CHAPTER XXVIII.

"I didn't mean to offend you, my dear," she says, conciliatingly. "I am sorry—no, I am not sorry that it is broken off. I can't say that; but I am sorry that you have met him."

"Ah! so am I," retorts Paula, with a heavy sigh. "And—now I think I will go to bed. It is late, isn't it?" with a glance at the clock on the mantel-shelf.

"Won't you have something—a cup of tea?" says Alice, suggesting the feminine comforter.

But Paula laughs wearily.

"No, Alice; even a cup of tea would be useless. If—!"—throwing up her white arms with a despairing gesture—"if I could be only sure of sleeping, and—forgetting; but"—and she covers her eyes with her hands—"I know I shall not! I shall lie all night through thinking! Oh, Heaven! if it were not wicked to wish oneself dead!"

Alice stands and turns pale, awed into silence by the outburst of hopeless despair.

"You will—will get over it," she says, weakly.

"Shall I?" says Paula, dropping her hands and staring at her face in the glass. "Perhaps so. Oh, yes. One gets over" so many things. Don't they say it is impossible to die of a broken heart? It doesn't matter; my heart is not broken, but"—and she puts her hand to her side with a strange gesture—"it feels as if it were bruised and beaten."

There is silence for a moment. Alice still looking at her with that mixture of pity and curiosity in the blue eyes which it is well Paula did not see or notice.

"Are you there still?" says Paula, raising her eyes. "Please go and leave me. I—! shall be quite well by the morning," and Alice goes out quietly.

She pauses outside the door to listen, with a strange look on her face, a look almost of fear, and her face pale.

"She—she won't do anything rash!" she murmurs. "No! Paula is not the

NOW RAISES 600 CHICKENS

After Being Relieved of Organic Trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Oregon, Ill.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for an organic trouble which pulled me down until I could not put my foot to the floor and could scarcely do my work, and as I live on a small farm and raise six hundred chickens every year it made it very hard for me."

"I say the Compound article in our paper, and tried it. It has restored my health so I can do all my work and I am so grateful that I am recommending it to my friends."—Mrs. D. M. ALTERS, R. R. 4, Oregon, Ill.

Only women who have suffered the tortures of such troubles and have dragged along from day to day can realize the relief which this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, brought to Mrs. Alters. Women everywhere in Mrs. Alters' condition should profit by her recommendation, and if there are any questions write Lydia E. Pinkham's Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. The result of their 46 years experience is at your service.

girl to do that. But—but—it has told upon her awfully. I wonder how the major arranged it? How clever he must be! Poor Paula!"

CHAPTER XXIX.

"No, I am at home to no one. Tell them I'm out, ill, dead, what you like, only keep them from bothering me; and oh, do, pray do, take some of those flowers out of the room. They seem to stifle me; I believe they are swallowing all the air I want."

And Flossie pauses in her restless pacing of the room to throw up her arms wearily—white arms from which the lace falls as she lifts them, like drapery from a statue.

It is two days since Sir Herrick sent the little note into the greenhouse; two days since he left London, and she has heard nothing. Flossie, unaccustomed to suspense of any kind, the pampered favourite of the hour, for whom all things are made smooth and easy, has borne the first day's suspense very well. It is true she has scarcely eaten anything, and has been listless and restless by turns, snubbing even the faithful Weston; but as the evening of the second day approaches and no sign comes to tell her how her plot has worked, Flossie's spirit begins to wax impatient. Anything was better than this silence.

Has he explained everything to this country girl, and has she accepted him and made it up, or has he left her, and is he coming back to her—Flossie?

That is the question; and as she asks it of herself repeatedly the suspense grows intolerable.

Intolerable seems the dainty room, in which not one spot or article but is in perfect taste; intolerable is even the reflection of her own pretty face in the Venetian mirrors, and then stands and looks at her mistress with an anxious expression, tempered with admiration.

Never has the maid seen her mistress look more bewitchingly beautiful than she does this evening. In ordinary, Flossie is rather too pale; but this evening, there is a dazzling touch of carmine in the clear cheeks, and a brilliant light in her restless eyes.

She is dressed in one of the new tea-ropes, a loose garment that yet in some subtle way manages to indicate the supple form; its colour is of a dainty shell-like pink; there is soft lace at the throat and falling from the short sleeves; a model of airy, dainty, fawn-like beauty, fit for the case of an Ety. But Weston's admiration is tempered with anxiety.

"Do you feel hot, miss?" she asks.

"Hot? Yes, and cold, too, by turns," says Flossie, with a sharp sigh. "At one moment the room seems stifling, then, when I think I'll ask you to open the window, it feels too cold. It feels cold now," and she sinks on to the couch and draws her arms across her bosom.

Weston comes nearer and looks at her, with her under-lip caught in her teeth apprehensively. "If you can't take care, miss, you'll have one of those awful colds—one like you had last autumn. Shall I send down to the manager and tell him you won't play to-night?"

Weston comes nearer and looks at her head. "I won't disappoint them. I am not ill, only upset, and I sha'n't put them in a hole for that; just in the middle of the run of the piece, too. No, I shall be all right directly. Get the Bradshaw, and see whether there is any train from Powis to-night."

Weston finds the Bradshaw and proceeds to make the hunt with the usual knitting of the brows; but Flossie snatches the book out of her hand.

"How slow you are! I hate to see anybody bumbling over a Bradshaw. I don't think anybody understands it but myself. There! I beg your pardon, but you don't spell Powis with a B, and that is where you are looking. Yes, there is a train at nine o'clock. Perhaps he will come by that. Put it away again and let me have some tea, and tell them to put some more green in it. Bad for me? Yes, of course it's bad for me; I don't know anything that isn't bad nowadays. But I'll have what I want, whether it's bad or good," and Weston goes out with a sigh to fulfil her mistress's commands.

But when the tea comes the imperious mistress declares that she doesn't want it, and it is only by dint of much persuasion on Weston's part that she is prevailed upon to drink a cup and eat a thin wafer.

"I'm afraid you'll be ill, miss," says Weston, prophetically. "You've had no dinner to speak of; won't you lie down and rest; there's quite half-an-hour before you need dress for the theatre."

"Lie down and rest!" echoes Flossie, impatiently. "You speak as if I had broken my leg, or was just recovering from a long illness. I hate lying down and resting. Another hour, is it? I wish it was time now. After all, there is nothing like work. What is it the man says in that book Sir Herrick"—her face flushes at his name—"let me? Something about labour being the best way to forget one's troubles. Well, I think he's right. Anyway, I never feel so happy as when I'm at work. I'll come and try over those new songs," she says, jumping up, and narrowly escaping overturning the fragile tea service.

She goes to the piano, and her bird-like voice etoain etoain etoain she soon warbles of it.

"It is no use. I can't sing. It is to be hoped I shall sing better than that to-night, or there'll be no encores and plenty of hissing."

Weston laughs reassuringly.

"If you were to stand before them and go through your part in dumb show, they'd encore it, Miss," she says, confidently.

"I think they would—the fools!" says Flossie, scornfully. "No, no, I won't call them that; they have been good friends to me. I wish—and her voice falters—"I wish I'd stuck to them altogether, and made no other—friends. Isn't it time now? At any rate, I'll go up and dress," and she goes out of the room with a listless sigh, her tea-robe draping round her like the pink threads of an orchid.

"Tell them," she says to Weston, as she steps into her carriage, "tell them to keep Sir Herrick, if he comes, and I happen to be late. They are to take in some cigars and brandy-and-soda, or champagne, and to tell him that I want to see him particularly. But he won't come to-night," she adds, inaudibly; "I feel that he won't."

She is very silent and very talkative by turns on the way to the theatre; but when they arrive there, and she sees the crowd waiting outside the door, her face brightens.

"After all, the man is right," she murmurs, with a hard, dry laugh; "there is nothing like work, nothing."

And as if to prove it, to herself at rate, she plays to-night as, they say,

"Orange Lily Saved My Life"

These words, or expressions having the same meaning, are contained in hundreds of the letters I have received during the past year. Many were from women who had suffered agonies from falling of womb; others from women who had escaped dangerous surgical operations, as the tumors and ulcers had been removed by the action of Orange Lily; and others who had suffered from suppressed menstruation, leucorrhoea, painful periods, etc. For all these and the other troubles known in general as Women's Disorders, Orange Lily furnishes a positive, scientific, never-failing cure. It is applied direct to the suffering organs, and its operation is certain and beneficial. As a trial actually proves its merit, I hereby offer to send, absolutely free, a box worth 45c, sufficient for ten days' treatment to every suffering woman who will write for it. Enclose 3 stamps. BIG STRIKE THREATENED.
LONDON, Feb. 12. The question of the nationalization of Great Britain's mines must be decided outside of Parliament, in view of the Government's refusal to act, Vernon Hartshorn, Labor member from Glamorgan, declared in a statement to the Evening News to-day. "In my opinion we shall be in the thick of a national strike in six weeks," the Labor member is quoted as saying. "If it comes to the question of striking for an increase in wages and nationalization, I think it will be for nationalization."

