Not only O'Connell's soap, but the Irish Protestants, he was absolutely a terror to them. Many other Irish national leaders before his time, in his time, and since his time might be named whose following was somewhat distributed through the various sections, creeds and classes of Irishmen, notably Henry Grattan, John Martin and Isaac Butt. But to the Protestants of his day O'Connell seemed a combination of Guy Fawkes, the Pretender, and the Pope of Rome.

While his trial was proceeding, rather concluding in 1844, an old gentleman, named Fliott, a good type of the staunch old Tory gentleman of that day in Ireland, lay dying in a southern country. "Do you not see all your hopes on the merits of your Saviour, Mr. Fliott?" said the doctor, who stood by the bedside. "Yes I do, all," murmured the dying man. "And are you directing all your thoughts at this moment to the heavenly Jerusalem, Mr. Fliott?" "And nowhere else." "Above all, I trust you to forgive every one, and feel peace with all men?" "With all mankind," responded the genial old foxhunter. "There was a solemn pause." "Mr. Fliott," he half-whispered, "the Devil has been in your mind, and you are not at all at ease." "The dying man roused himself instantly and with sharp emphasis asked, "How about the negro?" "O'Connell convicted?" "Found guilty, yes." "Thanks be to God!" was the last phrase of the worthy old squire.

LABORER'S CONDITION.

THE LIGHT OF MAN'S SOCIAL AND DOMESTIC OBLIGATIONS.

The rights here spoken of, belonging to each individual man, are in a much stronger light if he be an employer in relation to his social and domestic obligations.

In choosing a state of life, it is important that all are at all times to be guided by the command of Jesus Christ as to virginity, or to marry into the bonds of marriage.

No human law can abolish the sacred and primitive right of marriage, or in any way limit the chief and principal purpose of marriage, ordained by God's authority from its beginning. "Increase and multiply" (Genesis 1: 28). Thus we have the family; the "society" of a man's own household; a society limited indeed in numbers, but a true "society," anterior to every kind of State or nation, with rights and duties of its own, totally independent of the commonwealth.

THE RIGHTS OF THE FAMILY.

That right of property, therefore, which has been proved to belong originally to the family, and which also belongs to a man in his capacity of head of a family; nay, such a person must possess this right so much the more clearly in proportion as his position multiplies his duties. For it is a most sacred law of nature that a father must provide food and all necessities for those whom he has begotten; and, naturally, nature dictates that a man's children, who carry on, as it were, and continue his own personality, should be provided by him with that which is necessary to enable them honorably to keep themselves from want and misery in the uncertainties of this mortal life. Now in no other way can a father effect this, except by the power which he has over his property, which he can transmit to his children by inheritance.

A family, no less than a State, is, as we have said, a true society, and is, in fact, a society in itself, that is to say, by the father. Wherefore, provided the limits be not transgressed which are prescribed by the very nature of the family, which exists with the State in the choice and pursuit of those things which are essential to its preservation and its liberty.

The Auditor's report on the public accounts was tabled Friday and a perusal of the same shows the receipts and expenditures for 1890 to have been as follows:

Even since the death of Sir John Macdonald, and even before, the Ottawa has held high carnival. There was nothing so matter how false or ridiculous, regarding the formation of a new Ministry, that he did not send over the wire. And the Grit papers, all over the Dominion, carried away by the excitement of the moment, had no scruple in themselves to the belief that there was a possibility of disaffection in the Conservative ranks. Whether this or the low honor, if more congenial employment of disseminating false political information, actuated their conduct, certain it is they have made a most profitable exhibition of themselves by the glorifying and ridiculing of the Conservative ranks.

Langavie was approved, discussion existed in the Conservative ranks, and unless by a burning eloquence of Mr. Laurier, the "navy" of Sir Richard Cartwright, the logic of Mr. Mills, or the rhetorical flourish of Mr. Davin, all of them seem to be induced to cross to the other side of the House, such a contrivance is quite improbable. But admitting for sake of argument that an election is probable, it is likely that the people who but three months ago rejected the "navy" policy of the Laurier-Cartwright-Wilman-Farrar quartet, and whose confidence in our present rules has not yet been estranged, would by their votes make such a change? Such a contention is ridiculous.

Mr. Macdonald has again shown what a man he is, and this time the superfluous amount was let in Europe. A London cable reports him to have in an interview dwelt upon the danger that Mr. Abbott may unwittingly favor "his clients," the C. P. R. He also said Sir Hector Langavie had been a member of the Laurier-Cartwright-Wilman-Farrar quartet, but that Mr. Laurier is the only man capable of uniting the elements of a strong government and carrying out the policy of free trade, which is the people's desire. Mr. Mercer closes with the statement that Imperial Federation is treason to Canada, and adds "We Canadians are looking forward with some anxiety to the time when we shall ask for independence. We shall resist with all our might to Great Britain without any feeling."

