 St. John's, July 30th, 1913.

A Word Now to the Young Men

If you have not yet formed the excellent habit of investing your surplus earnings, may we suggest the advisability of your starting NOW.

It is only by saving and gradual investing that you can acquire an income separate from your salary and a competency for your old age. It is only thus that you can win financial independence.

There is no greater incentive for saving than the part proprietorship offered you through the purchase of stock in the corporations that Canada is making great.

Such an opportunity is now available in the Maritime Mail Company Preferred Stock issue. Dividends are 7 per cent and cumulative. Each share of Preferred carries as a bonus a half share of Common Stock—the book value of which by appraisal is nearly $60 a share. Our convenient instalment plan enables you to make a start with a comparatively small first payment.

Most assuredly you should write for our circular that tells all about this attractive industrial.

One in a Thousand, BUT TRUE TO THE LAST

CHAPTER XX.

I order the carriage, and dress myself as carefully as I can, yet I cannot hide the haggard misery in my eyes, nor the ghastly pallor of my face. I think, as I take a last look in the glass, that I would follow Lady Derwent's example, and put on a little outside coloring, if I had it. But I do not possess it; and, although I have no doubt there is plenty in Theo's dressing case, I do not care to go into her room for it. Green might put a different construction upon such an unusual proceeding.

I draw on my gloves, and go downstairs. The carriage is waiting at the hall door, and I tell Mawson to stop at the post office, as we go through Idleminster. Another of these long, solitary drives! I am almost ashamed of the servants knowing that I am always alone, and my sister is my husband's favorite companion.

To my disgust, Lady Myers is at home—I had hoped all the way that she might be out—because, though I was resolved to keep my word and come, I am really very uncomfortable and awkward to find myself making my first call alone; when I returned her first visit she was not at home. But now it is too late to draw back. Lady Myers is at home, so the man tells me, and I have nothing to do but go in. I find Mrs. Brancepeth there; and, from the manner in which the two ladies sprang aside and look at each other, I cannot help fancying that they have been speaking about me.

"And is Lady Lasselle still with you?" says Lady Myers, when we have exhausted the never-failing topic, the weather.

"Yes," I answer, faintly.

"Oh, yes; I saw her drive past with Sir Adrian!" says Mrs. Brancepeth. "How much better she looks since she came to Idleminster!"

"Yes," I say, more faintly still.

I wish wildly that I had the presence of mind enough to start a new topic, but I cannot. I cast about for anything to comment upon, but I might as well be dumb, for anything I can force myself to say. At last Mrs. Brancepeth breaks the silence:

"How very sorry you will be to leave!"

"What a pity! The chief would be so horribly disappointed!" he says, with a laugh. "And he's the sort of man who doesn't bear trouble of any kind well."

I am so hurt and indignant that I do not attempt to answer. I look at Adrian for a moment without moving; then I rise from my seat and leave the room. Before I close the door, I hear Theo's scornful, cutting voice saying: "Dear me, your shot has struck home!" So it has, Theo—home to the heart!

It is only in fiction that the sorely wounded in heart cry out. I am no tragedy queen; I do not fling up my arms and shriek out my wretchedness; I do not shut the door with a bang. On the contrary, I close it very quietly, and creep upstairs—lightly creep. I grope along, with my hand against the wall, like a blind woman; I feel faint and sick, like one who has just had a crushing blow on the head. When I enter my bedroom, Lane is there, and I tell her, as quietly as my shaking voice will allow me, to get me a dressing gown, and take off my dress. I make no attempt whatever to unfasten it myself; but when she has wheeled a chair close to the fire, I ask her to put some scent on a handkerchief for me. When she has given me that, she goes on laying out my dinner dress; but, though I am perfectly aware I shall not wear it, I am too stunned to tell her so. Then she asks if she can do anything else for me, and, when I tell her "No," she goes away.

About half an hour later I hear my husband go into his dressing room; the door of communication is ajar, and I call him. I have not done such a thing for more than a fortnight, and he enters, with a surprised face.

"I want to speak to you," I say, with an effort.

He closes the door, and comes to

"Leave!" I echo. "I don't understand you."

"To leave Idleminster, of course." Then, seeing from my blank face that I am in ignorance of her meaning, she adds: "You surely know that the Carrassiers have received their orders for Ireland, do you not?"

"I think you must be mistaken," I stammer. "I have not heard a word of it."

"Well, the order arrived only this morning. Capt. Cust came to tell Edith just as I left the house this afternoon. Of course, he wants to be hurried at once," with a well-satisfied little laugh.

"I don't think Idleminster suits me very well," I say, for I feel that I am growing whiter and whiter every moment, and give this as an explanation: "at least, I am never really well here."

"You look dreadfully ill," says Lady Myers. "I'm sure in the cathedral on Sunday I expected to see you drop every moment."

I smile, in a sickly sort of way, and presently take my departure, wishing myself anywhere out of the way of all this toil and tumult.

When I reach home, Adrian and Theo have not returned. I notice that Col. Cardylion's card is lying on the table in the inner hall; but I am not sufficiently interested to inquire what time he was here. His visits during the last month have been of almost daily occurrence, for the great woman later is at last as really and truly in love as any young subaltern of six months standing; but Theo will not even look at him. She has eyes for Adrian only; no other man, not even the one who will have power to make her a duchess, seems to have any fascination for her.

When they come back, I am sitting in the drawing room fire, in the chair which Theo always appropriates if possible. She comes in laughing gayly and takes off her crape bonnet, flinging it down upon a sofa. I have no doubt she is perfectly aware how well she looks with all her wavy, golden hair tossed and ruffled.

"That man has actually been here again!" she says, with laughing emphasis on the last word. "Ah, it is something to have won the heart of a man who hates the whole sex, and who will be a duke into the bargain!"

"Were you at home, Audrey?" says Adrian, carelessly.

"No."

"What a pity! The chief would be so horribly disappointed!" he says, with a laugh. "And he's the sort of man who doesn't bear trouble of any kind well."

I am so hurt and indignant that I do not attempt to answer. I look at Adrian for a moment without moving; then I rise from my seat and leave the room. Before I close the door, I hear Theo's scornful, cutting voice saying: "Dear me, your shot has struck home!" So it has, Theo—home to the heart!

"I want to speak to you," I say, with an effort.

He closes the door, and comes to the fire, standing with one elbow resting upon the mantelpiece.

"What did you mean by what you said about Col. Cardylion?" I ask.

"It was only joking," he answers; "and, really, I don't see what occasion there was for you to fling out of the room in that way."

"I did not fling out of the room," I say, coldly; "and, whether you were joking or not, I wish to tell you plainly that there must be no repetition of it."

"Well," he says, in an aggrieved voice, "I do think it's hard lines if I can't make a joke, if I like. You never say anything to Theo."

"Theo is my guest," I say, with cutting severity; "and, as such, I wish to treat her with punctilious politeness. But you must know she did not mean it as a joke, and I don't think you did. I wish you distinctly to understand that, if you ever hint or allude to anything of that kind again, I will go home to my father at once."

"Well, really, Audrey—"

"Really!" I repeat. "If you make the slightest allusion to anything of the kind again, whether in joke or not, I will not stay an hour in the house."

"Well, I really didn't mean to offend you," he says, in a humble tone; "but you're so awfully touchy of late."

I cover my eyes with my hands, and lie back, almost exhausted by the scene. Adrian evidently considers the contretemps is bridged over, for he asks if I have been out this afternoon.

"I have."

"Where have you been? To see Lois, I suppose?"

"I have been where I told you I should go," I answer, "to see Lady Myers."

"Audrey, you have never dared—"

"—he begins, but I interrupt him. "Dare!" I say, proudly. "I dare do anything!"

"You have deliberately disobeyed me."

"Yes; I have deliberately disobeyed you!" I echo, with a calmness which startles even myself. "I went to Lady Myers, and there I heard news which, I must confess, startled me—that the regiment has received its orders for Ireland. Is that true?"

"Oh, yes!" he says, gloomily.

"And did you know that when you came into luncheon?"

"Of course."

"And you never told me!" I cry, indignantly. "Have you told Theo?"

He admits that he has, and I continue: "You have told Theo, and kept me, your wife, in ignorance of a matter of such importance as this? And pray, are you going to take Theo to Ireland?"

"She talks of going with us," he answers.

"Oh," I say, with a sneer, "she talks of it, does she? Then, if she goes, I do not! I fancy even Lady Lasselle will hardly face the world's censure so far as to go with you alone."

