Hood's Cured

After Others Failed

Scrofula in the Neck—Bunches All Gone Now.

Blanche Atwood, Sangerville, Maine.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: 'Gentlemen—I feel that I cannot say enough in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. For five years I have been troubled with scrofula in my neck and throat. Several kinds of medicines which I tried did not do me any good, and when I commenced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla I could hardly believe that Hood's Sarsaparilla could cure me. I had taken one bottle of this medicine, the soreness had gone, and before I had finished the second the bunches had entirely disappeared.' BLANCHE ATWOOD, Sangerville, Maine, N. B. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to buy any other."

An Apparition of St. Stanislaus Kostka

(Winnipeg Northwest Review.)

To the Editor of the Northwest Review:

"Sir,—While requesting you to reproduce the following article from the Ave Maria of June 8th, I think it advisable to state how I came to be connected with this story. In the early spring of 1884, while I was in St. Bruno's College, Wales, the Rev. Daniel E. Hudson, C.S.C., then as now the distinguished editor of that admirable magazine, wrote me asking if I could find the picture of St. Stanislaus mentioned in the story and get a photograph of it for publication. As thirty-eight years had elapsed since the event, I experienced great difficulty in tracing the picture. The account sent me by Father Hudson was the one that appears in a fascinating book, 'Glimpses of the Supernatural.' It contained nothing about Father Bateman giving the picture to Mr. Weld; so I concluded that the picture might still be in the priest's house at Chipping. Accordingly I wrote to the different priests who had succeeded Father Bateman, long since dead, at Chipping. They very kindly helped me in the search of them even going out of his way to interview an aged charwoman whose recollections of the priest's house spanned the intervening forty years. But all to no purpose; nobody knew anything about the picture; even some members of the famous Weld family had not heard of it. At last, when I was about to give up the quest in despair, the Catholic priest then at Chipping, with whom I had exchanged half a dozen letters in vain, suggested that possibly Miss Katherine Weld, of Lynton, Hants, might know something about the picture. I wrote to her, and by a return of post, received the gratifying intelligence on the feast, by the way, of St. Anthony of Padua, the finder of things lost—that the picture was in her possession, that she would be most happy to let me have it photographed, and that her brother, Mr. Joseph Weld, with whom she lived, cordially invited me to come to his home at Lynton. As soon as I was free to do so, I accepted this kind invitation and spent three or four days under Mr. Joseph Weld's hospitable roof. During that time I was allowed to carry the precious picture to the neighboring town of Bournemouth, where the best photographer of the place made an excellent copy. The negative of which I thought and sent to Father Hudson together with copious notes of my conversations with Miss Katherine. She was then in apparently perfect health and had a vivid recollection of all details. The account she wrote at my request was also forwarded to the Editor of the Ave Maria, who gave the gist of all these data in his magazine for November 7th, 1885. Those of your readers who would like more information on this apparition would do well to get that number. It contains only one slight inaccuracy, which does not appear in the present article. The editor, accustomed to see American Jesuits wearing the same habit as is portrayed in the picture of St. Stanislaus, expressed his surprise that Mr. James Weld should not have immediately recognized the portrait as that of a Jesuit saint. He evidently did not know that the Jesuits in England wear a sleeveless and bell-shaped gown with wings behind, which bears no resemblance to what is, in America, called the Jesuit cassock. This latter is the traditional garb of our first Fathers, but not at all a matter of rule, not being worn in France, Belgium and many foreign missions. Yours truly, LEWIS DRUMMOND, S. J.

