ated Canada could bear her quota of the cost, while at the same time the expenses of her internal administration would be lessened. Local parliaments would, of course, retain exclusive control of local subjects, while the federal parliament would take charge of such departments as the army, navy, foreign relations, copyright, etc., for the general benefit. Annexation he looked upon as political suicide, and as an independent nation Canada would lead a miserable existence. The alternative was federation.

As to the cost of this, the speaker showed by reference to the budget of 1882, and to some of Sir Richard Temple's remarks made before the economic section at Montreal that imperial federation would cost about 80 cents per capitum; of this the army and navy would consume about 44 cents.

The commercial advantages of becoming an integral part of a nation which possesses 34 per cent. of the commerce of the world and half the carrying power were, he thought, obvious.

Imperial federation, Mr. Clarke thought, would raise Canada in the estimation of the world. [Applause.] This would tend to elevate the standard of political life, and consequently of intellectual life. A British protectorate, too, of this kind would tend to raise the value of Canadian bonds, etc.

Mr. Atkins followed on the side of annexation. The existing connection being unstable, we should seek one that would be permanent. This could only be found in annexation. Independence would not be a permanent state. The cost of annexation would be nil. There would be no excitement or unsettling of the people over the change. There could be species ef

Independence would make us a rival of that country. When annexed the push and energy of our neighbors would, its country to the country of the country to the country. push and energy of our neighbors would, to a great extent, come across the line. The immorality in politics that was said to exist there was quite as marked a feature here, in fact it was so bad that he doubted whether the States would accept us, Fed.

eration was like the aurora borealis-beau iful but inexplicable. T. C. Robinette, B. A, upheld the ad T. C. Robinette, B. A., upheld the advantages of independence. It was growing: Brosgham prophesied it, Beaconsfield let slip a remark that showed he favored it, the Saturday Review had openly spoken for it, Bright foresaw it, Gladstone hinted at it. We have all the elements for a great nation. Federation has no such elements. Dependency of any description is humiliating Independence would raise the estimation of Canada. Our wars should not be things to be settled by a federal parliament. Why should we pay for those in which we take no interest? There are, besides, elements in the United States that would tend to destroy the stability of annexation: such, for example, as the color hatred in the south, the mormons, the character of the politics, the judiciary. Independence would remove all animosity between the States and Canada. Mr. Robinette also referred and laid stress upon the treaty argument.

The question debated at last night's public meeting of the Osgoode Literary and Legal society was: Assuming that Canada's existing connection with Great Britain is not destined to be permanent, which, from a Canadian standpoint, is the most desirable, imperial federation, annexation or independence?

J. M. Clarke, B. A., argued on behalf of the first. He thought England would object to keeping Canada at her own expense, but that if the empire were federated and submitted to the president of the United States, whereupon the president shall by proclamation declare the new state admitted to the union.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, DEC. 17, 1881 Consolidation From a Methodist Point of View.

which we propose first to deal is, that in the provincial university religious people have no guarantee either that the moral character of the teachers shall be good, or that their teaching shall not be distinct ively anti-christian and even agnostic Admitting that there is under the present constitution of things no absolute security on these points, it is worthy of note that for thirty-five years past—the whole of has ever been made from any quarter as to the religious tendency of the teaching in the provincial university and college; that the only charge of a scandalous kind ever made against any teacher was made against the late president of University college, who was then and has been ever since clergyman of good standing in the anglican church; and that the charge under inves tigation fell to the ground for want of proof. Surely it is not too much to claim that if public opinion, acting at once on the teachers in the college and on the government which appoints them, has kept the reputation of the institution in good odor with christian people for a whole generation, it would be still more effective in the same direction were so large and influential a body of christians as the methodists to give it the benefit of their vigilant oversight, along with that of the presbyterians, the baptists, anglicans and catholics, who already stand sponsors for its good character.

