Royalty Dumped Into a Ditch—Heavy Outlay Called for by Germany's Military Bill.

Germany's Military Outlay.

BERLIN, Oct. 19.—The report is confirmed that the outlay necessitated by the new military bill will be 67,000,000 marks in the first year and 65,000,000 marks yearly afterward.

Royalty in a Ditch.

VIENNA, Oct. 19.—The heir presumptive to the throne, Archduke Karl Ludwig, and his wife, were returning in a carriage last night from Wiener Neustadt. The night was very dark and the coachman missed the road. Suddenly the carriage fell into a ditch and was turned completely over. The archduke was stunned and the lower limbs of the archduchess were severely injured.

"Dr." Cream-Neill's Trial.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—This was the third day of the famous murder trial, and there was no diminution in the crowd in the court room. John Patrick Haynes testified through his visiting the photographer establishment of Amstad & Co., of Westminster bridge road, of which firm Haynes was a member. Neill was very eccentric. A friendship sprang up between them, and Haynes found that Neill was very free with his money. By going out with Neill Haynes learned of many of his amours. Afterwards he showed Haynes a notebook in which were entered, among other things, the initials of the women who had been to him. These were initials which he said referred to Elsie Doolittle, Matilda Clover and the girls Marsh and Shirrell, and there were also the initials "L. H.," which he said meant Louise Harvey. Haynes heard Neill declare that young Harper had murdered the girls. Subsequently Haynes and Neill were riding together, when they heard a woman shouting, "Arrests in the Stamford street case." Neill was greatly excited and dismounted at Charing Cross, where he bought several copies of different papers. He appeared to be much relieved when he found that the newspapers carried the story of Neill's arrest. "Road to ruin," he said, following me the last two or three days." After some general conversation McIntyre asked him if there was any reason why detectives should follow him. He replied that the only reason he knew was that he happened to have some improper photographs about him. He asked McIntyre if he would make inquiries and ascertain what he was being watched. McIntyre told him he would do so. Neill told McIntyre that he had on the previous evening met a woman in the Westminster bridge road, and that she told him that the police had sent her to make his acquaintance and find out who he was, as they believed he was connected with the Stamford street poisoning case. That was the last reference to the affair. Neill said that he had met a man in the morning on Marsh and Shirrell he met a man who was leaving his lodgings in the morning who introduced himself as a detective and said his name was Murray. This man questioned him as to his knowledge of Harper and his associations with him. He said the man Murray produced two letters addressed to the girls Marsh and Shirrell, at Stamford street. The letters, he said, warned the girls to be careful of Dr. Harper, or he would poison them. Neill said he had not done so. Neill handed him a photograph of young Dr. Harper. McIntyre told Neill he had been requested to obtain specimens of his handwriting, and at his dictation he wrote a number of words. They afterwards went to the Stamford street case. After some further discussion McIntyre said: "Doctor, you seem to be pretty well acquainted with this matter." He said: "Yes, I have followed it closely in the British Medical Journal." McIntyre met Neill at another time at the corner of a street in the Westminster bridge road. He said he was going away at 3 o'clock, and asked if he would be arrested if he left London. McIntyre told him he could not say, but if he would walk with him to Scotland Yard he would make inquiries. They walked some distance over the bridge, when Neill stopped and said: "I am very suspicious of you, and will go no further. I believe you are playing me double. You sent a woman to meet me at the British Medical Journal office." McIntyre said he had not done so. Neill asked McIntyre to return the photograph of Dr. Harper and promised to meet him at a public house in the Westminster bridge road, but failed to appear.

Laura Sabatini, who was engaged to marry Neill, was next called. She gave her testimony in a low, faltering voice, which grew stronger as her evidence proceeded. Her evidence was similar to that given at the preliminary hearing.

Inspector Harvey, of the criminal investigation department, testified to having had charge of the investigations into matters relating to the deaths of Ellen Doolittle, Alice Marsh, Emma Shirrell and Matilda Clover. The first he knew of Matilda Clover being poisoned was on April 28; he went to 88 Lambeth road and took down a statement, and from subsequent inquiries an order for the exhumation of the body of Matilda Clover was granted. The police did not know what was the cause of her death until after Dr. Stephenson reported.

