Poetry.

Welcome, Little Stranger.

Muzzar bought a baby,
'Tittle bity sing;
Fink I most could put him
From my rubber ring.
An't he awful ugly?
An't he awful pink?
'Just come down from heaven,
'Tat's a fib, I sink.

Doctor told anoxer
Great big awful lie;
'Nose an't out of joint, zen,
'Tat an't why I cry.
Mama stays up bedroom—
Guess he makes her sick;
Frow him in zo gutter,
H I can, right quick.

Cuddle him and love him!
Call him "bressed sing!"
Don't care if my kite an't
Got a bit of string!
Send me off with Biddy
'Every single day.
'Be a good boy, Charlie;
Run away and play."

"Sink I ought to love him!"
No, I won't, so zero!
Nassy, Crying baby,
Not got any hair.
Got all my nice kisses,
Meet my place in bed;
Mean to take a drum-stick,
And crack him on the head.

Interesting Case.

MY UNCLE'S WILL.

No need of your learning a trade, said my father. Stick to your books like a Briton, and who knows but that you may yet do without a trade at all. A life at the bench is a poor affair at the best; nothing but work day in and day out, and what do you get for it in the end? A crust of bread, a few rags on your back, and a narrow walk to wind up with.

My father's words disconcerted me. Was this true of a life at the bench? Was this all the working man's life? Did neither independence nor the glory of excelling, offer any reward to the poor human machine?

Although I was nearly eighteen, I am afraid that the tears stood in my eyes, as I replied with an effort at being respectful: The trade will do me no harm, father, even should Uncle John see fit to leave me anything when he dies.

Leave you anything? cried my mother, indignantly. Didn't he tell me years ago, that his will was made, and that he had left you all he possessed.

Much more in the same strain said my father and mother, but I was not convinced. I hurried to learn a trade.

A peep into a foundry seem to me like a glance into fairyland, and the notes of a young musician's first composition were never sweeter to him, than was the din of a boiler shop to me.

Looking back now in my old age, I can see the reason for my great warmth, although I failed to see it then. As usual there was a girl in the case.

Katie Hall—dear little Katie, my schoolmate, with the cherry lips and sweet, moist eyes—had a father who owned a boiler shop, and a large foundry, which latter daily seemed to send forth a roar of contempt against every young man who did not learn a trade.

The foundry, in all probability, accomplished other work, but to my fevered imagination, this was his chief occupation.

My parents were English, who had emigrated to the land of the free and the brave, when I was but three years old; consequently my education had been thoroughly American; and although my rich uncle had promised to make me his heir, I did not care to waste my youth in waiting for dead men's shoes, which in nine cases out of ten are never worn.

Fortunately for my purpose, I was an only child, and I determined never to give my parents a moment's rest till I had accomplished my purpose. They are dead, and gone now, and I say it with better regret, that I was not as filial as I might have been.

Oh, go to the foundry if you must! cried my father in a rage, and may you get your sick of it before three months are over. I'll put you under that tartar, old Hall, and if you don't come whimpering back to us in a week, my name isn't Joe Bartlett.

I could hardly contain my joy. To be but under her father without an effort! Why it was the very thing I had been running my head against for the last year.

Fearful of delay, I caused my father to wait upon Mr. Hall at once. The preliminaries were arranged without trouble and I entered the gentleman's shop as apprentice to boiler making before the week was out.

My father was only a cabinet maker, remember, yet my mother's pride was so deeply wounded at the bare thought of her son coming home with a black face and soiled clothes, that she wept bitterly.

But spite of all discouragement, I did much less a week, so a suspicion rose in my mind that my father's name could not possibly be Joe Bartlett although every one called him so. All was not sun-hine with me, although I stuck to my trade as I had ever done to my books, but the trials I then met and overcame, served to make of me, that which it was the height of my ambition to be—a true man.

A peep into the foundry was still fairyland to me, but the machine shop was a little noisier at times, and the talk of a few rough fellows rather grating; but I tried hard to keep my integrity free from the taint about me, which is a harder thing to do, covered with dirt from morning till night, than your nice, clean gentlemen may think.

