ANOTHER BLOW AT MANITOBA.

It is now a matter of history that Manitoba was refused the extension of its provincial boundaries it asked for because its Government refused to comply with the suggestion that separate schools should be restored on their former basis. Manitoba wanted to have its boundaries extended westward. That was refused. It wanted to have them extended northward, and that was refused. The real secret of these refusals was communicated to the world when Mr. Sharrett delicately hinted to the Manitoba authorities that in his hand was the key of the situation, and that if they were willing to come to his terms the thing might be amicably and satisfactorily arranged. The price was not exorbitant—a simple matter of justice to the educational minority of which it had been deprived by a former Government, the official recognition of separate schools. The paper representative left the impression that he spoke for authorities higher than himself, and that he would not presume to suggest a settlement which he was not in a position to have ratified when the time came. Sir Wilfrid Laurier promptly denied that Mr. Sharrett was authorized in any way to speak for the Dominion Government. There was, therefore, nothing to do but to accept his assurances in the matter. However, the negotiations between the Manitoba and Dominion Governments in respect to boundaries came to naught, and the impression was left in the West generally that so long as Manitoba refused separate schools no boundary extension was restricted to the smallest possible limits. There is the impression that exists at the present moment, and it has been strengthened by very recent events.

Thirty years ago about the territorial district of Keewatin was placed under the jurisdiction of Manitoba, or, as the Hon. Robert Rogers expresses it, was annexed to Manitoba. The then Lieutenant-Governor of Keewatin, and in certain cases the courts of that province exercised jurisdiction. In fact, Keewatin has been governed under Manitoba laws ever since. By the Keewatin Act of 1878 the Governor-General-in-Council has power to detach any portion of Keewatin and transfer it to the Northwest Territories. There is no mention in the Act of education or schools, so that in that respect it was, and would continue to be, governed according to the school laws of Manitoba. The commission of 1905 passed through the Dominion Parliament an Act was passed to provide for the administration of the Northwest Territories, which specifically excluded Alberta, Saskatchewan, Keewatin and the Yukon Territories. So formed are governed by the Northwest Territories Act, which contains the separate school clauses, the same clauses under which Sir Wilfrid Laurier claimed that he was bound to continue the same in the new provinces.

We trust our readers have followed as closely to this point, because thereon hangs a matter of vital significance and importance. Our government with a proclamation appeared in the Northwest detaching Keewatin from Manitoba and annexing it to the Northwest Territories. Although the Act of 1905 passed through the House without any mention of the Government's intention, and although the Act itself specifically excludes Keewatin, yet the Government a month or so after the Act was passed, acts upon the authority of the provisions of the old Act of 1878, and annexes Keewatin to the Territories, which come within the jurisdiction of separate schools, and under the authority of the new Commissioner appointed to the Territories. It is held in Manitoba that the Dominion Government has acted illegally, and the asking away of this territory from Manitoba for the purpose of punishing Manitoba and extending to Keewatin the separate school system in vogue in the Territories.

The legal effect of this is that Manitoba cannot annex a single foot of territory outside her present boundaries, not of Keewatin now out of its control, without the Government being faced with the same constitutional question which arose in Saskatchewan and Alberta. If the contention of Sir Wilfrid Laurier holds good in respect to the new provinces, no extension of the boundaries of Manitoba can take place without the population within the extension being entitled to similar provisions being made for separate schools, and Manitoba could not extend such provisions without altering its school law for the whole of the province. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Minister of Justice Fitzpatrick, therefore, have literally tied up Manitoba in such a way that her Government is helpless. Readers will thus see the great necessity of having a judicial decision from the highest court of appeal as to the constitutionality of a law which binds all posterity to a particular system against their will.

It is proper that the intrinsic merits of a separate school system should be discussed openly and fairly. It is a question upon which much can be said on both sides. We are not sure but that the weight of argument might be found to be in their favor; but it is for the people themselves to say whether they shall form part of our system of education or not. The latest move of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is not only high-handed, but it is also not to be dictated either permitting or initiating it, descends to the level of trickery, with which even his enemies would be loathe to credit him. If it had been contemplated to include Keewatin in the Territories at the time the Act of 1905 was passed, Parliament should have been made aware of it. Parliament was deceived by the fact that Keewatin was especially exempted. No one would expect, in the face of such circumstances, that the Government would take advantage of a clause of an Act of 1878 to accomplish stealthily its purposes.

Those who might have been inclined to have accepted the explanations of the Prime Minister on a former occasion will now have their eyes opened to the fact that the latest move is simply part of a carefully devised conspiracy to fasten a system of separate schools upon the whole of the West. The followers of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who were opposed to his educational policy, were obliged at the dictates of political expediency to bow their heads to the yoke. He meant the disruption of the Liberal party and the loss of power and patronage—the sweets of office.

The country is now beginning to realize the situation is one of a certain birthright of the people was bartered in the deal for a very miserable mess of pottage. The first fruits are being reaped. A little later on, when the full privileges of the Act of 1878, which have been now transmitted into constitutional rights, are demanded by the educational minority, we shall see the complete, logical results of the policy of treachery that was pursued in the year of our Lord, 1905.

THE TARIFF COMMISSION.

When the tariff commission was in Winnipeg a complaint was made that the tariff was ready with evidence to submit. People, it was said, were too busy with real estate, commercial pursuits and crop prospects to bother about affairs of public interest. Formerly communities have few complaints. We trust the experience will not be repeated in British Columbia. What representations are to be made should be in readiness and complete.