Inspector Harvey was asked if anyone could have sworn a statement, and from subsequent inquiries an order for the exhumation of the body of Matilda Clover was granted. The police did not know what was the cause of her death until after Dr. Stephenson reported.

—BROWNING.

London, Thursday, Oct. 20.

Not only has Gladstone's doctor told him that his eyes are again all right, but he assures the Grand Old Man that he is in excellent health. A wonderful statesman is the British Liberal leader.

SAYS THE MONTREAL HERALD: "Considering how little Hon. John Carling appears to be esteemed by his colleagues, was it worth while for the Conservatives to profit by the theft of the London seat last winter?"

SIR ARTHUR SULLIVAN says that a railway carriage is the best place to compose in, the shaking one gets there being a great mental stimulant. To ambitious musicians therefore, we will have to say, "Go hire a car."

By shielding Haggart, Caron, and other prominent offenders connected with the Government at Ottawa, and pursuing Mr. Mercier with a determination akin to vindictiveness, Sir John Thompson is awakening much sympathy for the fallen statesman. Why should there not be one law for all?

AT THE gathering of street railway magnates of Canada and the United States in Cleveland, Ohio, this week, some important topics are under discussion. Among the subjects are: "A Perfect Overhead Electrical Construction," "Economy in Machine Shops for Electrical Street Railways," "Powerhouse Engines," "Relative Cost of Operating Cable, Horse and Electric Street Railways." Mr. V. Cronyn, president of the London Street Railway Company, is in attendance, and will doubtless have some new wrinkles to introduce here when he returns.

REV. DR. MCARTHUR, of New York, well known to many Canadians, does not think that it is degrading for a citizen to take part in politics. He urged his hearers the other evening to look well after their duty as citizens, and added: "Can too strong language be used of the neglect of a political duty? If we neglect our political duty a curse will come upon us in the enactment of bad laws, in injury to the health of the city and in other forms of violated law. Many in our day neglect their duty. Their patriotism is of a poor type. They neglect the duty of registering, and many who register do not take the trouble to vote." Politics are good or bad in a country just in proportion as the good men in the country stand up for what is just at all times.

NOT "THANKSGIVING DAY."
If it is necessary to have a public holiday, with the accompanying disarrangement of business at this season of the year, well and good. But why call it Thanksgiving Day? As observed in Canada, Thanksgiving Day is devoted chiefly to shooting wild fowl and squirrels, to holding military parades, and so forth. The Thanksgiving services are participated in by but a few, and it is farcical to say that the day is observed in the manner intended when it was first decreed. When a law of this kind is not obeyed it is customary to abolish it. No harm would come if this were the speedy fate of the Thanksgiving Day enactment. We see every reason for holding, indeed, that not one day a year but every one of the 52 Sundays in the twelve months should be observed as Thanksgiving Days.

ASH FOR THE THAMES.
It is again proposed to restock the River Thames with that most desirable fish, the black bass. We would heartily approve of any scheme having for its object the increase of the food fish in the West. But it is open to question if any scheme of this kind can be successfully carried out till an earnest attempt is made to purify the river and to keep it clear of all impurities. A stream of the volume of the Thames can scarcely be made a desirable home for food fish while it is used as a depository for the sewage of large towns and cities on its banks. If the river is not kept clean, it is doubtful if good fish would thrive in it, and even if they did it is questionable whether most of us would care for eating them. The production of a good fish supply in the Thames is thus dependent, in no small degree, upon the sanitary condition of the river. The time will come when people will marvel that they permitted so fine a stream to be polluted by sewage when it is so comparatively easy to turn it to its natural purpose as an agent for enriching the soil and rendering it profitable. The fish crop does not need a stimulant of this character.

SIGNS OF COMING CHRISTIAN UNITY.

Such gatherings as Christian Endeavor Conventions, composed as they are of members or adherents of various churches, are tokens of a great practical unity at present and a still greater unity that shall be.

