Sawney essayed to obey, grasping the straps of his boots, and lifting his feet very high.

"Take them off and run," commanded Pocahontas. But Sawney would as soon have parted with his skin. "I dwine trun," he responded, and gripped his boots valiantly. It was of no use. Sawney had gotten too much boot for his money, and if walking in them was difficult, running was impossible. He held on to them bravely; but that only impeded progress further; the faithless cowhides wabbled, twisted and finally landed him sprawling on his back in the middle of the flock, which promptly retired to distant parts of the poultry yard, "puttering" and dodging.

"Sawney proves a broken reed, as usual," and Nesbit Thorne leaped over the fence, and advanced, gun in hand, to the rescue.

"It's the fault of his "sto' boots," Pocahontas explained, laughing, as she extended her hand. "Sawney's intentions were honorable enough. I shall be glad of your assistance—as usual," with a merry glance, "for these aggravating birds are shattering my nerves, and ruining my temper."

Then, together, the pair pursued the unruly fowls, and pressed upon them and buffeted them, until the turkeys were right glad to defy the vision of the old brown sensitionalist, and take refuge in their house. Pocahontas closed the door with a sharp bong almost upon the tail of the hindmost one, locked it, and then turned cordially to her companion and invited him to remain and take tea with them.

Thorne glanced down at his splashed boots and corduroys. "I'm scarcely in the fowling of the wind and the feet of the form of a lady's tea table," he said, smilling, "you must excuse me, and let me come some other time. I met your brother on the low grounds as I came up. I've been the form of the fow grounds as I came up. I've been the form of the low grounds as I came up. I've been on the low grounds as I came up. Naturally the effort that brings the greatest success is regarded by a man his best. I consider the trick of restoring the shattered mirror as my most famous one. This I had the honor of performing before the Czar of Russia upon an invitation to give an exhibition at his court. It was done unexpectedly to the spectators, and was not down on the regular bill. While playing billiards with the attaches of the court after the performance, the Czar being present in the saloon, I shot a ball with all my strength against a plate-glass mirror extending from floor to ceiling. It was shivered into fifty pieces. Consternation was depicted on every countenance; on none more plainly than my own. While the Czar courteously waived my apology, considering the destruction of the mirror as trifling, and ordered the game to proceed, I could easily see that my supposed awkwardness made a disagreeable impression. With the Czar's permission I examined the mirror to estimate the damage done and the possibility of repairing it. While so engaged one of the suite playfully challenged me to exercise my art and make the mirror whole exercise my and my art and my art and my art and a my art and a my art and a my art was the very cue I wanted, and not considering the successful acceptance of it as possible. I hesitated an instant, and then ordered the mirror to be covered with a cloth entirely concealing it from view. On the removal of the cloth, after 10 minutes, the mirror was found without a flaw, and as perfect as before the damage. I will leave it to my reader's imagination to decide how this trick was done.—Chevalier Herrmann, in North American Review.

Nine Long Years.

Nime Long Years.

Nime Long Years.

Mrs. John McLean writes from Barrie Lisland, Ont., March 4th, 1890, as follows: "I have been a great sufferer from neuralgia for the last 9 years, but, being advised to try St. Jacobs Oil, can now heartily endorse it as being a most excellent remedy for this complaint, as I have been greatly benefited by its use."

—The most utterly lost of all days is that on which you have not once laughed.

Gen. Taliaferro, who has been telling the people of Richmond some interesting reminiscences of Stonewall Jackson, says that the great Southern leader never held a council of war. He was a singularly devout man, with a tendency toward fatalism, and in the earlier days of the war he was personally unpopular as well with his own staff as with the general officers of the army.

One of the South's most successful evangelists is William Evander Penn, who has just finished a great revival in Mississippi. He is a man of 63 and has been constantly preaching day and night for 16 years.

—The torment of envy is like a grain of saind in the eye.

MIT. Gibson said that according to the original plan the opening of the dock was 48 feet. It was afterwards recommended that the opening be increased to 60 feet at no extra cost to the country. The order-in Council was passed that the opening should be increased to 60 feet. In the course of twenty days it was discovered by the be increased to 60 feet. In the course of twenty days it was discovered by the engineer in charge that there was no neces-sity for making the opening 60 feet, that 55 feet was wide enough, and that in order to increase it to 55 feet it would require an extra expenditure of $35,000. How was it that the 60 feet opening was to cost nothing while the 55 feet opening would cost $35,000? Sir Hector Langevin—Thehon. gentleman is quite mistaken.

Mr. Gibson—I read it in documents from the Public Works Department in the hands the Public Works Department in the heads of Mr. Amyot.
Sir Hector Langevin said that if such appeared it never was intended by the engineer. Of course the enlargement of the work would necessarily increase the cost. There would be a curtailment of the expense by reducing the width from 60 to 55 feet.

Mr. Gibson maintained the faccuracy of his statement.

