SCOTTISH FARMERS DISCUSS CANADA

Agree That There is a Fortune in Horse-Breeding for the Maritime Provinces-Suggestion to Employers of Farm Labor

Members of the Scottish Agricultural Commission who recently made a seven weeks' tour of Canada, visiting St. John and parts of New Brunswick in the course of their travels, have returned to Scotland, and a correspondent of the London Times has received from them some indications as to the nature of the report they will make to the British Government. They found that old countrymen who had settled in Canada seemed to thrive in every section of this country, and "some of the commissioners, coming as they did from a northern country where atmospheric severity is not unknown, are inclined to think that Canada as a whole is particularly well adapted for the maintenance of a physically and intellectually powerful race." Canadians had almost suspected as much, but this grave pronouncement on the question will not be without value in the United Kingdom, where correct information about the nature of our climate, or climate, is not too general.

The commissioners say that agriculture in Canada, once consisting almost wholly of mixed farming, tends more and more to specialization, and each branch will eventually be the subject of a special report by some one or more of the members. Prairie wheat farming is humorously described by a commissioner as "not farming, but just wheat mining." The commissioners hold that except in favored localities where the alluvium is particularly deep, the present method of cultivation cannot be maintained for many years without exhausting the soil, just as much of the soil has already been exhausted in similar regions of the United States. That is no great discovery. The commissioners favor the removal of the British cattle embargo. They foresee a great meat packing industry as a result of cattle-raising in

New Brunswick Suffering From Epidemic Diseases

St. John, N. B., Nov. 13.—Reports from Caraquet this morning tell of a serious outbreak there of diphtheria in its worst form. Already over seventy cases have developed. Thirty-five persons are dead, twenty will die, and twenty have improved through anti-toxin treatment administered by the only physician in the district to those who will accept his services. The people are hiding the disease, denying that it exists in their families and absolutely refuse to permit him inside their homes, excepting those of the better classes who engage him. In Maisonneuve, on the Quebec side, typhoid fever has developed along with diphtheria and seven new families developed the disease this morning. All patients seem to slightly improve and then die very suddenly. Health authorities are doing nothing, and the situation is becoming very threatening. At Caraquet there is a large convent and a French College, and the hundreds of residents in these are exposed to contagion as absolutely no control is exercised over afflicted persons. What with this epidemic raging, scarlet fever in Chatham, smallpox at Edmundston, and typhoid fever compelling the closing of schools elsewhere, New Brunswick is having a large share of sickness.

The laws of Norway compel a man who chops down one tree to plant three.

the West. Of more immediate interest to the Maritime Provinces, perhaps, is the following:

"There is a fortune in horse breeding, especially for a man who takes advantage of the present stage of western development, was the decided verdict of one of the commissioners. Sheep-raising is reported as another industry deserving more encouragement than it now receives, and considerable areas in the Maritime Provinces and other parts of Canada, little used for other kinds of farming, are admirably adapted for this. While the meat is first-rate and there is no lack of markets, the Scotsman was astonished to find the dog mania so severe as effectively to discourage the keeping of flocks and that a remedy was prevented by the dog owners' influence. As regards fruit growing, the commissioners find that the apple is the king of Canadian fruits and for flavor they incline to prefer the Ontario, and, perhaps, even more the Nova Scotian product. But they think the packing not so commendable as that practiced in British Columbia. The commissioners highly appreciate the help given by the Canadian governments to agriculture, and contrast it with the lack of help extended in the old country. A general impression is stated to exist among the commissioners that Canada offers plenty of opportunities to the small farmer, though the particular province to be recommended would vary according to the taste as well as the means of the individual. Good Scotch farm laborers, they think, will continue to emigrate in large numbers to Canada, but they hint that Canadian farmers, if the difficulty of obtaining sufficient and efficient labor supply is to be lessened, should give yearly, not seasonal agreements, and private cottages for married employees."—St. John Telegraph.

Finds Four Thousand Dollars in old Pump

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 7.—John Roberts, of Watkins, Schuyler county, a well driller, purchased of Angelo Dupree, a junk dealer, an old pump for ten cents. It was apparently of no value, but he thought there might be some parts that he could use in his business. When Mr. Roberts and his assistant took the pump to one of the wells where they were drilling and started breaking it up they were greatly surprised to see gold coins drop out of the holes they made. They at once finished the job, and found $4,000, nearly all in $20 gold pieces. Whom the pump belonged to at the time the money was hidden, or how long it had been there is a mystery. The latest date of one of the coins was 1833. Mr. Roberts at once deposited his find in the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank at Watkins. He is willing to surrender the find to any one who can prove ownership, but no claimant has yet appeared. The junkman will make a memorandum to examine the inside of every old pump before disposing of it at any price.

Dairy Products at Kentville Exhibition

(Maritime Farmer.)

Seventeen crocks and tubs, of not less than five pounds each, sixteen boxes of prints, not less than four pounds, five jars of granules, seven twenty-pound boxes, two twelve-pound creamery packages, two twelve-pound creamery boxes and several displays of fancy prints constituted the butter section of the dairy product department at the Kentville exhibition. The cheese section consisted of three fifteen-pound dairy and one forty-pound factory cheeses. Mr. Harvey Mitchell, Maritime representative of the Cow-Testing Association of the Dairy Department, Ottawa, placed the awards. Mr. Mitchell informs us that the exhibits throughout were good. He called our attention to the first prize article in several sections and a prettier and better lot of butter we have never seen. Although the building in which the butter was shown was quite warm, causing some of the butter to be quite soft, the first prize butter was almost as firm as if it were in cold storage. The flavor and grain was excellent.

Middleton Board of Trade Re the H. & S. W. Question

At the meeting of the Board of Trade last week the following resolution is in reference to the H. & S. W. Railway was passed:

Resolved that this meeting of the Middleton Board of Trade express to the Provincial Government its strong disapproval of the change of timetable recently adopted by the H. & S. W. Railway Company in so far as it affects that portion of railroad between Bridgewater and Middleton, and that the government be respectfully requested to insist that the said company be required to provide a daily passenger and mail service each way with proper connections with the D. A. Railway Company.

Found New Coal Seam

The Maritime Coal, Railway and Power Company has made a most valuable find of coal on the area owned by it at the Joggins Mines. For over thirty years persistent search has been made for the main seam of this remarkable coal basin, but although numerous bore holes have been put down and much prospecting work done, yet all the efforts to locate the seam have hitherto failed.

The Amherst News is glad to report that the different explorations have at last been crowned with success and the main seam in the coal basin has been opened up. Our contemporary says:

"This discovery is of the highest importance to the coal industry of this Province, adding as it does millions of tons to the coal supply of this Province and greatly enhancing in value the already valuable holdings of this Company at the Joggins Mines.

"We predict for the Maritime Coal, Railway and Power Company a bright and successful future, as the supply of coal now in sight is practically unlimited."

RAILWAY FROM AMHERST TO CHIGNECTO.

Engineers Whitman and Tessier, who have been actively engaged in surveying a railway line from Chignecto-mine to the Northumberland Straits for the Maritime Railway, Coal and Power Company, have completed the preliminary survey. They report finding a splendid route from Amherst to Northport, but will have to devote some further time on the portion of the road from Amherst to Chignecto. The proposed line of railway is about 26 miles long and it is the purpose of the company to establish a water terminal on the Northumberland Strait to ship coal to the St. Lawrence market. The road when built will open up a fine stretch of country, tapping a number of important undeveloped coal areas.

Forest Engineering

Courses of Training Already Established in Canada.

Trained foresters, or forest engineers, are now badly needed in Canada to assist in the establishing of a better system of forest management in the public forests. To meet this need, two forestry schools have been established by two of the Canadian universities, namely the University of Toronto and the University of New Brunswick.

The Faculty of Forestry of the University of Toronto has now entered on its second year of work. Its staff consists of its dean, or head, two lecturers and an assistant. Its course of study covers four years and leads to the degree of Bachelor of Science in Forestry (B.S.F.). A post-graduate degree of Forest Engineer (F.E.) is granted after two years, at least, of practical work.

The head, or dean, of the faculty of forestry is Dr. B. E. Fernow, one of the foremost living authorities on the forestry of North America. A German by birth, Dr. Fernow received his professional training at the Forest Academy of Muenster, Germany, and also studied at the University of Koelnitz. In 1876 he came to the United States and from 1886 to 1898 was chief of the Bureau of Forestry in the United States Dept. of Agriculture. He then became head of the New York State College of Forestry in connection with Cornell University, a position which he occupied for some five years. After some years spent in private work as consulting forest engineer, he organized the department of forestry at the Pennsylvania State College, and from there came in 1907 to Toronto to organize the Faculty of Forestry at that university.

The University of New Brunswick opened its department of forestry in September last. Here, too, the course is an undergraduate one of four years; the degree conferred is Bachelor of Science in Forestry (B.S.F.). The professor in charge of the department is Mr. R. B. Miller, M. A., M. F., a graduate of the Yale Forest School, one of the foremost schools of forestry on this continent.