Philip Weld was the youngest son of James Weld, Esq., of Archer's Lodge, near Southampton. In 1842 he was sent by his father to St. Edmund's College, near Ware, in Hertfordshire, for his education. He was a well-conducted, amiable boy, and much beloved by all his masters and fellow-students. It chanced that April 16, 1846, was a holiday at the College. On the morning of that day Philip had received Holy Communion at the early Mass (having just finished a retreat), and in the afternoon he went boating on the River. Ware accompanied by one of the masters and some of his companions. A row was one of the sports which he always enjoyed particularly. After amusing himself for some hours, the master announced that it was time to return to the College; but Philip begged to have one row more. The master consented, and Philip and a companion rowed out to the accustomed turning-point. On arriving there, and on turning the boat, Philip accidentally fell into the river; and, notwithstanding every effort to save him, he was drowned. (1) The corpse was brought back to the College, and the Very Rev. Dr. Cox, as well as all the others who remained at home, was greatly shocked and grieved to hear of the accident. He was very fond of Philip, and to be obliged to communicate the sad news to the boy's parents was a most painful duty. He could scarcely make up his mind whether to write by post or to send a messenger. At last he resolved to go himself to Southampton. Dr. Cox set off on the same afternoon, passed through London, and reached Southampton the next day. Thence he drove to the residence of the Weld family. Before entering the grounds he saw Mr. Weld, at a short distance from the gate, walking toward the town. Dr. Cox immediately stopped the carriage, alighted, and was about to address him, when the latter prevented him by saying: "You need not speak one word, for I know that Philip is dead. Yesterday afternoon I was walking with my daughter Katherine, and we suddenly saw him. He was standing in the path on the opposite side of the turnpike road, between two persons, one of whom was a youth dressed in a black robe. My daughter was the first to perceive them, and exclaimed: 'O papa, did you ever see anything so like Philip as that?'—'Like him? I replied; why, it is he! Strange to say, she thought nothing of the incident other than that we had beheld an extraordinary likeness of her brother. We walked towards these three figures. Philip was looking with a smiling, happy countenance at the young man in a black robe, who was shorter than himself. Suddenly they all vanished: I saw nothing but a countryman, whom I had before seen through the three figures, which gave me the impression that they were spirits. I said nothing, however, to anyone, as I was fearful of alarming Mrs. Weld. I looked out anxiously for the post this morning. To my delight, no letter came (I forgot that letters from Ware came in the afternoon), and my fears were quieted. I thought no more of the extraordinary circumstance until I saw you in the carriage outside my gate. Then everything returned to my mind, and I could not doubt that you had come to tell me of the death of my dear boy.

