CHAPTER XXII.

Sometimes he would take the child for a walk, carrying her on his shoulder when she grew tired or the pebbly beach too hard for her unshod feet. Perhaps Jack did not know then, and never will know, how great a consolation was the mite's love for him, and how the warmth of her little hand in his big one stole to his heart and soothed its perpetual ache of longing. That Heaven sends its ministering angels in the guise of children is a tradition as old as the Catholic faith. Before that first fortnight had elapsed he had wandered to one of the small farmhouses at the other and lower end of the island. As the old navy had said, they were quaint places; the architecture was Dutch, and, as if they had caught something from their surroundings, the people at the farm were Dutch also in their genial hospitality. It is quite possible that they recognized that Jack was of a superior order to that of his fellow-workmen; but, anyhow, they greeted him cordially, offered him a drink of milk, and made him welcome. While he was drinking his milk he chatted with the farmer's wife, and learnt, not only something of the romance of the island, but the humiliating fact that the Londoner, who thinks he knows everything, is absolutely ignorant of the whereabouts and the history of some of the most interesting places outside his twelve-mile radius.

For a time his toll was so arduous, the physical strain so great, that they left him no energy for thinking of the past; but as the tasks became more accustomed and easier of accomplishment, his mind woke up, so to speak, and returned to Nora and Chertson Hall. He told himself that he was resigned, that he had lost her for ever, that she had passed out of his life—or, rather, that he had passed out of hers; but, all the same, she held dominion over him, and he knew that his love for her had not been crushed out by labour which, only an athlete could have borne. He wondered how soon she and Ferndale would be married, whether she would be happy—But of course she would be happy. Why

TO ALL WOMEN WHO ARE ILL

This Woman Recommends Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound—Her Personal Experience.

McLean, Neb.—"I want to recommend Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound to all women who suffer from any functional disturbance, as it has done me more good than all the doctor's medicine. Since taking it, I have a fine healthy baby girl and have gained in health and strength. My husband and I both praise your medicine to all suffering women."—Mrs. JOHN KOPPELMANN, No. 1, McLean, Nebraska.

This famous root-and-herb remedy, Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound, has been benefiting women of America to health for more than forty years and it will well pay any woman who suffers from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, backache, headache, nervousness or "the blues" to give the successful remedy a trial. For special suggestions in regard to your ailment write Lydia E. Finkham, Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of the long experience is at your service.

with a kind of malignant enjoyment; but he said nothing, and when Jack greeted him with, "Hallo, Fleming! This is a surprise! What brings you here?" Fleming made no response, but turned and walked back to the hut.

Jack saw him next morning, working with a gang at a little distance. They met at supper; but Fleming had seated himself at the other side of the hut, and Jack, seeing that the man did not mean to be friendly, respected his aversion and did not approach him. For the next two or three days they met at odd moments; but Stephen made no sign at recognition, and Jack waited until the man should show a kinder disposition.

On the fourth night after Fleming's arrival, Jack was seated in his favourite spot by the breakwater at the further end of the embankment. At the moment he happened to be thinking of Fleming; wondering why the man had left Chertson, and why he had been driven to the island. Life is full of coincidences, but it seemed to Jack that certainly this was a most extraordinary one. He was impatient of the man's animosity and avoidance; for he wanted—though he dreaded—to ask for some news of Chertson. He resolved that presently he would make an attempt to break the ice, to get through the barrier Stephen's moroseness had erected between them.

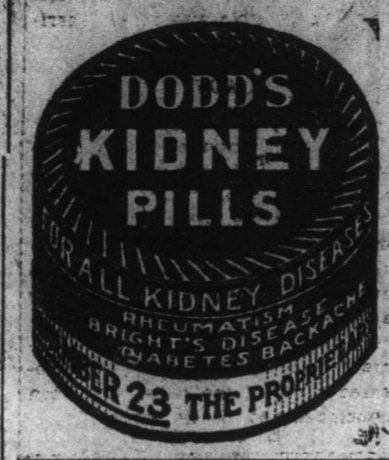

Suddenly he heard the sound of footsteps behind him on the crisp gravel, and, somehow, he knew that they were Fleming's. Thinking that it would be better to let the man come up and begin the talk, he sat still. He knocked out his pipe, and was refilling it when suddenly he felt a blow on the back of his head. He sprang to his feet and turned, with arms outstretched, to grapple with his assailant; but instantly the sky became black, the earth was blotted out, and flinging up his arms, he fell face downwards.

CHAPTER XXIII.

For a woman the surest way of remembering a man is to tell herself that she ought to forget him. Ferndale, coming straight up to the Hall, had told Nora of his meeting with Jack, of his sudden "appointment," and of his probable departure from England; and Nora had listened coldly, and with little surprise, as if the matter were one of indifference, or merely polite interest to her. She had displayed the same manner to Mr. Horton when, later on, he had come to tell her that he had settled business matters with Mr. Chalfonte. Mrs. Feltham, who might have been expected to talk about him, appeared to avoid any mention of his name—of course, Nora thought she could guess the reason why; no doubt Mrs. Feltham had heard of the Maud Delman scandal. In fact, it seemed to Nora as if every one, and every circumstance, were helping her to erase Jack Chalfonte from her mind. And yet she could not forget him; for, to say nothing of Jim, there were so many inanimate things about the place to keep her memory of him green. She never went into the library but his empty chair seemed to reproach her; once or twice she had paused at the open door of his bedroom and gazed in with a feeling as if one had died there. If she went down to the village she saw the new cottages in course of construction, and remembered how she and he had bent over the plans; besides, the people in the village, who had good reasons for remembering Jack, asked her questions about the absent one. Then there was always Jim, who haunted her like a shadow, and had a trick of looking up at her with an interrogative appeal in his almost human eyes, as if he were asking where his beloved master had gone, and why he did not come back; and, combined with this questioning look, was one of sympathy, as if Jim knew that she, too, was thinking of Jack.