Prince Albert Made a Mason.

In the presence of a large number of distinguished brethren, including his elder brother, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, H.R.H. Prince Albert was, on Tuesday evening, December 2nd, 1919, along with his equerry, Surgeon Lieutenant-Commander Louis Greig initiated into the Craft at an emergency meeting of the Navy Lodge, No. 2,612, of which the late Grand Master, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales (King Edward VII.) was W.M. from its foundation in 1896 until he ascended the throne in 1901.

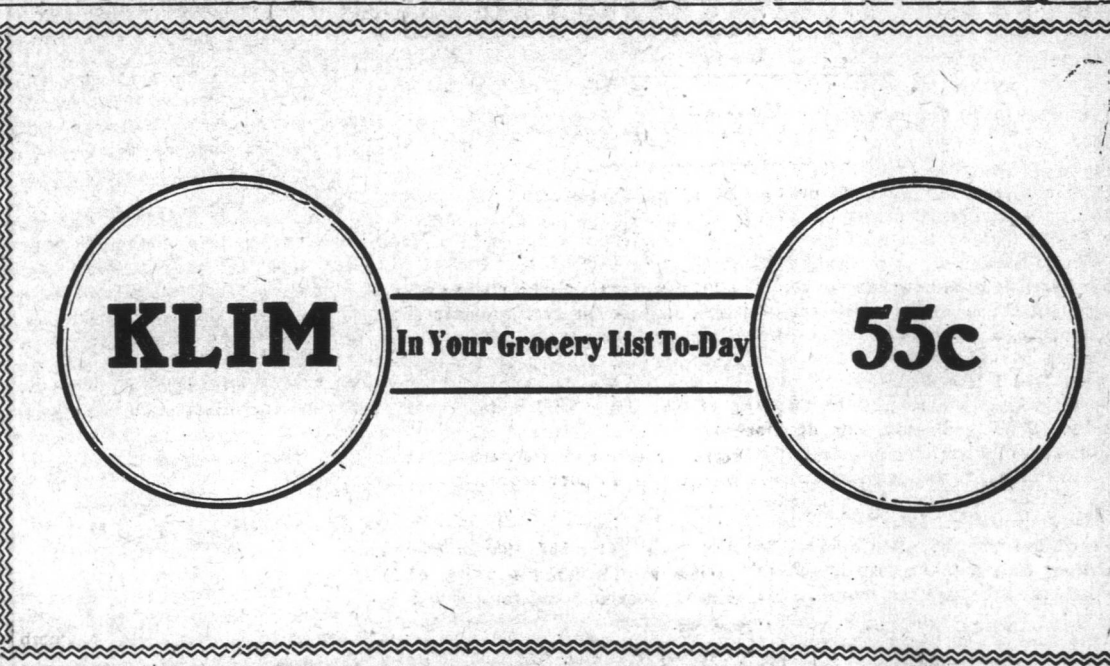

Owing to the absence of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, Grand Master, through a chill, the ceremony was performed by the Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Lord Amptill, assisted by the W.M. of the Lodge, Bro. Vice-Admiral John B. Eustace; an address to the candidates being delivered by the Deputy Grand Master, Bro. the Right Hon. T. F. Halsey. There were also present Bros. the Earl of Donoughmore, P.G.W., Grand Master of Ireland; Brig-General G. Gilmour, Grand Master Mason of Scotland; Viscount Cave, S.G.W.; the Right Hon. Sir Horace Brooks Marshall, J.G.W.; W. F. Hamilton, K.C., G. Registrar; Sir Alfred Robbins, President of the Board of General Purposes; P. Colson-Smith, Grand Secretary; James Stephen, President of the Board of Benevolence; J. S. Granville Grenfell, G.D.C.; and W. Yeo, G. Tyler.

At the dinner which followed the initiation ceremony, the W.M. proposed "The King and the Craft," and in doing so expressed appreciation of His Majesty's graciousness in permitting his second son to become a member of the Craft.

The W.M. also proposed the toasts of "The M.W. the Grand Master of Ireland; Brig-General G. Gilmour, Grand Master Mason of Scotland; Viscount Cave, S.G.W.; the Right Hon. Sir Horace Brooks Marshall, J.G.W.; W. F. Hamilton, K.C., G. Registrar; Sir Alfred Robbins, President of the Board of General Purposes; P. Colson-Smith, Grand Secretary; James Stephen, President of the Board of Benevolence; J. S. Granville Grenfell, G.D.C.; and W. Yeo, G. Tyler.

Bro. Lord Amptill combined his response with the proposal of the toast of "The Initiates." He said there was no snobbishness among Freemasons about the association of the King with the Craft. He mentioned as an interesting fact that the Prussian Imperial Family up to the time of the ex-Kaiser had been intimately associated with Freemasonry. Need he say more? The British Royal Family had also had association with the Craft, and he thought that the Lodge and Freemasons throughout the world would rejoice in the renewal of that association in the persons of the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert. One of the fundamental principles of the Craft was that of loyalty to the Sovereign of the native land of the respective bodies of Freemasons.

Bro. H.R.H. Prince Albert, in acknowledgment of a very cordial reception of the toast, addressed the Pro Grand Master, Grand Officers, Worshipful Master and Brethren, and proceeded: "I wish to thank you sincerely for the kind way in which you have drunk my health, and I can assure you how much I appreciate the cordial welcome you have given me on my initiation into Freemasonry. I have always wished to become a Freemason, but owing to the war I have had no opportunity before this of joining the Craft. All my life I have heard of Freemasonry, and though there has always been a certain mystery attached to it, I have learned that Freemasonry in this country have been a great help to the poor and friendless, and have been notable for the efforts on behalf of children. One can see by the great Masonic Institutions and Schools how successful their work has been in this cause, and I like to think that in the future

Can Women See Straight?

There were two little groups of three buttons on a certain woman's coat. Four of the appendages became detached, so that she had to stitch them on again, and when the job was finished she held up the garment and hesitatingly asked if the rows of buttons were quite straight? They were not. They were about as straight as an ice-cream in the sun remains pyramidal, and when the buttons were cut off and restitched by another woman, matters were obviously worse instead of better.

The incident goes to prove that there is something in the assertion made by some folk to the effect that women are naturally endowed with crooked lines of vision. It may be true or it may not, but there is certainly a big army of women who cannot develop "a straight eye" for doing various things, no matter how hard they try. It does not call for much thinking to show evidence of this.

If you go to any sports where there is ball-throwing, ring-throwing, shooting at a mark, a such like tests of "straight eye" skill, you will find that women are far less successful than men. Showmen with cocoanut-shies and similar things vastly prefer lady customers to men, because they take it as a matter of course that at least ninety-five per cent. of the former are "crooked eyed."

If a more homely illustration is required, just watch a woman cutting a few slices of bread, and mark how the loaf gradually becomes like a sloping hillside. There are dozens of women who have tried all their lives to cut loaves level, and who still confess their inability to do so, "because they haven't a straight eye."

So, too, with picture-hanging. A woman may hang a single picture straightly on a wall, but give her a dozen to hang in line and watch the result.

Well, it is an absolute fact that the majority of women walk very crookedly. If they are told to walk in a straight line for twenty yards, and a guiding mark is made between the

The Lynching Record.

In 1892 over two hundred persons were lynched in the United States. In 1918 there were only one hundred lynchings, and last year the lynchings had dropped to eighty-two. The Republic is evidently getting better. Even at that, however, there seems to be some room for improvement yet, especially in view of the fact that some of last year's victims to quote one American paper, were charged with nothing more serious than "talking too much, deceiving a mob, making boastful remarks, or discussing a lynching." Violent death is rather a severe penalty for verbosity or boastfulness or even for deceiving such high-minded persons as believers in mob rule. Perhaps some of the Washington senators who profess to be so greatly exercised lest America's constitutional rights should be infringed upon under the League of Nations covenant might be spending their time more usefully by devoting it to efforts to compel the maintenance of citizens' constitutional rights at home.—Sydney Record.

The Evangelists.

At Gower Street Church.

The subject "The Vampire or the Pearl" attracted great crowds at Gower Street Church last night, over a thousand persons being present. The song services have now become really enjoyable, owing to the persistent efforts of Mr. Demarest and the responsiveness of the audience. The solo "Often Had I Heard the Story," composed by Mrs. Demarest to the words of Dr. E. S. Buchanan, tells of the awakening of a soul dead in sin to the love of Christ. It was most effectively rendered by Mr. Demarest and made a deep impression. Rev. T. W. Atkinson offered prayer, after which the thrilling chorus "He's just the same to-day" rang through the church. The beautiful story, recorded in Luke 7, of the woman who was a sinner of the city and who found Christ in the Pharisee's house, was then read by Mrs. Demarest, and her address followed. She said in part: "Seest thou this woman? The Pharisee looked at her with withered and contempt. From those with which Jesus beheld her. Simon saw a lost woman of the streets, a vampire. His eyes were evil, his soul was unclean, and because her sinfulness condemned him he looked at her with hatred and contempt.

