TUESDAY EVENING, JULY 13, 1869.

The World Over.

A couple were married last week in South Carolina, after an engagement of 40 years.

Another battle is reported near Puerto Principe with sad loss to the rebels.

There are nine salt wells at Paisley, County of Bruce; $100,000 is the capital thus invested.

Some Scottish clergymen are braving the censure of their parishioners by cultivating moustaches.

The inauguration of the Wallace Monument at Stirling is announced to take place on September 14th.

Mr. Peabody is very unwell. He has gone to the White Sulphur Springs, in Virginia, where he hopes to recover.

Three valuable horses, the property of James McGee, of Fullarton, were killed by lightning on the 7th inst.

News from the Great Eastern up to yesterday state that she was only 30 miles from where the splice is to be made, progressing favorably.

On the 10th of June both the Grampian and Ochill ranges appeared as thickly covered with snow as they did at any time during the whole winter.

"Pa, what is humbug?" "It is," replied papa, "when mamma pretends to be very fond of me, and puts no buttons on my shirt till reminded of it a dozen times."

Gen. McCellan intends to make a tour through Canada and the Northwest during the summer, and will not spend the season at Long Branch, as was reported.

A strong-minded woman was heard to remark the other day that she would marry any man who had plenty of money though he was so ugly she had to scream every time she looked at him.

Some Orangemen and Roman Catholics had a fight in the Bowery, New York, on the 12th. Shots were fired and some 20 or 30 persons were injured, none fatally.

To prevent potatoes from being watery put into the pot a piece of lime as large as a hen's egg; and how watery soever the potatoes may have been, when the water is poured off, the potatoes will be dry and mealy.

A SMALL BUSINESS. — Mr. Rose, the Finance Minister, unable to find any gentleman, resident in Canada, competent to assist Mr. Langton as Auditor, has imported from England a Mr. Courtney, at a salary of two thousand dollars a year, to act as assistant accountant.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE. — The Bruc Herald says: A woman, whose name we did not learn, a relative of Mr. Peter Murch, who resides near Mernersville, cut her throat with a razor on Tuesday last, while the rest of the family were at dinner, inflicting a fearful wound, but fortunately not a fatal one. Dr. Murphy was called in, who dressed the cut, and hopes are entertained of her recovery.

The woman had been for a long time previously of unsound mind, and gives no reason for the rash act, other than that she was tired of life.

THE SUEZ CANAL. — The preparations for the grand affair of the opening of the long closed canal of the Pharaohs are going actively forward. Three silken tents, equally magnificent, are being made at Lyons, for use on that occasion by the happy grantees who will enjoy the delight of camping in the Desert under circumstances, and amidst incidents and accessories of such surpassing interest. One of these, of red and white silk, is for the Viceroys; the second, blue and white is for the Empress; and the third, green and white, is for Madame Misaro, whose visit will be carried out with all the splendour she is accustomed to display in her jewels, equipages, and the other concomitants of her daily life.

A GOOD YIELD. — A shower of luck fell upon Mr. Thos. Cowan, a farmer in the Eastern Townships. The Huntingdon Gleaner says that "while sitting at tea on the 25th of last month he was agreeably surprised to hear his bees swarming—surprised—because such early swarming is unprecedented in that part of Canada. Going out of doors, he soon put the bees to rights, and happening to look over a fence, he saw two of his ewes with new born twin lambs at their feet. Returning by his stable, he peeped in and found one of his cows had given birth to a fine calf and his mare to a beautiful colt. Elated with all this good fortune, he ran towards the house, and at the door he met his daughter, who told him she had just got two large boilers of first rate soap made; and to all—to put the copstone on his good fortune—a wife, a little later the same evening, presented him with two thumping boys. More power to Canada."

Camping Out.

CAMP GROUND, (Near the Western Commons), July 12th, 1869.