"You are talking nonsense," he says, hastily.

"Am I? Then let me tell you, Adrian, that, if you do not stop somewhere soon, the whole world will be talking nonsense, also. The gossips have begun already."

"Oh, that is too absurd!" he cries, laughing nervously. "It is hard lines if I can't be good friends with my sister-in-law without a lot of old gossips setting their hollow jaws wagging!"

"She talks of going with us," he answers.

"I know that your lines are hard," I say, wearily; "but what can I do to make them easier for you? I cannot annihilate myself and dying would be of no use. You would be no nearer to your object."

"My object? What do you mean?"

"Oh, you know what I mean!" I say, quietly. "You know, and I know, and what's the use of 'making better' any longer?"

"You are talking in riddles," he says; "I do not understand you; but we are now, and have been for some time, playing at cross purposes, and I do not like it. Make friends with me, Audrey, and let us start afresh."

As he speaks, he holds out his hand to me; but I look past it straight into the fire.

"Won't you shake hands with me, Audrey?" he says, in a more gentle tone than that he has used for some time.

"I have."

"Where have you been? To see Lois, I suppose?"

We Want an Account of Stewardship.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—The time is approaching when the men whom we trusted four years ago with the management of our public affairs will have to render an account of their stewardship. What excuse will they offer for their conduct? We hear that Howley and Morris will not again put in an appearance amongst us. So much the better for themselves, we did not give them credit for so much abuse, but assure them that they have acted wisely for their deceit to those who trusted them would have to be accounted for. These promises and total neglect of our interests would confront them like giant specters through the district, especially on Cape Shore. As for Devereaux who has not sense enough to retire when he must be certain he is not wanted, we have only to say that should he have the gall to put in an appearance amongst us well he must only take the consequences, for three such political representatives as Howley, Morris and Devereaux have proven themselves to be we never before encountered. It was useless to write to one of them for your letter would remain unanswered, and as for petitions it was only waste of time and paper to send them although our roads were disgraced and our bridges tumbling down. It seems that no money could be found for roads and bridges in the interest of the fishermen notwithstanding the fact that millions of dollars could be found for Reid's to build branch railways; Reid must have money but to hedges with the fishermen who have to pay the interest on those millions which are being ruthlessly spent! but our time is coming and in November next the voters and taxpayers of the country will put a stop to this, and this we can only accomplish by voting solid for Bond candidates and the interest of our country will be safe; our eyes are open now to the mistake we made four years ago, but we will not be caught napping again. I remain, Mr. Editor, Yours truly,

X POINT.

The Iceman

The iceman is a self-possessed individual who sells river water by the lump. Some of these lumps are shorter than others which come at the same price, which causes suspicious housewives to bristle in several directions after the iceman is out of hearing.

The nature of the iceman's business is such that he remains cool and collected under the most trying circumstances. You can meet an iceman at the back door with an invitation to fight sticking out of every pore and tell him that he ought to have his eyes tested or his scales adjusted to the A. L. & A. M. rating; and you can tell by the enthusiasm with which he attacks your ice-book that he harbors no ill feeling whatever. An iceman never feels hurt when somebody sizes up an alleged 60-pound chunk of ice and remarks in a polite but firm tone that it can't be made to weigh over 35 pounds unless the iceman and his assistant stand upon it.

The iceman always makes it a point to get around early in the morning, so as to prevent his patrons from oversleeping. It is very easy to tell when the iceman is coming, for he usually carries along an assistant who is stone deaf in both ears and has to be given directions which can be heard through a brick-veneered residence at a distance of nine blocks. The iceman also manages to carry on an animated conversation with his assistant while dragging a piece of ice over the front lawn on his stomach, and if the entire family is not awake by this time he will attend to it by hammering forty pounds of ice into thirty pounds of hole and whistling off the key on the return trip.

Some icemen can give one look at a load of ice and tell to a pound how much it will take to completely depopulate a $4.00 ice-book. Others are less accurate and in order to fit the ice chest have to shave off several pounds and leave it on the cellar stairs, just where the hired girl can step on it and turn a double back somersault with a hod of coal.

The ice book is a collapsible device with vanishing coupons which are too tired to register anything below five pounds. When a brand new ice book is four days old it begins to wear a wan, pinched look and sheds leaves faster than a hard maple tree after the first frost.

Stitches in Time.

Had Father Noah been quite wise he would have killed the pair of flies that roosted in the ark; he let that pregnant duty slide while he and Shem and Japhet tried to navigate their bark. Two flies were all there were all told! And Noah might have knocked them cold with one good husky swat; he had the chance—he let it slip while he went mooning round his ship—the knowledge makes me hot! And ever since the sons of men have toiled and wrought and toiled again, to kill the measly flies; the more we kill the more we find, the more we knock the blamed things blind, the more their legions rise. We're all like Noah, more or less responsible for the distress that makes all hope seem vague; we see some ugly things alive, and let them live and grow and thrive until they are a plague. We calmly view the noxious weeds, and habits bad, and evil deeds, which breed so beastly fast. We let them grow and multiply as Father Noah did the fly, and kick ourselves at last. "A stitch in time," the poet said (he had a long and shapely head), "will save you nine, by gum." And nothing truer will you find in all the years that lie behind, or all the years to come.

Regatta Query.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—A question has been started in the local press about the history of the Regatta and the speed records. Cannot there be published some authentic accounts of the history of the Regatta and from what year it started, with what machinery and generally all its history. There is it not true that the late Mr. E. Shinnott, of Placentia, constructed a boat which surpassed all records up to that time? We should like to see a good lively press controversy on the whole history of Regatta.

Yours truly,
DOBBIN'S COVE.

To An Old Shoe.

We've walked the ways of life, old shoe,
The rough and smooth together;
I've kept you under-foot, 'tis true,
But you've been honest leather.

You've not refused to take the dust,
Your shining surface soiling;
You've been a friend that I could trust,
In league or in toiling.

You've borne the brunt on many a blow,
By foes for me intended;
You've never kicked a rotten toe,
Though me you've oft defended.

You pinched me some when you were new,
Ere we had learned each other,
But now you fit my foot, old shoe,
As brother unto brother.

But now you're wrinkled, old and grey,
Too shabby to be mended;
I'll fling you out beside the way
(That by yourself I've mended).

And then, I wonder if some day,
When I am old and faded,
Like you I'll thus be thrown away
By those whom I have aided.

Then let it be beside the route
Of some divine endeavor,
O'er which the feet that wore me out
Pass on and up forever.

MINARD'S LINIMENT, LUMBERMAN'S FRIEND.

The Poems of Robert Bridges.

Of the lyric which does not conceal its art, in which every word brings its contribution to the total rhythmic and imaginative effect, there has been no finer specimen in English since those astonishing things which Tennyson scattered through his "Princess"; indeed this looks back unashamed to Keats' "Ode to Mabel" and Coleridge's "Ode to Evening."

"Looks Back": that is a phrase which Mr. Bridges often suggests to his readers, and which he can afford to suggest without fear of repetition. The poet who has done more than any one else to open our eyes to things hitherto unnoticed in English woods and fields, the man who is sometimes as observant as Whitman, can safely afford to "look back." And so he does. He knows, what Whitman never knew, that the use of language is an art as well as an inspiration; and that art, while always renewing itself, never altogether forgets that it belongs to a great tradition. It is not for nothing that Mr. Bridges is steeped in the poetry of Greece and Rome, above all, in English poetry, that he has made a study of the great Christian hymns, that he is a master of music. All these things make themselves felt by his unflinching sense of language and rhythm, in his incapacity to produce either an empty or a vulgar line of verse, in his grave emotion of one who has kept company with the ages. Perhaps they are seen at their finest in the power they have given him to restate those ancient things which come out of the sprightly heart of man, which in every generation he forgets and learns again. A language altogether new will not do for them. They know they are too old for that. They call for words full of memory and associations, words which remind them of their great past and high lineage. And yet the old will not do quite by itself. It needs the new birth which only a poet can give it: the mysterious touch by which it ceases to be an echo and becomes a living thing. Has that touch come from Mr. Bridges in his beautiful "Eton Ode, or In the noble ending of the "Hymn of Nature"?

Strength and Endure

Gird on thy sword, O man, thy strength endure
In fair desire thine earthborn joy renew.
Live thou thy life beneath the making sun
Thou Beauty, Truth and Love in thee are one.

Thou thousand ages hath thy childhood run;
On timeless ruin hath thy glory been:
From the forgotten night of loves fordone
Thou risest in the dawn of hopes unseen.