Mr. Hall began to notice me—it is useless to say I did not see it, for I did—and one day he proposed that I should take off my dirty clothes and go into the office as a permanency. Now this was a great temptation, for whenever Katie came to the works, she, of course, came only to her father's office, and if I was there, she might see that her old schoolmate was a—in short a very amiable young man.

I hesitated, and Mr. Hall said: It will be a little more seemly occupation for you, as I understand that you will one day fall heir to a large English property.

I came here to learn a trade, sir, I said respectfully, and not to be a clerk. As regards my fortune, this is all I look to holding out my grimy hands. To my astonishment, Mr. Hall slapped me on the back so heartily that he nearly knocked the breath out of me, as he replied:

That's the talk, young fellow! I started in life with the same resolution myself, and I'll not forget you.

I knew he would keep his word for a master cannot forget his best man, and this I strove to be. Whatever I undertook, I exerted all my powers upon, and if my fellow workmen were at times a little jealous they could not help at least respecting my open conduct.

I was barely out of my time when I was made foreman over the whole works, and had occasion to be frequently at Mr. Hall's house. It was then that I began to experience the reward of my indefatigable labor, for there I constantly met my little Katie with the sweet and modest eyes. We understood one another before long, though I'm sure I don't know how; we seldom spoke more than the most commonplace words, but then, Katie had wonderful eyes!

It was just in the midst of this pleasant time that my father received a morning letter from England, announcing the sudden death of my uncle, and stating that he had left me twenty pounds, the remainder of his property falling to his widow and infant heir, he having secretly married his house-keeper some eight or ten months previously. My father wore—my mother wept, and I, trying to look sleepily concerned, glided in my trade.

A lawyer's letter was dispatched to the wretched widow, and dark hints thrown out, but it was no use; the woman had been lawfully married to my uncle, and her infant son was his heir.

My father spent the twenty pounds on lawyers when my darkened prospects became known to Mr. Hall, he suddenly cut-off my opportunities for going to his house. Ah, the boiler shop was very, very noisy just then!

But I contrived a meeting with Katie one day when old Mr. and Mrs. Hall had gone in the country; and I told her my love, and vowed to accomplish unheard-of feats in the way of obtaining riches, that I might gain her from her hard father, while the dear child promised to wait for me forever.

Mrs. Hall took away her daughter, and Mr. Hall took me to task, accusing me of loving little Katie, just as though any young man in his senses could help doing that.

Unlike most criminals when charged, I pleaded guilty, and gently reminded him that he had started in life as poor as I was.

The result of this interview was that Katie and I were forbidden under dire threats, to hold any communication with each other.

I went to my work, and what between my efforts to do my whole day's work, and my sore heart, the days dragged heavily enough. Although I did not know it then, not till long afterwards, my little Katie drooped like a meek flower, and was at last laid on a bed of sickness; but her parents still held out, and only sent for me when they thought her dying.

Thank God I was enabled to carry some of the same energy that caused me to excel in my trade to that sick bed!

Katie got better, and we were married with some thing of a grudging consent from the old folk, who like so many others, alas! had outlived the sweet experiences of their own youth.

I did not get rich by magic, but my steady adherence to my business, but now that I am old, I can very well afford to let some one else be my uncle's heir.—[American Homes.

How Gunpowder is Made.

A HOUSE WHERE MEN NEVER LAUGH.
How do you think you would like to live fearing every moment to be blown up; not daring to speak loud or to jar anything for fear of starting an explosion that would send you in an instant to the other world?

You don't think it would be very pleasant? Well it isn't, yet hundreds of men live just in that state, work, receive pay, and live year after year, in the very sight of death, as it were; all that the world may have, gunpowder.

You can easily guess that these men go about quietly and never laugh.