A third school will soon be in full operation in the Province of Quebec and courses in forestry, or preparatory thereto, are given in a number of other Canadian universities and agricultural colleges.

Baptist Quarterly

The Annapolis County Baptist Quarterly Conference met with the Lawrenceville Baptist church, Tuesday and Wednesday of last week. The weather being unfavorable, the attendance was small. Rev. H. B. Smith, President, and Rev. A. S. Lewis, Secretary-Treasurer, were selected for the ensuing year. Sermon, Tuesday evening, by Rev. J. H. Simpson; Wednesday evening, by Rev. G. W. Schurman. Two very interesting papers were read before the Conference on Wednesday afternoon; one on "Malachi," by Rev. H. H. Simpson, and the other by Rev. H. H. Saunders, "Relation of the church and state." At 3:30 the ladies of the Y. M. A. Societies held their meeting. Mrs. (Rev.) J. H. Balcom, County Secretary, as chairman, and Mrs. Ralph Schaffner presiding at the organ. Prayer was offered by the leader. Scripture texts were given by members of the various Societies. An interesting paper, written by Mrs. J. M. Cropley, subject: "Give Wings to Thy Thoughts," or "Humbly Praying and Fully Trusting," was read by Mrs. C. S. Balcom. Words of appreciation were expressed to Mrs. Cropley who so kindly prepared a paper for the occasion on the eve of her departure to Boston for the winter. A reading was given by Miss Annie Young, and a letter from Miss Ida Newcomb, (missionary) was read by Mrs. Freeman of Lawrenceville. The meeting was closed by singing, "Throw out the Life Line" and benediction by Rev. H. S. Bagwell.

The Western Crops

Valued at $125,000,000

Montreal, Nov. 9.—The sum is a very large one, but F. W. Thompson, Vice-President and General Manager of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Ltd., estimates that the money value of the various agricultural products of the three Western Provinces will reach this year the enormous sum of $125,000,000. Mr. Thompson, who returned home today from the West states that the abundant moisture prevailing this autumn has been of great benefit and that fall ploughing is practically completed in the West. "I was particularly impressed," he said, "with the statement made by a man who had been for twenty-seven years carrying on farmwork within a radius of twenty miles from Winnipeg, that farmer declaring that in these twenty-seven years, he had secured twenty-six successful crops," and Mr. Thompson believes that there are very few countries in the world that can claim such a record.

Continuing, Mr. Thompson said: "The railways are moving the crop very rapidly at the present time, yet notwithstanding this activity there will be enough grain left over after the close of navigation to keep the roads employed practically to fill the next crop is in sight."

Being asked his opinion as to future export conditions, Mr. Thompson replied that as far as the export of wheat and flour is concerned, he believed that the foreigner would have to come to Canada for both.

The Boston Work-horse Parade

From the annual report of its president, Honorable Henry C. Merwin, we take the following:

MEN AND HORSES.

One fact has often forced itself upon the attention of the directors. Namely, that the welfare of the work horse is bound up with the welfare of the men who drive and care for him. In stables where the men are well paid and are treated with kindness and consideration by the proprietors, the horses, in turn, are well treated by the men, and look sleek and contented. On the other hand, in stables where there is a bad feeling, or utter want of good feeling, between the employer and his men, the horses suffer accordingly. Recognizing these facts some public-spirited women in New York and also in Chicago have recently organized clubs for teamsters' wives, and even for teamsters' wives. This is a step in the right direction.

Bad teamsters seem to gravitate naturally to employers who do not really care about their horses. If the owner is a humane man, the spirit of humanity will pervade his whole business. If he is cruel, or simply indifferent, a spirit of brutality, or at least of selfish independence, will run through his force.

The highly developed nervous system of the horse renders him peculiarly capable of suffering. Enough usage, even if it stops far short of absolute brutality, keeps him in a constant state of fear or irritation. Anyone who is accustomed to observe horses can tell by a single glance at a given horse whether the driver is a good, bad, or indifferent one. The expression of the animal's eye and the carriage of his ears tell the story unmistakably.

There are many teamsters who treat the horse as if he were a machine, and therefore are guilty of continual cruelty toward him, which reacts on their own characters. Such men miss the opportunity of their lives, and their daily labor becomes a degradation and a curse to them. On the other hand, there are many humane drivers who have a real affection for their horses and take the greatest pride in their appearance. These men make good husbands, good fathers, good citizens; and their daily labor is not only a means of a livelihood but a constant source of happiness. To reward and increase this class is the main object of the Boston Work-horse Parade Association.

FIFTY YEAR JUBILEE

Gordon Memorial Church at Bridgetown and St. Andrew's Church at Annapolis to Celebrate Fiftieth Anniversary

There will be a "Jubilee Service" next Sunday morning and evening in jubilee will be held on Sunday morning at the Gordon Memorial Presbyterian Church to commemorate the organization of the congregation fifty years ago. The Rev. Robert Johnson, of St. Andrew's Church, Halifax, will hold in the afternoon addressed by the Rev. W. M. Fraser, also of Halifax, and a former pastor of St. Andrew's church, Halifax. A large public meeting will conclude the Sabbath service to be held at 8.15 in the Academy of Music, the subjects being: "The Presbyterian Church in the Maritime Provinces 1858-1908," "Early Presbyterianism in Annapolis and Digby Counties 1776-1861," "History of Annapolis and Bridgetown congregations from 1861 to the present day."

The fifty year Jubilee of the founding of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church at Annapolis Royal is to be celebrated as follows: For Saturday evening the ladies of the congregation have in hand a big bazaar and tea meeting to be held in the Academy of Music from 5 o'clock to 8 o'clock, to conclude with music and speeches.

His 15 Operations in a Year Not All

New York, Nov. 15.—William Smith is puzzling the medical fraternity of Staten Island. He is a patient in St. Vincent's Hospital, West New Brighton. Within a year Smith has undergone fifteen operations, and he is now being prepared for a series of others. He is only thirty-eight years old, but his hair has turned white as snow. Smith has been operated on for appendicitis, intestinal trouble and stomach trouble, has had his right foot and leg amputated and in the course of a few days will have his left foot taken off above the knee. By the time this has healed his right arm will have to come off. He is suffering from tuberculosis of the bone.

When seen by a Herald reporter yesterday the patient was sitting outside the hospital smoking a cigarette, and told of the plans for his dismemberment. The surgeons have told him what he is to expect, and have consented to his walking around, with cane and crutch, on his remaining foot until he gets tired, and then they will amputate it. His right arm is swollen and gives him much pain.

"I cannot even pray, for when I kneel I get so sore that I fall over," he said. "I cannot sleep because of the terrible pains, and when I go to bed at night I turn and toss until morning. The surgeons are unable to diagnose my case correctly, each of them giving a different opinion. The pains in my stomach are unbearable and they are caused, the medical men say, by the numerous operations on my intestines.

"I hope to die when they are taking off my other leg, but if I live through that I will only have to prepare for more cutting."

MINIMUM STIPEND FOR NEW YORK CLERGY.

New York, Nov. 12.—That the minimum salary for an unmarried clergyman in the diocese of New York should be $1,200 and for a married clergyman $1,300 and a suitable place to live, or $1,500 in money, was the resolution passed today amid applause in the annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York.

Grat Fighter Shot Down in Court

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 14.—Assistant District Attorney Francis J. Heney, a leading figure in the prosecution of municipal corruption in San Francisco, was shot down and seriously injured yesterday in Judge Lawlor's court room by Morris Haas, a Jewish saloon keeper, who had been accepted as a juror in a previous trial of Abraham Ruef, and afterwards removed, it having been shown in court by Heney that Haas was an ex-convict. The shooting of Heney occurred in the presence of many persons in the court room during a recess in the trial of Abraham Ruef for a third time on a charge of bribery. Mr. Heney, who retains consciousness and will likely recover, said: "I will live to prosecute Haas and Ruef." The physicians in attendance on Heney expressed the opinion that the assistant district attorney would live. It was ascertained that the bullet, which had entered the right cheek, had lodged under the left ear and had not entered the brain or severed any important arteries or nerves. It was during a ten minutes recess of court and while the jury were out of the court room and after attorneys for the prosecution and defense had returned to the room for a short conference with Judge Lawlor in his chambers, that Heney having resumed his customary seat and entered into conversation with Chief Clerk McCable, of the district attorney's office, Haas came forward from among the spectators. He approached Heney, and placing a revolver against Heney's right cheek, fired. Bystanders seized Haas and medical aid was summoned for Heney. Haas said he shot Heney because the attorney had rid him of an ex-convict. Although two bodyguards, who have been constantly employed to protect Heney were within six feet of him, Haas drew a revolver and fired the shot before anyone in the court room realized what was going on. Haas in the second Ruef trial had been passed a juror. Then one day in court, Heney dramatically produced a photograph of Haas taken at San Quentin Penitentiary in convict garb and with cropped head and with his number across his breast. Haas collapsed in court, admitting he had been a convict. Repeat it!—Shiloh's Cure will always cure my coughs and colds."

Selected Story.

"ONE TRUE FRIEND AND MARGOT!"

(Tit-Bits.)

