

CARUSO EXPIRES FOLLOWING AN OPERATION

LITTLE HOPE THAT EITHER M'FADDEN OR HOTRUM WILL MAKE A CONFESSION

Condemned Men Spending Last Day in a Quiet Manner—Hotrum Writes Verses—Execution Will Be Carried Out At 8 o'Clock—Officials Forbidden To Give Out Interviews Regarding Carrying Out of Death Sentences.

Toronto, Aug. 2.—Roy Hotrum and William McFadden, who will be hanged tomorrow for the murder of Leo Sabine, spent their last day in a quiet manner. Hotrum broke down and cried yesterday afternoon upon learning the news that there could be no executive clemency for him. But at noon today neither he nor McFadden had indicated any intention of confessing to having fired the fatal shot.

Neither W. K. Murphy, counsel for Hotrum, nor Fletcher Kerr, counsel for McFadden, visited the jail this morning or knew whether they would pay a farewell visit or not. "It breaks me all up to see that lad," said Mr. Murphy. Following a long conference in his office this morning with Charles and James Hotrum, brothers of the accused man, his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. Murphy announced that nothing further would or could be done to procure clemency for his client. After lunch at a restaurant, Hotrum's relatives entered the jail for a farewell, having been notified that the execution will probably take place around 8 a.m. tomorrow. "Nothing has occurred since

TRANSIENTS BEAT LOCAL MEN TO JOBS

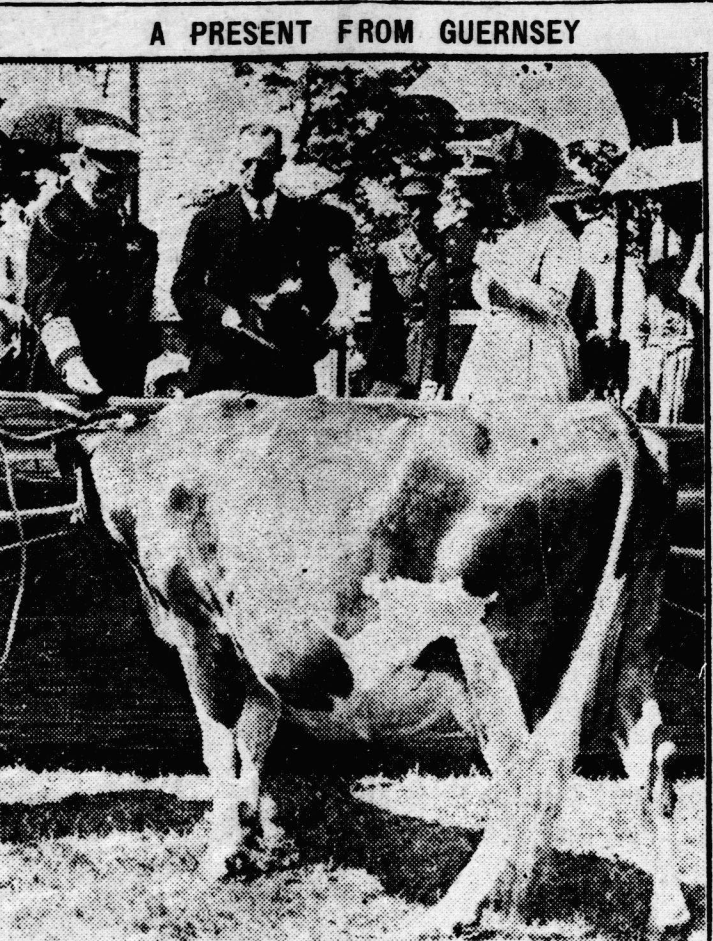

Clever Ruse Used by Strangers To Secure Work in the City.

MANY GOING WEST

Social Service Council's Appeal For Farm Workers Brings Response.

Despite several warnings, strangers from far and near seem to again be making London their objective. Quite a number have dropped into the city over the week-end in search of work, and they hail from all points of the compass.

Just how the employment agents and the different employing interests can be misled has now been brought to light. The newcomer, especially with available cash, is soon "wise" to the fact that as a general rule, the firms are endeavoring to fill the local situation by hiring, whenever they have requirement, and whenever feasible, bona fide workers of the city. With a handy knowledge of the ropes, the passing worker establishes himself at a rooming house, takes the landlady into his confidence, and in event of a prospective employer making inquiries there for him, he will be assured that the applicant in question has been a steady boarder for any number of months.

ENRICO CARUSO FAMOUS TENOR DIES IN ITALY

Operation for Abscess Brought on Peritonitis.

AN UNEXPECTED RELAPSE

Was on Way to Rapid Recovery Until a Week Ago.

New York, Aug. 2.—Cables from Naples today announce the death of Enrico Caruso, the world-famous tenor. The last word received here from Naples was that Caruso was improving nicely and that his voice would not be permanently impaired by his illness.

The condition of the singer, which had been considered satisfactory until recently, became very grave yesterday, peritonitis developing, and another operation being considered necessary. From the beginning of his relapse, however, there was serious concern over the outcome, and last night his life was despaired of.

CONTRACTORS CLAIM THAT SPECIFICATIONS FOR WORK AMOUNT TO PERSECUTION

Ald. Wenige Declares City Engineer Is Freezing Out Competition—Engineer Brazier Refuses To Make Comment—Mayor Little Asserts There Is Nothing to the Complaint—Letter Characteristic of the Firm.

Alleging that "plain persecution" of contractors who have paved London streets in the past, on the part of this city is in vogue, and "that there is no other city on this continent asking such ridiculous guarantees from contractors," the Standard Paving Company of Ottawa has written a strong letter of protest to City Clerk S. Baker, at the same time refusing to tender for bids of paving local streets.

This letter was read at a special meeting of No. 2 committee of the city council recently, but was filed, and City Engineer Brazier was later awarded the contract for paving city streets, he being the only person tendering on the jobs. Among the grievances listed by the Ottawa firm is that the city has the privilege of putting the city roller on the grade to test it at $25 per day, although the cost of maintenance shall just finish rolling the grade with identically the same roller.

RAILWAY CLERKS TO HAVE SALARIES CUT BY $12.24 A MONTH

35,000 Workers Will Be Affected by Change.

Montreal, Aug. 2.—Wage reductions to be assessed against clerical staffs of Canadian railways in conformity with the general reduction made effective July 16, have been worked out. Clerks and all those coming under that general classification will be reduced $12.24 per month, and those classified as office boys by $10.20. It is stated that approximately 35,000 workers will be affected by these two changes. Notification of the new rates will have been forwarded to these affected.

Announcement of the detailed reduction of clerical forces completes the whole program of tentative wage changes first mooted by the railways in June. They will remain in effect, the railways state, pending final negotiations or arbitration on working and wage conditions between the companies and their employees. Such negotiations will be taken up individually by each branch of labor and no final agreement is anticipated until well into next fall.

MAY DEPORT FOUR MEN ARRESTED ON A BEGGING CHARGE

Magistrate Tells Quartet To Write Home For Transportation.

Charles E. Ans, Gilmore Wilkes, Silas Langford and Harry Harris, who "play with a score" according to their own confession, put on a little sketch in police court this morning when they faced Magistrate A. H. M. Graydon to explain their being arrested on a vagrancy charge, but the audience was not very sympathetic. Wilkes and Evans will test the soup in Carter Inn during the next three days, while their two companions will feast on soup and "black-strap" for a week.

Harris, who has been booked for a week's engagement down at the jail, claims to be a book agent for a Chicago magazine. The court did not believe that, but would have so far as to send him to the workhouse, so he was allowed in search of business. Wilkes and Evans hail from Richmond, Virginia, while Langford is a native of Winston Salem, North Carolina.

MAYOR CHURCH WOULD HAVE CITIZENS VOTE ON PROPOSED INCREASE

Toronto, Aug. 2.—Mayor Church, at the board of control meeting this morning made the proposal that the people of the city of Toronto should vote on the proposal to increase street railway fares before the increases are put into effect when the city takes over the railway as a civic ownership proposition in September next. It is generally understood that the transportation committee will then advance fares from 4 to 7 cents.

CANNOT BLAME STORM FOR CONDITION OF THE PINE LAWN HOUSES

Mayor E. S. Little Declares Story of Condition of Housing Commission's Houses Carried by Advertiser To Be Correct and Complaints Fully Justified—The Contractors Should Be Compelled To Rectify Conditions.

Following the publication by The Advertiser a few weeks ago of extracts from the report of J. W. Cunliffe, chairman of the London Housing Commission, regarding forty complaints on houses in the Pine Lawn subdivision, articles and interviews have been printed declaring those extracts to be "exaggerated," "damaging distortions," and "not true."

This report, as seen by me shows the complaints to be justified, and the recent heavy storm cannot be blamed for causing the damage," declared Mayor E. S. Little to the Advertiser today. "I am merely repeating what I said at the last meeting of the housing commission. What was published in The Advertiser is correct, and I hope that the contractors may be compelled to rectify matters. I do not know if the commission has any money held back on the contractors for this purpose."

In view of the fact that the exclusively published extracts in The Advertiser have been branded as outlined above, and to eliminate "damaging distortions," the report of Chairman J. W. Cunliffe following inspection of the Pine Lawn houses is shown below.

SON SEEKS FATHER HE HAS NOT SEEN SINCE 8 YEARS OLD

Abraham Broom of R. R. No. 1, Mosley has asked The London Advertiser to assist him in locating his father, George Broom, who resided on a farm near Seaford about 22 years ago. Mr. Broom stated that he has had no word of his father since he was eight years of age. He has many times tried to locate him, but his searching was not rewarded. After reading the story in The Advertiser, which told of two missing men having been found through interviews published in that paper, he decided to ask The Advertiser to assist him in locating his father.

Springbank Outrivals All Other Parks On the American Continent, Claim

Variety of Scenic, Instructive and Pleasure Features Appeals To More People Than Any Other One Park of Repute—All Leading Features Boasted by Other Parks Are Duplicated in Greater or Lesser Degree in London's Great Pleasure Resort and Playground.

"Most beautiful park in America," or something to that effect reads a large placard in the London street cars, relative to Springbank. How much truth is there in the assertion made or implied by the placard, or is it plain bombast. It's a big statement to make. Perhaps, the street railway or the public utility department can get away with it. But the ordinary citizen should think twice before he goes forth to battle too vociferously upon the merits of Springbank Park extolling the beauties of all the other parks in North, South and Central America. One might be well advised to bear in mind that this sweepstakes contest is made in the street car placard, overlooking two great national parks at Banff and Yellowstone and several great city parks like Central Park in New York and Lincoln Park in Chicago, not forgetting to mention Pinarof Park in St. Thomas and the new Fishermen's Paradise Park at Pond Mills.

The claims of the street car advertising drew battle, just the other day, for instance, on the part of some people from Detroit. They weren't ready to admit for one moment that Springbank was even equal to Belle Isle or Palmer Park. Subjected to psycho-analytical tests, the Detroiters made a lot of admissions. They hadn't really been around Springbank, they hadn't climbed the reservoir hill, or wandered through all the pleasant woodland paths and roads, and hadn't even visited the zoo at Springbank. They had just ridden through on the street car and sat down to watch the crowds around the pavilion.

Ducks or Swans.