Higher and higher shall thy thoughts aspire,
Unto the stars of heaven, and pass away.
And earth renew the buds of thy desire
In fleeting blooms of everlasting day.

Thy work with beauty crown'd, thy life with love
Thy mind with truth uplift to God above
For whom all is, from whom was all begun,
In whom all Beauty, Truth, and Love are one.

TO ST. JOHN'S, PUBLIC.

The magical process of Dry Cleaning garments is now available to the citizens of St. John's.

The well-known establishment of Unger's Laundry & Dry Works, Halifax, has appointed a local agency, Messrs. Nichol, Inkpen & Chafe, Ltd., Water Street, who will receive all articles to be cleaned and have them ready for delivery within two weeks. Garments which have become soiled can be restored to original freshness through this process, and it will thus be seen that a great saving in tailor's bills can thus be effected by availing yourself of this method.

Notes and Comments.

The public meeting of the St. John's Ambulance Brigade serves to draw attention to the excellent work which has been carried on for some time quietly and unostentatiously under the superintendence of Dr. Macpherson. Not only does the brigade serve the purpose of preparing men to take an efficient part in time of war, but it serves of useful purposes in training men to render first aid in accidents which occur frequently in all industrial and seafaring centres. The main object of Major-General Dalton's visit, however, was the establishment of a Sick Berth Reserve which could render aid to the wounded in case St. John's became a depot for the injured in time of naval war. Needless to say the appeal met with a ready response and a number of members signified their intention to join and attend twelve drills and an annual inspection to keep them fit for the work. Their response was most commendable.

We are in receipt of a number of views, sent with Lord Grey's compliments, of the site and surroundings of the Dominion House, which Lord Grey proposes shall be erected on the Aldwyck site, in the centre of London, to house under one roof all the Canadian Government's offices in the capital of the Empire. There is also a view of the Commonwealth Building now in course of construction, the foundation stone of which was laid recently by His Majesty the King. The objects aimed at are three:—(1) That the Governments of the self-governing Dominions and of their various States and Provinces may concentrate on one central site their offices; (2) That the attention of the home consumer may be focussed on the products of the Dominion; and (3) That the home manufacturer may have a means of ascertaining the requirements of the Dominion.

CAPT. ABRAHAM KEEN,
Past Grand Master of P. G. Lodge, Newfoundland.

Grand Black Chapter. Policeman Assaulted

The Grand Black Chapter resumed its session yesterday forenoon, and except for adjournment for meals, continued at work till midnight. Most of the day was taken up with reports from the various committees, and the following were adopted:—Suspensions and Expulsions; Petitions and Appeals; Finance; Constitution and Laws and Correspondence. The reports of the two latter committees occupied most of the day, calling forth as they did lengthy and most interesting discussions. The committee on replies to addresses of welcome presented their report, which was adopted. A special committee was appointed to draft resolutions of sympathy with the families and relatives of officers of the Chapter who had passed away during the year.

An interesting announcement was the reading of an invitation from His Excellency the Governor to the members of the Grand Lodges to attend a Garden Party which is to be held at Government House on Friday next. The session resumes at 9.30 this morning, and the first business will be the election of officers. The Grand Black Chapter will conclude its session this morning, and the Sovereign Grand Lodge session will open at 2.30, with Grand Master Lt. Col. Scott in the chair. As a souvenir of the session the local brethren provided the Canadian visitors with a very pretty enamel badge composed of the Arms of Newfoundland on a gilded green surmounted by a rim of deep green, on which are the letters G.B.C.B.A. July 1913, in letters of gold.

Fire Yesterday.

An alarm of fire was sent in yesterday afternoon from box 32 bringing the Western and Central men to the house of Mr. John Bellows, Adelaide Street. A lamp was upset in the kitchen and the curtains caught fire. The services of the firemen were not required, for before they arrived the blaze was quenched by a few pails of water.

Meigle From the Straits.

The Meigle arrived at Humbermouth at 2.45 p.m. yesterday from Battle Harb and intervening ports. Capt. Goobie, wired the Reid Nfld. Co. as follows:—
"Made all ports of call to and from Battle Harbor, Strong S. to S. W. to E. gates. Dense fog and bad weather throughout the entire trip. Fishermen greatly hampered; only small catches taken last week."

Personal.

Mr. Freeman who will be attached to H. M. S. Calypso as chief gunner, was a passenger from Liverpool on the Sardinian.

Mr. Fraser, who arrived by the Sardinian, is a well known English sportsman and he will spend a period in the interior of the country fishing.

Mr. E. St. J. Jackson, nephew of Mr. Geo. Shea, M. H. A., returned from England by the Sardinian.

"I woke up suddenly the other night and thought I heard a burglar in the room. I sat up in bed, and that was my wife."

"What did she do?"
"She accused me, as usual, of having had a burglar dream. Said I'd never hear a real burglar if I lived a thousand years. I said I'd bet I would. She said she'd bet I wouldn't. And just then a shadowy form rose from behind the dresser and a horse voice exclaimed: "He wins, man!"

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Ye Ancient, Capital, this afternoon, at 2 o'clock, when Mr. C. J. Cahill, Barrister at Law, and Miss Molly Fitzpatrick, daughter of Capt. Thomas Fitzpatrick, joined forces to face the future battles of life as one. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. Mons. Reardon, assisted by Rev. Fr. Sheehan. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Alicia Fitzpatrick, and Miss Rose O'Reilly. Mr. J. A. MacKenzie, of St. John's, supported the groom. After the ceremony a reception was held. On the 4.30 train the bride and groom left for Salmonier where the honeymoon will be spent. Picnic parties Mr. and Mrs. Cahill miss years of happiness.

ARRESTED FOR THEFT.

Yesterday afternoon two of the new-dovells who hang around Water Street West, went down in Steep's Cove and appropriated eight of the largest fish that they could find in the market. The police, however, got on to their little game, jailed both and they will appear in court to-day.

Come to Mount Cashel

Come, gather in your thousands,
As you often did before,
Come help the little orphans as
You did in days of yore,
They'll be there to bid you welcome
At Mount Cashel grounds to-day,
And the hunting will be flying
While the bands will sweetly play.

Let us gather at Mount Cashel
And push the work along,
Let us join the merry party
And help to swell the throng
As we did when Brother Slattery
Stood there with kindly smile
To greet us at the gateway in the Real old Irish style.

Oh, to-day his loving memory
Awakens within us all
A sympathetic feeling to Respond to duty's call,
So we'll muster at Mount Cashel

In carriage bus and van
And show to his successors
That we're with 'em to a man.

There'll be dancing and fine music
And everything that's gay,
And the good old game of skittles
Where you'll knock down ten or more,
Football lives and shooting contests
And everything that's gay.
So join the merry party to-day,
At Mount Cashel grounds to-day,

Makes Night Hideous.

The residents of Holloway Street and vicinity have been annoyed the past week or more by the number of dogs which congregate there and make the night hideous with their barking and howling. We would suggest that Inspector Grimes arm one or two of his "night watch" with revolvers and send them to exterminate the brutes, who are not thought enough of by their owners to be looked after. It is hard that the citizens of that neighbourhood, who are all hard working, should have their slumbers disturbed by these brutes.

Man Drowned.

Mr. C. Tulk, of Clarendville, advised the Department of Justice last evening that on Monday morning a drowning accident had occurred there. ### No Shaving--By Order.

Unfounded Rumor of Abolition at the Army Moustache.

London, July 8.—The rumor that the Army Council had decided to abolish the King's regulation that the upper lip shall not be shaved is groundless, so a Daily Graphic representative was informed at the War Office by Sir Edward Ward's secretary.

The abolition of the regulation, however, would undoubtedly be welcomed in the Army. Judging from opinions given to our representative by several soldiers, both officers and privates. Unpopular with the majority of officers, the order has been evaded altogether, by many, while others have merely left a scrubby growth on their faces as a standing protest against what they consider to be a ridiculous necessity.

Asked what he thought about the regulation, Major-General Sir Alfred Turner, who is himself clean shaven, smiled, and replied by asking: "If the men have to shave at all, why not let them shave their upper lips as well as their chins? It would add to their appearances and cleanliness. I am convinced that the majority of Army men are most favorable to the abolition of the regulation, which, I suppose, would leave the shaving of the upper lip voluntary."

No Time for Shaving.

"When the Army goes upon active service," continued Sir Alfred, "few men have any time to shave at all; so then even beards are allowed to be grown. But the old clean-shaven soldiers, as one sees them in pictures, presented a much smarter and more uniform appearance than ranks of men with hirsute ornaments of all sizes and shapes.