Her conscience being ill at ease in respect to him, Nora, after the way of women, was particularly kind and gentle to Ferndale. She spent a great deal of her time with 'Blanche'; and she was so absorbed in her own trouble that she did not notice that Blanche was watching her with a kind of anxious scrutiny that did not fail to take note of the fact that Nora, on her visits to the Abbey, showed a greater inclination for Blanche's company than Ferndale's, and that she avoided being alone with him. During these days Blanche grew very thoughtful and somewhat sad; for, with a woman's quick intuition, she guessed that something was wrong, that Nora was suffering from some oppression of the mind or heart. But Ferndale himself had no misgivings; as has been said, he himself was not demonstrative, and he neither expected nor would have cared for any demonstrativeness on Nora's part. They were almost silent on their rides and walks together, and his manner was that of a man who, having received a plighted word, would never dream of doubting its truth or fulfilment. The days dragged into weeks, the autumn had arrived; and, though no definite time had been fixed, it was understood that the wedding should take place early in the winter; and Mrs. Feltham was considering mentally already that most important matter, the trousseau. "One morning, at breakfast, Nora, coming into the room," saw Mrs. Feltham reading, with a disturbed countenance, a letter which, at Nora's entrance, she laid down hastily. "Anything the matter, dear?" asked Nora, as she kissed her. Mrs. Feltham hesitated for a moment; then, with a somewhat nervous look at Nora, she replied: "Well, I don't know, dear. I haven't heard from Jack for a long while, and he hasn't answered any of my letters. I believe he has gone abroad; but, though he is a bad correspondent, he might have sent me his address and a line or two. But nothing has come and, getting a little nervous, I thought I'd write to his friend, Mr. Tredgate; the barrister who occupies the chambers below Jack's, you know. Such a very nice man."

She paused, and Nora, from the sideboard where she was making a selection from one of the numerous dishes, said, with carefully modulated voice: "And what does Mr. Tredgate say?" "Well, he says that Jack has given up his rooms, and that he, Mr. Tredgate, has not heard from him, and has no idea where he has gone. He thinks that Jack has left England, and he remarks that it is very strange that Jack has not written to him, because they were such great friends, and Jack generally told him everything of his movements." Mrs. Feltham hesitated again and glanced at a postscript to the letter, which ran: "I have one or two visits from a young lady, named Grace Lawless, who appears to be anxious to know Mr. Chalfonte's whereabouts; but perhaps I ought not to mention this." Mrs. Feltham thought that she ought not to have done so, and felt even more strongly that she ought not to read the indelicate postscript to Nora; though it was possible that the young lady might be only a client, and her visits purely business ones. "I must confess I am a little worried," she said. "It is not like Jack to be inconsiderate—I mean, to be careless of one's feelings; and he must know that I am anxious about him."

"I must confess I am a little worried," she said. "It is not like Jack to be inconsiderate—I mean, to be careless of one's feelings; and he must know that I am anxious about him."

"Why?" asked Nora, her brows drawn. "It isn't unusual for a young man to go abroad suddenly; and Mr. Chalfonte is not likely to have come to any harm." (To be Continued.)

Apricots can be improved when canned by adding a few slices of orange. Cleansing and repairing of garments should be regarded as a patriotic duty. A sink with the water turned off and on by foot pressure is a great comfort to a busy housekeeper.

LUDENDORFF RESIGNS. COPENHAGEN, Oct. 27. General Ludendorff, first Quartermaster General of the German army, has resigned, says a telegram from Berlin, which adds that the Emperor accepting the resignation has ordered that the Lower Rhenish Infantry Regiment 38, of which General Ludendorff had been commander, shall bear his name.

DICTATOR OUT OF BUSINESS. LONDON, October 27. The German Reichstag by a great majority has adopted a bill placing the military command under the control of the civil government, according to the Exchange Telegraph despatch from Copenhagen. In the resignation of General Ludendorff Germany lost at once a man who has been described as her military brain. Unknown before the war, General Ludendorff sprang into prominence in the fall of 1916 as chief staff to Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, then a general in the operations against the Russians. When Von Hindenburg was given the chief command August, 1916, Ludendorff was appointed as First Quartermaster General, but his position in reality has been that of chief of staff and collaborator of Von Hindenburg. Soon after his appointment as first quartermaster general, Ludendorff began to be looked upon as the real "boss" of the German war effort. He was recognized as the representative of the Pan-Germans, the great headquarters. It was Ludendorff who brought about the removal of Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg and he was reported to have been responsible for the appointment of the Chancellorship of Michaelis and Hertling who were described as gags.

LUDENDORFF RESIGNS.
COPENHAGEN, Oct. 27. General Ludendorff, first Quartermaster General of the German army, has resigned, says a telegram from Berlin, which adds that the Emperor has accepted the resignation and ordered that the Lower Rhenish Infantry Regiment 28, of which General Ludendorff long had been commander, shall bear his name.

DICTATOR OUT OF BUSINESS.
LONDON, October 27. The German Reichstag by a great majority has adopted a bill placing the military command under the control of the civil government, according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Copenhagen. In the resignation of General Ludendorff Germany lost that often has been described as her military brain. Unknown before the war General Ludendorff sprang into prominence in the fall of 1916 as chief of staff to Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, then a general in the operations against the Russians. When Von Hindenburg was given the chief command in August, 1916, Ludendorff was appointed as First Quartermaster General but his position in reality has been chief of staff and collaborator with Von Hindenburg. Soon after his appointment as first quartermaster general, Ludendorff began to be looked upon as the real "boss" of the Germans and was recognized as the representative of the Pan-Germans at great headquarters. It was Ludendorff who brought about the resignation of Chancellor Bethmann and he was reported to have been responsible for the appointment of the Chancellorship of Michaelis and a Hertling who were described as has been marked by no sensational developments it is having a cumulative effect which apart from the ground gained, adds considerable to the wastage of men and material with which the Germans must reckon. In the last four days the enemy has lost well up towards 15,000 prisoners and two hundred guns. His total loss of effectives cannot be less than 50,000. Strictly speaking there are three large battles in progress, all of which are being conducted with equal success for the Allies. The first is being carried on by the British third and fourth armies, which, pushing on towards Mons, have reached the Valenciennes-Hirson double track railway. The second is the attack of General Mangin north and east of Laon which has resulted in a gain on a front of eight miles for a distance of two miles. He has carried his line out of the swamps around Sissons. The third battle is being fought by General Guillaumat on a front of seventeen miles from Sissons to Chateau Porcien, where the Hunting line joins the Krimhildt system of defences. The average gain has been a mile, although at some points the advance has been greater.

