THE
NOVA-SCOTIA ALMANACK.

ST. DAVID.

DAVID whom the Welch own as their Tetuiary Saint, was Bishop of the See bearing his name, for many years. He was the great ornament of the age in which he lived, and was famed for the force and energy of his eloquence ; but his example was more powerful than his eloquence. He founded many Monasteries ; and was the Spiritual Father of many Saints, both British and Irish. He lived to a very advanced age, and died about the year 544. The origin of the Welch wearing Leeks in their hats on this day, arose from the circumstance of their ancestors putting Leeks into their caps and hats to distinguish them from the enemy, in a battle with the Saxons, whom they defeated.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WHO WOULD NOT BE A FARMER?—In that glad season, when the earth is all around bursting into life and beauty, and nature is keeping holiday—when winter is over, and vegetation is waking again from its deathlike sleep—when the birds sing their matin song from every bush, and man himself wakes to new life amid the activity around, who would not be a Farmer? For him, and almost for him alone, bloom the fair flowers in nature's field—for him the feathered songster pours her sweetest note, and for him the face of creation wears a constant smile. Not so with the inhabitants of cities, or with the professional man or the man of business, any where. These are shut out from the blessed influence of nature. Their business is with men—restless, ambious, and often times dishonest men—they themselves are all engaged in the eager scramble for wealth and distinction, sometimes caring little whom they thrust down with their unhallowed tread, so they may mount upon the wreck, and they lose the salutary lesson of benevolence which may be learned from the ways of Providence in the outward world. They must maintain a constant struggle with temptation, or yield to its power. Accustomed to so much of evil, they are sometimes almost tempted to deny the existence of good. But the farmer pursues the “even tenor of his way,” undisturbed by the passions of men. His dealings are with nature, and he may, if he will not shut his heart against it, learn true wisdom from its teachings. In the springing grass, the opening flower, and the ripening harvest—in sunshine and in shower—he may see a token of God’s love and goodness, and in the quiet of his own home, he may almost forget the existence of evil. Thus widely different are the conditions of the two classes spoken of. Yet we sometimes find farmers discontented with their lot, and eager to join with their fellows in the feverish excitement of trade and speculation. And very often we see young men impatient to leave their paternal acres, and to seek, as they vainly think, some more honorable or genteel mode of earning a living. They had rather show a lily-white hand to a lady, as they measure off a yard of tape, than exhibit a manly, muscular frame, with a hand which does not shrink from contact with implements of husbandry. It has, indeed, become one of the greatest errors of our time, that young men are deserting the true nobility of the country, for the sake of wearing a more delicate complexion, or living, as they vainly hope, more at their ease. Hence it is that all trades and professions are overstocked, that we have more lawyers than clients, more doctors than patients and more parsons than parishes. We hear men complain of hard times, mechanics cannot find situations, yet the country is actually suffering, and very severely too, for a want of proper attention to farming, and why is it? Because many a man who should have followed the plough, has become too proud for that, and in his aspiration to be a gentleman has undertaken to wield a pen or administer cataplasms and boluses. To this state of things, too, is to be attributed to some extent, the present scarcity and high prices of provisions. The production has been allowed to fall below the consumption, and this great producing country, with its spare population, has presented the strange anomaly of importing bread-stuffs from the thick settled countries of Europe. It is all wrong. Young men should be taught to regard the employment of their fathers as one of the most honorable in the world.

Your farmer is the independent man. What cares he for hard times, or high prices? Banks may fail—merchants’ notes may be protested, and their drafts dishonored, but “Seedtime and Harvest,” that old and stable firm, shall never “fail”—drafts upon them are answered at sight, and the bank of nature, where the farmer makes his deposits, is “good as gold,” and always discounts liberally. He laughs at, or more likely pities, those who are left at the mercy of the times, and compelled to eat the bread of carefulness. Beef at eight pence a pound, and other edibles in proportion, does not worry him. He takes the favors Providence so bountifully bestows upon him, and asks few of his fellows. While want afflicts the rest of the world, he may snap his fingers in his face, as much as to say, "Who cares for you?"

VENTILATION.—The dwellings of the wealthier classes are not exempt from the same visitations, arising from the same causes. Though there is a freer circulation of air, and a more equal temperature in their vast apartments, still in their parties and entertainments the want of ventilation is severely felt. There seems to be a dread of admitting any external air into a suite of rooms crowded with company; and when a sense of suffocation actually forces some panting guest to open a window, an outcry is raised as loud as if the baneful blast of the simoom from the African desert, were about to invade this sanctuary of British beauty and fashion. No heed is taken of the consequences of breathing heated air; no account is rendered of the death-chill likely to fall upon the young and lovely, when from the impure they plunge into the pure atmospheric fluid; no consequence is dreaded from the pale and haggard phantom that hovers over each scene of festive enjoyment, and hurls its ice-bolt of destruction at the fairest of our daughters: reckless do mothers expose those tender building flowers to the pestilential blast, until consumption has fixed its deadly pangs upon the fair bosom of her who yesterday shone as the brightest ornament of an admiring circle, and to day sinks into a premature grave.