Mr. Editor Agra: Which means, being interpreted, where do you live, or what do you do for a living? I am not used writing for the press, because if I was I would make every ear to tingle and every tatar to beat, et cetera, which, being again interpreted, means as much as you choose to imagine. This thing they call campaigning is a queer thing to me; I never heard or read of its being practiced except in an outlandish place called the Low Countries, where the ground was so extremely flat, and the atmosphere so awfully damp and disagreeable that a survivor was accustomed to crawl in between two defunct comrades and use one of them for a bed tick and the other for a coverlet. Ugh! Yes, it was so, notwithstanding your scruples, and mighty comfortable the old escaped veterans thought themselves. Still, we are better off. There's no bullets whizzing round our lugs, thank God. We are not as much scared as the Crimean sojourn who told of the shells singing tunes on all sorts of keys, from G to low D, the latter of which he thought was most inhuman and entirely Scotch. We sing whatever tunes we like, and nobly say "Boh" to us so long as we sing the National Anthem at the last. Herein we beat the old soldiers of fortune who wear epaulets and things at the famous fights in the Low Countries. I don't mind now what all these grand battles were about, but perhaps nobody (with all due respect to Nobody) knows what caused them, any more than Old Casper knew what led to the battle of Blenheim, of which he took so much pains to tell Little Peterkin the particulars, and which are narrated by the graphic Southey, in the Third Book of Lessons of the Irish National series—listen to me! Because, you see, in the Low Countries they had to die of fayer or anything else that the Duke of Something ordered, and here, God be praised, we may die of whatever we like: of the kindness of the Surgeon (who knows how to spare physic), the nigardness of the Government, which gives us (more power to them) dry bread and creamless coffee in the morning, dry bread and creamless tay for supper, and anything they can afford for dinner. It is a most agreeable life that of a volunteer while he is in camp. He says "Hooray" when the fire, made from wood which the corporation of the town of Guelph was good enough to furnish, burns brightly in the trench under the sugar kettle, in which his hash is boiled, and he shouts "Hooray" three times harder than ever when he comes out at night (begging your pardon), much as the accoucher first saw him, to keep the rascally, half-braced tents from falling over and smothering him and his companions. It is a jolly life the life of a soldier out on the commons, near the Great Western Station, Guelph. Here's to you, and many returns of the happy occasion!

Sure last night bate all ever was seen. I have no heart to tell you of it, because I was so hearty that all the heart evaporated, and it was a mighty big one (being an Irishman) that I had. The Ginals and fine men subscribed handsomely to get a race and athletic amusements among the men. (The most of them were only boys.) I noticed that some of them were not in proper condition, they had not undergone a proper course of training, and were a little too flabby.

Well, the word was given, and the races (denounced from various sires, and each damned by every man that he beat) went off at a thundering pace. Somebody was first, and the rest were behind him. This is exactly the way we run in the country, although the popular idea is that there is no fair play except in the town, which I am happy to say is a mistake. Then somebody took a running jump, and somebody jumped farther than that again. I didn't notice if he took a longer run, or as the scholars would say, gained greater impetus, but one thing I heard affirmed, and that was, that the man that jumped over the most feet and inches was beyond doubt the individual possessed of most agility (whatever that means), and entitled to the first prize, which I am sure means a dollar, and a dollar means four quarters, and four quarters mean sundry things at the canteen mean—they they mean—to be sure they do, everybody knows they mean, &c.

Good night, Mr. Editor, I'm weary, not of camping out though, but of—of—Good night. I'll write to you again when I find time. I haven't said all I intended this time, having been out last night holding the tents up, and having got wet, but you'll hear from me again before drill is over. Good-night.

"Now, I lay me down to sleep, &c."

A VOLUNTEER.

P. S.—I am laid up with rheumatics in my left shoulder, and the Surgeon says if a gentleman named Hennessey cannot cure me my case is hopeless. As I do not know Monsieur Hennessey, and cannot come within his healing power, I am afraid the disease may spread to my other shoulder and prevent my writing, therefore if I shouldn't write again don't be disappointed. Au revoir.

A VOL.

Sporting on the Camp Ground.

On Monday evening the Officers of the Battalion made up a subscription among themselves in order that the boys might have a little fun, and a slight reward for their pains. A space of about 200 yards in length and perhaps twenty yards in breadth on the east, or town side of the camp, was cleared, and shortly after seven o'clock over twenty volunteers accounted for the race, that is, having their coats and boots off, and their pants rolled up, got in line, with their faces southwards. They "took up their dressing," and at a given signal they started. Barber, of Company No. 2, went off with the fleetness of a greyhound. His running for a short distance was tremendous, but he had got somewhat excited before the race in consequence of some objections there had been made to his running, and, as they say of horses, he did not stay well. When he reached the flag pole it was said by some that he was foremost, by others that he was only second, but at all events as he had not complied with the rules of the race in some particulars he was debarred, and the first prize, $1, given to McLeary, of No. 10 Company, who, if not before him, was not a nose behind. The others came powdering up so close together that the judges could not decide which were entitled to the other prizes, and consequently it was necessary that there should be a second heat. In this the contest was decided. McIntosh, of No. 3, and Hower, of No. 2, taking the second and third prizes respectively. Then there was jumping, in which exercise Corp. Slemmon, of No. 9, was the victor, the length of the running jump he made being 16ft. 2in. Private Gray, of the same Company, was second, and Corp. McIntosh, of No. 3, was third. There was but a slight difference between the distances covered by the first and the last-mentioned athletes.