TOOK 1,000 PRISONERS.
LONDON, Oct. 27. (Official).—As a result of a successful operation commenced by us this morning south of Valenciennes, we captured the villages of Arrtes and Famars, thus securing crossings of the River Rhonelle at the former place and pushing forward along the east bank of the Scheldt towards the southern outskirts of Valenciennes. A counter attack delivered by the enemy in the neighborhood of Engelfontaine was repulsed. During the course of to-day's operations we took prisoners about 1,000 Germans.

ADVANCING TOWARDS THE SCHELDT.
LONDON, Oct. 26. The British have made further progress towards the Scheldt and have captured the village of Avelgem southeast of Courtrai. This announcement is made in a supplementary official statement issued by the war office shortly before midnight.

FRENCH PROGRESS ON WIDE FRONT.
PARIS, Oct. 27. On the forty mile front between the Oise and the Aisne, the French maintain their pressure and on the left have made important gains, according to an official statement to-day from the War Office. They have captured four villages between the Oise and the Serre and along the Serre have penetrated the enemy's positions. Between Sissonne and Chateau Porcien during Oct. 25 and 26, the French took more than 2,450 prisoners.

ALBANIANS JOINING IN.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 26. Violent fighting continued to-day on the Italian front, where the Italians with British co-operating, launched a new offensive against the Austrians yesterday. A Rome despatch to the Italian Embassy says the Fourth Army has frustrated all attempts of the enemy to reconquer territory lost yesterday and has enlarged its gain. The message also says Italian troops continue to advance along the Lower Mat, in Albania, and that the Albanian tribesmen are taking up arms against the Austrians and fighting under Italian colors.

AUSTRIAN ATTACKS REPULSED.
LONDON, Oct. 27. British troops fighting along the Piave River since the night of October 23, have occupied half of the Island of Grave di Papadopoli and taken more than 700 prisoners, according to an official statement issued here to-day. Violent Austrian counter attacks were repulsed.

MARINE TRAGEDY.
VICTORIA, B. C., Oct. 26. The worst marine tragedy in the history of the Pacific coast occurred last night when the Canadian Pacific steamer Princess Sophia which Thursday morning crashed on Vanderbit reef, was hammered by a terrific gale and drawn across the jagged reef and lost with all hands. Two hundred and sixty-eight passengers aboard the steamer when she piled up were dashed almost instantaneously to death. The first news of the disaster was received here late this afternoon having been flashed out from the United States wireless station at Juneau, Alaska, and was picked up by the Canadian government wireless service here. There were no survivors. Vessels which were standing by were powerless to render aid. The ship apparently was hurled right across the reef. The text of the wireless message reads: "Princess Sophia driven across reef last night, no survivors."

THE ALSACE-LORRAINE QUESTION.
AMSTERDAM, Oct. 23. As for Alsace-Lorraine it is at once clear that as these territories were expressly mentioned among President Wilson's fourteen points we agree to a regulation of this question, said Dr. W. S. Solf, German Foreign Secretary in addressing the Reichstag on Thursday. In the address referred to President Wilson said that the wrong done to France by Prussia in 1871 in the matter of Alsace Lorraine which has unsettled the peace of the world for nearly fifty years should be righted. Moreover having accepted President Wilson's programme as the basis of the peace of the world, Solf continues, we will loyally and in the sense of complete justice and fairness fulfill the programme in all directions and at all points.

WILSON AND THE REPUBLICANS.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 23. President Wilson's appeal to voters to return a Democratic Congress in the November election if they have approved of his leadership in this critical time evoked a spirited reply in a formal statement from Republican leaders in the Senate and House and the Chairman of the Senate and House Republican Congressional campaign committees. The Republican statement declaring the minority party in Congress had supported the administration policies since the war with an unanimity and an absence of criticism unprecedented in party history, pointed to the record as proof. The war the Republican statement contends, is not the President's personal war, nor the war of Congress, nor of a party but of the American people, seventy-five crew, 268 passengers. Everything possible was done. Terrible weather prevailed."

BRITISH ADVANCING.
LONDON, Oct. 23. The British continue to press forward between Valenciennes and Tournai. Marshal Haig announces they have captured the villages of Odomez and Maulde on the front north of Valenciennes. South of Valenciennes the British have gained new successes on the border of the Mormal forest, capturing Mount Carmel Hill and Engelfontaine. British patrols have progressed north of the railway between Valenciennes and Le Quesnoy.

INFLUENZA IN BRITAIN.
LONDON, Oct. 26. Influenza is increasing throughout Great Britain and Ireland. Two hundred and fifty-five persons have been buried in Dublin since last Monday. The authorities are sprinkling the streets with disinfectants. Two priests who attended the victims have been expelled and the Council has requested the people to stay away from places of amusement.

ELECTORAL BILLS PASSED.
AMSTERDAM, Oct. 21. The Prussian Upper House has passed en bloc the three electoral bills as amended by special committee, according to a Berlin despatch. The Reactionaries did not vote.

BISHOP OF RIPON DEAD.
LONDON, Oct. 26. The Right Rev. William Boyle Carpenter, formerly Bishop of Ripon and Canon of Westminster since 1911, died in London to-day.

REVOLT SUPPRESSED.
LONDON, Oct. 25. The revolt of Croatian soldiers of the 79th Regiment at Flume has been suppressed by three Austro-Hungarian regiments arriving from Albania, following hard street fighting in which hundreds of persons were killed and wounded.