Until recently, the principal attraction of Palmer Park, Detroit, was a large flock of ducks. Some Detroiters, who had never got outside the half-mile limit from an auto factory all their lives, might suppose those ducks were swans. But the Michigan farmers who come to town for the State Fair every fall and occasionally get hawbaked into taking a sight-seeing bus to Palmer Park know they're ducks. Now, Springbank Park has real black Australian swans. What's more, there are a dozen large level tracts of woodland within five miles of London, out of any one of which London could make a replica of Palmer Park, Detroit. But London would have to travel far to find another equally good site for Springbank Park. As for Belle Isle, it has a really remarkable aquarium and also an attractive conservatory. There are seals in the Belle Isle conservatory, but there are also seals at Springbank Zoo. And outside of a banana tree and a few cacti, the Belle Isle conservatory hasn't got

TO KNOW FATE OF TORONTO PRISONERS

Companion of Murrells Is Continually Talking of Melbourne Crime.

Since Henry Jack Williams, alias William Henry Vaughan, was separated from Sidney and William Murrell at the jail, quietness has prevailed there. Previous to the separation the Murrell brothers, who with Williams, will be tried for the murder of Russell Campbell at Melbourne on April 11, when supreme court opens here on September 26, were reported to have mistreated Williams, causing a continual state of unrest in their ward. Now the brothers are quiet.

Williams, however, continues to talk of the attempted bank robbery, with which they have been connected by the authorities. It has been learned from a reliable source.

Williams, it was stated today, has been inquiring daily as to the fate of William Murrell, who has been sentenced to die at Toronto. He seems to be more concerned about the future of the prisoner at Toronto than he is of his own. He has not been informed of the decree from Ottawa yet.

At one time the three local men, who are awaiting trial for the capital crime charged against them, were allowed to play quoits together in the exercise yard, but now, it is understood, Williams does not go out with the other two men. He is most contented when he comes into contact with someone who will listen attentively to his almost continuous talk, it is claimed.

Motorman Compton left his car for a minute, and when he returned he made the discovery that someone had stolen his watch, which he had left hanging on a hook in the vestibule.

BICYCLE THIEF WORKS FAST—Fred Taylor, a Y. M. C. A. official, now realizes the fact that some thieves work fast. He had just returned to the city a few nights ago and rode to the Y. M. C. NOT ANY CONCERN OF DR. STEVENSON, DECLARES CHITTICK

County Magistrate Thinks London Member Is Acting Out of Place.

NEARLY ISSUED WRIT

Alleged Indiscriminate Trapping of Autoists Raises Lively Argument.

Squire W. H. Chittick, who deals with a large number of motor vehicle cases in the county of Middlesex, says that he cannot see that complaints regarding the activities of county constables in catching speeders, should concern Dr. H. A. Stevenson, member for the city of London in the Ontario Government. He thinks that if any action is taken it should be promoted by J. G. Lethbridge, M. P. P., or J. W. Freeborn, M. P. P., or other members for county electoral districts, as the affair is a county one.

If his name had been mentioned in connection with the matter, Squire Chittick would have issued a writ immediately, he declared this morning. Dr. Stevenson went to Toronto as the result of the complaints of motorists who claimed to have been "victims" of the county constables, to acquaint the authorities with the matter, and it was reported that he would even urge proceedings to have the constables removed from their positions because of their alleged indiscriminate "trapping" of autoists.

BRITAIN ABANDONS PRELIMINARY PLAN

London, Aug. 2.—Great Britain has dropped the proposal to hold a preliminary conference on Pacific questions, and has agreed to participate in the Washington conference as originally submitted by President Harding, according to official circles here today.

This decision was reached after an exchange of conversations between London and Washington. Great Britain has also agreed to the original date suggested, November 11, the anniversary of Armistice Day. If President Harding still considers that the most suitable time, and will enter the conference without any reservations as to the set program, it was stated.

Doubt is expressed whether Premier Hughes of Australia and Premier Maguire of New Zealand will be able to attend, but they will, it is said, be represented by a British delegation. The attendance of Mr. Lloyd George, the prime minister, also depends upon circumstances, it was stated.

POLICE OFFICE IS PLANNED

Proposal To Acquire Adjoining Property Is Under Consideration.

MORE ROOM NEEDED

Enlargements Would Provide Room For Proposed Juvenile Court.

In conversation with Dr. James D. Wilson today, an Advertiser reporter learned that already city officials have been seeking a location for a juvenile court, and that Dr. Wilson has been approached regarding the obtaining of his premises at 134 Carling street for such purpose. He is willing to do anything in that way to aid the scheme and would even lease the premises with the exception of a court room, if desired. However, he stated that he did not want an impression to be created that he is trying to get the city to take the building. He is not particular, because at present time he is deriving a little income from it.

The building, which is heated from the same plant that the police station is heated by, could be altered to meet the requirements of a court room easily. The second floor could be turned into a juvenile court room by removing a few partitions, and the magistrate's office and the police court clerk's office could be located on the ground floor. Then the space occupied by the present offices in the police station could be added to that of the regular police court, making it large enough to accommodate all the people who come to court when there is a large list of cases on the docket. At present many spectators and witnesses have to remain outside the court room or be content with standing room.

The building has been a holding juvenile court at the city hall, but this, it is claimed, would inconvenience the magistrate, and would necessitate the bringing of police witnesses from the police station to the city hall. If Ald. F. E. Harley's juvenile court scheme, which is now ready for the city council's approval, passes, Magistrate A. H. M. Graydon will become juvenile judge.

With a court in the building adjoining the police station he could more easily handle both courts, for a passageway, which once existed, could be reopened between the two buildings. Under that arrangement the juvenile attendants at the court could enter by a door separate from the police station, and would not have to go through the police court, as they do now. This would be better for the children, as they would not leave with the impression that they had been forced to go through a place where all classes of criminals are dealt with, it is claimed.

The plan of alteration, as above outlined, it is understood, is the one adopted, if the premises are secured.

CANNING COMPETITION FOR BOYS AND GIRLS AT STRATHROY FAIR

Home Garden Competition Is Now Well Under Way.

Consistent with their procedure of last year the Ontario department of agriculture will conduct competitions again this year in conjunction with the Strathroy fair in September.

The canning contest, open to the boys and girls of the Strathroy district, is already scheduled. In order that the youths may be given every possible advantage in their work to insure at least a fair showing in every instance, demonstrations will be held at various points when many valuable suggestions will be made. Mrs. R. H. Greer is expected to arrive from Toronto in a week's time for this purpose.

The home gardening competition will be conducted again this year as usual. R. A. Pinn, local representative of the department of agriculture, is now visiting the different participants and will have his list of winners ready long before fair time. At the fair two other contests will be held—exhibits of the products of their gardens and exhibition of canned products of the same. It is fully expected that, as was the case last season, the entries will be numerous.

An international plowing match will be held at Woodstock on three days, October 19, 20 and 21. This contest will be open to all contestants.

THREE VAGS ALLOWED TO GO AFTER A WEEK'S REST

Police Officer Escorts Visitors In State to City Limits.

Slippery roads and green fields appeal more to Tony Kilpoff, Edward Wells and Edward Dolan than an indefinite sojourn in Castle Carter, and so in police court this morning they promised Magistrate A. H. M. Graydon that they would hit the trail for home, sweet home. A week ago they were picked up here on a charge of vagrancy, having arrived in London by side-door Pullman from Toronto.

"A job," they declared, was their main object in life.

"How are you going to get back to Toronto if I let you go?" asked the court.

The trio went into committee of the whole and finally reached a decision which they made known by saying "trucks" in chorus.

The court was of the opinion that they might try "bumper" a few days and get arrested again, so he asked Chief Robert Birrell to assign an officer to the duty of chaperoning them to the city limits.

COMMITTEE MEETS

Told Company Will Deliver Big Supply to City Limits.

The special gas committee from the city council and Chamber of Commerce appointed to investigate the possibility of utilizing natural gas from the Saul Farm near Cumlin, in city mains, will confer with officials of the City Gas Company at a special meeting to be held in the city hall today at 8 p.m. This meeting was called this morning by Ald. W. A. Wilson, chairman of the special committee.

The Progressive Gas and Oil Company of Hamilton has developed wells capable of supplying 500,000 cubic feet of gas daily to London at a confidentially named price, delivered to the city limits. The special gas committee met officials of this company last week and named a price which, in turn, will be discussed with the City Gas Company representatives tonight, with a view to furthering negotiations.

If terms are agreeable and natural gas can be transmitted in City Gas Company mains, reducing the present price here, a recommendation from the special committee will be forwarded to the city council urging that the gas company franchise be altered so that natural gas will be permitted to enter London.

LONDONERS RECEIVE LIFE-SAVING AWARD

Albert E. Cowley and John Cowley Are Presented With Medals.

A pleasing feature in connection with the sports day at Ipperwash Beach this year was the presentation of the parchment awarded by the Royal Humane Association to Albert E. Cowley and Master John Cowley, 69 Thornton avenue, London, for the rescue of Miss Maud Lawrence from drowning on July 2, 1920. Before all the residents of the beach, the honor of the rescue was taken place, the secretary of the association, Rev. H. R. Horne, outlined briefly the story of the rescue, speaking in highest terms of the courage and resourcefulness displayed by the association.

The president of the Beach Association, Mrs. B. P. Carey, wife of the president of the Beach Association, and three hearty cheers were given for the two thus honored.

One thing to which the Beach Association has always given a good deal of attention is the encouraging of all to learn to swim. Years ago the late Dr. H. A. McCallum of London, for many years president of the Beach Association, gave this definite shape by offering a prize to each one who learned to swim on the beach, and for some years he bore the expense personally.

Then the honor of the rescue was taken place, the secretary of the association, Rev. H. R. Horne, outlined briefly the story of the rescue, speaking in highest terms of the courage and resourcefulness displayed by the association.

The plan of alteration, as above outlined, it is understood, is the one adopted, if the premises are secured.

FIELD DAY FOR TOBACCO GROWERS

Harrow Experimental Station Open to Visitors On August 11.

O. A. C. alumni and all other persons in Western Ontario interested in tobacco growing are afforded the opportunity of attending a field day to be held at Harrow on August 11, under the direction of D. D. Digges, superintendent of the Harrow Tobacco Experimental Station.

During the winter and spring months considerable interest was manifested by the members of the work of the department of agriculture in the association at St. Thomas, Superintendent Digges outlined the extensive experimental work being conducted and the desire was expressed for a field day during the "growing" season. The minister of agriculture has acceded to the request.

In this way the members of the O. A. C. alumni and all tobacco growers will have the opportunity of acquainting themselves with the work, and the results of the investigations. D. D. Digges will conduct the visitors over the ground and explain the work, while J. W. Noble will arrange for visits to farms in Essex the same afternoon.

GROUND FLOOR AT SIMCOE ST. SCHOOL REPORTED DANGEROUS

Board of Education to Consider Matter of Urgent Repairs.

Members of the board of education will meet this afternoon for the purpose of considering urgent repairs needed to the ground floor of the school. Beams in ground floor rooms of the school are suffering from dry rot, and unless replaced at once children will not be allowed in the rooms next September, as their lives are in danger. Although this work will cost $2,000, there is no provision made for it in the estimates, and an overdraft looms up on the horizon. In the opinion of some members of the board, difficulty will be experienced in obtaining the necessary quorum for today's meeting, as many trustees are away from the city enjoying a vacation.

However, it is thought that those present will order the work to proceed on recommendation of No. 2 committee, as it is absolutely necessary, with official sanction of the board of education coming at a later meeting.

CONTRACTORS CLAIM

by the water, sewer or gas departments, or by the telephone company of any other company (no matter when they go down within the 10-year period) through the contractor has had nothing to do with the making of such trenches or the backfilling of same. No contractor in his right mind would think of signing such a contract, after learning of the experience we have had in London, and there is no other city on this continent asking such ridiculous guarantees from contractors.