The reader will easily imagine how inexpressibly astonished Dr. Cox was at this result. He asked Mr. Weld if he had ever seen the young man in the black robe. The gentleman replied that he had never before seen him, but that his countenance was so indelibly impressed on his memory that he was certain he should recognize him at once anywhere. Dr. Cox then related to the afflicted father the circumstances of his son's death, which occurred at the very hour which Philip appeared to his father and sister. They felt much consolation on account of the placid smile Mr. Weld had remarked on the countenance of Philip, as it seemed to indicate that he had died in the grace of God, and was consequently forever happy. Mr. Weld went to the funeral, and on leaving the church after the sad ceremony he looked round to see if any one present at all resembled the young man he had seen with Philip; but he could not trace the slightest likeness in any of them. A letter of the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Weld, a brother of the deceased, dated April 16, 1885, the anniversary of the apparition, may be quoted here. "I was present at the funeral," he writes; "and before it my father told me that he would look at all the members of the College, to see if he could recognize the one who was with Philip; for he said no matter in what part of the world he might see him he would recognize him instantly,—as he did the moment he saw the portrait." After the funeral I asked him the question, and he said: 'Oh, no! I saw no one with the slightest resemblance.' About four months later Mr. Weld and his family paid a visit to his brother, Mr. George Weld, at Lasgram Hall, in Lancashire. One day he walked with his daughter Katherine to the neighboring village of Chipping; and after attending a service at the church, called to see the priest, the Rev. Father Bateman. A few moments before he was at leisure to come to them, and while waiting they entertained themselves by examining the prints hanging on the walls of the room. Suddenly Mr. Weld stopped before a picture which had no name that one could see written under it, as the frame covered the lower portion, and exclaimed: 'That is the one whom I saw with Philip! I do not know whose likeness this print is, but I am certain that it is the one I saw with Philip.' The priest entered the room a moment later, and was immediately questioned by Mr. Weld concerning the print. He replied that it was a picture of St. Stanislaus Kostka, and supposed to be a very good likeness of the young saint. Mr. Weld was much moved at hearing this; for St. Stanislaus was a member of the Society of Jesus, and Mr. Weld's father having been a great benefactor to the Order, his family were supposed to be under the particular protection of the Jesuit saints. Also Philip had been inspired by various circumstances with a particular devotion to this Saint. Moreover, St. Stanislaus is venerated as the special advocate of the drowned. Father Bateman at once kindly presented the picture to Mr. Weld, who, of course, received it with the greatest joy and veneration, and kept it until his death. His wife valued it equally, and at her death it passed to the daughter; who saw the apparition at the same time as her father. It is now in the possession of Mr. Weld, who assures us in the letter quoted above that "nothing can be better than the Ave Maria's photograph." Four circumstances, remarks Father Drummond, tend to make the objective truth of this narrative highly probable. The first is that Miss Weld saw the three figures, but without noticing the faces or dresses of the two companions of her brother, and without believing that what her father considered to be really his son's face was anything more than a likeness. This precludes deception arising from the "wish to believe." The second is that Mr. Weld himself was delighted when no letter came to him by the morning post. This would prove that he did not voluntarily cling to a delusion. Again, Mr. Weld's not immediately recognizing the picture of St. Stanislaus shows that he could not have known about the saint; for this picture, though having a special charm of its own, is easily recognizable to any one who has ever seen a representation of St. Stanislaus. Mr. Weld, then, could not have been thinking of St. Stanislaus at the time and therefore the likeness to the picture could not be the work of his imagination. Finally, Philip's second companion was not particularly observed by the father or the daughter. Supposing, for the moment, that the story was the product of "unconscious cerebration," or any other natural process, it would have been very hard to resist the tendency to explain why the second companion was so. No explanation was ever offered. Needless to add that the mere fact of Mr. Weld's having seen anything at all does away with the possibility of a merely subjective phenomenon on her father's part. The Rev. Dr. Lee, a learned and well-known Anglican minister, who is numbered among the contributors to the Ave Maria, speaks of this remarkable occurrence as one of the most striking and best-authenticated instances of a supernatural appearance which has ever been narrated, and gives a brief account of it in his interesting work entitled "The Other World." He writes: "The various independent testimonies, dove-tailed together so perfectly, center in the leading supernatural fact—the actual apparition in the daytime of a person just departed this life by sudden death, seen not by one only, but by two people simultaneously; and seen in company with the spirit of a very holy and renowned Saint, the chosen patron of the youth who had just been drowned. A more clear and conclusive example of the supernatural it would be impossible to obtain."

In reference to the new Westminster Cathedral Sir Walter Besant writes: "In one respect the new cathedral church will resemble the old, in the fact that it will be under the special charge of the Benedictine Fathers. They are now stationed at Downside, near Bath, in a most beautiful country place, housed in very good buildings; and they are to have a branch house, a priory—or is it a cell? at Westminster. Do you know the history of these modern Benedictines? They will forgive me if I tell it inaccurately. They had been suppressed and driven out; they had disappeared; they were all dead except one, and that one was a prisoner, because he had been a monk in the Gate House, Westminster. He alone knew the English rule, with all its little differences in ritual and discipline, he alone could teach it, and could receive brethren into it. To him came three young Catholics, disguised I know not how, perhaps as rickling cavaliers. They came at the peril of their lives, and sought instruction of the last survivor. He taught them, being in extreme old age; he received them in the old forgotten form; he consecrated them. They went over to France, carrying with them the English rule, which became the rule of a great house at Downside. At the breaking out of the French Revolution the English Benedictines had to fly. They came here; they were, of course, hospitably received; they settled here; they have flourished here; they have more than one house here; and here, although I am a Protestant, I hope they will remain and prosper."

When addressing his congregation recently, Reverend Doctor Alexander McKenzie, a Congregational minister did not hesitate in letting his hearers know his opinion of Catholics. He said: "We have crawled into prosperity over the prostrate form of the Puritan and ought not to complain. I am a Puritan through and through. But when I think of the unceasing, self-sacrificing, persistent, steady work of the Roman Catholic Church, I am almost tempted to say that they deserve their success. They build brick churches; you are too mean to even build wooden chapels to worship in. If you object to Catholic Churches, why don't you build Protestant Churches? You criticize the number of schools the Catholics build in the South; you build similar schools? You complain of their work. Why don't you go and do likewise? Contribute your money the way they do, send out missionaries like they do—men who abandon everything for the cause they have adopted." Catholic Review.