"Tom! Yes, I'm not mistaken! It is you. Shake hands, old chap! How are you?"
Tom Marlow, aloofly moodily along the Embankment, hands in pockets and the burnt-out stump of a cigarette between his lips, had to stop, for the other had planted himself squarely in front and did not move. But he gave no sign of pleasure at the meeting. He was down at heel, and knew it. As if by instinct his hand wandered to his coat collar, which he turned up to hide the frayed apology for linen underneath.
"Halloa, Jack!" he said.
"And is that all the greeting you give an old chum who hasn't seen you for ages?" was the rejoinder.
"Still the same taciturn old Tom, eh? Why, it must be seven or eight years since we met!"
"Eight," said the scarerow.
"Ah! Time flies, and no mistake! Well, what have you been doing all these years? You left the old place because you'd got the scribbles fever, I remember. Any luck?"
"No. I gave it up some time ago. Found it wasn't my line!"
"Oh!"
Jack Harland saw that the conversation irked the other. His feet shuffled on the pavement, and his gaze wandered from side to side—anywhere but in the face of the man who questioned him. There was an uncomfortable pause.

"Well, I'll be getting on," said Marlow, holding out half-shamelessly a hand. "Good night, Jack."
"What, going? Not yet, old fellow! Surely I've hardly seen you," Harland laid a hand on his arm. "I say, Tom, you'd never guess it, but I'm a Fleet Street man myself now. Yes, Assistant-sub on 'The Morning.'" "Look here—come with me and have a chat over a bit of supper. We've heaps of things to tell each other—must have 'em, but you must! I shall take no refusal."

"Well, really, it's very kind of you to tempt me to go to supper," Marlow said. "The temptation was too strong for him to withstand further. Licking his lips, and ten minutes later they were seated at opposite sides of a table in a quiet little eating-house off the Strand."

"Jack, do you know you've saved my life to-night?" Layne down his knife and fork half-way through the meal. Marlow stared across at his friend with hard, bright eyes. The food and the unaccustomed warmth of his surroundings had loosened his tongue.

"Yes, I mean it. Twenty times today I've asked myself whether I should worry on any longer, or drop quietly over the parapet of a bridge and add one more to the list of London's missing! I'm tired of this! He glanced wearily at his threadbare clothes, indicating by a gesture all that lay beyond. "Look at me, Jack! I'm one of life's failures—when I had it, quarrelled with the woman who loved me, as I verily believe better than all the world; and this is the result. It was all my fault, Margot was as true as steel, and I a jealous fool who realized the truth too late. Since then—'He broke off abruptly. 'Ah, Jack, it's an easy road when you commence to go downhill!'"

"My dear fellow, hush! Not another word!" Jack Harland's face was glowing as he stretched across to grip the shaking hand. "I won't listen! I tell you the finger of Providence and something else brought us two together tonight. This is a turning-point in your life—a day never to be forgotten. We're going to wipe out all the past at a stroke, and start afresh from this moment! No? Well, I say yes! Again that breezy, honest laugh 'How old are you, Tom?'"
"Thirty-two."

"And you talk of self-destruction! Why, all the best years of life lie before you! Rouse up, man; and shake off that fit of the blues! Think of that girl! Can't you see, can't you realize that somewhere here in London she's weeping out her heart for love of you—must be? Tom, I tell you it's your one plain duty to seek her out—aye, to-morrow, not a day later!—And tell her humbly what you've told me. Do you think she'll mind your shabby clothes, or taunt you with the mistakes of the past? Is woman's love no purer, no holier thing than that? Put it to the test, I say! One word, one kiss, and you'll be a different man, a better and a braver for having passed through the fire! Say the word, Tom! You—you'll pull yourself together and try afresh, for my dear sake!"

"His voice broke on that word. Perhaps till that moment he hardly realized himself how earnestly he had been pleading, how near tears were to his heart. But his companion sat silent, unmoved; only the nervous twitching of the man's fingers showed that he had heard. That drawn-out pause; and then his voice came in a whisper.

"Jack, I can't!" He was fighting again for breath to go on. "It's—it's good of you to trouble about me, but it's too late. I had ambitious ones, and must have done big things; but that time's gone. I'm beaten, stranded, a wreck with the big seas breaking over and no hope of salvage. Soon they'll claim me for ever. It's Fate!"
"Nonsense! Still that buoyant tone, the cheery optimism of the man who will not know defeat. 'Fate is man's servant, not his master! Cheer up, old boy! You're going to do big things yet! Look here! I know a man who wants a clerk. He'll give you the post at a word from me; and if the salary isn't large, it's better than nothing. Take it till something else offers. If you'll meet me here at nine in the morning we'll see about it. Now, where are you going to sleep?"
It transpired that a Rowton House had been his resting-place the last few nights, and together they bent their steps there. When Jack Harland finally set out for home, having seen him safe inside, he had extracted a promise that he would keep the appointment on the morrow. The stronger personality had won.

In such fashion commenced the regeneration of erstwhile brilliant "out-collar" Tom Marlow. If the process was slow, it was also, happily, sure. He entered on the duties of the clerical post for him by Harland's influence clothed in garments provided by the same generous hand; and never did man work harder or more conscientiously in the service of employer in this world.

But it was after the nominal labors of the day had ceased that his most strenuous efforts were put forth. Night after night, perched in his little roof-garret, with only the slates between him and the stars, he toiled by the aid of a smoky lamp at the novel which was now his one concern. It was his last throw with Fortune—the supreme encounter.

On one point he was adamant. Till it was written he would seek no sort of society; above all, would not move a solitary step in the direction of Jack Harland's most desired of him. He steadfastly refused even to visit the latter's house or meet his wife.

"No, Jack," he said, "it's my whim; you must humor me. You know what the poet says—'something attempted something done.' I want to realize those words before I think of aught beside. I've failed so many times, and so miserably. If I can carry this through it will give me fresh hope, fresh confidence. I shall feel that I can trust myself again, that life's worth living after all. And afterwards, perhaps—"

And there, with the half promise that lingered in the lowered voice, it had to rest. Dark days there were, as Marlow was bound to be, when the demon of despair settled heavily on him and gave no quarter; and he would have slipped with hardly a struggle into the abyss but for the strong, helpful hand, single-handed, from its very brink. That cheery comrade's visits never failed to bring a breath of new life into the atmosphere of the little room.

"Well, how's the masterpiece now?" he would ask, flinging himself into the one available chair. "Heroina troublesome? Oh, that's nothing! Fault of the sex in general, my boy. They can't help it, bless 'em, any more than we can give up tobacco. It'll all come right in the last chapter, take my word for it. What do you say to a walk?"

And off they would go, Harland chatting gaily all the way so that Tom Marlow returned feeling brighter and better, and ready for a further tussle with the damsel of his book and the trials of the world at large. The weeks grew into months, and one wonderful night the busy 'sub' ran up the stairs during a brief respite from duty, to find his friend actually idle. He stared. His pipe was in his mouth, and he sat there puffing out great clouds of grey smoke and gazing up at the ceiling, oblivious to everything else in the world. Harland coughed, and then he was on his feet in a second, stretching out a hand to welcome him.

"Jack, I never heard you!" came the eager whisper. "It's finished! Yes, I wrote the last line on your book, Look! A strange light shined in his eyes; and his voice was tender, almost caressing, as he turned over the closely-written sheets. "There it is—the sign of my rebirth, arbiter of my destiny to be. What will be the result? You know how I've built on it, how much it means. It's my very best work; my life-blood. If it fails—but it won't. I refuse to think it.

"Fall!" That deep growl but partially eluded the sob hiding underneath. "It can't! I tell you it's going to be the success of the season—a triumph. Haven't I read every chapter; and, to my sorrow, half the novels born this last twelvemonth? Old Renson is the man for this. He sends a good novel like a terrier noses a biscuit. Shall I see him for you in the morning?"

"Will you?" He smiled his thanks. "I should be grateful. One word, though Jack. I want it to stand or fall on its merits. There must be no pressure, no asking him to publish it by way of favor. You understand?"
"Sonny, just you don't worry. He'll jump at it, I tell you—boom it far and wide, and be glad to get the chance."

And so it proved. Just a week later Tom Marlow received a letter that sent him into the seventh heaven of delight. It was signed 'Herbert Renson' in firm, bold characters, and offered two hundred pounds cash for the book, with a royalty on every copy sold above five thousand. A mist blurred his vision as he read. Success had come. Jack Harland bounced into the office that same morning to see him.

"Oh, yes, I know all about it!" he burst out, shaking his friend's hand as though he would wring it off. "Old Renson 'phoned me this morning. Cute old beggar, that! What did I tell you? Congratulations, my boy! 'There is a tide in the affairs of men'—eh? Now, look here, you hermit, you must really come to dinner with me to-night in honor of the occasion. I'm your godfather in a literary sense, at all events; and I insist. See!"

"Very well, I am at your service. I say, Jack, am I in my head or my heels?" I hardly know!"
"That's all right. You'll get used to it soon. I shall call at your dignities at 6.30 prompt. Mind you're ready for I shall only have a couple of hours."