We are ready to admit that a gust of cold, fresh air, however pure, suddenly let into a highly heated apartment, crowded with perspiring guests, whose natural temperature has been raised, and the pores of whose skins are opened, by the exercise and excitement of dancing, would prove highly dangerous; but we do say that a constant streamlet of fresh air ought to flow through the apartment, and pervade all its recesses. The dread of a draught of air is one of those mistakes which cannot too soon be explained away and rectified. Every crowded room is dangerous if no such draught exist; but it ought, as we have just before observed, to be a flowing streamlet almost imperceptible to the sense, and to be judiciously increased or diminished according to the number of occupants in the apartment. But if the latter be heated to suffocation by an overflow of guests and by dancing, and a window is opened to relieve the oppression caused by the rarified and fetid atmosphere, that which rushes in is no longer a streamlet, but a torrent of fresh air which prevents the equilibrium of temperature from being established, falls like the death-charged dew of the West Indies upon the panting fair one, and the joys and festivities of wealth and fashion terminate in mortal disease.

The consequences which we have just stated are applicable equally to the hovel and to the palace; only in the former, festivity hath no share in producing the evil, and typhus fever vies with consumption in giving it the greatest possible extension.

The great object in ventilation is to have the apartment swept by a stream of pure air, which may be increased at will, so as to preserve unchanged any temperature that may be found comfortable, and to get rid of those unwholesome exhalations which, when they are taken into the lungs, disturb the functions of life, and ultimately produce disease and premature dissolution.

TO MAKE RED CURRANT JELLY, WITHOUT BOILING.—The superiority of red currant jelly, when made without heat, to that which is prepared in the old way, being known to few persons, we are induced to communicate to our readers our own experience of the method by which they can obtain it.

Pick from the stalks, and strain, either white or red currants, into a basin or pan (having first weighed the pan,) then weigh the juice. Take an equal quantity of the finest loaf sugar; either roll, or break it very small, add it to the juice, and with a silver, or a bone spoon (not iron,) stir the mass till the sugar be dissolved: it will not require more time than a quarter of an hour to effect this, nor need it be constantly stirred. Put the syrup into jelly glasses, or small jelly pots; leave it uncovered till the next morning, when it will be found to be "set," and fit to be tied over. We have frequently laid papers on the top, merely to keep out the dust, and found the jelly remain above a year as good as when the jars were tied down with branded paper in the usual manner.

The advantages of the plan are obvious,—economy of time and fire, and retaining the pure flavour of the fruit: all risk is obviated, from burning, over boiling, loss of colour, and waste of materials; and though last, not least, an escape, during the process, from exposure to the fierce heat of a stove or fire, superadded to that of the dog days.

SCARLET GOLIAH RHUBARB, FOR PUDDINGS, TARTS AND JAM.—Those who have partaken only of the old-fashioned rhubarb, (Rheum Rhabonticum) have but a faint, nay, almost an erroneous idea of the delicate flavour, and tender consistency of the Scarlet Goliah. We have known many persons, whom we could with difficulty persuade to taste our favourite esculent, in consequence of their utter dislike to the flavour of the coarse, hard, rank rhubarb to which they have been accustomed: but who, after having conquered their repugnance to encounter the Scarlet Goliah, have expressed themselves entirely pleased with it.

So much is this production a favourite, that even when fruits present themselves in succession, any other tart than rhubarb is seldom made, from April to September. Large and coarse and hard as the stalks appear, they are never peeled, but merely washed, and cut up; and possess so unique a tenderness, that they are sufficiently cooked as soon as they boil: therefore they are more quickly ready to come out of the oven, than any other kind of raw fruit pie, as the paste only needs attention; the fruit is certain to be thoroughly cooked. Jam is made in the usual manner.

TOOTH POWDER.—If they are already in a bad state, they must be scaled. Till this has been done, no powder or brushing in the world will give them a good appearance.

The recipe is as follows.—Finely powdered iris root and charcoal, of each half an ounce: cuttlefish bone, two drachms; powdered myrrh, one drachm. Mix, and triturate in a mortar to an impalpable powder;—passing it, if necessary, through a fine sieve. It may be flavoured, if desired, by adding a few drops of otto of roses, or of any other essential oil, to the mixed powders, before triturating them together.

In the above, the charcoal corrects any pruridity; the cuttlefish bone being alkaline, acts on and removes any acid; the myrrh strengthens, and acts as an astringement to the gums; the iris root gives a violet flavour to the breath; and the essential oil contributes to render the use of it grateful.

ALL plants, except those of very slow growth, which have stood in pots during the summer months, will by this time, have become partly root-bound, by filling the pot with their roots; and unless they are looked after in time, will put on a sickly appearance, their leaves growing yellow, the young branches shooting weakly, and the flower-buds, if any, shrivelling and falling off without expanding. The remedy for all these evils is repotting in fresh earth, which ought to be done, if possible, before the middle of September, for room plants or those which cannot be protected during winter except in a cold frame or a greenhouse. Where artificial heat is at command, the season is less important. If the shifting be delayed, later, at least for most sorts of room-plants, they will not have time before the setting in of cold weather to establish their roots in the fresh earth.