Meantime there was a calithumpian performance close by, which attracted a very large circle of admirers; so large that one of the "plunny crew" was obliged to make space with a pole for the performers. A venerable individual in an indescribable costume rattled off on the fiddle the inspiring strains of "Dixie," and some of his co-partners danced to it, on boards which had been laid down for the purpose, a quadrille that was not the "Circassian Circle" nor perhaps anything else. But it was funny, and that was all that was looked for. Then there was speech-making, and the crowd cheered lustily, and more music and dancing, and the crowd cheered again, and the last that we heard was the shrill pipe of the "Circassian Circle" nor perhaps anything else. But it was funny, and that was all that was looked for. Then there was speech-making, and the crowd cheered lustily, and more music and dancing, and the crowd cheered again, and the last that we heard was the shrill pipe of the "Circassian Circle" nor perhaps anything else. But it was funny, and that was all that was looked for. Then there was speech-making, and the crowd cheered lustily, and more music and dancing, and the crowd cheered again, and the last that we heard was the shrill pipe of the "Circassian Circle" nor perhaps anything else. But it was funny, and that was all that was looked for. Then there was speech-making, and the crowd cheered lustily, and more music and dancing, and the crowd cheered again

Jeannie Sinclair, OR, THE LILY OF THE STRATH.

CHAPTER XXXVI.—JIM MURDOCHSON RAFFLED AT LAST—THE STRATH ONCE MORE—PREPARATIONS FOR THE WEDDING.

'Nuff and nonsense, Maister Denman.—Sluff and nonsense, I tell ye. Jeannie Sinclair is yours for the askin', and that ye'll find out afore two hours is past.'

'This is sheer madness on your part, Ned,' exclaimed William, impatiently. 'Come, bid me farewell, and, though we shall never see each other more again, I shall not forget you.'

'Maister Denman,' cried Ned, earnestly, 'I ken ye canna bid this me crazy in this matter. But trust me this once—only this once. I dinna think ye hae fund me just a fule, hae ye, Maister Denman?'

'In all else most sensible and intelligent,' returned the youth. 'But on this one point laboring under a strange delusion.'

'Weel, weel,' rejoined Ned, with an assured smile, 'dinna believe me—only trust me. I can assure ye I'm as sensible on this point as ony ither; and I swear tae ye, Maister Denman, that, as sure as ye sun shines in the heavens, Jeannie Sinclair will this night be a maid unwed, and her marriage wi' the Baronet blawt tae the winds.'

'Ned, your language is inexplicable,' said Robert Douglas.

'That's a lang wurd, Maister Robert. I fancy it means that ye dinna understand, hoo it can be as I say. Maybe no; but what I say is true for a' that, and, as ye lo'e Maister Denman, dinna let him gang awa'.

'Try rather tae seech him tae gang wi' ye tae the kirk, where they stae the marriage tae tak' place, but where it will be effectually stopped. Just gang up there ye twa, and tak' a seat in the cock-loft, whaur nobody will see ye, but whaur ye can see and hear a' that gangs on, and then ye'll understand what I mean, but what I canna explain at present. Promise me this, Maister Robert—Lord love ye promise me this.'

'I undertake this mornin', replied Robert. 'Mr Denman will not leave the Strath till the ceremony is over.'

'That's a' I want,' cried Ned, joyfully; 'an' by my faith, gif ye bides in the Strath till the ceremony he looks for is over, he'll bide a while that's all. But losh me, I maunna stay anither moment, for time is precious—awfu' precious. I'll see ye bairn this afternoon or some afters.'

'Will ye not say farewell, Ned?' said William, again proffering his hand.

'No, I wunna,' replied Ned, resolutely. 'Eh, Maister Denman, that's a bonny doog ye've gotten. When we foregather again, ye maun tell me a' your adventures in Calaforny. And noo, I'm awa tae the conference wi' Lucky Cat—shem—up tae the toon, I mean, where I hae some folk tae see.'

'And with a wave of his hand, which held his knotted thorn staff, Ned swung himself away, and took the road to the village.'