As a contribution to the spirit we desire to see increased, we clip two speeches from a recent issue of the London Times. The occasion was the meeting of the 32nd annual Church of England Congress, and the place Folkestone, England. The congress was first cordially welcomed to the town by the mayor. Then followed a fine address by a Congregational minister, to which the Archbishop of Canterbury replied in generous and cordial terms. The Times' report is as follows:

Rev A. J. Palmer (Congregational minister) said: Ever since we learned that you had graciously accepted the invitation of our mayor and vicar to hold the congress of 1892 in Folkestone we have looked forward to your visit with the keenest interest, and, in approaching you to-day, we desire, on behalf of Nonconformists in this district, to acknowledge the distinction which you have conferred upon the inhabitants of this town by honoring us with your presence, and to offer you a cordial and affectionate welcome. Bearing in mind the courteous, frank and friendly spirit which breathed through the proposals of his Grace the Archbishop for home reunion and the reunion conferences lately held at Grindelwald, we have a growing conviction that the distinctions between various Christian communions are not impassable barriers, but rather as hedges of roses and honeysuckles across which we can shake hands and wish one another God-speed in the name of the Lord. We believe profoundly in the supreme virtue of charity, the bridge of love which connects in brotherhood, without confounding in thought, divergent principles. (Heard.) One of the noblest features in modern church life is the prominence given to this grace, and the joyous thrill of unity which stirs the undercurrent of religious forms and beliefs. If we could prove that all religious differences are of little moment, we should not have helped the cause of true charity, but should rather have annihilated one of the regions in which she finds her hardest work, and in which she has won victories which have crowned her with the greatest glory. Charity, we submit, says a great deal about the differences may be, let us not suspect each other's sincerity; let us pray that by the grace of the same almighty kindness we may reach that land where we shall study eternal truth without sin to dim the eye or warp the judgment, and where we shall reverse many an opinion and forget many an alienation. Charity looks for what is excellent in those who differ from her, as well as in those who hold her own tenets, and she looks for the best in all. In welcoming you here to-day, we hesitate not to say that we greatly appreciate the brilliant erudition of your scholars, many of whose works adorn the shelves of our libraries and shed new light upon old and familiar truths, the ability of your clergy, whose mental and spiritual force gives intensity to their words, the beauty of your services, the vast extent of your many-sided and unparalleled activity, and the part you are taking in all the moral and social movements of modern times. For a part as we may sometimes appear to be, the distance between us is but a measurable stream in comparison with the gulf which separates us from those who question the Deity, the atonement, and the crown rights of the son of God. "Let an attack be made," says the greatest living Nonconformist preacher, "upon the fundamental doctrines of Christianity—the churchman is ready with his answer, the Nonconformist with his, and I find in this instantaneity and complete reply, coming, not from one, but from all quarters, a noble and sensible answer to the charge that the church of Jesus Christ is divided, and there is no cohesion amongst its atoms. It is said that the great principles upon which religion rests have been touched by the spirit of the age, and are melting away, and there can be no doubt that our attitude to Christian truth is very different from that of our fathers 50 years ago. Have you watched the twilight on the sea at evening? Now, principles, like the sea, are melting away, and now the waters answer the blue of the sky, now darkness into gray, now is fretted into a thousand dimples, now the tips of the tiny breakers are crested by the toiling wind—in one quarter of an hour these and many changes no words can express shall have checked the scene and made the whole surface hardly for two consecutive moments the same, and yet the sun shines steadily on, and the sea, pausing not in its ebb and flow, and abeyant as may be the clouds of human opinion which play across the surface of the history of thought, through them all God is working and by them all God is leading to His own end, the removal of the things that are shaken. That the things which cannot be shaken may remain. In face of all the problems and doubts of this age, we join with you without faltering of intellect and without shame of heart in affirming our unwavering attachment to the great principles which are not new, and which cannot grow old, not which we have found out, but which have found out us, the life-blood of our liberties, the heart and lungs of the great body of Christian truth, the basis of England's greatness, the crown of England's glory. England is our joint inheritance. Very little have any of us done to make it what it is, but it is in the power of us all—Churchmen and Nonconformists—to hand it on at least unimpaired in its integrity as the sanctuary of liberty, progress, and religion. We are ready to stand by your side in the crusade against class hatred, national pride, commercial depravity and greed of gain, intemperance and lax morality, in helping to solve the problems which grow out of the relation of landlord and tenant, capital and labor, the needs of the poor, and the duties of the rich—problems which grow out of the contrast between the 'haves' and the 'have nots.' And surely in encountering the helplessness and reclaiming the erring, in lifting the veil from the spirit that has darkened, in laying merciful hands upon those we have too long passed by, in preaching the Gospel of hope to the men and women of to-day—there is a common platform on which we can all meet, work for every moment of the most protracted life and every energy of the most philanthropic nature. Our hearts plead that the cloud may break in a shower of blessing upon your assembly, that in your midst the sound of the King's royal feet may be heard, that the Holy Spirit may guide you in all your deliberations, that thrilling words may go from this hall that shall arouse the courage, and win the love, and constrain the enthusiasm of multitudes beyond, and that the meetings of this great congress may contribute to the glory of God, the spiritual advantage of all whom you represent, and the highest interests of the land we love so well. (Cheers.)