Six-thirty came, and Harland with it, to find Marlow awaiting him in the glory of new clothes. A hasty visit to the tailor had worked wonders. None seeing the smart, well-groomed man now would have connected him with the abject wretch of six months before. Harland's eyes betrayed his satisfaction.

"How long have you been married, Jack?" the 'bos had put them down, and they were walking the last stage of the journey. Tom Marlow's voice was a little wistful as well as curious. "I don't think I've ever asked you."

"Oh, about three years," was the reply. He laughed joyously. "And I've got the best little wife in the three kingdoms, Tom. Sounds a bit extravagant, perhaps; but wait, and you'll see for yourself. Here we are. Come inside."

He led the way to the drawing-room, and kissed his wife, who came forward with a smile to welcome them.
"Well—Mr. Marlow," he said, "Tommy wife."

Tom Marlow found himself shabbing hands with a queer sensation. It was the first woman's hand that had touched his for many a month, and brought sad memories. They chatted for a few minutes, and then Mrs. Harland, examining herself, went out of the room. His gaze travelling round the room, lighted next moment on a photograph in a silver frame which stood on a little table by the window. He started violently and rubbed his eyes. Impossible! An hallucination, surely! Then he looked again and his face went white.

"Jack!" he whispered, hoarsely.
But there was no answer. Jack Harland also had slipped away. Fascinated, he picked the photograph up and turned it over slowly in his hands as though it were some mysterious object the like of which was never seen before. Every drop of blood drained away from his face, leaving it whiter than marble. There was a noise of rushing waters in his ears, the room swam round him, and in another second he would have fallen. It was the noise of the opening door that saved him, bringing back reality with a rush. He wheeled round swiftly. And then—
Framed in the doorway she stood for that instant like some sweet spirit-vision. As she advanced, gracious and quiescent, that little smile parting her lips, something seemed to rise chokingly and break in his throat. He knew not whether to laugh or cry.

"Margot!" it came at last—the pent-up torrent of emotion breaking in a single word.
"Tom!"

And then, with a glad little cry, she surrendered herself gently into his out-stretched arms, and the forbidden question that hovered on his lips remained unasked for the best of all possible reasons.

"Jack, you knew! You knew the whole of the time! A whole hour had Half-starved men and women are not strong enough to work, or to play and be happy. You should also know that indigestion means slow starvation. More than half the people who soon tire and become depressed, who feel life a burden and who go listlessly to their day's work, would find life a daily song if they set their digestion right with Mother Seigel's Syrup—the digestive tonic compound of roots and herbs. passed, seeming but a moment, and he and Harland were again alone. Jack Harland laughed heartily. "Of course I did!" he replied. "Margot is my wife's cousin—but you've learned that already. I heard the story long ago; and searched for you many times before that night. It was hard lines to come across you in such a frame of mind that I simply didn't dare tell the whole truth at once. Afterwards, of course, the fault was your own—"

"Yes, Tom Marlow wrung his hand affectionately. "Jack, you're a good sort," he said.

"When that fine novel, 'Tribulation,' took the literary world by storm a few months later, the dedication printed opposite the title aroused the curiosity of not a few people. 'To one true friend and Margot!' it read. This is its story."

GOOD COUGH MEDICINE FOR CHILDREN AND GROWN FOLKS TOO

"We could hardly do without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Mrs. Flora Despatz, of Floyd, Ky. "I have used it for years, and can heartily recommend it for coughs, colds and croup in children and grown folks, too." The above shows the implicit confidence that many mothers place in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, a confidence based on many years' experience in the use of it. No one need hesitate to use this remedy for it contains no chloroform, opium or other narcotics and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by W. A. WARREN, BRIDGETOWN, A. E. Halifax, Nov. 6.—Seventeen seats in possession of the government, sixteen held by the opposition and three still to be counted. This is the situation in Newfoundland tonight and the closest election in the colony has ever known is still in the balance. Not until tomorrow afternoon will the result of Monday's polling be known but no matter how the three remaining seats go the margin between the opposing parties in the next legislature will be exceedingly small. Bergego, St. Barbe and Bay St. George are states which have not yet been counted.

At the quarterly meeting of the Middleton Board of Trade last evening a resolution was passed protesting against the new time table of the H. & S. W. It was also decided to call a public meeting on Tuesday evening next of the citizens of Middleton and the surrounding country and invite the Federal and local representatives of the county and the Manager of the H. & S. W. Railway to attend the meeting if they care to do so to discuss the matter with the citizens present.

Fasting Completely Cured Miss Godard

A few weeks ago The Sun published a paragraph telling of the case of Miss Jennie Godard, daughter of Mr. John W. Godard, of 20 Donalda Ave., who in order to bring about a cure of a disease from which she was suffering undertook to fast for upwards of forty days. This course had been advised by relatives who had heard of persons similarly afflicted being greatly improved. It was anticipated that after the first few days of starvation, Miss Godard would become very much weakened. The contrary happened, for throughout the whole period of fasting she was able to be about as usual and apparently felt absolutely no effects from her abstinence. During the forty days' fast Miss Godard took nothing excepting water. On the forty-first day, when it was considered that she had starved long enough, very weak food was given, but it was not until the forty-sixth day that she was really able to take anything. Since the last of October she has been eating as usual and during that time has enjoyed practically perfect health. During the period of her fasting Miss Godard lost in weight about thirty-five pounds. She was suffering from acromegaly, which caused a swelling of the tissues, her features were enlarged, her hands and other parts of the body swollen to an unusual size. The fasting operation has brought about apparently a complete cure. All the swelling has gone down, the features and limbs are now normal and there is an entire absence of pain. Enquiries as to the result of the treatment have been received by the family from persons in different parts of Canada and the United States who are similarly afflicted and it is apparent that the happy result which has been reached in Miss Godard's case, will be of value to others who are struggling against this baffling disease. It is of course possible that a permanent cure has not been effected, it is too soon for this to be known—but at present Miss Godard is perfectly well, and if the disease should happen to return in a few years there is no reason, according to medical science, why she should not repeat the treatment.

Parents and the Public School Teacher

(By Mrs. Trewartha, Holmsville, Ont.; courtesy Ontario Women's Institute.)

In preparing this paper I tried to recall the days and years spent in that noblest of all professions and to give you a few ways in which the parents of the sections in which I taught did help me through their thoughtfulness and interest in the teacher of their children, and also state how some might have extended to me their help if they had only given part of their time and thought to teacher and pupils.

I have jotted down the different ways of helping as they occurred to me. In the first place, I really think that some parents do not fully realize the importance of providing their children with good food! Good food does not mean expensive food, such as cake, pastry, etc., but rather food containing nourishment that tends to build up a strong, healthy body. The condition of the mind and the activity of the brain depend almost entirely on the physical condition of the body. Parents send their children to school to learn to think, reason and acquire that general education in different lines which will in time make them good citizens.

Usually speaking, teachers are encouraged and helped by those pupils who come from homes where plenty of good whole-wheat bread and butter are used instead of cake, and where milk is drunk instead of tea and coffee, homes which provide a variety of plain, nourishing food. Pupils have been actually known to come to school and from breakfast until supper have nothing to eat except some fancy-bought cakes! Many pupils fail in examinations for no other reason than that they are not given food which nourishes brain and nerve tissue as well as muscle tissue, and gives the required amount of heat to the system. If improperly fed children grow sickly and do not progress in their studies, who is responsible? Not the teacher!

Parents should, as far as possible, endeavor to send their children neatly dressed to school. The effect on the child is great. A pupil who is taught at home to be neat, tidy and thoughtful will necessarily exhibit the same traits at school. He will see that his desk is in order, that the floor beneath it is not littered with bits of paper and rubbish. He will handle his books carefully and see that he has all the necessary books at school. All these help a teacher wonderfully, as every moment is more than filled with work. Such a pupil, too, will not appear after an intermission with a smeared face. It always gave me pleasure to have pupils begin work after an intermission with clean hands and faces. When parents supply children with handkerchiefs, we always find the children more cleanly in this respect and in other habits than if they came without them. A neatly dressed pupil will gain the respect of his fellow-pupils, and will also have that self-respect which is necessary to his success, to say nothing about the effect on the teacher.

A great drawback to teachers in many schools is that parents do not supply their children with necessary books, with the result that the teacher has to lend his book, weak in and weak out. Pupils must have the necessary books in order to progress as they should.

Regular attendance and punctuality are two things in which children should be trained by their parents, for much of their success in after life depends upon it. This is never obtained without an effort on the part of children, parents and teacher. Can you imagine the effect four or five pupils, sauntering in the school-room at 9.15 or 9.30, has upon the progress of the school and the patience of the teacher, who is struggling to make them a success? The teacher is kept back by repeating work for such pupils, otherwise they miss their regular class work. Then consider the disastrous habit that grows upon such children, a habit which can only spell "failure" if allowed to continue.

To exemplify the point of regular attendance, take a class one pupil of which stays at home, or is kept there perhaps, two days in a week. That class each day must take up new work, cover new ground, for teacher and pupils have to accomplish certain work and meet certain requirements at stated periods of time. When such a pupil is present the teacher, through pity and interest in him, has to take the time of the school just to teach him what others were taught when he was absent.

