Edgar what I wish for when I sigh is a twenty carat diamond that will smack them in the eye and one copy of this song if we have it written for the soprano singing voice paragraph.

Well Miss Fuss the title of this song you have so expertly quoted comma it certainly is wonderful what a memory young girls have when it comes to the words of songs like that is comma IF YOU'RE BIDDING JUST MAKE IT A DIAMOND and we are all out of this just now but suggest another favorite entitled DO YOU SMILE WHEN YOU'RE DREAMING OF ME which goes like this dash when you talk of a garden of roses and beans when you speak of a cottage for two oh why look at me when describing such scenes and and why should I look back at you which I think you will find equally suitable for summer evening singing for two mixed voices which we can send by return mail.

THE DAILY SHORT STORY

MARVEL AND HIS MAID.

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS.

Jack Marvel sat in his flower-bound summer house writing rather gloomily. He was a bit fed up with life in general and didn't know just why.

Everything was gloriously alive in the universe. The flowers were sending forth their sweetly laden breath; the birds were twittering in the shrubs and there was the rhythmic munching of contented cattle in the sunny field behind the summer house. All seemed curiously alive—except Marvel. There was inspiration in anything and his copy was bleak and uninteresting.

And back in the kitchen, while preparing his tea tray there, was one who understood. She was Martha, the neat maid, who under the guidance of Mrs. Armstrong, Marvel's housekeeper, was learning the light duties of a housemaid.

When she carried the tea tray down to the summer house, Martha stopped on her way to pick a fragrant blossom with which to adorn the tray.

Marvel looked up from his desultory scribbling and smiled as Martha put his tea beside him. No one could help a momentary cheeriness when Martha was about, she was so sweet and sunny and perky in her snowy cap and dainty apron. Even David, the big hound, arose to snuggle his nose in her soft palm. The cat, being a cat, continued sleeping.

"The lure of the sex," laughed Marvel, a trifle irritably, alluding to David's undoubted affection for Martha.

"Animals are sometimes more human than men," said Martha with a shy smile, and departed.

It was following her trip to the arbor that Martha decided to introduce something in the nature of romance into the life of Jack Marvel. She felt that he required stirring up by a force more vital than his writer's imagination. If Marvel once loved a girl, and had her beside him weaving her in and out among the golden threads of his romances, Martha knew he would write better than he did.

Two days later Marvel's mail brought him the photograph of a most lovely girl. On the back was written: "One atom of an admiring public. Daisy."

Marvel studied the face and racked his brain for a clue. He had so often been guilty of forgetting young women whom he had met at dinners and teas, but surely he could not have let one so beautiful escape without further acquaintance. But not a vestige of a clue could he find.

He put the photograph of Daisy up on a shelf facing his desk, and, glancing at it from time to time, felt a curious pleasantness stealing over his thoughts.

When Martha brought him his tea in the afternoon she glanced in apparent surprise at the large photograph, and so knowing a smile swept into her eyes that Jack Marvel felt constrained to remark:

"Type of heroine for my new serial," and bent over his desk.

"Oh," said Martha, "I always did like golden-haired heroines."

"She's dark." Marvel informed his maid, and cast a speculative glance at Daisy.

"Oh," mused Martha, while she stroked David's big head: "I would have said she had very fair hair and light blue eyes."

Marvel watched her tripping back up the garden path and a memory of the white fingers caressing David's head lingered in his senses.

There followed numerous pictures of Daisy—Daisy mounted on a fine mare with a stunning riding costume, Daisy in smart street clothes and in the most ravishing of ball gowns. Jack began to study the face in real earnest.

There was no small amount of conceit in the face, but that was no worse than a degree of depreciation of one's charms; there was a bit of hardness, too, but hardness seemed in many instances to be a co-partner of cleverness and the face of Daisy held much that denoted cleverness.

During the few weeks following it seemed to Marvel that Daisy had become an intimate part of his life. Her photographs were laced prominently in his workroom. Certainly a girl who sent a man so many photographs would, in all probability, present herself in person in the course of time.

Martha went about her tasks as usual, and in her heart smiled at the change in Jack Marvel. She knew a thing or two about what men required in this happy old world, but she was in more or less of a predicament now at the sudden news that her chum, the original of the photographs, had gone off and married a bank clerk.

"A bank clerk," sniffed Martha, "when she might have had Jac—Mr. Marvel." Martha had had the grace to blush at her own lapse, but then she always thought of him as Jack.

The sense of hidden romance had turned Jack into a human being. So human, in fact, that he found his eyes watching for the bit of femininity in the form of Martha, who daily made her way down through the banks of flowers with his tea tray.

David, the hound, had become so devoted to her by this time that he bounded away to meet her, and even the sleepy Persian had taken to waking up long enough to receive the soft caress of Martha's fingers.

"After all," mused Jack, "there is something wonderfully wholesome about lovely womanhood—I wonder—have——"

His musings were interrupted by Martha's sudden appearance.

"I am sorry to disturb you, Mr. Marvel, but Mrs. Armstrong wants to know if you would mind her having the whole day off today. She seems to think I could take charge for once. I—can cook quite nicely and—would be glad to help her out."

"Certainly," laughed Marvel, "but won't you be a bit lonesome all day in the big house?"

"Oh, no," said Martha shyly, "I am never lonesome when I have one of your books to read.

Marvel laughed.

"Martha," he said, "I wonder what you and Mrs. Armstrong would think if I were to tell you that I am lonesome and am seriously contemplating looking into the question of marriage with," he indicated the numerous pictures about the den, "Daisy"?

"Oh!" gasped Martha, "you can't do that, Mr. Marvel—Daisy is married already."

"Martha," demanded Marvel, "what do you know about Daisy?" He stood up now and faced her, his eyes searching the hotly blushing face.

"She is my best chum," declared Martha, "and she has posed for most of the big artists and only a week ago married a bank clerk. I felt that you needed someone in your life to love. Your stories needed the human touch and I—I—didn't expect Daisy to go off and get married before she met you." Martha felt a bit tearful and her voice trembled.

Marvel sat down. He felt stunned. Many emotions were crowding into his brain. Martha was so close to him and so sweet and so wholesome that he took her straightway into his arms.

"What about you needing someone to love?" he asked unsteadily. "How about your being that someone who will make life wonderful for me? I think I have been jealous even from the beginning—of David—but I didn't quite know what was the matter with me—Martha—tell me."

But Martha didn't have to say anything—she was one of those understanding people who, by a mere lifting of the eyelashes, could tell Jack Marvel all the things he wanted to know.

The Cure For Restlessness and Noise Is More Restlessness and Noise—Turn the Child Loose

By ANGELO PATRI.

Sonny is six years old and very lively. He loves to make a train of himself and shuff, shuff along the polished hall, clanking, ding-donging and toot-tooting.

Now he's the engineer, head out of the window and hand on the throttle and yelling "Fire up, you Jim!" Now he's the conductor, calling "B-oo-rr-d—Right!" waving his curt signal to the engineer ahead. Now he's the brakeman, waving his flag and yelling like mad, "Dan-ger-r-r! Red Flag! Danger-r-r-r!" He's a busy train, no doubt about that.

"Sonny, stop that noise! That's surely enough now. Keep still until I finish this letter, and I'll change your clothes so you can go out and play."

Silence for a minute, perhaps two. Then Sonny begins to shuff-shuff softly up and down the hall. His mother writes on busily. The train speeds up and the noise keeps up with it.

Soon it fills the house and mother calls: "Sonny, didn't I tell you to stop that? Now stop it this minute. Keep quiet until I finish. If you make another uproar I'll keep you in all afternoon."

The letter-writing is resumed and the stillness lasts for a few minutes. Then the low shuff-shuff begins and the train starts like a muffled freight, only to turn into the Chicago Limited making time around the curves.

"Sonny, come in here. Now sit down where I can see you, and you'll stay in this afternoon. You'll lose your play for being so disobedient. I spoke to you three times. Now you can suffer for it."

Which is why we speak about it. He should not suffer the loss of his play, because he needs it quite as much as he needs his sleep and his food. The reason he was making the noise was bound up in just that. He needed to, and it was not fair to keep him in and tell him to be quiet.

Why not slip on his overalls and turn him outdoors at once?

He doesn't need so much fussing over. The loose overalls that he can slip on himself, and with a little assistance button or buckle take no time. If he were going to a garden party there might be some sense in having him dressed as a green and gold buttercup, though we doubt it, but to get out to play, none.

When a child is troublesome because he wants to exercise his body and his lungs, it won't mend matters to try to make him sit still and keep quiet. That represses his energy, and as it must escape somehow, it will find ways of expressing itself that will not be more comfortable for the nerve-weary grown-up.

The cure for restlessness and noise is more restlessness and noise. Turn the child loose and let him have it out. To deprive him of his playtime is not healthy for his body or his mind. Nor will it prove healthy for the adult who tries it.

THE SHOCKS.

A man with a very pale face, wearing a woolen comforter and holding a slender stick in his hand, staggered into a Houston drug store yesterday and leaned against the counter, holding the other hand tightly against his breast.

The clerk got a graduating glass and poured an ounce of spiritous frumenti into it quickly, and handed it to him. The man drank it at a gulp.

"Feel better?" asked the clerk.

"A little. Don't know when I had such a shock. I can hardly stand. Just a little more, now——"

The clerk gave him another ounce of whiskey.

"Fell off a wagon?" asked the clerk.

"No, not exactly."

"Slip on a banana peel?"

"I think not. I'm getting faint again, if you——"

The obliging clerk administered a third dose of the stimulant.

"Street car run over you?" he asked.

"No," said the pale man. "I'll tell you how it was. See that red-faced man out there swearing and dancing on the corner?"

"Yes."

"He did it. I'll tell you about it. I have one of these toy spiders attached to a string at the end of this stick, and I saw that red-faced man sitting on a doorstep with his back to me, and I let the spider down over his head in front of his nose. I didn't know who he was then. He fell over backwards and cut his ear on the foot-scraper and broke a set of $60 false teeth.

"That man is my landlord, and I owe him $37 back rent, and he holds a $10 mortgage on my cow, and has already threatened to break my back. I slipped in here and he hasn't seen me yet. The shock to my feelings when I saw who it was was something awful. If you have a little more of that spirits, now, I——"

When You Can Be Well, Why Be Sick!

Why Suffer Delay and Grow Worse?

Enjoy Life—Health—Happiness

To Have No Back Pains, No Nervousness, No Kidney Disease, With Plenty of Life, Energy and No Blood Disease, Is the Wish of Every Young, Old or Middle-Aged Person.

To you—if you are sick—if you suffer—if you are afflicted with any ailments of MEN—if you are worn out, tired or failing, if you need medical advice—if you are not in perfect health—if life is a dragging, miserable existence—if you lack energy, vim and vigor that make life worth living, to you—rich or poor—young or old—you need my treatment at once.

Nerves and Blood Are Life

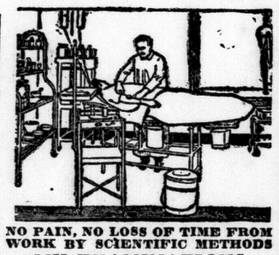

The lack of nerve force is found among men of all ages. This is true with men in all walks of life, from the day laborer to the mechanic or professional man. Merchant and clergy are alike sufferers—no man is exempt from the ailment who has rebelled against nature's laws—so if you have the result of overwork, dissipation, sedentary habits or worry, and your vital organs are disturbed, remember, delay in seeing the right doctor makes it more difficult to overcome the symptoms, and you might reach an incurable condition beyond relief if you delay too long.

My Equipment

Is composed of the latest and best known agents in Electrical, Surgical and Mechanical Apparatus, and I am prepared by the knowledge of their uses and the experiences in prescribing them so as to get the greatest uniform results from them.

I Am Prepared to Give You

Serums, Bacterins, Vaccines and any and all forms of treatment of this character that have been tried and proved a success.