TURKEL SURRENDERS.
LONDON, Oct. 26. The Turkish Minister of Switzerland has handed the British and French Ministers to that country an offer of peace virtually amounting to surrender, according to a Bern despatch to the Daily Mail.

ANOTHER PEACE SEEKING COMMISSION.
ZURICH, Oct. 26. Prince Frederick Lobkowitz and Baron Madhény, who represented the strongest anti-German tendency at Vienna, have left that city for Switzerland charged with a mission about which no details are given, according to a Vienna newspaper.

PROGRESS IN BELGIUM.
LONDON, Oct. 26. Operations in Belgium continue to develop favourably, according to an official statement issued at the War Office to-night, which says the French have carried Zulte, in spite of desperate resistance, while the British have occupied the villages of Ingoyheim and Oonghem, and are advancing toward the Scheldt River.

LISTS.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Dont you love lists?
 I do.
 A neighbor came into my living-room, the other day, and found me poring over a list on my desk. "What is that?" she asked, and when I showed her a list of the little odd jobs in the way of house-cleaning and house organizing that I wanted to get done before winter, she laughed heartily.
 "Can't you remember that you want to do those things without setting them down?" she asked.

I Didn't Want To Try.
 And when I explained that I probably could, but that I didn't want to try, she was still amused.
 Personally, I can't see anything to be amused about. My list had on it such items as "Look over summer clothing," "Wash cushion slips," "Put the secretary drawers in order," "File bills," "Clean out the stair cupboard," etc. After I had made it, the things seemed to be off my mind. When I have spare time I consult it and do whatever fits into the pattern of that particular bit of leisure. When I am busy about other things I'm not haunted by those jobs. As I get them done I cross them off, and I know of no more profound satisfaction than seeing the list dwindle.

Men Approve of Lists.
 A male friend of mine once did the housework for a few weeks while his wife was ill. When he went into the kitchen to get dinner he always began by making a list of the things to be done. As he did them, he crossed them off. His wife laughed at first but ceased laughing when she found he could get the meal as quickly as she, and sometimes more expeditiously. Now, if she has an elaborate meal to prepare, she herself resorts to a list.
 It doesn't seem as if any woman could go shopping without a list, yet I know some who do.
How Often She Had To Look Through Five Trunks.
 Card catalogue lists of the various articles stored away in the garret, are another great convenience. How the old fashioned housekeeper would laugh! And yet how often, if her memory was not of the best, the old fashioned housekeeper looked hurriedly through four or five trunks to find that old flannel shirt that brother or father suddenly demanded.

On my desk is a list of odd jobs I have been accumulating for the day. The job carpenter will spend with me. Maybe a clever woman would remember them all, but I find that if I don't make some such list I forget the most important one.

It is my opinion that to try to keep all sorts of little things in your mind is a strain whether you are definitely conscious of it or not. The more things you can get off your mind by setting them down, the more useful your mind will be for other things.
 And here is a last thing for those who laugh at lists to laugh at:
 As I write, there lies beside my typewriter a list of the kinds of lists I want to mention.

Milady's Boudoir

A hearty laugh is Nature's tonic for beauty. Practice it then with all your heart. Don't let a day go by without indulging in this wonderful form of relaxation.
 Laughing is the cheapest medicine in the world, and the most beautifying. All the visits to a vanity parlor in the world will do you no good, if you come away with a stern, cold face and set jaws.
 A good laugh stimulates the circulation and eters sluggish veins to activity. Its vibration seems to force new life into the very springs of our beings.
 If you were to stop and figure up the number of times that you have indulged in a good hearty laugh you would be surprised to find that they are very few. Practice it as a duty if you cannot laugh spontaneously at first.
 Relax your face muscles, loosen up the cords of your heart and burst forth in a peal of musical gale.
 Laugh and the world laughs with you, weep and you weep alone. Remember.

Just Folks
 TO THE GERMAN PEOPLE.
 The god that you worshiped has failed.
 Your idols have crumbled to dust.
 Have all proven false to their trust.
 You were blind and they led you astray.
 You were weak and they trampled you down.
 The feet of your master were clay.
 And base were the gems in his crown.
 You have followed philosophers cold.
 Like children an' murdered their gods.
 They taught that to take and to hold, is all that humanity needs.
 They mocked at the tender things.
 And vaunted the power of the strong.
 You worshipped not God but your kings.
 And now you have learned you were wrong.
 The sword of your god is destroyed.
 The purple is torn from his throne.
 Right has broken the power he enjoyed.
 And helpless you are and alone.
 For comfort in vain you shall turn.
 To the books that your sages have penned.
 For the doctrines they forced you to learn.
 Were false from beginning to end.
 You must learn from the teachers of truth.
 That right isn't builded on might.
 You must banish the creeds of your youth.
 And come from the dark to the light.
 If you'd share in the laughter of men.
 You must follow the ways that they play.
 And humble yourselves before God.
 You have wasted the years of your past.
 You have builded your splendors on sand.
 But your temples were not written to last.
 Nor your creeds erected to stand.
 From the ashes of power you must rise.
 To teach all your children, now.
 That in honour real majesty lies,
 And only that lives which is true.

Thrilling Rescue

There is a glorious article by Lewis R. Freeman in the September Cornhill, which, while intended to show how the German navy has poisoned "the sacred brotherhood of the sea," shows still more vividly the splendid nature of the men who man the British Navy. It contains some fascinating details of the Falkland and Cocos Island Battles, which all should read.

The Stoway.
 Here is the story told to Mr. Freeman by Lieut. X—, of H.M.S. Sydney, and how he rescued some of the Germans who escaped from the Emden when our men ended the Emden off North Keeling Island.

Lieut. X set out in the galley to rescue these men, most of whom were wounded. They had no food and water, and their sufferings "during the day and a half before help reached them were unexpressable."

