-OF-

ALL REPORTED CASES DECIDED BY THE FEDERAL AND PROVINCIAL COURTS IN THE DOMINION OF CANADA, AND BY THE PRIVY COUNCIL ON APPEAL THEREFROM, DURING THE YEARS 1901 TO 1910 INCLUSIVE.

ABANDONMENT.

Service-Intervention-Arts. 276, 787, 1237 C.P.Q.] - An abandonment is only effective when it has been served on all the parties to the cause. An abandonment not so served does not put an end to the instance nor prevent a party from intervening to protect his rights.

McNally v. Prefontaine, 3 Que. P.R. 401

(Q.B.).

Ct.).

—Special authority—Proof of—Art. 548 C.C.P.]—An abandonment of a judgment should be signed by the party in whose favour it was rendered, or by his attorney furnished with special authority. If the judgment is for a sum of more than $50 proof cannot be given by oral testimony that the attorney who signed the abandon-ment was authorized by the party or that the latter had ratified it, unless there has been a commencement of proof by writing. Gauthier v. Barcelo, 4 Que. P.R. 224 (Sup.

-Procedure.]-The prothonotary has no jurisdiction to give acte or issue an order on abandonment of proceedings; therefore, when notice of abandonment is filed by one party in the district in which the action should be tried, the opposite party should apply, by inscription, to the Court in order to obtain judgment pursuant to the notice.

ABDUCTION.

Abduction of young girl.]-An application by the prisoner for leave to appeal from a conviction for unlawfully taking an unmarried girl under the age of sixteen out of the possession and against the will of her mother, then having the lawful care and charge of her, contrary to sec. 315 of the Criminal Code, was refused, there being evidence to sustain the conviction, and the object or intention with which the girl was taken being immaterial.

Rex v. Yorkema, 21 O.L.R. 193, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 189.

Unlawful taking or enticement of child -Decree of foreign Court awarding custody to mother - Validity.]-The decree of a foreign Court having jurisdiction over the parties and subject-matter, awarding the custody of a child of six years old to his mother, is of such validity and effect in Ontario-no fraud or collusion being shownas to render the child's father liable, under as to render the child's tather hable, under s. 316 of the Criminal Code, to conviction for the offence of unlawfully taking or enticing away the child with intent to deprive the parent (mother) of the possession thereof. The Courts will recognize the validity of a divorce granted by a Court of the country where the parties were legally domicilled at the time when the proceedings. domiciled at the time when the proceedings were taken, although the decree was founded upon causes which would not be considered sufficient in an English Court.

ABORTION.

Counselling a person in Canada to sub-mit in the United States to an operation.] -Counselling a person in Canada, to submit in a foreign jurisdiction to an operation which, if performed in Canada, would be a crime, is not an offence against the criminal law of Canada.

Rex v. Walkem, 14 B.C.R. 1, 14 Can. Cr.

-Defence-Lawful operation-Evidence in reply of previous criminal act.]—Upon an indictment of the defendants (P., a physician and surgeon, and T., a boarding-house keeper), for procuring an abortion, the case for the Crown was that the defendants had performed an unlawful operation upon a certain woman, for the purpose of procuring a miscarriage. Of this there was evidence to go to the jury. The defence was then entered upon, and the defendant, P., swore that the operation was performed for a lawful purpose, and without any criminal intent. He was cross-examined as to whether he had not, some few weeks previously, performed an operation upon a person then in Court. He denied having done so, and all knowledge of having treated her at all. This person and the man whom she had subsequently married were, against objection, called in reply, and gave evidence that P. had been employed to operate, and had operated, upon her so as to procure a mis-carriage. It was contended that this evidence was admissible, as tending to rebut the evidence of P., or, in other words, to prove the unlawful intent:-Held, that the testimony of these witnesses was improperly admitted, there being no evidence of a system which would let in proof of a single prior criminal act as part of it. The King v. Bond, [1906] 2 K.B. 389, discussed. The conviction of the defendants was set aside. and a new trial was directed under sec. 1018 (b) and (d) of the Criminal Code.

-Abortion-Intent to procure-Indictment.]
-In an indictment laid under sec. 303 of the Criminal Code, R.S.C. (1906) c. 146, which enacts that "everyone is guilty of an indictable offence . . . who, with intent to procure the miscarriage of any woman, whether she is or is not with child . unlawfully uses on her any instrument or other means whatsoever with the like intent," the first count charged that the accused, with the intent to procure a miscarriage, etc., did unlawfully use upon the person of the woman an instrument, etc.; the second count charged that with like intent the accused did unlawfully "operate" on the said woman. The evidence submitted by the Crown was directed solely to proof of the fact of the performance of an operation by the use of an instrument, substantially negativing the use of the hand or finger alone for the alleged purpose. The jury, however, were charged—after they had intimated that they were not satisfied that the evidence established the use of an instrument-that the use of the hand or finger might be considered in dealing with the second count. The jury found the accused not guilty on the first count, but guilty on the second count:-Held, that the second count might not unnaturally be regarded as a mere repetition in another form of the gravamen of the first count, and that by the finding of not guilty on that count the whole case against the accused failed, and the finding on the second count, therefore, could not be supported.

ACCORD.

Plea of compensation—Allegation of acknowledgment—Tender.]—1. A plea of compensation, setting forth a contra-account, followed by an allegation of acknowledgment and promise to pay by the plaintiff, will not be dismissed on an answer in law. 2. The Judge presiding at the trial, has, however, power to order that the settlement of account and acknowledgment by the plaintiff, alleged by the defendant, be proved by him before he is allowed to prove his counterclaim. 3. The validity of a tender, especially in commercial matters, may be a question of fact, and allegations relating to a tender will not be rejected on answer in law, although the tender may appear not to have been made in the manner prescribed by law for legal tenders. Laurentide Pulp Company, Limited v. Curtis, 4 Que. P.R. 109.

-Payment-Accord and satisfaction-Mistake-Principal and agent.]-On being pressed for payment of the amount of a promissory note, the defendant offered to convey to the plaintiffs a lot of land, then shown to the plaintiffs' agent, in satisfaction of the debt. The agent, after inspecting the land, made a report to the plaintiffs but gave an erroneous description of the property to be conveyed. On being instructed by the plaintiffs to obtain the conveyance, the plaintiffs' solicitor observed the mistake in the description and took the conveyance of the lot which had actually been pointed out and inspected at the time the offer was made. More than a year afterwards, the plaintiffs sued the defendant on the note and he pleaded accord and satisfaction by conveyance of the land. In their reply the plaintiffs alleged that the property conveyed was not that which had been accepted by them and, at the trial, the plaintiff recovered judgment. The full Court reversed the trial Court judgment and dismissed the action:-Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (9 B.C.R. 257) that the plaintiffs were bound to accept the lot which had been offered to and inspected by their agent in satisfaction of the debt and could not recover on the promissory note.

Pither v. Manley, 32 Can. S.C.R. 651.

ACCOUNT.

Action to account—Alternative condemnation to pay,]—The plaintiff in an action to account who prays that, in the alternative of failure by the defendant to account, he be condemned to pay a specified sum, is entitled, on establishing the accountability of the defendant, to a judgment accordingly. Hence, if the defendant, examined as a witness as to his accountability, produces an account and is permitted to oner explanations on it, the Court will not thereby be justified in reducing the alternative condemnation prayed for, to the balance shown in the account so produced. Such a power vests in the Court only after a regular contestation of an account filed. McCallum v. Bangs, 37 Que. S.C. 407.

Action for—Onus—Particulars.]—In an action en reddition de compte by a company against its president it is for the defendant who alleges that the board of directors of the plaintiff, which demands that in default of rendering an account the defendant be condemned to pay a certain amount which it has been informed he has received under certain contracts, is not bound to state at what date and from what persons such sum was received.

Temiscouata Railway Co. v. Macdonald, 3 Que. P.R. 462 (S.C.).

—Reddition de compte—Omissions—Incidental demand—Arts. 516-522 C.C.P.]—Omissions made in an action en reddition de compte may, notwithstanding the provisions of Arts. 516 and 522 C.C.P., be the object of an incidental demand.

Roe v. Hood, 4 Que. P.R. 333 (Sup. Ct.).

—Reddition de compte—Delay—Death of accounting party—Suspension of delay—Acquiescence—Reprise d'instance—Arts. 267-71, 605 C.C.P.]—On Nov. 16th, 1901, a judgment condemned the defendant to render to the plaintiffs within thirty days an account of a quantity of wood he had disposed of for the latter, and in default that he be and remain condemned to pay to the plaintiff $9,000 to compensate him for the balance, with interest and costs of all the proceedings. On Nov. 30th, 1901, defendant died, leaving his wife his universal legatee. The fact of his death was not entered on the record. On December 2nd, 1901, the universal legatee paid the cost of the action. On January 13th, 1902, the plaintiff caused the judgment of Nov. 16th to be served on the universal legatee with a demand for payment of the sum of $9,000 within eight days or otherwise the judgment would to be executed against her. On Jan. 21st the universal legatee presented a petition, alleging the death of her husband, her status as universal legatee, and requesting permission to take up the instance and carry on the necessary proceedings of the original action. The plaintiff pleaded that, the thirty days having expired, the judgment as to the $9,000 had become final and executory; that the petitioner had acquiesced in the judgment of Nov. 16th by paying the costs on Dec. 2nd, and that there was no instance to take up:—Held, (1) that the condemnation for the $9,000 was not acquiesced by the plaintiff at the time of defendant's death since it could only come into existence at the end of the thirty days, and only on default to file the account within that delay. (2) That on the death of the defendant during the thirty days the cause was not pending as to the $9,000. (3) That the death of defendant suspended the delay of thirty days, as a dead man cannot render an account, and this is not a case within Arts. 268 and 269 C.C.P., which provides that proceedings are valid up to the day of notice of the party's death, for there were no proceedings against the deceased after his death. (4) That the universal legatee, in paying the costs of the action on Dec. 2nd, acquiesced in the judgment of Nov. 16th, but did not acquiesce in the default in rendering an account and paying the $9,000. (5) That she was in time to take up the instance where it stood on defendant's death. (6) Quære. What was the effect of the judgment of Nov. 16th? Could the defendant, had he lived, have demanded and obtained, after the thirty days expired, a new delay to render an account?

Girard v. Letellier, 21 Que. S.C. 192 (Sup. Ct.).

—Reddition de compte—Amendment—Art. 578 C.C.P.]—The plaintiff in an action en reddition de compte will not be allowed to allege in detail a former process between him and the defendant, and such allegations will be dismissed on a defence en droit. But, as he is entitled to allege these facts in a general way to justify himself for not having sooner brought his action, the Court will allow him propeio motee to amend his declaration by alleging the former action and the judgment therein. Cheval v. Senecal, 4 Que. P.R. 241 (Sup.

account of an administration is rendered the person entitled to it has no right, on the ground that it is incomplete or inexact, to bring an action en reddition de compte; his proper course is by action for reformation of the account.

Beaudry v. Prevost, Q.R. 22 S.C. 32 (Sup. Ct.) confirmed by Queen's Bench.

—Co-heirs—Account and partition.]—Held, that an heir has no right of action against one of his co-heirs for an account, but that his only action is one for account and partition. (Affirmed on appeal by the Court of Review.)

—An affidavit on review from a justice's Court may be sworn before a commissioner who acted as attorney for the appellant in the court below. Northrup v. Perkins, 37 C.L.J. 706.

AFFILIATION.