Amongst the social apostles of our day few have attained greater eminence than the Abbe Garnier, the zealous and distinguished leader of the Catholic social movement in France. He is in every respect a remarkable man. In a sense he may be regarded as a pioneer of that broad and intelligent social policy which eventually found expression in the celebrated encyclical "On the Condition of the Working Classes." Eight years before that celebrated document was published to the world, Abbe Garnier had preached the same principles from one end of France to the other. Theodore Garnier was born at Conde-sur-Noireau (Calvados) on December 24, 1850. When the war of 1870 broke out he left his seminary for the field of battle. As a postulant Zouave he served under La Charette through the whole campaign, in which he was severely wounded. After peace was declared he returned to his clerical studies and was promoted to the priesthood in 1874. The natural ardor of his disposition prompted him to become a missionary to foreign parts, but a malady which at the time threatened to prove fatal to his future career diverted him from his purpose. Total loss of voice and partial blindness seemed beyond all cure, but Abbe Garnier was moved to make a pilgrimage to Lourdes, where he received the grace of an instantaneous cure. In gratitude for this heavenly favor he made up his mind to labor among his countrymen, and from that time he, single-handed and

I was cured of a severely sprained leg by MINARD'S LINIMENT. Joshua Wrynacht.

Spasmodic coughs—MINARD'S HONEY BALM. Mrs. A. Livingston.

Is there anything stronger against the grippe than MINARD'S HONEY BALM? I haven't been able to get anything charged to me for the last three years.

Sickness generally follows the path of neglect. Don't be reckless, but prudently take the Grippe Remedy.

"Did you ever see the prisoner at the bar?" "Oh, yes; that's where I got acquainted with him."

Dr. Fowler's. Extract of Wild Strawberry is a reliable remedy that can always be depended on for diarrhoea, dysentery and all diseases of the bowels. It never fails.

It was his first visit to the city. As he stood on the curious shaking his sides with laughter, he was accosted with: "What's the fun, stranger?"

MR. ARTHUR W. REDDEN has opened the "Central Drug Store," on the North Side of Queen Square. Mr. Redden is a graduate of the Ontario College of Pharmacy, and has had several years experience as a practical druggist. His store is a handsome one, and we bespeak for him a large patronage. We wish him every success.

The band stand in Queen Square gardens, was completed on Monday last, and last night the Citizens' Band, which had been engaged especially for the occasion by Mr. W. F. Carter, gave one of their popular promenade concerts. The stand is a handsome one and reflects credit on the contractors and painters and all connected with it. Mr. Waddell has kindly consented to donate the necessary electric lights. Messrs. Hughes, McLaren, and Beer, the Citizens' Committee, deserve the thanks of the public for their energy and enterprise in this matter. These evening concerts will now become a source of great pleasure than ever to those who visit the gardens for purposes of recreation.

An accident in which 140 soldiers perished occurred on a railroad running from Keebe to Osaka, Japan, the other day. A train of 28 cars conveying to Keebe 400 Japanese soldiers was returning from China. A heavy storm was raging as the train was coming along the sea wall on which the rails are laid. An immense sea leaped over the wall, separating the train and derailling the engine and 11 cars which plunged off the wall into the bay. Most of the men in the derailed cars were drowned like rats in a trap. The accident occurred when the train was pitched down. The sea wall is so high it was impossible to render any assistance to the men in the cars who had gone overboard. Some who managed to get out of the cars in the water were dashed to death against the wall.

A boat's crew of ten natives was recently massacred in the Bismark Archipelago, near Sydney, N. S. W.

A COY. which Mr. John Lee, of Summerside, had out to pasture in Lot 16, was found on Sunday morning, 21, very badly cut, evidently with a knife. Two large gashes on the side near the fore leg and two others near the hind leg from two to six inches long were made. It is thought the animal cannot recover.—Farmer.