"In the old days the foolishness of the regulations was most felt in the artillery. For instance, when a Horse Artillery Officer was promoted, as he always was, to the Foot Artillery, he had to shave off his moustache, and had to cultivate it again when he was re-transferred to the Horse Artillery.

"Personally, I am strongly in favor of officers and men not only being allowed, but encouraged, to shave their upper lips. From my own experience, I do not for a minute believe that the moustache is of any advantage in filtering the air that goes into the mouth, and so keeping out the germs of disease and fever when one is on foreign service, as is often stated."

A private in the artillery, told quite an artistic moustache, told our representative that he would be delighted to be allowed to shave it off. He thought the majority of his mates would like to do away with their moustaches; and a tall Guardsman told practically the same story.

PITS MARRIED BLISS ON CANVAS.

St. Louis, July 8.—One of the most talked of pieces of art in St. Louis hangs in the home of Dr. Robert E. Wilson, painted by Mrs. Wilson. The canvas is called "The Story of a Young Girl's Love" and covers the entire wall space in the parlor of their fine Colonial home. The painting is divided into panels, the size of each individual picture depending on the amount of space to be covered. Mrs. Wilson devoted almost two years to the work. Her friends say the paintings illustrate her blissful married state.

Tame Fish in African Lake.

London, July 24.—A remarkable discovery has been made in Nigeria, by P. Amaury Talbot, a district commissioner, of what is known as the "Sacred Lake of Life." Some few months ago, when Talbot returned to England after an extensive journey of exploration through the unknown parts of Nigeria, he announced that he had discovered a mysterious lake, which was held in a great awe by all the native tribes throughout the adjoining country. The scene about the lake, he said, was full of mystery. The surface of the water was absolutely still, and round about were ten-foot-high bushes bearing what looked like great tufts of creamy plants; these, however, proved to be nests of frogs. The place was a sanctuary for all wild life, as no hunter ever dared to penetrate within many miles of the sacred waters. The natives had many beliefs and were held by many superstitions in regard to the lake. Nothing was ever allowed to trouble the water, or even to touch its outer edge, and here dwelt forever the shades of the departed Ekoi.

Talbot's latest discovery is in happy contrast to this description. He describes it as the "Sacred Lake of Life." The knowledge of the existence of the lake, he tells, had been kept a jealously guarded secret from all Europeans and not even natives, with one exception of the high priest had ever been allowed, to approach the sacred water, the supposed dwelling place of the greatest deity of the race. Access to the lake was through a grove of trees so cunningly planted that any one not knowing of its existence might pass within a couple of yards of the holy pool without suspecting its existence.

Talbot, when guided to the spot, found that the water was full of great fish, on the welfare of which depended the prosperity of the Ekoi. The fish were so tame that they fed from the hand of the reigning high priest, the only native human being allowed to look upon the water.

Flying Boat to Cross Atlantic

To fly across the Atlantic in thirty-one hours in the largest and heaviest ship of the air ever constructed, is the aim of a young French law student of Chicago, who has already constructed the hull of an aerial craft which he will name Napoleon. This machine, which is described in the "Popular Mechanics Magazine," is planned to have the widest pair of wings ever made, constructed of aluminium steel. The total weight of the monoplane will be 5,000 lbs., but the raising capacity of the wings, as designed, will be, theoretically, about 16,000 lbs., sufficient to lift a crew of six men, with their provisions and fuel supply.

The motive power is to be provided by two 150-h.p. steam turbines, weighing 150 lbs. each, the fuel for which will be condensed coke. Each engine will control two 8-ft. propellers of the usual shape, one pair in front and the other behind. Additional

The Lore of Common Things.

Why Does the Wind Blow?

Anybody who has ever watched tobacco smoke curling up over the rim of a lamp glass when the lamp is alight will have the key to the reason why the winds blow round the world. The smoke flies upwards and breaks into streamers and eddies because it is borne on the air heated by the lamp, and hot air always ascends.

The sun is at least a hundred times hotter at its surface than any paraffin lamp, and every minute of the day and night it is roasting the earth. It is not roasting England and Burma, or China, all at the same time, because all the time the earth is being roasted it is spinning like a joint of meat on a spit. Now the earth is all covered over with a jacket of air, a jacket which is at least a hundred and fifty miles thick; and, consequently, as the sun roasts the earth through this jacket the air is continually rising upward from the surface of the earth where it is hottest. Everybody knows where that is; it is the part of the earth which, in consequence of the earth's globelike shape, is nearest to the sun; and that is the Equator. You have therefore to think of fountains of air rising upwards in consequence of the great heat at the Equator, and as they rise other streams of cold air come in from the chilly Poles and the Arctic region to take the place of that which has gone aloft.

Why the Winds Differ.

So, in the first place all winds should be partly up and down, rising up from the earth at the Equator, and falling down again at the Poles. But remember that the earth is spinning all this time, and is now being heated most about the middle of America, and now about Timbuctoo, in Africa, and now about the South, and now near Borneo and Java, and now in the middle of the Pacific, and now in Central America again. Consequently, with this turning movement the great world winds from the Equator to the Poles get a push, and are split up into immense South-west and North-east overhead currents. Of these mighty currents all the winds of the world are children; and they differ from one another because mountains and seas and plains all in different ways split the parent winds up.

Observe Pioneer Days.

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 24.—Pioneer Day, the anniversary of the arrival of Brigham Young and 147 exiled followers in the Salt Lake Valley in 1847, was observed as a holiday today by the members of the Mormon church throughout Utah and some of the neighbouring states. On the day following the arrival of the colonists Brigham Young selected a site for the building of a temple. The famous temple was begun in 1853, and it was forty years before it was completed.

ditional stability is expected to be secured by six automatic balancers, in the form of square shutters to open and close as the hydro-aeroplane tips beyond a certain angle. A fluid in a metal ball will control the releasing triggers for each set of balancers, the action consuming only one-twenty-fifth of a second. The inventor claims to have floated stationary in the air for more than twenty minutes by means of this equipment on an ordinary monoplane, during which time the shutters were kept fluttering constantly. It is proposed to carry 800 lbs. of coke, and over 500 gallons of water in two hollers, which the inventor claims will be sufficient to keep the craft in motion for fifty-eight hours.

Housekeeping at Windsor Castle.

Nearly 2,000 persons have now to be provided for day by day at Windsor Castle, and the kitchen staff under the direction of His Majesty's chef numbers between seventy and eighty men and women, whose sole duty it is to cook the provisions.

Upwards of 120 footmen are continually active—these in addition to the Royal pages. Twenty-eight men get out, clean after use, and put away the silver and gold plate used every day for the dinners. The value of that in ordinary use is well over £250,000. For banquets two or three times that amount is used.

Several men are employed exclusively in the glass-room, and when it is stated that even the wine-glasses are worth 30s. each it will be seen that the washing and packing away requires skilled handling.

There is an army of maidservants. Every morning the housekeeper goes round the rooms used by Royalty and personally directs a selected staff of housemaids; while the head housemaid is responsible for the large staff which sets in order all other apartments.

Charwomen, with a variety of occupations, are legion. These, in addition to their pay, go away each night with enough food to feed their families.

Fresh flowers are placed in the rooms every day; this, with the care of the plants, keeps a staff of men at work. In the mews there are a multitude of coachmen and grooms in charge of the horses and carriages, as many as eighteen of the latter, with four and pairs, being occasionally out at one time.

While many of the provisions of necessity come from town, as great a portion as possible is purchased in Windsor, much to the satisfaction of the tradespeople, who have lately been experiencing a very bad season.—Liverpool Weekly Post.

Hands Across the Sea.

The rapid growth of movements to develop larger views of the Empire and a consciousness of our imperial citizenship and brotherhood is a remarkable sign of the times. One such movement, very full of hope and promise and most practical, is the "Hands Across the Seas" organization. It styles itself "A Movement of Empire and Education," and is under the auspices of the Government of Canada and most of the departments of education in that Dominion. Its object is to enable teachers in Canadian schools to visit the Old Country. It was started two or three years ago, mainly through the energy of its honorary organizer, Mr. F. J. Ney, of the Education Department, Manitoba, who also edits the "Hands Across" Magazine, which has now reached its fourth number. We offer a very hearty word of welcome to the 250 teachers who start under its auspices from Montreal to-day (July 5th) and reach Glasgow on the 12th. They have a most interesting programme before them. In Oxford they will be guests of the Victoria League. London they will not reach until July 26th—too late for many of us in the south to give the personal welcome we should wish to give; but here, too, the Victoria League will do all in its power to make the visit a success. One very pleasant item in the programme is a Canadian day for London school children in Epping Forest. The party sails for Canada on August 30th.—London, July 5.