Evidence—Commencement of proof by writing—Proof of paternity—Arts. 227, 232, 233 C.C.]—An affidavit under oath before a justice of the peace by the mother of a natural child cannot serve as a commencement of proof by writing under Art. 233 C.C. in an action en declaration de paternite subsequently brought by the tutor of the child although the affidavit had been filed of record without objection by the adverse party. However, it is of no importance whether the existing circumstances which may, in an action en paternite, authorize proof by witnesses (Art. 232 C.C.) be established before or during the enquete; it suffices that these existing facts are established and proved before parol evidence is admitted. When, in an action en declaration de paternite the defendant admits having had sexual intercourse with the mother of the child, but at a date outside of, though nearly approaching to, the period fixed by Art. 227 C.C. as the longest period of gestation, this avowal of the defendant constitutes a presumption and an indication resulting from the existing facts sufficiently strong to permit of the admission of parol evidence; and then if it appears that the mother has not had intercourse with other men from the time of her conception, the Court put faith in her declaration under oath that the defendant is the father of the child, especially if this declaration is borne out by circumstances and strengthened by the evidence of witnesses.

ALIEN.

Alien—Deportation—Immigrant passenger —Convict—Moral turpitude.]—The applicant came to Canada from the United States of America on the 27th February, 1910. She then resided in the city of Vancouver continuously for more than three years. On the 4th March, 1910, she was convicted in Vancouver of being an inmate of a house of ill-fame. She then went on a visit to the State of Washington, and, on attempting to return to Canada, was arrested and ordered by the immigration authorities to be deported:—Held, on a motion for a habeas corpus, that she came within s. 3 (d) of the Immigration Act, as an immigrant passenger who had been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude; and not come within the exception, not being a Canadian citizen and not having a Canadian domicile, as defined by s. 3. A person claiming a Canadian domicile must show this to have been acquired "after having been landed in Canada," within the meaning assigned to "landed" by s. 2 (p). Re Murphy, 15 W.L.R. 381, 15 B.C.R. 401.

Naturalization.]-See that title.

-Chinese.]-See CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

ALIEN LABOUR.

Action brought with written consent of Judge.]-Under section 4 of the Alien Labour Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 97, it is only the party or parties who obtain the written consent of a Judge of the Court that can be plaintiff or plaintiffs in an action to recover the prescribed penalty for violation of the Act. The action in this case was accordingly dismissed with costs because it was brought by Ira S. Murray, whereas the consent was given on the application of Murray Brothers.

Murray v. Henderson, 19 Man. R. 649.

Importing aliens under contract to labour -Scienter.]-Conviction of defendant under 60-61 Vict. c. 11 (D.), as amended by 1 Edw. VII. c. 13 (D.), for unlawfully causing the importation of an alien from the United States into Canada under contract to perform labour in Canada by working at a factory, quashed as bad on its face, because not stating that he "knowingly" did the act charged, which indeed neither did the information allege:-Held, also, that this omission from the information and conviction was not a mere irregularity or informality or insufficiency within the meaning of s. 889 of the Criminal Code, 55-56 Vict. c. 9 (D.).

Rex v. Hayes, 5 O.L.R. 198 (D.C.), 6 Can.

Cr. Cas. 357.

-Advertisement for labourers-Whether promise of employment.]-The company published in a Seattle newspaper this advertisement: "Wanted. First-class machinists. VII. c. 13, s. 4.
Downie v. Vancouver Engineering Works,

10 B.C.R. 367, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 66.

-Penalty-Qui tam action.]-In the Province of Quebec the plaintiff in an action to recover a penalty is bound to give security for costs.

Laurin v. Raymond, 7 Que. P.R. 209, Davidson, J.

-Alien Labour Act-Consent to prosetution | —The written consent required by sub-sec 3 of the Alien Labour Act, 60 and 61 Vict. c. 11 (D) as amended by Edw. VII. c. 13 (D.) for the bringing of the proceedings for the recovery of a penalty for an offence against the Act must contain a general statement of the offence alleged to have been committed, the name of the person in respect of whom the offence is alleged to have been committed, and the time and place, with sufficient certainty to identify the particular offence intended to be charged. particular offence intended to be charged. A consent "to a summary prosecution being maintained under the provisions of the Alien Labour Act against A. for violations of the above Act and amendments thereto," is not sufficient. Conviction quashed.

Rex v. Breckenridge, 10 O.L.R. 459.

-Act to restrict importation and employment of-Offence under-Jurisdiction.]-A Judge of a County Court has no jurisdiction to convict for an offence under the Act to restrict the importation and employment of aliens (60-61 Vict. c. 11), and the Act in amendment thereof (1 Edw. VII. c. 13), for an offence not committed within his territorial jurisdiction.

The King v. Forbes; Ex parte Chestnut, —Power of Dominion Parliament—Validity of Dominion Act, 60 and 61 Vict. c. 11, s. 6, amended by 1 Edw. VII. c. 13—Power to expel and deport aliens.]—Held, that s. 6 of the Dominion statute 60 & 61 Vict. c. 11, as amended by 1 Edw. VII. c. 13, s. 13, is intra vires of the Dominion Parliament. The Crown undoubtedly possessed the power to expel an alien from the Dominion of Canada, or to deport him to the country whence he entered it. The above Act, assented to by the Crown, delegated that power to the Dominion Government, which includes and authorizes them to impose such extra-territorial constraint as is necessary to execute the power. Re Gilhula and Cain, 10 O.L.R. 469, reversed.

37 N.B.R. 402.

Attorney-General v. Cain, [1906] A.C.

—Penalty — Recorder's Court — Prescription of action.]—(1) Penalties, concerning the importation and employment of aliens mentioned in 1 Edw. VII. c. 13, s. 1, may be recovered before the recorders, subject to the formalities therein mentioned. (2) The prescription of an action, suit or information for any penalty is two years according to Art. 930 of the Criminal Code. (1).

Montreal Harbour Commissioners v. Recorder's Court, 8 Que. P.R. 63, affirmed in appeal.

—Right of exclusion and deportation—Tort committed in foreign country—Conditions on which right of action depends—Foreign law.]—The Court on appeal will not disregard the finding of a Judge who tries a question of fact without a jury on viva voce evidence and substitute for it a finding which they may think should have been made, unless they are satisfied the Judge was wrong, and the onus of showing that is on the party moving. If the question is left in doubt the presumption that the Judge was right is not displaced.

The civil liability arising out of a wrong derives its birth from the law of the place, and its character is determined by that law. Therefore the plaintiff, an alien, being unlawfully within the United States territory in violation of an Act of Congress, and a person liable to be deported, has no right of action in this Court against an officer of the United States Government for his arrest in, and deportation from, that country.

Foreign law is a matter of fact to be ascertained by the evidence of experts skilled in such law. Where the evidence is unsatisfactory and conflicting the Court will for itself examine the decisions of the foreign Courts and text-writers referred to in order to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion upon the question of foreign law. (Con. Stat. (N.B.), 1903, c. 127, s. 60.)

By international law, and apart from any civil enactment, a sovereign state has the right at its pleasure to exclude or deport any alien from its dominions; therefore no action will lie in a British Court against an official exercising that right at the command and on behalf of the state, of which he is the servant.

Papageorgiouv v. Turner, 37 N.B.R. 449.

—Action of penalties—Security for costs.]
—The action given to "any person who first brings his action, etc.," to recover the penalties imposed by the Act 60 and 61 Vict. e. 11, as amended by 1 Edw. VII. c. 13, is a qui tam or popular action and the plaintiff may be required under article 180 C.C.P. to give the security judicatum solvi.

Laurin v. Raymond, 29 Que. S.C. 101 (Davidson, J.).

-Alien Labour Act-Importation of foreign labour-Act of agent and his liability-"Skilied labour for the purpose of a new industry."]-(1) A person who, as the agent of a company, procures the immigration into Canada of an alien labourer, in violation of the Alien Labour Act, is guilty of the offence created, and liable for the fine imposed therein, as if he were a principal acting for himself. (2) It is a violation of the Alien Labour Act to import, or assist in importing, an alien labourer who resides in a foreign country that enacts and retains in force laws of a similar character, even though such labourer should be a citizen of, and have his domicile in another foreign country that does not enact and retain in force such laws. (3) On the establishment of steel car manufacturing as a new industry in Canada, rivetters may be imported from a foreign country for the purpose under s. 9 of the Alien Labour Act, if, in consequence of an unusual demand, they cannot be otherwise obtained, though rivetters are employed in other industries in Canada.

Maiming-Castration of stallion not authorized by owner—Stallion running at large.]—The castration of a stallion running at large contrary to the provisions of the Entire Animals Ordinance is a "maiming" of the stallion within the meaning of s. 510 (B. b.) of the Criminal Code. fact that the owner of the stallion had expressed an intention to castrate it was held to be no justification of the unauthorized act of the defendant. The interference by the stallion with the detendant's mares also running at large was also held to be no justification, the defendant being in such case at best a mere licensee of the land over which the mares grazed: McLean v. Rudd, A.L.R. 505, followed. The proper test in such a case is the question, Did the defendant do what did honestly believing to be necessary for the protection of his property? Proof of actual malice is not necessary under this section, but although the word "maliciously" is not used, legal malice such as would establish that mens rea, without which there can be no criminal intent, must be proven. The fact that the defendant committed the act without any attempt to avail himself of the provisions of the Ordinance relating to impounding stallions, and the evidence adduced not showing that he honestly believed the act necessary to protect his property:—Held, that legal malice was sufficiently proven.

Warranty of soundness — Failure of warranty — Conditional sale — Return.] — Defendant had given plaintiff a note in payment for a mare sold by plaintiff to the defendant with a warranty of soundness. The sale was a conditional one, the note pro-viding that the property in the mare should remain in the plaintiff until the note or any renewal thereof was paid. After get-ting possession, the defendant immediately discovered that the mare was unsound and at once took the mare to the plaintiff, pointed out such unsoundness, and asked plaintiff to take the mare back and return the note. The plaintiff refused. The defendant thereupon housed and fed the mare until a sale could be arranged, and sold the mare at auction for the best price obtainable. On an action by the plaintiff against the defendant for the amount of the note, it was held, (1) That although the sale was not an absolute one so as to enable the defendant to maintain an action against the plaintiff for breach of war-ranty, the defendant could nevertheless set up such breach by way of counterclaim to the plaintiff's action against him on the note. (2) That the defendant having acted promptly was entitled to reject the mare and return her to the plaintiff. (3) That the plaintiff, having refused to accept the mare back when he ought to have done so, had waived his right to take possession and had clothed the defendant with the absolute property in the mare if the defendant had chosen to exercise such right. (4) That the plaintiff, having refused to take the mare back when he ought so to have done, the defendant was justified in selling her. (5) That the defendant was entitled to damages in a sum equal to the amount of the difference between the price for which the defendant purchased the mare and her real value, and also to a reasonable sum for her keep, and the expenses attending the sale.

—Unlawful detention — Estray — Care of.] —Domestic animals are not liable to be distrained damage feasant in the absence of a lawful fence surrounding the property damaged, but if an estray comes upon a person's premises, although not lawfully fenced and commits damage or becomes troublesome, the owner of the premises has the right to tie such animal up and retain possession until the costs of keep are paid, which costs would include the trouble to which the owner of the premises was put:
—Held, further, that an owner of premises tieing up an estray is bound to properly care for, feed and water the estray.

—Agistment.] — An agister of cattle who has indemnified the owner for lost or missing cattle has a special property therein to entitle him to maintain an action respecting them in his own name. A denial by a defendant that he "unlawfully took . . . or unlawfully detained the plaintiff's steer," is merely a plea of non cepit, and non detainet, and does not put in issue any right of property.

Simpkinson v. Hartwell, 6 Terr. L.R. 472.

—Runaway horse — Art. 1055 C.C.] — A person who leaves on a public street a horse harnessed to a carriage, unhitched and uncared for, is liable for any damages caused by the horse if he runs away, and it does not matter if the person injured, who is riding in a carriage, was so injured while endeavouring on foot to avoid the runaway, if it appears that he would not have escaped even if he had remained in his wagon.

Laflamme v. Staines, 18 Que. S.C. 105 (S. C.).