In the country especially mothers should do their utmost to have the little ones go regularly to school. In many instances when boys are able to drive a team or use a fork or spade they are kept at home by fathers who need even the little assistance these boys can give. In my experience with parents I will say that the mothers were, generally speaking, the more anxious about the education and is on every bottle of it sold in the world—which amounts to several millions yearly. Why—because it has made so many sickly children strong and well-given health and rosy cheeks to so many pale, anemic girls and restored to health so many thousands in the first stages of Consumption.

of their children than were the fathers. However, different sections are different. Now, it stands to reason that before a teacher can do his best with his pupils certain conditions must exist, such as good discipline, regular attendance and punctuality, but above all, the teacher must have the respect and love of his pupils. How is this last 'to be obtained?' To my mind the best and speediest method is through the parents. If parents would only think it their duty and pleasure to work with their child in matters with the teacher this would easily be accomplished. Teachers would be only delighted to have parents call at the school occasionally and inquire after the progress of their children. Let the children understand this and they will quickly respond to the interest others are taking in them. They will hurry home to tell of the successes they have had or the wonderful things their teacher has said or done. Where this mutual interest exists the parents will feel amply repaid for their time and effort by the improved progress of their children.

I do not mean that parents should encourage children to carry tales of fault-finding from school. Teachers are not infallible, and if a child has been wrongly dealt with the teacher should be quietly consulted at once. This is the only satisfactory one. Parents who run down the teacher before their children are making a great mistake. They are injuring both pupil and teacher, but in the majority of cases it is the pupil who loses most. His confidence in his teacher is shaken, and he does not learn as he should. Where there is co-operation between teacher and parent the pupil has a powerful incentive to make his best effort. If a child is sickly or has a weakness in any part of his little body, why not let the teacher know of this? The teacher will find it out in time, but until he does, the child may not receive the right treatment. I have known many instances where parents neglected to acquaint the teacher with the weaknesses of their children with the result that unnecessary trouble was made for both pupil and teacher.

There are parents who use or allow profanity to be used in their homes. No one will pick up these profane words more readily than a child, although to him, perhaps, they are meaningless. You may depend upon it that if the father uses profanity so will little Johnny, because, in his eyes, whatever father says or does must be manly. As a result, these words will be heard in the schoolyard. This is a violation of school law which teachers are obliged to punish severely. Parents, watch your boys and girls at home and save the public school teacher this much-difficult work. A teacher is in duty bound to keep up the moral tone of the school in every line.

In short, if there is obedience and discipline at home, the work of the teacher is made much easier and the progress of the pupil more rapid. A certain experienced teacher said not long ago that many parents send their children to school to get training not only in public school work, but also in certain lines that should be altogether separate from the public school course. Before teachers enter their work, they are taught how to teach and control their pupils. Parents also should have some training to enable them to perform their duty to their children.

Not long ago a Toronto paper contained a valuable extract upon the evils resulting from parents neglecting to teach their boys and girls the physiology of all parts of their bodies. The writer stated that many young women and girls, young men and boys, and indeed families, would in many cases escape not only deep disgrace, but disease, if parents would only do their duty in this line. On account of the failure of parents in this respect, it was suggested that in high schools and colleges it would be wise to take up a course of study for young men by themselves, and for young women by themselves. Many public school teachers have a great difficulty to meet here! Boys, ignorantly, by their language and actions, are most insulting to any modest girl, no matter how young. Here the teacher is brought into the matter by the boy's conduct being reported, and the teacher has to talk to the boy and do work his parents should have done.

I know of a certain mother who purchased these books which should be in every home, and as her boys and girls reached the proper age, she had them read these books. For boys and young men there are such books as "What a Boy Ought to Know," "What a Young Man Ought to Know," "What a Young Husband Ought to Know." For girls and young women there are, "What a Girl Ought to Know," "What a Young Woman Ought to Know," "What a Young Wife Ought to Know."

From these books girls, boys, men and women obtain a knowledge that results in nobler, purer thoughts and actions, in nobler, purer characters, and no one will appreciate and be encouraged more by mingling with such boys and girls than the public school teacher.

A NEW BRUNSWICK WOMAN NEARLY 107 YEARS OF AGE.

(St. John Sun.) There lives today in Kouchibouguac Kent county, one of the oldest women in the province, and in fact all Canada. It is nearly one hundred and zero years ago that Janet Patterson was born in the parish of Kouchibouguac, Dumfries-shire, Scotland. Her maiden name was Janet Potter. In the year 1833 she emigrated to Canada and settled in this province, in the parish of Carleton. With her husband, the late James Patterson, she lived the strenuous life and endured many hardships when the country was young. She raised a large family, Robert, John and Margaret live in Kouchibouguac, the latter having the care of her mother, two, Mrs. Kee and Mrs. Cummings, reside in the United States, while four others with her dear husband have gone to the "palace of the King."

That Mrs. Patterson's health is exceptional for a lady of her years goes without saying. She regrets that her eyesight is failing so that, as she herself puts it, it is difficult to make sure of what she reads, and that her memory also is failing, and yet she can converse intelligently upon many things, and asks questions about persons and events which really surprise one. She has been a member of the Presbyterian church for many years, and her faith in the eternal truths is strong. She occasionally lapses into the dialect of "my ain country" and you have to listen with all your ears. When asked if it was her strong constitution that had brought her through so many years she said, "No it was just the goodness of God."

AFTER YOUR BOY.

One of the delegates to a state convention of Christian Endeavors, a young business man, every movement alert and eager, and telling of bottled energy within, came suddenly upon a red-faced citizen who evidently had been patronizing the hotel bar.

"What are you fellows trying to do down at the meetings? You are hot temperance, I see. Do you think you could make a temperance man of me?" "No," replied the delegate, looking him over from head to foot, with a keen glance, "we evidently couldn't do much for you, but we are after your boy."

At this unexpected retort the man dropped his specular nose, and said seriously: "Well, I guess you have got the right of it there. If somebody had been after me when I was a boy I should be a better man today."

SEVEN PERISHED, RESULT OF POURING COAL OIL ON FIRE.

Winnipeg, Nov. 6.—A disastrous fire occurred at Swan River, a small village on the Canadian Northern Railway, in the northern part of the province, in which seven people lost their lives.—Mrs. Edward Carey, her five children, and a Miss Gillespie, a school teacher, of Swan River, who was stopping over night with the Carey family. Mr. Carey was badly burned and cannot recover. Early this morning Mr. Carey and his eldest son, Herbert, arose to do the chores, the boy going to the stable, while the father remained in the house to light the fire. On his return from the stable the boy noticed smoke issuing from the house, and on opening the door, the father staggered out, his clothing all ablaze. The whole interior of the house was a mass of flames, and shortly after the roof fell in. No sound was heard, and it is thought that the family were suffocated as they slept. Neighbors rushed to the scene and the work of getting out the bodies was begun. They were recovered, but were burned beyond recognition. It appears that Mr. Carey started the fire with coal oil, which exploded in flames, the clothing being burned from his body. The Carey family was one of the best known and highly respected in this part of the country, and the tragedy has cast a gloom over the district.

DO THEY CARE?

(From Woodstock Sentinel-Review.) The rector of an Episcopalian church was suddenly seized with heart failure in a New York town the other day. It was assumed from his garb that he was a Roman Catholic. A priest was hastily summoned, who administered the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church. It does not appear that any great calamity followed the mistake. Perhaps the great Powers that rule the universe pay less attention to our nice distinctions of creed and garb than we sometimes imagine.

Two medical discoveries or claims recently made will if established make a wonderful stride in prolonging the life of the human race. One is that the injection of a serum will cure tuberculosis and this new treatment is being extensively used already in the hospitals with encouraging results. The other claim is that the injection of another serum will cure cancer. This latter disease, which has of late years become an increasing terror in its prevalence and unyielding nature, has up to the present baffled the efforts of the medical profession, but now comes a French physician, Dr. Doyen, who has lately made public in the French Congress of Surgery his views in regard to the treatment of cancer. He is reported by an exchange as saying, in effect, that the only way to counteract cancer was to establish an anti-infectious condition by means of progressive vaccination with the toxins and the dead cells of "micrococci neoplasmans," which promoted the absorbent action of the beneficent phagocytes. Of course it must be left to the doctors to get this down to the level of the ordinary understanding; but it is encouraging to learn that carriers of the breast have, as a result of this treatment, been almost completely cured. In cancer of the mouth, or of the intestines, where operations were impossible, the effect of vaccination, as described, was so rapid that when an operation became possible it was found to be unnecessary. Numerous other cures had been obtained by some of Dr. Doyen's colleagues in various parts of France, who used the same method. The important thing was to employ vaccination not only in confirmed cases where the lesions were often already far advanced, but in all cases at the very beginning.

BRIDGEWATER BULLETIN:

"The town council should pass a law forbidding expectation on the sidewalks. This filthy practice is one of the greatest misdeeds to health. Are we not right?"