"I HAVE sold 7,651 casks of lime up to date," said J. W. Smith of St. John, N. B. a few days ago; "or nearly 2,000 casks over and above my sales for the same period last year. And now I have orders that I cannot fill. Not a single cask of it went to the United States last year, and it was all sold in the maritime provinces. Miller & Morrow were the buyers."

The great wheel at Earl's Court, London, an imitation, on a larger scale, of the Ferris wheel of the World's Fair at Chicago, stopped on Wednesday evening last and imprisoned crowds of passengers. Several hours elapsed before the wheel could be moved, and it was not until next morning that the excited passengers were released.

During the heavy thunder storm on Tuesday night, the 23rd, inst., a valuable standard-bred filly, owned by Captain W. A. Weeks, of this city, was fatally injured by lightning. The filly, which was pasturing in a field near Capt. Weeks' residence, at Brighton, was found next morning lying in a helpless condition, with the hind quarters enormously swollen, cold and paralyzed. The filly had to be shot.

A lamentable drowning accident took place on Friday afternoon last at Aymer, Que., about nine miles from Ottawa. The victims are Walter, Alexander and Edward Brophy and Percy Winfield. The Brophy boys are sons of G. E. Brophy, vice-president of the Ottawa Electric Railway. Young Winfield is a son of the Rev. W. T. Winfield, chaplain to the Governor-General. The boys were sailing on the lake when a squall arose and capsized their boat.

In an action brought by Lawyer R. D. O'Connell of Lowell, Mass., against Lawyer Charles Cowley for disbarment, Judge Bond gave his decision the other day, suspending Mr. Cowley from practice for two years. The charges were concealment of evidence in the pension case of Mary O'Sullivan, and other unprofessional acts. Lawyer Cowley is widely known in Massachusetts and United States courts, and in Lowell for years has been prominent in legal circles.

The next crop bulletin of the Manitoba Department of agriculture will be issued during the first week in August. It is understood the estimated yield of the wheat crop will be between twenty-five and thirty million bushels. This, judging by the reports so far received by the department, will be a conservative estimate. The crop is heavy beyond expectations, and a magnificent harvest is anticipated. So far no harm has been done by the elements.

The C. P. R. company is endeavoring to minimize the danger from practice fires. The company has had a fire guard, eight furlongs wide, ploughed on both sides of the railway and at some distance from the track, and the guard is burnt over, and thus it is practically impossible for fires to be ignited by sparks from the locomotives. The work has been done at a great cost, but it will be permanent, as next year the guards will be sown and afterwards kept free from vegetation by harrowing.

The express train in charge of Conductor Kelly just after leaving Wellington on her way to Summerside on Wednesday morning last ran into a horse belonging to Mr. Cameron, one of the section men, and was thrown off the rails. Mr. Cameron, an engineer, as quickly as possible reversed the engine at the same time shouting to the fireman Mr. A. Love who was on the tender shovelling coal. Then he jumped. The engine went about twenty-five yards on the sleepers and then turned over on its side. The mail and baggage cars and the second class car were also derailed but did not upset. The fireman did not manage to get clear of the engine until after it was turned over. But luckily he escaped uninjured. The truck was torn up considerably. The shunting engine with three cars in charge of Mr. C. B. Grady was sent from Summerside, and the passengers, mail and baggage taken to Summerside, but too late for the Northumberland which had left about twenty minutes previously. The Cape Traverse engine took the accommodation train from Summerside to Charlottetown, wrecking train was sent from Charlottetown. The truck was all fixed about five o'clock.

Through the World.

Everyone to-day has an idea that the Antipodes are under our feet, but it has been reserved to an enterprising architect to start a journey thither, with the aid of a wheelbarrow, a spade, and a pickaxe. He started operations a few nights ago at 11 o'clock, in the Place des Vosges, Paris, and first having dug just his lantern, he set to work to dig his tunnel. First of all he removed the paving stones, without meeting with any objection from the police, the guardians of the night regarding the deliverance of a workman charged with the discovery of a solitary gas pipe. For two hours the fanatical excavator toiled indistinguishably, never ceasing to ply both pick and spade in his anxiety to reach Australia before dawn. At last the puzzled policemen began to suspect that something was not quite right, and they addressed a few pertinent questions to the lonely digger, but he remained stolidly silent, devoting all his energies to the throwing up of earth from his hole, now of a respectable depth. Finally the police took him to the police station, and there the strange being disclosed that his project was to demonstrate that a mid-terrestrial passage was quite practicable, and that the eternal fire supposed to be raging in the centre of the globe need not interfere with the plan. The poor fellow is now developing the scheme in the infirmary of the depot.