"The harshest condemnors of the sins of others are often the greatest sinners in their own hearts. "How different Jesus looked upon Mary. He saw in her a pearl of the greatest price. We read of the merchant who sold all he had that he might purchase a pearl. Christ is that merchant. He left the Father's house, the adoration of the angels,

He stripped Himself of His majesty, and humbled Himself even unto death that He might win the pearl of great price—your soul.

"Hidden beneath the slime and the mire, imprisoned by the oyster shell, the diver finds the pearl for which he risks his life. And so Christ, beneath the sins and the uncleanness of Mary's past life, saw a soul which could be made to shine pure and white as the stars for ever and ever, a soul which was worth to him more than the whole world.

"To-day in the centre of the city of Paris you find a magnificent church. As you step inside the gloom of its vaulted arches you are startled by a resplendent pure white marble statue of a lovely woman, with her hands outstretched. The figure seems to personify all the tenderness, love, ableness and sacredness of holy womanhood. It is a statue of Mary Magdalene. The church is the Church of the Magdalene. In the midst of that wicked, ungodly city of Paris that woman stands as a witness of the love of God and of the wonderful transforming power of the Lord Jesus.

"If there is a great sinner listening to me to-night—there are probably many—others may look upon you with contempt and disdain, but Jesus sees underneath all the vileness and foulness of your sins, your soul which He loves and which He purchased with His precious blood.

"What a striking scene in that Pharisee's house. The Pharisee gave a great banquet and invited honorable guests. He also invited Jesus, not because he loved Him or honored Him, or because he wanted to learn of Him. No, indeed! Pharisees do not need to learn; they think they know it all. He invited Him merely because the presence of the young prophet might be an added attraction. He patronized Jesus, and treated Him with contempt, pointedly omitting to perform the simplest courtesies of his day towards an honored guest, which were, as Jesus reminded him, the washing of His feet, the anointing of His head, and the kiss of welcome. He asked Jesus, not that he might give unto Him, but that he might get. It was to bring glory and added prestige to himself."

"How different was the attitude of the woman who gave her all, expecting nothing in return. That was why she gained all; Simon gained nothing, for "the rich thou hast sent empty away."

"In Simon we find the characteristics of every Pharisee: self-satisfaction, supreme selfishness, a cold, critical spirit, cynicism, hard-heartedness, and a judging and condemning attitude towards the sins of others. A Pharisee is always blind to his own sins, but oh, how quick to observe and condemn the sins of others! There was no pity in his heart, no kindness; but, adding sin to sin, he disguised his real feelings with the hypocritical words, "Master, say on." What a hateful man! He was in one world, whereas Christ and the woman were in another. They had nothing in common.

"How different was this woman, this sinner of the city. Look at her sublime courage in coming to this banquet uninvited. She risked her all, for she was an outcast. It was an act of desperation. She lost all, and therefore she gained all. Her selfishness and humility were the secret of her heroism.

"Note her genuine repentance—not merely sentimental tears, but she did the "works meet for repentance." She did all she could. She washed His feet with her tears and wiped them with her hair, and then anointed them. The box of alabaster ointment was worth a vast sum of money. She probably spent her last dollar to purchase it. It was for Him. Nothing was too good for Him. She knew what He was. Her eyes were not blinded by self-love and conceit, as were the Pharisee's. Repentance had taught her His matchless worth. She was not one to count the cost. Her sins had been great; her repentance was greater. Jesus could appreciate the gift that she offered Him, the gift of her heart's love and adoration, as expressed in those kisses pressed upon the feet which were to be pierced for her salvation, and in that costly anointing. Her sins, which are many, are forgiven, for she has loved much."

With tense fervor Mrs. Demarest exclaimed: "Much rather would I be that poor woman, with her awful, bitter past, than the cold, hard, proud Pharisee. His ears did not hear the music of Christ's words, 'Thy sins are forgiven thee. Thy faith has saved thee. Go in peace.' The whole work of salvation in a moment! She was justified—'Thy sins are forgiven thee'; she was saved—'Thy faith has saved thee'; she was sanctified—'Go in peace.'"

"There are only two classes of sinners. They are represented by the Pharisee and the Publican. Which do you belong to? The Pharisee cannot be saved. Jesus warned them that the harlots and Publicans should enter the Kingdom before them. Only the sincere, the real, the honest, who own up to the fact of their sinfulness and their need of a Saviour can be saved."

Her entreaty for confession of sin and to repent was so heart searching that many went to the altar seeking forgiveness, and we trust felt at peace with God through the merits of a Crucified Saviour.

Mr. Demarest announced that prayer meetings are being held at 12.30 every day, and that the subject to-night would be "Peter's Demand of Our Lord." To-night's service will be the last this week. Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock Mrs. Demarest speaks to men only at Wesley Church. The West End men have not had a fair chance to get to the services in time. This will give them an opportunity.

"San Toy."

The Casino was again filled last evening to witness the third performance of the opera San Toy, and judging by the applause given the performance, it is being very much appreciated by the audience. The acting of Dr. Howlett as the Emperor, and Mr. A. R. Stanfield as Yen Hw was splendid, while Mr. Harold Foster as Li, the comedian, kept the audience in roars of laughter. The singing of Mr. Gus Summers and Mr. Fox also brought great applause. San Toy, which is taken by Mrs. E. Ring, is faultless, and her singing is delightful. Miss Mary Ryan as the young English lady, charmed us with her singing. Miss Ida Howlett as Dudley, the lady's maid, was so natural, that she took the audience by storm. Capt. J. J. O'Grady as the British Consul, is also good. The choruses were well rendered, and with the magnificent costumes the performance is delightful. San Toy will be repeated again to-night, with a matinee and evening performance to-morrow.

She has a carrying capacity of 600 tons and is calculated to be able to bring in about 20,000 seals. Before coming here she will be heavily sheathed in preparation for the seal hunt.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

A TOUCHING LETTER.

RUTH CAMERON

I have a very touching letter from a reader friend. "I have just lost my mother," she writes. "I have been her constant companion for years, we two living by ourselves. "On the big things I feel that I did all I could, but the little things, the little impatient word or action! Oh Miss Cameron, plead with your readers to watch the little things, the sharp word which hurts so, or the little act. I gave up my side to her, staying with her constantly—she had been very feeble for a year. I looked after her comfort, but oh, if I could only see her and ask her forgiveness for the little reports which at the time seemed nothing but, now that it is too late, seem so big. "The little things, the little acts that we regret so—plead with your readers to be more careful about them, lest they, too, suffer as I am suffering."

Shall We Listen?

Do you remember the story of the rich man and Lazarus, the beggar, and of how the rich man beseeched Abraham to be allowed to go back and warn his brothers of the torment he had brought upon himself? And of how Abraham answered, "If they hear not Moses and the prophets neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead."

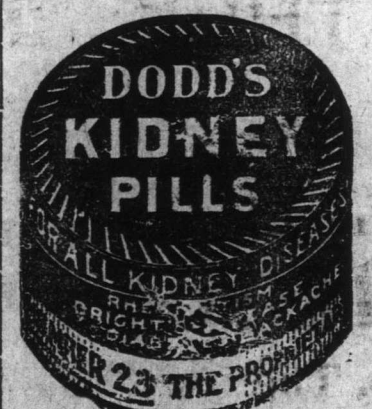

We have in this letter someone speaking out of the hell of remorse and warning us how to save ourselves from it.

Shall we listen?
Or shall we justify Abraham's warning.

I suppose there are thousands of people who read this who are doing just what this woman did—looking after the comfort of the loved one, giving up their lives to his or her, doing all the big things, and at the same time constantly wounding in the little ways.

Of Course It's Hard—And For Them, Too.

It is very hard, I know, to live with anyone for years and not become chafed by the constant contacts. And it is very easy, I know, to let oneself get impatient with old people. They move so slowly; very likely they don't hear easily; or, if the ears are all right, the brain may be a little slow of hearing; they say the same things over and over; they seem narrow in their prejudices. It is very easy to be impatient and to justify oneself in that impatience. But it is not easy afterwards. The Next Best Way. The way I feel about it is this: One's ideal should be to let the real love that one feels heal one's nerves and sense of impatience. One should promise oneself every morning to try to make this day perfect. But when one fails, as all but the strongest sometimes will, one should take the sting out by acknowledging one's fault. One should say to the dear old folks, "I have been cranky to-day. You'll forgive me, won't you?" And then they will freely forgive, bless their dear old hearts. You will be sorry, even so, that you were not kinder—one always is. But you will not have the stored-up misery of years of sharp words unapologized for, to haunt you.

A Ribbon of Time.