The Monitor has taken occasion to refer to the same filthy practice indulged in by the loafers and loungers on our streets. A neat bit of sidewalk pavement seems to offer a special attraction to "the spitters" who freely decorate the smooth surface until the sight of it is nauseating to a decent person. Such loafers should be emphatically invited to "move on."

DRAMATIC OCCURRENCES.

The dramatic occurrences of today at the Chinese Capital, if the cables reports that the Emperor is dead and the Dowager Empress dying are correct, draw attention to two striking figures in current history, the weakling Emperor of China, dominated all his life long by a stern woman who usurped his power and his position, and the Dowager Empress herself a woman of sanguinary record, relentless, cruel and ambitious, whose demise renders impossible the fulfilment of the intrigues of her old age still to reign over China after the death of Kuang Hsu.

Sturdee writes to the St. John papers, in reply to an inquirer, that the Union Jack, and not the red ensign with the Canadian coat-of-arms in the fly is the proper flag to fly on land, and quotes the highest authority to show that this is correct. The red ensign, with or without the Canadian arms, is a sea flag, to be flown only on ships. And yet it is the red ensign that is flown on government buildings and by citizens in general.

UNIQUE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE ON WHEELS.

Philadelphia, Nov. 8.—All arrangements have been completed for the first Pennsylvania Farmers' Special Instruction Train which will leave Broad street station on Tuesday morning for a three days' trip through Eastern Pennsylvania, carrying representatives of the State College of Agriculture who will deliver free lectures to the farmers at various stations along the road.

The three coaches of the special have been fitted up as lecture rooms, and at each of the twenty-two stops forty-five minute talks will be made. The farmers who attend will enjoy the advantage of the results obtained from twenty-four years of continuous experiments in preserving and increasing the fertility of the soil. There will also be lectures on methods for increasing the output of dairy products, the care of live stock on testing seed corn and the cultivation of alfalfa.

Circulars have been posted at the stations announcing: "Nothing to sell or advertise. This special train is run for the benefit of the farmers of your section."

Under the auspices of the Long Island Railroad, a Pennsylvania subsidiary line, an experimental farm was started some years ago on some of the "waste" land on Long Island. In addition, the methods used on these ideal farms are being adopted by other farmers on Long Island, thereby increasing the quality and quantity of their products.

BAPTIST UNION.

In round figures there are three hundred Baptist ministers in the Maritime Provinces, and three hundred and seventy-five in the Convention of Ontario and Quebec. Although the number is less in the Maritime Provinces than in the two Upper Provinces, the Baptist denomination is, relatively to the whole population, much stronger, and the Baptist Church is much more influential, in these Lower Provinces than in Quebec and Ontario. The project of union of the two conventions—that of the Maritime Provinces and that of Ontario and Quebec—is one that clearly commends itself to the leading spirits in both. It appears to be quite feasible. The steps which were taken at the Ottawa meeting last week have already led to a union of the management of certain affairs in which the two conventions have a practical interest, and indicate that a forward step is taken in the matter which will in a year or two lead to a satisfactory conclusion of the whole project.

A PROGRESSIVE PUBLICATION.

The Special Thanksgiving Number of the "Canadian Pictorial," recently received, shows, in addition to its wealth of beautiful harvest pictures and other fine photographs, several new and interesting features which are to be continued with other attractions in the enlarged and improved Christmas Number, in course of preparation. One of these is a complete story; a second is a series of "Old Favourite Songs," words and music complete, which will appear in each issue. Remarkable as has been the popularity of this splendid publication, the public are assured that the best is yet to come. Every issue of this monthly "Art portfolio" would form a capital souvenir to send to friends abroad. (10c. a copy, $1.00 a year. The Pictorial Publishing Co., 442 St. Peter St., Montreal.)

SCOTT ACT TOWN BUSY.

(Sackville Tribune.)
In the Police Court last week Magistrate Jordan gave judgment in the Scott Act case against A. Lesperance of the Brunswick House. The case arose, it will be remembered, out of a raid made on the hotel by the Town Marshal acting under a search warrant sworn out by Dr. J. H. Seacord. His Honor found the defendant guilty of the charge against him and a fine of $50 and costs was imposed. His Honor also ordered the destruction of the liquor that was seized, with the exception of a bottle containing a drink classed as non-intoxicating.

This will be a busy week in the local Police Court so far as Scott Act cases are concerned. On Tuesday there will be several cases heard against men from outside the town. On Wednesday some local cases will be before Magistrate Jordan and again on Friday there will be some outside cases. It is understood that the local cases include a half a dozen or so against one man, two against another and one against a third.

CHAPMAN-PARKER.

About forty guests assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. J. Parker, Belleisle, on Wednesday morning, Nov. 11th, to witness the marriage of their daughter, Alice La Mont, to Charles Eorden Chapman, of Amherst. Precisely at the hour appointed to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, rendered by Mrs. A. D. Bancroft, Round Hill, the bride entered the room on the arm of her father and took her place beside the groom under an arch of evergreen and yellow artemesias. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. F. Johnson, of Granville Methodist church. The bride was becomingly attired in a suit of cream serge with hat in keeping and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and maiden hair fern, and presented a charming appearance. After congratulations, a dainty collation was served. The bride's traveling suit was of blue shadow stripe, tailor made, with hat to match. The bride and groom were attended. The popularity of the number of gifts received, noticeable among them being a parlor rug from her former employer, J. W. Beckwith of Bridgetown, and a set of table linen from Etter and Pugsley of Amherst, where she had been employed for the past two years. The groom's gift was a fur lined coat with pink collar and reverses.

Mr. Chapman is the junior partner of the Amherst Cash Shoe Store and a popular and rising young business man.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman took the two o'clock train for Halifax and other points and will be at home after Nov. 25th, at Amherst.

In Memoriam

MRS. JOHN RICHMOND.

The death occurred at Sussex, N. B., on the 15th instant, of Alvina T. Richmond, widow of the late John Richmond, who lost his life on the steamer Monticello, which was wrecked in the Bay of Fundy a few years ago, and daughter of the late Peter MacKay, of Bridgetown. Mrs. Richmond was 61 years of age and her death was caused by paralysis. She is survived by one brother, W. B. McKay, of Sussex, and one sister, Mrs. W. H. Burns, of Bridgetown. She will be remembered by a large circle of friends in Bridgetown, where her younger days were spent.

GEORGE ANDERSON.

On Thursday, in the death of Geo. Anderson, at his residence, West St. Martins, there passed away St. Martin's oldest citizen. Deceased was ninety-five years of age and had always resided in the place. Up to within a few days of his death, Mr. Anderson was going about as usual. The deceased commanded the respect of the entire community. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Sandford, of Staten Island, and Miss Edmund, at home, and four sons, William, David, John and Thomas, all of New York. The funeral, which was largely attended, took place from his late residence on Sunday, the services being conducted by Rev. Mr. Cracknell. Interment took place at the Church of England burying ground.—St. John paper.

FATAL GUNNING ACCIDENT AT TIVERTON.

(Digby Courier.)

Mr. Norman Elliott, son of Mr. Alfred Elliott, of Tiverton, met with a gunning accident about 1.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon which may prove fatal. He was out shooting and was standing on a rack when he slipped, striking the hammer of the loaded gun, the entire charge entering his left side just below the heart. Mr. Elliott, who is about twenty years of age, is very popular in his native village, being well liked by everybody. A physician reached him on soon as possible, who pronounced him in a very dangerous condition. It is feared he cannot recover. Messages are being sent to his brothers and other near relatives, who will endeavor to reach Tiverton as soon as possible.

Later.—A special telephone message to the Courier said that Mr. Elliott passed away about 12 o'clock at night, notwithstanding that he received every attention possible and the best of medical aid. He is survived by a father, four brothers and three sisters. The only society of which he was a member was the Sons of Temperance.

Americans spend $25,000,000 a year on cut flowers. In England $30,000,000 is spent on the same commodities. France alone sends flowers worth $5,000,000 to this country.

BOTH RULERS ARE DEAD.

Kuang Hsu, the Emperor of China, is dead, probably died some days ago, but given out officially as taking place on Nov. 14, at 5 o'clock, p. m. Rulers in China are not apparently dead until officially announced as dead.

The Dowager Empress of China, Tzai Hsi An, is also dead. Her demise is proclaimed as taking place at 2 o'clock p. m., on the 15th.

The Empress since 1861 has been the real ruler of that vast country. The present ruler, placed on the throne on the 15th, is Prince Pu Ti, the three-year-old son of Prince Chun, the regent of the Empire.

The Chinese Court will go in mourning for three years. Peking is already in mourning. Death had observations of three thousand years ago marked the passing of the Emperor and Dowager. They died alone and unattended, although surrounded by circles of abject spectators, who remained a rod distant, as on account of the sacred persons of their majesties they could not be approached.

The Emperor died as he had lived. For months he had refused to permit the services of foreign physicians, and he died without having received medical care.

The new regent, Prince Chun, is said to be a thoroughly progressive man, and should make a good ruler.

