The Scripture ones dating back three thousand years, while others now in use are comparatively recent fand, indeed, many have originated from the works of popular authors, such as "a little learning is a dangerous thing," "the proper study of mankind is man," etc. They belong to all nations and men. In the Chinese language may be found vary many both beautiful and valuable. The lecturer referred to the various dates of which the origin of certain sayings may be fixed and the manner in the Chinese language.

BLACK, BROWN, BLUE PURPLE, CLARET and MUSBEREY. the various dates of which the origin of cer-tain sayings may be fixed and the manner in which many now used had lost their force through time. In regard to the morality the elergy; the legal and medical professions and the occupations of every day life, such as those of the miller and blacksmith. Some of the best illustrations of these were given and some explanations offered which must have been new to very many of the audience. For instance, all had heard said of a shiftless iperson, "He will never set the Thames on fire," and had supposed of course the river Thames was meant. This was a stupid and incongruous saying, but when it was known that "temse" was a species of seive used in a mill and might by the friction caused by hard work take fire, the idea that a lazy person would "Never set the temse on fire" was sufficiently plain The lecturer also in justice to the Knights of the shears, explained that the provent that" a tailor is the ninth part of a man' was another misconstruction of a word.

It was at one time the custom in England on the death of a child to toll the bell thrise, for a woman six times, and for a man nine times. One stroke or "teller" CAMERON was therefore said to be the minth part of a man, and the "tailor" had no connection with the matter. The lecturer censured sept28 the proverbs too common in the commer world regarding the rescality of mankind, and though this objection had been taken by some to the Bible, yet that book never forgot we were men and spoke of us truly as we were and are. Other humorous nroverbs contained much plain truth, such as "steal a pig and give the trotters in as "steal a pig and give the trotters in alms," in regard to the bestowal of charity, and also the saying of "Every sprat calls himsolf a herring," in regard to the assumptions of many at the present day. There was no need for a herring to state what he was every one knew he was a herring, and every one knew he was a herring, but they did not see a herring in a givet though in these days every sprat a sprat, though in these days every sprat called himself a herring. The lecturer censured the method of advertising in common use in this country, and said he had seen more ingenious specimens of putting during a brief stay in America than in a whole lifetime in Great Britain. He further mentioned the real philosophy in the Spanish proverb of 'Welcome

After some other remarks in regard to the folly of wasting energy on that which yielded nothing, and applying this principle to the subject of ebucation, the lenturer concluded by moving a vote of thanks to the Chairman. His Honor briefly and pointedly responded in a bumorously proverbial speech.

Mr. Brown's lecture occupied an hour and a half in delivery and was listened to with much interest. His style was at times keenly humorous, abounding in serious truths and of a nature to claim the attention of his auditors, and the lecturer so far as regarded the efforts of the lecturer oct 3 cot 3 c

CELEBRATED DINNER PILLS!

A sure remedy for Indirection, and all bilious and Liver Compisints. Made by her daughter, Mrs. E. H. Bester,

The above Fills having stood the test over forty years, and being propared with great care and study nething cheap or impure being tolerated in their composition, are perfectly safe to administer to the most delicate constitutior. They never reduce the batient, no cessation from business or any anumal changes is ever necessary. They never render any one more liable to take sold, containing no dangerous drug, they act as kindly on the tender infant, the most delicate females and infirm oldage, as upon the most vigorous and athletic system, exercising the most healthful influence on the whole system, invigorating the debilitated organs, building up the flagging nervous energies, imparting vigor to body and mind, and bringing every faculty into healthy play.

To Females, om the peculiar affections that attend them when they are arriving at maturity, and also at the decline or "change of life," they are the best remedy and assistant that can be used.

What may seem almost incredible is the astonishing rapidity with which they cure diseases hitherto considered incursible:

Numbers of our first-class families keep them constantly on hand for the various ills of life, and rely on then implicitly.

They are acid with the understanding that they exceed their recommendation, and are the best thousehold Medicine extant.
