Prevents Big Waste of Wood Pulp Supply

Bangor, Me., Feb. 16.—At the mill of the Eastern Manufacturing Company in South Brewer there has been in successful operation upon a large scale for four months past a process by which is prevented the waste of one-fourth of the pulp wood supply—a waste which until recently was thought to be unavoidable in the manufacture of wood pulp.

This process, the invention of Fred W. Ayer, president of the Eastern Manufacturing Company, is likely to be in use in every pulp mill in the country within a few years. The wood, while the bark is still attached, is immersed in hot water, preferably maintained at a temperature approaching the boiling point, until the wood and bark have become thoroughly saturated and the cementitious matter or bark glue has become gelatinous or partially liquid.

This takes from two to four hours according to the condition of the wood before immersion. The wood is then removed from the water in saturation to maintain the bark glue in the loose lubricant gelatinous condition for a considerable time, a time which is amply sufficient to allow for the removal of the bark by gentle mechanical treatment.

Simply tumbling the wood in a rotary drum suffices to shake off the bark which in its saturated condition adheres to the wood by suction. This treatment completely denudes each piece of wood from its bark covering, the bark strips from the knots and other depressions perfectly and cleanly, leaving the wood in condition for the immediate reduction to pulp.

The same process is applied to round logs previously sawed into convenient lengths, and if desired, scored longitudinally through the bark to facilitate its removal. By this means every particle of fiber available for paper is saved. The process thus presents a satisfactory contrast over the old method of cutting the bark, which involves the destructive removal of 20 per cent of the wood fiber. The new process has been in operation at this mill for sufficient time to afford accurate estimate of its value as follows:—

The mill is given 55 per cent increase of pulp stock, provided it cuts only the same amount of lumber and wood heretofore and this increase is not offset by any increase in expenditure, but, as far as can be estimated, the reverse is the case.

The New Song

(From a Baltimore American.)

O Canada, my Canada!
Life's thread is silken floss!
Throw tariffs to the idle winds
And let us reciprocate!
Smile at me, maiden of the snows,
Drain toast unto the dregs;
Give unto me thy buttermilk,
And I will give thee eggs.
O Canada, my Canada!
Our two hearts beat as one!
Reciprocal in love we stand,
Each other's products won;
Each other's mother's bread we'll seek
Just for our mutual sakes;
We'll swap spring chickens and we'll eat
Each other's codfish cakes!

With the announced retirement on Wednesday of George J. Gould from the presidency of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, the Gould family disappears from a dominant position in the larger affairs of American finance and business. While the Gould fortune at present is larger than it was when left by Jay Gould, Wall street regards the Gould influence as not as potent in the empire of money as it was when the pile of dollars was smaller. One by one the great properties bequeathed to the family by Jay Gould have slipped from the control of his heirs. First, the Manhattan Elevated Railroad was wrested from the family grip. Then last year came the loss of control of the Western Union Telegraph, Missouri Pacific was the one great property upon which Jay Gould built high hope of continuing the Gould name and influence.—Exchange.

The Giant Linden T. ee

The village of Remborn, in the mountainous region of Taunus, in Germany, possesses a Linden tree which is said to have reached the age of 1,200 years. In summer the tree is said to be magnificent, and its foliage offers shade to 200 persons at one time. The trunk is twelve meters in circumference—that is, thirty-nine feet. It has ten hollowed by time, and a dozen persons can stand in the cavity. The Taunus club has taken the giant under its protection in the hope that with care and attention its life may be spared for many years.

"arron" and "Barren"

A good story has recently been told of Baron Henri de Rothschild, in which a well-known theatrical manager figures. The Baron offered him a play which he practically accepted without looking at it. "Yes, my dear Baron," he said, "of course I'll mount it, and I am very flattered you should have brought it to me first." "Yes, but you must read it," insisted the Baron, "for it may not suit you. I am not at all sure that it will. I will come again to-morrow, when you will have had time to look over it." "All right—do," answered the manager. Next day when the Baron presented himself he was received with enthusiasm. "It's a masterpiece, my dear Baron—a masterpiece! I shall be delighted to produce it, and as soon as possible. We'll have it next season." On the manager's desk lay the roll of paper Baron de Rothschild had brought the previous day. He picked it up, unrolled it, and showed it to the manager. All the pages were blank!

Table Salt

Some interesting facts about this common household commodity.

Course salt and bits of newspaper put in the bottle and shaken up with a little salt should clean your bottle. Salt is good for so many little things about the house that I will give you a list of some of them hoping you may at some time, find them a help.

Rinsing the mouth with a little salt and cold water will keep the teeth in good condition.

Put damp salt on burns. It kills the pain.

Dry salt and a brush will take the dust off of velvet, plush and heavy embroidery that cannot be washed.

Add a pinch of salt to starch. It will keep the iron from sticking.

Rub salt over the griddle and it will not smoke.

A little salt under the tongue will stop nose bleeding.

Salt thrown on coal fire when broiling steak will prevent blazing from the dripping fat.

Salt as a gargle will cure soreness of the throat.

Salt in solution inhaled cures cold in the head.

Salt water is good to clean willow ware and matting.

Salt in the oven under baking tins will prevent scorching on the bottom.

Salt puts out a fire in the chimney.

Salt and vinegar will remove the stains from discolored teacups.

Salt and soda are excellent for bee stings and spider bites.

Salt thrown on soot which has fallen on carpet will prevent stain.

Salt put on ink when freshly spilled on carpet will help in removing spot.

Salt in whitewash makes it thick.

Salt thrown on a coal fire when it is low will revive it.

Salt used in sweeping a carpet keeps it free from moths.

Straight Walls of Ice

Nighty Mount McKinley Cannot Be Climbed From the South

Describing their expedition to Mount McKinley last summer, Professor Parker and Belmont Browne say in the Metropolitanist, although it was probably the best equipped expedition from a mountaineering standpoint that has ever been organized in America, the net result of its explorations is a map of a hitherto unknown stretch of mountain wilderness and the knowledge that Mount McKinley is unclimbable from the south.

"We attacked the mountain from no fewer than five different points and in each case were stopped by insurmountable difficulties. We were on the icy, fifty days. Mountaineering technicalities had nothing to do with our failure to reach the summit. At each attempt we encountered straight walls of ice and snow that could not be bridged or avoided.

The problem of climbing the mountain from its southern side is an unusual one—a combined water, arctic and Alpine proposition. To reach the southern base of the mountain the explorer must navigate for 150 miles a stretch of swift glacial water.

The second part of the trip is through alternate stretches of forest and swamp land which lay at the base of the Alaskan range. The first stage is over forty miles of glacier that stretches from the lowlands to the base of Mount McKinley itself.

BACK BAY

Frank Chaffee of Letang was here on business Monday.

S. Theriault and Leander McGee spent one day last week in St. George.

Mrs. Frank Leavitt called on friends Sunday.

Mrs. Leander McGee called on Mrs. Wentworth Quigley one evening last week in the interest of the sewing circle.

Irvin Gillmor of Bonny River attended the temperance lecture held here, he also addressed the audience in a very pleasing manner.

Mark Morrison of St. George was here Sunday.

Miss Lillian McGee spent Sunday at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Leavitt called on friends recently.

Mrs. S. Craig is visiting relatives in Eastport.

Miss Estella Mitchell left Wednesday for St. Andrews where she will spend a few weeks.

Harvey Hanley is busy cutting wood for the school house.

Mrs. Valentine Hooper has returned home after visiting friends in Milton.

Wm. Harris who has been confined to the house with a bad cold is able to be out again.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Leavitt spent one evening last week with Mrs. Irvin Holmes at Letete.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Frye on the arrival of a baby boy.

Elisha Leavitt of Letang is busy hauling wood for Hil Hooper.

Mrs. John Oliver of Labec is nursing Mrs. Hugh Harris who still continues very ill.

Z. McGee has returned home after spending a few months in the woods.

Mrs. Leander McGee who has had a bad attack of La Grippe is able to be out, in spite of a heavy tax imposed by the government it had grown to considerable proportion by the middle of the last century.