PANA, Illinois, July 29. Dr. Linn, aged 108, the oldest man in the State, died to-day.

BRUSSELS, July 29. An ingot of gold, shown in a glass case at the Belgian Colonial Palace at Ghent Exhibition, yesterday was missed. There is no clue to the thief, who took the case, as well as the ingot, which was valued at four thousand pounds sterling.

LIMA, July 29. There is absolutely no truth in the rumors circulated in Europe and America as to a catastrophe. No extraordinary occurrence of any kind has occurred. They were probably due to the fact that telegraphic communication with Santiago is interrupted.

CHICAGO, July 29. Women police were assured, when the City Council passed an ordinance creating places for them on the force. Mayor Harrison will name ten patrol women for duty at beach and dance halls and other places where it is believed they will prove more efficient than men.

THREE RIVERS, July 29. The steamer Crown Concordia, of the West India Line, collided with the s.s. Lady Gaspe, last night, opposite Cape Margdale. The Gaspe struck in the middle, is badly damaged, and was sent aground. The passengers, 150, and all the crew were safely landed at the Cape.

OGDENSBURG, N.Y., July 29. An electrical storm, which swept this section during the night, caught Patrick McCarthy and George O'Connor, of this city, in a field in the St. Lawrence, homeward bound from a day's fishing trip. They besought the tiny craft to seek shelter from the sale. As they stepped ashore a thunderbolt struck O'Connor, killing him, and mortally wounding McCarthy.

LONDON, July 29. The labor dispute in South Africa has assumed a most threatening aspect. Despatches from Johannesburg this evening say that the tension there is very great. The Federation of Trades has elected a secret strike committee with power to issue absolute orders. This committee has a scheme for a scientific strike; that is to start at some distant place where there are no troops and few police, or to have damage done to a score of places simultaneously. Nothing more may be done for weeks, but the Government will be put to the expense of safeguarding property meantime. Household are laying in provisions, trade is stagnant, merchants are sending cablegrams to various places ordering shipments of goods to be stopped. The police are finding considerable seditious literature in the native tongue among the natives, which refers to trouble breaking out among white tribes. This is regarded as most suggestive. The Government mining authorities have complete plans for marching off all native laborers in the Rand, numbering 350,000, in case they should strike. They also suggest that in case of a strike an attempt be made to work the mines with strike-breakers, but that the whole industry be practically shut down.

Crew Leaves

To Bring Out S. S. Terra Nova.
Chief Engineer McKinley, Second Osmond and several local firemen will leave here this day week to bring out the steamer Terra Nova which made fame in the South Polar Expedition. The crew will take passage on the Furness liner Digby at this port for Liverpool, thence proceeding to London where they will join the ship which is now on exhibition there. It is expected she will leave the other side the latter part of August and will arrive here about the second week in September. The vessel will be commanded and brought to St. John's by an English captain.

Allan Liner Here

The R. M. S. Sardinian, Capt. Henderson, arrived last evening from Liverpool. The passage occupied 3 days. The ship made good headway until Monday last when dense fog was met. She brought 358 tons of cargo, 12 packages of mail matter and these passengers:—R. H. Arre, A. Curtis, A. B. Frazer, Miss M. Frazer, T. Freeman, Mrs. Capt. Gibbs, L. V. Hartley, St. J. Jackson, J. J. Murphy, Mrs. L. Skoche, and five in steerage.

Minimize The Loss.

Practically farmers may easily minimize the loss due to a backward and cold season, by the judicious use of Sulphate of Ammonia as a fertilizer. Sulphate of Ammonia contains over 20 per cent of nitrogen, as against 15 per cent in Nitrate of Soda, and is therefore more than 25 per cent better than nitrate of soda as a means of quickening and increasing the growth of crops.
The use of Sulphate of Ammonia has increased enormously of late years and it is recognized to be the most valuable fertilizer obtainable. By its judicious use the production of root crops per acre may be doubled, and the growth of late crops stimulated.
We invite the attention of farmers to our special pamphlet on the best methods of using Sulphate, copies of which will be forwarded free to any address on application.
The price of Sulphate is moderate, and our terms are accommodating.

Cost of Diligence

Man Summoned For Working Too Hard.
Messrs. W. H. Smith and Son, the railway bookstall proprietors, were summoned at Stansted (Essex) on Saturday for failing to give their employee, Mr. Percy John Postle, a half-day's holiday during a particular week in January under the Shops Act.
The justices had refused to convict, but were ordered to reconsider the case by the King's Bench Division.
Whereupon it was thought to be proved in defence that Messrs. W. H. Smith and son had used due diligence to enforce the Act, and the failure was due to Mr. Postle himself. A summons was accordingly issued against him, and he was brought back from his honeymoon for the hearing.
Giving evidence, Mr. Postle said he remained at work of his own choice for stock-taking, although the statutory notice was on exhibition.
The Bench in the end convicted Messrs. W. H. Smith and Son, imposed a fine of 10s. with 2s. 10s. costs, and dismissed the case against Mr. Postle. —Daily Mail, July 14.

One Charlotte russe . . . . . 35
One apple . . . . . 20
One plate of lemon ice . . . . . 30
One cup of coffee with milk . . . . . 30
This establishment advertises itself as "a quiet family hotel for persons of moderate means."

A simple breakfast, consisting of half a grape fruit, coffee, rolls, and butter, and boiled eggs, costs 90c. for one person.
We publish these figures for the benefit of those of our readers who are dissatisfied with their small town earnings and are attracted away from home by the lure of larger wages, and suggest a few moments of arithmetical reflection.
The cost of living has more than doubled within the last ten years in the big communities and is constantly rising.

Ambassadors' Salaries.

In contrast with the position of the United States Ambassador to Great Britain, where the incumbent has to rent his own house, on a salary of $2,500 a year, is the situation of foreign diplomats in Washington. All of the important ambassadors in Washington are either owned outright or are rented by the countries represented, ample funds are provided for upkeep, and salaries range from $6,000 to $10,000. England pays her ambassador at Paris, $9,000; at Berlin, $8,000; at St. Petersburg, $7,800; at Rome, $7,000; and at Vienna, $8,000. Germany pays her ambassador at Paris, $6,000; at London, $7,500; at St. Petersburg, $7,500; at Rome, $8,000; and at Vienna, $8,000. The French ambassador at Berlin receives $5,000; at London, $8,000; at Rome, $4,500; at St. Petersburg, $5,000; and at Vienna, $7,000. The Austrian ambassador receives at Berlin, $6,200; at Paris, $6,000; at London, $5,000; at Rome, $4,400; and at St. Petersburg, $4,800. Russia pays her ambassador at Berlin $8,000; at London, $8,000; at Paris, $8,000; at Vienna, $8,000; and at Rome, $6,400. The highest salary paid to United States ambassadors is $3,500 a year.—Frederick Owen.

Boy Killed at Play With Revolver.

Halifax, N. S., July 24.—At Springhill Mines yesterday a boy about eight years of age, son of John Booth, a prosperous English miner of Springhill, went to the house of his married sister a short distance from his own home accompanied by an older brother.
In the absence of the sister the older boy went into a room and got hold of a revolver that turned out to be loaded. After amusing himself with it he gave it to the younger boy and in some way, not exactly known, it was discharged, the bullet entering the younger boy's head causing his death after a few hours.

Unlucky Days.