(From an Exchange.)
The Pope's characterization of the year 1919 as one of the worst in the history of humanity, may describe more closely than the ordinary observer at first realizes. The Serbs, according to a traveller who crossed their devastated country between invasions, seemed strangely unaware of the misery piled upon them at that moment: typhus, war losses, hunger, cold, exposure. They sang, worked and kept up their courage with strange facility. Thus do people of to-day fail to play or even wholly to comprehend the tragic part that humanity now fills. Some nations among the family continue fairly, well supplied with the needs of life, and find it easy to forget how some other lack these things. Then, again, the great changes take time to happen. The year 1919 in itself, was but a single picture on the cinematic ribbon of the time. In itself it formed but a slim connection between what had happened and could not be helped, and what threatened to happen and might be escaped. Thus the year 476, in which the Roman era ended and the Dark Ages began, had probably little to distinguish it at the time from the years that preceded and followed. Those who lived it may not have sensed it as a particularly evil moment. That year in itself was supportable to most men, and a great number found life in 1919 pleasant. It stands against the year, though, that those who knew most of its material gifts were those who did or had done least to deserve them. The predatory profiteer, whether of capital or of dictatorial labor, the spendthrift, whether in dollars or in millions, had their triumph over the industrious, the thrifty, the well behaved and the wise. And for their advancement the world is set back. The world knows no lost motion.

Fads and Fashions.

Pineapple is an aid to digestion. It is best to flavor cream before whipping. Make an overtired child rest before it eats. Onion skins boiled in stock will add a nice color. Macaroni should be cooked in boiling salted water. In planting a garden be sure to choose lilacs first. Always, in cold weather, dry the hands thoroughly. Rhubarb should always be cooked in a porcelain kettle. A good bread pudding may be made with only one egg. Soak chocolate stains in kerosene and wash in cold water. Raisin sauce is excellent served with a very plain pudding. Ammonia poured on iodine spots will remove them immediately. Warm stockings are the best remedy for noses red with cold. Every room in the house should have an inexpensive thermometer. When you are ironing a garment, iron every portion until it is dry. If lead pipes freeze in the house, don't thaw them out too suddenly. Sorrel is an excellent kind of greens to use instead of spinach. When clothes are hung out to dry, pin them so the wind can fill them. When no dessert is served, people should eat more of the first course. If the oven is too hot, a basin of water placed in the bottom will cool it. A revolving chair on casters is extremely handy in the sewing room. Wood ashes are good for removing flower pot stains from window sills. A little borax added to the starch will prevent it from sticking to the iron. Most important in the making of good coffee is to use the water at the first boil. Do not put a lid on the cabbage pot and there will be no odor of boiling cabbage.

THE PROTECTING FLAG.

It's the laughter of the children that Old Glory guarantees. It's the safety of our women on the land and on the seas; It's the little homes we're building and the peace that evening brings That the Flag above is shielding, and a thousand other things. Oh, don't you catch the vision that is shining through its folds? Can't you see the glorious future that our Starry Banner holds? Don't you see the glad to-morrows for this nation of the free And the happy men and women that your children are to be? You shall never know contentment 'save the Flag is over head, If you turn from it and scorn it you shall dine on bitter bread. It's your promise to your children that when you are dead and gone They shall have a wise protector and in safety journey on. Guard the Flag that flies above you, true to God and true to man, Stand forever at its service, deaf to every cruel claim! For there is no dream you cherish, and no deed you hope to do, But Old Glory in its beauty guarantees to yours and you.

WINTERLESS.
Some countries have no weather embracing ice and snow; for twelve long months together the balmy breezes blow; and sometimes when I'm weary of sultry skies and dreary, and chill winds, sad and eerie, I to such lands would go. I'd dodge the wintry rigors and atmospheric crimes; but when I think of chiggers, which haunt the sunny climes; and there the skeeters carry their drills and raise old Harry, and I resolve to tarry at home and write my rhymes. In summertime I'm lazy, and have no pep or vim; and I feel tired and crazy, and weak in every limb; I spend the long day resting, files in my whiskers nesting, and all my soul's protesting when I must write a hymn. If I were camped where breezes are always soft and mild, my verses would be cheeres, and readers would be riled; for he who'd do some trilling and earn an honest shilling must feel his pulse thrilling with pep and vigor wild. The wintry winds are wailing throughout the bitter night, and chunks of snow are sailing around me as I write; but cold is stimulating; with zeal that's unabating my deathless pomes I'm crating; my energy's a sight. The right hand man of Premier Clemenceau is known to French politicians as Mons. St. Mandel, although this gentleman's father is known as M. Rothschild. Mandel has proven so powerful that deputies see him instead of Clemenceau and one of the former presidents of the French republic has had to wait in his ante-room. The Parisians know him as "a man who never sleeps, never eats, never drinks, never writes anything, has no interest in women, and takes the telephone to bed with him."

The First Plebiscite.

Schleswig-Holstein, until the signature of the Peace Treaty, a Province of Prussia, lies between the North Sea and the Baltic. Schleswig was annexed to Denmark in the 11th century, and later became an independent state under Danish suzerainty. At the end of the 14th century it was attached to Holstein. In the years 1848-50 it unsuccessfully rebelled against Danish rule, but was severed from Denmark by Austria and Prussia in 1864. In 1866 Prussia defeated Austria, and the former absorbed the two duchies. Kiel, Germany's chief naval station on the Baltic Sea, is a town of the province. The inhabitants are more or less Danish in their manners and customs, and were uncomfortable and discontented under the rule of Germany.

Section Four of the Peace Treaty, relating to the future of the united provinces, always claimed by Denmark as having been filched from her, provides as follows:

"The frontier between Germany and Denmark will be fixed by the self-determination of the population. Ten days from the signing of peace, German troops and authorities shall evacuate the region north of the line running from the mouth of the river Schlei, south of Rappell, Schleswig and Friedrichstadt, along the Elder (river) to the North Sea south of Tønning; the workmen's and soldiers' councils shall be dissolved; and the territory administered by an international commission of five, of whom Norway and Sweden shall be invited to name two. The Commission shall ensure a free and secret vote in three zones. That between the German and Danish frontier and a line running south of the island of Alsens, north of Flensburg and south of Tondern in the North Sea, north of the island of Sylt, will vote as a unit within three weeks after the evacuation. Within five weeks after this vote, the second zone whose boundary runs from the North Sea, south of the island of Fehr to the Baltic south of Sygum will vote by communes. Two weeks after that vote, the third zone, running to the limit of evacuation will also vote by communes. The International Commission will then draw a new frontier on the basis of these plebiscites, and with due regard for geographical and economic conditions. Germany will renounce all sovereignty over territories north of this line in favor of the Associated Governments, who will hand them over to Denmark."

Such are the terms of the Peace Treaty, guaranteeing the right of self-determination to the peoples of the Danish provinces forcibly taken by Germany in the year after the war with Austria. The first plebiscite has been taken, and the figures received, according to the Canadian Press despatches, indicate an overwhelming majority for a return to Danish

CONFESSION OF FAILURE.

Yesterday the following letter was sent out by order of the Advisory Board, to the fish exporters of the country:—

February 11, 1920.

Sirs,—

I have the honour and have been instructed to inform you that a cablegram has been received from Hon. W. F. Coaker, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, from Alicante, advising the Advisory Board to strongly urge the Trade to place what cargoes that are now at Oporto or Gibraltar in the hands of Messrs. Hawes & Co., Ltd., to do the best possible as to the disposal of some, owing to the unsatisfactory conditions of the Spanish and Portuguese markets, and strongly advises to cease sending further cargoes to these two markets during the next month or two.

The disposal of cargoes placed in the hands of Messrs. Hawes & Co., Ltd., to the Italian Consorzio, in Mr. Coaker's opinion, is by far the most profitable way of disposing of fish at the present time.

This information, coming from the reliable source of Mr. Coaker, who is now in the market, the Trade can appreciate, and the Advisory Board strongly urges that they co-operate in this matter.

It is further suggested that proposed shippers will have their Charter Parties so arranged that they will be in a position to have their vessels, if necessary, diverted to Italy.

I have the honour to be,
Sirs,
Your obedient servant,

H. V. HUTCHINGS,
Secretary.

administration in the first zone of voting, viz., "that between the German-Danish frontier and a line running south of the island of Alsens, north of Flensburg and south of Tondern to the North Sea, north of the island of Sylt." It is rather interesting to note that the country districts went Danish, the towns, no doubt because of a preponderating Teutonic influence, voting in favor of Germany. The majority, however, have shown plainly their desire for a return to Denmark, and there is no doubt that when the vote is taken in the other two sections the future status of the whole province will be determined as Danish.

To the Wives of the G. W. V. A.

All wives of the War Veterans, both Naval and Military, are asked to meet at Spencer College Hall, Bond Street, opp. Tobacco Factory, next Monday afternoon, Feb. 16th, at 4 o'clock. The Ladies' Executive Committee of the G.W.V.A. had hoped to send private invitations to each, but finding it difficult to ascertain exact addresses, and fearing that some would be overlooked, they ask all wives of War Veterans to kindly accept this form of invitation.