On this continent the first advertisement appeared in the Boston News-Letter in 1704. From this beginning it expanded until in 1867 it was estimated the expenditure for advertising in the United States was ten million dollars.

Today it is estimated that one billion dollars a year is expended for advertising in the magazines of the United States alone. There are no figures as available for the Dominion.

Advertising is the motive power of commerce. It has revolutionized business, and by its means a man can accomplish in a few years what formerly would take a lifetime. New lines of goods can be introduced to the whole public at a bound, and many manufacturers regard the whole world as their field. It circulates money by giving employment to the printers and allied tradesmen and by increasing the manufacture of commodities. Years ago advertising was considered a luxury or a charity. Now it is known to be a business necessity.

The speaker demonstrated that it was at once an art and a science. The good adv. tells its story simply. But the simple things we have to do are not always the easiest. Here is where originality counts. In the department stores the advertising manager is among the best paid of the employees. Some of them get higher salaries than the judges of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia.

He recalled having remarked to B. E. Hardwick on the telling character of Pyle's Pearlina Advs. Mr. H. replied:

and military. They are cautiously preparing to substitute parliamentary government for the old autocracy; they are organizing as rapidly as is compatible with efficiency an army which will in a few years be a million strong; they are building up a powerful fleet of modern war vessels, small and large; above all, they are learning from the western foreigners the necessity for all kinds of reforms and the methods of carrying them out. In ten years from now China will be one of the most powerful of the great powers, and will be quite proof against either Russia or Japan, perhaps against both an alliance.

It becomes an interesting question what the Chinese will try to accomplish when they find themselves able to practice successfully not merely defensive strategy but offensive methods. It is quite certain that they will try to clear Manchuria of all foreign domination; that they will endeavor to control, if not also own, all railroads, and that they will restrain within narrow limits the territorial franchises allowed for many years past to foreigners and foreign influences. China is just now afflicted with both of her chronic dangers—the ravages of plague and the ravages of famine. The Chinese, feeling themselves helpless to combat the former, are looking to European experts for aid, and feeling themselves paralyzed by the latter, they will gratefully accept such help as may be offered to them. Liberal treatment of the Chinese now may mean much for the permanent betterment of political and commercial relations hereafter between China and the western nations.—Tor Globe.

The man who writes those ads. draws the highest salary in the employ. and all he gets as is to "think."

Examples of the charges for space by some of the leading publications of the United States and the Spectator. Man sit up and take notice. The Ladies Home Journal gets $1,500 per issue for the adv. on back cover. Munsey's get $500 a page per month. The issue income of the Delinquent for advertising would pay a year's salary to the governor general of Canada.

Advertising, said the speaker is an advantage to the buyer as well as to the seller, as it brings to in the knowledge of how and where he may obtain those commodities that go to make living easier.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Atlee was moved by W. H. Walton and seconded by C. C. King and passed.

A very interesting discussion was participated in by those gentlemen and F. C. Whitman, Rev. Porter-Shirley and others.—Annapolis Spectator.

C. P. R. to Spend 1,000,000 at St. John.

A Montreal dispatch repeats the statement made in previous correspondence that the Canadian Pacific Railway is planning to spend more than a million dollars on terminals on its newly acquired property at the head of St. John harbor, and that it contemplates a twice-a-day service across the Bay of Fundy, with two fast trains per day between St. John and Montreal. It is stated here that the company are about to call for tenders for $100,000 worth of wharf timber. Traffic by this route to aid from Nova Scotia will rapidly develop as a result of the requirement by the Canadian Pacific of the Dominion Atlantic railway and steamer service.

The Tune is Unpopular.

(From the Toronto Globe.)

The number of Conservative papers that refuse to dance to the frenzied piping of the Montreal Star, the Toronto Telegram, and the news is increasing rapidly. They resent the question that Canada's national spirit is so poor and uncertain a thing that her existence as a nation will be imperilled by an increase of trade with the United States. The Victoria Colonist, the leading Conservative daily of British Columbia, on this point says: "Every Canadian ought to resent the suggestion that his loyalty to the British Crown and the British Empire is dependent upon tariff schedules. During the last few years we have been told this every few months, and it is being retreated because of the reciprocity agreement. We are being told that reciprocal trade will lead to annexation. Reason seems to show that the freer the access of Canada to the United States market the less cause there will be for Canadians to seek political union with that country, and this is what the history of Canada teaches.

The decaying of Canada's loyalty is having the almost inevitable result. Patriotic Canadians of both parties resent it strongly. The tune of the dullest three is so unpopular that it will be dropped very soon.

Earthquake in Turkey Tumbles Mosques and Causes Loss of Life

(Canadian Press)
A violent earthquake was experienced at Monastir and elsewhere throughout the Vilayet of Monastir today. There are some loss of life. Several mosques and houses were demolished. The people are camping out and suffering intensely with the cold. The authorities have appealed to the government for 300 tents and relief funds.

Monastir is a town of European Turkey capital of the vilayet of Monastir, in Macedonia, eighty-five miles northwest of Sofia. It is an important military centre and has a large trade in wheat and tobacco besides having manufacturers of gold and silver-ware and carpets. The population, which is estimated at 45,000 is a medley of all the nationalities to be found in Macedonia. The Christians numbering about half of the total.

The Harem Skirt

I may finicky and hold some notions that are stale and old.
Perhaps I am conservative and prudish in my way,
But yesterday I must assert, I gazed upon the harem skirt,
That combination trouser thing they say has come to stay,
And then I hustled home to Nell, and said: "My dear, now mark me well, I'll stand for harem skirts if I must, but don't you ever dare
To don a harem skirt round here. I draw the line on that, you hear?
The only trousers in this house your hubby dear will wear.
"Although you are a suffragette you haven't got your ballot yet,
A woman you were born by gee! and one you shall remain,
To petticoats and skirts you'll cling, cut out this bifurcated thing,
I trust you understand me now, I've tried to make it plain,
It isn't often I get sore, but I would drive you from my door,
If ever you get into such a mannish thing as that,
I'll let you wear my ties and shirts, but draw the line at harem skirts,
I'll wear the only trousers that are hanging in our flat."

Delicious Doughnuts

Good doughnuts are good food. Made from the right flour they are not only a delicious treat but the combination of right flour with fat is distinctly nourishing. You see I put special emphasis on right flour. For it is very important. It means the difference between light, flaky, crumbly doughnuts that melt in your mouth and are easy to digest, and tough, rubbery greasy wads of dough, heavy, soggy, indigestible. Try making doughnuts from

"Royal Household" Flour

Notice how rich, soft, and flaky they are. And the reason is that "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" being richer in high quality gluten than ordinary flour resists the absorption of too much fat in cooking. It doesn't get rubbery, makes a lighter dough, absorbs just enough of the fat for nourishment, but not enough for indigestion. The absolute uniformity of "Royal Household" enables you to get the same splendid results every time both in Bread and Pastry.

Try "Royal Household". Find out for yourself. All grocers sell it or can get it on short notice.

The Greetings is in need of a Correspondent at Blacks Harbor, now is the time for some one there to get busy and put in some work in competition for the next distribution of prizes which takes place in July next, a number of prizes will be distributed among our correspondents some of which will be quite well worth contending for, there is also several other places we would like to have represented among them, Lepreau, Lorneville, Seaview, Chance Harbor, Dipper Harbor, Salted, Masquash, Bocabec, Bocabec Cove, Lords Cove, Digdegwash, and other unoccupied districts. Paper and Envelopes will gladly be supplied on application.

Presumably it is the conservative policy at Ottawa to continue the debate on the reciprocal arrangements on the 4th of March or at least to delay the passage of the measure until that date. The United States Senate will thus be in a position to say there is no need to hurry as Canada has not yet adopted the measure.—Globe.

LONG STANDING SCIATICA

Completely Cured by One Box of Father Morrisey's No. 7 Tablets.