Many families look upon some particular day every year with dread, for on this day they seem to be persistently dogged by bad luck. Others have an unlucky month; whilst for others leap year proves the harbinger of disaster. Nearly all the accidents, money losses, illnesses, deaths, and other misfortunes in the family invariably occur on that special day, month, or year which they would give the world to be able to erase for ever from the calendar.
Old-time soothsayers and prophets were firm in their belief in the unlucky day; Julius Caesar was told to beware of the Ides of March (March 13th), and on this day he was brutally murdered by Brutus and other conspirators.
For Charles II. September 3rd was a day fraught with ill-omen. On this day he lost the battle of Dunbar, and again that of Worcester; but, singularly enough, September 3rd was the date of the death of his enemy, Cromwell, after which day, it may be presumed, September 3rd no longer signalled the adverse workings of fate to the restored king.
When May Weddings are Lucky.
From the Middle Ages the month of May has been shunned by brides, as it is proverbially unlucky for weddings. Curiously enough, however, if a man or woman is born on the 13th of May, it is believed in many districts that it is lucky rather than otherwise for him or her to embark upon matrimony in that month. People born on the 13th of May are, as a rule, lucky people.
There are many remarkable instances on record of a certain date being fraught with ill-luck for the members of a family. In one typical case May 11th was the day of ill-omen. On that day the father of the family was drowned at sea. On the 11th, some years after, the eldest son was killed in the Boer War. When the 11th came round again great many losses were sustained. Another year it signalled the breaking out of an epidemic of typhus in the family; and yet another year the bread-winner of the family fell downstairs, breaking his leg in two places, thus being incapacitated from work for several weeks. Small wonder that the members of the family without exception breathe a sigh of relief each year as the fatal date is left behind.

Unlucky Leap Year.

In the case of another family of some social prominence, leap year for them is fraught with disaster. The marriage of the heads of the family goes along comfortably enough until each succeeding leap year comes round. On one occasion they lost an important law suit which cost them thousands of pounds; another year a son of the family, a son-in-law, and a grandchild died. In fact, each leap year has, so far, heralded some family bereavement. Leap year for them invariably turns out to be a year of mourning, and they have come to look upon it now with superstitious dread.—The Bits.

The Lost Opportunity.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Is there any greater mental torture in the world than to reflect upon a lost opportunity? As one looks back, it sometimes seems impossible to understand why one did not seize the golden occasion and ride triumphant to success or happiness on the crest of that high wave of opportunity.

"If only," we say, regretfully, "if only it were yesterday or last week, or last year, and I had that chance once more, how much better I would use it."

And then we fall to thinking of the happiness or success that would have been ours if we had seized the opportunity, and since we cannot possibly know what the drawbacks would have been, we see what we missed in a rosy glow and are sure it was something far better than any success or happiness we have ever tasted.

Thoughts like these, which occasionally come to all of us, must necessarily be very bitter. But there is one way of making them even more painful. And that is to hold the idea that the lost opportunity is the only one of its kind, or the only one equally good, which will ever come to us.

This is one of the greatest mistakes in the world. No greater lie ever passed into proverb than the saying that opportunity knocks but once at every man's door. So long as he knows that there is a real live man within and not merely the physical shell of a mental corpse, opportunity never gets tired of knocking at any man's door. No proverb is written for the normal man. Each one is aimed at some folly. That one was meant for the sluggard, who lets opportunity slip through his fingers and doesn't give a hang. It was never meant for the man who now and then loses an opportunity and tortures himself when he sees his mistake.

In my own life I have failed to make full use of many opportunities. At first it seemed to me that each mistake was final, but soon I learned that if I kept on reaching out for them and trying to use them properly, fate would give more chances, and still more. One seldom gets the same opportunity twice, but this is a big world and there are other opportunities just as good as the ones we lose, even if that doesn't seem possible in the moment of loss.

Keep alive, keep growing, keep alert, keep on educating yourself and trying to make yourself valuable to the world, and life will be one opportunity after another.

And as each opportunity is offered to you, approach it as if that foolish proverb were true; but when you lose an opportunity know that the proverb is really false. Remember that if you are always looking behind you at gates that have closed, you are sure to miss some open gates in the present.

Look forward, then, and press forward, believing "it is always better farther on," and the god of opportunities and optimists will surely befriend you.

Those Punctuation Marks.

"O dear!" sighed Warren, as he came in from school one day. "I wish we didn't have to learn so much about periods and commas and semicolons and such things. I hate them!"

Mamma laid down her sewing and said, "Why do you hate them, Warren?"

"Why it's so hard to remember when to use them, and besides I don't think they are of much use. I don't see why we couldn't write sentences without putting in any punctuation marks."

Mamma smiled and then rising from her chair, she went over to the desk and got out a piece of paper and a pencil. Then she wrote: "The little turkey strutted about the yard and ate corn half an hour after his head was cut off."

"Why, Mummie, how funny!" exclaimed Warren when he had read it. "how could a turkey walk around eating corn without any head?"

"He couldn't," replied mama, "and yet I have written just what I intended to write. I have, however, left out all punctuation marks."

Then she bent down and punctuated the sentence. It then read: "The little turkey strutted about the yard and ate corn; half an hour after, his head was cut off."

"Oh, I see," cried Warren, and then and there he resolved to learn all that he could about punctuation marks.—Woman's World for August.

The Little Angel Women.

The little angel women—
Oh, they are not all mush,
Nor lollypops, nor ribbons,
Nor giggle, gab and gush!
The little angel women,
The mothers sweet and true,
The sisters fine with arms that twine
The girls we love—Oh, hush.

The little angel women—
Between us and our care,
With loving hand so oft they stand
To help us grin and bear.
The worn, sweet, weary mothers,
The young, sweet, happy wives—
The women of the angel hearts
That help us live our lives!

The little angel women—
The loveliest ones we can trust,
The sweetest of their showering love
Mid battles of the dust!
The grand, brave, noble women,
That lead us with their light,
Out of the shadows of our wrong
Up to their own pure height!

The little angel women
No matter what takes place,
There at our side in conscious pride,
With sunbright, lifted face!
The sweet true hearts that trust us,
That help us and make fine
The tiding days along the ways
That your ways and mine!

The little angel women—
Oh they are not all scream,
Nor frills, nor tuss, nor feathers,
Nor soda, mints and cream!
The little angel women,
That help us keep on swimming,
The mothers sweet wives hard to beat
The girls we love—Oh, dream.

Writers of Historic Songs.

Most of the songs that have made history were written by men who had no other claim to immortality. The "Marseillaise" is the only production of Rouget de Lisle which has survived, and "The Wearing of the Green" was the work of an anonymous purveyor of ballads for the street hawkers of Dublin. Max Schneckenburger, an obscure Swabian merchant, who never published anything else, composed in 1840 some verses of which the burden was thus translated: "Dear Fatherland, no danger thine. Firm stand thy sons to watch the Rhine."

Little was heard of these until thirty years later, when the Franco-German war gave them an enormous vogue. They were then adopted as the national anthem of United Germany, and a yearly pension of 3,000 marks was conferred on the composer of the tune to which they were set.—London Chronicle.

Paris, July 7.—For the first time in the history of the Grand Prix de Rome, the most coveted prize in music in France has been awarded to a woman, Lilly Boulanger, aged 19, daughter of Prof. Boulanger, for a composition entitled "Faust and Helene."

The winner of the second prize was a young man aged 25, Delvin Court, who won the same two years ago. The Grand Prix de Rome was established in 1803. Such composers as Berlioz, Gounod, Bizet, Massenet, Debussy and Charpentier have won it.

The Poems of Robert Bridges

The New Poet Laureate.

The new edition of the "poetical works of Robert Bridges, excluding the Eight Dramas," just published by the Oxford Press in one volume, contains everything; with the possible exception of Achilles in Scyros, on which the poet's final fame is likely to rest. It opens with the two classical masks, Prometheus and Demeter, in each of which fine and characteristic thought as well as fine observation of nature lie buried in a form which Mr. Bridges scarcely succeeds in recalling to life. Every lover of Greek story or Jacobean mask will turn their pages with pleasure; but no one could fully enjoy them who was entirely ignorant of their models. The poet, here as elsewhere, fails to vitalize human action; his strength goes into the reflections and descriptions, often boldly modern, which fill the choruses and many of the speeches. The masks are followed by "Eros and Psyche," a retelling of the story of Apuleius in twelve books from March to February. Then comes the set of sixty-nine sonnets called "The Growth of Love." The remainder of the book is occupied by the five books of "Shorter Poems," and two of "New" and "Late" poems, followed by the experiments in Classical Prosody. The ordinary reader is likely enough to pass these last over as nothing but the freaks of a rather wilful scholar. But he will make a mistake: for putting the question of metrical or technical interest aside altogether, the two longer ones, called "Winter Delights" and "Epistles to a Socialist," give a very interesting picture of the poet's mind and its attitude to the past history and present problems of humanity.