MRS. JONES, OF FOGO.
Mrs. Jones, mother of Rev. Dr. Jones, Rector of St. Thomas's Parish, passed away at Swampscott, Mass., U. S. A., on Wednesday, in January last, Rev. Dr. Jones was called away by his mother's illness, from which she unexpectedly recovered. This improvement, however, was but temporary and bronchitis set in. Four sons and three daughters are left. One son is in Detroit; one lives in Lynn and the third is in Boston. To them the Telegram extends sympathy.

A Few Milk Facts.

Seven-eighths of milk is nothing but water—all the value and nourishment being in the remaining eighth. All liquid milk contains bacteria which multiply rapidly unless refrigeration is resorted to. It is the bacteria in milk which caused it to sour. Bacteria common to milk increase only when moisture is present. No bacterial action can be discerned in milk powder containing a low percentage of moisture. "KLM," which is pure, pasteurized, separated milk in powdered form, contains only about two per cent of moisture. It sells at all up-to-date grocery stores for 55 cents per tin, which makes a full gallon of delicious rich milk. The particular advantage lies in the fact that you make only just what amount of milk you require for immediate use. KLM is not suitable for infant feeding.

Interviewed Government

Yesterday Rev. Dr. Curtis, Rev. Dr. Fenwick and Mr. Norman Burt, representing the Social Service Committee of the Methodist Conference, interviewed the Government in reference to its policy regarding the importation of Tanlac. The position, as given by the Prime Minister to the Telegram, is this: Upon the recommendation of the Social Service Committee, the late Government decided to prohibit the importation of Tanlac, and a letter giving the instructions was written. However, the letter was powerless to accomplish anything, as a proclamation must be issued before anything becomes law. Consequently, Tanlac was not prohibited. The object of this latest interview is to ascertain the policy of the new Government regarding the matter and to know if it intended to fall in line with the decision of the old. This decision will be arrived at and made known later.

Getting After Dope Vendors.
Summonses against three New Gower Street shopkeepers were issued yesterday afternoon. They are charged with selling essences which contain a percentage of alcohol greater than that allowed by law. Taken by the police under the direction of Inspector General Hutchings (to whom is due the congratulations of all) these are test cases and will no doubt have the effect of determining for good whether or not dope, as the obnoxious essences have come to be called, shall be imported into the country and promiscuously sold.

Bible Class Entertainment.

The body of the late Capt. John Cliff, M.C., was laid to rest in the Church of England cemetery at 3 p.m. to-day. Service was held at St. Thomas's Church, Rev. Dr. Jones conducting the ceremony. Attending the funeral were representatives of the Great War Veterans' Association and of other bodies of which the late soldier was a member.

Distribution of Prizes.

A large audience attended the distribution of prizes at the Anglican Church Virginia, last night. The Chairman, Rev. C. A. Moulton, in his opening address eulogized the good work done by the school. Recitations were given by Mrs. Rose Hammond and Master Reg. Hammond, after which the distribution of prizes took place. A speech was made by Mr. L. Colley, and following a song by the chairman, Mr. H. R. Cook, Superintendent, read the report on Sunday School work. The distribution of the Sunday School prizes being completed, Mr. L. Colley gave a splendid recitation. About 40 Sunday School pupils are in regular attendance, which speaks well for those in charge.

In Memoriam.

CAPT. JOHN CLIFF, M.C., ROYAL NEWFOUNDLAND REGIMENT.

(A Tribute by Captain Leo Murphy.)

"It is not a song in the street, and a wreath on a column, and a flag flying from a window. It is a thing very holy and very terrible, like life itself. It is a burden to be borne; a thing to labour for and to suffer for and to die for; a thing which gives no happiness and no pleasantness . . . but a life, an unknown grave, and the respect and hared heads of those who follow."

In the above words John Masfield describes this patriotism of ours, which gives the sons of the blood to the Empire, and makes sacrifice the Standard of Liberty may stretch forth triumphantly to the breezes of Heaven.

It seems only a few years ago that we saw the Cliff brothers on the old cricket pitch at Pleasantville; their clean bronzed faces and kahki duck symbolizing the spirit of their ancestors in their desire to help the old Gray Mother at her first call, and within another short period we saw the same familiar forms in the shadows of Edinburgh Castle, whether they had gone to complete their training. Sometime in June of the same year we saw Jack on the tented slopes of Stobs Camp in the smart attire of a Subaltern of the Cameron Highlanders; his brother, Cecil also receiving a Commission in "Ours" a week or so later. Then came the days of Gallipoli and France; the attack at Guedecourt when the gallant dashing Cecil went into action, and made the Supreme Sacrifice!

The whole period is full of reminiscences and glory. The ramparts at Ypres; the rendezvous at Poperinghe; the long walk along the Canal at Corbie—each has a memory of happy moments spent in an atmosphere of danger, daring and romance. To-night one of the Brothers sleeps peacefully near the remains of a large forest, where in pre-war days the older couples walked side by side through the leaf-strewn paths on Sunday afternoons. To-night the second of the family rests quietly in the native soil for which he fought and fought gallantly.

"Yes . . . he is gone . . . there is the message . . . see. The Son—the youngest son. So be it God. This is no time for tears . . . no time to mourn."

In the years to come, When we have done our work, and God's own peace With tranquil glory floods a troubled world, Why, then, perhaps, in the old hall at home, Our eyes . . . shall meet and gleam, and mark, Niche on the walls in sanctity of pride, His sword, his medal, and the cross he won, Yet never wore . . . That is the time for tears; for deep down Drawn from a well of love deep down . . . deep down; Deep as the mystery of immortal souls, That is the time for tears . . . not now. Not now!"

To-day we pay tribute to the passing of a gallant Officer and Soldier; we extend our sympathy to a family whose name has stood out prominently in the patriotic works of the war; we honour the memory of a comrade who has gone to join the vast Army of Warriors and has passed West into the Golden glow of the Sun. Set. May the earth rest lightly on him in the Valley of Shadows will be the prayer of his associates in the Royal Newfoundland Regiment.

In the beautiful phrases of Lawrence Blyton: "They shall not grow old, as we that are left grow old, Age shall not weary them, nor the years condemn, At the going down of the sun and in the morning We will remember them."

A Hint to Newfoundland.

(From the St. Paul Pioneer Press.)

If there is one article more than another in this day of inflated values for which high prices, by the law of diminishing power, can be justified, that article is wood. When we began mining the forests of this country we were a pretty small nation all but lost on the continent of its apparently inexhaustible resources. Now we are a big nation with little land remaining unoccupied. When we began destroying our standing timber we had 850,000,000 acres of it. Now, with our vastly increased population and increased demand, we have left but one-fourth of that timber acreage. Is it any wonder that lumber prices are going out of sight? Is it any wonder that publishers are becoming alarmed over the vanishing supply of pulpwood? What a pity and what an insane fury of recklessness is it that finds us now with three-fourths of our forests gone without provision for their renewal and still not a move on the part of Congress to save the country from utter depletion of its remaining forests upon which directly depends the living of hundreds of thousands and upon which all society leans for necessary articles, including the material for dwelling houses and furniture!

To-day's Messages.

MACKENZIE-KING ON THE TARIFF.

OTTAWA, Feb. 12. An immediate downward revision of the tariff on foodstuffs, as well as on machinery, to bring about greater production within Canada, together with an energetic campaign to get people back to the land, featured the address of Mackenzie-King, leader of the Liberal Party, to the Ottawa retail grocers at their annual banquet here to-night. Any revision of the tariff, however, King declared, must be carried out with the interest of all sections of the community in view. Only in that way could the present unduly high cost of living situation be overcome.

IN Danger OF DESTRUCTION.

MONCTON, N.B., Feb. 12. Word was received here this morning, through the manager of the N. B. Telephone Co., that the town of Woodstock is in great danger from a raging fire. The telephone office and Hayden's theatre are already destroyed and flames are spreading through the town.

HUNGARIAN DEMANDS.

PARIS, Feb. 12. The Hungarian Peace Delegation to-day handed to the Secretary of the Peace Conference a memorandum outlining the desires of the Hungarians. It insists upon the maintenance of historical Hungary, and asks for a plebiscite in disputed districts. It assured all rights to minorities in Transylvania.

ALLIES WILL INSIST.

LONDON, Feb. 12. The Allied Supreme Council, to-day, after discussing the situation arising from Germany's violent protest over the extradition demands, agreed on the question of insisting upon these demands, it was stated to-night.

OPERATIONS IN RUSSIA.

LONDON, Feb. 12. Pursuit by the Bolsheviks of remnants of General Denikin's forces into the Crimea, launching of an expected Red attack on the North Russian front in the Dvina sector, and conclusion of the Lettish operations against the Reds are pointed to by military observers as the most salient developments of the past weeks operations in Russia, as reported to the War Office.

GENERAL MARINE STRIKE.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 13. A general strike by sailors and dock workers is expected to begin next Monday at Rotterdam and Amsterdam. Crews of the Noordam and other steamers, which ply between Dutch and American ports, have refused to answer the muster call. All vessels now in port are endeavoring to put to sea before the strike starts.