You know that gunpowder is very dangerous in a gun, or near a fire, but perhaps you don't know that it is equally dangerous in the process of making. A powder-mill is a fearful place to visit, and strangers are very seldom allowed to go into one. They are built far from any town, in the woods, and each branch of the work is done in a separate building. These houses are quite a distance from each other, so that if one blows up it won't blow up the rest. Then the lower parts of the building are made very strong, while the roofs are very slightly set on, so that if it explodes only the roof will suffer. But, in spite of every care, sometimes a whole settlement of the powder mills, will go off, almost in an instant, and every vestige of the toil of years will be swept away in a few seconds.

But though you feel like holding your breath to look at it, it is really a very interesting process to see. It is made perhaps you know of charcoal, saltpetre, and brimstone. Each of these articles is prepared in a house by itself, but the house where they are mixed is the first terrible one. In this building is an immense mill-stone, rolling round and found in an iron bed, and under the stone are put the three fearful ingredients of gunpowder. There they are thoroughly mixed and ground together. This is a very dangerous operation, because if the stone comes in contact with its iron bed it is very apt to strike fire, and the mere suspicion of a spark would set off the mill. The materials are spread three or four inches thick in the bed; the wheel, which goes by water-power, is started and every man leaves the place. The door is shut and the machinery left to do its terrible work alone. When it has run long enough the mill is stopped and the men come back. This operation leaves the powder in hard lumps or cakes.

The next house is where the cakes are broken into grains, and, of course, is quite as dangerous as the last one. But the men can't go away from this; they are obliged to attend to it every moment, and you may be sure no laugh or joke is ever heard within its walls. Every one who goes in has to take off his boots and put on rubbers, because one grain of powder, crushed by the boot, would explode the whole in an instant.

The floor of this house is covered with leather, and is made perfectly black by the dust of the gunpowder. It contains a set of sieves, each one smaller than the last, through which the powder is sifted, and an immense ground and laboring mill, where it is ground up, while men shovel it in with wooden shovels. The machinery makes a great deal of noise, but the men are silent as in the other houses. The reckless crashing of the machinery even seems to give greater horror, and one is very glad to get out of that house.

The stoving-house is the next on the list, and there the gunpowder is heated on wooden trays. It is very hot, and no workmen stay there. From there it goes to the packing-house, and it is put up in barrels, kegs and canisters.

Safely through all these houses it goes at last to the storerooms. One feels like drawing a long breath to see the fearful stuff safely packed away, out of the hands of men in this curious house.

You've heard of things being as dry as a powder-house, but you wouldn't think this house very dry. It is almost imbedded in water. The roof is one big tank kept full of water. Did you ever hear of a water roof before. Instead of steps to go in, there are shallow tanks of water, through which every one must walk to the door.

In none of these powder houses is any light ever allowed, except sunlight. The wages are good, the day's work is short, ending always at three or four o'clock. But the men have a serious look, that makes one think every moment of the danger and glad to get away.

Though curiosity may take a man once to visit a powder mill, he has no desire to go the second time; and he feels all the rest of his life that for once he has been very near death.

The heart-hard distributor of a marriage license of Burlington, Iowa, the other day refused a license to an anxious couple respectively sixteen and fourteen years old.

Marriage.