"The writer made a special trip to London a week or so ago and learned the engineer was on a fishing trip, so did not see him, but made inquiries among the city employees, and found that there were two small depressions which he wanted fixed, one on Elmwood avenue, and one on Windsor avenue, neither of which are at all dangerous, and, in fact, are really hard to find, yet he is holding back our money until we make a special trip to London to fix up these two small spots. This is not business, but plain persecution, and we would ask that your honorable body issue instructions so that we can get our money."

"Our guarantees have three or four years to run yet, so that any small places which need attention can be taken care of any time within the next four years."

Frozen Out.
"This letter supports my contention that paving contractors are being frozen out here by the city engineer's department," said Ald. G. A. Wenige to the Advertiser this morning. "Why was that letter not sent on to the city council, or No. 1 committee, instead of being buried? If this count keeps on there will be no competition for us to select from. If two or three bullies are all the time crowding others out of a race, they will soon have it to themselves, and that's what it is coming to here."

"The city engineer does not want the contractors to come in and he puts up this high board fence to stop them. Does he follow the same rigid specifications when he lays pavements? Will he make good sink holes caused by water, sewer or gas trenches without cost to the city? There should be an outside inspector to go over his work and see that he observes the same rules as he sets for the contractors."

Too Much Like Germany.
"This one man dictation is too much like Germany. If it keeps on it will kill all competition. I was in Strathroy on Monday and their paving figures knock the city engineer's all hollow. He can meet these prices, and get us one hundred cents' change from every dollar. He expects so much from the contractors, and the same should be required of him. We will hear more of this."

Questioned regarding the letter of protest, City Engineer H. A. Brazier said: "I have nothing whatever to say about it."

"Ald. Wenige can do as he likes. That letter from the Standard Paving Company is characteristic, and anyone who has done business with them knows it," said Mayor E. S. Little today at noon, when interviewed by The Advertiser. "There is nothing to it."

WESTERN CROP CONDITIONS.
Regina, Aug. 2.—Crop conditions throughout the province are very mixed according to reports received yesterday by the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture. While some districts are estimating yields as high as 25 bushels to the acre, notably Weyburn and Assiniboia, other districts state that the yield has been materially depreciated on account of hot weather, saw fly and rust.

Wheat harvesting has commenced in some districts, and is in full swing in the extreme southwest.

Firemen and Enginemen Are Given Warm Welcome At Opening Of International Convention
Delegates From All Parts of Canada and United States Are Attending Brotherhood Meeting — President Urges Obedience To Principles of Organization.

[Special To The Advertiser.]
ST. THOMAS, Aug. 1.—The initial business session of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen opened this afternoon with an attendance of more than 100 delegates and about 50 representatives of the ladies' railway organizations in Canada and the United States. The delegates from far outside points will reach the city Tuesday, and it is expected that by the middle of the week the number of visitors will reach many hundreds.

Pennsylvania sent a large delegation of railway men and women, and Ohio, too, has a big representation. The members of the Canadian lodges, mostly from Quebec and Ontario began arriving tonight, Toronto and Stratford leading.

A couple of prominent railwaymen, W. S. Carter, Cleveland, O., and President Lee of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, joined the gathering of railwaymen today, and in the evening spoke at a joint assembly of the railway organizations in the city. L. E. Sheppard, grand chief of the railway conductors, will be here Tuesday, and will meet the brethren of the local lodges.

Urges Obedience.
Both Grand President Carter and President Lee, following a business session of the Grand Union, addressed a large meeting of the railwaymen this afternoon, and appealed to the members of the order for unity and obedience to the laws of the country. A disregard of the principles on which the brotherhood is founded meant disaster and disruption, and a condition which the opponents of the unions would welcome and assist as well in their downfall.

DENIES SPYING ON SPEEDERS
Work Is Done Openly, Declares High County Constable.

ST. THOMAS, Aug. 1.—High Constable Hopkins and his staff deny the story appearing in an outside paper that he or the men in his service were watching the speeding autos as they performed the service under cover or concealing themselves at rural road corners to find an auto going a clip contrary to the act. The high constable's work is done openly on the roadside, and so far as he knows there is no trapping in Elgin County.

The constables, says Mr. Hopkins, do not receive mileage fees in Elgin nor are they entitled to it.

The condition of travel on the gravel roads between Lambton and Port Stanley, if not regulated by an officer, the safety of people who would obey the law would be menaced, declares the high constable. Because of the complaints coming in from all sorts of people to the magistrate's office, urgent action was needed to lessen the danger on that much traveled highway, and the high constable states that in all his prosecutions he was justified in summoning the offending drivers.

Death of Norah Eveland.
Norah Agnes Eveland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Eveland, Port Stanley, died yesterday at the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto, in her twentieth year. She is survived by her parents, four brothers and a sister. The funeral took place this afternoon at the Union Cemetery.

The lad, Clifford Bernie, who was seriously hurt in a collision with his wheel and an oil wagon Saturday was strong enough to be removed from hospital to his home today on Talbot street.

Rev. W. F. Goetz, pastor of the First Methodist Church, will return from his holiday trip the end of the week.

The choir of St. Saviour's Church, Waterloo, of which Rev. P. N. Harding was a former pastor, assisted the choir of St. John's Church yesterday, and today the members of both choirs are holidaying at Port Stanley. The visitors return home this evening.

A couple of local lads followed the carnival shows to Stratford Saturday night, and on appeal by their fathers to Mayor Brinkman both he and Chief Armstrong are trying to locate the lads before the journey is continued. The Stratford police have been warned.

Burgess Goes to Portmouth.
Melvin T. Burgess, Toronto, sentenced to five years for uttering and passing forged checks in the city, was taken to Toronto this afternoon by Rural Constable Augustine and Chute. Civic Holiday Quiet.

NO SECOND CLASS IN NEW OCEAN LINERS
Two Big Liners To Be Put On the Canadian Service.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—The White Star-Dominion line will shortly make notable additions to the passenger service fleet between Liverpool and Canada. Their new steamers, Doric and Regina, are now nearing completion at Belfast. Each of them is over 16,000 tons gross and carry only two classes—cabin and third. They are lavishly equipped with all the modern amenities, children's playrooms, etc., on both steamers.

It is reported that the Commonwealth Government line of steamers will inaugurate a fast regular service between Australia and India and between Australia and the Suez about the end of the year.

HIT GARAGE RATHER

St. Thomas Man Hurt in Accident On Richmond Street.

ST. THOMAS, Aug. 1.—Vincent DeGherty and family were injured in a collision on Richmond street, London, Saturday night, when his auto ran into the front of Robert Hester's garage, when he pulled aside to avoid striking a car.

TWO DISTRICT MEN ARE VICE-PRESIDENTS
TORONTO, August 1.—At the provincial convention of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union, held here today, a request was set out to the Provincial Government to pass a law licensing barbers and insisting upon observance of a proper standard of cleanliness in barber shops.

The following officers were elected: President, H. J. Halford, Hamilton; vice-presidents, Thomas McPherson, Guelph; Leon Worthall, Toronto; Arthur Hamilton, A. Aubrey, Ottawa, and C. P. Gould, Windsor; secretary-treasurer, A. Calder, St. Catharines.

GAY PAGEANT AT BRANTFORD FOR OLD HOME WEEK

Six Nations Warriors Gave Tribal Dance At Big Gathering.

[Special To The Advertiser.]
BRANTFORD, Aug. 1.—Hundreds of ex-Brantfordites returned to their old homes here today for the big opening of the old home week. The baseball games drew big crowds morning and afternoon, and as the Brants pulled out two wins over Flint everybody was happy. The "Made-in-Brantford" exhibition, staged by the Local Council of Women, also proved an attraction, drawing large numbers to see the products of some 30 Brantford firms.

Brilliant Pageant.
Tonight a pageant was staged at Agricultural Park, the G. W. V. A. Band supplying the music. The Six Nations warriors and chiefs staged their old-time tribal dances, now almost lost to memory, and not staged in Brantford for over 30 years. They made P. S. Blain, celebration secretary, and W. J. Feldcamp, pageant chairman, honorary chiefs with resounding titles, this being an unannounced novelty.

The Y. M. C. A. put on "From the Stone Ages to the Present" in gold posing, making a big hit.

BUYING AT HOME WILL HELP SOLVE UNEMPLOYMENT

Minister of Labor Urges People To Purchase Canadian Goods.

OTTAWA, Aug. 1.—(Canadian Press)—Canada is facing a serious unemployment situation and the rank and file of Canadian people can help in a great measure to alleviate it by buying only goods made in Canada wherever they are available. This point is stressed in a statement made yesterday by Hon. G. D. Robertson, minister of labor.

Since January 1, 1920, federal, provincial and municipal governments have disbursed approximately $3,500,000 in unemployment relief to needy people. Greater need and greater demands are in sight," said the minister.

"Labor," every Canadian would buy only Canadian goods where available, the volume produced would be greatly increased which should tend to reduce both productive and selling prices, absorb labor and eliminate or reduce to a minimum both the cost and necessity of relief measures. Neither federal nor municipal authorities can hope to solve the problem except with the co-operation of the people."

Canadian industries, records show, continued to show substantial decreases in the number of men employed. As compared with mid-winter of 1920, the situation is such as to demand attention and action.

FREE SERVICE for Motorists

We want every motorist to test the efficiency of our FREE SERVICE. Every automobile manufacturer recommends that the oil in the crank-case be changed every 500 to 1,000 miles, because dust is drawn in and minute particles of steel wear off. This means friction on bearings and piston rings that even oil will not prevent.

Drive on to the Runway at the En-ar-co Service Station (you'll recognize it by the boy and slate sign)—it is easy to drive upon and perfectly safe. An attendant will remove plug from crank-case and drain out all old oil, flush out and refill with fresh En-ar-co Motor Oil of proper consistency. If desired he will refill transmission and differential with En-ar-co Gear Compound, and there will be absolutely no charge except for the oil actually used at regular prices.

Save repairs and prolong the life of your motor by testing our Free Service to-day.

MESOPOTAMIA'S "UNCROWNED QUEEN" GIVES INVALUABLE AID TO BRITAIN IN THE FAR EAST

Miss Gertrude Bell, Called Blessed by the Natives and All Wise by Downing Street—English Ironmaster's Daughter, Famed For Explorations and Later For First Line Service in War, Carries White Man's Burden Without Loss of Feminine Charms.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—As "The Sitt" the woman, every Arab in the peninsula knows her. When you speak of "Gertrude" every Englishman from Cairo to Tehran knows whom you mean. And if he knows that middle eastern land, too, that cradle of the race, he calls a fervent blessing on the name.

For in the colonial office in London, and in Baghdad, where Sir Percy Cox is trying to impose that newest fangled of Occidental governmental devices, the mandate, upon the oldest of all lands, she is the uncrowned queen of Mesopotamia. She is Miss Gertrude Bell.

Bombardier and Bedouin beggars bless her—and call her wise. Learned university gentlemen, who delve in the glories that were Sargon and the pomp and circumstance of the Assyrian empire, call her wise. People who design and sell the loveliest and the smartest of frocks in Hanover Square and the Rue de la Paix gladly give her of their best and call her wise. But when the tangled skeins of middle eastern affairs become inextricable at the nerve centre of the British Empire in Downing Street, they call in "Gertrude" and know that she is all-wise.

Daughter of Ironmaster. For nearly thirty years ago, this slim, clever girl, daughter of a fabulously rich Yorkshire ironmaster, with all the scholastic honors that Oxford could then bestow upon a woman, struck out "into the blue." And ever since there has been hardly a year that has not seen her at the head of one of her splendid expeditions, blazing out the ruins of an ancient city, measuring, surveying, photographing, taking notes, deciphering inscriptions and unearthing the secrets of other and older civilizations which the desert has swallowed up.