MAY COMPROMISE.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 13. Any fair proposition put forward by President Wilson in the railway wage controversy will receive the serious consideration of the officers of the Brotherhood of maintenance and railway shop laborers, it was announced at headquarters here last night.

CANADA'S OFFER.

LONDON, Feb. 13. Particularly hearty cheers were given in the House of Commons last night when Austin Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, intimated that the Canadian Government desired to make contributions towards the relief of Central Europe.

DISCUSSING MATTERS.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 13. Negotiations of the Dutch Government with other neutrals regarding entry into the League of Nations have been without result, according to a Government statement to Parliament, which to-day will take under consideration Holland's participation. The statement says that neutrals could not make any general reservation, because Article One does not admit any. The Dutch Government's delay in submitting the measure proposing the entrance of Holland, is excused in the statement on the ground that the United States has taken no decision.

SOME ARMY YET.

PARIS, Feb. 13. The German army is still four hundred thousand strong, according to a report received by the Committee of Foreign Affairs yesterday from General Niessel, head of the Baltic Mission. In addition there are a hundred thousand policing forces, officers and non-commissioned officers. Germany also is well supplied with tanks, machine guns and air planes. In the neutral zone along the right bank of the Rhine, policing forces number fifteen thousand. General Niessel said that the German Minister of Defence is in the hands of the general staff, and that the German Government is capable, if willing, of obtaining execution of the treaty clauses by the country.

Supreme Court.

(Before Mr. Justice Johnson, in Chambers.) John Power vs. N. Andrews.—This is in reference to an ejectment. Mr. J. J. McGrath, for plaintiff; Mr. Gibbs for defendant. The matter was adjourned till this evening at 4.15. (Before Mr. Justice Kent.) United Towns Electric Co. vs. United Service Electric Co.—Mr. C. E. Hunt states the case for the plaintiff; James D. Cameron is called, sworn and examined, and is cross-examined by Mr. L. E. Emerson. The minute books and account books are put in evidence. Court took recess till 3.30.

Police Court.

For failure to clear the roof of her house of snow, a woman of Water St. was fined $2. Two men were charged with being doped and disorderly. They were fined $2 each. Two stowaways (particulars of whom will be found elsewhere) were each fined $5 or 10 days' imprisonment.

Constabulary School.

Inspector General Hutchings has inaugurated a school at the Central Fire Hall where the members of the Constabulary can receive instruction in reading and writing. At present 23 men are attending the class during their spare time and are making excellent progress under the tuition of Sergt. O'Neill. The Inspector General is to be commended upon his interest in the men over whom he is head.

To Visit Factories.

Mr. George Parsons, the automobile man, with three of his assistants, leave by the Kyle for New York, Boston and Philadelphia, where they will visit the factories of Ford, Briscoe and other automobile companies whose cars they handle in the King's Road garage. This will no doubt prove of great value to them in their future work.

Stowaways on Rosalind.

By the Rosalind, which left port at ten-thirty this morning, went two stowaways in the persons of Billie Murphy, the well-known newsboy, and his lieutenant, Hunt. They had hidden behind the ship's boilers and got as far as Cape Spear, when the excessive heat forced them out and they were immediately seen by members of the crew. Report being made to the Capt., he returned to port and Bowring's launch took the stowaways off when the ship was off King's Wharf. Constable Woodford was waiting at the pier and took them in charge. Crowds of amused spectators were there and could not but laugh at the grimy appearance of the two boys, who were coal black as a result of hiding near the boilers. At the Police Court Murphy explained that he, with his aid-camp, was on his way to Halifax where they were to spend a short vacation, returning, presumably, as they had gone. They were fined $5 each.

Long Life Secret.

"Long neck, long life," is an old saying. It probably relates to the danger of apoplexy for those with short, thick necks. Scientifically speaking, it is difficult to say what the signs of long life are. Lord Bacon, the great philosopher, said that he had questioned many very old people, and could not deduce any certain rules of living, diet, etc., that would lead to long life; but there were three marks or signs that were certain indications that their possessor, bar accidents, would live to be old—prominent veins, crowded teeth—as if they were too large for the mouth—and "stubble" hair, that refuses to be brushed into shape. Many, of course, say that moderation in diet is a great cause of long life. And yet the celebrated Countess of Desmond—who died of a fall from a tree at the advanced age of a hundred and forty—and the still more celebrated Old Parr, who lived to an age yet greater, probably led the same kind of life that everybody about them did. But perhaps Parr's case tells in favour of moderation; for he is said to have died of overmuch enjoyment of London hospitality when they brought him up to town to see Charles I. at the age of a hundred and fifty-two. William Harvey, the great physician, however, reported that it was change of air that killed him. He might have lived much longer, if they had only kept him to show to Queen Anne.

Passengers Made

GENTLEMANLY HUNS APOLOGISE.

At Southampton England, recently, a steward on board the "Adriatic" gave a Procs Association representative an account of an interesting event in which a couple of Germans figured prominently one evening in the dining-room.

Lord Grey, on behalf of the Merchant Seamen's Benevolent Fund, made a speech in which he extolled the services of the merchant seafarer during the war, and indicated that but for British efficiency at sea it would have been difficult for America to have entered the war.

During his lordship's remarks two Germans, seated together at a table, talked loudly and made it difficult for Lord Grey to be heard. They laughed in a sneering manner, and became noisily objectionable.

The passengers showed their anger at the behavior of the two men, and there were loud cries of "Be quiet," "Behave yourselves." The Teutons, however, persisted for some time in acting in an insulting way, and eventually they were removed.

So much did the passengers resent the conduct of these two individuals, that a kind of court-martial was afterwards formed to try them. The men were brought before this self-constituted body. They then became very sheepish and apologised.

Their verbal expression of regret was not considered sufficient, and later they signed a written apology, which was posted in the ship so that it could be seen by the passengers. Subsequently the two offenders went about in a very meek and humble fashion.

The Nova Scotia "Lumber King" says:

"I consider MINARD'S LINIMENT the best LINIMENT in use. I got my foot badly jammed lately. I bathed it well with MINARD'S LINIMENT and it was as well as ever next day.

"Yours truly, "T. G. McMULLEN."

The Swedish System Advocated.

From the Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—It is now over a year since I first pointed out the absurdities and inequities of the Prohibition law. In an attack of the influenza then prevalent, obliged me to discontinue the series of letters which I had planned, and when (in spite of the law) I had sufficiently recovered to continue them, I did not find a sufficient public interest to warrant me in taking up the cudgels again.

In one of my letters at the time, however, I indicated the evil consequences which even then I saw impending, and made the prophecy that before long I would no longer be "a voice crying in the wilderness," but that the whole community would be forced to admit the evil that had been wrought.

It gave me great satisfaction, therefore, to see that His Honour Judge Morris had publicly confirmed my view of the matter on Monday last. He declared that the present evil of "dope" drinking, directly caused by the Prohibition law, had brought about a state of affairs much worse than that which Prohibition had been aimed at, and that some of those who had been most energetic in passing the law and ruining the trade of the publicans, were now reaping large profits from the wholesale distribution of the deadly "dope," for which so many of our citizens, deprived of honest liquor, have acquired a craving. There is no man in the country better qualified than His Honour to judge of this matter, both on account of his unequalled opportunities for observing actual conditions and of his ability, experience and common-sense. His well-considered statement on the subject cannot be lightly disregarded.

The Judge's remarks have already had the excellent result of occasioning considerable discussion in the press and elsewhere. Of the comment that has come to my notice, the news alone recommends the right enforcement of the law, both the Herald and The Post asserting that radical amendments are required.

This is an encouraging sign, and the most apt part of the argument is that no papers so antagonistic politically could be in substantial agreement on the Prohibition question. It gives rise to the hope that both parties will cooperate to remove the indefensible act of 1916 from the Statute Book, and replace it with some sane and practical measure settled by mutual agreement. There is of course, no means of knowing whether The Post and the Herald represent the views of the Government and Opposition chiefs respectively, but presumably the articles in question would not have appeared without their consent.

Now we come to look for a substitute for Prohibition. I do not think the most pronounced "Anti" in the country would favour a return to the open bar. If we can escape from the mire by any other means, we will not jump back into the frying-pan. Fortunately we are not confined to these alternatives. The name of the one logical and sane method of regulating the liquor trade is on everybody's lips nowadays. It is the Gothenburg or Swedish system.

The principle of this system is that, while drink is not regarded as evil per se, all sales and importations of liquor are made by the Government, under the present law, and that instead of licensing the vendor, as was done before 1917, the consumer is the one who has to obtain a license. The consumer is the person who gets drunk, neglects his family, and does all the things which "Prohibition" laws are made to stop; and this system places the wrongdoer himself under the direct and effective control of the State, instead of clumsily attempting to control private vendors, who often are un-tirely free from blame, but whose interest must always be to sell as much as possible.

The working of it would be roughly as follows:
(1) The Controller, as at present, to be the only legal importer and vendor. Branch dispensaries to be opened wherever necessary and all stocks certified pure by Government Analyst.