Sciatica is hard enough to endure, and harder still to cure, in many cases, with ordinary remedies. Caused, like rheumatism, by impurities in the blood, which in this case set up an irritation of the sciatic nerve, it is so difficult to get at with external applications that many sufferers try in vain to get relief.

Mr. Charles McEachern, of Summerville, P.E.I., was in just that position until he started to take Father Morrisey's "No. 7." He writes:

"After trying several doctors and spending large sums of money without avail, I was completely cured of Sciatica of long standing after using one package of your Medicine (No. 7 for Rheumatism). No matter how long you have suffered from Sciatica or Rheumatism of joints or muscles—no matter how much medicine or liniment you have used without result—try Father Morrisey's No. 7 before you give up. It has restored health to many who were almost hopeless.

China Makes Reply in Kind

(Canadian Press)

Pekin, Feb. 20.—China has turned accuser in the Russo-Chinese international controversy over alleged treaty violations and the contents of the reply, formulated in answer to Russia's ultimatum have become public in part, despite the efforts of the government to keep it secret.

The Chinese reply points out that the granting of Russia's demands would give the Muscovite empire a trading monopoly in Mongolia and adjacent country, which would not only hurt the interests of China, but those of other nations as well. China also charges that the indemnity guaranteed by Russia for the destruction of Chinese property during the Russo-Japanese war has never been paid.

In addition, China makes additional points as follows:—

That Russia has violated the commercial treaty by driving Chinese interests from towns east of the Amur, despite guarantees of protection and;

That Russia's demand for a consulate at Kodo is not warranted by the amount of trading done there.

It is reported here that the Russian army, which will make a military demonstration in Chinese Turkestan will consist of between 35,000 and 40,000 men.

China has begun to mobilize troops in a desultory fashion, although the preparations throughout the empire are not such as to indicate that China will resent Russia's accusations by force of arms.

The Change he Needed

(M. A. P.)

Mr. Lloyd-George is famous of course for his brilliant repartee and biting sarcasm. "I am here," he remarked once at a political meeting but before he had time to finish the sentence a noisy interupter had chimed in "And so am I."

But the report was as quick as it was overwhelming. "Yes—but you are not all there!"

"What do our opponents really want?" he inquired in a recent speech. In the momentary pause that followed the question there came a voice husky from the effects of alcohol. "What I want is a change of government."

"No, no," was the ready reply, "what you really want is a change of drink."

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

The flying machine with flapping wings suggested by Duncan Bell, of Edinburgh, would have a total weight of 500 pounds and carry a six-horse-power engine of 300 revolutions, with wings moving 7 feet up and 7 feet down.

The curious theory that photographs are the result of a multitude of microscopic explosions has been suggested by F. F. Renwick, a British photographer. The ordinary dry-plate is a sheet of glass or celluloid coated on one side with a film of gelatine containing bromide of silver, and after this is exposed in a camera its appearance to the eye is unaltered until it is treated with a developing solution. Both the invisible action of light and the visible reaction of the developer have been supposed to be chemical changes. Dr. W. Scheffer has noticed, however, that light causes a grain of bromide of silver to swell and fly to pieces, and Mr. Renwick infers that this explosive rupture, which cracks the gelatine about the exposed grain, give ready entrance to the developer, so that the exposed grains are acted upon much more quickly than the unexposed grains, which have to be reached through the tangled network of gelatine.

Many valuable woods that are little known exist in places remote from the centers of consumption. About 400 merchantable kinds exist in the Philippines, and the Bureau of Forestry at Manila has arranged to distribute small samples at a price just sufficient to cover the cost. The famous hard woods of Australia include the yate, the strongest of all known timbers. The tree reaches a maximum height of 100 feet, and is sometimes 2-1/2 or even three feet in diameter. The average tensile strength of the wood is 24,000 pounds to the square inch, equal to that of good cast iron, and the strength of some specimens reaches 35,000 pounds, about that of wrought iron. The tensile strength of white oak is 20,000 to 25,000 pounds; that of ash, 11,000 to 21,000 pounds.

Woman Appointed R. R. Passenger Agent

Davenport, Ia., Feb. 15.—Miss Daisy Olen, for years chief clerk of the Davenport passenger office of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. R., has been appointed division passenger agent of the first woman, so far as local railroad men know, to occupy such a position in the United States.

Her territory extends from Watertown, Ill., to Bettendorf, Ia.

THE BARRIE

By Rex Beach

Copyright, 1908, by Harper & Brothers

She had been led to observe herself from a strange angle and miserably her vision, as it were. What if he had changed now that he was alone and had had time to think? It would kill her if she saw any difference in him and she knew she would be able to read it in his eyes.

As she went through the main street of the camp she saw Stark occupying near the water front, where he had bought a building lot. He spoke to her as she was about to pass.

"Good morning, miss. Are you rested from your trip?"

She answered that she was and would have continued on her way, but he stopped her.

"I don't want you to think that nining matter was my doing," he said. "I've got nothing against you. You old man hasn't wasted any affection on me, and I can get along without him, all right, but I don't make trouble for girls if I can help it."

The girl believed that he meant what he said. His words rang true, and he spoke seriously. Moreover, Stark was known already in the camp as a man who did not go out of his way to make friends or to render an accounting of his deeds, so it was natural that when he made her a show of kindness Ned should treat him with less coldness than might have been expected. The man had exercised an unselfish influence on her from the time she first saw him at Lee's cabin, but it was too vague for definite feeling and she had been too strongly swayed by Polson and her father in their attitude toward him to be conscious of it.

"I'm going to build a big dance hall and saloon here," said Stark, showing her the stakes that he had driven "As soon as the rush to the creek I'll hire a gang of men to get on a lot of house lots. I'll finish it in a week and be open for the stampede."

"Do you think this will be a big town?" she asked.

"Nobody can tell, but I'll take a chance. If it proves to be a false dawn I'll move on."

"You've been in a great many camps, haven't you?"

He said that he had; that for twenty years he had been on the frontier and knew it from west Texas to the circle.

"I've never known anything except this," she swept the points of the compass with her arm. "And there is so much beyond that I want to know about. Oh, I feel so ignorant! There is something new that perhaps you could tell me, you have traveled so much."

"Let's have it," said he, smiling at her seriousness.

She hesitated, at a loss for words, finally blurring out what was in her mind.

"My father is a squaw man, Mr. Stark, and I've been raised to think that such things are customary."

"They are in all new countries," he assured her.

"But how are they regarded when civilization comes along?"

"Well, they aren't regarded, as a rule. Squaw men are pretty shiftless, and people don't pay much attention to them. I guess if they weren't they wouldn't be squaw men."

"My father isn't shiftless," she challenged, at which he remained silent, refusing to go on record. "Had a half breed just as good as a white?"

"Look here," said he. "What are you driving at?"

"In a word," she declared recklessly, "I want to know what people think of me. The men around here have never made me feel conscious of it, but—"

"You're afraid of these new people who are coming, eh? Well, don't worry about that, miss. It wouldn't make any difference to me or to any of your friends whether you were red, white, black or yellow."

"But it would make a difference with some people," insisted the girl.

"Oh, I reckon it would with eastern people. They look at things kind of funny. They were not in the east."

"That's what I wanted to know. Nice people back there wouldn't tolerate a girl like me for a moment, would they?"

He shrugged his shoulders. "I guess you'd have a hard time breaking in among the gentlemen. But what's the use of thinking about it? This is your country, and these are your people."

A mortal desire was upon her to track down this intangible racial distinction, but she saw Runnon, whom she could not bear, coming toward them, so she thanked Stark hurriedly and went on her way.

"Been making friends with that squaw, eh?" remarked Runnon casually.

"Yes," replied Stark. "She's a nice little girl, and I like her. I told her I didn't have any part in that miners' meeting affair."

"Hah! What's the matter with you? It was all your doing."

"I know it was, but I didn't aim it at her. I wanted that ground next to Lee's, and I wanted to throw a job into Old Man Gale. I couldn't let the girl stand in my way, but now that it's over I'm willing to be friends with her."

"Me too. By heaven, she's as graceful as a fawn. She's white too. Nobody would ever know she was a squaw."