In the management of shifting, it is for the most part proper to remove the plants from smaller to larger pots, with the balls of earth about the roots, either altogether or at least some of the old earth on the outside of the ball, trimming away only the fibers which are matted and dry, but taking care not to disturb the principal root near the centre. In this way a great portion of the excrementitious matter which the smaller radicles have thrown out into the exterior of the soil will be got rid of, which, if not removed at intervals, acts as a poison to the plant,—a recent discovery of great importance to be attended to in every species of plant cultivation.

The New year glides, in front her awful train,
Of snow and drift and ice and wintry rain,
August and solemn; nor the thickened sky
Disdains to aid the passing stranger by.
She greets the Novascotians with a smile,
Of promised blessings and a burdened soil:
They in return in joyful rings appear,
And friend to friend exclaims, "happy New year."

Proud winter, as if eager to extend,
His dreadful conquest when he sees his end
Now fast approaching, howls along the plain,
Blustering and sullen o'er the verdure slain.
Ill fares the houseless wanderer that withstands
The chilling blasts of night; but yonder stands
The snug, warm cottage of the industrious swain,
Amid the drift that entrance seeks in vain.

Melting snows and gushing rills
 Show that winter left our hills;
 The morning crust and softening eve
 Are tokens of his yearly leave.
 Now March endeavours to repair,
 With warmer suns and softer air,
 The ravages already made,
 In leafless wood and covered glade.

'Tis the spring; the feathered songsters
 Warble sweetly in the shade.
 Now the Ploughman digs the furrow
 With the gravel-polished blade.
 Now the boys with shouting gladness
 Usher from the country school;
 And each move is eyed with caution
 Lest it mark an "April Fool."

The heifer at eve that reposes
 Gives gladness indeed to the hind,
 Nor garlands nor May-poles nor roses
 Alone are the joys that we find.
 God's bounties are blooming and ample
 His mercy doth never decay,
 Each month of his goodness is sample
 Nor less are his favors in May.

Those spreading limbs with foliage crowned,
The rich perfume, the flowery ground,
And echoed notes of sweetest sound
Are now the wealthy boon;
With which dame Nature decks the soil,
And charms the ear to pay the toil
Of sweating man, his cares beguile,
These are the joys of June.

Now groan the wheels beneath their load of hay,
 The farmer mowed ere yet the morning ray,
 With thirsty touch, had sipped the pearly dew
 From the ripe grass, dry leaves and drooping yew.
 At eve the scythe resumes its death-like race;
 Each mower strives to have the swiftest pace,
 Hark! how the whetters instantaneous ring
 The gladsome field—now hear the damsels sing!

Through blooming fields of ripening wealth,
 At eve or dewy morn,
 Behold the healthful farmer walk
 Amid the blowing corn.
 Nor care nor envy fills his breast,
 Contented in his sphere
 He moves—if any cross befalls
 He knows that God is near.

Now comes Autumn with her treasure,
Sickles come and shear the soil,
Now the farmer eyes with pleasure
Full reward of previous toil.
Gracious suns and fanning breezes
Cheer his spirits at his call,
'Tis the night his steers releases
With his busy great and small.

To Him who rules the varied year,
 And from the germ the ripened ear
 Produced; the first and second rains
 Poured on our fields and parkful plains,
 Let adoration ring each scene
 That lately shared the harvest blessing.
 All others join in grateful praise
 In every clime; let none be missing.

In yonder forests hear the crashing sound
Of the tall maple levelled to the ground
Beneath the sharpened hatchet. Now the maid
Shivering along the path, hastes to the shade
Of the warm room and the well-furnished stove.
Of loaded sledges issue from the grove;
Behind the steaming yoke to swell the pile,
And evening blazes prompt a happy smile.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.—We were anxious to give the names of the Members of the House of Assembly in the usual place in our Almanack this year, but the late period at which the Election is to take place, renders it impossible for us to do so. However, that no disappointment may be caused thereby, we shall prepare a page of a size uniform with that of the Almanack, containing the names of the members, as soon as the returns can be procured, which will be given gratuitously, to those who shall have previously purchased the Almanack.

* Members of the Legislative Council.

Township of Douglas.—By an Act, passed during the last Session of our Provincial Legislature, this township has been divided into three separate and distinct townships ; viz: The Eastern section, including the nine mile River and Upper Shubenacadie Districts, to be called DOUGLAS; the Western section, including Kennetcook and Noel Districts, to be called MACLEAN; the North Eastern Section, including Lower Shubenacadie and Five Mile River Districts, to be called MAITLAND.

Township of Ramsay.—The name of this township has been changed by an Act of the Legislature; it is now called the township of STIRLING.