— Driving on the wrong side of the road — Collision.] — In an action on the case for negligence in driving the defendant's horse whereby his wagon came into collision with and damaged that of the plaintift, it is not sufficient to prove merely that the defendant was driving on the wrong side of the road, especially as it was shown that the defendant just before the collision had crossed from the left side of the road for the purpose of speaking to a man sitting on a doorstep on the other side and that the plaintiff's horse at the time of the accident was running away and beyond control.

Stout v. Adams, 35 N.B.R. 118.

 Keeping vicious dog — Scienter — Remoteness of damage — Permanent disfigurement-Financial position of parties.] - In an action brought to recover damages from the owner of a dog, which had bitten the plaintiff, a child a little over five years of age, the jury, in answer to questions put by the learned trial Judge, found that the dog had attempted to bite one G. B., and the defendant had knowledge of this before the plaintiff was bitten; that the dog had never, before the injury to the plaintiff, evinced a cross, savage or vicious disposi-tion to the knowledge of the defendant; that the dog was in the habit of jumping upon or against people, and in such acts scratching them, and the defendant knew this before the plaintiff was injured; that one of the acts of jumping on or against people referred to one W. B.; that the defendant knew of it before the plaintiff was injured, and that the dog did not do it playfully; that they considered that if G. B. had left the dog alone he would not have attempted to bite him. Upon an application by the defendant to have a verdict entered for him:-Held (per Tuck, C.J., Landry, Barker, VanWart and McLeod, JJ., Hanington, J., dissenting), that, as the answers established that the defendant had kept the dog after he had knowledge that he was apt to do injury to mankind, the application should be refused. The learned Judge, in charging the jury, told them that if they thought the sear on the plaintiff's face, caused by the bite, were likely to be permanent, and that such lasting disfigurement might affect her prospects of making a good marriage, they might consider such possible loss of marriage in assessing the damages. Held, per totam curiam, misdirection, as such damages were too speculative and remote. The jury were further directed that in assessing the damages they might take into consideration the financial position of the defendant and the condition in life of the plaintiff. Held, as before, misdirection.

Price v. Wright, 35 N.B.R. 26.

— Highway — Horse straying upon.] — The defendant's horse strayed from his field to the highway, the fence being defective, and, being frightened by a boy, ran upon the sidewalk and knocked down and injured the plaintiff. A municipal by-law made it unlawful for any person to allow horses to run at large:—Held, that the horse was unlawfully on the highway and that the defendant was liable in damages for the injury suffered by the plaintiff, the injury being the natural result of, and properly attributable to, his negligence. Judgment of a Divisional Court, I O.L.R. 412, affirmed.

—Wilfully killing a dog—Compensation to owner.]—I. On a summary conviction under Code s. 537 for wilfully killing a dog, the whole penalty, which is not to exceed $100 "over and above the amount of injury done," belongs to the Crown, and there is no jurisdiction to award damages to be paid to the owner of the dog. 2. Where the adjudication was that the defendant pay a fine of $1 and costs and further pay the owner $20 damages for the loss of the dog, the summary conviction will be amended by striking out the award of damages. 3.

An amended conviction imposing a fine of $21 is bad as not conforming with the adjudication. 4. Code s. 539, which empowers the magistrate in certain cases to award compensation up to $20 to the person aggreeved does not apply to the offence of killing a dog for which Code s. 537 provides a punishment. The King v. Cook, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 234

(P.E.I.).

-Duty of agister of animals-Exposure.] -The plaintiff, on the afternoon of the 24th April, delivered to the defendant, for agistment, a healthy colt, 10 months old; the colt died on the night of the same day or early the next morning, and the plain-tiff sued the defendant for negligence, alleging that it was improper to leave the colt in a shed for the night. The evidence showed that there were 5 degrees of frost that night:-Held, in the absence of any clear evidence as to the cause of death, and accepting expert evidence that 5 degrees of frost would not effect a 10 months old colt, that there was no negligence on the part of the defendant within the authorities reviewed in the judgment. O'Connor v. Reid, 13 W.L.R. 401.

-Maiming or wounding cattle or horses-Unauthorized castration of stray stallion.] -1. The unauthorized castration of a stallion is a damage by maining or wounding, and if done wilfully and with malicious intent constitutes an offence under Code s. 510 as to mischief. 2. Legal malice is essential to the offence of "wilful destruction or damage" of property under Code s. 510.

-Stud book-Contract-Wager.]-The parties deposited with H. $1,250, of which the defendant contributed $1,000 and the plaintiff $250, and signed a document in which it was set forth that the money was to be held by H. until the determination of the question whether a certain horse in the possession of the defendant (describing it) was the same horse as described in the British Hackney Stud Book as "Towthorpe Rupert;" the question to be decided by a re-port from that book. "Should such report show that the horse . . . be the horse described in the . . . book, the whole $1,250 shall be paid to" the defendant. "Should the said report show that the said horse . . . is not the horse described . . . in the . . . book, the said money shall be paid to" the plaintiff:-Held, a wager.

Evans v. Robert, 13 W.L.R. 380.

-Horses-Warranty as to soundness-Animals Contagious Diseases Act.]-Plaintiff sold defendant a team of horses which, it was found as a fact, were at the time of the sale inflicted with glanders, a contagious disease within the Animals Contagious Diseases Act. There was no evidence that the seller knew that the animals were so infected when sold. The horses were subsequently destroyed by the government officials, and plaintiff sued to recover the price of the same. Defendant alleged that the plaintiff warranted the horses sound, and two other witnesses testified to a conversation between plaintiff and defendant wherein plaintiff said certain horses were sound, but could not say to what horses he referred. Plaintiff denied any warranty. Defendant also pleaded that the horses were infected with glanders at the time of sale, and that the sale was, therefore, contrary to the Act above referred to, and the contract, therefore, void:-Held, that the onus of establishing a warranty being on 'the defendant, the evidence to establish it in cases such as this should be clear and unequivocal, and the corroboration herein was not sufficient to so establish a warranty. 2. That, taking into consideration the in-tention of the Act respecting Contagious Diseases of Animals and the fact that in the section in question in this case the word "knowingly" did not appear, while it was found in other sections of the Act, it was not necessary under the Act to prove knowledge of the presence of disease on the part of the seller, but any sale of diseased animals was contrary to the Act, and, therefore, the seller, being liable to a penalty thereunder, the contract was void, and the plaintiff could not recover. Nickle v. Harris, 3 Sask. R. 200.

-Trespassing animal - Eating poisoned grain - Duty of owner.]-Plaintiff, before the Herd Law came into force, permitted his horse to run at large. While so at large the horse strayed on defendant's land, which was unfenced, and then, after being driven off several times, ate of a quantity of poisoned grain and died as a result. In an action brought by plaintiff it was given in evidence that it was the custom of the country for cattle to roam at large before the Herd Law season, and it was argued that the Legislature by several laws had recognized 'such custom as modifying the common law. Judgment was given for the plaintiff, and defendant appealed:—Held, that at common law the plaintiff's horse was a trespasser, and no action lay in respect of the loss thereof. 2. That the common law cannot be deemed to be modified except by the express declaration of the Legislature, and, as by the passage of various laws affecting cattle running at large, the Legislature had recognized the law as giving no such right, the common law could only be taken as modified as expressly provided by such statutes.

—Animals running at large—Fences—Damages.]—The power of a municipal council, under sub-section (d) of section 644 of the Municipal Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 116, to pass a by-law limiting the right of a land owner to recover damages for any injury done by trespassing animals to cases in which the land is enclosed by a fence of the nature, kind and height required by the by-law, should be held to be restricted to cases in which the animals go upon the land from some adjoining land where they have a right to be, and such by-law is no protection to the owner of animals trespassing from a highway, if the council has not passed a by-law under sub-section (b) of section 643, for allowing and regulating the running at large of animals in the municipality.

Jack v. Stevenson, 19 Man. R. 717.

-Animals running at large-Damages.] Action for damages caused to plaintiff by defendant's cattle trespassing on his lands which were not fenced. Defendant relied on a by-law of the municipality, presumably passed under the powers conferred by sub-section (b) of section 643 and sub-section (d) of section 644 of the Municipal Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 116, and declaring that "it shall be lawful for any person to permit his horses or cattle . . . to at large in any season of the year to run and no one shall be at liberty to claim damages against the owner of such horses or cattle running at large or doing dam-age unless he shall have surrounded his lands and premises with a lawful fence as defined by by-law of this municipality. At the trial there was no by-law proved which showed what should constitute a lawful fence in the municipality except one which related only to barbed wire fences. Held: -that the defence failed and the plaintiff was entitled to recover.

—Breach of implied warranty—Opportunity for inspection.]—The rule caveat emptor only protects the vendor against damages resulting to him by decrease in the actual value of the articles sold, but where there is collateral damage to person or property of the purchaser occasioned by a defect in the article sold, which is known to the vendor, the rule caveat emptor will not protect him. A vendor of horses, some of which are horses affected with a contagious disease, is not liable to the purchaser for damage occasioned to the sound horses by reason of their mingling together when delivered, where the purchaser has an equal opportunity with the vendor of inspecting the animals before delivery. Collateral damages, however, which flow from the negligence of the vendor in not warning the purchaser of the existence of the contagious disease in some of the horses, such as the cost of keeping the horses in quarantine, etc., are chargeable to the vendor.

Urch v. Strathcona Horse Repository, 2 Alta. R. 183.

—Negligence—Presumption.]—The liability, under Art. 1055 C.C., of the owner of an animal arises from negligence, but such negligence is presumed and the burden is on him to rebut the presumption. The owner of a horse which takes fright and runs away is not liable for the consequences if he proves that the act was caused by a fortuitous event and without negligence on his part.

Birmingham v. Gallery, Q.R. 36 S. C. 481.

Harbouring vicious dog.]—A wiie, separate as to property, is liable for damages caused by a vicious dog belonging to her husband, and harboured at the common domicil, which is her private property, particularly when it is proved that the dog was so harboured not only without any objection or protest on her part, but with her full consent and approval, notwithstanding that she had full knowledge of the dangerous character of the dog. Hugron v. Statton, 18 Que S.C. 200.

—Injury by dog—Contributory fault—Art. 1085, C.C.]—The respondent's son, aged thirteen, was provoking or exciting a bull-dog owned by the appellant, by stamping on the floor and calling him by name, when the appellant's daughter, aged nineteen, opened the door and allowed the dog to fly at the child and bit him:—Held (affirming the judgment of the Superior Court, Trenholme, J.), that the appellant was responsible for the injuries inflicted on the boy, notwith-standing the fact that he had irritated the dog—a child of that age not being expected to show the prudence and thoughtfulness which would be expected and required from an adult under similar circumstances.

Bernier v. Genereux, 12 Que K.B. 24.

— Negligence — Pasturage of cattle.]—Although the person to whom cattle are sent for pasturage is bound to give them the care of a bon pere de famille the measure of his obligation is determined by the price paid and the custom of the locality. When such price is low it is unreasonable to demand that somebody should be constantly present in care of the cattle and if one of them disappears its owner must tand the loss unless he can prove neglicence on the part of the proprietor of the land.

Nadou v. Pesant, Q.R. 26 S.C. 384 (Cir.

—Selling animals having contagious disease.]—Knowledge on the part of the seller that the animals sold by him were affected with a contagious disease is not essential to the offence declared by sec. 7 of the Animals Diseases Act, 1903 (Can.).