NO PAIN, NO LOSS OF TIME FROM WORK BY SCIENTIFIC METHODS

MY EXAMINATIONS ARE SEARCHING.
MY TREATMENT IS SCIENTIFIC.
MY CHARGES ARE REASONABLE.
DO NOT LET MONEY MATTERS NOR FALSE PRIDE KEEP YOU AWAY.

YOUNG MEN — THINK OF YOUR FUTURE

How about it, are you qualified to face it—are others doing more and getting more out of life than you are? Find out, if you don't know already, what is dragging you down. No one can violate nature's laws and succeed. I have helped thousands physically, mentally, morally. I believe I (as I have thousands of other men), can help you. Just be frank and tell us your troubles. Let me help you to regain and maintain your health.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN

Constitute a large part of my practice. At this time of life a most important physicological change takes place and men feel the need of an experienced doctor for men to not only treat them at this critical period but as well to advise them as to what to do and what to avoid to regain health, strong nerves and a sound body once more.

URGE VOTE TAKEN FOR ERECTION OF SPRINGBANK DAM

Board of Works Would Submit Question To People In December.

ENGINEER TO PROBE

Mayor Wenige and members of the board of works urge that the people be given an opportunity next December to vote upon the proposed construction of a new dam at Springbank, and at a special session yesterday they recommended that the public utilities commissioners consider such action.

The committee also passed on the council for favorable consideration Mayor Wenige's salary recommendations for the city engineering department involving an expenditure of roughly $600.

At the instigation of Mayor Wenige, the committee also recommended to the city council that all city spending bodies submit their tentative 1924 estimates not later than November 30, an entirely new venture in local municipal affairs.

Scheme Favored.

City Engineer W. P. Near reported that this scheme had been employed with great satisfaction for three years. "We'll get somewhere with this move," promised the mayor. The engineer pointed out that the tax-rate could be struck fully a month or six weeks earlier than in other years.

Mayor Wenige insisted that the contemplated dam at Springbank should be built below the pumphouse if it was to prove of any real value to the park.

"Has the hydro commission control of the river yet?" asked Ald. McKay.

"Yes we must have their consent," replied Ald. Watt, who has always been actively interested in this project, which met defeat on a former occasion.

"They'll not oppose," assured the mayor.

Will Be Opposition.

"But there will be opposition," cautioned Ald Watt, relating that he was vigorously opposed at the last campaign when he appeared on the platform and when commisisoners had knocked the project on every corner.

Mayor Wenige urged another attempt and Ald. Watt pointed out that the council had nothing to do with the proposal but to arrange for the funds if the people were favorable. City Engineer Near will confer with the utilities authorities with a view toward a speedy report as to cost, location, etc.

Whether Central avenue will be paved this year is another question yet to be determined by the council. The street railway company has reported to the engineer that they do not believe that they would be able to secure necessary new rails in time for laying this year, and the point has been raised whether it would be advisable to commence this work before the people vote again upon the proposed purchase of the lines. The engineer pointed out that if the city purchased the road it might then be considered imperative to remove this line and lay another on Colborne street as recommended in the Bunnell report.

Mayor Gives Opinion.

"We need not worry about the people and the vote on the street railway," volunteered Mayor Wenige, indicating that in his opinion the people will never consent to a purchase.

City Engineer Near pointed out however, that from recent conferences with the street railway authorities it was just possible that the company, upon its own initiative, and presuming that the people defeated the purchase again, would undertake to eliminate the Central Avenue trackage and operate on Colborne street.

"I think that a line on Colborne street would serve better," Mayor Wenige commented. "We have four parallel lines now, Dundas, Central, Oxford and Cheapside, and but two north and south, and they are a mile apart."

It was decided to leave the Central avenue project in abeyance.

Mayor Wenige declared that the street railway company had obviously exerted a great effort during recent months to improve the service but held that the maximum of service had yet to be reached. He proposed, and the committee recommended to the council, that the company be urged to add more cars to their lines.

Submits Estimate.

Building Inspector Piper submitted an estimate for certain proposed plumbing repairs to one of the market stalls, and upon the mayor's recommendation it was directed that the cost of this work should be borne by the tenant who is assessed but a small figure for the use of this space.

The mayor's salary recommendations, affecting the city engineer's department, were passed to the council with but little discussion. The big fight will be staged when the council meets in special session Monday night to consider recommendations from the mayor and city officials covering all city hall offices.

SINCLAIR OR FISHER WILL LEAD LIBERALS

Wellington Hay Presides At Party Gathering In Toronto.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, July 19.—Ten of the fifteen Liberals returned at the last provincial election met at the Parliament Buildings today, but failed to arrive at any decisions regarding the future. Even the matter of leadership was left in abeyance, and another gathering will be necessary to settle this point. The choice is said to rest between W. E. Sinclair, K.C., member for South Ontario, and Harold Fisher, West Ottawa, with preference for the former, by reason of his experience in the legislature.

F. Wellington Hay, the present leader, who was defeated in his home constituency, of North Perth, presided at the meeting.

UNNECESSARY FOR FRANCE TO IMPORT WHEAT IN 1922

Associated Press Despatch.

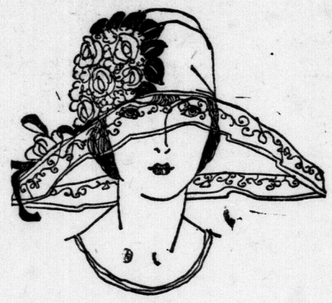

Paris, July 19.—For the first time in many years France will not be obliged to import wheat after August, as its crop of the grain, harvesting of which is now beginning, is much larger than was expected. It is estimated by experts that the harvest will yield from seven and a half to eight million tons.

This crop situation is expected to increase the value of the franc.

WANTS BRITISH ENVOY TO VATICAN RECALLED

APPEALS FOR REMOVAL OF ENVOY TO VATICAN

Imperial Grand Lodge of World Urged To Pass a Resolution Condemning Present Arrangement Between Great Britain and Holy See—President Ness Opens Convention.

CRITICIZES KING'S VISIT TO THE POPE

Canadian Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, July 20.—Passage of a resolution by Imperial Grand Orange Lodge of the World, appealing to the British government to immediately withdraw the British envoy to the Vatican "as diplomatic relations with the pope are an infringement of the Protestant constitution and a grave menace to the welfare of the British empire," was urged by Rev. David Ness, Glasgow, Scotland, in his address as imperial grand president of the opening session of the eighteenth triennial convention of the Imperial Orange Council this afternoon.

Continuing, Mr. Ness said: "We demand the recall of the British envoy to the Vatican," after having discussed at considerable length the visit of King George to the pope, and of it having attracted widespread attention all over the English-speaking world, calling forth protests "from many widely separated countries which, he said, "was offensive to millions of his majesty's most loyal subjects. It was a gross violation of the Protestant bill of rights for the King to visit the pope. It was unconstitutional for the sovereign of this Protestant nation to visit the greatest enemy of civil and religious liberty."

After recalling the declaration of the Manitoba Grand Orange Lodge passed last winter at its annual session, which stated that "under the bill of rights our crown is barred from holding any communication with the See or church of Rome; and these are not the days in which constitutional safeguards ought to be flouted," Mr. Ness said that the visit arose through the presence of the British envoy at the Vatican, and added that it would be interesting to know what the envoy is really supposed to accomplish.

Demands Recall.

"He is as useless today as his predecessor was in the years of the great war," declared the imperial grand president. "It is high time that the British government was brought to book on the subject."

Mr. Ness said that Orangemen profoundly deplored the existence and growth of proletarian Sunday schools, which by their teaching of sedition and revolution, and their hostility to the church and Christianity, were fast becoming a menace to the security and stability of the democratic constitution of the country, as well as to home life, moral standards and national character. These schools were adjuncts of the left or extreme wing of the Socialistic movement.

"Their object," said Mr. Ness, "is to teach the children of the working-class the absolute necessity for the abolition of the present political state and the inauguration of an industrial republic. Immediate steps should be taken to deal with this widespread attempt to pervert the minds of British children. We should co-operate in counteracting this monstrous conspiracy.

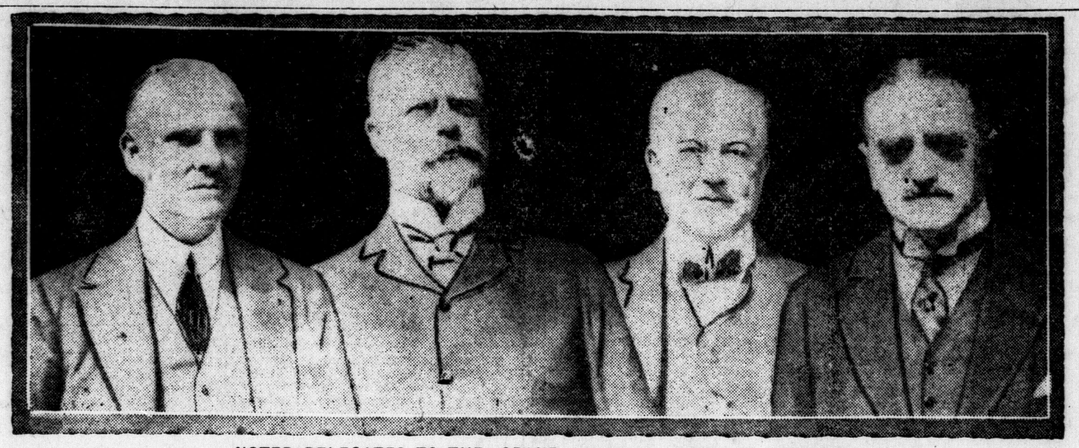

"Since the council met in Belfast in 1920, said Mr. Ness, much has happened in Ireland. Numerous crimes have been perpetrated in the Free State, resulting in many men, women and children being killed or murdered, and buildings and other property destroyed. He deplored the fact that there had been a gradual extinction of Protestantism in the south and west of Ireland. "The majority of those who have left have gone overseas or to Britain, or Northern Ireland with heavy hearts and with a feeling that they were deserted in cowardly fashion by the British government," he said. "One result of the infamous treaty will, in the end, be the practical extermination of Protestantism in the Free State."

Ulster Unchanged.

"The complete tranquility which now reigns throughout the northern state allows no doubt as to the ability and competence of the six counties to administer their own affairs or as to their determination, under present conditions to remain independent of their southern neighbors," said the president.

"Ulster is out of the Free State and out she intends to remain. Into a Dublin parliament she will never go," emphasized Mr. Ness. "She is convinced that the present arrangement of one parliament for the north subservient to the imperial parliament, and one parliament for the south is the best that can be made for Ireland, and presents the only opportunity of permanent peace."

In closing, the speaker said that never since the days of the organization had there been a greater need for the Orange Order than at the present moment. "It has been the safeguard of the rights and privileges of the people in the days that are past, and gone, and wherever the Union Jack floats today it is the symbol of liberty and equality."

NOTED DELEGATES TO THE GRAND MASONIC LODGE OF ONTARIO.

ASKS ANOTHER VOTE

Would Have Proposal Submitted to People Again in December.

Back in the front line today, Ald. Leonard Douglass, chairman of the board of works, predicts that there will be no new city hall started on the McCormick site this year, and he claims that the tide has turned and a majority of the councillors are now opposed to this venture.

Ald. Douglass states, however, that he will not oppose any move to have the issue opened for reconsideration in the council.

"No city hall on any site for ten years at least," is how Ald. Douglass now sizes up the situation, urging, however, that the people be given another opportunity next December to voice their opinion.

"I say that the people do not want the hall started this year on any site," he said. "And I would move that another vote be taken in December. Put the question up to the electors in such a manner that they can't misconstrue the ballot. Let us estimate the cost for them, and then let the people say definitely when and where they want their new offices."

Ald. Douglass is evidently depending upon Ald. Watt to oppose the new city hall project, as the committee has voted against competitive plans.

HOPE TO DISCOVER SLAYER BY FINGER PRINTS ON TREES

Provincial Police Continue the Search For Cochrane Girl's Murderer.

BELIEVED INSANE

Bloody Marks on Large Stone May Afford a Clue.

Special to The Advertiser.