Councillor Calder is having a systematic cleaning up of the street gutters. This is of interest to the Province. Truro being the home of the Normal School. The Truro News says:—“This town has had a terrible scourge of fever, and diphtheria. The schools should have been closed long ago. Now let the authorities go energetically to work and see what can be done in the matter of sewerage in this pretty town. What is the water supply like? Are the people drinking pure milk?”

DEATHS AT BERWICK.

The community of Berwick has been saddened within a week by the death of Aubrey V. Parker, which took place November 8th. He had been ill for about sixteen months, suffering from tuberculosis, and was at times a great sufferer. A year ago last October he was ordered to Sarnac Lake, N. Y., where he went, accompanied by his wife. He remained there until May, when they returned. He did not seem to have very much benefited by the treatment received, and has been steadily going down since. He was a son of T. H. Parker, the well-known fruit grower, and a brother of S. C. Parker, Secretary of the Fruit Growers' Association, and was himself quite interested in the growing of small fruits. He was a constant member of the Methodist church, and will be greatly missed. He was a member of Berwick Lodge, No. 53, I. O. O. F., and also of the Foresters Lodge. He leaves a wife, who was Ella, daughter of James E. Beckwith, of Berwick.

The sudden death at Berwick of Dr. Frank Middlemas, a highly respected practitioner of Kings County, is announced. He retired on Monday night in his usual health but at an early hour yesterday became seriously ill, sinking into a comatose condition and passing away about three o'clock in the afternoon. Heart failure was the cause of death. He graduated in 1873 at Harvard, and practiced at Berwick for the past thirty years.

ABOUT EGGS.

The Antigonish Gazette says: J. H. Stewart shipped last year out of Antigonish on the I. C. R. nearly 10,000,000 eggs to the English markets. This fall it is expected he will ship twenty cars to transport, many went via Quebec and Montreal, and later in the season via Montreal.

The Pictou Advocate had this paragraph a few days ago: “Mr. M. S. Lockhart yesterday showed us a shipment of eggs he got from Ontario, and for which he paid 26 cents. Surely this is not complimentary to our farmers and poultry raisers. They ought surely to raise enough eggs to supply our own market, especially as the price is so good. We fear our farmers are not taking advantage of their opportunities along these lines.”

Truro News:—“Here we are shipping millions of eggs to the mother land from Nova Scotia, and then turning around and buying more or less stale eggs from Ontario at 26 cents a dozen. There is surely something wrong in the economy and eternal fitness of things in this “eggs”-traordinary business!”

PNEUMONIA CURED.

George S. Firth, of Shelburne, N. S., says:—Four months ago I took cold which settled on my lungs, they being naturally weak made my case a serious one. I applied Reed's Earth Cure. To my surprise, in three days the fever was subdued so that I was able to go out of doors. One week later I went about my work. I do not believe there can be a better remedy for pneumonia than Reed's Earth Cure.

ARROW POINTS.

(By Pastor J. Clark.) Wisdom works well. No sin can be shunned too soon. It is the near thorns, the unsuspected thorns, that hurt.

Judging by obituaries, the world has had many choice people in it whose great excellences were little known while they were living. The more you trouble others with your troubles, the less will others trouble either about you or your troubles.

When you cannot do as well as you would, do as well as you can.

The Christian's interests are Christ's interests, and Christ's interests should be the Christian's interests. The Country needs your thought. Its wealth is in its citizens—their love of right; Their industry and thrift; their partnership with God.

POSTAGE STAMP CHEATS.

Foolish Persons Who Run the Risk of Going to Prison. "You would be surprised," said a postoffice clerk, "the efforts people make to avoid the payment of postage. And quite often it is not the work of children either. The most common trick is to take the stamp that has been canceled by hand and the impression just touches the edge of the stamp. After pricking the marked edge with a pin or cutting it with a pair of shears to resemble the punctured edge of the stamp or tearing away that part the stamp is put on an envelope for another voyage. All these are placed in the hands of postal inspectors for investigation.

"Others try to give the impression that a stamp had been put on an envelope and become loose and lost in transit by sticking a stamp on the envelope and then pulling it with part of the envelope sticking to it. These as well as underpaid letters, unless they have a foreign destination, where postage is then collected, are marked 'Returned for postage' and sent back to the sender. Second class matter, as a roll of newspapers, is often sealed against inspection by having the stamps overlap the cover. Whether foreign or not it is returned for postage. When it again shows up, the mistake rectified, upon inspection it is usually found to contain written letters, photographs (unmounted), jewelry, merchandise of all kinds, making the package underpaid; hence it is again returned.

"But the limit of foolishness comes when a person tries to efface the indelible ink from the stamp and with half the features of the stamp missing or rubbed away and some of the ink still remaining affixes it to an envelope, with the address of the sender upon the back to facilitate investigation.

"This, though, is stretching it a little too much; a postcard that had been put through a canceling machine and delivered to the addressee had the canceling impression and the address scratched off with the aid of a sharp knife and a new address substituted and a written message pasted on the reverse side."

AN OLD GORMANDIZER.

One Man Who Lived That He Might Simply Eat and Drink. In a little yellowed English magazine, dated April, 1904, I came across the following amusing scrap:

"If the Duke of Q. does not extend his life to a still longer period, it will not be for want of some comforts and those other succulent arts by which longevity is best promoted. His grace's sustenance is thus daily administered: "At 7 in the morning he regales in a warm milk bath perfumed with almond powder, where he takes his coffee and a buttered muffin, and afterward retires to bed. He rises about 9 and breakfasts on a cafe au lait, with hard eggs just parboiled; at 11 he is presented with two warm jellies and rusques; at 1 he takes a veal cutlet a la Maintenon; at 3 jellies and eggs presented at 5 cup of chocolate and rusques; at 7:30 he takes a hearty dinner from high seasoned dishes and makes suitable libations of claret and Madeira; at 10 tea, coffee and muffins; at 12 eggs off a roast poulet, with a plentiful solution of lime punch; at 1 in the morning he retires to bed in high spirits and sleeps till 3, when his man cook, to the moment, waits upon him in person with a hot and savory veal cutlet, which, with a portion of wine and water, prepares him for further repose that continues generally uninterrupted till the morning summons to his latest bath.

"In this routine of living comforts are the four and twenty hours invariably divided, so that if his grace does not know, with Sir Toby Belch, 'that our life is composed of four elements' he knows at least, with Sir Ague Cheek, 'that it consists in eating and drinking.'"

A Reason For Thanks. The impeccable author's wife was trying on a new dress and endeavoring to observe the hang of it by means of a round mirror on top of a high chiffonier. Every woman will appreciate what that means.

"Oh, dear," she exclaimed as she thought with some pathos, "I haven't seen the bottom of my skirt since I was married." Her husband looked up, brate that he was, and remarked: "Well, you can thank your lucky stars for that."

Had Left For Parts Unknown. In a murder trial in Texas some years ago the counsel for the defense was examining a ventruman regarding his qualifications to serve. The candidate admitted that he had once been a member of a jury which tried a negro for murder. It is not permissible in such cases to ask the result of the trial, so the counsel said: "Where is that negro now?" "I don't know," was the reply. "The sheriff hanged him at the appointed time."

No Idle Boast. Dilkins-Smythe tries to make people believe that he belongs to the "upper crust." Wilkins—Well, I should think he did belong to the "upper crust." Dilkins—In what way does he show it? Wilkins—Always short and easily broke.

Imposing. "The Swelltons seem to keep up an imposing establishment," remarked the connoisseur. "You bet they do," replied the groceryman, with a sigh long drawn out, "and I'm one of the fellows they impose on."

SERIOUS DEPLETION IN FUNDS
HARD TIMES HARD ON THE POOR CONSUMPTIVE

Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives Makes an Urgent Appeal for Money.

$36,000 Required to Cover Bank Overdraft and Provide for Maintenance of Four Patients. These head-lines tell the story of our needs. They are heavy and urgent. Many times during the past twelve months the question has pressed itself upon the Trustees, "Can we continue the work further?" Every month brought its quota of accounts for salaries and wages of staff, bills of butcher, milkman, eggs, groceries, heavy coal bills—a serious item—and other uncontrollable expenses so long as the doors were kept open.

These had to be paid somehow. Contributions—especially after the turn of the year when the financial depression was felt at its keenest—fell off to such an extent, that each month the burden became heavier.

During all this period there was only one thing to do, and that was to lean on our banker—swelling the bank overdraft.

The trial was the severest in the history of these Muskoka Homes, in which nearly 3,000 persons, stricken by the dread white plague, have been cared for.

Shack Life at Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives.

But never for a single hour did the doors of the Free Hospital fail to swing open, and give a welcome to suffering ones without money and without price.

The good news has gone forth of a rich harvest the wide Dominion over.

Friends, we come to you at this time, when the clouds of depression are being lifted, asking that you now—in the direness of our extremity—help to lift the burden being carried—not for any personal gain, but solely, alone, only on behalf of suffering sisters and brothers.

Our plea is on behalf of the sick ones. What will you give? Do not say nay. Help generously. Help all you can. Help some. Help now.