—Horses stung by bees—Injury to neigh-bour—Negligence — Scienter — Danger from number and situation of bees.]-The defendant placed a large number of hives of bees upon his own land within 100 feet of the plaintiff's land. While the plaintiff was at work with two horses upon his own land the bees attacked and stung the horses so that they died, and also stung and injured the plaintiff. In an action to recover damages for his loss and injury, the jury found, inter alia, that the bees were in ordinary flight at the time of the occurrence; that they were the defendant's bees; and that the defendant had reasonable grounds for believing that his bees were, by reason of the situation of the hives, or their numbers, dangerous to persons or horses upon the highway or elsewhere than on the defendant's premises:-Held, that the doctrine of scienter, or notice of mischievous propensities of the bees, had no applica-tion, nor could the absence of negligence, other than as found by the jury, relieve the defendant; it was his right to have on his premises a reasonable number of bees, or bees so placed as not unfairly to interfere with the rights of his neighbour, but if the number was unreasonable or if they were so placed as to interfere with his neighbour in the fair enjoyment of his rights, then what would otherwise have been lawful became an unlawful act; the finding of the jury meant that the bees, because of their number and situation, were dangerous to the plaintiff; and the defen-dant was liable for the injury flowing directly from his unlawful act.

—Quasi contract—Keep of horse—Evidence of ownership.]—In order to maintain an action for the value of the keep of a horse based upon the obligation quasi e contractu to reimburse the expense incurred in the preservation of the property of another, there must be evidence adduced to show that the defendant was at the time the expense was incurred, owner of the animal in question.

Moore, 13 B.C.R. 91. —Trespassing upon public highway—Liability of owner.]—Where cattle are permitted to trespass upon the public highway, the owner is liable for damage which they may cause upon the land of an adjoining proprietor into which they stray, and in such case it is not a sufficient defence that the plaintiff's fence was not a lawful fence, or that there was a custom among the inhabitants of the district to fence against cattle Smith v. Boutilier, 42 N.S.R. 1

-Vicious animal—Liability of owner— Proof of scienter.]—Plaintiif sought to recover damages from defendant for injuries to plaintiff's ox caused by defendant's oxen which were at the time upon the public highway in violation of a by-law of the nunicipality:—Held, that without proof of scienter defendant could not be held liable.

Nass v. Eisenhauer, 41 N.S.R. 424.

—Injury by an animal—Party voluntarily in charge.]—The owner of an animal is liable in damages for an injury caused by it to a person who has voluntarily taken charge of it to lead it, if it be shown that a necessary and customary appliance for doing so, supplied by the owner, was not of sufficient strength. If the person injured, before so taking charge of the animal, saw the appliance and declared it sufficient, the case is one of contributory negligence and the amount of damages payable by the owner will be reduced accordingly.

-Action for damages — Vicious horse— Liability of owner.]—The owner of an animal is liable for the damage it causes unless he can prove that he was unable to prevent the act causing the injury. Hence, he is liable for the consequences of a bite by a vicious horse which he should have kept muzzled.

—Stud horse on hire for mares—Negligence of owner during service—Liability in damages for loss of mare.]—The owner of a stud horse on hire is bound to see that the service of mares takes place in a safe and natural manner, and, notwithstanding notice to the public that such service is at the risk and peril of owners of mares, he is liable in damages for the loss of a mare killed, while being covered, by false penetration through want of proper care by those in charge of the animals.

Robidoux v. McGerrigle, 35 Que. S.C. 174 (C.R.).

-Permitting animals to go at large-Lia-bility of owner of lands insufficiently or dangerously enclosed for injuries to animals.]-An owner of a mare allowed her to run at large, and the animal straying on to the lands of the defendant was killed, as the result of coming into contact with a single strand of barb wire stretched on posts about the defendant's property:-Held, that the plaintiff could not recover damages from the defendant, that at most the plaintiff could not stand in a better position than that of a bare licensee, and that owners of animals in this province allowing them to run at large, must take the risk of accidents from ill-constructed or insufficiently constructed fences. Semble, that the owner of unenclosed or insufficiently enclosed lands would be liable for damages resulting to estrays by reason of a dangerous trap, (e.g., an unenclosed well) on his property.

restrain waste:-Held, following Yates v. Yates (1860) 28 Beav. 637, that the periodical payments of the annuity must be treated partly as interest which the tenant for life had to pay, and partly as principal for which she would have a charge on the inheritance, in the proportion which the value of the life estate bore to the value of the reversion.

-Annuity out of revenues of sheriff's office.]-Pursuant to the terms of his appointment a sheriff and two sureties gave a bond to his predecessor in office to pay him an annuity "out of the revenues of the said office:—Held, that fees received by the sheriff as returning officer at elections of members of Parliament, and commission earned by him as assignee for the benefit of creditors, formed part of the revenues of the office, and that as far as the revenues of each year so ascertained extended, after deducting necessary disbursements connected with the office during such year, the annuity for that year was payable. Condition for payment of instalments to obligee for life and after his decease as he might direct-No direction by obligee.] -Kennedy v. McDonald, 2 E L.R. 83 (N.S.).

—Sheriff—Bond—Condition on appointment to office—Resignation of office—Re appointment.]—Plaintiff resigned his office of sheriff and defendant was appointed in his place under a commission containing a condition that he should pay plaintiff "out of the revenues of the said office" a cer-tain sum for his life. He gave a bond to the plaintiff for the due fulfilment of the condition. Finding that the revenues were not sufficient to pay the amount, defend-ant resigned his office and soon afterwards was re-appointed under a commission without any such condition. In an action on the bond, the plaintiff obtained judgment for the amount of the penal sum, and damages were assessed for the breaches up to the time of the defendant's resignation. A petition was subsequently pre-sented by the plaintiff, asking for assessment of damages for alleged breaches since the re-appointment and for execution. On the trial of an issue as to whether the plaintiff was entitled to execution for any further damages:-Held, that want of good faith was not to be imputed to the Crown who had the right to permit, and did permit, defendant's resignation, and by accepting it made it effectual, and thereby discharged the condition and all further liability on the bond; that the condition was attached to the first commission and the annuity was payable only during the occupancy of the office thereunder, and when the commission was gone there ceased to be any contract to pay it. Semble, that there was no implied obligation on the defendant's part to refrain from invoking the consideration of the Crown to relieve him from the obligation it had imposed upon him. Held, lastly, that the question was not res judicata by the principal judg-ment, and that the judgment upon the issue was appealable as a final judgment as to matters set up as a defence to further liability in respect of alleged breaches subsequent to the new appointment. I. JURISDICTION.

Right of appeal to Court of Appeal-Amount in controversy.]-Where the respondent seeks to invoke the power of the Court of Appeal under sec. 51 of the Judicature Act, the proper practice is to move the Court to quash the appeal at the earliest moment after it has been lodged. Upon the motion coming on to be heard, the Court may direct the motion to stand for argument along with the appeal. But it is equally proper, and sometimes more convenient and less expensive to the parties, to dispose of it when brought on pursuant to the notice. And where, before the time for entering the appeal for hearing at the September sittings of the Court had elapsed, i.e., on the 10th August, the respondents served notice of motion to quash, returnable on the first day of the sittings, the Court heard and granted the motion; Meredith, J.A., dissenting. International Wrecking Co. v. Lobb (1887), 12 P.R. 207, followed. Per Meredith, J.A., that, as the appellant had failed to set his proposed appeal down for hearing, there was no appeal to quash; and that, as sec. 51 does not provide for a motion to quash, the Court has no power to create a practice providing for such a motion. The appeal was from an order of a Divisional Court, and it was quashed upon the ground that the sum in controversy was less than the sum or value of $1,000, exclusive of costs: Judicature Act. sec. 76 (1) (b). And held, per curiam, that the word "costs" in that section means the costs incurred in the litigation; and, although the costs of a mortgage action stand on a different footing, speaking generally, from the costs of other actions, the costs taxed to the mortgagees by the Master, and included in his report in an action tor foreclosure, were to be excluded in ascertaining the amount in controversy upon an appeal from an order varying that -Awards of arbitrators - Dominion Railway Act.]-An appeal does not lie to the Court of King's Bench from a judgment of the Superior Court on an appeal to it, from the award of arbitrators in an expropriation matter under s. 209 of the Dominion Railway Act, c. 37, R.S.C. 1906. Vallieres v. Ontario & Quebec Ry. Co., 19 Que. K.B. 521.

-Appeal - Jurisdiction -Amount involved.]-An appeal from the judgment of a County Court Judge for the enforcement of a mechanics' lien for $172.05 was dismissed for want of jurisdiction, "the amount claimed to be owing" having been adjudged to be less than $250; s. 24 of the Mechanics' Lien Act; and there being no adjudication under s. 23. -Final judgment-Rule nisi.]-The judgment making absolute a rule nisi against a witness wno fails to appear at the trial of an action after summons, is a final judgment from which there is a right of review or appeal. The witness served with the rule nisi is not obliged to appear in person but may show cause by attorney. The witness may appeal from the judgment making the rule absolute without being obliged to appeal also from the judgment ordering the rule to issue and the delay for bringing the appeal runs from the latest judgment only.

-Jurisdiction-Order of Divisional Court on appeal from judgment of District Court.]

The Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from the order of a Divisional Court of the High Court made upon appeal from the judgment of a District Court, even where the amount involved exceeds $1,000. There is one appeal only in all cases within the jurisdiction of the District Courts. The provisions of secs. 9 and 10 of the Unorganized Territory Act and of secs. 50, 74, 75, 76, and 77 of the Judicature Act, considered.

Drewry v. Percival, 20 O.L.R. 489.

—Case stated by magistrate—Summary conviction under Provincial Act.]—The Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal, upon a case stated by a magistrate, from a summary conviction, under the Ontario Summary Convictions Act, for the contravention of a provincial statute. Under Part XV. of the Criminal Code a case may be stated for the opinion of "the court," but that means, in Ontario, the High Court of Justice: sec. 705 (b); sec. 2 (35) (a). Rex v. Henry, 20 O.L.R. 494.

Matter in controversy-Instalment of municipal tax-Collateral effect of judgment.] -In an action instituted in the Province of Quebec to recover the sum of $1,133.53 claimed as an instalment of an amount exceeding $2,000, imposed on the defendant's lands for special taxes, the Supreme Court of Canada has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal although the judgment complained of may be conclusive in regard to the further instalments accruing under the same by-law which would exceed the same by-law which amount mentioned in the statute limiting the jurisdiction of the Court. Dominion Salvage and Wrecking Co. v. Brown (20 Can. S.C.R. 203), followed.

Town of Outremont v. Joyce, 43 Can. S.C. R. 611.

-Matter in controversy-Stare decisis -Municipal by-law - Injunction - Contract -Collateral effect of judgment.] - The action was brought by the respondents and other ratepayers of the Town of Shawinigan, against the town and the hydro-electric company, to set aside a by-law of the town corporation authorizing the purchase of certain lands with an electric power house and plant from the hydro-electric company for $40,750, and for an injunction prohibiting the carrying into effect of the contract of sale. The final judgment in the Superior Court dissolved the injunction and dismissed the action, but on appeal by the plaintiffs the Court of King's Bench, 19 Que. K.B. 546, maintained the action and made the injunction permanent. On a motion to quash an appeal by the hydro-electric company to the Supreme Court of Canada:— Held, per Fitzpatrick, C.J., and Girouard, J., that the Supreme Court was competent to entertain the appeal under the provisions of s. 39 (e) of the Supreme Court Act. The Bell Telephone Co. v. City of Quebec (20 Can. S.C.R. 230) disapproved. Per Duff and Anglin, JJ.—Semble:—That the deci-sion in The Bell Telephone Co. v. City of Quebec (20 Can. S.C.R. 230) is binding authority on the Supreme Court of Canada, but this case may be decided irrespective of it. Per Idington, Duff and Anglin, JJ. (Davies, J., contra):—That, as the appeal was from the final judgment of the highest Court of final resort in the Province of Quebec in an action instituted in a Court of superior jurisdiction for the purpose of preventing the consummation of a contract for a consideration exceeding $2,000, the Su-preme Court of Canada was competent to entertain the appeal under ss. 36 and 46 of the Supreme Court Act. Per Davies, J. (dissenting) : - That the controversy related merely to the validity of the by-law and did not involve the sum or value of $2,000 that the collateral or incidental effects of the judgment were not in question on the appeal, and that, therefore, the Supreme Court of Canada was not competent to entertain the appeal. The Bell Telephone Co. v. City of Quebec (20 Can. S.C.R. 230), followed.