It is hardly necessary to remind those who urge the above objection that efforts to keep scandals out of colleges owned, controlled and managed by religious de nominations, have not always been success fal, and that during the past thirty-five years many denominational colleges in America have been compelled to exercise discipline on members of their faculties. The test system has broken down com pletely at Cambridge and Oxford, and while all the great American universities recognize christianity and provide for religious exercises, not one of them is controlled by any christian denomination This statement is true of Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Johns Hopkins, Columbia and Michigan, true that some college of good standing are denominational, but not a single one of the highest class. This fact is not urged here as an argument for non-denominational colleges, but as an answer to the objection that in such colleges there is no guarantee of the character of the teachers and the tene of their teaching. Surely experience should count for some thing in a case of this kind.

Under the present system of appointment of teachers in University college the government of the province is responsible for all appointments made. It has, moreover, absolute control in the way of dismissal as well as appointment. In view of the great interest which several religious denominations have always had in the provincial college the government has been in the past careful to satisfy the most scrupulous in the matter of reputation, and there can be no doubt that the teaching of anything like agnosticism would, at any time in the history of the college, have been met with an interdict, if not a dismissal. It seems perfectly obvious that if to the interest of other denominations there be added the equally great interest of the methodists, the implied guarantee referred to will become very much stronge -so strong indeed that any violation of it by the government may be regarded as out

Nor is the objection one that our metho dist friends are entitled to urge very strongly in view of the relations between their theological college in Montreal and the university of McGill college in the same city. The Wesleyan college stands within McGill grounds, as the congregational and presbyterian colleges do, and its students attend along with theirs such of the Mo-Gill classes as are deemed useful or indispensable. For the sake of economy the as they go. methodist church has in Montreal availed itself of an arrangement highly advantageous to McGill college as well as to itself, and it has done so without even as influential a control over the character or the teachers and the teaching as it would have in the case of Toronto university or University college, of which methodists all over the province would be proprietors. McGill college, though it has gathered around it a cluster of theological halls, is itself entirely non-sectarian. The principal is, we believe, a presbyterian, while the present, like the late president of University college, is an anglican, the latter be ug a clergyman in orders the former a thoroughly active lay worker in the provincial university, and that security ome stronger as other denomina tions take the same or a similar stand. The security here is quite as great as it is in any American university of equal repuation, and it is just as good as it is in McGill university, to which the methodist hurch has stood for years in the elationship we are advocating.

Moreover, Victoria college founded, as a matter of historical fact, cause the provincial university did not afford the kind of security desired. It was ounded because that university fell under the control of a single denomination, which sought to convert it to its own use by imposing tests and building up a faculty of divinity for itself on the public foundation. demand. Had this never occurred there would have been no Victoria university doing secular work. Now that the public institution has een free from denominational control for a generation, during which its reputation alike for culture and moral tone has steadily improved, surely it is too late to urge an objection which is so clearly an afterthought.

Does Mr. Moody Make it Pay? The letter in the Telegram last night signed by E. B., was not inserted in The World for the reason that it lacked the essential element of truth. What we said bout Mr. Moody being well off, about his never urged in this paper that these things were discreditable to him as an evangelist. We believe Mr. Moody is to receive, or has received, $500 for his three days' service in this city, and judged by the way that Beecher and other American ministers are paid, he earned it. And that being the case, the article that gave so much offence to E. B. is vindicated, for the tenor of that article was that Mr. Moody makes it pay. So he does, Mr. Moody and E. B. to the Rightly or wrongly, but we think rightly, friends of freedom everywhere will be refreshed to see Bismarck on his ommand, and during that time he displayed neither telerance nor consideration see other people "fry in their own fat." It is not in human nature to see such a tyrant taking his turn over the fire without a feeling of grim satisfaction.