Men and women, and especially young people, do not know that it takes years to marry completely two hearts, even of the most loving and well-sorted. But nature allows no sudden change. We slope very gradually from the cradle to the summit of life. Marriage is gradual, a fraction of us at a time. A happy wedlock is a long falling in love. I know young persons think love belongs only to brown hair, and plump, round orison cheeks. So it does for its beginning, just as Mr. Washington begins at Boston bay. But the golden marriage is a part of love which the bridal day knows nothing of. Youth is the tassel and silken flower of love, age is the full corn, ripe and solid in the ear. Beautiful is the morning of love with its prophetic crimson, violet and gold, with its hopes of days that are to come. Beautiful also is the evening of love, with its glad remembrances, and its rainbow side turn toward Heaven as well as earth. Young people marry their opposites in temper and general character, and such a marriage is commonly a good match. They do it instinctively. The young man does not say, "My black eyes require to be wed with blue, and my over-vehemence requires to be a little modified with somewhat of dullness and reserve." When these opposites come together to be wed, they do not know it, but each thinks the other like himself. Old people never marry their opposites; they marry their similars, and from calculation. Each of these two arrangements is very proper. In their long journey, these young opposites will fall out by the way a great many times, and both get away from the road; but each will charm the other back again, and by and by they will be agreed as to the place they will go to and the road they will go by, and become reconciled. The man will be nobler and larger for being associated with so much humanity unlike himself, and she will be a nobler woman for having manhood beside her, that seeks to correct her deficiencies and supply her with what she lacks, if the diversity be not too great, and there be real piety and love in their hearts to begin with. The old bridegroom having a much shorter journey to make, must associate himself with one like himself. A perfect and complete marriage is, perhaps, as perfect personal beauty. Men and women are married fractionally, now a small fraction, then a large fraction. Very few are married totally, and they only, I think after some forty or fifty years of gradual approach and experiment. Such a large and sweet fruit is a complete marriage, that it needs a very long summer to ripen in, and then a long winter to mellow and season. But a real, happy marriage of love and judgment between a noble man and woman is one of the things so very handsome that if the sun were, as the Greek poets fabled, a god, he might stop the world in order to feast his eyes on such a spectacle.—[Theo. Parker.

Standing Treat.

The Chicago "Post" says no American custom causes more genuine surprise and amusement among travelling foreigners than that which is known in our parlance as "treating"—consisting in the entertainment of two or more with refreshments for which one volunteers to pay. It is a pure Americanism; and all over the Republic it is as common as in Europe it is unknown. There is probably no minute of any day in the year, when two or three hundred something stronger than water at somebody else's expense.

The usual meeting of two men who have ever exchanged a word together, is a signal for both instantly to exclaim, "Come let's have something!" and for both to drive down into the nearest subterranean cavity below the sidewalk. The one who speaks first usually initiates upon "paying the shot," the word "short" being a metaphorical reference to the deadly character of the contents usually taken into the stomach. If two old friends meet, the regular thing to say first is, "Let's drink to old times!" and the resident must invariably "treat" the stranger. If a man be well acquainted, it is considered the generous and princely thing to seize upon his acquaintances as often as possible, take them to a saloon and give them a complicated stand-up drink at the bar.

If there is anything more absurd than this habit, we are unable to put our finger on it. Men do not always "treat" one another to car-tickets because they happen to meet on the same street. We never saw a man take out his pocket-book on encountering an acquaintance and say, "Ah, George! Delighted to see you! Do take a few postage-stamps! It's my treat!" Do men have a mania for paying each other's board bills? And is drinkin' together more "social" than eating together or sleeping together?

A traveller may go all over the continents of Europe, of Asia and Africa, without seeing any man except a Yankee offer to "treat," and the Frenchmen are quite social enough, but when they turn into a cafe to ship their wine or brandied coffee together, each man pays for his own. When two Germans, long separated, meet, they will be very likely to embrace, and then to turn into an adjacent beer-cellar, sit down and drink lager and eat pretzels and chat, but when they part again, each man settles his own score independently. So in Italy, the Italians are proverbially merry and generous, but every man pays for his own wine, macaroni and cigars. They never go into each other's pocket-books in the sacred name of friendship. They would as soon think of transferring to each other their wash-erwomen's bills.

The preposterous fashion of "treating" is largely responsible for much of the terrible drunkenness in America. It is, take it all in all, the most ridiculous, the most unreasonable, and the most pestilent custom that ever laid its tyrannical hand on civilized human beings.