He was arrested, and, after a preliminary inquiry, was committed for trial. Being afterwards brought before the same magistrate under the provisions of Part LIV. of Criminal Code, he elected to be tried without a jury. Before pleading to the indictment his counsel raised a question of law and asked to have it reserved for the Court of Appeal, namely that it had not been proved that the letter he was accused of stealing (a decoy letter) was "a letter deposited in the post office," as provided by s. 326 (c) of the Code:-Held, that in order to have a case reserved for the Court of Appeal there must be a trial. a decision on a point of law and a verdict or conviction. The case was therefore remitted to the clerk of the peace, dis-trict of Quebec, for further proceedings according to law.

(c). The fact that sub-s. (f) is placed last in point of order in the section does not require the Court to construe it as indicating the latest mind of Parliament as the whole section came into force at the one time.

VII. c. 35—Mining lands.]—The Supreme Court of Canada has jurisdiction to hear appeals from the judgments of the territorial Court of the Yukon Territory, sitting as the Court of Appeal constituted by the ordinance of the Governor-in-Council of the eighteenth of March, in respect to the hearing and decision of disputes affecting mineral lands in the Yukon territory. The Governor-in-Council has no jurisdiction to take away the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada provided by 62 and 63 Vict. c. 11 of the Statutes of Canada.

Hartley v. Matson, 32 Can. S.C.R. 575.

-"Matter in dispute"-Injunction.]-The action of the company respondent was for $15,000, but the respondent subsequently consented that judgment should go for $25. In the course of the suit the respondent obtained a writ of injunction against the appellant to restrain any infringement of the respondent's rights under a patent. This injunction was maintained by the final judgment of the Superior Court, but the judgment was reversed in appeal. The respondent now moved for leave to appeal to His Majesty in his Privy Council:— Held, that the "matter in dispute" being the damages which the appellant would suffer if the respondent acted contrary to the order of the Court, and these damages being contingent and not susceptible of determination, it was impossible to say that the matter in dispute exceeded the sum or value of £500 sterling, and the case did not fall within the terms of Article 68, paragraph 3, of the Code of Procedure.

Came v. Consolidated Car Heating Company, 11 Que. K.B. 114.

—Concurrent jurisdiction — Delays — Arts. 1061-2, 1070 M.C.]—When an appeal can be taken, either in a district such as Montreal where each judicial day is a term day, or in another, such as Iberville, in which the terms are regulated by procla-mation from the Crown during certain months of the year, the appellant is en-tirely at liberty to take it, in either of the two. It is the position of the municipalities in the respective districts which governs the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court for one or the other. The delay for the filing of the writ of appeal, under art. 1070 M.C. is always an incident merely of the procedure followed, as to delays, in the district in which the appeal is brought. To hold otherwise would be to deprive the appellant of his election between the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court for the district of Montreal and that of the Circuit Court for the district of Iberville.

—Interlocutory judgment—art. 94 C.C.P.]
—An appeal lies from an interlocutory judgment maintaining a declinatory exception and transmitting the re-ord to the Court of another district. An action based on a libel and claiming damages for injuries suffered in a district other than that of actendant's domicile, and where the journal publishing the alleged libel is printed may be brought in such district.

Gosselin v. Belley, 4 Que. P.R. 233 (K.B.).

-To Supreme Court of Canada-Claim and counterclaim—Leave ex cautela.] — The plaintiff claimed $1,500 damages for delay in delivery of iron. The defendants, besides denying the charge of non-delivery in due time, counterclaimed for $1,223 demurrage. At the trial judgment was given for plaintiff for $1,000 and the counterclaim was dismissed. Upon appeal to the Court of Appeal the judgment was varied by limiting the damages to the fall in the price of iron during a considerably shorter time than that fixed in the Court below, the amount to be ascertained on a reference. Upon a motion by the defendants to allow a bond given by them as security upon an appeal by them to the Supreme Court of Canada, the plaintiff's counsel stated that the plaintiff's claim on the reference would be less than $1,000 and contended that no appeal lay:—Held, however, that as the plaintiff claimed $1,500 and was not limited by the judgment of the Court of Appeal to any particular sum, the matter in controversy on the appeal exceeded the sum of $1,000, so that the appeal lay:-Held, also, that upon the counterclaim the sum of $1,223 was involved and that an appeal lay in respect thereof. The Court of Appeal declined to grant, ex cautela, leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, the case not being one in which leave, if it were necessary, ought to be granted.

Frankel v. Grand Trunk Railway Company, 3 O.L.R. 703 (C.A.).

—Appeal from Circuit Court—Future rights —Art. 44, and 52 C.C.P.]—A judgment of the Circuit Court condemned the defendants to pay a penalty of $25, for failure to paint their poles erected within the limits of the municipality plaintiff, as provided by a by-law ordering telephone and other poles to be painted and to be kept painted thereafter:—Held, on review, (1) that the demand (which was for $50) did not relate to a matter "in which the rights in future of the parties may be affected within the meaning of Art. 44, paragraph 3, of the Code of Procedure, and therefore no appeal lay in such case to the Court of King's Bench sitting in appeal from a judgment of the Circuit Court, and consequently such judgment was not susceptible of revision by the Court of Review. (Art. 52 C.C.P.) (2) Assuming that an appeal did lie from such judgment of the Circuit Court to the Court of Review, the council of the municipality plaintiff was authorized, by the Act 59 Vict. (Q.) c. 56, s. 18, paragraph 10, to order by by-law the painting of all poles then or subsequently erected within the town, and the by-law complained of was not ultra vires.

Corporation of Coaticook v. The People's Telephone Company, 19 Que. S.C. 535.

—Judge by consent trying issue summarily—Appeal.]—Plaintiffs in County Court proceedings issued several garnishes summonses, and subsequently in Supreme Court actions indugement creditors of the defendants in the County Court actions issued attaching orders against the same garnishees. The judgment creditors in the Supreme Court actions contended that the County Court garnishee summonses were nullities, as they were issued on an affidavit which did not comply with the statute, and all the interested parties agreed that the County Court Judge might decide the matter in a summary way. He held that the County Court plaintiffs were entitled to the moneys garnished:—Held, on appeal, by the full Court, following Eade v. Winser & Son (1878) 47 L.J.C.P. 584, that the County Judge was in effect an aribitrator, and no appeal lay from his decision.

—B.C. Full Court Reference of motion for judgment to trial Judge—Jurisdiction.]—At the conclusion of the trial of an action for damages for personal injuries, the trial Judge (McColl, C.J.), did not see fit to enter any judgment on the findings of the jury, but left the parties to move the Full Court as they might be advised. Both parties accordingly moved the Full Court for judgment, the arguments being confined to the question of the liability of the defendant company:—Held, per Walkem, Drake and Irving, JJ., the Full Court is an Appellate Court only, and has no jurisdiction to hear a motion for judgment on the findings of a jury referred to it by a trial Judge. Per Martin, J. (dissenting), that as the question of jurisdiction was not raised by counsel nor by the Court, the case should be dealt with on its merits, and that judgment should be entered in favour of the defendant company.

—Interlocutory order—Varying minutes—County Judge certifying papers.]—An order oy a County Court Judge dismissing an application to vary minutes under Con. Rule 625, sub-sec. 2, is an interlocutory and not a final order. But the fact that there may be no appeal from such an order is no reason why the Judge should not certify the papers; the question whether or not there is an appeal from such an order is for the Court appealed to and such certifeate should as a rule be given upon request; the Judge's duty being ministerial only.

-Order-Refusal to set aside irregular judgment.]-An order made in an action in a County Court for service of notice of a writ out of the jurisdiction, provided that the defendant should have twelve days after service "within which to appear to notice of the writ and file his defence to the action." Within the twelve days an appearance in the usual form was entered, the following words being added: "The defendant admits only $103 but otherwise disputes plaintiff's claim in this action":-Held, that this was in effect a statement of defence; that filing was, under the order, all that was necessary, and that a judgment entered for default of defence was void. A motion by the defendant to set aside the judgment as irregular and void was dismissed by the County Court Judge, who gave the defendant leave, on payment of $5, to move on the merits for leave to defend:—Held, that this was a final order and that an appeal lay therefrom by the defendant.

—From County Courts—Order dismissing appeal from taxation of costs—Final or interlocutory.]—An order made by a judge of the County Court in a County Court action dismissing an appeal from a ruling as to the scale of costs upon taxation of the plaintiffs' costs of the action awarded by the judgment, is in its nature interlocutory and not final, within the meaning of s. 52 of the County Courts Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 55, and no appeal lies therefrom to a Divisional Court of the High Court.

Leonard v. Burrows, 7 O.L.R. 316 (D.C.).

—From Division Courts—Amount in dispute—Quashing appeal.]—The plaintiff brought an action in a Division Court for $100.75, the amount of a promissory note for $64.87 and $35.38 interest on it, and recovered a judgment for $83.90; the trial Judge finding against an alleged release set up by the defendant, but only allowing $19.13 for interest, instead of $35.38 as claimed. A motion for a new trial was refused:—Held, that "the sum in dispute upon the appeal" under s. 164 of the Division Courts Acts, R.S.O. 1897, c. 60, was $83.90, and as it did not exceed $100, a motion to quash the appeal was allowed. Lambert v. Clarke, 7 O.L.R. 130.

—Time for bringing appeal—Delays occasioned by the Court—Jurisdiction—Controversy involved—Title to land.]—An action au petitoire was brought by the city of Hull against the respondents claiming certain real property which the Government of Quebec had sold and granted to the city for the sum of $1,000. The Attorney-General for Quebec was permitted to intervene and take up the fait et cause of the plaintiffs without being formally summoned in The judgment appealed from was pronounced on the 25th of September, Notice of appeal on behalf of both the plaintiff and the intervenant was given on 3rd November, and notice that securities would be put in on 10th November, 1903. on which latter date the parties were heard on the applications for leave to appeal and for approval of securities before Wurtele, J., who reserved his decision until one day after the expiration of the sixty days im-mediately following the date of the judgment appealed from, and, on the 25th of November, 1903, granted leave for the appeals and approved the securities filed:— Held, that the appellants could not be prejudiced by the delay of the Judge in deciding upon the application, until after the expiration of the sixty days allowed for bringing the appeals, and, following Couture v. Bouchard, 21 Can. S.C.R. 281, that the judgment approving the securities and granting leave for the appeals must be treated as if it had been rendered within the time limited for appealing when the applications were made and taken en delibéré. Held, also, that as the controversy between the parties related to a title to real estate, both appeals would lie to the Supreme Court of Canada notwithstanding the fact that the liability of the intervenant might be merely for the reimbursement of a sum less than $2,000.

Attorney-General v. Scott, 34 Can. S.C.R. 282.

—Amount in controversy—Supreme Court Act, s. 29, sub-s. 4.]—Where the Court of King's Bench affirmed the judgment of the Sperior Court dismissing the action, but varied it by ordering the defendant to pay a portion of the costs:—Held, that though $2,217 was demanded by the action, the defendant had no appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada as the amount of the costs which he was ordered to pay was less than $2,000. -Right of appeal-Amount in dispute-Title to land-Future rights.]-L. had given a mortgage to the Standard Loan and Savings Co., as security for a loan, and had received a certain number of the company's shares. All the business of that company was afterwards assigned to the Canadian Mutual, and L. paid the latter the amount borrowed with interest, and $460.80 in addition, and asked to have the mortgage discharged. The company refused, claiming that L., as a shareholder in the Standard Co., was liable for its debts, and demanding $79.20 therefor by way of counterclaim. At the trial of an action by L. for a declaration that the mortgage was paid and for repayment of the said $460.80, such action was dismissed (1 Ont. L.R. 191), but on appeal the Court of Appeal ordered judgment to be entered for L. for $47.04 (5 Ont. L.R. 471). The defendants appealed to the Supreme Court:-Held, that the appeal would not lie; that no title to land or any interest therein was in question; that no future rights were involved within the meaning of sub-s. (d) of 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34: and that all that was in dispute was a sum of money less than $1,000, and therefore was not sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Court. Held, also, that the time for bringing the appeal cannot be extended after expiration of the sixty days from the pronouncing or entry of the judgment appealed from.

