TOPICS OF THE TIME.

"What will the coming woman wear?" is a question which a symposium of women writers are discussing in the New York papers. The answer is easy. Clothes, and mighty becoming ones at that. Ever since Mother Eve tried her inexperienced hand at fashioning an apron out gan suit, or whether she drapes herself with classical severity as in old Greece, or bulges out into gigantic rotundity as in quill, whether the coming women shall, to what that means, it is certain that no man does-or whether you rig yourselves for conquest, as a Zonave attires himself for war, as Miss Alice Stone Blackwell suggests, you will continue to be worth lookbills, if he can, grumble as is his unquestionable right, and yet confess down in the ecesses of his inmost soul that your are a

ONE OF THE REASONS.

"They say money is scarce. Why should it be so ?" asked a HERALD reader the other day. The question is certainly one of more than ordinary importance and it is not very easy to give an answer that covers the whole case, for the reasons are many. There is a constant drain upon the province for interest. On our share of the Federal debt we are paying about $500,000 a year in interest, all of which goes out of the province. There is no means of ascerincrease during the current year at the taining the indebtedness of private indiexisting rate of stumpage upon lumber; viduals upon which interest is being paid abroad, but of course the amount is very of his father's murder and the day set large, and there is nothing to put on the province to maintain the necessary public other side of the account. Our Struggling Lumbermen would have been materially assisted in their operations. These views have been constantly and persistently urged upon the consideration of the members of the government and of this house, by the representatives of the lumbermen, and the hope has been frequently expressed by a large number of the government supporters in this house, whenever the question of the policy of the government in regard to the crown lands was under consideration, that the government would soon see its way clear to relieve the imbermen, to some extent, of the burdens which the government regulations imposed. From the reference this section made it is fairly to be assumed that the government, urged by these considerations, have deemed it advisable to make the whole question of our crown lands and the territorial revenue a subject of inquiry, with a view of obtaining the most exhaustive and reliable information