Add to the date of the month the last two figures of the year, leaving off the hundreds, as for 1891 take only 91, and one-fourth of the latter. If there should be a fraction in this last number make it whole by adding one. The sum thus found must be either increased or diminished according to the following table:

Subtract 2 for March.
Add 16 for October.
Add 3 for July.
Add 16 for October.
Add 3 for July.
Add 16 for October.
The result is divided by 7. The balance left will give the name of the day on which the inquiring individual was born. If this balance should be 1, he was born on a Sunday; if it is 2, it was a Monday.
For example: A man was born on the 24th of August, 1862. What was the day of the week? The number for the month is 24; that of the year, 62; one fourth of the latter is 15\frac{1}{2}, or 16 in round numbers. The sum total is 102. For August 11 must be added, making 113. The latter sum divided by 7 leaves 1 as the remainder. Sunday was therefore the day on which the man was born.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Blendes With Crimped Hair.

The girl with the crumbled hair is very fashionable nowadays. And nine cases out of ten she is a blonde. Have you noticed that? If no, do you know the cause? Well, I'll tell you, says a writer in the St. Louis Republic. Blonde hair, being naturally finer than black, is easier crimped and stays crimped longer. Besides, when the hair is cut short, the neck is exposed to view, and the skin of a blonde possesses a peculiar whiteness which renders its exposure attractive. This, in addition to the prevailing neckless waist, is the occasion for the blonde girl with the crumpled hair. Her real rival is the semi-brunette—that is to say, the girl with black hair, gray eyes and a complexion ike alabaster. Given a head of crumpled black hair, a big black hat with black plumes, a black dress with a necklessbodice, and you have the gingham girl of the summer, who will run a tight race with her sister, the blonde.

ALMA LADIES COLLEGE.

St. Thomas, Ont.

This popular institution, which has for a number of years had the largest attendance in Canada, has just closed a rost successful term. About 200 - young women from arreats of the Dominion and the United States were in attendance pursuing courses in Literature, Languages, Fine Arts, Commercial Science and Elecution. The buildings and furnishings are, it is said, the finest in Canada and the rates are relatively low. Twenty professors and teachers are engaged and every course qualifies for self-support. The college has now University affiliation. In Fine Arts Alma has, as usual, taken the first place, winning over 100 certificates from the Educational Department, and the Silver Medal. The college re-opens Sept. 10th. Any reader can secure the elegant illustrated Anuouncement by addressing Principal Austin, B. D., St. Thomas, Ont.

t of an extensive commerce and e, Roman London was as emi-uity as it is to-day. Its monu-temorials of its greatness, prove noe. One of these, if it is, t, which is uncertain, is the to of the River Thames. This k is quite unequalled by any of the modern English engineers.

for thirty-seven miles along the course of the stream loty mounds confine the river within fixed bounds, and offer a secure path to the mavigator. On each side the country spreads out far below the embankment, and more than once the waters have broken through, overspread the lowlands and left desolation around them. The English had neglected to repair and strengthen the banks of the fiver, and were indebted to the skill of a Dutch engineer for the restoration of the Roman work. "The Thames from Richmond," says Mr. Smiles, "is an artificial river." How many years of ceaseless toil, of acute engineering skill, and vast expense were employed on this unequalled work no history relates, no record even suggests. Some authorities attribute the embankment to the Belgic traders, before the Roman invasion; others, even to the monks of the Middle Ages. Fut here is good reason to suppose that the true authors of the chief improvements on the Thames were the Romans. Similar works on almost an equal we have the complaint of the subject Britons that they were worn out and consumed in clearing the woods and embanking the fens. Not that the hapless natives were ever treated by their Roman taskmasters as harshly as were the savages of Hayti and Cuba by the Spaniah discoverors. But they have outlived their conqueror.

Before these embankments were made, the country below London was an immense fen, or marsh, over which the tide flowed incessantly. The town could have been only a collection of rude houses seated on the rising ground above the river. It was already a seat of considerable trade even before the Roman conjuest. But the genius and skill of the Roman engineers, if the Romans built the embankment the Thames was confined within bounds; many acres of land were added to the agricultural domain, while along the fine highway of the river a ceaseless procession of vessels of every size and form moved up and down. They came, as Strabo tells us, from the mouths of the Loire and the Garonne, the Seine and the Rhine. Some were war

Paris, like all other great cities, has been unch concerned with the question how to ispose of sewage. At present most of the much concerned with the question how dispose of sewage. At present most of the outflow of the collecteurs pours into the Seine, to its serious pollution. But some Seine, to its scrious pollution. But some years ago the municipality purchased several thousands of acres of land in the plain of Gennevilliers, a few miles down the river, and began the experiment of a sewage farm. The project has been an unqualified success. An extension from the Pere-Lachaise-St. Denis collecteur carriers a large quantity of sewage to the farm, where it is used by irrigation as a fertilizer, with the best of results in every way. At present one-fifth or more of the total sewage effluent of Paris is used on the land at Gennevilliers; and in due time the whole quantity can be or rarms is used on the land at Gennevilliers; and in due time the whole quantity can be diverted from the river to this and other tracts of land which have been selected as suitable for the purpose.—Dr. Albert Shaw, in the Century for July.

NUPTIALS OF LOUISE AND ARIBER'S

Splensor—The Eride's superb Wedding Outst-Something that will Enterest the Ladies.