"She's a good girl," said Stark insistently in a gentle tone that Runnon had never heard before.

"Nothing kind of mucky, ain't you? I thought you had passed that stage, old man."

"No, I don't like her in that way."

"I'll say you a little slight to give that burrell has thrown her down," chuckled Runnon.

"I never thought of that. You may be right."

"If it's true I'll shuffle up a hand for that soldier."

Meanwhile Ned had passed on out of the town and through the Indian village at the mouth of the creek until he was on the slopes she saw Almond and the little ones. She climbed up to him and sat down where she could look far out over the western valley, with the great stream flowing half a mile beneath her. She stayed here all the morning, and although the day was bright and the bushes sending with their burden of blue, she felt as though she were in a prison, through a dozen varying moods that tortured themselves in her delirious state. It was her first soul struggle in the loneliness of youth and she might have been in a happy frame of mind when the little company made their descent at midday.

As they approached the town they heard the familiar cry of "Squaw!" and by the time they had reached home the little camp was noisy with the plaint of wolf dogs. There were few men to join in the welcome today, every able-bodied inhabitant having disappeared into the hills, but the animals came trooping lazily to the door and sat down on their haunches, warning the approaching steamer. In their soft eyes the sadness of a captive slave.

The deserted aspect of the town puzzled the captain of the steamer, and upon landing he made his way at once to John Gale's store, where he learned from the trailer of the strike and of the stampede that had resulted. Before the steamer was finished a man appeared and spoke excitedly.

"Captain, my ticket reads to Dawson, but I'm getting off here. Won't you have my outfit put ashore?" He was followed by a crowd of fellow passengers, who made a similar request.

"This place is good enough for me, as it is," said the Frenchman.

"Me, too," another volunteered. "This strike is new, and we've hit her just right."

Outside a dozen men had crowded on the steamer and were clamoring to hear what had happened.

Stark wasted no time. With money in his hands he secured a dozen men who were willing to work for him, for he was always those who prefer the surety of ten dollars to the hope of a hundred. He swopped down with those helpers on his pile of merchandise that had lain beneath tarpaulins in the river bank since the day he and Almond landed, and by mid-afternoon a caravan had been started over the framework of peeled poles built on a hill where he and Ned had stood earlier in the day. Before dark his wagon was in the town. To be sure, there was no floor, and his polished fixtures looked strangely new and incongruous, but the town at large had assumed a similar air of incompleteness and crude immaturity, and little wonder for it had grown threefold in half a day.

Stark's party, so freshly unpacked, its packing implements, keen to scent every advantage, and out of the handful of pale faced jackals who follow in the heels of a healthy herd, he hired men to run them and to deal.

By night Flambeau was a mining camp.

CHAPTER X

LEAD BUREAU FINDS A PATH IN THE MOUNTAINS

NO CREEK LEE had come into his own at last and was a hero, for the story of his "big" "big" "big" was common-sense now, and men praised him for his courage. He had never been paid for anything before and was uncertain just how to take it.

"Say, are these people kiddin' me?" he queried confidentially of Polson.

"Why? What you mean?"

"Well, there's a feller makin' a speech about me down by the bank."

"What he say?"

"He ain't worth it to fight over. He's got another Dan'l Bloom leadin' a march of empire westward. Certainly sounds good, but is it on the level?"

"I guess so," admitted Polson.

The prospector smiled with indignance. "Then why in hell didn't you boys tell me long ago?"

The scanty crew of two of gold on his claim lay in the scales at the set, where every new-comer might examine it and realize that he was a veritable source of information, they fawned on him for his tips, bribed him with newspapers worth $1 each or with cigars, which he wrapped carefully and placed in his mackinac till every pocket of the rusty argument bulged so that he could not sit without looking them. They dwelt on his richest word and stood him beside the bar, where they filled him with proofs of friendliness until a shadiness from his own good eyes.

Cautiously at first he let out his tip, which was long from long disease and as heavy on his feet as the jumping frog of St. Lawrence, but when they nudged at his labored legs and saluted his confidence gone. With the regularity of a clock he planted cigars and ordered "a little more hard stuff."

into his mouth. He used profanity.

He sat in the tangle of his careless beard. By and by he wandered through the town, trailed by a troop of tenderloin, till the women marked him whereupon he fled back to the post and hugged the bar, for he was a lawless man. When Stark's new place opened he offered him another retreat, of which he availed himself for some time. But late in the evening he reappeared at Old Man Gale's store, walking a bit unsteady, and as he mounted the flight of logs to the door he stepped once too often.

"What's become of that fourth step?" he demanded sharply of Polson.

"Say, are these people kiddin' me?" he queried.

"Dere she is," said the Frenchman.

"I'm blamed if it is. You moved it since I was here."

"I'll have 'im put back," laughed the other.

"Say, it's a grand thing to be rich, ain't it?"

"I don't know. I ain't never try it."

"Well, it is, and now that I've arrived I'm goin' to change my ways complete. No more extravagance in mine. I'll never lend another cent."

"What's dat?" ejaculated Doret in amazement.

"No more hard luck stories and 'bury ups' for mine. I'm the stone hearted jailer, I am, from now, henceforth, world 'bout end, amen! No bustle miners need apply. I've been a good thing, but tonight I turn on the time lock."

"By gosh! You're foiny feller," laughed Polson, who had lent the one-eyed man much money in the past and like others, regarded him not merely as a risk, but as a total loss.

"Hebbe you tink you've been a spender all dese year?"

Doret took the hero of the day by the arm and led him to the rear of the store, where he heeded him on a pile of flour sacks, but he had hardly returned to the bar when Lee came veering out of the darkness, making for the light like a ship tacking toward a beacon.

"What kind of flour is that?" he spluttered.

"Dat's just plain w'at flour."

"Not on your life," said the miner, with the firmness of a great conviction. "It's full of yeast powders. Why, it's farina and rish' like a buckin' boss. I'm plumb seasick." He laid a zigzag course for the bar.

"Where you goin'?" asked Polson.

"I'm goin' to get somethin' for this stomach trouble. It's fierce." He descended into the darkness boldly and stepped off with confidence—this time too soon. Polson heard him floundering about, his indignant voice raised frantically, albeit with a note of triumph.

"What I tell you? You put that step back while I was ashore!" Then, whistling blithely, if somewhat out of tune, he steered for the new saloon to get something for his "stomach trouble."

At Stark's he found a large crowd of the new men, who welcomed him heartily, plying him with countless questions and harking to his mouthful tales of this new country which to him was old. He had followed the muddy river from Crater Lake to the delta, scorching the bars and creek beds in a frenzied quest till he knew each stream and tributary, and like Gale, he had lived these many years ahead of the law, where each man was his own court of appeal and where crime was unknown.

"Oh, there's lots of countries worse'n this," he declared. "We may not be very hard 'ome to the naked eye, and we may not wear our handkerchiefs in our shirt cuffs, but there ain't no widlers and orphans doin' our washin' and a man can walk away from his house, stay a month and find it there when he comes back."

"These days are past," said Stark.

"There's too many new people coming in for all to be honest."

"They'd better be," said Lee aggressively. "We ain't got no room for scoundrels. Why, I had a hard time in the bylaws of this camp myself. I once got your hair cut."—Exchange.

Electoral Corruption

It was in Adams County, Ohio, that over six hundred indictments were recently returned against respected residents for selling their votes at the fall election. Most of the men accused pleaded guilty, paid fines, and were disfranchised. Now, investigators report a bad state of affairs in Illinois. Twenty voters of Menard County have been indicted in one batch. The remarkable feature about these degrading cases is that the guilty persons were among the fairly well-to-do class. The New York Times' biting comment is: "No such revelations of wholesale election corruption have ever been made, even in the palmiest days of Boss Tweed in New York or in the rottenest ward politics of Philadelphia, Pittsburg, or Chicago as has been shown in Adams County, Ohio. It is not a few farmers, immigrants, and tramps who have fallen, but more than one thousand native-born farmers, merchants, lawyers, doctors, even ministers. Not a foreign name appears in the list. And these men were not tempted. They have made a business of selling votes for the last generation."—Globe.