Cochrane, July 20.—There have been no developments in the search for the murderer of Monica Foster, the six-year-old daughter of Alfred Thomas Foster, Canadian National yardmaster here, who was brutally assaulted and killed on Tuesday.

The police, who are being assisted by Inspector John Miller of Toronto, who arrived here last night, claim no particular progress in the case, but are hopeful.

As far as can be found out, the chief clue held by the police is the fingerprints on trees and a large rock which crushed the little girl's head in. After viewing the body of the girl, the coroner's inquest was adjourned until Monday next. No evidence was taken.

The body was turned over to the family and buried yesterday. The murder was apparently the work of a man of unsound mind, and was committed within a stoneshrow of the home of the little girl. It was not until about seven o'clock Tuesday evening that anxiety as to the whereabouts of Monica was raised in the mind of her grandmother, Mrs. Foster, who is looking after the home since the death of the mother a year ago.

Body is Discovered.

That night search parties scoured the heavy growth of trees in the vicinity of her home and even a lake nearby was dragged for her, as she was seen near the water during the day.

The girl was last seen alive by people living in a house about 300 yards from her home at six o'clock Tuesday. She took a little traveled road to her home over a hill called Hillcrest. A knoll rises above the surrounding country about 150 yards from her home, and in a hollow nearby was found the first clue to the disaster—a blood-covered stone weighing seven pounds. The finding of the stone was on Wednesday morning about nine o'clock.

About fifty yards away, just on the edge of a dense thicket, the body, horribly mutilated, was found. Her head had been crushed in, supposedly by the rock found alongside the road, and the throat cut from ear to ear. After crushing the girl's head in with a stone, the girl must have been carried to the place were it was found, probably in a coat, because no bloodstains were found between the two spots.

Father Tells Story.

Talking to The Advertiser, Mr. Foster, who is the father of eight children, the eldest being fifteen years of age, he said that he was on his shift, as foreman of the yard office, from 5 o'clock in the afternoon until 1 o'clock at night, when he was informed of the disappearance of Monica. As soon as he could get relieved he joined the search parties which were out. Three times he passed close by to where his daughter was lying, but it was not till about 9 o'clock that the stone was found with the bloodstains on it.

Considerable time was then spent before further evidence was secured and the body was found in its terrible condition. The shock to the grief-stricken father was almost too much. A pool of blood was lying alongside the child, who was left with her hands folded across her body, and fingerprints were found on the small saplings alongside.

The father told of an incident which happened two years ago to two of his children, which is similar to the present one, only in this case the man was discovered before any harm could be done.

Mothers on Guard.

The two children were enticed into the same bush by a returned man, who fascinated the children by telling them stories and showing them his bright medals. He also pulled out a roll of bills and gave one to the children. Fortunately, a woman passing by saw what was going on, raised the alarm, and the man, although he ran away, was overtaken and put under arrest. When brought up in the court he was allowed out on suspended sentence and told to keep out of town for twelve months.

Since the murder Tuesday evening the mothers of the town are anxiously guarding their little ones from possible further attempts of this nature, for it is said that children are often accosted on the lonely side of the spread-out town of Cochrane, especially over around Hillcrest, where Monica lived.

CARMEN TO PRESS FOR RESTORATION OF PRIVILEGES

Joseph Corbett Representing Local Shopmen at Montreal Convention.

FIGHT PIECE WORK

Organization Opposes System of "Farming Out" of Labor.

Joseph Corbett, general representative of the G. T. R. Carmen of Canada is attending a special convention of the Grand Trunk Federation of Railway Shopmen in Montreal. Members of the local Carmen's Union say that, in addition to the general business of the meeting, he will press several matters in connection with the workers of this district.

The main point before the convention is the matter of forfeited pensions and passes to those carmen and shopmen who participated in the strikes of 1900 and 1905 at Montreal and Stratford. Under an old ruling all who participated were deprived of their retiring pensions and the free pass privilege. Under the new management of the C. N. R., these privileges have been restored in the other branches, and the present convention of carmen are out for their rights in getting the same consideration.

There are about 125 delegates from the central region in which the London division of the road is a part. Reports from Montreal name this as one of the most largely-attended conventions which the shopmen have held.

Another strong fight is that being waged on the "farming out" of work outside the shops. This matter is being protested strongly, as is also the tendency toward piecework, which has become evident on the railway of late.

The Carmen's Union of St. Malo, P. Q., is pressing for a 44-hour week in preference to the present 49-hour week, claiming that while there is work to be done they should be allowed to increase their earning power in this way.

The C. N. R. executive officials have tendered a tentative plan for the establishment of a permanent benefit and pension scheme, and it is expected that the convention will state the attitude of the delegates toward the plan submitted.

Earl and Jessica Attempt In Vain To Evade Reporters

Wedding of Former Follies Beauty to British Nobleman Marked by Little Formality But Much Publicity.

Associated Press Despatch.

Chicago, July 20.—Tinkling telephone bells furnished the nuptial chimes and eager reporters and law clerks were the spectators at the wedding last night of the Earl of Northesk and Miss Jessica Brown, former Follies beauty, performed by Judge John R. Caverly in the offices of Frank T. Jordan, her attorney.

The earl and the countess, at a hotel here, plan to spend their honeymoon at Lake Geneva, Wis.

Marked by little formality and much publicity, the marriage came at the close of a strenuous day for the principals, who had denied they were to be wed and vainly endeavored to evade reporters. When the titled Scotchman dashed for the license bureau, a horde of newspapermen were at his heels and they refused to be eluded until the ceremony was completed.

Miss Brown was wearing a blue crepe frock, with a gray crepe hat and a gray chiffon wrap. The earl's seal brown coat and white flannel trousers were somewhat rumpled as a result of his pulling and pushing through the curious crowds.

In applying for the license, the earl gave his name as David Ludovic George Hopetoun Carnegie, Earl of Northesk, of London and Middlesex, age 21, and that of his bride Jessica Ruth Brown, 23, Chicago.

FOUR UNIONS ASK FOR RESIGNATION OF TWO OFFICERS

Federal Union Joins in Demand Against T. and L. Executives.

ELECTION ROW

Members Still Urge F. D. Burke and Fred Young Should Leave Office.

Members of the Trades and Labor Council are still having their difficulties, and the battle to oust F. D. Burke and Fred Young, as officers of that organization, continues.

The Advertiser was informed today that members of the Federal Union, meeting in the Labor Temple last night, passed a resolution sustaining members of the Stove Mounters and Carpenters' Unions, who have already demanded the resignation of the secretary and treasurer, charging that in the last provincial election they exploited the name of the Trades and Labor Council for political purposes.

Both Secretary Burke and Treasurer Young, in public announcements, declared that they would be unable to support Dr. Stevenson, the Labor candidate.

The Advertiser was further assured today that the Machinists' Union has passed a similar resolution, and the same will be presented at an early date.

Four unions have now protested officially, and two of them have gone as far as to threaten secession from the central non-political labor body if Messrs. Burke and Young are not retired forthwith.

The grievance committee of the Trades Council will meet July 30 to consider the question with a view toward a definite report, it was announced today.

Graham, minister of railways and canals, who will sail with their respective secretaries, about the third week of August.

C. P. R. LAYS 147 MILES DOUBLE TRACK IN WEST

Company Completes Work Between Kenora and Ignace With Own Forces.

Special to The Advertiser.

Winnipeg, July 20.—Work of laying one-hundred-pound steel on the 147 miles of double track between Kenora and Ignace, on the C. P. R., has been completed, it was announced today by Charles Murphy, general manager of the western lines.

This work, he said, had been handled entirely by the company's forces. One hundred and fifty miles was laid during July, August and September last year and the balance was completed on the ninth day of this month. Ballasting on the Ignace subdivision, where the new steel had been laid, was now well under way. Improvement costs to this part of the line, Mr. Murphy stated, would cost approximately $240,000.

Similar laying of steel on the mountain subdivision from Field to Revelstoke, a distance of 126 miles, has been started, and one-hunndred-pound steel is also being laid on the Alberta district from Field to Lake Louise, a distance of 20 miles. This work, the general manager said, would be completed this fall.

Coaling plants, side tracks, and grain-loading platforms, which are now under construction at various points on the western division, will be completed in good time before the crop movement, he stated.

HEAVY THUNDERSTORM HITS NORTH ONTARIO

Serious Damage Follows Break in Three Days' Heat Wave.

Special to The Advertiser.

Cobalt, July 20.—A three-days' heat wave ended abruptly last night, when a terrific thunderstorm, cyclonic in parts, brief in duration, local in its path, and bringing serious damage in its train, swept over a section of this district.

Cobalt itself escaped, although the storm touched the northern end of Haileybury, New Liskeard and the farming area north suffered severely. At Haileybury the new market building and curling rink just completed after the fire, was wiped out with a loss of $2,500, and two houses in town were struck by lightning, although not seriously damaged. One resident said water in Lake Temiskaming was picked up and carried a distance of two acres by the cyclone. At New Liskeard hail fell, windows were broken, country roads were blocked by fallen trees and posts, and it is believed there will be considerable damage reported during the day, when communication is established with the country districts. The hay crop suffered, reports indicate.

SHOULD ASK RUSSIANS TO SETTLE IN CANADA

T. Toledano, Shanghai Broker, Claims Many Deserving Cases Stranded in China.

Vancouver, July 19.—"It is a pity that Canada does not invite the thousands of inteligent and deserving Russians who are now stranded in China and Korea to settle in this country," said Mr. T. Toledano, influential bullion broker of Shanghai, who reached Vancouver on the Canadian Pacific steamship Empress of Australia, which docked here early this morning almost a full day ahead of her schedule and carrying a passenger list of over 700 people.

Mr. Toledano pointed out that many of these Russian refugees are of the landed gentry class who have refused to throw in their lot with the soviet regime, and who would feel quite at home on the Canadian prairies.

STEEL STRIKERS MAY RETURN TO JOBS SOON

Men Facing Possible Starvation Expected to Terminate Walkout.

Special to The Advertiser.

Sydney, N.S., July 20.—Confidence is growing here that the great steel-coal strike is nearing a close, with the British Empire Steel Corporation victors in every phase of the struggle. From now on to the time when the men decide to go back to the mines and the mills a gradual process of disintegration is looked for in the ranks of the workers, until finally one or more of the locals will announce a decision to follow the advice of President Lewis, after which a general stampede to the job is predicted.

Mr. Lewis spiked the Reds' guns when he issued instructions that no funds, either international or local, should be given the strikers. Without money or credit with which to purchase the necessary things of life, the position of the men has become hopeless and the struggle which at the beginning looked like a battle between the giants of labor and capital has developed into the sordid interrogation, with the hunger wolf snarling at their doors and starvation for their families threatened, how long can the miners keep up the unequal conflict?

Their cause, lacking the sympathy and support of the public, has been a losing one from the beginning.

PAN-GERMAN PLOTTER PLACED UNDER ARREST

Man Who Attempted To Kill Maximilian Harden Now in Custody.

By GEORGE WITTE.

Special Cable to The London Advertiser and Chicago Daily News. Copyright.

Berlin, July 20.—Lieut. Walter Ankerman, the pan-German plotter, who a year ago is alleged to have tried to assassinate Maximilian Harden, Germany's foremost publicist, is under arrest in Vienna and soon will be extradited to Germany, according to a letter received today by the writer from Harden himself.

Harden wrote: "Ankerman, who hit me over the head eight times with a crowbar on July 3, 1922, has been arrested at last. The state's attorney here has wired the police of Vienna to send the prisoner back to Berlin for trial. The trial will take place in Berlin."

Recent meetings of the really democratic elements among the German population have requested the government of Germany to prosecute the reactionaries more actively because the Monarchists were getting bolder and more brazen every day.

Ankerman's arrest is believed to be an indication of the government's taking heed of the warning.

QUEBEC FOREST FIRES MENACE TIMBER TRACTS

Special to The Advertiser.