J. L. MATHIEU 19, Sherbrooke, Can. THOS. MCMURDO & Co., Wholesale Chemists and Druggists, St. John's, Nfld few indeed of our lyrical poets have left so few negligible poems behind them. Everything he writes has stuff in it, and it is very seldom that he fails to apply the needed fire to give it life. The very greatest things he has of course never done. He has no West Wind, no Grecian Urn; but neither Shelley nor Keats has left so many short poems which, without being of the very highest order, mean enough and move us enough to make us wish to know them by heart. Indeed, one may boldly ask, who has? His principal subjects are the simpler aspects of nature, especially as seen in the English winter and spring, and the graver emotions of the human heart. He loves also to speak of the arts, especially poetry and music, and is full of reminiscences of his great predecessors. But scarcely Milton himself is more the master of his learning. In his lyrics he is always a poet, never a mere imitator; his frequent reminiscences of Milton and Virgil always express not Virgil or Milton but himself. This, however, is a point which cannot be illustrated here, and after all, it is not his fine use of his meters which is his greatest claim to attention, but his fine handling of nature, thought, and emotion—and, above all, of nature. No one perhaps has not into English poetry more facts about sea, clouds and sunshine as seen in England about English birds and trees and flowers. He has a Whitmanlike gift of seeing the familiar as if he saw it for the first time. So he sees the London snow

Stealthily and perpetually settling, and loosely lying,
Hushing the latest traffic of the drowsy town;
Deadening, muffling, stifling, its murmur falling;
Lazily and incessantly floating down and down.

Back Was Lame For Two Years

Stomach Troubles and Weakness of Kidneys Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.
There is an enormous amount of suffering from liver and kidney derangements and stomach troubles that could easily be avoided by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. If you could only realize the scores of everyday ills that arise from a sluggish condition of the kidneys, liver and bowels you would not be long in giving this medicine a trial.
Mrs. Edward Stewart, New Richmond West, Que., writes: "I want to tell you how thankful I am for using your 'Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills' for stomach troubles and backache caused by weak kidneys. I was unable to wash any clothes for over two years on account of my back being lame. I read the Almanac and began using these pills. Two boxes made a complete cure. I can do my own washing and other work now, and want to say to lady friends that they do not know how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."
25 cents a box all dealers, or Ed. Cannon, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto

Silently sitting and veiling road roof, and sailing;
Hiding difference, making unevenness even,
At angles and crevices softly delimiting and sailing.

And so on through fifty details of the snowy night and "the strange, unheavenly glare" of the winter lawn. Or he can give us a little night-piece as simple as a Rembrandt etching, and done with an eye as lovingly watchful:

The upper skies are palest blue,
Mottled with pearl and fretted snow,
With tattered fleecy of inky hue
Close overhead the storm clouds go.
Their shadows fly along the hill
And o'er the crest mount one by one:
The whitened planking of the mill
Is now in shade and now in sun.

He can make us see with new eyes such common sights as that of the miller standing beside his sacks, who gives no thanks to "his tireless merry slave, the wind," so set he is upon the figures he is entering in his dusty book. In a moment, with a few touches, the poet sheds on that seemingly commonplace figure the strange eternal light of imaginative art; and none who have read the poem will ever look at mills with quite the same indifference again. He is not afraid of the most daring detail of realism: it never masters him; it is held in control by his sincerity and tenderness. So he can say of "A Dead Child":

To me, as I move thee now in the last duty,

Deed thou with a turn of gesture an on respond;

Startling my fancy fond
With a chance attitude of the head,
A freak of beauty.

Thy hand clasps, as 'twas wont, my finger and holds it:
But the grasp is the clasp of death,
Heart-breaking and stiff;

Yet feels to my hand as if
'Twas still thy will thy pleasure and trust that enfolds it.

So I lay thee there, thy sunken eyelids closing—
So lie thou there in thy coffin, thy last little bed!

Propping thy wise, sad head,
Thy firm, pale hands across thy chest disposing.

But though the poems which exhibit this power of taking the naked facts, not only in their nakedness but in their abundance, and making them serve the purposes of poetry, are probably his most original work, they are by no means the whole of it or perhaps its most beautiful part. What he has done with the fact as it is wonderful: but perhaps his readers more often remember what he has done with the fact as it may be, as it comes to be when the imagination follows out its remoter possibilities. All that our voiceless and formless imaginations have half-consciously dreamed as we looked from a cliff at a ship on the sea below has been made conscious and audible for us in his astonishing

Whither, O splendid ship, thy white sails crowding,
Leaning across the bosom of the urgent West, and from henceforth that particular sight no more finds us helpless and articulate; we remember this poem, and we know that here is the escape we wanted. Of greater beauty still, perhaps, are the finest of his handlings of the fact as it is not: of the fact, that is, carried away out of the world of history, science, or experience, and transformed by pure imagination into something more beautiful than itself. Here again, he shows the affinity to Keats, who has been Milton's only rival as a formative influence in his poetry. Would it be easily believed that it was possible after all these centuries to take the nightingale once more and make of him a poem which should be a masterpiece not only of beauty but of originality?

"Refused to Accept Substitute"

"THE GENUINE, DUFFY'S, A BLESSING TO MANKIND"

Mrs. Margaret Stroud, 67 Years Old.

Mrs. M. Stroud, 67 years old, refused to be fooled by substitute. She knew the value of Duffy's from years of personal experience as well as having it highly recommended by her family physician.

"A short time ago I went into a store and asked for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. The clerk did his utmost to sell me another malt whiskey which he represented was better or at least 'just as good' as Duffy's.

"This store is one like some others that sell a well advertised and popular article at cost, and sometimes less than cost, using it as a bait. Then they try to sell the customer their own unknown article at the same price as the well advertised article. But on their substitute they are making an extra profit, and often when it is an article of food or drink, this extra profit is made at the expense of the customer's health. I am now over 67 years old and for many years I have used

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

"I was advised by my family doctor to take it three times a day before meals, for I was troubled with a hacking cough. After ten days I noticed that my appetite increased wonderfully and it also helped my digestion and I have not been troubled since."

"My doctor says Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is a pure, unadulterated and excellent remedy. He says that taken as a medicine and as directed by a physician it is a blessing to mankind." Margaret Stroud, 1942 East Allegheny Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

Beautiful must be the mountains
whence ye come,
And bright in the fruitful valleys
the streams, wherethrough
Ye learn your song:
Where are those starry woods? O
might I wander there,
Among the flowers, which in that heavenly air
Bloom the year long!

Nay, barren are those mountains and spent the streams:
Our song is the voice of desire, that haunts our dreams.
A throe of the heart,
Whose pining visions dim, forbidden
hopes profound,
No dying cadence nor long sigh can sound.
For all our art

Alone, aloud in the raptured ear of men
We pour our dark nocturnal secret;
and then,
As night is withdrawn
From these sweet springing meads

and bursting boughs of May,
Dream while the innumerable choir
of day
Welcome the dawn.

Not the Same Judge.

Lutterworth, famous through its association with Wycliffe, has another title to renown in the fact that one of its citizens possesses the name of Barnaby Rudge. He is an innkeeper, and on his business card the following rhyme appears under his portrait:—
Barnaby Rudge is dead, it is said;
To regions above or below he has fled.
Do not believe it, but just call it true,
At the Denbigh Arms, Lutterworth way.
For there you will find him all blithe
some and gay.
The same jovial landlord, they after day, Barnaby Rudge,
Not from Dickens, but late of the Leicestershire Regiment.

"My husband is such a handy man about the house," she exclaimed. "He can do anything. Only the other day he took the cuckoo clock to pieces and cleaned it and put it together again. Now it runs as well as ever."

"Really," said the bored friend, "it goes all right again?"
"Yes, indeed," was the reply. "But you're a bit worried about the cuckoo; it will persist when it calls the hours, in putting the 'oo' before the 'cuck'."

A Graves Story.
It is interesting to note that Mr. George Graves had been selected to appear at the command performance at Knowsley Hall, Lancashire, held recently during the visit of the King and Queen to Lord Derby.

Mr. Graves tells innumerable funny stories. One of them is about an enthusiastic wife who was boring a friend with tales of her husband's cleverness.

"My husband is such a handy man about the house," she exclaimed. "He can do anything. Only the other day he took the cuckoo clock to pieces and cleaned it and put it together again. Now it runs as well as ever."

RESULTS IN MANY ARRESTS.

Berlin, July 26.—The Tagblatt today published further details relating to the arrest of officers of the Prussian war office on a charge of accepting bribes from the Krupp company, for an insight into official documents. It says that seven officers, whose arrest was reported July 16, actually were arrested February 7th, after an investigation which was begun October 17th, 1912, following information submitted to the war department by Herr Liebknecht, a socialist member of the Reichstag. The paper says the chief of the Krupp's Berlin Bureau, was arrested simultaneously and that nearly one thousand typewritten reports, alleged to have been sent by the accused to the Krupps were seized. Herr Liebknecht, according to the Tagblatt, will be put on the witness stand when the trial begins, in an effort to learn where he obtained the material for the charges he submitted to the war department. A great number of other witnesses will be summoned to testify, according to directors of the Krupp company.