Ten thousand people saw John R. Gentry, pace all around Joe Patchen, at Freeport, Ill., on the 24th. In the first heat Gentry took the lead from the wire and was never headed all through. Patchen was not a neck back of him until they passed the three-quarter pole, when Gentry pulled away and finished a length ahead, in 2:04 1/2. Gentry went to the quarter pole in 30 seconds, half in 59 1/2 (which is the best half ever paced in public) three quarters in 1:30. Patchen threw a shoe after passing the half-mile post, or he would have driven Gentry in 2:02, as McHenry pulled Gentry up in the stretch. In the second heat Gentry again took the lead, with Patchen well up until they reached the three quarter pole, when Patchen again threw a shoe and Gentry led to the wire in 2:06 1/2, going the three quarters in 1:32. In the third heat McHenry sent Gentry away at a 2-minute clip, which carried Patchen off his feet and he broke badly. He was not in it after that. Time, 2:09 1/2.

There was an explosion of fire-damp on Friday last in the Prinz von Preussen mine in Bochum, Westphalia, Germany. The bodies of 32 victims of the accident have already been recovered, and a number of persons are still missing. The search parties are experiencing the utmost difficulty in exploring the mine. In addition to the killed, nine men were severely burned by the explosion. Most distressing scenes were witnessed at the mouth of the pit.

Reconciliation.

This poem was written by an Anglican clergyman who was received into the Church last May, and who afterwards died a fervent Catholic. He was born in the North of Ireland, and his father was a strong Irish Churchman, who afterwards became a Quaker, an act that the son much resented.

A refuge sure for every soul that faints; Founded by Christ on Peter—mythic rock, Built up by fathers, virgins, martyrs, saints.

"One Lord, one Faith, one Baptism," and one Head; One in all ages; through all changes true By virtue of the words the Master said, "To the world's end I ever dwell with you."

Above the Babel discord of the sects Above the misty clouds of Athelst's dream, Calm and serene the Church her head erects,

One, Catholic, and marked with Holiness, One, for the Bride of Christ can be but one, And Catholic, from universal sway, Founded on a Apostolic truth alone, Infallible, she guides our Heavenward way.

Thither, with humble penitence, I bend My erstwhile erring footsteps, as I crave Peace for my spirit, of all doubts the end, The joy of pardon, hope beyond the grave.

No more the cloud hangs dark before my eyes; I see thine arms stretched wide for fond embrace, Sweet Mother! Bid thy prodigal arise, Through penitence restored to Heaven's grace.

Oh, peace! divine, vastness never can be told! Oh, hope! fresh-springing—ever sweet and new!

Oh, joy! to be at last within the fold! Here let me spend my span of earthly life, Here in the Faith remain; in peace rejoice.

And, when God calls me from the scene of strife, Answer, "I come, it is the Bridegroom's voice." —The Aethal Light.

"I Have No Time."

The die of party strife is in my ears, "Lo here! lo there" is Christ, while none can say That He is there for certain; and my fears Grow greater, lest there be no truth each day.

Out of ten persons who do not fulfil their religious duties, there are at least six or seven who will say to you when you speak to them about it, "I should be glad enough to do so, but I have no time, every one must gain their living. Religion is good for people with nothing else to do, who can live without working."

Then comes the College of Assumption in Bangkok, which issues books in both the Siamese and the Latin Characters. This city has been not inappropriately called the "Venice of the East."

The Dairy Industry. Professor Robertson, Dairy Commissioner, and Mr. McLaren, of Stratford, Ont., returned to this city on Saturday the 20th and crossed to Point St. Charles on the Northern Railway on Monday.