Quebec, July 20.—Conditions are getting worse in the St. Maurice Valley, and unless an immediate improvement occurs, some of the lumber firms interested in protecting their limits may decide to close down some of the mills, and despatch men to fight the fires. The situation is aggravated by the fact that telegraphic communications are partially cut down, and the information is lacking in many cases, while help is difficult to obtain. The forestry branch has instructed its men in that section to take all possible means of keeping the department posted, so as to be ready for any emergency.

Londoners and Their Hobbies

His Father a Naturalist, W. E. Saunders Early Became Interested In Bird Study

Went To Work At Seven o'Clock, But Visited the Woods Earlier.

Out into the quietness of the woods to study the habits of birds. Away on a three-day paddle, all alone save for the creatures of the river bank. Skinning a squirrel before a camp-fire. Whistling in the strange places of the countryside and hearing the call returned by inquisitive singers of the feathered family. Sitting at home, and all about trays and trays of classified specimens—3,000 of them in all.

This sums up what "hobby" means when associated with the name of W. E. Saunders, one of North America's foremost bird men and naturalists.

What has he done?

He has secured and skinned and classified 4,000 specimens of Canadian bird and animal life. Two years ago, when he rebuilt his home on Central avenue, 1,000 of these were turned over to the National Museum in Ottawa. Out of the 3,000 left about 500 are small Canadian animals, all the way from the long-tailed shrew, the tiniest of Canadian animals, weighing but an eighth of an ounce, and usually found in swamps, to porcupines and ground hogs.

Very Rare Specimens.

The rest of the specimens are birds. And in this collection are several rare birds which cannot be duplicated in Canada. But Mr. Saunders is by no means content with dead specimens. He has living specimens about him constantly. Just a mile or so out of the city, along the Wellington road, at Walker's Pond, Mr. Saunders has one of the finest of bird sanctuaries. The wildness and quiet of the pond and the country round about invites the birds to stay awhile. And if they stay awhile they stay longer. For here there are quaint bird houses built for them, and they can begin nesting at once, perfectly safe from the hunter's gun.

In this sanctuary is to be found the only colony of tree swallows about London, and the only pair of bitterns known to be nesting in Middlesex have made their home in this lovely spot.

In the winter time the birds are to be found about Mr. Saunders' Central avenue home, where they are fed daily. Strangely enough, they often return in the summer, peck about a bit, just for friendship's sake, then fly away again!

Not To Wonder At.

Although Mr. Saunders delights in talking about his hobby, he gives the impression that makinug friends with birds is quite a simple matter and nothing to wonder at.

While the amateur stands in amazed silence in the woods, when Mr. Saunders' whistle brings a whirr of wings and flash of color right to the spot where they are standing, Mr. Saunders takes it all as a matter of course. So far has he become a part of the woods which he loves.

His smile is like the sun coming out after the rain, and his body is strong as iron from life out of doors.

"I am an old man," he says (I don't believe it), "but my life out with birds has made me fit so that I almost beat a young man at tennis today. And he could play, too."

"The great thing about nature study is that it gives the mind complete relaxation from business worries," says Mr. Saunders. "When I go out into the woods, I forget everything else. Most people know what it is to be lonely in a big city, where there are crowds of people. I know that feeling, too. But I don't know what it is to be lonely out in the country, where there is nobody. I have spent days at a time in a canoe all alone and was never lonely. I had my friends of the woods."

Gets Others Interested.

And Mr. Saunders has not only developed his hobby himself. He has interested hosts of people in London in the same study, not to mention the school children of the whole district. London now has the best bird club in Canada, and all due to the initial efforts of Mr. Saunders, who has made a hobby of getting people interested in his hobby.

"I am amazed to find that this hobby, which I took up because I had the liking for it, has attracted the interest of so many other people," says Mr. Saunders.

But those who know him are not amazed at all. A personality, such as his, is bound to attract followers, and he has given much of his time in telling others about the beauties of nature and the fascination which it can have for them.

Mr. Saunders began his study of bird life before the English sparrow had come to London (it came about 1875), and when the passenger pigeon still was common.

"I was well on my way to bird study before I was 12 years of age," he says, "and that's not remarkable, for my granddaughter Nora could recognize a kill-deer at 3 years of age, and now, at 6, passes judgment on the varieties of swallows.

LONDON'S BIRD MAN.

W. E. Saunders looks as if he were having conversation with one of his bird friends. But, as a matter of fact, he is talking to a group of boys at camp and holding up for their inspection a treasured "skin" taken from the specimen tray.

Father a Naturalist.

"I came by bird study naturally, for my father was a naturalist, and was an ardent student of entomology at 22 years of age. All of his boys early began collecting insects as a hobby."

The late Mr. William Saunders, at the instigation of Sir John Carling of this city, started the experimental farm system in Canada, in 1886 becoming director of experimental farms for the Dominion government at Ottawa.

Mr. W. E. Saunders, his son, was apprenticed as a boy in his drug business, and although he worked from 7 o'clock in the morning until 6:30 at night, he found time for his birds by rising very early and going out into the fields and woods. He began collecting them, and has kept on collecting all his life.

TELLTALE SYMPTOMS OF WOMAN'S ILLS.

Every woman who suffers from backache, headaches, dragging-down pains, nervousness, irregularities, displacements, irritability, or despondency, should recognize in such symptoms some derangement of her system which should have attention before some more serious ailment develops. These conditions are often evidenced by a sallow complexion, dark circles under the eyes, lassitude and sleeplessness. For nearly 50 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been preeminently successful in overcoming such conditions, and it is now recognized everywhere as the standard remedy for woman's ills.—Advt.

Mrs. Gordon Wright has been signally honored in her appointment to the committee of the Canadian League of Nations at Ottawa, notification of the appointment coming to her from Sir Robert Borden, president of the league.

Mrs. Wright has also had another honor come to her recently. For she has been invited to deliver a series of addresses in Scotland in September and October next in connection with the "No License Campaign" there. She is the only Canadian woman who has received such an invitation. But one other invitation has come to this continent, and that to Mrs. W. Knox Livingston of Boston, an outsatnding temperance woman of the United States.

If Mrs. Wright accepts the invitation, it will not be the first time that she has spoken in that country. Mrs. Wright is as yet undecided whether she will make the journey although she has been offered her expenses and a fee if that will bring her. Mrs. Wright, however, would refuse a fee for speaking, should she decide to accept the invitation.

5,290 ARTICLES SEWN FOR THE NEW HOSPITAL

Many London Clubs Do Splendid Work On Household Linen.

The amount of hard work done by different clubs and individual women in the city, towards supplying the new War Memorial Children's Hospital with linen and household necessities, may be realized, when it is known that 5,290 articles in all have been sewn for hospital use.

The cutting out and preparing of these articles for sewing was undertaken by the Hugh Niven Chapter of the I. O. D. E., under the able convenership of Mrs. H. J. Sutherland. The chapter members worked faithfully for the whole past year meeting every Tuesday to give out materials, first at the Royal Bank building and later in the new hospital.

The articles when completed, were laundered free of charge by the Forest City and Parisian laundries.

Zona Gale Says:

"Motoring In Canada Finds Good Samaritans At Every Turn."

Motoring in Canada, one has the pleasant thrill of traveling in a foreign land. But its domesticity disappoints one. These rolling fields of timothy and oats might be Ohio or Western New York or Indiana. What's Canadian about them?

Six miles from Warwick a tire goes out. There is the business of changing, with labored jests. Five miles from Warwick out goes another. Now there is the business of rolling up sleeves, minus the jests.

But a good samaritan halts the same brand of vehicle one is driving, blithely inquires: "No spare, eh? Take mine."

"But what shall I do with it?" one inquires, incredulously.

"Return it to me at Sarnia—here's my card."

"But you may have a puncture and, besides, you don't know me. Why not let me give it to you at Warwick after things have been fixed up at the garage?"

"Nuthin' doing. I'm late now for my dinner at Sarnia." When he says: "So long—see you in Sarnia," one meditates on the occasional departures from utter depravity of motoring mankind.

At Warwick there is a sad man in charge of the garage. Swarthy skin and brown eyes, deeply set; a small face, chiselled nose; brooding melancholy on the almost feminine features.

"There's nothing in this town—nothing at all for a man," he says as he gloomily surveys the two injured inner tubes.

"Why not work in the States?" one suggests.

"I have—I've worked everywhere."

"And wasn't there something—somewhere?" one shudderingly whispers.

"There was nothing—anywhere," he imparts as he pours sticky stuff on the rents. Nevertheless one loves this Russian soul. For he charged only 50 cents for mending two grevious wounds. Good samaritan No. 2.

One always remembers punctures by the scenery. Since one does not personally lift up the back seat and grope for the tools, the stage setting of the disaster has a chance to make a "Stop, Look and Listen" signal to one's consciousness.

One remembers chiefly a brook, plagiarizing Niagara over a rock no larger than a child's slate. And one considered meditatively the perfection of the minutiae of our world, the microcasm understudying the macrocosm.

Another back drop to tragedy which remained was the oblong of pines inclosing a rural schoolhouse, barred and locked for the holiday. These pines were planted all at once from matched seedlings. For their old age is symmetrical.

Dowager pines wasting proud beauty on the lonely hill! Wasting? No—there are the children of the little schoolhouse to see them.

And there was the place where the thermos was renewed. A wayside shack served by sisters. Shy, but eager to please. An inflection of the voice sent the eye back through the oaks to the vine-covered home. The home was old, with the dignity of yesterday, but the two girls, the oldest not more than eighteen, were selling pop by the roadside.

"If you'd rather have water than pop, you just say so," one whispers confidentially to the oldest in our party. Samaritan No. 3.

In Sarnia, Samaritan No 1 and his extra tire stage a reunion before his white colonial home. A man who has faith in his fellows. Magnificently one's words of wonder are thrust aside. "I'm from the west—everybody helps everybody else out there!"

Western? Canadian? No; merely samaritan.

Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe, and sure way to get them out, and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of peroxine powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts, and every blackhead will be gone. Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores, and you cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of peroxine powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.—Advt.

Kathleen England Chosen "Big Chief" At Girls' Camp

Sixty-Eight Campers and Leaders Are Stowed Away At Port Bruce—Four Tribe Chiefs Elected.

Special to The Advertiser.

Orendaga Camp, Port Bruce, July 19.—The second camp of the season is now well under way. Sixty-eight campers and leaders are stowed away somewhere, all the tents being crowded to capacity, while the spacious dining-room seems just to be able to fit everyone in.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Ohitekah Tribe (meaning brave)—Little chief, Mary Connelly, Watford; secretary, Hilda Grant; nature study leader, Aileen Hallett; sports leader, Virginia Dyer. The leaders with this tribe are Miss Mina Knowles of Sarnia and Miss Louise Burns of Toronto, the latter being also in charge of the sports for the camp.

Zhonta Tribe (meaning trustworthy)—Little chief, Mary Buchner; secretary, Maxine Rogers, Watford; nature study leader, Lillian Parsons; sports leader, Ruth Westland. Leaders—Miss Golain and Miss Ashplant, the camp nurse.

Tsungani Tribe (excels all others)—Little chief, Margaret Thompson; secretary, Catherine Reason; nature study leader, Helen Armitage; sports leader, Isabel McCrimmon, Toronto. Leaders—Miss d'Avignon and Miss Moore, assistant sports leader.

Kechuwah Tribe (comrades)—Little chief, Ruth Blakepy; secretary, Aileen Anderson; sports leader Beverley Westland; nature study leader, Evelyn Pittaway.

Elect Big Chief.

The big chief of the camp was acclaimed to be Miss Kathleen England, who has already won a place for herself in the hearts of London girls as president of the girls' cabinet. Kathleen was also editor-in-chief of the Orendaga Saga for this camp, and under her capable direction a most excellent paper was brought out on Tuesday evening. Her staff of assistants is as follows: Personals, Norine Tambling; serial story, Aileen Anderson; poetry, Bernice Martin; seen and heard, Margaret Griffith; sports, Beverley Westland; health and beauty, Isabel McCrimmon; nature study column, Margaret Thomson; lost and found, Virginia Dyer; salt and pepper, otherwise known as jokes, Hilda Grant.