The archbishop replied as follows: Mr.

Palmer, and all ministers and brethren who are joined with you in this address to us here to-day. We thank you, to begin with, for one of the most striking and important addresses that will be listened to in this congress. We thank you exceedingly for having given us, not a general welcome, but for having gone into particulars about the things that are nearest to the hearts of all of us. We thank you for the touching and beautiful prayer which in spirit breathes through the whole address that you have delivered to us—the prayer that God Almighty will make brethren to know each other, and sister hearts to cleave to each other, in this world as well as in the world to come. For your welcome to this place we have to thank you more than congresses of time past; and we have heard—I do not know whether I am justified in doing more than just touching on it—that you have yourselves made graceful arrangements by which you might have a churchman for your mayor on this occasion. (Cheers.) That is a touch of kindness and of tenderness which will go to all hearts. We thank you—though we scarcely dare to do so—for working in this address the most beautiful and most beautiful of all our work which we should never have dared to utter in our congress or elsewhere. A spirit of humble submission to him who must give the rain that blesses the work both of Paul and of Apollonius, who must give all the increase, would, I hope, prevent our opening our lips upon many of those topics upon which you have spoken so truly and so warmly. There is no doubt that it is the fact that in this present age there is breathing amongst all religious men of every standing and of every profession what I venture to call, after considering the subject in the light of past history, a sincere, more touching, and, to use your own word, more affectionate desire for unity than we can mark in any of the times that are past. God in his own time has brought into perfection the yearnings that have started up in many places, and here has worked a great burst of missions, and there has worked a great stroke of reformation far and wide; and we should be indeed very mistrustful of all that we believe of him if we did not think that this yearning for unity which is in your hearts, which is in our hearts, and which is in all religious hearts, would, in God's time—and I would believe at no distant time—have its consummation. (Cheers.) You have been putting into full and clear words for us the noble motto which a great father of the third century used to sum up what he thought to be the spirit which should pervade the whole church. He knew that it was impossible for all men to think alike, but he held that all men might love alike; and he summed it up in something like these words, what the aim of all Christians ought to be: "In unite spiritus diversa sententia." It was quite possible, but it was quite possible, for all that, that their hearts should be united. You, sir, have to-day given us a most beautiful pledge—and one in which we thoroughly trust—that your lips and aspiration do not that you may do your work by spilling ears, but that we shall march as one army against our threefold enemies. If we forget their existence we are in their power. If we forget the blood by which we are sanctified we are in their power. If we forget the banner together to fight under one banner against sin, the world and the devil. (Cheers.)

After Scarlet Fever, Diphtheria, Pneumonia and other prostrating diseases, Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled to thoroughly purify the blood and give needed strength. Read this:

"My boy had Scarlet Fever when four years old, leaving him very weak and with blood poisoned with cancer. His eyes became inflamed, his sufferings were intense, and for 7 weeks he could not even open his eyes. I took him to the Eye and Ear Infirmary, but their remedies did him no good. I began giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla which soon cured him. I know it saved his sight, for it has his very life." ABRAHAM F. BLACKMAN, 2838 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

A Great Gathering.

The fact that so many were slow in sending in their names had happened the local committee. In view of this it is thought that the president's remarks on the subject were a little out of place.

It is understood that a motion will be brought in at the present convention to restrict the number of delegates, as the annual gatherings are becoming of too unwieldy a size to handle properly. Each society has only one voting delegate as it is, but any members who can attend are entitled to a place in the convention. Because of this hundreds come from round about the place of meeting expecting, of course, to be fed and lodged well in attendance.