Redmond Accepts and Anticipates all in his speech

London, Feb. 17.—All England is discussing John Redmond's home rule speech in parliament in which, for the first time in the history of the Irish Nationalist movement, an Irish leader has publicly proclaimed his willingness to accept local self-government as a full measure of Irish demands and to acknowledge England's king as the ruler of Ireland.

Hitherto the Nationalists have consented to accept whatever England granted as a step toward final separation, but the Irish leader in endorsing the prime minister's statement of the measure of home rule to be granted, astonished all his hearers by applauding the autonomy granted to South Africa by King Edward and expressing the hope that King George would open the Irish parliament and so hasten the day when Ireland, re-conquered, would become a loyal unit of the British Empire. His speech was hailed with joy by the government leaders and Liberal newspapers.

Washington, Feb. 17.—An emasculated bill embodying the results of the fisheries agreement between Canada and the United States affecting the treaty waters from Passamaquoddy Bay in New Brunswick to British Columbia, has been reported by the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate as a result of the recommendations of David Starr Jordan, of the United States, and Prof. E. E. Prince for Canada. Senator Wm. Alden Smith, of Michigan, has succeeded in having the proposed regulations affecting Lake Huron struck out, and it is expected that the commissioners will meet again and try to agree on a new draft that will be satisfactory to the Saginaw Bay fishermen, who are the real objectors in the case. Meantime, the Lake Huron commercial fishing will be practically eliminated from the international regulations and will remain under Michigan control.

Otherwise the bill embodies a number of important provisions which can be regarded with satisfaction by Canada. Under the terms of the clauses approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, methods of fishing and style of the nets and appliances to be used are described and important plans for the preservation of food-fishes are laid down.—Exchange.

Wireless lighting as a possibility is no surprise, so it was merely the expected that happened when M. Valdemar Poulsen, the Danish inventor, pressed the contracts of his aërial transmitter and thus lighted two incandescent lamps held by his assistant in another room. The miracle will come when the radiated energy can be so directed to a distance that the loss will not be enormously greater than that by wire transmission.

China's new national air: "Johnny get your hair cut."—Exchange.

Improved Charitable Methods Will Make it Obsolete.

Baltimore, O., Feb. 12.—Dr. Jacob Hollander, professor of economics of Johns Hopkins University, predicted that a day will come when poverty will be as obsolete as slavery, in an address today at the annual meeting of the Hebrew Benevolent Society. This opinion, he said, he based upon his historical studies and his personal investigation of charitable methods in vogue today. He insisted that the modern world is wrong in believing that poverty is inevitable, just as the ancient world had proved wrong in assuming that slavery was inevitable.

The effort now being made to get at the causes of poverty he declared, is in the right direction and will lead to a solution of the whole problem.

The Methodist College at Regina

(Regina Leader.)

The enterprise which the Methodist people have undertaken of building a college in the capital city of the province is rapidly taking shape. The name which was chosen for the college was "Saskatchewan College," but the government have expressed their intention to amend the University Act prohibiting the use of the word Saskatchewan in the name of any educational institutions in the province other than the University. As the chapter of the Methodist College is now before the Private Bills committee of the Legislature, the members of the Board of Governors throughout the province are being consulted as to a new name, which will be announced at an early date.

Some delay in the development of the scheme has been caused by the fact that Rev. W. W. Andrews, L. L. D., who has been chosen for the presidency, could not be released from his position in Mount Allison University, Sackville, N. B., at an earlier date. He is now upon the ground. Rev. J. H. Oliver has been relieved of part of his duties as pastor of the Metropolitan Church in order that he may aid in the work of organization, and Rev. H. T. Lewis, B. A., of Oshawa, Ont., has been named as assistant pastor of the church. Offices have been taken at 406 Darke Block and the work of raising funds, letting contracts and organizing the faculties of instruction will now be pushed with all vigor.

About the first of March, calls for tenders will be issued for the construction of the first of the fine group of college buildings.

The estimated cost of this building is somewhat in the neighborhood of $275,000. These college halls and dormitories will stand at the head of Scarth street, and on the shores of Wascana Lake, opposite the Legislative Buildings, and will be a notable addition to the architectural wealth of the city.

This enterprise means that a large amount of money will be called out to advance the cause of education in the province of Saskatchewan, and large sums also from outside the province will be devoted to this purpose. The privilege of a fine residential college for both sexes, for which parents have had to send their children to the cities of Eastern Canada and elsewhere are now to be found within the province, and located in the city which above all others, because the capital city, belongs to the people of the whole province. No religious tests are to be required of either scholars or teachers. It is the intention to begin some departments of the work in temporary quarters next September.

"Well, Jones, have you looked over my new dining room?"

"Oh, yes, very carefully."

"How do you like it?"

"Ain't I'll tell you that better after dinner."—Ally Sloper's Half Holiday.

It will be a terrible thing if the people of the United States recklessly sell us some things we want to buy. Ruin and devastation are predicted on both sides of the line as inevitable results.—Exchange.

The Harem Skirt Starts

A Riot in Paris

(Special to St. J. Globe.)
Paris, Feb. 20.—The trouser skirt has made its appearance in Paris, and, after being exhibited at the opening of the racing season, caused a riot in the Place de l'Opera, two unfortunate girls who were wearing the costumes being roughly treated, jeered at, and mobbed to such an extent that the police had to rescue them.
London, Feb. 20.—Not since a famous American, Mrs. Bloomer, appeared in London, 1851, wearing a nether garment, which still bears her name, has a female costume excited such a sensation here as the first appearance of the "Harem" skirt. On Regent street, Saturday, wearing a blue turban like toque, blue velvet skirt and bodice and pink pantaloons a lady walked calmly chatting with her male escort. A crowd gathered and followed her, small boys yelling with delight. The crowd grew and grew and waited outside a shop while she purchased some articles and then accompanied her in ever increasing numbers while she booked seats at a music hall. Policemen had to hold up traffic to allow her and her entourage to reenter Regent street soon after which the assemblage grew so large that she was in danger of arrest "for causing a crowd to assemble." Her escort then called a cab and they drove off.

Everything to Gain and Nothing to Lose by Reciprocity

Fredericton, N. B., Feb. 20.—William J. Scott, of the Scott Lumber Company, of this city, a lifelong Conservative and brother-in-law of Solicitor-General McLeod, has come out flatfooted in favor of the reciprocity agreement. "I honestly believe, he said, that, if the agreement entered into between Canada and the United States is ratified it will greatly enhance the value of farming and lumbering lands in New Brunswick especially along the St. John river. So far as this province is concerned we have all to gain and nothing to lose by such an agreement."

"I figure that under reciprocity the lumber lands will go up in price. I figure that our farm lands will be worth far more, farm stock will be worth more, eggs, butter, poultry, etc., will be worth more and potatoes will bring a higher price in nine years out of ten."

"The opening up of a great market like the United States to our farmers means that more money will be brought into the country and all classes will share in the benefits. Vacant farms will be quickly taken up and there will be better times all around."

"I venture the statement that, in the counties of York and Sunbury today, one-fifth of the farms are vacant and two-fifths of the farms are not worked to more than one-half of their capacity. What is the cause of this state of affairs? The farmers tell us that they have practically nothing but the local market to depend upon and if they were to increase their output it would mean the lowering of prices. Give them the United States market and I am confident you will soon see a change. I look for development."—Tel.

Jack London: a Prisoner

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press)—Jack London, author and socialist, and Simon Berthold, socialist, second in command of the insurgent forces in California, are in the custody of United States troops at Calexico, charged with violation of the neutrality laws.

Word to that effect was received by A. I. McCormick, United States district attorney, from Capt. Rebock of the United States army, in charge of a patrol at Calexico on Saturday night.

Definite information could not be obtained, but reports that the two men are in custody were persistent.

Life Exists only on Earth and Mars

(New York World.)