The paper included some very clever and beautiful bits, poetry, nature rambles, etc.

Service of Orendaga Lodge.

On Sunday the campers at Orendaga, the St. Paul's boys' camp, and the boys from the St. Thomas Y. M. C. A. camp, called 'Queer Camp," as well as the villagers of Port Bruce, and many summer residents had the privilege of attending service at Orendaga Lodge, where the Rev. Quinton Warner preached a sermon to be long held in remembrance.

Taking the word "camp" as his theme, Mr. Warner made the letter C stand for content, which each camper feels at the close of a well-filled day, A for activities rightly ridected, M for mastery of self and P for peace, which comes when a girl feels herself in harmonious relationship with God, and with those around, and with all her own forces and energies in proper balance. Mr. Harry Dickinson had charge of the organ, and the St. Paul's boys' choir voices led in the singing. An anthem was sung by four of the Orendaga campers, Kathleen England, Gladys Downey, Helen Armitage, and Jean Gollan of Lucknow.

Owing to the added duties to be taken on, on assuming the office of big chief, Kathleen England resigned as editor of the Saga, and Miss Louise Spettigue was elected in her place.

How a Lesson In Vitamins Was Given Fedwell Twins

Fatty and Grubby, With the Help of Evelyn, Clean Up Confusion Regarding Food Values.

"Jimmy! Sometimes I wish Mums would feed us grass and let it go at that. I'm sick of hearing about milk 'n' spinach 'n' fruit 'n' everything!"

Fatty was waxing emphatic and Grubby was grinning a loyal assent, as he did to pretty much everything his beloved twin uttered.

Evelyn chanced to hear the tirade and stopped to chime in.

"Now, boys, you know very well you never lose an opportunity of cracking up Mother's good meals. Only yesterday I heard you telling Walter Hyde that he might hope to get on the team some day if only their mother would pay as much attention to his eats as ours does."

"Oh, yes, I s'pose so. Only the kids are beginning to call us 'Vitamin Eatums,' and if I just knew where a feller gets these ol' vitamins, I wouldn't mind so much, 'cause then I could get back at 'em and tell 'em they'd have rickets and things if they didn't eat 'em."

Fatty's careful disguise of his genuine interest in learning about foods was not lost on Evelyn, for she could read the twins like a two-volume book that was spread open for her perusal. She, in turn, however, dissembled and responded in kind.

"Good enough, Twins! Just listen and I'll give you some dope.

"In the first place, you know there are four known vitamins and a probable fifth. To get the good of these necessary elements we must eat milk and egg yolk and spinach and butter and apples and whole grains and foods like that if we are to capture the growth-making vitamin.

"To avoid loss of weight and stomach irritations, as well as intestinal troubles, the B vitamin is needed, and this we shall find in yeast, milk again, spinach, whole wheat, eggs, calves' brains, sweetbreads and liver.

"To keep our diet well balanced the C vitamin is absolutely required, and tomatoes, lemons, oranges, raw cabbage, apples and potatoes will give us a goodly supply.

"As to the D vitamin, the fourth, we do not yet know for a certainty just what it will do, so you boys need not bother your heads about it."

"Well," said Fatty, "I guess we can make Tom Blake and that gang feel like thirty cents now!"

"I'll say we can," came Grubby's loyal echo.

Evelyn smiled to herself, for she knew she had helped her mother "get over" another diet lesson.

Nutrition Nuggets

To dry lettuce, try crumpling paper toweling and patting the delicate leaves carefully. The toweling absorbs water easily, and does not break the leaves.

• • •

Left-over boiled potatoes should be spread out on the platter before setting away in the ice box. Piled up on the dish, they are apt to sour.

• • •

Save the stalks of cauliflower. Cut in inch pieces, and cooked in bunches and served with white sauce, they make a very palatable vegetable.

• • •

Never wrap your bread in cloths. These absorb moisture, and odors, and render the bread soggy.

• • •

For over-salt soup, try cooking a few slices of raw potatoes in the pot for a few minutes. The process may be repeated several times, until all excess of salt is removed.

• • •

Very large potatoes may be cut in halves before baking. This gives an appetizing brownness to the cut ends.

SANDWICHES ARE THE HAPPY SOLUTIONS TO SUMMER SUPPER PROBLEM.

During the hot days when cookery processes are reduced to a minimum it is worth while to study the best methods of making the foods served as nutritious as possible. For Sunday night supper or weekday lunch nothing is more satisfactory than a savory sandwich. Here are some tested recipes:

Cheese and Nut Sandwiches.

Chop pecans, hickory nuts or English walnuts, mix with an equal quantity of cream or neufchatel cheese. Butter thin slices of bread and spread with the cheese and nuts. Between the slices lay a heartleaf of lettuce dipped in mayonnaise dressing, made with mustard.

Salmagundi Sandwiches.

To half a cup of thick mayonnaise, made with mustard, add two tablespoonfuls whipped cream, a dessertspoonful grated horseradish and two of finely chopped cucumbers. Spread the bread with this mixture, and then with a layer of finely chopped rare beef and cover with more salad dressing, and the top slice of bread.

Club Sandwiches.

Cut the crusts from delicately browned toast, butter and keep warm. Place on bottom piece a single lettuce leaf, and on it a thin slice of tomato, a slice of freshly browned bacon and if desired a piece of cold white chicken meat. Sprinkle mayonnaise dressing, made with mustard, over them and replace top piece of toast. Cut diagonally and serve. A thin slice of baked ham, cold or crisply broiled, is an appetizing addition.

Ham and Egg Sandwiches.

Chop one-half cup cold boiled or baked ham, with one hard boiled egg and a sweet spiced pickle. Add enough mayonnaise to moisten thoroughly, and a little mustard. Spread between well-buttered slices of white or whole wheat bread.

Toasted Cheese Sandwiches.

Mix cream cheese with mayonnaise dressing, made with mustard, until thick and creamy. Spread between thick buttered slices of graham bread, cut into halves and toast in oven until a delicate brown. Serve very hot. White bread may be used also.

Brown Bread and Cheese Sandwiches

Cut round Boston brown bread into very thin slices and butter. Spread with mixture of pimento cheese, chopped pecans and mayonnaise, made with mustard, and press top slice tight. Cut in half before serving, or if desired a single slice may be served as an open sandwich.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT RELISHES.

So-called relishes and other food accessories form an important addition to the dietary. Served as appetizers, these food adjuncts may exert a beneficial effect. Children and invalids are better off without such additions to the diet, since they may affect the appetite for more nourishing food, as well as disturbing the digestion.

Healthy adults will enjoy any of the following:

Cucumber Relish.

Cut twelve large cucumbers in half-inch strips, remove seeds, sprinkle with two tablespoons of salt, let stand for half an hour and drain. Slice four medium-sized onions, add to the cucumbers, pour on two cups of vinegar, and a cup of sugar, then add four tablespoons of mixed spices that have been boiled together for five minutes. Let stand for an hour. The relish is then ready for use.

Mustard Pickles.

One-half peck tomatoes, about four large heads celery, one quart onions, one large head cabbage, six red peppers, six green peppers—remove the seeds—chop very fine, mix and pack in layers, sprinkling each layer with salt. Allow this to remain over night. In the morning drain well, put in a kettle, cover with vinegar, and add one pound brown sugar, one-quarter pound mustard, one-quarter pound mustard seed, one ounce celery seed. Mix all well together, and boil one hour, or until it looks transparent. Seal in airtight jars and keep cool.

Oil Shares Open Better, But Encounter Checking Selling.

By STUART P. WEST.
Copyright.

Special to The Advertiser.

Wall Street, New York, July 20.—Today's market had to take some rather heavy realizing sales by traders who had bought on previous days and found themselves with attractive profits. This sort of selling during the greater part of the time held back stock which on Thursday had been the leaders.

General Asphalt Attracts.

On the other hand, stocks which had not been so prominent in the Thursday advance came in for their share of attention today. One of these was General Asphalt, which ran up above 30, completing a gain of nearly six points from its recent low. This, however, was merely a readjustment in accordance with the change in general market conditions.

Oil shares did better for a while, but later encountered the same sort of selling which had held them in check on the preceding day. These stocks at their low points of two and three weeks ago undoubtedly had discounted everything unfavorable in the oil trade situation, but they can scarcely become popular again until the present overproduction in crude oil is corrected.

The action of Marland Oil has been disappointing, in view of the expectation that the stock would be put up across 40 as soon as the general market permitted, in order to give the subscription privilege to the new issue some value. Phillips Petroleum was conspicuously weak, getting down to a new low for the year.

The break in Phillips Petroleum had an adverse effect upon other oil stocks. Cosden came down below 40 again and there was heavy selling in Sinclair.

Some buying in Tobacco Products "A" stock and common was accompanied by the report that the deal with the British-America Tobacco is nearing completion. It is believed that under the new combination the present Tobacco Products preferred will be retired, leaving the "A" shares as the senior security.

Mack Trucks Make Gain.

Mack Trucks at 77½ was up 14 points from its recent low. Those who have been most correct in their statements about the affairs of this company continue to maintain their holders of the common stock will receive considerably more in dividends this year.

Railway shares were very irregular. Reading and Lehigh Valley ran up sharply for a time, the former following the sharp rise in the first mortgage four per cent bonds and in the new securities of the Reading Coal Company on the curb. Lehigh Valley was strong, in anticipation of similar benefits when its segregation plan is put through.

St. Paul preferred at one time was up over a point, but persistent selling went on in others of the North Western stocks, especially Great Northern preferred and Northern Pacific. This selling appears to represent switching into other stocks not under the shadow of possible reduction in grain freight rates.

STOCKS AGAIN ACTIVE ON MONTREAL MART

Brompton Leads Paper Groups Which Feature the Trading.

Reported for The Advertiser
by Johnston & Ward.

Montreal, July 20.—A substantial revival of activity was noted on the Montreal Stock Exchange this forenoon. The pulp and paper group, under the leadership of Brompton, featured the trading. Directors of the Brompton Pulp and Paper Company have declared a further dividend of 4 per cent on account of arrears. This action clears off the arrears on the preferred issue and takes care of the current quarter. The present declaration makes a total of 14 per cent declared for the preferred stock since April, and this development leaves the common stock, upon which 5 per cent was earned in 1922, a much better position. From a low of 36½ yesterday, Brompton is now selling at 39¼, and the general anticipation is that much higher levels will be seen ere a great length of time, or as soon as the resumption of common dividends is rumored.

An advance of 3½ points in Toronto Railway on a broken lot transaction was the feature of the public utility group. The steel department attracted little attention.

GRAIN MEN HOPE PRICES OF WHEAT CONTINUE RISE

Associated Press Despatch.

Chicago, July 19.—Agitation to induce the general public to buy individually 1,000 bushels of wheat for future delivery was given in some quarters as the reason for yesterday's rise in wheat prices, which brought July wheat back to the dollar mark during the day and within ⅛c of that figure at the close of the market. Flour prices were unchanged after several days' successive drops.

Grain men are hopeful that prices will continue to climb.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, July 19.—While trading in listed shares on the local stock exchange today was less active than yesterday, quoted values made their most notable advance in several, and sentiment was much improved.

Grain Markets

WINNIPEG

Canadian Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, July 19.—While the wheat market was inclined to be quiet and a mixed sentiment prevailing, the tone generally was much improved today, and substantial gains were recorded. There was little pressure, and the buying power was of a moderate character. Shorts were more careful in pressing sales at present levels. The close was strong, ranging from 1⅜c to 2¼c above yesterday, with July leading the advance.

Export demand was in fairly good volume on Wednesday, and to maintain the advance of the past two days here it must continue in large quantities.

There was little feature to the coarse grain markets. Prices were holding firm on a comparatively limited trade and light offerings. The flax market was easier, registering declines at the close.

Dullness prevailed in the cash markets, both for wheat and coarse grains, but the undertone showed some improvement, and if tonnage could be booked fairly large amounts could be worked. Domestic millers were taking odd cars during the session.

CHICAGO

Associated Press Despatch.