(2) All persons of not less than 18 years of age (or whatever the age may be), who have not within the year previous to the proclamation been convicted of drunkenness, vagrancy, or non-support of dependents, to be entitled on payment of (say) $5, to have licenses issued to them by the Department of the Controller (or the local magistrate.) Such licenses to be numbered in sequence, and every precaution taken against fraud.

(3) The license to entitle the holder to purchase liquors at a given dispensary up to a maximum of, say, two bottles of proof spirits per week.

(4) On conviction of holder for drunkenness, etc., license to be forfeited either permanently or for a period, at the discretion of the magistrate. Magistrate to have same discretion in case of information by dependents, alleging non-support.

(5) Heavy penalties to be prescribed in case of conviction for smuggling, illicit sale and manufacture, forging or improperly transferring licenses, and improper sales by dispensary employees.

These would be the essential features of the Swedish System as applied to this country. In my opinion its success would be made even more certain if:

(a) Ales and wines of low alcoholic content—say, not more than 10%—were exempted from its provisions, and sold without restriction. (There is practically no danger of drunkenness from this source, and it would relieve the Dispensaries of much work. The brewing of light beers harmed no one, and should be revised.) But all essences and other potable liquors with an alcoholic content above 10%, should be placed under the same restrictions as spirits.

(b) Liquors for the Controller were admitted duty free. The Controller could then sell good liquor cheaper than any smuggler or distiller could sell bad liquor, and still sell at such a profit as would materially increase the revenue and help to reduce taxation. Money would also be saved by the reduced police-service necessary.

If any of your readers will give thought to the scheme outlined above, I believe they will see in it great opportunities for bettering present conditions. Any comment they may have to make will be gladly received. Thanking you for space,
Yours very truly,

The Famous Royal Marines.

There never was a war in which Great Britain was engaged when the marines were known to stay at home. They are the "handy men" of the British Army, and from Sebastopol to Ladysmith, they have compiled a magnificent record of brave deeds.

The way these lads held the inner forts of Antwerp at the beginning of the late war, just to cover the orderly retreat of the main Belgian force, was an exploit full worthy to rank with any story of Aboukir or St. Jean d'Acre, of the Taku Forts or of Tel-el-Kebir. The Royal Marines were formed about the middle of February, 1690, to furnish the guards on board our warships, and to constitute any Expedition based on naval operations.

Since 1815 they have taken part in every campaign of importance in which British forces have been engaged. For forty years they scarcely had a month at home as a complete unit. The marines were either fighting the Maories in New Zealand or the Kafirs in Africa, the Chinese at Peking, or the Burmese in India. They saw active service in the Baltic and in the Crimea; in Abyssinia, and in Ashanti, in Syria and in the Sudan. In the Manila and Havana campaigns some of the privates netted nearly £500 apiece as their share of prize money. No wonder there was never any want of recruits for the marines. The regiment appealed to every man who had the Englishman's characteristic love of the sea and of adventure, and it had always shared the bluejackets' privileges in the matter of prizes of war. It was a company of marines that faced the first shots fired in the American War of Independence, and later shared in the hard-won honours of Bunker's Hill. A mere handful of marines, only 120 of them, held the Diamond Rock against five French war vessels. The same cool daring was shown in the trenches before Sebastopol, and in the historic march to the relief of the beleaguered garrison of Lucknow in the Indian Mutiny. In subsequent engagements Sir Colin Campbell recorded in his dispatches home that the action of the naval brigade was "almost unexampled in war." At the taking of the Taku Forts, in the Peking Campaign, at the bombardment of Alexandria and the subsequent operations in Egypt, they played a memorable part. When in Mexico they mounted a field battery with mules, and harness contrived of ropes.

To Marry Negroes.

When the police visited the foreign-going steamer now lying at an East End wharf,—upon which it had been reported that some females were staying nightly with the negroes portion of the crew—they were informed by one of the ladies that everything was all right, quite proper,—as she was to be married to one of the negroes in a day or so, while her chum was engaged to another. Basing their refusal on this, they refused to leave the ship and had to be removed by the officers. And thus is another romance nipped in the bud by the heartless police.

The NEW SENSATION HAT-BRITE.

Why not economize in your wearing apparel, as well as in the other methods which you, no doubt, are practising to-day? Make your old hat do you another season.

If you are not ready to buy a new hat, give the one which you had last year a coat of Hat-Brite, and you will be surprised with the results you obtain. You will practically have a new hat for the coming year. Very often you require a second hat in order to save the one which you have just bought, or intend to buy, using last year's old straw hat for ordinary wear, and the new one for special occasions. Pin marks, stains, dirt, finger marks, etc., can be obliterated with Hat-Brite.

Make your old hat a new one by shaping it, then applying a coat of Hat-Brite to the straw. The changing of a shape can easily be accomplished by moistening the straw, and then when it is thoroughly dry, apply Hat-Brite, and you will have a new hat for this season.

Hat-Brite is the result of very careful tests, exhaustive experiments, and expert knowledge in handling the necessary ingredients to make a permanent durable finish for straw hats. The material is put up in attractive bottles, each in a carton with a brush. It is prepared ready for use, and requires very little time to renovate and make an old straw hat into a new one. It penetrates right into the straw, presenting a permanent and durable finish that withstands exposure. It is the most satisfactory hat finish on the market to-day, and anyone can be proud of hat finished with Hat-Brite, and tastefully trimmed.

Hat-Brite also is a superior product for finishing all kinds and classes of straw goods, leather, rattan, wicker, baskets, basketry, wood, metals, glass or similar material, also satin, silk and canvas slippers.

The Trinity Benefit Club.

(By REV. CANON LOCKYER.)

NOTE.—The 22nd annual procession of the Trinity Benefit Club "around the Harbour" took place at Trinity on the Festival of the Purification, 1920.

In these days of many changes and deliberate breaks with the past, it is refreshing to have something passing in review before us occasionally, which, as a link connects us with the days of our grandfathers; and then, as by another link added to it, connects us with the generations before them in the land that gave them birth—the Motherland of Dorset, Devon, and Hampshire—the places we sometimes still speak of as Home. That "something" which represents those links in Trinity, is the Trinity Benefit Club in its annual procession "around the Harbour" on the Festival of the Purification (Feb. 2nd).

Mr. Victor Whitechurch, in his book "A Downland Corner" described the annual church parade of a village Benefit Club in England, as follows: "First came . . . a couple of 'sons of the soil' carrying poles, on the top of each was tied a huge 'wreath' of flowers. Then the banner of the Club. After the banner 'came the members looking wonderfully conscious of themselves, and 'each grasping a stout stick coloured 'red, white and blue'."

As one looks at this annual procession in Trinity collectively and individually, and then visualizes that club parade in an English village, he is not long at loss as to the origin of our local club, with its blue and yellow coloured staffs, consciousness, etc.

The Trinity Benefit Club, or as it was officially known till 1902 "The Trinity Club," and as it is commonly spoken of to-day as "The Club," owes its existence to an inspiration of Rev. William Bullock, and is, as I have pointed out, modelled after "the club" which formed an essential part of the equipment of every English village in Mr. Bullock's boyhood days.

The subject of mutual burden-bearing, and the duty of practical brotherly love, was brought to the notice of St. Paul's congregation, in a sermon by Rev. William Bullock in his usual forceful way, and during the week it was the subject of conversation and discussion by the men at their usual gatherings.

A result of this was a requisition to Benjamin Sweetland, Esq., J.P., for the use of the Court House, to hold a public meeting to form a Trinity Club for the benefit of fishermen, shoremen, etc.

This requisition was signed by Richard Ash, Jr., James Dwyer, Geo. S. Field, James Eagan and others.

At this meeting, February 26th, 1888, the Club was formed, and Rev. William Bullock, Benjamin Sweetland, Thomas Drawbridge, and Robert Bayly were appointed a committee to draw up Rules, and to submit them to an adjourned meeting.

Rule 7 of those submitted and accepted, provides that "there shall be a general meeting of members of the Club on the Feast of All Saints "and on the Feast of the Purification." Some years later, to avoid misunderstandings on the part of those unacquainted with the holy days of the church year, the corresponding dates of the civil year—November 1st, and February 2nd were substituted in the Rule.

The first officers of the Club were Rev. William Bullock, President; William Kelson and Thomas Drawbridge, Joint Treasurers; Robert Bayly, Secretary, and twenty other members were appointed a managing committee. At this meeting 76 "ordinary members" were enrolled and paid their entrance fee of five shillings. Rev. William Bullock, Thomas Drawbridge, and William Kelson were enrolled as the first "Honorary Members."

This list of charter members contains the names of the best men of that generation in Trinity, and whilst one is prepared for the fact that they have all long ago passed to their eternal rest, yet one can hardly read that list of names without a passing feeling of sadness at the realization of it.