The secular press of the United States very generally commends the stand taken by the Baltimore plenary council upon the question of divorce. While not going so far as Roman catholics go in vindication of the absolute integrity of the marriage tie, conservative protestants are in hearty accord with Rome upon that question so far way to work to popularize the salvation army in the great river city. In Toronto who object to their methods have no reason to regret the effect of this policy. But it is intolerable that any body of men and women, be they cranks or be they not the state of the state women, be they cranks or be they not, should be mobbed because they pray and sing in a manner distasteful to those who prebably never sing or pray at all. A SNAKB AND A HAWK. narkable Spectacle Witnessed by Keeper of Forest Park. om the St. Louis Republic A strange encounter took place in Forest park between a gigantic hawk and a rattlesnake five feet in length. The keeper of the park was attracted to the spot by the erratic motions of the hawk, which was endeavoring either by agility or strategy to get hold of that portion of the reptilian vertebra distinguished in the human species as the nape of the neck. The reptile, with all the subtlety of its kind in the parlance of the "patch," "tumbled to the racket," and in order to frustrate the the racket," and in order to Insulate insidious designs of his adversary stood upright on the end of his tail and performed some marvellous feats of balancing on his caudal extremity. All the while the hawk, was describing circles around the snake's head, and the snake, in order to avoid the deadly blow, was waltzing round with terpsichorean grace and keeping his weather eye on the bird that thirsted for weather eye on the bird that thirsted for his gore. The keeper watched the struggle for some time in silence and at last decided to approach the excited pair. The hawk flew away as he neared the scene, and the snake tried to slip away unobserved. "That will never do," observed the keeper, as he viewed the black line in the long grass becoming more and more indistinct. "I shall never be able to talk of this remarkable occurrence unless I have some prima-facie evidence of the fact." He stalked after the snake, and overtaking it atruck it several times in the most vulnerable portion of its anatomy. Mataphorically speaking the reptile turned up its toes, whereupon he tied a string about it head and dragged it to his door as circumstantial evidence that 'twas' a snake he saw.

Catarrh-A New Treatment Perhaps the most extraordinary success the has been achieved in modern science has been has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon treatment for catarrh. Out of 2000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent, have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished, the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cure the present season of the year is an entropy or a speedy and permanent cure, imajority of cases being cured at one treatms. Making Base Balls and Bals.

A Philadelphia manufacturer of sporting goeds, and an old base ball player, said to a Record reporter: "During the year just closed we have made upwered of 1,315,000 balls, or an average of 300 dozen per day for the 7 car round. Our capacity is 400 dozen per day. We make fourteen different styles of balls. Fully three niths of last year's work was of the cheaper grade, used by boys, which sell at prices ranging from 5 to 50 cents apiece, and a good share of the remaining two-fifths were of the make known as the Ama-teur Dead' and 'Professional Dead.' which sell at 75 cents and $1 at rotail, respectively. The 'American Associaour best make, sells at $1.25. "We send base-balls all over the world. I can show you orders on our books from Hong Kong, China, Heidelburg, Germany, and from several cities in England. There is not a large city in the United States or Canada in which you cannot find our goods. We sell most base-balls in the north and west. The South has not taken hold of the national gan e with the same vigor as other parts of the country, but the craze is growing.

"W's can't get enough of the wood we war t for making base-ball bats. The second growth of ash is the best, and that is hard to get. It comes from Wisconsin and Michigan, and should lay a year to season after being cut, before it is used. To kiln-dry it makes the the bats brittle. Our red-band bats are anade of the second growth of ash, and they have become very popular, although we turned out our first lot only last summer. There are only two other styles of bats—the 'professional ash,' which was popular with professional players before the red bands came out, and the 'American Willow,' (really basswood), which sells best in country towns, and goes in company with the cheaper

Of the three grades we made between 600 and 800 gross last year, or about 100,000 bats. Cricket fell off fully 50 per cent last year. Young men who have been in the habit of playing cricket by way of recreation have fallen in with the general rage, and now play pase-ball.—Philadelphia Record.

The New York Crank.