Chicago, July 19.—All deliveries rose today to about $1 a bushel as a result of commission-house buying, based largely on advises about black rust in Canada. The market closed strong, 1¼c to 2c net higher, with September $1.00⅛ to $1.00¼ and December $1.03⅛ to $1.03¼. Corn finished ¼c to 1c up; oats at ⅝c to 1c gain, and provisions 2c to 10c down.

At first the wheat market showed a downward tendency, owing more or less to enlarged receipts and a poor response in Liverpool to yesterday's price upturns in America. Besides, traders here were somewhat disturbed by the announcement that the federal government was asking for the names of all who were long or short 500,000 bushels or more. In the last part of the day, however, sentiment underwent a decided change, current reports from the Canadian Northwest indicating danger of serious damage from black rust. Under such circumstances, the market closed at about the day's top figures.

Corn and oats swayed with wheat. Notice was given that 100,000 bushels more of corn in public elevators here had become out of condition.

Cash prices:

Wheat—No. 2 red, $1.00½; No. 2 hard, $1.00¼ to $1.00¾.

Corn—No. 2 mixed, 85c to 85¼c; No. 2 yellow, 88c to 88½c.

HEAVY RUN OF CATTLE KEEPS PRICES DOWN

Shortage of Grass and Water Blamed For Great Supply.

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, July 20.—With a heavy run of close upon 7,000 cattle offering in the market on Monday, besides some 700 cattle billed through, the market opened weak and prices were lower. Farmers in some districts are evidently beginning to feel the usual midsummer effects of scarcity of grass and water, either anticipatory or real, and consequently are getting rid of their cattle regardless of marketing conditions. The result is, of course, a congested market. Added to the usual smaller meat consumption during the height of the hot summer months, and the inevitable lowering of market value, the sudden slackening in the demand for heavy beef cattle for the export trade also was an important factor in the general lowering of prices this week.

Heavy fat cattle, equally with the unfinished thin kind, were in poor demand all through the week, and these suffered the most in the general price decline. Medium heavy cattle around 1,200 lbs sold for export from $7.25 to $7.50, a few extra choice fetching $7.75. The demand for these was limited to about 600 cattle in the first two market days, and after these were supplied there was practically no export business for the balance of the week. In the butcher classes prices ranged from $6.75 to $7.25 for good to choice, and a small proportion of extra choice at $7.50. Medium and common ranged from $5.50 to $6.25, and a fair kind at $6.50.

Choice fat cows held fairly steady around $5 to $5.25.

Export bulls easier at $4 to $4.50.

Calves generally held about steady around $10 for choice tops.

There was a heavy slump of from $2 to $3 in spring lambs, the market closing weak at $12 to $12.50 for tops.

Hogs were firmer the latter end of the week, closing 25c higher at $8.25 f. o. b., and $8.85 fed and watered.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week, 544 cars, with 8,691 cattle, 1,736 calves, 6,085 hogs and 5,200 sheep and lambs.

FINDS FIGHT FAN SKEPTIC, BUT YET ADMITTING LURE

Newspaperman Gets Padful of Slants At Fight Bug.

"FIRPO IS BUILT UP"

By LAWRENCE PERRY.
Copyright.
Special to The Advertiser.

New York, July 19.—All the real fans—which category does not include patrons of pugilism who are attracted only by bouts involving high-sounding titles—were at the Velodrome to witness the fight between Messrs. Richie Mitchell and Charley White. The writer was there, too, not so much with the enthusiastic idea of watching two young men in feverish action on a hot night as to circulate among these prize ring devotees and find out not only why they were there, but what was their line of thought.

It did not take long to determine why they spent their good money on a summer night to see other men batter one another more or less scientifically. The reaction was easily caught and readily diagnosed—the same old lure that caused lesser men to gather close to struggling giants in the primeval forest—love of stirring action.

Skepticism Reigns.

Yet it was curious to find in connection with this an extreme skepticism; indeed, one might say it was the dominating note of this assemblage. It was not directed at the encounter between Richie and Charley, which, as in the case of most bouts involving near-champions, was above suspicion. Quite the contrary, it related to title-holders and the bouts in which they indulge. Willard-Firpo? A flashily dressed young man with a sharp rodent face and sleek black eyes smiled as he gave the up and up on that famous meeting to a stout friend who sat puffing a cigar with an air of guileless innocence.

"Floyd Johnson laid down to Willard. He had to, or he would have been blacklisted in New York for life. They wanted McAuliffe to play the part, but he had too much influence. Willard knew he had no chance to beat Firpo. The big bettors knew it too. How did they know? Don't be ridiculous."

Down near the ring, where the pitiless lamps threw the ring into sharp distinctiveness, sat a man of the book-maker type, his smoothly shaven, high-cheek-boned face suggesting keenness, courage, determination.

The Real "Inside."

He knew all about the "inside" of everything.

"Firpo? He's been built up right through. When Bill Brennan collapsed in their fight, Firpo thought he knocked him out, whereas Bill was taking the count from old age or bad training or something. Willard? He came from the grave to help along in the building scheme. Dempsey carried Tommy Gibbons along when he could have named the round. Why? Because we'd all think he's lost his punch. More of a card when he fights again, since everybody has a yen to see a champion take the count."

And then, higher up in the arena, a man and woman, an intelligent young couple. The man is telling his companion as follows:

"When Leonard and Tendler last fought Benny had Tendler going in the last few rounds and could have stowed him away. But that would have ended the attraction, so the champion let the other man stay, so we'll all be in there next Monday night yelling our heads off. Why? Because we're natural suckers and the only time that we're happy is when we are being let in."

So it went. If everyone who talked in this strain believed what he was saying, and everyone appeared to, then why these bumper houses at important bouts? Or don't they believe what they say, or is it merely a habit of the fightgoer to assail the sport he loves, a sort of conventional line of talk current among boxing patrons which is all possible, but which means nothing at all?

If it is not, then the immense outpouring at title bouts is to be explained only as the cowpuncher explained his patronage of a roulette wheel after being advised it was crooked. His answer, as will be remembered, was that it was the only wheel in town.

HOSPITAL LOSE TOUGH GAME TO ST. ANDREWS

Strenuous Soccer Game Goes To Scoreless Draw In First Half.

That Westminster Hospital team was very unlucky in losing to St. Andrews in a City League game on Carling Heights last evening was the opinion expressed by most of the fans who witnessed the game. Saints won the toss, and Westminster had to play facing the sun in the first half. As predicted, it was a strenuous game. In the first half the Hospital team was most aggressive, Saunders and company giving the Saints' defence something to think about. Saints paid occasional visits to the Hospitals' goal area, but the defence put up by Wheatley, Henderson and Davies was excellent. Henderson was easily the best back on the field. Half-time score—St. Andrews 0, Westminster 0.

Ten minutes after the interval Peebles scored for St. Andrews. It was a lucky goal. Wheatley, the Hospital custodian, ran out to meet the ball, but made a miscalculation and the ball bounced through a vacant goal. The second goal for St. Andrews resulted from a questionable decision of the referee in awarding a free kick against Manship of the Hospital team. The linesman signalled the referee that the ball was out of play. Manship picked up the ball to throw it in, but the linesman changed his decision, and the referee awarded a free kick against Manship for handling the ball. In the resulting scrimmage, Dicks scored for St. Andrews, making the score 2 to 0 in Saints' favor. The Hospital boys were not to be denied, and Saunders, who played a sterling game, scored for his side. The Hospital team kept up the pressure, and Peacock missed what appeared a sure goal, but in his eagerness to equalize he sent the ball past with nobody but the Saints' goalie to beat. Result—St. Andrews 2, Westminster Hospital 1.

TWO OF SARNIA'S RUGBY STARS TO GO TO 'BURG

Richardson and Manore Non-Committal, But Wallaceburg Is Busy Place.

Special to The Advertiser.

Sarnia, July 19.—The announcement that Jack Richardson, star snap of Sarnia Collegiate Interscholastic Rugby champions would play with the Wallaceburg Intermediates this year, has created some pre-season rugby talk around this city and Wallaceburg.

Wallaceburg is openly preparing to field a team this fall to make a bid for the district championship, which has been a monopoly for Petrolea and Sarnia. It is certain that Joe Breen will be there, and the two Sarnia athletes are non-committal.

Sarnia will without a doubt boast perhaps the strongest team they ever fielded. All last year's players will be back, as well as Perry and McPhedran of the Juniors; Lumley of St. Thomas and Chick Garvey, all Ontario Juniors end of last year. Sarnia appears slated to secure more Collegiate stars this year than ever before. Jack Newton will, it is probable, coach the team. He stated last week it was too far ahead for him to make any promises, but if the players will heed him and turn out to practice he will possibly take them over.

Petrolea has had nothing but the Hard Oils, who have always boasted a team of close to senior calibre, are hardly likely to passup the game this year in view of some of the splendid material they have developed in their junior team. Junior O. R. F. U. rugby will not play in Sarnia this fall. Too much money was dropped during the past two season to make the proposition attractive locally.

EUREKAS WIN 14—5.

Special to The Advertiser.

Woodstock, July 19.—In a slow and uninteresting contest tonight the Eurekas defeated the Juniors in a City League fixture by a score of 14 to 5. Coles started in to do the hurling for the Juniors, but he was hit freely, and retired in favor of Watson in the third innings. Jones pitched pretty fair ball for the Eurekas and held his opponents to seven scattered hits. The summary:

	R.	H.	E.
Juniors	5	7	4
Eurekas	14	15	3

Batteries—Coles, Watson, Pascoe and Lamb, Jones and Flynn.

BURGESSVILLE LIVE WIRES WIN.

Burgessville Live Wirers defeated the Eastwood team, 19—9, in a well played game of softball at the Burgessville garden party on Tuesday, July 17. The fielding of the Burgessville girls was especially good.

The line-up was as follows:

Burgessville — Hope Hilliker, Ruby Manson, Audrey McCready, Edna McCready, Mary McCready, Marion Wallace, Olive Dennis, Florine Dennis, W. Fanjoy, Ada Easton.

Eastwood—G. Baird, J. Kelly, O. Lazenby, A. Lazenby, V. Townshend, F. Clives, O. Philip, A. Townshend, J. Schell, G. Kennedy.

LEFT-HAND RIFLEMAN WINS KING'S SHOOTOFF

Major Crowe, Guelph, Makes 74 Out of 75 In Challenge Vase.

Associated Press Despatch.

Bisley Camp, July 19.—Interest in the competition for the king's prize, the second stage of which will be shot tomorrow, was added to considerably today by the remarkable scoring in shoot-off of a three-cornered tie in the first stage of the shoot for the king's prize yesterday. The tied marksmen, Sergt. Downs, late of the Middlesex Regiment, a bronze medalist; Sergt. Bacon of the marines and Pte. Campion of Liverpool, each had scored 104 out of a possible 105 in the qualifying stage on Wednesday, and today the excitement was high when the trio made five successive bulls each. Downs won out. He is middle-aged, and shoots left-handedly.

Pte. Caplin, Vancouver, failed in a shoot-off today for a place in the second stage of the king's prize competition.

Major Crowe Third.

In the first or qualifying stage of the shoot for the St. George's Challenge Vase, open only to past and present members of his majesty's forces, squadded competition, 200 yards, 15 shots per man, Cadet Welsford of Oxford and Commander Clark of the navy scored 75 each. Major C. R. Crowe scored 74 out of a possible 75, and nine other competitors also scored 74 each. A. E. Ashe and 25 others scored 73 each; 36 others scored 72. Morris, Lucas, Caplin and Martin scored 71 each, as did also 48 others.

In the shoot-off for places in the second stage of the St. George's Challenge Vase competition the Canadians scored as follows:

Bacon, Hawkins, Paddock, White and Davidson, 70 each; Skinner, 68; Blair, Sandys-Wunsch, Lonsdale and McLeod, 67 each; McDonald, 66; Col. Pugh, 65; Letson and Penman, 64 each, and Sergt.-Major Pugh, 59.