Thus she has seen the desert and all it contained as but two or three other Europeans—men—knew it; she spoke fluently Arabic, Persian, Turkish and a dozen other dialects of the waste places, and more important than all, the desert and the Arabs could have no secrets from her. She was gathered into that galaxy of eastern experts which scintillated about McMahon, the British high commissioner in Egypt. She went there from Red Cross work in England. And with McMahon, Dr. Hogarth, General Clayton, Sir George Lloyd, names to conjure with in the Near East, with Aubrey Herbert, the official emperor of the Balkans, and Col. Lawrence, who consolidated and held almost single-handed the most mercurial domain, the wildest nomad people in all the world—the Arabs—sold for the Allies and against the German and the Turk, "Gertrude" held her own.

"It is not true," the commander-in-chief was heard to observe at a recent dinner party, "that Gertrude was uniform in Mesopotamia. Uniform was a spine and a pair of shorts."

But Gertrude was not the only woman allowed on the far flung Near East firing line. She sat on a staff major, on the books. Rated as the eldest of the European staff, she was a staff major, on the books. Rated as the eldest of the European staff, she was a staff major, on the books. Rated as the eldest of the European staff, she was a staff major, on the books.

All of which seems to shadow forth the sort of forcible female cartoonist's jest which was attached along with the year of enlightenment and grace 1893, which is wrong, entirely wrong. Remember that the Arabs call her "The Woman," and remember, as has been hinted, that she is one of the best dressed women in Europe. She has done a man's work, or the work of a battalion or an army of men if you prefer. But she is always delightfully, charmingly, brilliantly—woman. She has the type of mind men like to call masculine.

If You Want More Bodily and Mental Vigor
Try Me I Only Require One Minute of your time each day. I have helped give thousands of weak, run-down, nervous folks, increased strength and endurance, in two weeks' time, in many instances.

I am not a doctor but PHYSICIANS HAVE OFTEN ADVISED PEOPLE TO TRY ME. Former UNITED STATES SENATORS, United States Army Generals, Judges of U. S. Courts and many well known people have availed themselves of my help.

STRONG MEN, ATHLETES, BRAIN WORKERS—they know what I can do when they want the "stay there" strength and endurance that wins.

WOMEN WHO ARE WEAK, nervous and irritable as a result of overwork, worry or household drudgery have often obtained most surprising relief from me.

When, as a result of iron starvation, you get up feeling tired in the morning when you can no longer do your day's work without being all fagged out at night, when your digestion all goes wrong, or you have pains across the back and your face looks pale and drawn, do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration or until in your weakened condition you contract some serious disease, but try me. I only take one minute of your time each day. I am NUXATED IRON—organic iron. I am like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, gentils and apples. I help make strong, forceful, red-blooded men and beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked women. Without iron like me, your blood becomes pale, thin and watery and loses its power to change food into living tissue, therefore nothing you eat does you the proper use. But no matter how long her day's march through the desert, no matter how arduous her ride on camel or horse, no matter how dusty her delving beneath the desert sands, no matter how wild her neighbors at a night's camp may be, it is always Gertrude, the woman, who appears for dinner in the most ravishing of evening toilets.

The Arabs understand perfectly this combination of masculine mentality with feminine character. There have been many great women in Arab history and tradition and they call her after the greatest of them all—Bilqis. That is the Arab name for the Queen of Sheba, and the Arab tradition of that lady differs from ours. They say that Solomon, wisest of men, actually did take her for his wife, despite his already ample supply of that Oriental luxury. The Arabs' tribute is not a mean one.

But so far as can be learned there has never been a romance of that sort in Gertrude's life. Comely and agreeable, she is below medium height, with large, luminous, humorous blue eyes and pretty blond hair. Her figure is slim and round and lithe, with the grace of fine line plus perfect health. She knows how to rigoler with the opposite sex as few English women do. She must have scores of admirers.

But she plunged into Oxford with all her fine brain and apparently with all her good heart. If she has a love, it is the desert. She came to Paris for six days during the peace conference and then fled away for a little rest and vacation. Where? To Morocco.

Plenty of Money. Once through with Oxford she plunged into the desert. Her father idolizes her and with his great resources—Sir Hugh Bell owns most of the thriving iron town of Middlesbrough in Yorkshire—he was able handsomely to aid in the gratification of her ambition for scholarly adventure. It was first of all an archaeology that lured her to the desert and she is co-equal in authority with the great Sir William Ramsay on the beginnings of Christian and Moslem architecture as revealed by their excavations, measurements and observations on the buried cities and churches from the third to the ninth centuries.

But Gertrude is above all a human being, let it be said again, and it was not long before she was also an authority—an authority supreme and alone—on the life, the customs, the language, the folklore and the songs of the Bedouin people with whom she worked. And she was on terms of intimate knowledge with all of the big people in the Turkish Government of those days. When she wanted anything she sent word direct to the grand vizier at Constantinople or to Abdul Hamid himself, or later, to Talat or Enver or any of the other great lights of the Young Turks. And she invariably got what she wanted. They knew her, they respected her, and they trusted her.

So why did she do her work that it is tradition among the explorers of "the blue" that where The Woman has been it is useless to go over her trail. She has gleaned everything, down to the smallest crumb.

She travels into the desert always in great state. She is The Woman, the Uncrowned Queen, and she dresses the part. Her usual party is eighty souls—a few guards, porters, drivers and guides all men, of course, and her incomparable and assured self. On the march she wears breeches and boots—but the beastie carrying the box with her evening frocks must always be on hand for dinner. At the head of her caravan is, naturally, the recognized paragon of all caravan commanders in the east. Gertrude found him, an Armenian, driving a cab at some unrecorded port. There was a light of intelligence in the man's eyes and an assurance in his manner that made Gertrude mark him for her own. Now she has but to raise her little finger, flourish a bank draft, and the Armenian replies, "Yes, Madam," and the caravan is off.

She has never been in serious trouble in the desert. Once or twice in all her years amidst all the constant wars of these heterogeneous peoples, her caravan has been raided. But it was on each occasion a raid of but the briefest duration, and a mistake. As soon as the raiders found whose caravan it was they withdrew with restitutions and apologies.

Guide, Philosopher and Friend.

And this is the woman Great Britain found ready, fashioned to the imperial hand when that hand was taxed with one of the toughest jobs in its long history of bearing the white man's burden. Today she is officially secretary of the staff of Sir Percy Cox, British commissioner in Baghdad. It is naturally Sir Percy who is only less skilled in Arab lore than she and only a little less known among the Arabs, "Coch-sa," as the Arabs render his name, is also a household word in those lands. And now the Arabs are beginning to allude to "The Sitt," "The Woman," "Coch-sa," which is merely the feminine form of the same word and fine testimony to the ease with which the commissioner and his oriental secretary work together.

He is the great official father of the strange cross-bred regime which that great mother of cross-breeds, the treaty of Versailles, has imposed under the word "mandate." But she is the guide, philosopher and friend of every puzzled Arab who wanders into old Baghdad wondering what in thunder it all means. Sir Percy Cox has a very clear idea of what it all means. He has some very definite plans for letting the Arabs run the show themselves with the lightest of guiding reins. The mandate is not yet in force and, as one expert in the Near East said today, it is never likely to be legally in force. It cannot go into effect until Turkey signs the treaty of Sevres, which is the daughter of the treaty of Versailles, only more so. And the Turks, having a very fair idea that they won the war, have not signed it.

What is to become of the mineral wealth of Mesopotamia? Gertrude keeps thoroughly clear of that prickly problem. That is Occidental work, and she is the Oriental secretary on a salary of three hundred pounds per annum. And her father, who is an outright radical and a bitter critic of the Lloyd George Government, is extremely tight with her as long as she is in Government service. So she says she is not a financier.

But the time will undoubtedly come when Gertrude will perforce play her part in that phase of the work. Concessions for mineral rights were dealt out by the old Turkish government to whoever asked for them in the proper terms—"terms cash." And many a claim was sold over and over again. And in the first place the Turkish Government got its right to dispose of the claims in a typically Turkish fashion.

The land in which this oil and other minerals lie has been the property of families and tribes for centuries. They have tilled it and got a living off it without thought of the wealth that lay beneath. But Abdul Hamid was made to think it by the anxiety of war, by the old Turkish government, to whom it belonged to him. And he proceeded to act accordingly. And it is these claims that Abdul ever which all the controversy has raged on Mesopotamian oil.

Gertrude's friends, the original owners, are beginning to think they ought to have their share. And with the desire of the British Government, as expressed to them, to let them run their own affairs, it is going to be hard to deny them. Across the border, the Arabs are beginning to think they ought to have their share. And it is these claims that Abdul ever which all the controversy has raged on Mesopotamian oil.

AMERICANS DESERT PARIS IN GAYEST OF SEASONS SINCE 1910

Hotel Men Say Bugaboo of High Prices Is Not Justified by Facts.

PARIS, July 31.—Although the social season here this year is considered the most brilliant Paris has known since 1910, when the races, balls and innumerable dinners and receptions to visitors, it has been remarked frequently that this city was never so much deserted by Americans as it is today. At not one of the big hotels here which are frequented by wealthy and well-to-do Americans is it impossible to get plenty of accommodation at rates which are more reasonable than those charged last year, but American tourists have so far failed to arrive here in anything like the invasions which was prophesied by optimistic steamship and travel agencies.

It is not our fault," one hotel manager said. "We remodelled our rooms to suit our pre-war trade but the impression of the American tourist that they came to France while the exchange rate caused high prices they would be robbed. This impression is absolutely wrong, but we are powerless to change it. The fact is that even with today's prices hotel rates here, like everything else in France, are cheaper than in the United States, exchange rates considered, but Americans have been so used to the high prices of the American war days about one-third of what it was in New York and Chicago that when they arrive here now and find the prices changed they are not satisfied. They forget that what they find high prices means to the French an increase of between 500 and 700 per cent."

Big Events Coming. Hotel managers here complain that since the war the cost of repairing their places and the refurbishing of their prices changed they are not satisfied. They forget that what they find high prices means to the French an increase of between 500 and 700 per cent."

However, by staying away from Paris American tourists are missing many features of French life they probably will not be able to see next season. There has been a series of balls at the Hotel de Ville, which were given by Marquise du Poignac, which established a precedent for the wealth displayed. These are to be followed next week by the Grand Prix ball at the Opera on the eve of the Grand Prix, the racing event of the French turf. As in previous years, masks will be worn at this ball until midnight, when the real gaiety will commence.

The great French artists and designers have combined to work out the color scheme for the ball, which promises to be an exceedingly brilliant affair. No less than 5,000 persons will attend it.

The Grand Prix itself will provide a wonderful climax for the Paris season. The great French nations, these events in themselves would be a revelation, as the arrival of the diplomats at these affairs will be marked by all the ceremony customary on official occasions.

Stately Ceremonies Promised. To Americans who are not accustomed to seeing the pomp and pomp of the European nations, these events in themselves would be a revelation, as the arrival of the diplomats at these affairs will be marked by all the ceremony customary on official occasions.

After the running of the Grand Prix there will be dances and dinners at the Jockey Club and many of the leading hotels and cafes. Many of the Americans here have already reserved tables at the Claridge, the Ritz and other well known hotels and restaurants. Nearly all the dancing establishments will feature American music in the final week before Paris makes its way to Deauville to pass the summer away from the heat of the city.

BUNNY SKINS BRING HATMAKERS FORTUNES

NEW YORK, July 31.—Large fortunes have been made by turning rabbit skins into expensive felt hats. The fur, first of all, must undergo a slight preparation in chemical solution made from nitrate of mercury. This process greatly adds to the feeling properties of the fur. After being thus treated the fur is cut from the skin either by hand or machinery, and is ready for another process. This is known as "combing," and actually makes the felt from which the hats are shaped. The hat-making industry has grown so largely in this country that we now have to import large quantities of rabbit skins from the Australian colonies and from Northern Europe. An immense trade in the prepared rabbit fur is carried on between England and the United States.