New York is the greatest city in the world for cranks. They thrive here. In Paris they are snubbed, except when iney write for the papers, when they are glorified; in London they are suspected by the police: in Ireland they are shot; in St. Petersburg they are buried in Si-beria, and in Boston they become Concord philosophers early in life, and devote themselves to study until they become too cultured for earth, when they die-or come to New York.

The cranks who are restrained in other cities of the world flock here by common impulse. The police do not interfere with their schemes, the public. encourages them, and the newspapers treat them as legitimate sensations. the turtler. "The catchin's all done by Only one thing is positively known of fish. The fish is called a sucker—" Only one thing is positively known of the average New York crank, and that is that he eventually dies a violent death. The commonplace cranks are not of so much importance as men who just border upon crankiness, or who have manias of sufficient originality to entitle them to distinction .- New York Correspondence, Cincipnati Enquirer.

"Mornin', gents," said the turtler referred to, putting down a hamper, and wiping his forehead with a many-hued bandana. He was a short, roundshouldered man in half-sailor togs, with shirt collar low in front, showing a brawny chest haired like a gorilla. His ears were pierced with silver rings, and on his thumb was an enormous crabwood ring with the operary lum of some mellusk.

A fine one it was, a hawksbill and perfect, about two feet in length, arranged on a stand upright. The back or scales were polished on the shell, so that they would serve as mirrors, and the breast-plate still in place, though arranged on cilt hinges so that it opened and shut gilt hinges, so that it opened and shut just like a door having a latch. When swung open all the interior was exposed, showing the curious manner in which the backbone, ribs, and shell were all welded together.

"Ain't a bone or nothing missing," continued the old turtler; "it's jest as natral as life, and twice as handy."

"Is there a demand for this sort of thing?" the reporter asked.

"Sartin there is," was the reply. "All the museums want this kind o' work for studyin'. Schools takes 'em too. Ye from age and rheumatism, get down to the cars, has in some way managed to train a young dog to do ins work. Edward Osborne, residing below Naugatuck, has a dog who regularly meets the carly morning train. The house is a mile away from the railroad, and the dog never leaves on his errand till he hears the train whistle at Beacon Falls station.

Then he starts on a run and waits at the same spot always, with his nose poked be hind the panels of a fence, and his keen eyes watching for the flying paper. A story is told of one dog that was first taught to bring paper, and when his master changed to early the

An Educated Dog. Sir John Lubbock continues his curious experiments with his dog, and he hopes in time to make the creature as accomplished as the average biped. It is about eighteen months since he began the education of this poodle, "Van." His idea was that the dog, if he wanted anything, should ask for it, and, as his bark might not be intelligible, a series of cards were arranged by which he might make known his desires. Thus a card labelled "food" is laid within his reach, and when he is hungry he takes it up in his mouth and brings it to his master. In the same way, if he wants to go out, he picks up a card with the word "out" upon it, and brings that up. Another and very favorite card with him is labelled "bone," for its presentation if llowed by the bestowal of a toothsom morsel. The pieces of cardboard are abouten inches long and three inches wide.

A farmer in East Saginaw named Dennis Bousseau, while blowing out stumps with dynamite Thursday, rammed a cartridge into the ground in such a way that the fuse hung fire. The stump caught fire at moon. Two cows strayed near, and when the cartridge exploded there was a shower of beef for ten acres around.

Not leng after the battle of Bull Run a certain Major S., of the rebel army, called on General Joe Johnston at his headquarters in Virginia, arriving just in time for dinner, which was served in the general's tent. When the meal was nearly finished there was a movement under the table, and something very like, a yawn came from beneath it, the major at the same time feeling something heavy roll on his feet. Raising the cloth, General Johnston looked down and remarked, laughing "Jackson smells the dinner at last; know he must be nearly famished." was the only time I ever saw Stonewall Jackson," says the major; "he had been without s'cep for three days when he reached denston's tent, and, tumbling down in the centre of it, the table was set