World making, a process which has been observed with some interesting results through the big spy glasses at Lowell Observatory, in Flagstaff, Ariz., was the theme of an interesting paper read the other night by Dr. Percival Lowell before the New York Electrical Society at the Engineering Societies Building in West Thirty-ninth street.

A large audience was present, many, it may be, attracted by the hope that Dr. Lowell would have some news to tell of the Martian Canals, for which he has been the sponsor on this continent as Mons. Flammarion is in Europe.

Dr. Lowell said only casually that the canals seemed well and happy. His discourse was confined to the processes by which Mars and the other planets, including the earth, were evolved out of nebulous vapor. Planology is Dr. Lowell's name for the study of world making.

Different stages of this process Dr. Lowell illustrated by the members of our own solar system. First comes the sun with its periodic spots and their associated magnetic and electrical disturbances. Then Jupiter, Saturn, Neptune and Uranus, still hot but no longer shining; next the earth in its present stage of evolution; then Mars "the dying world," and finally Mercury, a "dead one."

The spots on the sun, Dr. Lowell described as "gigantic cyclones." They are expressions of solar weather and show us on how vast a scale, as compared with mundane affairs, things are conducted on the sun.

Mars, the lecturer said, is the only planet except the earth on which one could expect to see organic life. The Martians could make out a more plausible case against the habitability of the earth than the inhabitants of the earth have been able to make against Mars. He showed on the screen a picture of "what he called "the first snow storm of the season on Mars" an object not unlike a vast biplane gone beyond the control of the driver.

But the most of Mars is desert and the habitable parts correspond in latitude with those zones on this planet where the heaviest rainfall occurs. There are no seas on Mars, and on Mercury, the "dead world," there is no moisture, not even at atmosphere, and the surface, incessantly exposed to the pitiless heat of the sun at close range, is wrinkled like a withered apple or the face of an old man.

Dr. Lowell's lecture was profusely illustrated by photographs, most of them taken by himself and his assistant at the Flagstaff Observatory.

Canada's crop of Indian corn is five-sixths of one per cent. of that of the United States. This seems to take the United States corn-grower out of the list of people who will be ruined by cheap Canadian natural products.

It is reported that men who have bought cotton futures have a scheme to destroy the crop by flooding the country with the destructive boll weevil. This is the latest addition to many methods of seeking profit through destruction. Exchange.

Rights of Canadian Fishermen in Maine

Augusta, Me., Feb. 13. The rights of Canadian fishermen in Maine waters will be the subject of a hearing next Thursday afternoon before the sea and shore fisheries committee of the Maine Legislature.

The committee has already had one hearing on the bills in question which are for the legalizing of various forms of taking herring. One party wants weir fishing, and, as may easily be guessed, that party advocates the interest of the seiners, who have found seining from steamboats a very satisfactory method. The weimen, of whom there are many along the Maine coast, want seining forbidden, and claim that it has destroyed the French herring fisheries and will destroy those of Maine if given the chance. A third proposition is for the illegalizing of all forms of taking herring except that of twine weirs, which are very different from the more common brush weirs. The situation is complicated by the presence of about a dozen different bills and a long list of petitions for general laws and for special laws for special localities. At the first hearing only the fishing interests of Penobscot Bay and Eastern Maine were presented, and as it came to be known that possibly the new law might forbid seining in Penobscot Bay and waters farther east, the fishermen of Western Maine began pouring protests into the committee, and soon the committee had to yield, and order another hearing on Feb. 23.

It is stated that the Western Maine fishermen fear that the seiners, which have been mostly working off the down-east Eastern Maine coast, where the fish catching business has been developed, will invade their territory. It is particularly told that one Canadian seiner last summer went as far west as Portland, and the Canadian is particularly obnoxious at this time when the Yankee fishermen feel that their interests have been sacrificed in the reciprocity treaty. This sentiment is mingled with the business interest which impels the men to take sides any way, and it is not the less strong because less freely expressed than those other sentiments.

Seining is little known in Western Maine, but the opportunity to attack the fishing proposition is not the less eagerly accepted because seining is the only kind of fishing which Canadian are likely to do off the Maine coast. There will be no attempt to violate treaty rights but whatever law is passed will allow the Canadian exactly the same amount of back of seining right as it gives the Yankee where the treaty requires that he shall have the equal right.—Exchange.

Should be Canadian Agencies in Cuba

(Canadian Press)

Montreal, Feb. 21.—That Canadian trade possibilities with Cuba were to a large extent restricted at the present time by heavy middleman's charges, was the gist of an interview given by Sir Win. Van Horne who has just returned from that country, and advocates the establishment of selling agencies that would be able to deliver Canadian goods to the Cuban consumer at reasonable profits. He says such an agency would have a great advantage over all other producers in the trade.

There should be, he said, direct communication between the two countries as there was a fine field offered for Canadian products, those of the marine provinces in particular. Unfortunately, however, a barrel of apples costing $1 in Nova Scotia became worth $7 by the time it reached the consumer owing to heavy middleman's profits. In the same way the cost of a 75 cent barrel of potatoes became $7.

Cuba was an exceedingly rich country and a liberal buyer Mr. Kirkpatrick Canadian trade commissioner at Havana, who is now in Montreal upon these matters, Sir William understood, had been urging upon the government the importance of agencies of this kind.

The Mail Order House and How to Combat it Successfully.

A Fredericton paper discusses the Mail Order business as follows:—

"There is no doubt that the mail order houses of the Upper Provinces do a large business in this province, but this is not attributable to cheaper prices than the Fredericton prices on equal goods. It is due to the fact that the mail order houses are more liberal and more modern in their advertising than the local merchant. People now-a-days are not confined to the mere necessities. They are as a rule in a position to buy pretty much what pleases the eye, whether a need or a fancy. The conditions of the day have made competition in business keener than that of a few years ago. The rivalry in all directions, including that from the outside has led to a division of accounts and to a diversion of trade. The people can afford it, and they will buy where they are taught to believe they can buy to their complete satisfaction. To successfully meet the rivalry from the outside as well as that from within, to keep up the increased cost of doing business, the merchant must go out actively after trade. He must keep himself in touch with the great buying public, who are not, be it remembered, influenced by sentiment. The mail order house reaches the people by full page advertisements, written by experts, and circulated liberally down here in the daily papers of Montreal and Toronto. It also reaches the people through the catalogue, printed in ten ton lots. The local merchant is not required to go to the same enormous expense to reach the enormous public within his fields; but if he is to catch the eye and meet the fancy of those who are open for business he must adopt the modern methods of talking attractively by advertising to the buying public. He must give more enlightened attention to that part of the business. The merchants in some of the towns of Ontario, who felt the pressure of the mail order business, last year adopted the modern system of big and attractive advertising, with the result that they added very largely to the volume of their business, and are this year figuring on even larger outlays for their advertising in newspapers that are known to reach the home.

About Connaught

(Providence Journal.)
Among the facts about the Duke of Connaught, Canada's next governor general, which are notable are two. In the first place he is the grown up infant whose birth Theobald noted in his "Ballads of Policeman X," and in the second place he is married to a Prussian princess. The latter fact is one of great interest, for in these days English and German royalties do not marry. A union between the child of the present Kaiser and an English royal child would be altogether out of the question. Popular opinion in both countries would declare it all but inconceivable, as the Austrians and the English deemed the installation of a Bourbon on the throne of Spain in Louis XIV.'s day. But in former years alliances between the two houses were more favorably regarded. The present Kaiser's mother was a daughter of Queen Victoria, and Queen Victoria's son, the Duke of Connaught, married a cousin of his sister's husband. The marriage occurred in 1879, which is not many years ago, but has been followed by the growth of animosities which make it seem almost on the other side of a great gulf of time. The Duchess is ten years younger than the Duke.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R.V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

Maine Osteopaths are to get Hearing

(Bangor Commercial.)
The osteopaths of Maine are to have a hearing before the legislature in session this year. At the last two sessions of the legislature there side has only been thrashed out before the committee and there they have been turned down with an "ought not to pass" report, but this year they have succeeded in securing a majority report "ought to pass," which brings the matter into the house and senate.