NORTHERN AFRICA.—Rohlf, the famous German explorer of Africa, has lately been entertaining and instructing his countrymen in Berlin by a series of popular lectures on his explorations of Northern Africa, which he thinks, with proper treatment, might again be turned into the paradise that some portions of it were under the Carthaginians and Romans. He has found on the Gulf of Sidra, west of Tripoli, the site of the garden of the Hesperides and the river of Lethe, and he has a strong desire to see his countrymen eating the golden apples so famous in ancient story. He declares that central Africa is as rich as India, and that a grand highway to the Kingdom of Soudan might easily be constructed across the desert from a port to be established on the site of ancient Carthage. He would encourage German emigration thither, and thus found an independent colony that might in time be a nucleus for operations that would turn all Central Africa into a German India. To this end the Germans have already a strong foothold in the friendship now existing between the Emperor William and his noble majesty of Soudan, to whom the German ruler recently sent some magnificent presents which were received with all the pomp and circumstances that the African monarch could command. Bismarck and all his countrymen are said to be listening most anxiously to these stories and suggestions, and are beginning to feel that their mission is to regenerate Africa and open it to a civilized world. This would be a great task but the Germans understand Africa thoroughly, for their scholars and geographers have been quietly exploring it for twenty years, and are now no strangers to its hidden recesses and its secluded treasures.

ADVERTISING.—The most successful and keen business men of the country advertise, and who can question but that it builds up trade and dwarfs competition? Judicious advertisers select those papers which have a large circulation, good management, established character and influence. They are read by thinking people of enterprise; most desirable of communities to be reached by advertising.

MRS. PARTINGTON SPEAKS AGAIN.—Mrs. Partington entered the office of the Probate Judge, (called "Civilian") and inquired in her blindest tone. "Are you the civil villain?" "Do you wish to insult me, madam?" said the Judge; "Yes," replied the amiable old lady; "my brother died de-t-est-ed, and he left three infidel children, and I'm to be their executioner; so I want to insult the civil villain about it."

Kirk Deputation.—A deputation of clergymen has been sent by the Established Church of Scotland to attend the General Assembly of the American Presbyterian Churches at Detroit. The cautious and conservative Establishment has, up till the present time, held no direct communications with her American progeny. Who have been chosen as the bearers of her greeting we are not as yet fully informed. They will, doubtless, be very fairly representative of the clergy, the learning and eloquence of which the Establishment of today contains so large a share. The names of Dr. Norman MacLeod, Dr. Caird, and Principal Tulloch are known wherever the English language is spoken; and the church contains scores of men of lesser fame hardly known beyond the limits of their own country, in whom their American brethren might find noble examples of Christian virtue and shining illustrations of Christian scholarship.

New Railroad Scheme.—While narrow gauge railroads are being projected in all directions, a Mr. Barris of Wisconsin comes before the public with a scheme for a railroad to the West, to be built with a gauge of thirty feet. The road is to run from the East by the most direct line to Lake Erie. When it reaches the lake the road is to be built out into the water about twenty-five feet below the surface for some distance and there end. It is to be operated with a machine which is even more wonderful than the road, and which will navigate the water as well as traverse the land. When this ambitious locomotive arrives at the jutting off place at Lake Erie, it is to slide gracefully into the water, and by a slight transportation of machinery become a steamboat. When it has arrived at Monroe it assumes its character of a locomotive, and rolls off on another broad gauge road to Lake Michigan, whence it is to take water for Chicago. The machine is to be sufficiently large to carry a vessel of five hundred tons, so that all necessity for ship canals will be done away with. The inventor expects to attain a speed of one hundred and twenty-five miles per hour on land, and twenty-five miles in water. Probably no one will doubt that a great reduction in the price of freights may be expected when Mr. Barris gets his broad gauge road and amphibious locomotive in successful operation.

The Hon. Surveyor General and Hon. George White have been visiting Victoria County and making arrangements for the reception and location there of the expected Scandinavian immigrants. The prospect is that the quarters will be close and the experience unpleasant.—[Carleton Sentinel]

For the Standard. Mr. Editor—I was rather pleased with the letter of "Parent" in your paper of the 15th. Upon reference to the school act, I found he was correct in stating that all the towns in the Province have ten more holidays than St. Andrew's. This surely was not intended. I am one who would have to pay a pretty round school tax, but am nevertheless anxious that pupils and teachers should enjoy all the holidays they are entitled to by law. Children's health should be studied fully as much as their education, the latter would be of little service without the former. I am convinced also that lessons should be committed during school hours, instead of wearying the children and I may also add their parents, during the evenings and mornings; besides many parents are not qualified to explain the lessons. I hope the intelligent and active Trustees will authorize the teachers to give all the holidays granted by the 10th Regulation.