For some reason—probably to keep the balance of patronage true between the business firms of Slade and Garland—at the beginning two Treasurers were appointed, viz., William Kelson and Thomas Drawbridge. One is not surprised to find that this unusual arrangement was productive of several unpleasant complications, and that after a year or two it was decided to have only one Treasurer. Thomas Drawbridge withdrew in favour of William Kelson who held the office for twenty-two years, and then, at eighty years of age resigned. In his notice of resignation he mentioned that—"during my twenty-two years of office £1100 passed into my hands, and nearly the same amount "has been paid away again." Then after some other remarks, he added—"Trusting the Club may long go on and prosper under the blessing of

Sydney Woman Was Surprised By the Result

Had Almost Given Up Hope—Gains Fourteen Pounds and Recovers Health Taking Tanlac.

"My friends and relatives were alarmed over my condition and I did not think I could hold out much longer myself, but since taking Tanlac I have been restored to perfect health and have gained fourteen pounds in weight," was the remarkable statement made recently by Mrs. Philip Fraser who lives on McLeod Street, Sydney, Nova Scotia.

"It was about four years ago that my health broke down," she continued, "and two years ago I got so bad off that I had to have an operation which left me in a weaker condition than ever. I was so restless I could never sleep good at night, and time after time I went to bed and lay awake for hours before I even closed my eyes. My nerves were in an awful condition and any little unusual noise would frighten me terribly. I was subject to severe headaches that were so bad I could not stand any light on my eyes and I would have to stay in bed in a dark room. My appetite was so poor that I hardly cared whether I went to the table or not, and the little I did force down disappeared with me. I fell off in weight from one hundred-ten pounds down to ninety, was hardly more than a frame and so weak it was effort for me to get around at all. All the neighbors became alarmed and said something had to be done right away or I would not last much longer. I went to the country for a rest and stayed six weeks, but when I came back I was worse off than ever.

"Finally I decided to try Tanlac as I had heard so much about it, and I received the surprise of my life when I began to improve. That gave me strength and courage and I continued to take it until now I have finished my sixth bottle, and am happy to say that I am a well woman in every respect. My nerves are as steady as a rock and I am no longer troubled with those headache spells. The way I have gained so in weight shows that I have a splendid appetite and no matter what I eat now it agrees with me perfectly. I sleep like a child every night and can stay on my feet from morning till night and do all my house work easier than I have been able to do in years. I just feel better and stronger in every way and all my friends say my recovery is marvellous. I just feel so grateful to Tanlac that I can not find words to praise it enough."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative; in Harbor Street, by Thomas Wakely & Sons; in Placentia by James Murphy & Son, and in Topsall by J. K. Bursell.—adv.

C. L. B.

Among those on duty last night at the headquarters of the 41st Batt., 1st Nfld. Regt. Church Lads' Brigade, were Lt. Col. Goodridge, C.L.B.; Majors Raley, M.C., Adjt. Williams, Quartermaster Capt. H. Outerbridge, Recruiting Officer Avallon Goodridge; A. Co., Lieut. R. G. Ash, Battalion Paymaster; Phil B. Rendell, Lance Hayward, Norman Hendry, W. R. Motty. The battalion were engaged all the evening on the usual routine work under their company officers. The band was on leave on account of being on parade at the Cathedral Men's Bible Class tea meeting at the Synod Building last night, but Lieut. Morris, bandmaster, was at the armoury (in muff). The brigade is now organizing a systematic recruiting campaign for the year 1920, and all parents of lads who would like to join the recruits now forming up are asked to send their boys to the armoury on next Tuesday and Thursday nights, applying to Capt. H. Outerbridge, Recruiting Officer, or Lieut. Phil Rendell, who will be glad to give them a hearty welcome. Lads joining up now will be eligible for the big summer camp which will likely be held in August.

The "Brigade College" has been fitted up in fine workmanship style. Sandman Pottles deserves to be congratulated on his job. There are desks made for 30 pupils with a magnificent blackboard and easel, a fine table and roomy chair for the chief, Lieut. Emerson, the officer in charge, Sergt. Max Schoolmaster is his assistant. The Brigade College opens up on Tuesday at 8 p.m., and any lad wishing to learn the three R's should apply promptly. The Quartermaster is busy these times, having this week received a thousand dollars' worth of kit from H. Q. London, principally caps, puttees, chevrons, belts and haversacks. Outport companies can send along their orders.

Ball Island Co. reports good news this week. A Co's. musical combination are scoring high with classy brass band music at the Wabana skating rink every Saturday night. They are also having a big skating carnival in the rink on Saturday, the 14th inst., which promises to be a big success. On last Monday night the Wabana C. L. B. Band visited Portugal Cove and conducted a band concert in the Parish Hall. The building was crowded with an appreciative audience which was most satisfactory to the fourteen bandmen under Bandmaster W. J. Martin and Lieut. Gover, and to Mr. Charles Butler who accompanied the

At the City Hall.

The weekly session of the Municipal Council took place yesterday, with the Mayor and all the Councillors present.

A letter was read from the Prime Minister that the matter of the City Charter would be submitted to the Executive Government at an early date.

The Deputy Minister of Agriculture asked if W. D. Rose, who lost his fishing property at Portugal Cove, could get permission to cut timber on the Crown Lands in the vicinity of Winsor Lake. This request could not be acceded to, as it has always been the policy of the Council to preserve the water supply.

Agreed to extend water main on South Side to the Imperial Oil Co's. premises as soon as weather permits.

C. O'N. Conroy, on behalf of one of the owners of property in Linscott's Lane, wrote that for the present and whilst building costs continued to advance, the proposed improvements in the lane would benefit more the general public than the proprietors of the frontages affected. His objections are to be noted.

The Great War Veterans' Association asked that their building be exempted from taxation. The City has no power to exempt any building except churches and schools.

Mr. C. E. Hunt, representing the Manufacturers' Accident Insurance Co., will pay insurance claim for sanitary employees frostbitten while working at night in the recent cold spurt.

Fearn and Co. were permitted to repair building, Water St.

Ordered the City Engineer investigate as to the light broken some time ago on Alexander St., the Reid Company having reported that owing to continued breaking of this lamp it had to be taken away altogether.

Mr. E. J. Ridgely, who tendered for one of the houses on Quidi Vidi Road, is to be told he must make an initial payment.

The Reid Co. reported on a number of gullies required at certain places along the street railway track. The Solicitor is to be consulted as to the Reid Co's. liability. He also reported generally on work for outside departments.

Unprecedented Conditions.

A letter from Trinity, dated the 10th inst., states that people now walk from Bonaventure to Ireland's Eye, which has never been done before, and that a horse has been on the island for the first time. Some cold! says the writer.

REBELLION IN STOMACH

"Pape's Dispepsin" at once ends Indigestion and Sour, Acid Stomach

Lumps of undigested food cause pain. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sick, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented and turned sour; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food—just take a tablet or two of Pape's Dispepsin to help neutralize acidity, and in five minutes you wonder what became of the pain, acidity, indigestion and distress. If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless stomach antidote is Pape's Dispepsin, which costs so little at drug stores.

Arrangements are being finalized by the mess for a dance in the Armoury gymnasium on Monday night, the 16th inst., at 8 o'clock, and the music is being supplied by the Battalion Band.

On next Tuesday night there will be a battalion parade and inspection, including C. Co. of Field College. All ranks must report or ask leave. Major Raley has now galvanized his basket ball and hockey league into shape; it is composed of the City Companies. Last night a league match was held in which H. Q. Co. played A. Co. and the result was a draw—one goal each. This feature of the brigade life will have an increasing interest after the night's drill and discipline. The basket ball game will be the next.

Three freight trains from Millertown Junction arrived since yesterday afternoon. The local from Carboneau arrived at 10.50 last night. The incoming local express from Millertown Junction, was at Glenwood last night. Two freight trains from Millertown Junction were 8 miles east of Glenwood last night, and left again at daylight this morning.

The Prince of Wales' Visit to United States.

It is interesting to note that the Prince of Wales, representative of the mighty British Empire and himself a Mason, was greeted upon his arrival at the border of the United States by Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall, an active member of the thirty-third degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite. The Prince, notwithstanding his exalted position as heir to the British Crown, appears to be endowed with the attributes of friendliness and brotherly love which distinguish Masons everywhere, will find his reception among the men and Masons of the United States a cordial one. We regret the brevity of his visit will prevent him from witnessing the work, or partaking of the hospitality, of the Masonic fraternity, who are glad to have him with us, if only for a short time.—The New England Craftsman.

Yesterday's Fire.

Yesterday, at 2.30 p.m., the Central Fire apparatus was called to the residence of Mrs. T. J. Duler, Ronnie's Mill Road. On arriving at the scene, the firemen saw that their services were not required, the fire being in the chimney and caused by the ignition of soot. No damage was done.

At 3.40, the Central and West End fire companies had a call from Cook's Street, where the dwelling of Mrs. H. Wilcox was on fire. For more than 20 minutes the firemen worked before the blaze was got under control. The fire originated from a cooking stove igniting the woodwork of a cupboard. The house was badly gutted.