The osteopaths have been asking the legislature to give them recognition as to profession and to grant them the same safeguards given to the old school of medicine by providing a law to regulate the practice of osteopathy and to provide a separate board of examination and registration for those who wish to practice in Maine.

Mexican Rebels are Boating the Regulars

El Paso, Feb. 20.—In a series of skirmishes between insurgents and General Navarro's federal forces, the regulars have been driven back from their position near Guadalupe and are now about ten miles from the Rio Grande, east of Juarez, according to advices received here today.

In the twenty hours of fighting the federals are said to have sustained a loss of 100 killed and wounded, while the rebel loss is said to be less than 10 men. Couriers arrived in Juarez early today asking for reinforcements from Gen. Navarro. They declared that the insurgents were trying by forced marches to outflank the federal soldiers and prevent their retreat into Juarez. Generals Orozco and Blanco were believed to be maneuvering somewhere in the mountains, although their exact whereabouts were unknown.

Silencing the bores

(From the Chicago Daily News.)
One of Japan's very modern engineers named Yamakawa, is said to have conceived a method of silencing parliamentary bores, and because of his invention he is believed by a Shanghai correspondent to be a benefactor of the human race. Attached to each seat in the House of Parliament he purposed to have a metal tube, the top being about the size of a 25 cent piece. Each member of the house is to receive a leaden ball or bullet on entering. These balls can easily be passed into the tube, which, carried under the floor, leads to a receptacle immediately under the place where a member stands when addressing the assembly.

This spot is like the traps on the stage of a theatre. The trap is so arranged that when a certain number of balls—no less than one-half the number of members of a full house—has reached the receptacle, the trap is made to descend automatically, carrying with it the garrulous speaker, or bore, as the case may be.

Reason Enough

(Saturday Evening Post.)
A negro near Xenia, Ohio, had been arrested for chicken stealing. He had stolen so many that his crime had become grand larceny. He was tried, convicted and brought in for sentence. "Have you any reason to offer why the judgement of the court should not be passed upon you?" he was asked. "Well, judge," he replied, "I can't go to jail now, nohow. I'm buildin' a shack out yonder an' I jus' can't go till I git it done. You all kin show seedat."

Good Roads

On the subject of good roads the Toronto News says:—"Mr. A. W. Campbell puts the case for good roads in a new and strong light when he points out that but for the wagon roads which lead up to railway stations the railways themselves could not remain in business. It is also informing it not starting to learn that with the $40,000,000 in cash and labor which has been wasted on Ontario highways in the last twenty years, it could have macadamized every road in the province."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

The Granite shops are again in full swing, the Messrs. Epps & Dadds, Milne & Conits and McGrattan & Sons starting up Friday of last week, the others following on Monday of this week.

A St. Stephen Hockey team came here on Friday of last week intending to play the High school team that evening but the weather being unfavorable the game was played on Saturday morning to allow the St. Stephen team to take the 10:30 train for their homes. It resulted in a very closely contested game, score 1-0 in favor of the visitors. Quite a number of spectators were present to witness the game.

On Saturday evening about 8 o'clock as Hugh Dewar was driving home, when on the upper bridge his horse collided with a double team driven by David Holt, the pole of the team striking Mr. Dewar's horse in the breast. He was able to get as far as Marshall Goodhill's, when the poor beast gave out. They took him into the barn and worked with him till 4 a. m., when he died. Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Dewar for his loss.

Mrs. Thos. Spiney of Scotch Settlement nearly met with a very serious accident Wednesday about 3 p. m. While driving into town the horse took fright at another team near the upper bridge and started off. When opposite Dr. Alexander's office the sleigh slew, throwing Mrs. Spiney out but fortunately she escaped with only a few slight scratches. The horse was finally caught near the Telephone Central with the harness and sleigh in a badly delapidated condition.

The New Brunswick Hydro Electrical Power Co. are seeking incorporation with Percy Thompson of W. Thompson & Co., W. E. Foster of J. Vassie & Co. and C. H. Eason, Mayor of Bank of N. B. all of St. John as provisional directors, with the object of developing the water power of the Megalloway and Lepreau rivers, and conducting electric power to St. John and probably St. Stephen and Calais.

The Co. have had cruisers and the ground at Lepreau and at Second Falls and vicinity, the promoters were also over the ground a short time ago, they have taken options on several properties at Elmcroft, and expect to have a staff of engineers on the ground very shortly under the lead of Engineer Whitney who has had extensive experience in this line in several parts of the continent especially at Sault Saint Marie.

Hinds-Oliver:--At the Oliver home-stead, Manor Road, on Wednesday evening Edward Oliver was united in marriage to Miss Pearl Hinos of Calais, by Rev. E. Thorpe. A number of invitations were issued to which about 30 guests responded. After the ceremony the guests sat down to a sumptuous repast after which dancing and other amusements were indulged in until the wee sma hours. Miss Annie Bennett of Beaver Harbor assisted the bride while Andrew Oliver nephew of the groom did the honors for him. Many useful and handsome presents testified to the esteem in which the bride was held. All join in wishing the happy couple every happiness and prosperity along life's pathway. They take up their residence at the homestead where all will welcome the bride to her new home here.

Among those registering at the Victoria during the week were: J. T. McIlwain, Moncton; R. G. Cannon, New York; W. S. Carter, Fredericton; C. Garneau, Que.; Walter Shaw, Woodstock; J. B. Anderson, St. Stephen; B. J. Collier, Let.; D. T. Anderson, Halifax; Robt. Elliott, Tor.; A. B. Burns, C. A. Cassidy, J. S. Adly, G. McConnell, A. B. Kerstead, W. L. Stewart, T. S. Bates, W. S. McDonald, A. M. Dane, St. John.

The High school Hockey team will play the High school team of St. John on the rink here on Saturday afternoon, game to be called on immediately after dinner so that the St. John boys can take the afternoon train back to St. John.

Messrs McMillan and Dennis of the Government Engineer staff, Ottawa, have been in the county for some days locating observation points for the final Geological survey of the provinces now being conducted by the Government and from which they are issuing maps of the different districts.

Word has been definitely received from Bishop Richardson that the Rev. H. G. Arler who received a unanimous call from St. George and Pennfield parishes has decided not to accept.

The parishes will regret the Rev. gentleman's decision very much as they had bright hopes of his ministry in these parts.

From general appearances this seems to have been a case of mismanagement on the part of the bishop, and we would strongly advise him in future to vote a minister will accept before recommending a parish to vote on an application as such transactions as this which are on a line with the autocratic measures of his predecessors Bishop Meley and Kingston are what have done the church of England so much harm in N. B. where it should be the most numerous instead of well down on the scale of membership.

Struck by Train But Escaped Unhurt

Robert Weller, St. Stephen, had a narrow escape from death recently while driving out from town and falling to note a freight train approaching the Valley Road crossing, though the bell and whistle of the engine were working over time. The train got just far enough across for the engine to strike the tail end of the sled, throwing Mr. Weller into a snow bank. On the team was a jug of molasses, and when the man had been hauled out of the snow he was badly mixed up with the contents of the jug. What might easily have been a tragedy ended in somewhat of a comedy. --Exchange.

Two negro men came up to the outskirts of a crowd where Senator Bailey was making a campaign speech. After listening to the speech for about ten minutes, one of them turned to his companion and asked:

"Who am dat man, Sambo?"

"Ah don't know what his name am," Sambo replied, "but he certainly do recommen' hisself most' highly!" --Success.

The Candidate (having quoted the words of an eminent statesman in support of an argument)--"And, mind you, these are not my words. This is merely my opinion. These are words of a man who knows what he's talkin' about." --London Sketch.

The "Cop's" Excuse

Senator La Follett was talking about a corrupt politician.

"He is plausible," said the Senator. "All such fellows are. They have, like the motor 'cop,' the most striking excuses for the most execrable deeds. A magistrate said sternly to a certain motor cop:

"Why, man, you ought to be ashamed of yourself! You actually admit that you let a burglar go in order to arrest a speeding automobilist."