SKIFFED SEAMANSHIP.—Bright "Watchmate," Joseph Doucette, master, of Clare, from St. Martins for Yarmouth, with a cargo of salt, had a boisterous passage. On the 28th of April, when about 5 miles S. W. from Seal Island, she got in a squall, which unslipped and broke her rudder. She was then hoisted until next morning, when Capt. Doucette undertook to run her into Pubnico without any rudder, by trimming the sails, which he successfully accomplished, following the course of the channel from the entrance of the harbor into safe anchorage. Capt. D. displayed much skill and good seamanship, to which are doubtless due the preservation of the vessel, if not the lives of those on board. He is a brother of the owner of the "Watchmate," Urbain Doucette, Esq., M. P. P.—[Yarmouth Herald]

In all the world there's nothing so delightful as a tale of a faithful and constant love. Such a tale of masculine devotion we have to tell. At the beginning of the war a young and lovely maiden of Philadelphia promised her lily hand in marriage to a brave and beautiful youth in the Union army. Mill ponds were nothing to the smoothness with which their course of love ran, until at the end of the war the youth determined to seek his fortune in California. He departed burning with impatience to return and claim forevermore his charming, his angelic bride. Years passed on by as they were wont to pass;—the gentle lady looking in the glass found that her chestnut locks from day to day began to show decided signs of gray. A whisper of "old maid" rent her all too faithful heart—yet still she waited, sure that the brave, the beautiful, would return to comfort and bless. He came,—at last he came! With a bronzed cheek he came, with high hopes, with a prodigious fortune,—and a wife and twins. Alas!—[N. Y. Tribune]

SCH. "CARRIE."—A Cape Ann paper of 10th inst. says:—"The fishing schooner 'Onward,' which arrived at this port from the George's Bank yesterday, brought in the crew of the British Sch. 'Carrie,' of Yarmouth, N. S., picked up at sea in an open boat on the 29th ult. The 'Carrie' experienced a heavy squall when about 30 miles south of Mount Desert, and was capsized, dismasted, and filled with water. At the time of the disaster the mate and two men were on deck, and the captain succeeded in getting out of the cabin after the vessel was thrown on her beam ends, and had to walk along on the bulwarks to the boat, to which he took with the mate and two men on deck the other two men being unable to effect an escape. The names of the men that were drowned were Alfred Therio and James Canning. The wreck was almost under water, with both masts lying across decks. The dead bodies of the two men were found in the cabin."

—Here is another curiosity of English railway travel. Mr. John Philip Ayres, described as a wine-merchant, amused himself while journeying in a first class carriage on the London and South-Western Railway, not by whittling the benches, as a true Yankee would have done, but by mauling, with a true British lunacy, cut away the armlets, hat-straps, and blinds, and did otherwise damage the fittings of the carriage. It is not stated that this merchant had been drinking over-liberally of his own vintage, but that seems probable. Sad to relate, the magistrate sentenced this malicious mischief-doer to two months' hard labor in the House of Correction.

A few days ago Coleman Robinson, of Brewster Station, Putnam county, N. Y., was thrown from his carriage and had one of his legs broken, but was not supposed to have been much injured otherwise. He was engaged to be married to a Miss Little, of Carmel, and sent for her to take care of him while he was confined to the house. She declined unless they were united in marriage. He assented to the proposition, and last Tuesday evening they were joined in wedlock. The next day he complained of being much worse, and in the evening he died. Miss Little was, therefore, a maid, a bride, and a widow within twenty-four hours. Mr. Robinson left property to the amount of a million and a half of dollars.