"Just as I was about to go over the side," said Lieut. X, "a young Australian lad—some kind of a boy rating—came and asked to be taken along. I refused him rather shortly, as I thought he would be of more hindrance than help in the kind of job we had on hand. He disappeared quickly, and I did not see him again until we had taken the galley in through the surf and were pulling it up on the beach. Then he was discovered, curled up under the thwart, where he had managed to stow himself away before we pulled off from the Sydney. It was a lucky thing he came along, for, as it turned out, he was the only one of the lot of us who knew how to climb a coconut palm.

Through the Surf.
 "It was impossible to take a boat through the surf anywhere near the point where the Emden had grounded, but some miles up the beach there appeared to be an opening in the reef through which a landing might be made. Watching our chances, we managed to shoot the galley in without an upset, incidentally showing the way to the whaler, which had been on the point of giving up the job after staving a hole in its bottom in attempting a passage at a less favorable point. Mustering my men, I set out to find the Huns. It was here that I went wrong.

"Knowing that the island was but a small one, and having seen a number of the Emden's men making off to the right from the point where she was grounded, I figured that I would be likely to intercept them more quickly if I circled round to the left and met them face to face than by trying to overtake them. It was getting late, and I was anxious to lose no time in bringing them together and into the boats while there was still daylight to see to running the latter through the surf. If the island had been anything but a coral atoll my reckoning would have worked out all right; as it was it upset things completely.
Millions of Sea Birds.
 "I never saw the place in daylight which we stumbled into, and so can't say just what it was; it seemed, however, to be a sort of wilderness of reeds, peopled with a million sea-birds, many of them nesting. The roar of our guns in the battle was as nothing to the bedlam of screams which arose when I went slithering through a lot of eggs and hopped full length into a rising mass of beating wings. My hair was rather long at the time, and hadn't been combed since morning. One of the birds put a foot through a tangle of it, and then nearly beat me into insensibility with its wings in trying to kick loose. They came batting against us in the darkness throughout the several minutes we were groping our way to the open of the beach.

"It was well towards midnight when we got back to where the boats were, and so quite out of the question trying to do anything further in the way of searching for the Huns till daylight. Several of the latter had straggled in and given themselves up, and they told us that the rest were all at the point where they had first come ashore from the Emden, and suffering greatly from hunger and thirst. As we had expected to be putting back to the Sydney within an hour or two of the time we landed, we had little food and water save that in the boats, and this wouldn't have gone very far with the lot of us if it had not been supplemented by the cocoanuts our young stowaway brought down for us.

A Terrible Night.
 "There was not much chance to rest that night on account of the small land crabs which kept crawling over you the moment you dropped off to sleep, and it was not pleasant to think of how those more or less helpless Huns were faring a few miles farther down the beach. We started off at the first streak of dawn, and reached them by sun-up. The most of them were in even worse condition than I had feared, for it seemed inconceivable to me that they should not have contrived in some way or other to get hold of some cocoanuts to eat and drink. It turned out that they had not done so, however, and that, as a consequence, a number of them had died of thirst. The worst case, perhaps, was that of the assistant surgeon, whom I told you of as having been wounded and blown overboard by a shell. Delirious from thirst, he had managed to induce a sailor to fetch him a drink of salt water, and had died shortly afterwards as a result of drinking it. All the open wounds, since they had gone from twelve to eighteen hours longer without attention, were in even more terrible condition than those of the men we had found on the Emden the previous day.

"Finally, we got all the helpless of the wounded on to stretchers and started on their way to the boats. Schall was the greatest help throughout, but I can't say as much for many of the others of the un wounded, who were very grudging in the way they helped. Schall put up a stiff protest against going off without burying the dead, declaring that he was not going to leave them there for the crabs to eat up. When I pointed out that we had no implements for digging, and that I needed his help in getting the living off, he saw the reason of it and said he would come along. We did the best we could for the dead by covering them with palm leaves and coral clinkers.

The Lieutenant's Uniform.
 "We reached the Sydney all right, and the whaler was just being hoisted in when I heard the Captain's voice from the bridge asking where Lieutenant X— was. I looked up just in time to catch him staring down at me with open-eyed amazement.
 "Oh, there he is!" he exclaimed, turning away with a grin on his face. That led me, for the first time in twenty-four hours, to take a look at what I could see of myself without a glass. It was my turn to grin—and to blush. Absolutely the sum-total of my wardrobe was my shirt and a seaman's straw hat! Nothing else.
 "To ease my feet from boots after standing on the scorching iron decks of the Emden, I had shifted to an old pair of dancing pumps when I returned to the Sydney, and these, in the rush of departure, I had worn ashore. They, and my socks, must have been scoured off among the coral clinkers, and my cap probably when the sea-bird tangled its feet in my hair. But where I lost my trousers, and what sailor gave me his hat, I have never been able to make out."

Our American Letter.

Boston, Oct. 19th.—Judging from the press dispatches, Germany had all the Entente nations guessing a few days ago and the question was being asked on all sides: "What is Germany up to?" No statesman belonging to the Allied group appeared to be able to answer satisfactorily this interrogatory, but in all lands opposed to Germany, strong suspicion was expressed that the Berlin Government was endeavouring to spring some traps upon the democratic nations.
The situation was so tangled that no one seemed able to find the end of the thread that might lead to the unravelling of the mystery. Diplomatic circles everywhere expressed astonishment that what purported to be Prince Max's acceptance of President Wilson's peace terms should have been set out by wireless from the powerful German station at Nauen, so that the whole world might get it, before it had been presented to the head of the American nation through the customary intermediary channels. It is hardly possible that the manner in which this message was made public was accidental, but on the contrary, it seems reasonable to suppose the new German Chancellor had some purpose in view, in thus giving it the widest publicity before it reached President Wilson.
This action appears to be looked upon as astounding in all the Entente countries and no one was able to offer a clear explanation of what was behind this move. Laying aside the interesting problem of the manner in which the note was transmitted, the contents of the brief document itself will be recalled that a short time before President Wilson answered Prince Max's peace note, by asking three questions, the first of which had to do with whether the German Chancellor accepted the terms laid down by the President, last January, and in subsequent utterances.