Jackson 'Heresy' Case Closed.

London, July 26.—The Jackson 'Heresy' controversy may now be regarded as definitely closed. Yesterday at the pastoral session of the Plymouth conference the views of the reverend gentlemen were fully considered and it was decided by a vote of 236 to 278 that the book did not in the least invalidate any matter of faith nor conflict with their standard. They were of the opinion that Mr. Jackson's only desire in the Fernalty lecture was to re-state and maintain the authority of the Holy Scripture in the light of modern knowledge.

Insane Mother Poisons Her Baby.

Berlin, Ont., July 24.—Information was received here yesterday of a poisoning case near Millbank, when Mrs. Thomas Crummer gave her two infant children, both boys, aged 2 and 4 years, a dose of Paris green in water, and then took a dose of poison herself. The mother immediately informed her husband of what she had done, and Dr. W. C. Pratt, of Newtown, was summoned. The elder boy died after suffering terrible agony. The mother and younger child will live, it is stated. The coroner decided that an inquest was unnecessary concerning the child's death, as the terrible act was the result of a fit of insanity to which the mother was subject.

Second Fire Breaks Out in Sing Sing.

Ossining, N. Y., July 24.—Another fire at Sing Sing prison to-day gave the mutinous convicts a chance for more riotous demonstrations. The blaze started in the clothing shop and the prison fire brigade extinguished it, after a hard fight, without outside aid. It was the second fire in the prison buildings this week, notwithstanding the fact that the guards had been doubled since $100,000 worth of property was burned up there two days ago. If these fires were started by convicts, the warden as yet has been unable to place the blame.

Why Duels are Harmless.

A large proportion of the duels in France end without bloodshed. When the offence is not very serious it is agreed beforehand that the words of command shall be given so rapidly that the duellists will not have time to take good aim. Sometimes three shots are exchanged without a hit, and then the seconds step in and—"honour is satisfied." At the word "Fire!" the pistol is raised instantly, and it must be discharged not later than the word "three," so the speed with which these words are given regulates the time in which it is possible to take aim. Therefore the speed with which they are spoken is agreed upon beforehand, this depending upon the seriousness of the duel. The words are timed with a metronome. If the encounter be very serious this is set at the slowest speed, eighty beats a minute, which gives time for taking accurate aim. A speed of 140 beats a minute allows no time for aiming, and, therefore, is used when the seconds consider the duel should be made as little dangerous as possible.

How Jockeys Waste.

One Jockey Used to Chase the Girls With a Peacock-Feather "Tickler."

Were the older generation of jockeys a stronger and harder breed than those of the present day?

This is the question that many people have been asking, in view of the lamentable breakdown, a short time ago of Frank Woolton, due to the severe wasting he had undergone before the opening of the season.

The truth is, probably, that it is not so much a difference in the men, or their stamina; the change is in the methods jockeys now adopt in order to rid themselves of the superfluous flesh that they have put on during the winter months.

In the old days they used to walk fifteen or twenty miles a day, swathed in half a dozen sweaters. Now it is Turkish baths and medicine—a far more weakening process.

It was this regime that killed poor Archer. A fortnight before his death he rode in a race in Ireland at 9 st. 4 lb. This was on a Tuesday. The following Thursday he rode again at 8 st. 12 lb. Then, on the Wednesday following, he rode St. Mirin in the Cambridgeshire at 8 st. 6 lb. He never rode again. As everybody knows he went home in a raging fever, became delirious, and took his own life in a fit of insanity.

If ever a man died for his profession, Archer did.

Poor Luke Snowden, an elder brother of the famous Jem Snowden, wasted very hard in order to ride a horse named Claire at 7 st. 6 lb. He walked about all night prior to the race wearing four sweaters and a heavy horse-rug, and would not so much as moisten his lips with a drop of water, lest he should be tempted to swallow some. He won the race, but fell out of the saddle in a swoon at its conclusion, and had to be carried to his bed, where he died three days later.

Then there is the case of "Tiny" Wells, who fainted on the race-course after getting down to 6 st. 5 lb. from 6 st. 3 lb. in seventeen hours—a seemingly incredible feat.

Same Day, another famous old-time jockey, used to boast that he could "kill a town wasting," whatever that might mean. He certainly came near to killing himself on many occasions, for owing to his lowered strength and vitality, due to the heroic methods he adopted, he met with so many accidents while riding that at different times he broke practically every bone in his body, excepting his right arm, but including his skull and jaw, while one leg was fractured twice.

John Wells, the tallest and biggest jockey who ever rode at 8 st. 7 lb. used to walk twenty-two miles in four hours with four suits of sweaters on when waiting for an important race, and live on dry toast with an occasional glass of soda-water.

He dared not, he used to say, yield to the natural cravings of his appetite, as upon one occasion, when reduced by severe wasting, a single wineglassful of sherry, which he was induced to partake of, sent his weight bounding up by 2 lb.

Another jockey famous in the waning line was Sam Darling. He kept a regular diary of his walks in sweaters during twenty-five years, entering up time and distance, and on his retirement he found that he had totalled up just over 5,000 miles.

Most present day jockeys would probably prefer to this the methods now in vogue, although not all of them, of course, rely exclusively, or even principally, on "wasting-mixtures" and Turkish baths.

Otto Madden, for instance, pinned his faith to open-air exercise, and plenty of it, and with excellent results, judging by his performances. Yet he used to put on flesh exceedingly fast during the winter.

Another famous jockey was discovered on Easter Monday, in heavy fannels, and armed with a peacock-feather "tickler," chasing a lot of girls on Hampstead Heath, and being chased by them in return. "Finest thing out," he exclaimed, on being expostulated with by a friend, "makes you fit as a fiddle."

Calls Mr Bryan Rapid Change Politician.

Paris, July 24.—In referring to the proposed treaty between the United States and Nicaragua, the "Temps" yesterday recalls that Secretary of State Bryan declared to a member of its staff in 1908 that the U.S. ought to evacuate the Philippines—that the United States was big enough and did not want either colonies or a navy.

The newspaper says that Mr. Bryan's rapid change of opinion, as manifested in his statement to the Senate, shows once more the practical spirit of the American who knows how to cast off mere theories when the future of his country is at stake.

500 Dress Robes at 1-3 off Regular Prices.

Owing to the recent unfavorable weather we are disposing of our entire stock of Summer Dress Robes at a GENUINE REDUCTION OF 1-3 OFF THE REGULAR PRICE of every garment.

¶This large stock includes Linens, Embroideries, Serges, Foulards and Silks, all of the latest cut and style and in all the usual stock sizes.

¶The Linens are in many dainty shades, piped with self or contrasting colors and trimmed with buttons. The Embroidered robes are a charming selection, they are beautifully modelled, the designs are exclusive, trimmed with exquisite insertion and lace, tucks, etc.

¶The Serges are modish and well-tailored, equally suited for town or country cool-weather wear. The Foulards and Silks, in stripes and other designs, are really lovely. Some have the new long shoulder effect and slightly raised waist-line, others have a mere suggestion of striking color, just enough to add distinction to the gowns; and all are this season's models.

¶Every woman is interested in a real bargain and these dainty gowns with their 1-3-off-regular-price reductions are one of the greatest genuine bargains ever offered in St. John's. Come and see them at the

Binding and Printing News.

Owing to the rapid growth of our BINDING and PRINTING DEPARTMENTS, we have been compelled to seek larger quarters for this branch of our business. We have, therefore, purchased the Daymond Building, next the Trade Review Office, on Duckworth Street, and have just moved these Departments there. This gives them three times more space than they occupied in our Water Street Store. The printing plant now has the whole street floor, while the Bindery occupies both the floors above.
 Now, with greater space, more and better machinery, and a large staff of expert rulers, printers and binders we are prepared to fill your every order, from the smallest label to the largest special account book. The price will be right, and the workmanship cannot be excelled. A stock, a staff and a store especially adapted for commercial printing. We specialize in making loose leaf sheets for all binders, in special account books and in bill heads, statements, envelopes, bills of lading and commercial forms generally. See samples of the work we have done and get our prices. We have over FIVE MILLION ENVELOPES in stock, and these we can give you printed from $1.70 per 1,000 up.