ALL TRACKS EXCEPTING FORT ERIE FALLEN OFF

Critics Claim Heavy Government Taxes Are Killing "Legal" Betting.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, July 19.—With the exception of the Fort Erie race track, all Ontario racing associations show smaller returns this year for the spring meets than they did for the spring meets of 1922. Those who claim to be in close touch with the racing situation argue that the heavy government taxes are stamping out "legal" betting. It is claimed by those connected with racing that the hand-books are flourishing, while the machines at the tracks are waning.

According to figures made available today from the provincial treasurer's department for Hamilton, Fort Erie and Devonshire tracks, a general falling off is noticed, with the exception of Fort Erie.

The comparative figures for the spring meets of 1922 and 1923 follow:

Track.	Amount wagered.	Govt. 5% impost.
Hamilton, 1923	$2,810,208	$135,510.40
Hamilton, 1922	2,831,824	141,591.20
Fort Erie, 1923	2,595,354	129,767.70
Fort Erie, 1922	2,572,753	128,637.65
Devonshire, 1923	1,736,777	86,838.85
Devonshire, 1922	2,256,319	112,815.95

With the racing season incomplete, it is expected that the total sum accruing to the government this year will be in the neighborhood of $1,500,000.

CAN'T PAY EXPENSES.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, July 19.—Discussing the racing situation in Quebec, Kenneth T. Dawes, one of the directors of the Montreal Jockey Club, stated that the club could not pay expenses under the new grant made by the provincial government as relief to race track owners. Mr. Dawes stated that the clubs had asked for 50 per cent of the amount collected by the government, which would have made the club break even on the spring meeting.

AUSSIES INVITE NET TEAMS FOR SEASON

Associated Press Despatch.

Melbourne, July 19.—The Australian Lawn Tennis Council is considering inviting the United States and France, and possibly either Great Britain or Spain each to send a team to Australia for the forthcoming tennis season. It is especially requested that Suzanne Lenglen, the woman champion, shall be a member of the French team. It is understood the council will offer half the profits of the tour or all the expenses of the teams, which ever amount is greater.

SOMERVILLE GIRLS WIN HARD-HITTING GAME

Somerville's team defeated the Holeproof Hosiery nine by the score of 21 to 18 last night. Lusty clouting on the part of both teams and two home runs by H. Goldy and N. Foster were the features of the game. The girls from the sock factory were the first to score, shoving across four tallies in the opening frame, while Somervilles came right back in their half of the second and scored six runs. From then on runs came in quick order. Score:

Somervilles	0	6	3	5	0	2	x	—	21
Holeproof	4	0	0	5	3	2	4	—	18

Batteries—Goldy and McDaniel; McCualg and Goring. Umpire, W. Wood.

WILL RUN FINAL RACES TODAY TO FIND CONTENDER

Canadian Press Despatch.

Put-in-Bay, Ohio, July 20.—The interest of several hundred yachtsmen here, for the Inter-Lake Yacht Association regatta, which will practically come to an end tonight with the distribution of trophies, centers today in the second and third race for the honor of representing the Inter-Lakes Yacht Association event for the Richardson trophy at Toronto, Sept. 7, 8 and 9, between the Class R champion Mebleh and the Clarice of the Cleveland Yacht Club.

MARCONIS BEAT ORIENTS

Marconis defeated Orients in an exhibition tilt at Sunshine Park last night, 7—5. Pete Sansone's triple with the bases loaded in the second frame was distinctly the feature of the match.

The score:

			R.
Orients	4	0 0	1—5
Marconis	0	7 0	0x—7

Schott and Barber; Miles and Mascari.

Umpire—Joe Catalano.

SPLENDID PICNICS PLANNED AT PORT FOR TOMORROW

Community Singing and Free Movies Promise Fine Entertainment.

GROCERS PREPARING

Three big picnics are scheduled for Port Stanley tomorrow, when the employes of the McClary Manufacturing Compony, the McCormick Manufacturing Company, and the Holeproof Hosiery Company will hold their annual outings at the lakeside. Tonight and Saturday night, the L. & P. S. free movies on the beach will be in full swing, when the feature film shown will be, "More to be Pitied Than Scorned," the famous Broadway success, with an all star cast, headed by the renowned Alice Lake. The singing will be led by Mr. Cameron Geddes who comes direct to Port Stanley from the Capitol Theater, Detroit.

Monday and Tuesday nights the screen version of Conan Doyle's famous systery story, "The Hound of the Baskerville's," will be the feature at the free movies, with Eille Norwood as "Sherlock Holmes."

One of the biggest outings of the entire season is set for Wednesday next, when the grocers will hold their annual picnic at Port Stanley. The program of sports perpared by Chairman Harry Ranahan and his committee include some side-splitting stunts, and there will be prizes for everything. The fun will start off at 11 in the morning with a baseball match between sides chosen from amongst the grocers residing north and south of Dundas street, and a battle for blood may be expected. There will also be a soft ball match between the Brownies and a team to be selected by the grocers. Fifteen bags of flour will form the prizes for a number of events on the program and there will be a drawing for a 100-pound bag of granulated sugar.

The baby show will be sure to attract contestants from all parts of Western Ontario. Some excellent prizes are offered and the grocers have made arrangements whereby each first prize winner will be eligible to take part in the grand sweepstakes of the London & Port Stanley Railway on Labor day, when the $500 prize offered by the Northern Life Assurance Company of London will be awarded by popular applause. But each baby must be registered. Blanks can be secured at the L & P. S. depots in London, St. Thomas and Port Stanley and also at the Japanese tea house on Invererie heights, the L. & P. S. cafeteria, and the L. & P. S. booth at the terminal, Port Stanley. The name and age of the baby must be entered, the certificate must be signed by parent or guardian and then it must be handed in at the show on Wednesday.

The grocers have engaged the Tony Vita orchestra for Wednesday next, and dancing on the green will be open to those who like to trip the light fantistic.

Wednesday night the feature picture at the L. & P. S. free movies will be "The Veiled Woman," and as usual there will also be two comedy films and community singing, led by Mr. Geddes.

Mitchell Family Do "Scene" Again

Billy, Richie's Brother, Says Sponge Not Thrown In.

By FAIR PLAY.
Special to The Advertiser.
Copyright.

New York, July 19.—Richie Mitchell is a fine, game fighter, and a first-rate chap. But his manager, Billy Mitchell, should begin to realize that the fans are fed up on seeing the Milwaukeean battered up by other pugilists. In other words, Richie is through so far as the high-class men of the light-weight division are concerned.

Charley White has no difficulty in demonstrating his superiority over Richie, and when you can say that of White you can't hand much to his opponent.

Then, too, there are always likely to be mix-ups of various sorts when decision is rendered, due to the high-powered temperament of the Mitchell family. Last night it was Billy Mitchell. In the fourth round the referee saw a sponge fall into the ring from the general direction of the Mitchell corner. The condition of Richie at that time led the referee, Patsy Haley, to believe that the sponge had received its impetus from the Milwaukee fighter's seconds.

So he stopped the battle and gave the fight to White. Whereupon Brother Billy entered the ring and made a fervid protest, claiming that the sponge had been on the ring floor just outside the ropes when the round began. As a matter of fact, Ritchie had been knocked down twice in the fourth frame, not to mention preceding rounds, and when the sponge incident occurred Richie was down and the referee had counted three. So Billy Mitchell's protest was not heeded by the referee.

WANT AD TIPS

Setting a Price On a House

"When I go to set a price," explained Jonas Steele, "one of the things I consider is, 'How is the market moving?' This tells me whether I ought to ask more or less than others have—or the same.

"For instance, take the house on Bannock street I sold this month. It was six rooms, strictly modern, thoroughly built, only a year old. Other sales in that neighborhood of homes apparently about equal value were the Elgin home for $5,300, the King home for $5,500, and the Brant place for $5,700.

"Comparing location, conscientiousness of construction, interior finish, and so on, I figured my Bannock property was about the equal of each of these. The King property had been at $5,500, what I judged at the time to be a fair market value. The Brant home at $5,700 had sold high. The Elgin home at $5,300 had been a distress sale, a real sacrifice. The price was really below market.

"Now, if I had gone by the King sale alone, I would have priced my house at $5,500. I priced it instead at $5,800. I did this, because, from my information, I knew conditions were more favorable for a sale than they had been when these other transactions had occurred.

"There were fewer homes on the market. A season of good buying seemed imminent. I did not have to sell in a hurry, and if a few weeks should elapse before a sale I figured I could stand it. So I put on a price of $5,800. I sold the house in two weeks—using the Want Ads, of course.

"I find if a seller doesn't take into consideration the changing condition of the market, it's easy to lose money. Because certain similar articles sold a little time back for a given price doesn't mean that you can get that price now. A good question to ask is, 'Is it easier, or more difficult, to sell now?' If it is easier, one is pretty safe in asking a somewhat higher price than others sold for a time back. If it is harder, a lower price will probably be required to make a sale."

When you set a Want Ad price, take into consideration the way the market is moving.

HIGH MASONIC HONOR COMES TO EDWIN SMITH

Elected Grand Registrar of the Grand Masonic Lodge of Ontario.

Local delegates to the Masonic Grand Lodge returned to the city last night satisfied that they had attended one of, if not the largest, Masonic gathering on record and highly elated over the fact that a London Mason had been successful in carrying off high honors in the election.

Edwin Smith, past master of Masonic Lodge, 209a, who has been elected to the office of grand registrar, will in future be entitled the prefix of "Right Worshipful Brother." The office of registrar is of but a year's duration, but once the title of "Right Worshipful" is conferred, it is for a life-time.

Seven were contestants for the office, but Mr. Smith secured it by a large majority.

The size of the gathering is attributed in part to the presence of the Pro-Grand Master, Lord Amptihill, and a number of English delegates. According to the local delegates, it was successful not in size alone but in the splendid nature of the sessions.

NEW MILITARY BUILDINGS NOT YET DECIDED UPON

The removal of military district headquarters down town, as proposed, or the rebuilding of the temporary quarters at Wolseley Barracks in order to give them permanance and make them fire-proof, is still undecided.

Major De Passy is out of town today, and in his absence no details of the suggested change were forthcoming.

General King stated that the matter was still undecided and that there was nothing to add other than that some change is necessary in order that a suitable fire-proof building wherein records and official reports would be safe in the event of fire.

DETROIT OLD BOYS WILL BRING A BAND

One of the Best Will Accompany Them to Old Home Week.

The traditional "brass band" is to accompany the Detroit-London Old Boys' Association when it arrives in London for Old Home Week. Secretary Edwin Smith was informed this morning that the Detroit Old Boys' are to be accompanied by the Ford Band, or, if that is not obtainable, one of similiar merit. The secretary expects that their offer to stage a sacred concert in Queen's or Victoria Park on the evening of the opening Sunday will be accepted, and this extra treat listed in the program of re-union week attractions.

E. R. C. Struthers, the president of the Detroit Old Boys' Association, is the son of a well-known Londoner, R. C. Struthers, whose wholesale dry goods warehouse was formerly located in what is now The London Advertiser building. G. G. McKay is vice-president, with Edward W. Wilson, secretary-treasurer.

The Detroit delegation is expected to be splendidly large. Arrangements have already been made for a special train to convey them to London. Similiar encouraging signs of success are forthcoming from organizations in other cities.

NOT YET DECIDED ON WESTERN TRIP

Chamber of Commerce Visit Is Not Yet Certain.

The proposed western trip of the United Boards of Trade of Western Ontario is not yet a certainty. It is the desire of the members who have so far signified their intention of going that a special train is necessary if the trip is to be a success, and this means that there must be 125 members in the party. It has been suggested that the ladies be asked to accompany the party, and if this is done the trip will materialize.

August 18th is the date of the trip, and the party will go from Sarnia to Port Arthur by the Huronic, which sails on that date. Telegrams of welcome, promising them every aid and help, have been received by the London Chamber of Commerce from many of the western and coast cities.

POSTPONES SENTENCE FOR NEGLIGENT DRIVING

Norman Grover in Court as a Result of Truck Crashing Through Window.