Canadian Mutual Loan and Investment Company v. Lee, 34 Can. S.C.R. 224.

-Right of appeal-Amount in controversy -Future rights.]-Though the amount in controversy on an appeal from the Province of Quebec may exceed $2,000, yet if the amount demanded in the action is less, the Supreme Court of Canada has no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. In an action en séparation de corps, the decree granted $1,500 per annum as alimony to the wife, and, her husband having died, she brought suit to enforce the judgment as executory against his universal legatees. Judgment having been given against her by the Court of King's Bench, she sought an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada: -Held, that the further payments to which she would have been entitled had she been successful in her suit were not "future rights" which might be bound within the meaning of R.S.C c. 135, s. 29.

Winteler v. Davidson, 34 Can. S.C.R. 274.

Right of appeal—Local improvements—Assessment—Future rights.]—In proceedings by the city of Montreal to collect the amount assessed on defendants lend, together with other lands assessed for local improvements, the defendants filed an opposition to the seizure of their land, alleging that the claim was prescribed. Held, that there was nothing in controversy between the parties but the amount assessed on defendants' land, and, that amount being less than $2,000, the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal.

On a motion to quash the appeal, the appellant filed affidavits showing that, according to the mortality tables used by assurance actuaries. upon the plaintiff's average expectation of life, the cost of an annuity equal to the pension claimed would be over $7,000:-Held, following Rodier v. Lapierre, 21 Can. S.C.R. 69; Macdonald v. Galivan, 28 Can. SC.R. 258; La Banque du Peuple v. Trottier, 28 Can. S.C.R. 422; O'Dell v. Gregory, 24 Can. S.C.R. 661, and Talbot v. Guilmartin, 30 Can. S.C.R. 482, that the only amount in controversy was the amount of the first monthly instalment of $62.50 demanded, and, consequently, that the Supreme Court of Canada had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal.

Lapointe v. Montreal Police Benevolent and Pension Society, 35 Can. S.C.R. 5.

-Amount in controversy on appeal-Retraxit.]—The judgment appealed from condemned the defendants to pay $775.40, balance of the amount demanded less $1,524.60 which had been realized on a conservatory sale of a cargo of lumber made by consent of the parties pending the suit and for which credit was given to the defendants: -Held, that as the amount recovered was different from that demanded, and the amount of the original demand exceeded $2,000, there was jurisdiction in the Supreme Court of Canada to entertain an appeal. Joyce v. Hart, 1 Can. S.C.R. 321; Levi v. Reed, 6 Can. S.C.R. 482; Laberge v. The Equitable Life Assurance Society, 24 Can. S.C.R. 59, and Kunkel v. Brown, 99 Fed. Rep. 593, referred to. Cowen v. —Final judgment—Selected item tried and remainder referred.]—In an action by executors against the appellant to recover certain sums of money due to their estate, the Judge of the Territorial Court, at the request of the plaintiffs, selected one of the items and adjudicated on the evidence taken that the action in respect thereof be dismissed:—Held, that this was, within the meaning of the Yukon Territorial Act, 1899, s. 8, a final judgment in respect thereof, notwithstanding that the remaining items in suit were referred and the costs reserved. No appeal therefrom to the Supreme Court of British Columbia lay after the expiration of twenty days.

Partial renunciation of judgment-Amount in controversy-Supreme Court Act, s. 29.]-Where a conditional renunciation reducing the amount of the judgment to a sum less than $2,000 has not been accepted by the defendant, the amount in controversy remains the same as it was upon the original demande and, if such demande exceeds the amount limited by section 29 of the Supreme Court Act, an appeal will lie. In an action for $15,000 for damages occasioned by a atmages occasioned by a nuisance to neighbouring property, the plaintiff recovered $3,000, assessed en bloc by the trial Court without distinguishing between special damages suffered up to the date of action and damages claimed for permanent depreciation of the property. Before any appeal was in-stituted, the plaintiff filed a written offer to accept a reduction of $2,590, persisting merely in $410 for special damages to date of action, with costs, and reserving the right to claim all subsequent damages, including damages for permanent depreciation, but without admitting that the damages suffered up to the time of the action did not exceed the whole amount actually recovered. This offer was refused by the defendants as it did not affect the costs and contained reservations, and an appeal was taken by them, on which the Court of King's Bench, in allowing the appeal, reduced the amount of the judgment to $410, reserved to plaintiff the right of action for subsequent special damages and damages for permanent depreciation and gave full costs against the appellants on the ground that they should have accepted the renunciation filed:—Held, Davies, J., dissenting, that the Court of King's Bench erred in holding that the defendants had no right to reject the conditional renunciation and in giving costs against the appellants; that the action should be dismissed as to the $2,590 with costs, and the reservation as to further action for depreciation disallowed, but that the judgment for $410 with costs as in an action of that class, with the reservation as to temporary damages accruing since the action, should be affirmed. As the costs at the enquête were considerably increased on account of the large amount of damages claimed, it was deemed advisable, under the circumstances, to order that each party should pay their own costs thus incurred. III. c. 20 (L.C.) by the construction of another bridge within the limit reserved, and for the demolition of the bridge, etc. The judgment appealed from dismissed the action. On a motion to quash the appeal:—Held, that the matter in controversy affected future rights and, consequently, an appeal would lie to the Supreme Court of Canada. Galarneau v. Guibault. 16 Can. with a reference to ascertain the amount due. The full Court set aside this judgment and ordered a reference to ascertain the amount due the bank and, if anything was found to be due, to ascertain the amount due to D. from the company. Having discovered that this statument was untrue they brought action for rescission of the contract to purchase and damages for the loss in operating during 1906. The judgment at the trial dismissing the action was affirmed by the Divisional Court. The Court of Appeal reversed the latter judgment, held that rescission could not be ordered but the only remedy was damages and ordered a reference to assess the amount. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada:-Held, that as it can not be ascertained from the record what the amount in controversy on the appeal was, or whether or not it is within the appealable limit, the appeal does not lie. (d) of s. 48 R.S.C. [1906] nor was "the title to real estate or some interest therein" in question under sub-s. (a). They also asked that an agreement under which the makers were to become liable for $3,000 be declared null. The two actions were tried together and judgment given for the plain tiff in the action on the note while the action in warranty was dismissed. appeal from the latter judgment:-Held, that the amount in dispute was $2,000, the value of the note sued on; that the costs of the action in warranty could not be added and without them the sum of £500 was not in controversy even if interest and costs in the main action were added; the appeal, therefore, did not lie. Held, also, that the agreement which the plaintiffs in warranty sought to void was only a collateral matter to the issues raised on the appeal and could not be considered in determining the amount in dispute. Interest after the commencement of the action, unless specially claimed as damages, cannot be added to the amount claimed in the declaration in determining the amount in controversy for the purposes of giving jurisdiction upon an appeal to the Supreme Court,

The action was dismissed, and the plaintiff, in appealing to a Divisional Court of the High Court, failed to follow the procedure prescribed by the Division Courts Act:-Held, that "the ordinary right of appeal," mentioned in s. 98 (2) of the Public Schools Act, is the right of appeal given by the Division Courts Act; and the plaintiff, not having moved for a new trial in the Division Court, as required by s. 154 of the Division Courts Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 60, could not maintain her appeal. VII. c. 42, was dismissed. On an application by the company to affirm the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Canada to hear an appeal from the judgment of the Court of Review. -Held, that the Superior Court, when excreising its special appellate jurisdiction in reviewing this case, was not a Court of last resort created under provincial legisla tion to adjudicate concerning the assessment of property for provincial or municipal purposes within the meaning of s. 41 of the Supreme Court Act, R.S. [1906] c. 139, and, consequently, there could be no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal.

—Appeal to Privy Council—Appealable amount—Amendment to statute.]—An appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada from a judgment of the Court of Review which is not appealable to the Court of King's Bench, but is susceptible of appeal to His Majesty in Council. By 8 Edw. VII. c. 75 (Que.) the amount required to permit of an appeal to His Majesty in Council was fixed at $5,000 instead of 2500 as theretofore:—Held, that said Act did not govern a case in which the judgment of the Court of Review was pronounced before it came into force.—By s. 70 of the Supreme Court Act notice must be given of an appeal from the judgment, inter alia, "upon a motion for a new trial:"—Held, that such provision only applies when the motion is made for a new trial and nothing else and notice is not necessary where the proposed appeal is from the judgment on a motion for judgment non obstante or, in St. Hilaire v. Lambert, 42 Can. S.C.R.

—Right of floating logs—Servitude—Matter in controversy.]—In the Province of Quebec the privilege of floating timber down watercourses, in common with others, is not a predial servitude nor does it confer an exclusive right of property in respect of which a possessory action would lie, and, in a case where the only controversy relates to the exercise of such a privilege, the Supreme Court of Canada has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal. the objection to the jurisdiction was not taken by the respondents in the manner provided by the Rules of Practice.

Svensson v. Bateman, 42 Can. S.C.R. 146.

P., a ratepayer of the municipality, applied for a writ of mandamus to compel the council to assess the company for school rates, which, he claimed, were not included in the exemption. The decision to grant the writ was affirmed by the Court of Appeal (20 Ont. L.R. 246, sub nom. Pringle v. City of Stratford). On motion for special leave to appeal from the latter judgment:—Held, that the case was not one of public interest, and did not raise important questions of law. It did not, therefore, fall within the principles laid down in Lake Erie & Detroit River Railway Co. v. Marsh, 35 Can. S.C.R. 197, for granting such leave.

Whyte Packing Co. v. Pringle, 42 Can. S.C.R. 691.

Special leave - "Judicial proceeding" Discretionary order — Matter of public interest - Alberta Liquor License Ordinance. 1 - Proceedings on an originating summons issued by a Judge of the Supreme Court of Alberta on an application for cancellation of a license under s. 57 of the Liquor License Ordinance, are judicial proceedings within the meaning of s. 37 of the Supreme Court Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 139, and, consequently, the Supreme Court of Canada has jurisdiction to entertain an application for leave to appeal from the judgment of the Supreme Court of Alberta thereon. Where the decisions of the provincial Court show that the Judges of that Court are equally divided in opinion as to the proper con-struction of a statute in force in the province and it appears to be desirable in the public interest that the question should be finally settled it is proper for the Supreme Court of Canada to exercise the discretion vested in it for the granting of special leave to appeal under the provisions of s. 37 of the Supreme Court Act. Girouard, J., dissented on the ground that the proceedings in question were intended to be summary and that, in these circumstances, the case was not one in which special leave to appeal should be granted.

—Application for leave to appeal.]—The Court of Appeal refused an application by the defendants for leave to appeal to that Court from the judgment of a Divisional Court, 19 O.L.R. 540, the case not presenting any good ground for treating it as exceptional, and allowing a further appeal; the amount actually involved being under $500; and the question of law not appearing to be a matter of sufficient doubt to justify prolonging the litigation.

Webb v, Box, 20 O.L.R. 220.

—Privy Council.]—The Court of Appeal for British Columbia has no power to grant leave to appeal to the Privy Council. McKenzie v. Chilliwhack, 15 B.C.R. 256, —To Supreme Court of Canada — Appeal per saltum.]—Leave to appeal direct to the Supreme Court from a judgment of a Divisional Court of the High Court of Justice under s. 26, sub-s. 3 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, cannot be granted unless it is clear that there is a right of appeal from such judgment to the Court of Appeal for Ontario.