A huge streamer hangs in the church grounds to attract the eyes of visitors.

A large number of delegates continued to arrive to-day.

Preparations have been made for a grand reception and supper in the Princess Rink to-night.

Rev. R. Johnston, B.A., of Lindsay, who was to have replied to the address of welcome last evening, telegraphed that his sister's illness would prevent his presence.

The local committee of management is as follows: Chairman, Mr. A. J. Clark; secretary, Mr. W. J. Doherty.

The chairman of sub-committees are: Finance, Mr. W. J. Doherty; building, Mr. P. T. Talling, B.A.; music, Mr. W. C. Ferguson, B.A.; registration, Mr. R. Kirkpatrick; social, Mr. A. THURSDAY MORNING.

Eight hundred Endeavour or more rose with the lack and at 6:30 o'clock St. Andrew's Church was filled. The sunrise prayer was conducted by Rev. J. F. Barker, of Ingersoll, and consisted wholly of devotional exercises, the delegates taking individual parts.

The business session opened at 9:15 with singing and prayer.

The following nominating committees were appointed:

Credentialed—Miss E. M. Carson (chairwoman), L. B. Randall, Port Hope; McLellan, Anderson, St. Thomas; Miss Dunlop, Lindsay.

Resolutions—Rev. Canon Richardson (chairman); Thomas Morris, jun., Hamilton; Rev. T. W. Holmes, Stratford; Rev. M. P. Talling, London; Rev. M. Myers, Norwich; Miss Mann, Peterboro.

Boville, Halton.

Rally Committee—Rev. George Barron, St. Catharines; R. W. Dillon, Toronto; Rev. A. F. McGregor, Forest; Rev. R. J. Colville, Toronto.

Rev. Dr. Dickson, of Galt, delivered his annual address. During the year the number of societies had increased from 546 to 851. The year would be known as a year of countering organization, known as a year of countering organization, known as a year of countering organization.

At present in a formative state and needed careful supervision and guidance. His natural tendency was upwards, but it should be trained like the vine. Its action was loving, devoted and consecrated; its service was simple, natural and unobtrusive, yet winning and effective. The pledge lay at the root of C. E. fidelity and to the pledge. (Applause.) One of the perils of the age was the confidence placed in committees and conventions and one great excellence of the pledge was that it emphasized individual loyalty to Christ. The speaker recommended the encouragement of the publication and literature department as a way to strengthen the work. Last year of 546 societies only 100 contributed to the finances. He had pleasure in presenting two banners of the Galt Y. P. S. C. E. to the county having the largest increase in junior societies. (Applause.)

The annual report of the Provincial secretary, Mr. E. A. Hardy, Lindsay, formed twelve years ago by Brother Clarke, the society now numbered nearly 1,500,000 young men and women. The report traced the development of the Ontario branch since it was organized in Toronto in 1884.

In 1884 there were two societies, in 1887 there were 13, in 1888, 55; in 1889 it had grown to 69; in 1890, to 262; in 1891, and to 851 in 1892. (Applause.)

Fourteen denominations were included in the societies in Ontario. The first convention was held in 1889, with 203 outside delegates; the second in Hamilton with 380; the third in Peterboro in 1891 with 409, and the fourth—the present one—in St. Andrew's, London, which promised to be the greatest gathering of young Christians ever known in Canada. (Applause.)

The secretary urged the appointment of a paid assistant secretary, as the work was too heavy for one.

He alluded to the petitions circulated by the society for the closing of the Canadian department of the World's Fair on Sundays. One point to be considered was whether the delegates at future conventions were to be billeted or not. (Hear, hear.) There were in Ontario 851 societies with 23,870 active members, 23,897 associate members. Of these 22,386 were church members and 1,446 had joined the church. The corresponding figures for the leading denominations were: 9,658 active members, 317 societies, 8,926 church members, and 416 who had joined.

Presbyterian—286 societies, 8,306 active members, 5,516 associate members, 7,977 church members, and 758 who had joined the church.

Baptists—68 societies, 1,699 active members, 783 associate members, 1,616 church members, and 56 who had joined the church.

Congregationalists—53 societies, 1,357 active members, 654 associate members, 1,177 church members, 172 who had joined the church.