To this inquiry the Chancellor replies that the German Government accepts those terms, and that the only discussion concerning them would relate to the details for carrying them out. The second question asked by the head of this Nation was whether Germany was prepared immediately to withdraw its armies from all occupied foreign territory as a condition precedent to discussing peace. To this the German Chancellor has answered that his Government and that of Austria-Hungary, are ready to comply with this demand for evacuation.
The third proposition propounded by President Wilson was "whether the Imperial Chancellor is speaking merely for the constituted authorities of the Empire who have so far conducted the war."
Prince Max's answer to this last query is not as clear as it might be,
for he says: "The present German Government, which has undertaken this step toward peace has been formed by conferences and in agreement with the great majority of the Reichstag. The Chancellor supported in all his actions by the will of this majority speaks in the name of the German Government and of the German people. This particular answer is elusive and may mean anything or nothing. It does not guarantee that the Kaiser is no longer in a position to dictate the future policy of the German Empire, even to declaring war when he sees fit to do so. Upon this point, which is really the crux of the whole situation, it seems certain that the German Chancellor will be called upon to throw considerable more light than he has done in his evasive answer to this question.

There is a widespread feeling of suspicion that Germany is trying to trick the Allies with a view of winning something round the peace table that it now realizes it cannot win on the field of battle.
History warns how often diplomats gathered at peace conferences have given away the fruits of the victories gloriously won by their armies in the field.
President Wilson in his last and final note to Germany fully realizes the treacherous character of the Hun and has laid down the axiom that the German Government as constituted at present must have no say in the matter of a peace parley. This means, if it means anything, that unless the German Government has undergone a radical change in its makeup, it is impossible for the Allies to enter into negotiations with it. Any treaty drawn as a result of such negotiations would be only "a scrap of paper" in the estimation of the German Government. Therefore President Wilson's ringing note means unconditional surrender or annihilation for the organized murderers of Germany who for more than four years have made this earth a hell. Thank God for Wilson!
Lieut. Jack Gallishaw, of the U. S.
Army, is reported as having been seriously wounded in France. Lieut. Gallishaw who was formerly Corp. Gallishaw of the Newfoundland Regiment, and who saw service at Gallipoli, was only recently given a commission in the American Army. His book:
"Trenching in Gallipoli," tells the story of that great disaster and the gallant part played by the boys of Newfoundland in the thickest of the carriage.

The Epidemic.

During Saturday and yesterday,
some eighteen cases of Spanish Influenza were admitted to Grenfell Hall Hospital. This would average nine cases for each day, which is not so bad, considering the highly contagious nature of the disease. One thing is noticeable, that is that the disease is being held in hand, and has not, as yet, shown any signs of developing into a plague. All people have to do is to follow the instructions given by the medical authorities. It is a pity that there are a great number of local know-alls, who claim to possess greater knowledge than the whole world-combined medical fraternity, the results of whose investigations are as nothing compared to the encyclopaedic wisdom of these brainy people.
No deaths occurred at the Hall yesterday. Since the opening of the G. H.
Hospital, 135 patients have been admitted. A few of the patients were very ill last night.
A message to the City Health Officer,
Dr. Fraser, from Mr. D. Glavin, stated that ten deaths had occurred at Fortune Harbor, and asking that a doctor be sent. Forty cases were reported at Grate's Cove, and four deaths. Two deaths have occurred at Ferry's Cove, and five at Lark Hr.
One case is reported at White Rock,
T.B.; two at Hickman's Hr.; one at Burgoyne's Cove, and 34 at Britannia.

Unique Service.

Montreal, October 20.—A religious event unique in the history of the city took place to-day when the priests of the various Catholic churches, owing to the epidemic, to receive the faithful in the churches, paraded the streets with the Sacred Host, thus bringing the Mass to the very doors of their parishioners. The approach of the priest and acolytes, was heralded
by a bell or by the blowing of a bugle,
and worshippers then came to the doors of their houses, kneel and received the priest's blessing.

Obituary.

MR. JOHN STEER.
Many of the grand old men of the Island are passing to their eternal rewards, and it is our sad duty to-day, to chronicle the passing of one of the chiefs of these. In John Steer, who entered into rest on Saturday evening last, the colony loses one of its most energetic loyalists: the city a prominent member of the mercantile body;
and his private circle of friends one who can never be replaced.
Mr. Steer was born at Torquay,
England, on Oct. 9, 1824, making him 94 on the 9th of this month. He reached Newfoundland three years later, so that, as a writer put it, he narrowly escaped being a Newfound-lander. He was educated in the schools of his adopted home, and here he learned the rudiments of a business in which he was to take an active part. He established the well-known firm of John Steer, from which grew up the present business of Steer Bros. He was amongst the earliest participants in the benefits of "Responsible Government." Mr. Steer
had been for a great many years actively and prominently connected with the Methodist Church, and the people of George Street Church will never forget the self-sacrificing work done
by him.
Mr. Steer married Miss Amelia
Ayre, sister to the late Hon. Charles R. Ayre, of Exeter, Eng. Three sons, Messrs. Frank, Charles and John, and one daughter, Mrs. Storey, survive him. To them the sympathy of the entire country goes out. In this expression the Telegram joins. The funeral took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the late residence of the deceased, "The Maples," Hamilton
Street, and was largely attended.

Personal.

Mrs. S. Killy left by yesterday's express for Boston, on a visit to her daughters Misses Kathleen and Mary.
Miss Gertrude Spurrell left for Boston by yesterday's express, to permanently reside there.
Mr. and Mrs. T. J. O'Brien, who had been visiting friends in the city, left by yesterday's express for their home
in Boston.
Rev. J. R. Sault was a passenger on to-day's express.
Mr. W. J. Walsh, M.H.A., who has been suffering from a severe cold, is now able to be about again.
Flo. Wheeler, who volunteered for services at the Grenfell Hall Hospital as an orderly, was removed to the Fever Hospital yesterday suffering from diphtheria.
Miss Renham arrived in the city

Gentlemen!