Ottawa Electric Company v. Brennan, 31 Can. S.C.R. 311.

—Appeal per saltum—Divisional Court judgment—Constitutional question.]—Under the provisions of s. 26, sub-s. 3 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, leave to appeal direct from the final judgment of a Divisional Court of the High Court of Justice for Ontario may be granted in cases where there is a right of appeal to the Court of Appeal for Ontario, and the fact that an important question of constitutional law is involved and that neither party would be satisfied with the judgment of the Court of Appeal, is sufficient ground for granting such leave.

The Ontario Mining Company v. Seybold, 31 Can. S.C.R. 125.

—Appeal for costs—Leave to appeal—Time to inscribe appeal.]—Rule 500 of the Judicature Ordinance (C. O. 1898, c. 21), provides that "no judgment given, or order made by the Court or Judge . . . as to costs only, which by law are left to the discretion of the Court or Judge, shall be subject to any appeal, except by leave of the Court or Judge giving the judgment, or making the order." Rule 501 provides that "no appeal shall lie from the judg-men or order of the Court presided over by a single Judge, or a Judge of the Court to the Court in bane, without the special leave of the Judge or Court whose judg-ment or order is in question, unless," etc., but none of the exceptions embrace an appeal, from a judgment or order, as to costs only:-Held, that these two rules are independent of each other; that Rule 501 does not apply to an appeal as to costs; that by virtue of Rule 500, an appeal as to costs lies irrespective of any of the limitations contained in Rule 501, (1) without leave, where, by law, the costs are not—and (2) with leave, where, by law, the costs are—left to the discretion of the Court or Judge. Where, therefore, the grounds of appeal were that the Judge had ordered costs to be paid out of a fund, out of which he had no power to order them to be paid. Held, that leave to appeal was not necessary.

-Appeal to Privy Council-Opinion Court rendered under R.S.M., c. 28, not a judgment-Amount in controversy.]-Held, following Union Colliery Co. v. Attorney-General of British Columbia (1897), 27 S.C.R. 637, that the opinion of the Court (reported 13 Man. R. p. 239), rendered under R.S.M., c. 28, upon a constitutional question submitted by an Order of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, was not a judgment, decree, order or sentence with-in the meaning of the Imperial Order in Council of 26th November, 1892, relating to appeals from the Court of Queen's Bench for Manitoba, and that such Courc has no jurisdiction to grant an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council under said Order from such au opinion. Held, also, that, although it was shown that the enforcement of "The Liquor Act" would deprive the Province of a revenue far exceeding £300 per annum, and would prejudicially affect the very large investments of persons engaged in the liquor traffic, it could not be said that any questions respecting property or civil rights to the value of £300 were involved in the decision sought to be appealed from.

In re the Liquor Act, 13 Man. R. 323. (Leave to appeal was subsequently granted by the Privy Council and the judgment appealed from, 13 Man. R. 239, reversed.) Attorney-General v. Manitoba License Holders, [1902] A.C. 73.

-Leave to appeal-Promissory note signed by married woman, separate as to property.]-1. A judgment dismissing an exception to the form, in which the defendant, a married woman, separate as to property, complained of being sued alone, can be corrected by the final judgment. 2. Semble that a married woman, separate as to property from her husband, can be sued alone on a promissory note signed by her. 3. When a pleading has been dismissed upon demurrer or exception to the form and there appears to be a reasonable doubt as to the correctness of the judgment, leave to appeal will generally be accorded, almost as a matter of course; but the contrary rule prevails when it is the demurrer or the exception itself which has been dismissed.

-Acquittal by magistrate-Application by prosecutor-Criminal Code s. 744.]-A motion by the prosecutor, under s. 744 of the Criminal Code (as amended by 63 and 64 Vict. c. 46), for leave to appeal from the decision of a police magistrate acquitting the defendant of perjury, and refusing to reserve for the opinion of the Court of Appeal the questions whether there was corroborative evidence of the prosecutor in any material particular, and whether the magistrate exercised a legal discretion under s. 791 of the Code in deciding to adjudicate summarily upon the case, and had jurisdiction to try the defendant, who was a client of the county crown attorney, in the absence of counsel for the Crown, was refused, under the circumstances and for the reasons stated in the judgments.

-Leave to appeal-Grounds.]-Where a motion to quash a municipal by-law was refused by the Judge who heard it, and his order affirmed by a Divisional Court, an application for leave for a further appeal was dismissed:-Held, that under s. 77 (4) (e) of the Judicature Act, upon such an application for leave, it must appear that there is some reasonable ground for doubting the soundness of the judgment, and in addition thereto that special reasons exist for taking a case out of the general rule which forbids more than one appeal to the same party

102 (Osler, J.A.).

-Leave to appeal-Order striking out jury notice-Powers of Judge in Chambers.]-In an action of covenant upon two mortgages, the defence was that the defendant had been induced to execute them by false and fraudulent representations. The defendant filed and served a jury notice, which was struck out by a Judge in Chambers, whose order was affirmed by a Divisional Court. A motion by the defendant for leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal was refused:-Held, that the order sought to be appealed against involved no ques-tion of law or practice on which there had been conflicting decisions or opinions by the High Court, or by Judges thereof. K.S.O. 1897, c. 51, s. 77, sub-s. (4), cl. (c). The power of a Judge in Chambers to strike out a jury notice has never been doubted.

-Leave to appeal-Appeal to Court in banc from refusal of leave by trial Judge Neglect to give necessary evidence.]-The Judicature Ordinance, R.O. 1888, c. 58. s. 435, provides that "no appeal shall lie from the judgment or order of the Court presided over by a single Judge or of a Judge of the Court to the Court in banc, without the special leave of the Judge or Court, whose judgment or order is in question, unless the title to real estate, or some interest therein is affected, or unless the matter in controversy on the appeal, (in matters of contract exceeds the sum of $500, and, in matters of torts,) exceeds the sum of $200, exclusive of costs; or unless the matter in question relates to the taking of an annual or other rent, customary, or other duty or fee, or a like demand of a general or public nature affecting future rights:-Held, that, where a trial Judge had not granted leave to appeal in a case in which by virtue of this section, leave to appeal was necessary, the Court in banc has no more jurisdiction to entertain an appeal, or to give leave to appeal, even, semble, had it appeared that the Judge had said that the applicant might apply to the Court in bane for leave. Semble, where a party fails in his case by reason of his neglecting to give necessary evidence, of which at the time of the trial he had knowledge, he should be allowed a new trial to permit him to supply the evidence, only under special circumstances.

—In forma pauperis.]—While no precise or definite rule can be laid down as to the proof to be adduced in support of applications for leave to proceed before the Court of King's Bench on an appeal in forma pauperis, the Court will be more exacting in a case, like the present, where the appe ant, claiming a share of an estate, is appealing from a unanimous adverse indegment of the Court of Review and is, moreover, still capable of earning a livelihood, than it would be in an action for an alimentary allowance, or for damages by a person incapacitated for work by an accident, or where the judgment appealed from has been in favour of the party making the application.

Where a suitor, having his choice whether to appeal to the Supreme Court or to His Majesty in Council, elects the former remedy, it is not the practice to give him special leave except in a very strong case. (e) of 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, will not be granted on the ground merely that there is error in such judgment. Such leave will not be granted when it is certain that a similar application to the Court of Appeal would be refused. The Ontario Courts have held that a person acquitted on a criminal charge can only obtain a copy of the record on the fiat of the Attorney-General. S. having been refused such flat applied for a writ of mandamus which the Division Court granted and its judgment was affirmed by the Court of Appeal:—Held, that the mandamus having been granted the public interest did not require special leave to be given for an appeal from the judgment of the Court of Appeal though it might have had the writ been refused. The question raised by the proposed appeal is, if not one of practice, a question of the control of Provincial Courts over their own records and officers with which the Supreme Court should not interfere.

A by-law providing for special water rate from certain industries does not bring in question "the taking of an annual or other rent, custom-ary or other duty or fee" under s. 1 (d) of the Act (R.S. 1906, c. 149, s. 48 (d))

-Special grounds-Dissenting judgments.] -Leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 13 O.L.R. 569, was refused, the majority of the Court holding that it was not necessary to consider upon an application for leave, the question whether an appeal would lie without leave, and being of opinion that no special reasons were shown for granting leave, the circumstance that out of the nine Judges of the Provincial Courts who heard the case two dis-sented from the opinion of the majority, not being a special ground.

Lovell v. Lovell, 13 O.L.R. 587 (C.A.).

-Leave to appeal to Court of Appeal-Conflicting decisions.]—Leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal from the judgment of a Divisional Court granted in a case in which the scale of costs taxable was in question, the point being one of considerable practical importance, and there being differences of opinion in the cases already decided.

Stephens v. Toronto Railway Co., 13 C.L.R. 107.

-Leave to appeal direct from judgment at trial.]-At the time of the commencement of an action to declare void two mortgages given to secure the same debt, the amount cf the debt exceeded $1,000. Upon an application by the plaintiff for leave to appeal direct to the Court of Appeal from the judgment pronounced at the trial, it was contended by the defendant that pending the litigation moneys had been realized by him which reduced the claim below $1,000, but this was disputed by the plaintiff:-Held, that the proper conclusion was that the matter in controversy in the appeal exceeded the sum or value of $1,000 exclusive of costs, and therefore there was jurisdiction under 4 Edw. VII. c. 11, s. 76a(O.), to make the order asked for. Wade v. Elliott, 14 O.L.R. 637.

-Application for-Judgment interlocutory or final. |- When there is serious question whether a judgment is final or interlocutery, an application asking that leave be granted to appeal to the Court of Review will be allowed, because said application is a fair measure of precaution.

Teolo v. Cordasco, 9 Que. P.R. 416.

-Privy Council-Leave to appeal in criminal matter.]-Quære, whether the Judicial Committee may not grant special leave to appeal from a Canadian Court in a criminal matter notwithstanding s. 1025 of the Revised Cr. Code 1906 (s. 751 of the Code of 1892), but such leave will not be granted unless the judgment below is attended with sufficient doubt to justify the granting of special leave.

The King v. Townsend (No. 4); Townsend v. Cox, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 509.

-Leave to appeal from Divisional Court.] -Leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal from the order of a Divisional Court of the High Court affirming an order of a Judge directing judgment to be entered for the plaintiff on his claim with costs of the action and for the defendant on his counterclaim with costs thereof, was granted, under s. 76 (l) (e) and (g) of the Ontario Judicature Act, where the Divisional Court had given leave to appeal from the order, so far as it was open to that Court to do so, under s. 72 of the same Act, and the leave was sought in order to settle the question as to the proper form of judgment and as to costs where a defendant proves a set-off to an amount exceeding the plaintiff's claim, having pleaded it in form as a counterclaim.

Gates v. Seagram, 17 O.L.R. 493.

-Supreme Court of Canada-Leave to appeal-Extension of time.]-The Court of Appeal has jurisdiction, under s. 48 (e) of the Supreme Court Act, R.S.C. (1906) c. 139, to grant special leave to appeal from a judgment of the Court of Appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, and at the same time, under s. 71, to extend the time for appealing, even after the sixty days allowed by s. 69 have expired. The Court refused leave to appeal from the judgment in 16 O.L.R. 386, after the time for appeal ing had long expired, notwithstanding that an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, launched without leave, had been argued in that Court upon the merits before being quashed for want or jurisdiction.

See Grimsby Park Co. v. Irving (1908),

41 S.C.R. 35.

Irving v. Grimsby Park Co., 18 O.L.R.