When we consider that the annual export value of hats amounts to millions of dollars, it will be readily understood what the hats that are manufactured in a vast proportion of profit is made from this little-known source.

THE KING AND NORTHCLEIFFE.

The denial by the King in the House of Commons through the medium of one of His Majesty's ministers of a statement attributed to him in an interview, is an event unique in British history, but King George has had to take this step in order to repudiate words which were alleged to have been quoted by Lord Northcliffe in the course of an interview said to have been given to a reporter immediately after his arrival in New York. It would appear, however, that the interview which the New York newspaperman claims to have had with Lord Northcliffe concerning what the King is alleged to have said is really attributed to H. Wickham Steed, editor of the London Times, who is the publisher's companion in his travels.

The words quoted in the New York interview were said to have been used in the course of a conversation between the King and Mr. Lloyd George on the eve of His Majesty's departure to open the Ulster Parliament, and were as follows: "Are you going to shoot all the people in Ireland?" asked the King. To which the prime minister replied: "No, Your Majesty." The King then quoted as saying: "Well, then, you must come to some agreement with them. This thing can't go on. I can't have my people killed in this manner."

In the King's repudiation, which was read by Mr. Lloyd George in the House of Commons, these statements are characterized as "a complete fabrication," and to the whole of the alleged utterances the King gives an unqualified and dignified denial, which has evoked the commendation of representatives of all parties in the House of Commons.

Although in New York, the interview in which the King and the prime minister are quoted, is attributed to the editor of the Times, all the British newspapers give Lord Northcliffe the credit, and if such an interview were given, to him undoubtedly belongs the responsibility. It is well known in the newspaper world that Lord Northcliffe exercises a vigilant eye over the doings of his lieutenants, and it is not at all likely that Wickham Steed would have granted an interview of the kind without his concurrence.

Most of the London papers have made pointed observations on the matter, and the Morning Post's diagnosis of the case, that Lord Northcliffe is suffering from an attack of megalomania, or exaggerated swelled head, will be indorsed by those who have noted the recent utterances of "the Napoleon of newspapermen." The Post has suggested that this is a case more for doctors than for politicians, and ought to be treated accordingly.

There is no doubt that Lord Northcliffe's outburst regarding the selection of delegates to the Washington conference, in which he declared that Mr. Lloyd George was not a fit person to represent Great Britain, and that Earl Curzon was the prime minister's flunkey, was not at all in accordance with the dignified and well-balanced phrases characteristic of the "Thunderer," but savored rather of the petty lucubration of a Pott or a Skirg. It is enough to make the great Walters rise from his grave to see one of his successors descend to the methods of the editor of the "Eatonville Gazette" in a frenzied effort to vent his personal spleen.

In view of all that has occurred, it is perhaps most charitable to assume that Lord Northcliffe is at present on a world's tour for the good of his health, and that any of his utterances must not be taken seriously until the balmy breezes of the Pacific have soothed his heated brow and his mentality becomes normal. The firebrand, it is hoped, will soon be quenched by the cooling spray of the ocean. The empire will manage to get along very well in his absence.

SAFEGUARDING THE YOUNG.

The policy of covering up a sore without applying the proper remedy is universally admitted to be foolish and mischievous, for such procedure only aggravates the complaint and causes additional trouble. In like manner any form of moral disease cannot be cured by glossing it over or ignoring it. It must be arrested in its early stages if a cure is to be effected. This is why it is so unsatisfactory that the question of the prevalence of juvenile crime is receiving more than usual attention at the present moment.

The fact that over 400 juveniles faced the police magistrate in London during the year ending July 20 furnishes food for thought. An examination of these figures shows the offences included 70 for theft, 65 for disorderly conduct, 4 for being in the possession of a revolver, and 20 for breaking and entering. These more serious delinquencies loom up in a list, which includes such minor offences as assault, truancy, the use of abusive language and damage to property.

Many theories are advanced as to the causes of such a large measure of juvenile crime, and amongst these is the circumstance that the lack of parental control caused by the losses in the war, has caused a laxity in the discipline of the home. It is not at all an unusual thing for the mother of a mere baby of five or six years of age to admit that the youngster has got entirely beyond her control, and this suggests that there must be something altogether wrong with the home training. Some mothers of the present-day seem to regard their offspring as a sort of a young animal, which may display vicious tendencies in the early part of its career, but which must, as a matter of course, become more tame and tractable as it approaches the adult stage. But the opposite result is usually the case, and the evil tendencies, unchecked in the infant, show up in an intensified form in the man.

A large proportion of the cases of theft which appear in the official report are more or less of a petty nature, and the tendency is to pass them over as "trifling," but as the tree is bent so will grow if steps are not taken to straighten it.

The theory was advanced in an American paper the other day that every child is by nature a liar and a thief, and that these vices overtake them as a matter of course, just like the measles or the whooping cough, but this premise will not bear very close analysis. Evil tendencies are no doubt frequently inherited, just as good ones are, and this makes the task of eradication more difficult, but just as in arboriculture, it is altogether wrong to assume that a tree will not bear its green leaves and bring forth its fruit in due season just because it has a few rotten branches. These branches must be judiciously pruned, and by careful attention and the maintenance of healthy surroundings the tree has every chance of recovering its pristine vigor. In like manner corrective measures, prudently applied, will enable young citizens to become valuable assets in the life of the nation.

SOME ASPECTS OF DAIRYING.

In his interesting address to the local milk producers, Professor H. A. Deane of Guelph touched on several points of vital importance to the future welfare of the dairying industry in Canada. For example, he suggested that as a steady market cannot be found for milk and milk products in this country a good market could be procured in other countries; in China, for instance, which he characterized as the best market in the world. China is unable to supply its own milk products, and the surplus which could be shipped to that country from London alone is equal to nearly one thousand gallons each day.

No one disputes that milk products form valuable food, and that other countries are eager to secure them in any quantity. It is an equally well-known fact that there is more real nourishment in one pound of milk products than there is in a pound of beef. Moreover, these products, in the form of butter, cheese and evaporated milk, can be shipped in smaller bulk and with less trouble and cost than cattle or dead meat. Denmark has not been slow to learn this lesson, and her eminence in the dairy world today is one of the results. But, as Professor Deane pointed out, one of the greatest factors in the successful handling and disposal of milk products is co-operation among the producers and dairymen. This is the key to the whole situation.

Another point which was referred to was the important part that good roads play in the work of bringing dairy products to the cities. There is no doubt that good transportation facilities have the effect of bringing the city household and the farm closer together, and that the city dweller derives the benefit by securing milk and other necessities at normal prices. Good roads also play an important part in the marketing of other products of the farm, and the sooner the country highways are brought to an efficient state the sooner will not only marketing problems be solved, but problems affecting the supply of farm labor and the requisites for successful farming generally.

One other matter which Professor Deane dealt with was the question of advertising. There is no getting away from the fact that the farmer is not a good salesman. His brethren of the cities can teach him all that there is worth knowing in the art of salesmanship. He follows not the principle that when one has something good for sale they should make its merits known as widely as possible, both at home and abroad. If butter and cheese could be produced by manufacturers like boots and shoes their particular advantages would soon be proclaimed far and wide through the medium of printers' ink and in other ways. As yet the farmer does not do these things, but this is no reason why he should not do it now.

Many city dwellers do not know the great value of milk and butter and cheese in the process of preserving good health and of body building, and it is for the farmer and the dairyman to tell them all about it. The advantage will be mutual.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A boy has just been hit on the eye by a snowball. It was on the top of Pike's Peak.

Canada need not worry about its food supply for the coming year. Caradoc has plenty of potatoes.

Uncle Sam will soon be in possession of Britain's greatest gas bag. No, not Lord Northcliffe, merely R-38, the largest rigid airship ever constructed.

It is stated that dry rot has broken out in one of the city schools. But anxious parents will be reassured by the news that it does not come from the principal's desk.

By an overwhelming majority the women of Washington have protested against a bill meant to prohibit them from smoking. They declare that while they've a lucifer to light a fag they'll smoke, smoke, smoke.

The teaching of English has been made compulsory in German public schools. It is to be hoped that this is not done with the object of enabling the Huns to give a more effective rendering of "The Hymn of Hate" in the event of another war.

The recommendation has been that the prisoners' dock should be removed from our police courts. This seems reasonable enough, seeing that the prisoners are usually removed. It is also demanded that the name police court should be changed to "municipal court." But won't a court by any other name smell just as sour?

PELLAGRA EPIDEMIC.

[New York Times.]

A realizing sense of how serious is the present state of agriculture in the United States is given by the news that there are among the small farmers in some of the Southern States 100,000 cases of pellagra, a disease until recent years unknown in America. For pellagra is a malady due to insufficient nutrition and to the restriction of diet to a few foods, which, while good enough in themselves, alone are incapable of maintaining health or even of sustaining life for long.

It is likely to be said that the people now suffering from this disease, brought their calamity upon themselves by failure to take the good advice so often given and diversity their crops. This criticism is just in a way, but in another and more important way it is not. The tenant farmers and small landholders could not afford to be wise—they barely could live by raising the one crop, cotton, that was most profitable.

And they only did what we all do—they trusted to modern means of transportation for the prompt and easy exchange of what they had for what they wanted. Their trouble now results from lack of money with which to buy and pay their debts. Their crops, not their crops, has failed.

OTHERS' VIEWS

THE WORLD'S NEW COCKPIT.

[Los Angeles Times.]

European statesmen, huddled together at Versailles and nervously busy to rearrange their cockpit along the old lines, were dimly aware of the new world factor, but could not do more than disregard it. They admitted Japan under pressure and then allowed Japan to have her own way in a region reeking with the stench of the old world. They insulted and shut out China. They admitted the pre-eminently Pacific power, the United States, but refused to see in this country anything more than an Atlantic nation. Just as surely as the Aegean was the centre of the world in Grecian times, or the Adriatic when Venice flourished, or the Mediterranean when Rome ruled Europe, or the Atlantic when Spain, Holland, France and England in turn were dominant—just so surely is the Pacific to be the centre for the new era which is dawning upon us.

A FRAUDULENT TARIFF.

[New York Herald.]

Rather than be bid for that hundred million dollars of hide tariff graft the American people would be better off to submit to an outright head tax of $5,000,000 to go directly into the United States treasury and thereby $50,000,000 to go directly into the pockets of the farmers. Then the treasury would be twice as well off as it could possibly be from the tariff on hides. The particular farmers would be three times as well off as they could possibly be from the tariff on hides if they all got the full share they never would get. And the American public would be $45,000,000 a year to the good as compared with the cost to it of the monstrous tariff on hides. But, in any event, the thing to do with this unshirred fraud of a duty on hides "for the benefit of the farmer" is to nail it in its tracks and let the slaughter pen would feel a steer with a poleaxe.

THE WESTERN CROP.

[Edmonton Journal.]

One thing certain about the crop is that it is considerably smaller than that of the average season. Those of us who have spent many anxious evenings in August watching the thermometer approach the freezing point know how much early maturity means. The Grain Trade News estimates that wheat is two weeks ahead of last year. Cutting actually commenced in the Manitoba district, in Southern Manitoba, on Monday last, a field of Marquis and Red Bobs, having the distinction. Old-timers state that this is the earliest harvest on record in the district. As was to be expected, the yield of this particular field was not heavy.

The crop killers, like the crop boosters, we have always with us. The former are particularly industrious this year. They have for two or three weeks now been trying to convince the public that black rust has shown itself on the Saskatchewan wheat. But the Regina officials have denied this all along, and made their denial of yesterday very explicit.