There is likely to be a considerable diversity of evidence given in this province, as compared with the Northwest. In that latter province, for instance, do not want duty imposed upon lumber; in this province we do. Interests run counter in this respect. In Winnipeg a deputation waited upon the commission asking for a reduction upon the tariff on apples, peaches, plums, etc. In Nelson the fruitgrowers asked for increased protection. The difficulties of the commissioners in respect to these two important matters will not be insuperable. As the personnel of the commission is political in character we may expect political considerations to govern. In other words, it is a question of the largest voting power to consider the expediency of strong and definite action in British Columbia to avoid a state of affairs worse than we have at present.

Representations were made at Winnipeg respecting the "dumping" clause which Mr. Fielding had incorporated in the tariff legislation. Commercial men do not seem to regard it in that light. It is a question of the largest voting power to consider the expediency of strong and definite action in British Columbia to avoid a state of affairs worse than we have at present.

ASSISTING IN ADVERTISING B.C.

In an interview published in the Colonist with Mr. Skinner, of London, England, in reference to the Yukon, he expressed surprise that the Dominion Government did not do more towards advertising British Columbia, and especially Vancouver Island. He spoke more particularly of the Yukon, because he has been up the E. & N. railway line and had been struck with the beauties of its scenery, its climate, and its capabilities in the way of attracting small holders and prospectors. He remarked that what we all know to be a fact, that the Dominion immigration department does a great deal in advertising Ontario and the Northwest in Great Britain, but pays little attention to the attractions which little Columbia has to offer. There is very little conflict in the interests to be served. The inducements which this province has to offer are quite different to those of the parts of Canada referred to. We appeal to a different class of settlers, or prospectors, as to species in fruit-growing, poultry-raising, dairying, and small farming generally, timber raising and mining. These of the Northwest are, mainly, grain-growing and stock-raising. We also offer inducements to another class of people who are not looking to the Northwest, and who would not be satisfied with the conditions of the Yukon. They are people who want a home, with the agreeable concomitants of diversified scenery, fishing, shooting, sport and agreeable moderate climate. It is not derogatory to the Northwest or New Ontario to say that they do not possess all those requirements in the same degree that we do. They possess other advantages that we do not. They appeal to the man who is in quest of a home, and for money-making purposes, where hard work and plenty of elbow room will bring their rewards in due time.

The people who are filling up the prairies at the present time are mainly of this class, who while they do not despise the creature comforts outlined, do not value them as they do the advantages they are seeking in other ways. When they have achieved their object in life they will probably look to this country as a suitable place in which to comfortably round off their career of toil and money-getting, but not until then. Seeing that we are in the practice of filling a peculiar notch in the nation's economy, that we are not in antagonism to the ambitions of the Northwest, that we have a destiny quite our own, there is every reason why the efforts of the immigration department at Ottawa, which ought not discriminate against any particular section of the West, should not be directed towards settling up British Columbia with the classes of people we are best adapted to absorb. In the past the excuse has been that the Dominion government had large areas of land to dispose of, and that it was its special duty to populate and develop. That excuse can no longer serve. The Territories have now been organized into provinces, the responsibility of which towards the Dominion is not less, but the same as those of other provinces. It is true that the Dominion has still land in the Northwest to fill up, but so also it has in British Columbia. But apart from that altogether, the same considerations apply to the latter as to the former. The same potential value—we think greater—as in any other province. We have special attractions, special requirements, and special conditions. In having consideration of these the Dominion Government is not discriminating against other sections of the country. We see no reason, and there is none, why upon the province and the C. P. R. alone should devolve the duty of making this country known, more especially as the Dominion Government is not discriminating against other sections of the country. There exists the constituency from which we wish to draw. These observations are not made in a captious, partisan spirit, but for the careful and serious consideration of those who have the direction of Dominion immigration in hand.

DECADENT LIBERALISM.

The Toronto News, the editor of which was formerly editor of the Globe, in his editorial on the author of an appreciative life of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and altogether a man familiar with the traditions, history and inside life of a once great party—great from the standpoint of moral force and high ideals of government—deals rather speculatively with its record and concludes with this observation: "The Mackenzie Government was cut down in its prime, and the result was a state of decadent Liberalism. Its leaders, though devoted, enjoyed the full fruits of power, and the result was that, in spite of the physical weakness which fell upon the party, it was able to form one of the strongest Oppositions ever known in Canadian history. Selkirk, Mackenzie, Cartwright, Laurier, Mills, Ross, and a dozen others in the Liberal ranks. By their parliamentary tactics and by the force of logic and high idealism, they held the Government to account, and made Liberalism proud of their party. It was sometimes said that the Liberal party was the Government had the votes. Cheap cynicism may call that failure, but thoughtful Liberals will not do so. The years between 1878 and 1896 with pride and to the departure from the standards that nation with respect to the C. P. R. annual report.

THE C. P. R. ANNUAL REPORT.

We are in receipt, in pamphlet form, of the annual report of the C. P. R. Co. for the year ending June 30, 1905. The report is a very interesting and comprehensive one, and contains a great deal of information of value to the public. It shows that the company has done a very good business during the year, and that its earnings have been very large. It also shows that the company has been very successful in its efforts to improve its service and to reduce its operating expenses. The report is a very valuable document, and one which should be read by all who are interested in the C. P. R. Co. BOORISH MANNERS IN GOTHAM.

New York Evening Post. It is now uncommon to see a youngster of the West in a crowd of more than a dozen. He is now a frequent sight in the streets of New York, and is often seen in the company of a large number of his kind. He is a boorish fellow, and his manners are very bad.