STRIKES.—The carpenters of New York are at present on a strike for shorter hours. At a meeting held in their head quarters on Tuesday, the chairman stated that the strike had been successful beyond his sanguine expectations, and that he then thought it would end within two days. A large number of the masters have acceded to the demands of the men. At the same meeting the president of the Bricklayers' Association made a statement to the effect that a similar agitation among bricklayers would probably result in favor of the men without a strike. If the bricklayers however, were not granted eight hours at four dollars a day, they would all strike next Monday.

Advices from Michigan represent the strike as general at the Calumet, Hecla, Schoolcroft, Quincy, Franklin and Penabec mines. Two thousand men have been engaged. The ring-leaders at the Calumet and Hecla rivers were arrested, but were rescued by a mob from six deputy sheriffs. No one has been injured as yet. The strike has been going on twelve days.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—On Friday evening last, a young man named Peter Anderson, deck hand on the "New Era," lost his life under the following circumstances. The deceased and a young man named Wheeler were in the act of putting up the rail of the forward gangway soon after the steamer left Douglasston for Newcastle; the former carelessly stepped over the side and fell, nearly dragging the latter with him. Wheeler called out, the Captain stopped the boat instantly, but not before Anderson was struck by the wheel. The Captain immediately ran aft and threw him a life buoy, but he was evidently past helping himself, as he made no effort whatever to reach it. The wheel struck the poor fellow about the legs, and spun the body round and round; for a minute or two he was seen paddling his hands in the water, and just as the boat reached him, sank to rise no more.—[Union Advocate]

April 9, 1872.

Iron shipbuilders appear to be really becoming an important branch of industry in Denmark. Although for the last fifteen years small iron vessels, designed for trading between the various Baltic ports, have been built at Copenhagen, it is only recently that the construction of large steamers has been attempted. At present several of one thousand tons are building, and one of these, it is stated, will be employed in laying down the telegraph cable between China and Japan. Two steamers, each of nearly nine hundred tons—the "Rolle" and the "Thorvaldsen"—lately made the passage to New York, and these are said to be the first iron vessels built in Denmark which have ever entered that port.

'Sam,' said one little youngster to another, 'Sam, does your schoolmaster ever give you any rewards of merit?' 'I hope he does,' was the rejoinder; 'he gives me a lickin' regularly every day and says I merit two.'

'Why doesn't your father take a newspaper?' asked a man of a little boy whom he found pilfering one from his doorstep. 'Cause he'd rather send me to take it,' was the reply.

From J. J. RAINE, Esq.,
of La Motte, Montreal. "Having experienced the most gratifying results from the use of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, in the cure of my chronic cough, which I have in its progress, for many months, I was most gratified with its efficacy. For many months I was most greatly afflicted with a severe and obstinate cough, accompanied with much pain in the chest, which was entirely cured by the use of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. In three bottles after the first bottle was used, the cough ceased, and I was enabled to resume my usual avocations. At the same time I experienced a general improvement in my health, and my appetite returned. I have used the Balsam in my family, and it has proved to be a most valuable remedy. I am sure that each Canadian who has the Balsam should keep it in his family, and it is a preparation which has only to be tried to be acknowledged as the most valuable remedy for coughs."

A CURE FOR WHOOPING COUGH.
By Dr. WISTAR, C.E., Aug. 21, 1868.
Messrs. SETH W. FOLEY & SON,
Boston.—I have used your Balsam of Wild Cherry in the cure of my chronic cough, which I have in its progress, for many months, I was most gratified with its efficacy. For many months I was most greatly afflicted with a severe and obstinate cough, accompanied with much pain in the chest, which was entirely cured by the use of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. In three bottles after the first bottle was used, the cough ceased, and I was enabled to resume my usual avocations. At the same time I experienced a general improvement in my health, and my appetite returned. I have used the Balsam in my family, and it has proved to be a most valuable remedy. I am sure that each Canadian who has the Balsam should keep it in his family, and it is a preparation which has only to be tried to be acknowledged as the most valuable remedy for coughs."

Clergymen, Lawyers, Singers, and all those whose occupations require an unusual amount of the vocal organs, will find this Balsam of Wild Cherry, which will efficiently and instantaneously relieve such difficulties. This Balsam, unlike most others, is entirely