A London cable says: Princess Louise, of Schlessewig-Holstein, granddaughter of the Queen of England, was married at St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle, shortly, after 4 o'clock this afternoon to Prince Aribert of Anhalt with great splendor.

The ceremony ccole blace in the presence of a brilliant company, including Queen Victoria and the members of the English royal family and the Emperor and Empress of Germany.

Thousands upon thousands of people thronged into Windsor to-day. As the hour fixed for the ceremony—4 o'clock in the afternoon—drew near, Windsor Castle and its neighborhood were fairly alive with people. Not since the marriage of the late Duke of Albany has the castle been crowded with so many distinguished people and not since that event has St. George's Chapel been so crowded with members of royal families. The decorations of the sheel were grand. The stalls of the Knights of the Garter were set aside for some of the most important guests and the Bray and Rutland chapels were fitted up as retiring rooms. The route followed by the procession was the same as that taken at the wedding of the Duke of Albany. This route was lined on both sides with troops, and at the castle guards of honor were mounted at every available point. The Royal standard of Great Britain, from the highest tower of the castle, floated proudly over the whole, while here, there and everywhere were dazzling uniforms, gorgeous staffs, and state carriages containing diplomats, stategmen, generals, admirals, princes of minor degree, and high church di-mitaries.

The Archishop of Canterbury officiated. The Dean and Canons of Windsor were the only clergymen besides the Primate within the chancel rails. There were six bridesmaids: Lady Edith Ward, Lady Emily Cadogan, Lady Mabel Egerton, Lady Esther Gore, Lady Elizabeth Meade and Miss Bridgeman. Those who use green wood for fuel understand how wasteful the moisture is of the heat obtained. Wet coal is just as objectionable, except for the fact that the heat it gives in burning is so much that the waste is not noticed. The woodshed or coal bin should, therefore, be not only well covered, but protected so that it may not be wetted with rain in summer or snow in winter.

What Everybody Should Know.

Fire requires air; therefore, shut all doors and windows. By this means fire may be confined to a single room for a sufficient period to enable the immates to escape; but the fanning of the wind and the draught will instantly cause the flames to increase with extraordinary rapidity. The most precious moments are at the commencement of a fire. In a room a table-loth can be used to smother a large sheet of flame, and a cushion may serve to beat it out. The great point is presence of mind. In all large houses buckets of water should be placed on every landing, a little salt being put in the water. Always endeavor to attack the bed of a fire; if you cannot extinguish a fire, shut the window and be sure and shut the door when making your retreat. A wet silk handkerchief tied over eyes and nose will make breathing possible in the midst of much smoke; a blanket wetted and wrapped around the body will enable a person to pass through a sheet of flame in comparative safety.

HOW TO KILL A CAT.

Chleroform a Great Beal Better Than Care for This Purpose.

A number of people are interested in learning the best way of painlessly killing animals, and we may usefully note a communication on the subject from a correspondent of the English Mechanic. He writes: "The most merciful way of destroying cats is to chloroform them. Draw a sock (knitted one preferred, as being elastic) over pussy's head so that the toe of the sock is brought to her nose or nearly so; then pour about half a teaspoonful of chloroform on the sock close to her nose. Almostra soon as she has become frightened by the unusual smell of chloroform is added, perhaps twice, and pussy never wakes again."

The Household Savings Bank.

The Household Savings Bank system, lately instituted in the Traders Bank of Canada, Toronto, by the pushing young in spector, Mr. Æmelius Jarvis, is quite a novel scheme. Iron savings banks, modelled after the Traders Bank building in Toronto, will be left at the residences or stores of those who apply for them, the keys remaining in possession of the bank. Each bank has four compartments for four individual depositors, whose names can be inserted in a little disk under the slot in each compartment. A nominal rental per annum (15 cents, I believe) will be charged, and once a month in the residences, and oftener in the stores, clerks will call and collect the contents of each bank, the amounts being entered in a small pass-book held by the depositor. If required a book of cheques will be given to depositors, and such cheques given in payment of small tradesmen's accounts will the accepted at the bank. It is thought that by this scheme small sums under one dollar, which would otherwise, in the majority of tesses, be squandered, will find their way into these banks, and in time form the in no doubt that it will in the long run The Household Savings Bank.

Arthur Wilson, who is said to have loaned a million dollars to the Prince of Wales, is one of two sons of Thomas Wilson, the founder of the famous shipping business at Hull, and altogether a self-made man. With capital, courage and a high degree of cold blood the Wilson brothers are said to have crushed all opposition and controlled the trade they wanted. They developed what was left by their father until it has become an immense business, including several. lines of steamers. It is said that the brothers divided $25,000,000 in profits last year, but it is said that the sum was nowhere near that figure. As far as the shipping business is concerned it has become a stock company capitalized at £2,000,000 and mainly owned by the brothers. Both men are active in public affairs, and both are more or less brusque in manner and awkward in speech. It is told of Arthur Wilson, that when he entertained one of the sons of the Prince of Wales at Trashy Croth he flew the Union Jack and the Hull line flag from his flagstaff but the steamer flag wason top of the flag of Great Britain.