Contributions may be sent to W. J. GAGE, Esq., Chairman Executive Committee, 84 Spadina Avenue, Toronto; or J. S. ROBERTSON, Sec.-Treasurer National Sanitarium Association, 347 King Street West, Toronto, Canada.

FAINTED WHITE CARRYING OIL LAMP.
St. John, Nov. 5.—Mrs. Clara Wilmore, over ninety years of age, was burned to death tonight. The fatality was caused by the old lady fainting while carrying an oil lamp, which, when she fell, set fire to her clothing. Neighbors broke into the house and found the charred body on the floor. The deceased is a widow of thirty-five years standing, and has lately been living with her son-in-law, Robert Bailey.

MAKE WAR ON DOGS AND CATS TO HALT DIPHTHERIA.
Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 12.—Health officials in an effort to prevent the spread of the diphtheria epidemic here, today began the killing of dogs and cats in houses where the disease appears.

Yesterday a physician visiting a diphtheritic patient discovered a pet dog lying on the patient's bed. It was learned that the dog runs to neighbors' houses and today the health officers had it shot and have directed the killing of dogs and cats in houses of other patients.

Repeat it—"Shiloh's Cure will always cure my coughs and colds."

Joker's Corner.

LWO OF A KIND.

Here is one of the old ones which is good enough to repeat: Dr. Johnson's offer of hand and heart to his second wife was thus: "My dear woman," said Johnson, "I am a hard-working man, and, without something of a philosopher, I am, as you know, very poor. I have always been respectable myself, but I give to tell you that one of my uncles was hung."

"I have less money than you, doctor," demurely answered the lady, "but I shall try to be philosophical, too. None of my relatives have ever been hung, but I have several who ought to be."

"Providence and philosophy have evidently mated us, my good woman," said the doctor, as he pressed a chaste salute on the lady's brow.—Atlanta Constitution.

SHE SAW THE POINT.

A minister tells in the Homiletic Review a story illustrating the in-born Irish trait of quick wit. He was preaching in a Michigan town. On Saturday the women of the congregation were busy trimming up the church. "I strolled in," says the minister, "and Katie Martin was decorating the pulpit. I noticed some tacks strewn about the floor, and jocularly advised Katie to be very careful to pick up in the middle of a sermon there is no telling what might happen. 'Faith, ye wouldn't linger long on that point,' said Katie, with a smile."

A CORRECT OPINION.

A lawyer came into court drunk, when the Judge said to him: "Sir, I am sorry to see you in a situation which is a disgrace to yourself and family, and the profession to which you belong." This reproach elicited the following colloquy: "Did your Honor speak to me?" "I did, sir, I said, sir, that in my opinion you disgraced yourself and family, the court and the profession, by your course of conduct."

"May I-I-I please your Honor, I have been an attorney in-in-in in this court for 15 years, and permit me to say, your Honor, that this is the first correct opinion I ever heard you to give."—Philadelphia Ledger.

COULDN'T FIND HIS WAY OUT.

A man slightly the worse off for that which inebriates, but does not always cheer, was on his way home when he collided with a box picker-fence which had been placed around a tree to protect it. Being somewhat inebriated, he grasped hold of what he supposed was a picket fence and started to feel his way along it.

"After rotating around the tree for half an hour he appeared somewhat puzzled at the extraordinary length of the fence, but he kept bravely on for some time. Finally, however, his courage failed him, and he sank down at the foot of the box fence with a groan of despair. "Fenced in!" he moaned.

TO FIT HIS RATIONS.

The colonel of a volunteer regiment camping in Virginia came across a private on the outskirts of the camp, painfully munching on something. His face was wry and his lips seemed to move only with the greatest effort. "What are you eating?" demanded the colonel. "Pardimons, sir." "Good heavens! Haven't you got any more sense than to eat pardimons at this time of the year? They'll pucker your very stomach out of you!" "I know, sir. That's why I'm eating 'em. I'm trying to shrink my stomach to fit me rations."

A southern Congressman tells of a dorker in a Georgia town whose best quality is his devotion to his aged parent. Once the Congressman asked Pete why he had never married. "Why, boss," explained Pete, "I've got an ole mudder, I had t' do for her, sub. Ef I doan' buy her shoes an' stockin's she doan' sit none. Now boss, you see ef I was t' git married, I'd have t' buy 'em fo' mah wife, an' dat'd be takin' ef shoes an' stockin's right outter my ole mudder's stockin'."—Harper's Weekly.

Like most minister's families, they were not extensively blessed with this world's goods. She, however, was the youngest of ten children until her father told her of a baby sister that had come in the night. "Well," she said, after due thought, "I s'pose it's all right, papa, but there's lots of things we wanted more."—Scottish American.

A Georgia editor was asked: "Do horse pay?" He replied: "A good many do not. They take the paper for several years and then have the post-master to mark it 'refused' or 'address unknown.'"—Alabama Beacon.

"Here is my seat, madam, but candor compels me to say that I think you are as well able to stand as I am."

"Politeness compels me to say 'Thank you, sir.'"

Subscriber—Why is my paper so damp every issue? Editor—Because there is so much dew on it.

THE HOME

Says a writer in a Canadian magazine:—I think we, as Canadians, make a great mistake in having large kitchens.

Doing it at once is like oiling a dusty pike. It smoothes the path of life and smother complaint and criticism.

The woman who sends her cheques as soon as she gets her bills, who returns her obligation calls within a week.

There's nothing underneath the sun That leads to life a greater zest Than finding out a fellow's done.

SHOULD A GIRL MARRY HER IDEAL? I fancy I hear a perfect babel of voices all answering this question in the affirmative.

ON DOING THINGS AT ONCE.

The woman who takes as her life motto 'Do it at once' is the woman who is not hounded by an accusing conscience.

The woman who believes that to excuse is to accuse will rarely have to back water on her belief.

The woman who does the nice things when she thinks of it, who says the kindly word as she goes along.

Good Health

The most precious heritage which nature can bestow upon any one, some keen observer of life has remarked, is that of a sound mind in a sound body.

But how little the average person knows what it means to have a fine body! We are almost all of us born with some defect.

It is curious that in an existence in which the enjoyment of everything of which we are conscious depends upon the healthy state of the physical organism, so few people should be blessed with a good one.

It seems as if nothing is more purely mental than an attack of the blues, yet in fact nothing is more purely physical. It has no foundation of real grief, neither is it due to any apparent disease of the body.

Captain Hinz and the members of the crew of the Boston schooner Frank Barnet from their burning vessel, will probably receive recognition for the heroic act from the United States government.
Hampton. Mrs. John Titus spent Thanksgiving with her niece in Digby. Mrs. Harris Foster, of Bridgetown has been visiting friends here. Our farmers have all their crops gathered in and are well prepared for winter. On Monday last the steamer Ruby L. landed a half carload of flour and feed for John F. Titus and an assortment of goods for him and our other merchants. John E. Farnsworth held a turkey supper at the residence of Mrs. Tolson on Wednesday evening last. About twenty guests were present and a very enjoyable evening was spent. This has been a season for general improvements and repairs. Judson Foster has repaired his mill, getting ready for sawing; Robbie Marshall has repaired his house; Clinton Collins has built an all on the residence of James Snow, and there is a lot repairing and renovating going on in our village.	SOUTH PARADISE. Our good old friend and neighbor, George Starratt, who has been away for some years, has returned home again. We are glad to know that the bridge that spans the so-called Morse brook has been repaired and is now safe to cross.	SPEAKS TO MOTHERS OF "BEING SEVENTEEN." "Parents should understand their children better than they do." This declaration was the keynote in the address on "The Distressing Malady of Being Seventeen," made by Miss Lillie Williams, of the New Jersey State Normal School, yesterday afternoon, at the meeting of the Mothers' Club, 1397 Locust street. "Youth needs something more than love, more than sympathy during the adolescent period, from 17 to 23 years. It needs, it craves to be understood," continued Miss Williams. "Because this period is the hardest in life. It is the time when youth is turning the corner into manhood and womanhood. The change causes a mental conflict and lack of harmony in the body. "The child is perplexing to himself and to his parents. He is contentious, willful and secretive. He scorns the knowledge of his teachers, and parents, has a tendency to morbidity and a violent alteration in emotions and moods. If these phases of the disease of Being Seventeen are commented upon as peculiarities, and a lack of sympathy is shown, on the part of the parent, friction is established between the two. "Parents too often forget their own youth, and think that their children are queer. They do not understand the child's conduct, because they interpret it in the terms of their matured consciousness. "What a boy or girl needs is the friendship of the parent in this trying time. The girl should be under the sympathetic guidance of the mother. Boys should be left to their fathers. The greatest care should be used in the selection of the books they play and company for the boys and girls. Never is a child so susceptible to influence. "Timidity, or the lack of courage in the mother, is fatal to the daughter's confidence. When a woman fails to understand her daughter's odd actions, she often becomes nervous and 'picky.' Thus, a note of strife is struck between the two, and the girl either goes to a friend, who may be the wrong kind of friend, or sometimes she leans toward the father." Miss Williams urged the mothers to try to see the child's standpoint, and to refrain from irritability in every case.