Disciples—11 societies, 235 active members, 163 associate members, 232 church members, 22 who had joined the church.

Church of England—11 societies, 266 active members, 243 associate members, 288 church members, 10 who had joined the church.

Christian—7 societies, 170 active members, 93 associate members, 116 church members.

Ontario had 851 societies, Quebec 97, Alberta 3, Assiniboia 10, British Columbia 20, Cape Breton 11, Manitoba 42, New Brunswick 57, Nova Scotia 68, Saskatchewan 1, P. E. I. 33—total, 1,393.

The total Canadian membership was 55,000. There had been a great addition to the ranks by the entrance of over 100 Epworth Leagues of Christian Endeavor. (Applause.)

In October, 1891, there were 24 local unions and 3 county unions. Now they had 29 local unions, 13 county unions, 8 township unions and 3 district unions. There were now 53 unions in Ontario. It was pleasant to report that there were now 41 senior societies, 14 Presbyterians, 16 Methodist, 2 Baptist, 1 Congregationalist, 1 Reformed Episcopal, 1 Union, Mr. R. J. Colville, Toronto, had been appointed superintendent of junior work. The sum of $3,544 63 had been contributed to missions in 1891-2, which might be greatly increased if every society would do its duty. There were only 29 temperance unions, but if rivers of whiskey did not flow down the throats of parents these figures could easily be explained.

The report of the treasurer was brief. It showed $76 61 cash on hand, with liabilities which left a balance of $42 65. Mr. Ferguson, who presented it, said there was no organization of the extent of the Y. P. S. C. E. that did with as little money. Voluntary service was its rule, but it might be well to spend a little more in order that the management might be thoroughly efficient. A paid assistant secretary he considered a necessity.

Miss Effie M. Carson, of London, read her report as editor of the Christian Endeavor. She urged increased interest in this department, and more subscriptions. Careful attention should be paid to the secular press. It should be supplied with Christian Endeavor news as it was read by the masses.

Mr. Ronnie followed up Miss Carson's speech with a vigorous address.

Then followed a free parliament on junior work conducted by Mr. R. J. Colville, of Toronto, who has superintended over this branch. He laid down some excellent rules for the government of this part of the service, and told what had been accomplished in this line.

Mr. Nelson, of Peterboro, told of the splendid work done among the juveniles in Peterboro and recommended the active formation of junior societies throughout the Province. A junior society had been formed in Galt, six years ago, and was flourishing.

A number of members signified their intention of following the suggestions thrown out by the speaker.

A resolution of sympathy was passed expressing regret at the illness of Rev. G. B. Sage, of London West.

Miss Laura Tyson extended the greetings of the Y. W. C. T. U. of London to the convention.

Prayer by Rev. Ira Smith, of London, and the benediction by Rev. Canon Richardson, brought the session to a close.

THE WEATHER.

of Saturday. In Ontario and Manitoba

the pressure has increased a little with fine weather.

monton, 50°—46°; Prince Albert, 34°—59°;

COLUMBUS DAY IN CHICAGO.

Two Interesting Events—The City Full

to Overflowing.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 20.—Two of the most important events in connection with the Columbian celebrations and the dedication of the World's Fair, took place yesterday.

The first event was the celebration of "Columbus Day" by the school children of the city. The other was the inaugural reception banquet and ball. The distinguished visitors were tendered a royal reception. The city was filled to overflowing, every hotel, boarding house and lodging house being full. Some 4,000 citizens of various States had been invited to participate in the reception tendered to the President, Vice-President and ex-Presidents of the United States, the representatives of foreign Governments, governors of States and Territories and other distinguished guests.

Walking in the rain often hardens and removes all the finish from fine leather boots and shoes. To restore the original luster without cracking the leather and secure a fine polish use P. G. French Dressing. It will preserve the leather and soften without injury the finest boots. Don't take any but P. G. French Dressing. Warranted in every way.

No one need fear cholera or any summer complaint if they have a bottle of Dr. J. D.

Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial ready for use.

It cures all looseness of the bowels and causes a healthy and natural action. This is a medicine adapted for the young and old, rich and poor, and is rapidly becoming the most popular medicine for cholera, dysentery, etc., in the market.