After hearing the evidence in the case against Norman Grover, truck driver, charged with driving in a negligent manner owing to defective brakes, Deputy Magistrate Gladman did not impose any sentence, but said he would leave it till the morning in order to consider the case.

Although no evidence of negligent driving was brought out, Grover admitted that his brakes had not been working. On Monday last he had parked his car on Dundas street, and in order to hold it in position had left it in gear. The emergency brake would not hold. When he cranked the car, forgetting it was in gear, it had moved forward and crashed through a store window before he could stop it. An officer testified as to testing the brakes.

LETS BOY PLAY POOL, F. BENATTO PAYS FINE

Proprietor Declares Lad Told Him He Was of Proper Age.

Frank Benatto, 372 Richmond street, pleaded not guilty in police court this morning to a charge of allowing a minor to play pool in his establishment. He told the court that the boy had told him he was 18 years old. The boy, George Clements, said the same thing, but two officers swore that the boy had told them he was 17.

The boy's mother gave evidence to the effect that the lad would be 18 in September. Benatto was fined $5 without costs, the boy being allowed to go.

Leo Bois, charged with vagrancy, when he appeared in court on Saturday last, was discharged from custody.

Claims Wood Told to Crush Philippine Independence

New York World Publishes Exposure Regarding Strike of the Filipino Officials Against Attitude of Governor-General.

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, July 20.—A very frank statement on the policy of the United States in connection with the Philippines is contained in an editorial printed by the New York World this morning. Discussing the situation which has arisen through the protest "strike" of Filipino officials against the attitude of Governor-General Wood, the World says that undoubtedly President Harding will support General Wood because the present difficulty with the statesmen of the islands has arisen from a faithful administration by the governor-general of the policy favored at Washington, which is "to retard the movement for Philippine independence by every legal means attainable."

General Wood, "a martinet in uniform," was carefully selected as the very man for this job, the paper asserts.

"When Leonard Wood went to the Philippines it was understood that he was to crush the spirit of independence among the natives," continues the World, declaring that Wood is "a uniformed governor sworn to see to it that independence makes no progress under his administration."

A veteran of the world war was seized with a serious attack this morning at the corner of King and Richmond and was taken to an office in the Imperial Bank Building. The unfortunate man fell a prey to gas overseas and since returning home has suffered untold agony from its effect. Only last Monday he returned to the city from Byron Sanatorium, where he had been staying.

THINK COUGHLIN BABY, KIDNAPPED, STILL ALIVE

Police Claim Confessed Abductor of Norristown Child Tells Secret.

Special to The Advertiser.

Hammonton, N. J., July 20.—The Coughlin baby, kidnapped from his parents' home in Norristown, Pa., June 20, 1920, may not be dead. Authoritative word has reached authorities here that the self-confessed abductor of Baby Blakely Coughlin has secretly admitted that he did not smother the child and cast its weighted body into the Schuylkill River.

In June, 1920, the nation was aroused over the case, and a search of months finally resulted in the arrest of August Pasquale, "The Crank," who is now in the eastern penitentiary, Philadelphia. One of the six convicts who escaped from the prison, George Brown, a cell mate of "The Crank."

Thomas McCallister, who was kidnapped by the escaping convicts, told authorities he heard Brown say: "'The Crank' told me the kid he took ain't dead, but is with a woman cousin of his, and they're going to give it back when he's fourteen."

Authorities are investigating.

TWO CHARGES ARE LAID AGAINST FRANK FARROW

Pleads Not Guilty to Alleged O. T. A. and Inland Revenue Act Violations.

Arrested early yesterday evening on a charge of violating the O. T. A. section 41, Frank Farrow found himself in police court this morning facing an additional charge under the inland revenue act, for being unlawfully in possession of cigarettes not stamped as required by the act.

Farrow was arrested for having liquor in other than a private dwelling place, said place being his room in a boardinghouse, several bottles of alleged spirits were found.

As the room was being searched for the liquor, the officers discovered a large quantity of American cigarettes, which had not the necessary customs stamps on them. These were confiscated, and the second charge laid. The cigarettes were 400 Chesterfields and 600 Sweet Caporal.

Farrow pleaded not guilty on both charges, and at the request of counsel for the defence the matter was adjourned for a week. Bail was fixed at $1,00 on each charge, sureties of $500 being provided by J. McMurphy and B. Harrison. An analysis will be made of the liquor seized, the defense not admitting it to be over the legal percentage of alcohol.

KEEPING FLOWERS FRESH.

"In the matter of keepynge posies freshe, it is well to keep them in the shayde while gatherynge, and to snip they're stemmes before placynge them in water all hastilie."

So says an old, yellowed pamphlet on the "Raisynge and Care of Floueres," whose quaintly worded and spelled instructions would puzzle the modern flower-grower quite as much as enlighten her. And yet the old rules still hold, and might well govern those of us who love to keep our posies "freshe" not only while we are gathering them, but afterward.

First of all, flowers should be gathered early in the day, before the sun has begun to wilt them, and, as the old pamphlet says, should be kept in the "shayde." Lay the culling basket in the dense shade of a tree or bush and lay the flowers lightly in it, with the stems all pointing the same way. A little watering can may be taken along and the blossoms sprinkled while they wait. In the case of such delicate flowers as "gay ladies" (popples) it is best to take along a pitcher of water and pop the stems into it immediately. They will droop between the garden and the house, otherwise.

A small hadnful of salt added to the water will keep flowers fresh much longer than usual, and the best trick of all is to insert each stem into the water and then, with long-bladed shears, cut the stems under water. This allows the water to enter before the pores fill with air. The water should be changed each day and a new bit clipped from the stems.

In bringing flowers home from a trip of several hours, they will keep fresher if wrapped in a very damp newspaper and then in a dry one. If wilted or drooping when you arrive, try this method of resuscitation. Fill the bathtub full of water, drop the flowers into it up to their necks, and sprinkle the blossoms. Then cover the top of the tub with wet bath towels, securing them so that they do not fall in upon the flowers. By morning the most completely collapsed of flowers will have crisped up amazingly. Surrounding them with damp air turns the trick.

MRS. HARRIET DOREY.

The death occurred yesterday of Mrs. Harriet Dorey aged 73 years, at the residence of her son-in-law, Albert E. Hunt, 724 Talbot street. Funeral service will be held at her late residence on Saturday at 2:30 p.m. Interment will take place at Woodland Cemetery.

BIG CHERRY DAY SATURDAY.

The cherry season is at its height, according to dealers on the market this morning. Saturday will see the largest day on the local market for all varieties of cherries. Eleven-quart baskets sold from $1 to $1.10, and Saturday may see a slight reduction in yesterday's price.

At the Movies Last Night

"Master of Men."

If Cullen Landis keeps on he ought to be top-notcher among the stars. Again at the Allen, the remainder of the week, he is appearing in a fine picture, "The Masters of Men." It is so far off the beaten track and so genuine that weak spots in the school-day scenes and the somewhat tiresome "four chapter" business are absolutely forgotten. Cullen Landis goes from one pitched battle to another. Where scenes become entirely too exciting, there is a reversion to the delightful interludes of cattiness between Wanda Hawley and Alice Calhoun, the two lasses who loved sailors.

It is a tale of the days of the Spanish-American war. Thus the costumes have a chance to claim a little extra attention. It seems quite a daring thing for a director to present costumes which are hopelessly out-of-date, and yet not sufficiently out-of-date to be picturesque, but the venture succeeds admirably.

"The Law of The Lawless."

The French sheik makes his appearance in a very sheiky sort of picture at Loew's. Charles de Roche is but another of the stalwarts, utilizing Valentino's absence to leap into the limelight as a matinee idol. You can judge for yourself, as he plays with Dorothy Dalton in "The Law of the Lawless."

As the name implies, it is a picturesque film, wildly romantic, but Dorothy Dalton, Theodore Kosloff, the aforementioned sheik, and the scenery do help to make it quite thrilling.

The story has to do with a Tartar girl who becomes the unwilling bride of a gypsy. Charles de Roche is the gypsy, who, of course, is madly in love with her. Only two things can happen in a case like this. Either the bride discovers she has made a terrible, terrible mistake, and that it is the erstwhile villain who really possesses her heart, or else the scenario writer thinks of something original. You won't mind finding out for yourself. There are one or two flaws. Dorothy Dalton may be plainly observed ejaculating an incredulous "Me!" at one point, when, of course, everyone knows that a Tartar girl's education in English has been sadly neglected. The gypsy's tent, also, is adorned with an oil lamp, which looks terribly embarrassed at being found out of a New England home parlor. To offset these trifles there are frequent bits of spontaneous comedy which eke things out pretty well.

A few words of praise might be in place for parts of the vaudeville numbers.

"Three Jumps Ahead."

Tom Mix and his horse Tony manage several dozen more thrilling stunts in "Three Jumps Ahead" at the Patricia. The words "starring Tom Mix" are synonymous for "thrillers." In this picture the Western star effects stunts which go one better than the usual variety.

If you are fond of sheer daring, it is a picture you will like to see. It would almost seem that a special hardening process ought to be provided for people who want to see the handsome hero rolling a stage coach down hill and jumping across canyons, with the bottom so far down it might not be there at all.

LONDON MARKSMEN GO TO LONG BRANCH

Crack Shots From This District Will Be Less Numerous This Year.

The annual matches of the Ontario Rifle Association will be held at the Long Branch ranges, near Toronto, Aug. 6th to 10th, inclusive. Cash prizes, aggregating $7,000, will be competed for, besides trophies to the value of $4,000. Reduced railway fares have been arranged, and camping accommodation on the ranges will be provided at nominal cost. Programs and entry forms can be obtained by writing the secretary, Major E. H. Price, 185 Spadina avenue, Toronto.

While a good attendance is expected, the entries may be adversely affected by the absence of the permanent militia units on strike duty in Cape Breton. However, it is expected that members of the Bisley team, most of whom are from Ontario, will be back in time to take part in the matches. Competition will undoubtedly be keen, and the standard of marksmanship should be unusually high.

It is unfortunate for London representation that the crack riflemen of the R. C. R. are away in Nova Scotia. The Western Ontario Regiment will have a strong contingent at the matches, and judging from scores made at the Cove ranges, should give a good account of themselves. It is also understood that the Machine Gunners, and perhaps other units, will be represented. A number of W. O. R. marksmen will proceed to Ottawa, the week following the provincial matches, to compete in the Dominion shoot, where places for next year's Bisley team will be decided.

WHO FIRST FELT "LIKE A FIGHTING COCK"?

COCK-FIGHTING was born with the cocks.
But it is only 80 years ago that the first man felt "like a fighting cock!"
Now he has brothers, sisters, nephews, nieces, all over the world—all feeling "like a fighting cock!"
It happens this way: A person half sick with bad stomach, dull and heavy headache, takes Beecham's Pills just before going to bed. Immediately the Pills begin to harmonize the digestive and eliminative organs.
Consequently, this person has a good night's sleep and arises in the morning with clear brain, bright eye, keen appetite, and full of energy for work and play.
It is now just 80 years since Beecham's Pills first began correcting disordered stomachs and stirring sluggish livers and bowels to natural activity — and feeling "like a fighting cock" is associated as inseparably with Beecham's Pills, as the pills are with good health.

Spent Her Money In Vain, Says London Resident

"If everybody knew what I know about Tanlac there isn't a home in Canada that would be without it," is the high valuation placed on the medicine by Mrs. G. Bell, of 317 Grey street, London, Ont.

"Before I took Tanlac, I spent enough money trying to get relief from stomach trouble to furnish a home, and had got to where I thought nothing could help me. Gas bloating, stomach pains, awful headaches, shattered nerves, and bad pains in the back were among my troubles, and usually I felt too miserable to dress and go down town shopping.

"I began taking Tanlac last Christmas, and stopped taking it in February, after my health was completely restored and my weight increased eleven pounds. Nearly every day someone remarks about how well I look, and I am feeling better than I ever did before. Tanlac is just wonderful."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37,000,000 bottles sold.

Tanlac Vegetable Pills are Nature's own remedy for constipation. For sale everywhere.—Advt. b