INTERNMENT CAMPS

AROUSING HUNGARY

Members of National Assembly

Attack Government

For Injustice.

New York, Aug. 1.—When a woman

ment has lately been attacked by members of the National Assembly because of the fact that 20,000 persons are in internment camps in Hungary.

Internment is a powerful weapon in the hands of the Government. Anybody can be interned by a simple decree of a police director or sheriff without a previous judicial inquiry. There are cases where people have been interned upon anonymous information that they entered Bolsheviki sympathies.

Bishop Gleisswieser was loudly applauded in the Assembly the other day when he declared that some of the 20,000 persons interned in the camps had been detained two years without having been once examined by a magistrate. He stated that former Communist are not released upon having served their sentences in prison, but usually are transferred to one of the internment camps.

It is charged that these camps hold many who merely are disliked by Government officials. The camps are isolated from the outside world, the prisoners pass their time in idleness and the deputies were informed that the camp are becoming hotbeds for the breeding of Communism.

Members of the Assembly also complain against the censorship and charge that the local newspapers are subject to a minute and ignorant application of the law, resulting in the suppression of news and comment which are unpleasant to the Government.

The telegrams of foreign newspaper correspondents are no more exempt from the vexations of censorship than are the local newspapers. Commercial dispatches are censored and the censor quickly prevents the delivery of messages using code words.

It is charged in the Assembly that there is still a strong current of semi-official trend against the Jew. The chief of Budapest police recently under took a revision of the moving picture licences on the ground that a more just distribution was desired. Licenses were taken from twenty Jews and assigned to new petitioners.

These acts are no longer viewed with indifference but have been rebuked by deputies. There are indications that public opinion is veering toward democratic and liberal principles, and that it has become out of sympathy with the ultra-national and ultra-Christian war cries of street-corner politicians.

"The Hungarian nation yearns for the air of liberty," declares Count Apponyi.

HAWAIIAN RACE

RAPIDLY DYING

Pure Blooded Inhabitants Are

Passing Out—Plaintive

Music Their Requiem.

Honolulu, T. H., Aug. 1.—The plaintive, haunting music of Hawaii is the requiem of a dying race.

The pure blood Hawaiians, once the mightiest and noblest nation of Polynesia, even now magnificent of physique and keen of mind, are dying out.

A World Tragedy.

Statistics showing the birth and death rates in the Territory of Hawaii for one year, just published by the bureau of vital statistics of the territorial board of health, tell the story of one of the world's tragedies, the doom of a once splendid race.

It is estimated that there are 22,000

pure blood Hawaiians in the territory.

For the twelve month period there were

615 births among them, a rate per 1,000 of 30.73, not far below the average for all races, 30.05, but there were 1,010

deaths, a rate of 45.91, against an average of 17.53, a net loss in population of 324, an annual decrease of 15.18 per cent. Those mathematically inclined can figure out with reasonable certainty

the year when the pure Hawaiian race will have ceased to exist.

A century of the civilization of Christianity has dealt harshly with the Hawaiians.

New Race Springing Up.

As pointed out recently, however, by an ethnologist of the Bishop Museum, from the ruins of the Hawaiian there is springing up in the island a new and villain race, made strong by the mingled blood of the Occident, the Orient and Polynesia.

There are now in Hawaii 6,100 Asiatic

Hawaiians, and for the year their birth rate was 80.49, the death rate only 16.89,

a rate of increase of 63.60 per cent.

For 10,800 Caucasian Hawaiians the birth rate was 64.72; death rate, 23.15;

rate of increase, 41.57.

It would appear from this showing that an alliance between the Orient and Polynesia is more prolific and harder than the union between Occident and Polynesia.

Intermarriage With Chinese.

Most of the unions of Hawaiians and Oriental have been those of Chinamen and Hawaiian women. The Japanese rarely marry into another race. Preservation of racial purity seems to be almost a fetish with the sons and daughters of Japan. The Chinese, however, have freely intermarried with the Hawaiians, and the results have been good.

It is largely to children of such unions that credit is due for the widespread tributes which have been paid to the beauty of Hawaii's women.

XLI.—Suspense.

Then she removed her damp suit and shoes, took off her hat and wrapped herself in a thick, quilted dressing-gown. She removed the pins from the masses of her curly hair and started to brush it out—for her head ached just a trifle, and the brushing eased it.

Then she turned the gas up higher and surveyed her reflection in the greenish looking-glass.

Even the cheapness of the mirror couldn't dim Mary's beauty. Tired, wet and disappointed as she was, it glimmered back at her.

Over her shoulders flowed her dusky hair, a mass of silken ripples and long, broken curls. Like a dim cloud, it framed the oval of her pale, pretty face.

Here, smoke-blue eyes, "put in with a murky finger," held a wistful beauty in their depths, the long lashes black against her cheeks.

And Mary's mouth was all soft curves and sweetness. No mean lines had come to mar it yet.

"Cheer up, old girl!" said Mary to the pretty image in the glass. "Even though you aren't going to see him, you ought to be the happiest girl in the whole world tonight! He cares for you—you care for him—Eve Rochester's tales are all taradiddles!"

Down in the hall below the 'phone bell rang, sharp and insistent. And Mary paused, alert.

Was no one going to answer it? It still rang on.

Oh, well, it wasn't Mary's business. But—suppose at the other end of the wire, "someone"—the only "someone" in the world—waited to speak to her—and couldn't?

Mary could stand the suspense no longer, and—her hair a cloud about her shoulders—ran downstairs. Just as she reached the bottom step the 'phone bell ceased its ringing.

ing from the railway station—yes, in New York."

His voice trickled to a whisper, then it faded.

"Hello! Hello! Yes, Dick," Mary strained anxious ears.

No sound.

"Dick—hello, Dick!"

The wires were silent as the grave. Coasting—coasting—wasn't any use. Mary jerked the hook impatiently.

"Operator—you've cut us off!"

No answer.

Then, at last, a faint, unintelligible sound. Unfortunately, at this crucial moment, the Irish maid-of-all-work came staggering through the hallway with a scuttle of coal. She skidded as she passed the telephone, slipped, and the scuttle and its contents flew with a mighty crash to right and left! The noise of the calamity deadened every other sound.

"Shure, miss, I'm sorry! I'm a stupid fool!" The little maid made voluble apology. She scrambled to collect her fallen goods, talking incessantly the while.

Poor Mary, waiting at the telephone! "Hello—wait a minute—I can't hear you!" she kept saying.

Then came the operator's voice.

"What number, please?"

"Oh, operator, you've cut me off!" cried Mary.

MRS. ELIZABETH KENT, MacDONALD COLLEGE.

ICED ACID BEVERAGES.

The favorite base for iced beverages nowadays is either lemon or cold tea, and most of them contain both. For plain lemonade of the old-fashioned kind, still the most healthful, refreshing and cooling drink in the world, make a syrup by boiling a cupful of lemon juice, cool and dilute to taste with ice water. Such lemon syrup should be bottled and kept on hand, for the economy of sugar, lemon and labor over the ordinary wasteful way of preparing lemonade is very considerable.

For good iced tea, one cannot use just any old tea that happens to be left in the teapot. One must make fresh tea carefully, pour it off the leaves at once into a fruit jar, and when it is almost cool set it on the ice. A little sugar added while it is still hot will much add when it is cold. But if one has the lemon syrup on hand, of course the tea need not be sweetened at all. The cold tea may be used with any desired proportion.

For Wellfleet tea, have ten or a dozen fresh currant mint leaves in the glass jar into which the hot tea is strained. Use lemon syrup or not as desired.

Orange juice, the juice of a can of grated pineapple, juice of raspberry, grape, currant, strawberry, cherry, and particularly apple, may be used to make a great variety of delicious fruit punches. A bottle of ginger ale added just before serving gives a good effect, and any sort of fruit drink is the better for a cup of cold tea.

WATCHING THE SALES.

The bargain hunting woman with fierce expression and rude manners is rightly despised and ridiculed, but, on the other hand, every experienced shopper knows that there are seasons in a year when certain good things can be had at less cost than at other seasons. With all that, she said against the system of cut-price sales, and it is much, it remains true that we must pay a certain extra price for buying a new thing at the moment of its high tide of newness. Correspondingly we can get the same thing two months, or even a month later, for less money. Therefore with taste and judgment we can just miss the high point of cost and still not be dowdy or old-fashioned. Swift as the fashion, we can wait rather than run in the race. The times for the usual legitimate seasonal reductions in clothing, the times when sales are most likely to be genuine sales, of good value, are: after October 1st, fall articles are on sale; after New Year's winter articles; the first of February, between seasons, is the period of greatest reduction in winter clothing; the end of May, spring articles are on sale; after the first of July summer things are on sale; and the first of September corresponds for summer clothing to the first of February as the period of greatest reduction for it. We can buy hats, coats, underwear, and the like, to advantage at these off seasons, provided we know enough about the prevailing styles to avoid extremes in line and color, and material, and select really good things. We should watch the sales advertised in the papers with these seasonal limitations in mind, for special limited quantity sales are often mere traps for the unwary, and a well-bred woman feels that she has lost more than she has saved by joining in one of the sale stampedes that disgrace the sex.

ROSE—READ.

The wedding took place yesterday at the First Congregational Church, when Miss Lillian Reid, daughter of Mrs. T. H. Hill, 43 Tecumseh avenue, was united in marriage with John D. Ross, eldest son of Mrs. A. M. Ross of Calgary, Rev. Matthew Kelly officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Arthur J. Reid, wore a wedding gown of white satin, with a train falling from shoulders, and the customary veil and orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lilies and sweet peas. Her bridesmaids were Miss Alice C. Reid, in yellow organdy with hat to match, and Miss Kathleen Hyatt, similarly attired in orchid organdy. They carried armfuls of yellow and mauve gladioli and sweet peas.

Mr. David Proudfoot of Montreal acted as best man.

Out-of-town guests present at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Ross of Calgary, Mr. and Mrs. Proudfoot of Montreal, and Miss Blanche Johnston of Barrie.

After a reception at the home of the bride's parents, the young couple left for a honeymoon trip up the lakes, the bride traveling in a suit of dark blue serge with hat to match. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Ross will reside in Montreal.

ROBERTS—SAICH.

The first wedding ceremony ever performed in the new Egerton Street Baptist Church was solemnized Saturday afternoon by the Rev. Bingham, when he united in marriage Vera, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Saich, to Conell Albert, son of Mrs. Albert Roberts of this city.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, and took her place under the arch of summer flowers. Her wedding gown was of white satin with a veil of white net and orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Queenie Saich, was prettily attired in pink silk, with hat to match and carried Sunset roses.

Little Miss Lillian Comber, in a frock of orchid organdy, carried the ring concealed in a basket of sweet peas. Mr. Charles Gilmour acted as best man.

According to custom, the young couple were presented with a Bible by Mr. Mills, superintendent of the Sunday school.