Have You Seen Our Window Display of Autumn Wearables?

If You have not, do so at your earliest. It will surely prove interesting. Let us tell You why:

Men's Wear, such as we are going to describe, is almost impossible for us to secure just now, and it is only keen foresight and early purchasing that enables us to put up such a complete display.

The downtown window contains NECKWEAR of every variety, and you will certainly say that you have never witnessed a smarter line. Every known shade is stocked by us, and the refined tone for which our Neckwear is noted, and that better-than-the-average look that it bears, brings us a class of customers that will not go elsewhere when seeking Neckwear.

Then our Prices---Mark them: 50c., 75c., $1.00, $1.25, $1.50.

Arrow Collars, all newest Shapes, 25c. each.

Seal Arrives.

The S. S. Seal, Capt. Randell, which has been doing the northern service to Battle Harbor, returned to port yesterday about 5 p.m. The ship brought a large cargo of fish and oil, and hauled into the wharf this morning. With what this morning to begin discharging. She was detained on her way south at Catalina, Port de Grave, Hr. Grace, Bay Roberts and other points landing crews who had taken passage by her. The crew of the ship were not permitted to go ashore at any of the ports called at, owing to the health regulations at present enforced. Winter has now set in on Labrador and heavy falls of snow had occurred at some places before the ship started south.

Leg Broken.

At 4.10 Saturday afternoon while opposite the East End Fire Hall, one of three young boys who were driving on a coopers car, owned by a man named Power, fell off and falling under the wheel had his leg broken. The lad's name was Ed. Churchill, son of Wm. Churchill, No. 5 Fleming St., a driver with Harvey and Co. Some of the men who had witnessed the accident immediately brought out a stretcher and tenderly putting the injured lad on it took him to the hall. An ambulance was phoned for and he was later taken to the General Hospital where he is doing fine.

Fogota Arrives.

The Fogota which was obliged to come on here owing to the prevalence of Spanish influenza at Placentia reached port yesterday afternoon bringing a large freight and the following passengers:—J. Mathieson, W. England, H. Yarn, V. Yarn, J. Evans, J. T. May, W. Barron, B. Walsh, G. Elford, P. Skeans, Capt. Rose, M. White, F. Fitzgerald, M. J. Murray, E. M. Hollett, W. T. Larning, F. Butler, J. Forsey, Miss Forsey, Mrs. Elford, Mrs. Snooks, Mrs. P. Moulton, Master Moulton, Miss Hanham, Miss A. Lee and Miss French.

The Holy City Lives.

(From the Los Angeles Times.)
The British seem to be the sort of crusaders the Holy City needs. There is now a standard-gauge railroad from Cairo to Jerusalem with regular freight and passenger trains daily. Likewise, nearly ten thousand natives—men, women and children—are making more money than they ever did before, through working on their own roads and highways, which were found in pretty much the same condition as when they were cut by the wheels of Job's chariot. The people of Palestine were without their staples of rice and sugar for almost three years, but now have ample stores of wheat. They are now not only living, but learning how to live in a broader and more ambitious form than they were ever able to realize before. The hosts of General Allenby were the real deliverers of the temple.

Well Protected.

We have been asked to say that the doctors and nurses at all the hospitals where influenza patients are being received for treatment are well protected and every possible precaution is being taken to prevent the disease from communicating itself to all those who attend the cases.

Epidemic Influenza.

VACCINE TREATMENT AND PREVENTION.

Enquiries are being made, is there not a vaccine with which to treat Epidemic influenza, and it has been noticed by the Toronto papers, that the University Laboratory has issued some vaccine to different parts of Ontario. Two weeks ago when vaccine was first spoken of, application was made from this Department to the Health Bureau of New York, for a supply as soon as possible. No answer has yet been received to this application, but it should come this week. As regards Toronto, the University there started the culture of organisms for the manufacture of vaccine, from a supply received from the Health Bureau of New York, so that the latter are the more likely to be first in the field. So far, the University of Toronto reports for 7,000 doses and this has been distributed to the towns in Ontario most severely stricken with the disease. However, acting on a suggestion from Mr. Morine, this Department has also made application to Toronto, and we will probably secure some at an early date.

Meanwhile the Health Department is issuing further instructions to the airports, as to means of prevention, and, as we cannot know too much about it or be too careful in the precautions taken, it is advisable that all should read the instructions again very carefully and keep strictly to the advice given. The church authorities deserve the thanks of the community for falling in line so readily with the suggestions given; and, it is to be hoped that the men will also absent themselves from the club rooms, billiard rooms, bowling alleys and any other enclosed space where poor ventilation is liable to contaminate the atmosphere.

LONDON, Oct. 26. German ships should not be set after the war to extend their share of the world's carrying trade and so profit by the losses which the government by means mainly naval have inflicted upon the ships of the Allies. The Council points out that any losses have been suffered by shipping companies at the hands of the Germans. Half of Germany's shipping is declared to be in neutral ports.

PARIS, Oct. 27.

A marked advance by the French in the sector between the Oise and Serre Rivers is recorded in the official communication issued by the War Office to-night. Numerous villages have been captured and at certain points the advance amounts to about five miles. Since Oct. 24 the number of prisoners taken by the first army has reached 3,700. In the booty taken by the army in the same period were twenty cannon and several hundred machine guns.

ROME, Oct. 27.

The official statement issued by the War Office to-night says the advance of our tenth army across the Piave in the area of the island of Grave di Pandopoli commenced at 6.45 o'clock this morning. The Italian troops on the right met with strong resistance. According to the latest reports after heavy fighting this resistance was overcome and the advance successfully commenced. On our left the British troops are advancing satisfactorily and have reached their first objective according to the programme, overcoming strong resistance.

LONDON, Oct. 27.

The Germans launched heavy counter attacks against the British south of Valenciennes to-day, but were repulsed with losses, Field Marshal Haig reports from headquarters to-night.

LONDON, Oct. 27.