"Yes, your honor, and why not?" said the cop. "The automobilist, paying a large fine, adds to the resources of the country, but the burglar goes to prison and the state has to pay for his keep."

Stung!

A number of North Atchison, Kan., girls recently invited their friends to a party, saying that a feature of the entertainment would be a swimming match between two girls. Every one went and found that this part of the program was carried out by two girls sitting at a table with a bowl of water between them in which a match floated. The men felt that they had been cheated.

The Arguments of the Anti's.

(From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.)
We note with amusement—the sort of amusement that one gets at a comedy drama, where laughter and tears are strangely mixed—that there are Republicans who think a reciprocity treaty with Canada will come close to overthrowing our institutions of Liberty. With amusement, because at the same time we see a party in Canada which is just as sure that such a treaty would result in the annexation of the Dominion to the United States. Add the ideas of these two parties together and you will arrive at the conclusion that there should not be a reciprocity agreement for two reasons; first, because it would hurt this country, and second, because it would help this country.

The Poor Consumer.

"What is that fellow grumbling for?" said Giles, with his spade;
"Free rye and wheat, free spuds and wheat," the poor consumer said;
"What makes you look so glad, so glad?" said Giles, with his spade;
"Canadian reciprocity," the poor consumer said.
"For they'll cease to charge us twice as much as what we ought to pay for our butter and potatoes if we let Taft have his way;
They'll reduce the cost of living, but they'll not cut down our pay when the tariff law is levelled in the mornin'."
"Why should you feel so good, so good?" said Giles, with his spade;
"He has a special interest," the poor consumer said;
"He owns a sheep or two somewhere, or maybe, keeps a cow, and thinks that reciprocity would ruin him somehow,
But he'll probably keep making just as much as he makes now when the tariff law is levelled in the mornin'."
—S. E. Kiser in the Chicago Record Herald.

Coronation Risks.

(Standard of Empire.)
A large number of insurances have been effected at Lloyd's in connection with the coronation and the Festival of Empire at the Crystal Palace. Thirty guineas per cent. was charged to pay a claim in the event of the coronation not taking place on June 22. Other policies were issued indemnifying against the postponement of the ceremony at rates varying according to the time limit arranged. The minimum premium demanded was ten guineas per cent to pay a total loss should the coronation not take place during 1911. With the regard to the Festival of Empire most of the insurance are for the protection of the promoters against failure through any national calamity. Underwriters in a number of cases have been content with the rate of six guineas per cent to pay a claim in the event of the festival not being held at the appointed time.

Reciprocity and Nationality.

Some of those who oppose the ratification of the Fielding-Knox agreement by the Canadian Parliament base their opposition to it on economic and commercial grounds; they believe or affect to believe, that the operation of the reciprocity agreement would be commercially and injurious to Canada. Others oppose its ratification on the ground that the operation of the agreement would tend to weaken the spirit of Canadian nationality and to pave the way for the ultimate absorption of this Dominion by the United States. The former of these classes of objectors have been abundantly answered, sometimes by advocates of the agreement and sometimes by opponents of it whose arguments are mutually destructive.—Ex.

AN ODD CRAFT.

(Standard of Empire.)
A strange looking object, which its inventor, M. Rouan, has christened The Flying Fish, has just been launched at East Cewes. The Flying Fish is an aeroplane of the hydroplane type, driven by air propellers. There are two practically flat boats resting on the surface of the water, one at each end of the machine. Some feet above the surface, resting on supports connected with the floats, is a boat-shaped hull or carriage. There is a large air propeller at the stern, driven by a 56 h.p. Gnome engine, and a small rudder at the bow. The machine is about 20 feet long, with accommodation for two people. It is hoped that it will skim over the surface of the water at great speed.

The Greatest Battleship.

Britain's biggest and most powerful warship has been launched at the yard of the Thames Ironworks Company. She will be the one thousand two hundred and twenty seventh warship built on the Thames. By the time she is finished the Thunderer will have cost nearly £2,000,000 sterling. The new Dreadnought will be one of the 600 feet class, her length approaching that figure, and in breadth she is a few inches short of 90 feet. She will have 23,500 tons displacement, and a horsepower of 37,000 capable of driving her 21 knots, with a couple more for a spurt. Her boilers will be Babcocks, and her machinery Parson's turbines. She will mount ten 13.5 guns. Where the other battleships launch 850 lb. per shell, the Thunderer will fire 1,250 pound. But her strength will be in having her five pairs of guns (triple on any given point, so the 12,500 pound of metal will leave her at a complete discharge. Beyond the big guns there twenty 4in. guns.

WOMAN'S BEAUTY.

It Comes Only to Those Who Take Care of Their Hair.

Have you a pretty face with regular features, clear skin, pearly teeth and plenty of animation and vivacity, and yet remarked that there was something lacking that really made the individual less charming than her sister of plain possessions? A moment's study of such a face will show you that it is a want of luxuriant hair which makes the difference.

The woman who wishes to retain her youth must look after her hair—the woman with scant, unattractive hair is never admired.

Society women realize the truth of this statement and that is why so many of New York's loveliest women demand that Parisian Sage be used by their hairdressers.

Parisian Sage is now on sale in nearly every town of consequence in Canada, and has enormous sales on wherever it has been introduced.

It is guaranteed by J. Sutton Clark to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It will make any woman's harsh and unattractive hair soft, lustrous and luxuriant in a few days. It is the ideal, delightful, rejuvenating tonic that makes hair grow, it is not sticky or greasy, but on the other hand is most pleasant and daintily perfumed.

Father of Twenty-One Children Left $1,000,000 Estate

Mineola, L. I., Feb. 15.—In Surrogate Jraham's court there was filed today the will of John Lahey, who came to this country from Ireland forty-five years ago penniless, became the father of twenty-one children and died leaving $1,000,000 after a life as a truck farmer at Flatlands, L. I.

Mr. Lahey's secret of success was continued in this statement, which he gave to his family and friends repeatedly:

"I made my money in dealing with honest people."

He was generally too busy with farm work to indulge in any long conversations, but he liked to remark to his acquaintances that "King Edward and I were born on the same day."

John Lahey was born in Tipperary county, Ireland, in 1841. He came to this country in 1866, settled in Flatlands and began the life of a truck farmer. After he had been in this country a few years he brought his mother and brother from Ireland. He was very religious and missed mass only twice in 45 years. When he began to prosper he married and had ten children by his first wife. A second marriage increased the total number of children to twenty-one. Only nine grew to maturity. They are still alive.

Mr. Lahey speculated in real estate and twelve years ago he was offered $300,000 for his property at Flatlands and accepted, buying land at Lakeville, of about one hundred acres, which now adjoins the property of W. K. Vanderbilt, jr.—Exchange.

completed and to the new map of Prince Edward Island, being sheet No. 14 of this series and then just issued.

The Halifax sheet of the same series, covering the counties of Lunenburg and Kings, and parts of Hants, Halifax, Sackville, Queens and Antigonish in Nova Scotia, has just been published and gives interesting and up to date information about that part of the Province of Nova Scotia. The Cape Breton and Truro sheets have already been published.

Single copies of any of these sheets as far as published, can be obtained on application to the Chief Geographer, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

To Mr. Sharpe, who enquired the cost of the loan for 1909 at 3 3/4 per cent. Hon. Mr. Fielding explained in the House of Commons the other day the total expenses were $611,449, made up as follows: Commission to financial agents, $73,000; commission to underwriters, $292,000; commission for arranging for underwriting, $75,000; brokerage, $67,119; advertising, printing, etc., $12,567; other charges $93,762.

IT MADE A DIFFERENCE. William B. Radgley, former controller of the currency, said a certain speculator recently:

"The man is as ingenious as a horse trader's son who was once unexpectedly called upon by his father to mount a horse and exhibit its paces. As he mounted he leaned toward his father and said: 'Are you buying or selling?'"

Synopsis of Canadian North-West Land Regulations.

Any person who is the sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months residence and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section along side his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres, erect a house worth $300.00.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres, erect a house worth $300.00.