Now the truth is, the vapors of the Patriot to contrary notwithstanding, the party troubled by intestine feuds is "the great Liberal party" nominally led by Mr. Laurier. Another thorn, and that which adds greatly to their present discomfiture, is the fact that the new cabinet has been formed, under the leadership of Mr. Abbott, out of what the Patriot would wish us to believe was a chaotic Conservative party. Where are the disunion? In the Grit party. It is a well-known fact that the doctory knight, the "Senator from the State of Ontario," casts suspicious glances on the position held by Mr. Laurier, and consequently the relations between Sir Richard and his chief are somewhat strained. Then again others of the party know some of their confederates by the anonymous titles of "machine politicians" etc., while several of the French members are at loggerheads with Ontario representatives for their recent speaking of the inhabitants of the Anctis Province. Another example of the concord of the party that will in a few months be elected to shape the destinies of Canada was illustrated during last Wednesday's business in the Commons when Mr. Davin at the second reading of his bill to amend the Dominion Franchise Act, which provides that in districts where for any reason recent revision of the lists had not taken place, provincial lists should be used. Sir John Thompson moved the three months' halt when to everyone's surprise, especially Mr. Chatham, our own Mr. Davin attacked the measure as ill-considered and all of confusion. Such a castigation did the author of the "ill-considered measure" receive that he withdrew his measure, and left the house in a huff.

They cannot surely plead the timidity of the reports sent them from the capital; for reports were prepared by their duly accredited representatives, and must be accepted as embodying the sentiments of the papers so represented. Not one of the opposition journals can be exempted from this charge, and none from one end of the Dominion to the other allowed itself to be carried to such scandalous extremes of falsehood, or allowed the embalmers to use their imagination to overstate its pretensions. DEATH OF JUDGE PETERS.

His Honor Judge Peters passed away Saturday morning at the advanced age of 80 years. For some time past he had been in failing health, and was consequently forced to retire from the care of his office. James Horsfield Peters was a son of Thomas H. Peters Esq., of Miramichi, N. B., and was born at St. John, N. B., on January 19, 1812. He received his education at King's College, Fredericton, and his professional training both in his native Province and England. He was called to the bar of New Brunswick in 1837, and in the following year to that of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. Ten years later he was elevated to judicial office as Master of the Rolls and Assistant Judge of the Supreme Court, a position he held for nearly thirty years. Besides his forensic ability he possessed another equally as great in the important branch of agriculture. To him also we are indebted for the invention and designing of the ingenious toasting which communication between the Island and the Mainland is kept up during the winter months. He was married in 1839 to the eldest daughter of Sir Samuel Cunard, Bart., and had three sons and two daughters, the eldest of whom was John Thomas Peters, the former being Premier of the Province. His funeral took place on Monday and was largely attended.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The death of the O'Garrahan Mahon, M. P. for County Carlow, Ireland, recalls an interesting figure from the sphere of British politics. He was aged 80, and was identified with Irish politics for over 60 years. He was a Liberal House Member.

WHERE'S THE BIRD?

Even the members of Canada's late lamented Premier had been held within the precincts of the bank, but on Monday last a party of five men, who were supposed to be the Premier, were seen in the vicinity of the bank. It was stated that wherever they were seen, they were seen in the same line, and will be supported by the same party.

organ need not be the least alarmed, as Premier Abbott's margin of 30 to 1 will pretty good working majority; and unless by a burning eloquence of Mr. Laurier, the "navy" of Sir Richard Cartwright, the logic of Mr. Mills, or the rhetorical flourish of Mr. Davin, all of them seem to be induced to cross to the other side of the House, such a contrivance is quite improbable. We shall resist with all our might to Great Britain without any feeling."

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

The House resumed its sitting on Tuesday, the 23rd inst. Sir Hector Langavie read the following statement from Premier Abbott: "Having obtained the requisite sanction of His Excellency, I desire to make a statement of proceedings after the death of the late Right Hon. Sir John Macdonald. It is not my duty to state the details of the formation of a new cabinet until the grave had closed over it. Mr. Laurier said it was no more an indictment of any man's ability to compel them to vote than to make a statement as to the result of a debate. Sir Richard Cartwright supported the bill as designed to remove the stigma of corruption, and Mr. Mills thought it would be difficult to vote the principle of compulsory voting. Mr. Davin thought the measure was not to be trusted that it would be to the public interest. Mr. Laurier said it was necessary to put a stop to corruption in the House of Commons. It was argued that this bill would infringe upon the liberty of the subject by compelling him to vote at an election. Sir John Thompson said the bill proposed a severe restriction upon the power of the House of Commons. Mr. Laurier said that the bill would be a severe restriction upon the power of the House of Commons. Mr. Laurier said that the bill would be a severe restriction upon the power of the House of Commons.

THE MYSTERY OF KILLARD. BY RICHARD BOWLING. PART I.—THE RACE OF LANE. CHAPTER VII. "TEN GUINEAS!"

For a hundred yards or so the two men kept straight on. Then they turned into a by-street and disappeared from Cahill's sight. He ran, gained the corner, and peered cautiously down the way they had taken.

Tom spoke in the interest of his friends, the Lanes, there always seemed to be some trace of reason in his words; he appeared capable of calculating the effect likely to be produced by certain thoughts and considerations. At other times he never looked outside of himself, but spoke without any regard to effect.