The bridal party then repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a dainty luncheon was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts left in the evening for a honeymoon trip to Rochester. On their return they will reside on Pine street.

the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Livingston (a brother of Mrs. Brown's), now of California, was gay with dogs and plants outside, while the interior was beautifully decorated with cut flowers and streamers of pink and white, the prevailing color scheme at the wedding. Mrs. Brown was a very beautiful address. Among the relatives present were four of Mrs. Brown's sisters: Mrs. (Rev.) C. C. Cousins of Cleveland, Mrs. Geo. Baker of Tillsonburg, Mrs. Merton Taylor of Toronto, and Mrs. Merton Hatch, with husband and three children of Chatham. Owing to the critical condition of one of Dr. Brown's sisters, none of his relatives were present. The congregations of Woodslee and Ruscomb were well represented, though a great many expressed regret at being unable to be present. Mrs. L. Dornon, Mrs. J. H. Wilcox, Mrs. W. O. Fenner, Mrs. Geo. London, and Mrs. C. A. Dewhurst gracefully presided over the serving of tea, cake and ice cream. The bride and groom were made the recipients of telegrams and greetings from former charges and relatives, besides several pieces of silver, one unique gift being a silver quarter for every month of the year, sent by Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Brown of Melbourne. On behalf of the Woodslee and Ruscomb congregations, Orval Fenner read a very beautiful address, and Robert Ruston presented the bride and groom with a purse of silver containing the princely sum of over $82. Dr. Brown made a suitable reply and expressed his great esteem, love and gratitude to such wonderful people as it was his privilege to be associated with on this charge. At the close of this beautiful occasion, many well wishes and congratulations were again given to the happy bride and groom.

Maria Jane Thompson of Jackson, Tenn., at the age of 102, has the privilege of seeing her children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild grow up about her. Mrs. Thompson is the mother of Mrs. Clint Mathis, with whom she lives and the great-great-grandmother of little 2-year-old Jack Hunter of Memphis, Tenn., the baby of all the descendants, numbering about one hundred.

Mrs. Thompson has a store of anecdotes of the manners and customs of the days when she was a girl, which are of unfailing interest to the boys and girls of the family, who cannot even imagine a world devoid of automobiles and omnipresent telephones and all the other devices of a speed crazy generation.

Mrs. Thompson, with her parents, moved to Gibson County when she was 2 years old. She has heard her father tell of encountering Indians after crossing the Tennessee River; she remembers the Indians in Gibson County, and how they came begging for food. Her father, a prosperous merchant, owned several hundred acres of land,

FOUR KILLED BY LIGHTNING DURING STORM

Seven Deaths Toll of Big Blow in New England.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—At least seven persons were killed and many seriously injured in severe electrical and wind storms that swept various sections of the country yesterday and Saturday night. Four of the deaths were attributed to lightning.

Loss to buildings struck by lightning and damage to crops, particularly in New England, was said to amount to thousands of dollars.

In West Northfield, Mass., Harry Field Jun., 12, was killed when lightning struck a barn in which he had taken refuge.

G. A. Gottschalk of New York met death at Rhinebeck, N. Y., when lightning struck a tree under which he was standing.

As she was leaving the golf links near Lewiston, Mont., Mrs. Harry E. Lay was killed by lightning.

Walter Whitworth of Worcester, Mass., was killed by lightning while seated under a tree at Marlboro, Mass.

Andrew Little, 30, was killed when a tree fell on his automobile during a storm at Beaton, Ill., and Mrs. William Belford and her 11-year-old grandson were crushed to death near Colomado, Ill., by the fall of a wall of their home during a windstorm.

At Travers Island, N. Y., 30 members of the New York Athletic Club had narrow escapes from serious injury, all of them being knocked to the ground by a bolt of lightning.

Half accompanied the storm in several Eastern States. One halstone picked up after a storm in Passaic County, N. J., was reported to have weighed eleven ounces.

MAY DIE IN BIG QUAKE AT LEGHORN

Building Collapses and Unknown Number of Victims Are Buried.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—A violent earthquake shock was felt at Leghorn, Italy, and elsewhere Monday, says a dispatch to the London Times from Milan. Severe damage was done in the Lake Lugano district. A large building collapsed in Barle, burying many persons.

The full extent of the damage done and the number of victims is not known.

From the above dispatch it would appear that the earthquake shock was felt over a distance of nearly two hundred miles from Leghorn, on the Tyrrhenian Sea to Lake Lugano, just south of the Swiss border.

KILLED BY HIGH VOLTAGE WIRE. NIAGARA FALLS, Aug. 1.—Russell James Fraser, 20 years old, was instantly killed last night when he touched a high voltage wire on the hydro canal, where he was employed. The body was shipped today to Hawlock, the home of the deceased.

PEACHES, PLUMS AND PARS ARE OFFERED ON LOCAL MARKET

Oats Advance on Active Demand—Honey Is Cheaper.

Raspberries are off the local market, but peaches, plums and pears are establishing themselves in greater quantities. Tuesday pears showed a decrease of 10c from 55c to 75c for six-quart baskets.

Plums were offered at $1.25 to $1.40 for eleven-quart baskets, and peaches were quoted at 15c a quart of $1.50 to $1.65 for eleven quarts.

Oats were scarce and in good demand, today's quotations showing a slight increase on the 100 pounds, selling at $1.75 and $1.80, an advance from Saturday's figures of 5c per cwt. There is no change in hay or straw.

Prices on honey are not so high this year, as a result, it is claimed, of an extraordinary good crop, and the fact that the price of sugar has tumbled to less than half of last year's quotations.

anything on the conservatories at Victoria or Springfield parks.

Hold Her Own. It is very likely that a controversy waged with American cities up to the half-million or million mark, that London, Ontario, could hold her own on the park question.

And there are not likely to be any neutral ground between the judges who would take the palm away from Springfield and give it to Riverside, or High Park, or the Island Park of Toronto.

For the sake of the city, it is in its rugged heights, where the river has cut its way through layer after layer of solid rock, Rockcliffe Park, Ottawa, may give Springfield enthusiasts a real bit of argument.

But the slow-going Ottawans have not added to the beauty of the lower portions of the park by flowers and artificial terraces, as they might easily have done.

The private lands, and the grounds in the vicinity of Rockcliffe show what landscape beauty can be produced by individual enterprise, but public enterprise has left Rockcliffe park pretty much nature left off, a place of wonderful though rugged beauty.

Here arises the question: Is Springfield being overworked as a place for experimentation in landscape gardening? Are there too many fancy flower beds there? On this point opinions may differ widely.

A Composite Scheme. Springfield park, so expert critics on the American parks declare, is a composite idea. It lacks a clear-cut art ideal of its own. To the would-be park authority who rides around in an automobile, the guest of the reception committee at the international plumbers' or wood-turners' convention, every last park he visits is the most beautiful of all.

But the real park critic, who tramps miles to the park to save car fare, who he sometimes hasn't got, and stays there as long as the police constables will let him—save room rent, which he sometimes lacks—real expert in time and leisure and mental acuteness sufficient to make a fair decision.

Central Park, New York, has a wonderful Zoo. So has Springfield. Belle Isle, Detroit, has a Zoo. So has Springfield—Romeo and the other gold fish in the reservoir pond. Lincoln Park, Chicago, has beautiful drives, pretty stonework culverts, bridges and attractively decorated terraces. So has Springfield. Douglas Park, Chicago, is rich in wonderful shrubberies and flowering trees. So is Springfield.

High Park, Toronto, has hills and roadways winding over craggy ledges and trees. So has Springfield—up around the reservoir. The Wellesley Gardens, Wellesley, Mass., have elaborate landscape pictures worked out with hedges, fountains and flower beds. So has Springfield, just beyond the water works. Montreal has a mountain park, Springfield has the reservoir hill. But comparisons are always odious. If other cities think London is over-advertising Springfield, let them take issue directly with the street car advertising agency, or make a complaint to the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, whose slogan is "Truth in Advertising."

any of the most beautiful with such example, encouragement and congenial environment, can wax eloquent and chatter foolish, compromising nonsense which he may later rue. For those who would sit quietly and look with reflective and philosophic thought upon the broad panorama of humanity and nature brought close together, there are comfortable seats on the soft, greenward.

Poets Will Tell. Oh, Springfield! Some day poets will sing of your charms; some day novelists will immortalize you in their stories; philosophers will annotate their mental meanderings while they sit under your broad maples and beeches; botanists will write ponderous books on your flora and fauna; and sightseeing buses will stand waiting at the Grand Trunk station decked with Springfield's banners and signs, inviting the tourist from Podunk and Brownsville, down-the-line, to part with a dollar for a round-trip to the heart of Nature's wonderland, Springfield, after natural beauty. third operation for another small abscess. The operation, the dispatch says, was for an abscess which caused acute peritonitis.

Caruso's wife and his brother were at his bedside.

The tenor was, until a week ago, on the way to recovery from the long illness which began in New York last winter early in the year.

When suddenly he had an unexpected relapse and was removed from Sorrento to Naples.

He arrived at Naples Sunday night, adds the message, and the specialists who were called in decided to operate immediately.

Word of the first illness of Caruso at the time he was stricken with pleurisy came as a shock to his many friends in this country and abroad, as he had been singing with the Metropolitan Opera Company during the present season here and in Philadelphia, and was enjoying one of the best seasons of his life.

Up to the time of his sailing for Italy reports were current that Caruso's voice had not withstood the ravages of his illness, but that he was recovering and would be singing with his friends, and to prove their untruth, the tenor, just before sailing away on board the steamship President Wilson, burst into one of his golden notes—a particularly high one—and held it without apparent difficulty.

Singer Seemed Depressed. Thousands of friends who were gathered at the pier cheered him in his gallant effort, but he declined to give an encore, "but next season."

Caruso, looking pale and much thinner, doffed his hat in acknowledgment of the greetings of the crowd.

Police reserves and dock guards had great difficulty in holding a check a great crowd of admirers as they greeted Caruso when he went aboard the steamship, where his most intimate friends bade him and Mrs. Caruso farewell.

When Caruso left for Italy he appeared confident that he would return to America next fall, and again take his place with the Metropolitan Opera Company. Shortly, however, after the tenor arrived in Italy, reports began to drift back to this country that he would not sing again before the American public in his old voice.

Early this month word came from Italy that Caruso was not recovering as rapidly as had been expected, and seemed depressed.

Reports reaching Rome at this time stated that Caruso would be able to sing in New York by next winter, though friends reluctantly admitted "it will never be quite the same again."

Caruso was also reported to be living a secluded life in a hotel near Naples, never mixing with the other hotel guests and taking his meals in his private suite.

News Came as Shock. News of Caruso's death on the heel of continued reassuring reports from Italy came as a stunning shock to the music-loving world. Only last Sunday photographs of the singer in Italy were published here, and they showed him cheerful and apparently in robust health.

His friends here recalled today that when he was critically ill last winter he often expressed the wish that if he had to die he would prefer to die in his own sunny Italy, for which he always had a deep affection over him.

Caruso, after his strenuous opera seasons, sometimes had trouble with his throat, which he usually overcame with a little rest and care, and at certain intervals summed up that "Caruso will never sing again" were frequently printed. In the winter of 1920, however, he suffered a serious affliction, when a small blood vessel in his throat burst while he was singing "L'Elis d'Amore" in the Ravenna Academy of Music. He was long recovered from this mishap, Caruso was stricken with pleurisy.

During his indisposition, Caruso was the object of devoted attention by his wife, formerly Miss Dorothy Benary of New York, whom he married in 1918. One child was born to them. Caruso had a son by a former wife, a singer named Ada Clachetti, with whom he had been living in opera at Treviso and Bologna.

Enrico Caruso, for more than 25 years a celebrity in the world of song, formerly hit the "golden voice," idolized by millions in America and abroad, had an artistic career as well known as that of any famous statesman or military leader. He was born in Naples, Italy, February 25, 1873, the son of Marcellus Caruso, a mechanic, who detested music, but was persuaded to permit his son, when 11 years of age, to sing in the churches of his native city.

He made his debut in "L'Amico Francesco," at the Nuovo Theatre, in Naples, in 1894, later toured Italy and Sicily, and was engaged for four seasons at La Scala, Milan. Subsequently he sang at St. Petersburg, Moscow, Warsaw, Rome, Lisbon, Paris, London, and leading cities of Germany. When he came to the Metropolitan Opera House on November 28, 1903, the critics did not go into ecstasies over him. Although no official statement of his earnings was ever made public, it is known that Caruso at the height of his Metropolitan career was receiving an average of $3,000 for each performance. On special occasions, such as his 1920 season in Havana, he was paid $10,000 a night.