'This is most extraordinary,' observed Robert, as he stood looking after him. 'Wild as his statement appears, his air of perfect assurance impresses me with the feeling that he must have some ground for it. From my knowledge of Ned, I have no reason to think that he would cherish an utter delusion.'

'I am loth to think so,' observed William, 'but we are shut up to the conviction, for this cannot possibly be anything but a delusion.'

'Reason would say so. And yet, strange to say, I have my doubts. However, for the sake of our friendship, agree to enable me to make good my word to Ned; and stay till—'

'Till the hour of eleven, and the ceremony is to signal, makes it impossible for Ned to cherish his delusion longer,' interrupted Denman. 'Be it so. In fact I have resolved to follow out his suggestion, and be present unbecomingly in the church. The temptation has come upon me, too strong to be resisted, to see her again, and for the last time. We shall retire quietly before the ceremony is quite over, and make for the Abbey. We shall still have time to reach it before noon.'

Robert Douglas was surprised at this very strange resolution on the part of his friend, but he willingly acquiesced, and instead of following the road which led eastward to the Abbey, they struck into the path to the left, which conducted to the village.

The church was at a considerable distance from the hamlet, and stood by itself, surrounded by the large, thick-planted graveyard. When the youths had reached it the doors were open, but none of the villagers had yet come to see the approaching wedding. To be sure, it wanted fully an hour of the appointed time; and without doubt a large assembly would gather—not only to do honor to the great man whose nuptials were to be celebrated, but to see the unwonted sight of a marriage celebrated in church, such an occurrence not having taken place within the memory of the oldest inhabitant of the Strath.

Twelfth of July in St. Catharines.

GRAND PROCESSION OF THE ORANGEMEN. (From the Hamilton Times.)

St. Catharines, July 12, 2 p. m.—The grand procession of the Orange Lodges here to-day, proved an immense success. Not less than six thousand joined in the march through the town. Forty splendid banners and flags were carried in procession. There nine bands in full blast, besides the inevitable and irrepressible fifes and drums of each Lodge. The whole affair is most creditable to the Society. The dignitaries of the Order are here, and the procession is now marching into Montebello Gardens, to enjoy the speeches. Of men, women and children, there are no less than twenty thousand visiting St. Catharines to-day. Right royally were the Hamilton excursionists received on their arrival. The march through the town was as usual on this day, a prolonged one, and wearied the brethren considerably.

The Toronto brethren and excursionists numbering fully 2,800, arrived about one o'clock. They had chartered two steamers, the Osprey and Huron. The cost of the whole was $550, and was less than was taken on the Osprey alone. Many also came by the steamer City of Toronto. The Hon. John Hillyard Cameron, Ogle E. Gowan, Esq., F. H. Metcalf, Esq., J. Ross Robertson, Esq., and other notables, were present in the procession. The Hamilton Orangemen were a credit to the city, and numbered on actual count, 413, including the superb Lodge Orange Young Britons, who were dressed alike throughout.

Brantford and Paris joined Hamilton at the station and increased the ranks about three hundred, and say six hundred excursionists. St. Kitts is gaily decorated with flags, and especially the flag that braved a thousand years, as your loyal and able representative says. It is to be hoped O'Neil and a few Fenian spies are in town, that they may take warning in time. British connection and fealty to the Union Jack are the prevailing sentiments. On all hands are the Hamilton brethren receiving thanks for their splendid turnout. On the whole it was as magnificent a sight as could well be imagined, and St. Catharines will long remember this day. The Great Western Railway made ample preparation for the event, and placed fifteen first-class cars on the track at Hamilton for the excursionists, which were well crammed.

All is quiet, and even opponents are enjoying the sight, and fraternizing with the brethren.

The Secretary of Treasury has directed the Assistant Treasurer, at New York, to purchase three millions of U. S. Bonds each Wednesday during the present month, to be held subject to future action of Congress.

THERE IS NO PLACE in the DOMINION WHERE DRY GOODS can be purchased on such favorable terms as in Guelph at WILLIAM STEWART'S. This fact is now universally admitted. Many families buy or order from Guelph, as they find Dry Goods of a superior class, and remarkable for cheapness—When such is the case, it is astonishing that any who can pay ready cash continue to buy from the surrounding villages an inferior class of goods at high prices, when by coming to Guelph they might have the best goods at the lowest price, therefore

WILLIAM STEWART, WYNDHAM STREET,

Would respectfully invite any who are still unacquainted with his establishment to favor him with a call, being convinced that the superior quality of his goods, combined with the low price, cannot fail to give satisfaction.