It is understood in authoritative quarters that the Allied governments will not reveal their armistice terms until Germany has replied to President Wilson's last note. Premier Lloyd George and Foreign Secretary Balfour, accompanied by naval and military officers have gone to France.

BASEL, Oct. 27.

Austria's rejoinder to President Wilson's note is ready, according to Vienna papers. It was submitted to authorized parties to-day. It will be sent this evening, or to-morrow to Washington. It is couched in the most conciliatory terms.

LONDON, Oct. 26.

The German Government is not contemplating at the present time any further note to President Wilson, says an Exchange despatch from Copenhagen. It is probable that the Government will make a declaration in the Reichstag to the effect that Germany is awaiting the peace conditions of the Allies.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 27.

(By the A.P.)—Germany's answer to President Wilson's latest communication says the German government has taken cognizance of the answer by the president of the United States. The President is aware of the far-reaching things which have been carried out and are being carried out in the German constitutional structure, and the peace negotiations are being conducted by a people's government in whose hands rests both actually and constitutionally the power to make the deciding conclusions. The military powers are subject to it. The German Government now awaits proposals for an armistice which will be the first step towards a just peace as the President has described it in his proclamation. Signed SOLF.

TALK ON PRIVATION.

Are claims of sacrifice all fibes? I see around me men and dames who have much fat upon their ribs, and costly rags upon their frames. The finer silks and feathers still they flaunt, and wear fine linc upon their domes, and talk of how the wolf of want is howling by their humble homes. We eat as much as in the times when peace was here, with all its charms, before the Prussians beastly crimes led Uncle Same to take up arms. And when we've stowed away a steak, and packed some pie and pudding down, we think we've made some tyrant quake because the bread we ate was brown. The clothes we wear, it seems to me, are just as gaudy as they were before our boys went o'er the sea to fill the air with German fur. We're just as keen to blow the moon as though we hadn't any foes; we take in every brand of fun from prize fights down to movie shows. We talk as though our souls were set on putting Wilhelm on a crutch, but have you seen a fellow yet who looks as though he'd suffered much? We'll talk of sacrifice, no doubt, until the morn of peace has dawned; and meanwhile every loyal scout should miss no chance to buy a bond.

General Haig A Great Leader.

A rumor, probably baseless, has been circulated to the effect that Sir Douglas Haig is to be retired at his own request, and this gives the New York Times an opportunity to pay tribute to the British Field Marshal. "Modest and indifferent to fame," it says, "he will be reckoned among the great commanders of the greatest war in history." This is no more than the truth. Sir Douglas Haig has had a task that is one of the greatest ever laid on the shoulders of one man. Yet he has not weakened under it. So far as we may judge from the frequent photographs we have seen of him, his face shows little sign of the terrific strain he has been under since Lord French retired and left him in charge of the British armies. Often he is seen smiling, as if he is in the very prime of life, and looks younger. He has been described as a "consummate horseman," and his daily rides, which have been but rarely interrupted for many years, may probably explain the slight slope of his shoulders. Correspondents say that he is as fit physically as any man in his army.

As the Times remarks the wonder is that he has gone through this ordeal with a sound brain and a strength apparently unimpaired, for since 1915 there have been three commanders of the French army. Rarely indeed does he permit any sign of emotion to escape him, and this made all the more memorable his message to the British army on Sept. 10, when he thanked it for its valor and devotion in these words: "The capture of 75,000 prisoners and 750 guns in the course of four weeks' fighting speaks for the magnitude of your efforts and the magnificence of your achievements." He said that the army had passed through many dark days, but, "Praise God, these never will return." It is not of ten that this great soldier speaks the name of God, except when he attends the little Presbyterian Church near his headquarters every Sunday morning. Anything more different than his orders to his army and those issued by the German Kaiser it would be hard to imagine. Haig never promises much, never indulges in threats. He performs and then tersely reports.

The Times says that with his fellow corps commander, Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, Haig more than once saved the British army in the retreat from Mons. It was on that occasion, according to the historian, Major Ernest W. Hamilton, that 100 Victoria Crosses were earned for every one that was given. Haig and Smith-

Dorrien vied with each other in fighting rear-guard actions, each one as desperate as any forlorn hope, and the final escape of the army was hardly short of a miracle. On one occasion Haig said: "We shall have to hold on here for a while if we all die for it," and hold on they did, those Glorious Contemptibles. On another occasion Haig and his little escort of the 17th Lancers rode back along a road where shells were falling thick and fast for no other reason than to encourage his men, the place of a general being behind the line. He stood with Sir John French near Gheluvelt, after the order to retire had been given, and to him came the messenger that it was the Germans who were in retreat. This was the time when Sir Charles Fitzclarence with the Worcester Regiment stemmed the enemy advance and turned the tide of battle.

"Lucky" Haig the Marshal used to be called in the army, because of his rapid promotions, partly, and because he was a favorite at Court and in Mayfair. It was through the influence of the general Duke of Cambridge that he secured his commission after he had been rejected through defective eyesight. Lord Roberts saved him from drowning in the Modder River. But luck does not explain his career. He is a great soldier, and more than that, a soldier's soldier. It is said that when it became generally known in the army that Lord French, then Sir John French, was to retire, there was but one man on the soldiers' lips when the question of his successor was discussed, and the name was Haig. He is loved by the men because he knows the men. Only a commander would have dared to issue that famous "back to back" order. Only a British army could be trusted with the admission that the case was so desperate. What followed proved what British valor could do when called on for the supreme effort by a trusted leader.

Didn't Know he was Running.

(From the Louisville Courier-Journal.)
"I was talking to my colored man of all work the other day," said James Yates Mellen of Cleveland, "and I asked him if he went to church every Sunday," he said. "Are you a member?" "Yesuh." "What church?" "Presbyterian." "Do you believe in the doctrine of election?" "Yessuh." "Do you think I am elected to be saved?" "Law, Mr. Mellen, I didn't wot' know you all was a candidate."

When you want Sausages, why-get ELLIS'; they're the best.