The list of Italian and French operas in which the noted tenor's name figures since he first sang in New York revealed an amazing versatility. No grand opera tenor in America, from the days of Brignoli, Campanelli, and the late Jean De Reszke, is recorded, ever reigned so long in popular favor.

He arrived at Naples Sunday night, adds the message, and the specialists who were called in decided to operate immediately.

Word of the first illness of Caruso at the time he was stricken with pleurisy came as a shock to his many friends in this country and abroad, as he had been singing with the Metropolitan Opera Company during the present season here and in Philadelphia, and was enjoying one of the best seasons of his life.

Up to the time of his sailing for Italy reports were current that Caruso's voice had not withstood the ravages of his illness, but that he was recovering and would be singing with his friends, and to prove their untruth, the tenor, just before sailing away on board the steamship President Wilson, burst into one of his golden notes—a particularly high one—and held it without apparent difficulty.

Singer Seemed Depressed. Thousands of friends who were gathered at the pier cheered him in his gallant effort, but he declined to give an encore, "but next season."

Caruso, looking pale and much thinner, doffed his hat in acknowledgment of the greetings of the crowd.

Police reserves and dock guards had great difficulty in holding a check a great crowd of admirers as they greeted Caruso when he went aboard the steamship, where his most intimate friends bade him and Mrs. Caruso farewell.

When Caruso left for Italy he appeared confident that he would return to America next fall, and again take his place with the Metropolitan Opera Company. Shortly, however, after the tenor arrived in Italy, reports began to drift back to this country that he would not sing again before the American public in his old voice.

Early this month word came from Italy that Caruso was not recovering as rapidly as had been expected, and seemed depressed.

Reports reaching Rome at this time stated that Caruso would be able to sing in New York by next winter, though friends reluctantly admitted "it will never be quite the same again."

Caruso was also reported to be living a secluded life in a hotel near Naples, never mixing with the other hotel guests and taking his meals in his private suite.

News Came as Shock. News of Caruso's death on the heel of continued reassuring reports from Italy came as a stunning shock to the music-loving world. Only last Sunday photographs of the singer in Italy were published here, and they showed him cheerful and apparently in robust health.

His friends here recalled today that when he was critically ill last winter he often expressed the wish that if he had to die he would prefer to die in his own sunny Italy, for which he always had a deep affection over him.

Caruso, after his strenuous opera seasons, sometimes had trouble with his throat, which he usually overcame with a little rest and care, and at certain intervals summed up that "Caruso will never sing again" were frequently printed. In the winter of 1920, however, he suffered a serious affliction, when a small blood vessel in his throat burst while he was singing "L'Elis d'Amore" in the Ravenna Academy of Music. He was long recovered from this mishap, Caruso was stricken with pleurisy.

During his indisposition, Caruso was the object of devoted attention by his wife, formerly Miss Dorothy Benary of New York, whom he married in 1918. One child was born to them. Caruso had a son by a former wife, a singer named Ada Clachetti, with whom he had been living in opera at Treviso and Bologna.

Enrico Caruso, for more than 25 years a celebrity in the world of song, formerly hit the "golden voice," idolized by millions in America and abroad, had an artistic career as well known as that of any famous statesman or military leader. He was born in Naples, Italy, February 25, 1873, the son of Marcellus Caruso, a mechanic, who detested music, but was persuaded to permit his son, when 11 years of age, to sing in the churches of his native city.

He made his debut in "L'Amico Francesco," at the Nuovo Theatre, in Naples, in 1894, later toured Italy and Sicily, and was engaged for four seasons at La Scala, Milan. Subsequently he sang at St. Petersburg, Moscow, Warsaw, Rome, Lisbon, Paris, London, and leading cities of Germany. When he came to the Metropolitan Opera House on November 28, 1903, the critics did not go into ecstasies over him. Although no official statement of his earnings was ever made public, it is known that Caruso at the height of his Metropolitan career was receiving an average of $3,000 for each performance. On special occasions, such as his 1920 season in Havana, he was paid $10,000 a night.

The list of Italian and French operas in which the noted tenor's name figures since he first sang in New York revealed an amazing versatility. No grand opera tenor in America, from the days of Brignoli, Campanelli, and the late Jean De Reszke, is recorded, ever reigned so long in popular favor.

Reports from Baltimore said Miss

Oh, Springfield! Some day poets will sing of your charms; some day novelists will immortalize you in their stories; philosophers will annotate their mental meanderings while they sit under your broad maples and beeches; botanists will write ponderous books on your flora and fauna; and sightseeing buses will stand waiting at the Grand Trunk station decked with Springfield's banners and signs, inviting the tourist from Podunk and Brownsville, down-the-line, to part with a dollar for a round-trip to the heart of Nature's wonderland, Springfield, after natural beauty. All you need is a dam across the lazy, green-colored Thames which flows too rapidly as it is. It must be checked up. Given a dam, shimmering cascades of emerald spray shooting up into the ambient atmosphere, your ardent propagandists could then speak patronizingly of Niagara Falls, and the street car signs could be revised to read:

"Springbank, the Most Beautiful Park in the World."

third operation for another small abscess. The operation, the dispatch says, was for an abscess which caused acute peritonitis.

Caruso's wife and his brother were at his bedside.

The tenor was, until a week ago, on the way to recovery from the long illness which began in New York last winter early in the year.

When suddenly he had an unexpected relapse and was removed from Sorrento to Naples.

FOR THE WORKLESS
Committee Report On Out-

Warning.
POOREST FAIL TO BENEFIT

State-Enforced Socialism, But It Does Not Work Out.

LONDON, Aug. 1. — A warning against the unemployment insurance legislation now being urged by many because of the steadily increasing numbers unemployed is given by the committee of foreign inquiry of the Social Insurance Department of the National Civic Federation, which points
out the confusion and dissatisfaction caused by such measures in Great Britain.
The benefits under this clause of the British national health insurance act
have already been increased from seven shillings a week to eleven shillings, and it is now proposed to increase the benefit to fifteen shillings. Despite the dissatisfaction created by the present
low rates, the committee finds a widespread opposition to the proposed changes. Both labor and employers,
however, are dissatisfied with the experiment in social insurance. In its report on the week to eleven shillings,
and social insurance in this country, the committee says:
"The movement has usually been initiated by professional uplift or radical political organizations. In its extremity, the movement proposes state systems of compulsory sickness, invalidity
and old age and unemployment insurance, applicable exclusively to wage workers and links up with a theory of law enforced socialization."
In describing the operation of the unemployment insurance in Great Britain,
the committee reports:
"To qualify for unemployment insurance the British wage earner must carry an unemployment card. While drawing benefit he must sign an out-of-work
registry book daily at a government labor exchange. When he obtains work he must immediately report the fact. A clerk in the exchange keeps the out-of-work registry book, entering in it the total number of days of a working man's unemployment, his days of benefit, the fact whether his lack of work is due to a trade dispute, sickness or other causes; the looks of the applicant, his clothes, physical description,
name and address of his last employer,
and many other details. On being engaged the workman deposits his unemployment insurance card with his employer, who holds it throughout his em-

AT LOEW'S.
"Sentimental Tommy," the holiday attraction at Loew's Theatre, delighted hundreds of Londoners, and will continue as the screen feature today and tomorrow. Adapted from the book by the well-known author, Sir James Barrie, this vehicle centres upon the career of an imaginative youth and a lonely maid, in the Scotch village of Thrumms.
Because her mother is known as the Painted Lady, whose respectability is in question, this girl, 12 years, named Grizel, is not considered in the daily life of the village, until the arrival of Tommy, who gains her friendship by championing her good character. Tommy later departs for London, where at the age of 22 he is looked upon as a successful young author.
Upon returning to Thrumms, he learns that Grizel, grown to beautiful womanhood, loves him. He leaves for parts unknown, but his faithful admirer discovers him in Switzerland, with a Lady Alice, whom he is wooing. Heartbroken Grizel returns home, and particularly the truthful replica of the true state of affairs, sentiment conquers and at
a great sacrifice Tommy marries Grizel.
The screen adaptation of this masterpiece is very creditable, particularly the truthful replica of the Scotch village of Thrumms. The plot of pathos and comedy loses nothing by being filmed, and this vehicle is one of high standard.
Arthur Deagon, well-known musical comedy star, heads the vaudeville bill, and in his clever character sketches kept the house in an uproar Monday night. This article, who is former Londoner, immediately won the hearts of his audience, and provided gases of laughter during his repeated appearance on the stage.
Melville and Simon present an entertaining singing and musical offering, their efforts forcing them to respond to several encores. Wheeler Trio, in acrobatic stunts, mingled with comedians, in keeping with the rest of the program.
A Sunnett Comedy and Loew's Screen

anced bill.

AT THE ALLEN.
Could you spend two million dollars one year and remain a bachelor for five years? Neither could Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle in "Brewster's Millions," a picture that is drawing hundreds to the Allen Theatre. And Fatty's reward for so doing would have been ten million dollars.
Fatty had two grandfathers who had his career all cut out for him long before he could say "Mamma." When an aunt resented their attentions they "washed their hands of him." At 25
Grizel, however, he uncovered a big whiskey smuggling plot by accident and his grandfathers one more decided to help him. One wanted to make him a gentleman and the other to take him into the ice business. They were both millionaires. Grandpa Brewster gave him two million dollars to establish himself in business. Grandpa Ingraham offered him a ten million dollar interest in the ice business if he would be broke at the end of the year, and would not marry for five years.
He thought his task was an easy one but as he was unable to tell his friends why he was such a reckless spender and as many of them, including a little girl at the rooming-house, tried to particularly the truthful replica of the true state
of affairs, sentiment conquers and at
a great sacrifice Tommy marries Grizel.
The screen adaptation of this masterpiece is very creditable, particularly
the truthful replica of the Scotch village of Thrumms. The plot of pathos
and comedy loses nothing by being filmed, and this vehicle is one of high

LONDON, Aug. 1. — A warning
against the unemployment insurance
legislation now being urged by many
because of the steadily increasing numbers unemployed is given by the committee of foreign inquiry of the Social Insurance Department of the National Civic Federation, which points
out the confusion and dissatisfaction caused by such measures in Great Britain.
The benefits under this clause of the British national health insurance act
have already been increased from seven
shillings a week to eleven shillings, and
it is now proposed to increase the benefit to fifteen shillings. Despite the dissatisfaction created by the present
low rates, the committee finds a widespread opposition to the proposed changes. Both labor and employers,
however, are dissatisfied with the experiment in social insurance. In its report on the week to eleven shillings,
and social insurance in this country, the committee says:
"The movement has usually been
initiated by professional uplift or radical political organizations. In its extremity, the movement proposes state systems of compulsory sickness, invalidity
and old age and unemployment insurance, applicable exclusively to wage
workers and links up with a theory of
law enforced socialization."
In describing the operation of the unemployment insurance in Great Britain,
the committee reports:
"To qualify for unemployment insurance the British wage earner must carry
an unemployment card. While drawing
benefit he must sign an out-of-work
registry book daily at a government
labor exchange. When he obtains work
he must immediately report the fact. A clerk in the exchange keeps the out-of-work registry book, entering in it the total number of days of a working
man's unemployment, his days of benefit, the fact whether his lack of work
is due to a trade dispute, sickness or other causes; the looks of the applicant, his clothes, physical description,
name and address of his last employer,
and many other details. On being engaged the workman deposits his unemployment insurance card with his em-