-- Supreme Court of Canada—Leave to appeal—Extension of time.]—The Court of Appeal has jurisdiction, under s. 48 (e) of the Supreme Court Act, R.S.C., 1906, c. 139, to grant special leave to appeal from a judgment of the Court of Appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, and at the same time, under s. 71, to extend the time for appealing, even after the sixty days allowed by s. 69 have expired. The Court refused leave to appeal from the judgment in 17 O.L.R. 530, deeming that there were no special circumstances which would take this case out of the general rule that litigation involving no more than the sum of $1,000 should cease with the rendering of judgment by the Court of Appeal. The mere fact of a difference of opinion among the members of the Court is not, in itself, a sufficient reason for treating a case as exceptional.

Milligan v. Toronto R.W. Co., 18 O.L.R.

-Delay-Leave to appeal.]-An applica-tion for leave to appeal will be granted if made on the 31st day after delivery of judgment if the 30th day was a Sunday or holiday. Leave may be granted for appeal from a judgment dismissing a declinatory exception which judgment partially brings the litigation to an end and orders something to be done, namely the hearing of the cause, which the final judgment cannot remedy.

Porter v. Canadian Rubber Co. of Mont real, 10 Que. P.R. 197.

III. EXTENSION OF TIME.

-Refusal to extend time for appeal-No leave to appeal therefrom-Final order.]-Defendant, having given notice of an appeal from the judgment pronounced upon the trial of this action, made default in filing the appeal books within the time limited. An application was, therefore, made to a Judge for an order extending the time for filing the appeal books, which was refused. From this order the defendant appealed. On the appeal it was objected that the appeal did not lie, the order appealed from being an interlocutory order, from which no appeal lay without leave, which had not been obtained. The action involved an interest in real estate:-Held, that the fact that an interest in real estate was involved in the action did not give a right of appeal from an order in such action without leave, unless such title or interest was in question in the order appealed from. 2. That the order in question, while it might, in effect, finally dispose of the action as far as the defendants were concerned, was not thereby a final order, but was interlocutory, a final order being one made in an application which, if decided in favour of either party, finally disposes of the action, while this application, if the appellant had succeeded, would have allowed them to proceed with the action.

Newkirk v. Stees, 3 Sask. R. 208.

—Special leave—Time limit—Extension.]—
After the expiration of sixty days from the signing or entry or pronouncing of a judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, the Supreme Court of Canada is without jurisdiction to grant special leave to appeal therefrom, and an order of the Court of Appeal extending the time will not enable it to do so.

Goodison Thresher Co. v. Township of McNab, 42 Can. S.C.R. 694.

-Death of respondent-Time for appeal-Solicitor's mistake.]-Upon the death of one of several defendants to a suit in the Supreme Court in Equity the plaintiff may continue the suit by applying for administration ad litem or by application to the Equity Court under s. 116 or s. 119 of the Supreme Court in Equity Act, C.S. 1903, c. 112, and therefore where one of several defendants died after judgment of the Supreme Court en banc confirming a decree of the Equity Court dismissing the plaintiff's bill with costs, and the plaintiff delayed his appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada for eight months thereafter on the ground that no administration had been taken out:-Held, this was no excuse for the delay and the judgment of McLeod, J., refusing to allow the appeal under s. 71 of the Supreme Court Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 139, was confirmed. Held also, that the mistake of the solicitor as to the procedure on defendant's death, even though supported by opinion of counsel, was not a sufficient excuse. Per McLeod, J.:—The plaintiff (appellant) could have filed a suggestion and proceeded under s. 85 of the Supreme Court Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 139.

Harris v. Sumner, 39 N.B.R. 456.

-Appeal to Privy Council-Application for security-Record returned to the Superior Court.]-When leave to appeal to the Privy Council has been granted, but security has not been furnished within the legal delay, and no application has been made within the delay to have the same extended, a Judge of the Court of King's Bench can no longer extend the delay for putting in such security, the record having been returned to the Superior Court.

Asbestos & Abestic Company v. William Sclater Company, 3 Que. P.R. 491.

-Extension of time-Application to opposite solicitor — Unreasonable refusal -Costs.]-Rules 799 and 801, prescribing the times for filing and serving notice of appeal and serving the appeal case, enable the appellant, whenever necessary, to obtain further time from the Court or a Judge; and that being so, the solicitor requiring further time should, in general, before applying to the Court, apply to the solicitor for the respondent, explaining the occasion for it, and the latter ought, in every proper case, to grant the request: any other course of conduct only occasions unnecessary and useless costs. And where application for an extension was made to the solicitor, and, in the opinion of the Judge who heard a motion to extend the time, unreasonably refused, an order was made extending the time and staying execution, without costs to the respondent.

Extension of time—Application to opposite solicitor—Unreasonable terms—Costs.]
—Where the respondent's solicitor refused, except upon more stringent terms than the Court would impose, to extend the time for delivery by the appellant of the draft appeal case and reasons of appeal, and the appellant, declining to accept the terms, moved before a Judge of the Court of Appeal and obtained an order extending the time, the costs of such motion were mada costs to the appellant in the appeal.

—Yukon cases—Extension of time for— Security for costs—Appeal books.]—The Supreme Court of British Columbia may extend on terms the time for appealing to the Full Court from the Territorial Court of the Yukon. The respondent is entitled to a copy of the appeal book.

Banks v. Woodworth, 7 B.C.R. 385.

—Division Court appeal—Certified copy of proceedings—Filing—Notice of appeal—Extension of time—Excuse for delay.]—An order refusing a new trial of a Division Court plaint was made on the 25th August; the clerk certified a copy of the proceedings on the 29th August, and it was filed in the High Court on the 4th September; notice of appeal was not given for the October sittings of the High Court (Divisional Court); but on the 12th October, 1900, the appealure obtained an order in the Division of the High Court (Divisional Court); but on the 12th October, 1900, the appealure obtained an order in the Division or appeal was not given for the October sittings of the High Court (Divisional Court); but on the 12th October, 1900, the appellant obtained an order in the Division Court extending the time for filing the certified copy of the proceedings, and on the 17th October obtained and filed another copy, and gave notice to the opposite party of having done so and of the appeal for the November sittings:—Held, that the order extending the time was inoperative because the certified copy had already been filed; and, the delay in giving notice of appear not having been accounted for, the appeal must be quashed. Heise v. Shanks, 1 O.L.R. 48.

-Extending time for perfecting appeal-How application should be made.]-An appeal was not entered in time for the sittings of the Full Court for which the notice of appeal had been given, and on an application to the Full Court to extend the time for leave to appeal for next sitting, it was:-Held, that when the Full Court is sitting such an application is properly made to it.

Mecredy v. Quann, 9 B.C.R. 117.

-Extension of time-Jurisdiction-Security for costs-Application for-No waiver of right to object that appeal not brought in time.]-The Court has no jurisdiction to extend the time limited by s. 76 of the Supreme Court Act, as amended by B.C. Stat. 1899, c. 20, for giving notice of appeal. A respondent by applying for security for the costs of appeal does not waive his right to object that the appeal was not brought in time

Sung v. Lung, 8 B.C.R. 423.

-Appeal to Supreme Court after lapse of sixty days—Special circumstances.]—The appellant allowed the delay of 60 days, from the date of judgment rendered by the Tom the date of Jangment of Court of King's Bench, to elapse without applying for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court. Subsequently, it obtained leave to appeal to the Privy Council. It now moved for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court, and offered to desist from its appeal to the Privy Council, if the present motion was granted:-Held, that the "special circumstances" referred to in s. 42 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, are circumstances which would make it unreasonable to impute the failure to act within the prescribed time to the negligence of the party seeking the appeal, e.g., illness, absence, ignorance of the rendering of the judgment, inability owing to poverty to find sureties within the prescribed delay, but not circumstances which did not prevent the application from being made within the proper delay.

City of Montreal v. Montreal Street

Railway Co., 11 Que. K.B. 325, 5 Que. P.R.

-Extension of time-Intention to appeal -- Suspension of proceedings.] -- Upon an application to extend the time for appealing from the Court of Appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada the applicant must show a bona fide intention to appeal, held while the right to appeal existed and a suspension of further proceedings by reason of some special circumstances. No such case having been made out here, and the Court not being impressed with the merits of the defence, leave to extend the time was refused.

-Extension of time-Failure to give security in time.]-After judgment was given declaring the plaintiff entitled to the value of certain bonds, which the defendant had failed to deliver over, such value to be determined by a reference to the local Master, and after a long interval without anything having been done under the reference, it was transferred to the Master in Ordinary, and after the finding of the Master, and appeals and cross appeals therefrom, the plaintiff for the first time claimed interest on such value from the date of the breach, and moved to have the judgment amended so as to include such interest, which was disallowed, whereupon the plaintiff gave notice of appeal to the Court of Appeal, but did not furnish the necessary security until after the time for appealing had elapsed, the Court, under the circumstances, refused to extend the time for the allowance of the security, and the setting down of the appeal.

-Appeal to the Supreme Court-Security Bond-Insufficiency-Extending time.]-If a security bond given to guarantee the costs of an appeal to the Supreme Court is found insufficient by the Registrar of that Court and a delay is granted by him to furnish another bond, a Judge of the Court of King's Bench can enlarge the delays for perfecting the appeal.

Armstrong v. Beauchemin, 6 Que. P.R. 128 (Hall, J.).

-Notice of appeal-Extending time.]-Under the present practice relief will be granted against a slip in practice, such as in this instance the failure to give notice of appeal in time, whenever the justice of the case requires it, and no injury to the opposite party which cannot be compensated for by costs or otherwise has resulted. In considering what justice requires in such a case, regard is to be had to the bona fides of the applicant; the delay, whether great or trifling, as affecting the question of prejudice to the opposite party; and, especially where the appli cation is made after default, whether the appeal appears to be groundless or frivolous. Where, therefore, a bona fide intention to appeal had been made out, the points raised were open to argument, and the delay was very short, no sittings of the Court having been lost, leave to serve notice of appeal was given.

Ross v. Robertson, 7 O.L.R. 464 (Osler,

Extension of time for appeal - Creditor applying to file claim long after date of order of confirmation.]—A scheme of arrangement between a railway company and its creditors had been confirmed by order of Court after the company had complied with all the requirements of the statute and the rules of Court made thereunder, and after notice given to all parties interested. Furthermore, as the confirmation had been opposed, enrolment of the scheme and the order of confirmation was not made until the expiry of thirty days after the date of the order confirming the scheme, and after notice of the said order had been published in compliance with Rule 60 of the Rules and Orders regulating the practice of the Court. Following upon that new proceedings were taken, and an order obtained, on behalf of the company, for the sale of the railway, and it was sold thereunder. More than fifteen months after the scheme was confirmed, by a judgment of the Court, although the fact of such confirmation had become known to him some four months before he applied, a creditor of the railway applied for an extension of time for appealing from the judgment confirming the scheme. The Registrar in Chambers, in view of the facts above stated, refused the creditor's application:-Held, on appeal from the decision of the Registrar, that the application was properly refused.

No notice was given within the ten days and the Judge of the County Court subsequently made an order ex parte extending the time. The appellant failed to prorecute his ap peal within the period of thirty days prescribed by s. 33 as amended by Acts of 1901, c. 15, and a writ of prohibition was applied for:—Held, that the Judge had power on proper application to extend the time for giving notice of appeal, but that such application should be made within the period of ten days prescribed by s. 31. Also, that it was not within the power of the Judge to adjourn the matter to a date beyond the thirty days and then make an adjudication, and that the writ of prohibition should go.

And where the time for lodging a certificate had expired and no certificate had expired and no certificate had expired and no certificate had expired and set down came on for hearing, the appeal was quashed, the Court having no power to extend the time. Anderson v. Smith, 11 Que. P.R. 416.

-Not perfected-Motion to dismiss.1-Plaintiffs having given notice of appeal to the Court en banc, neglected to perfect the appeal within the time limited, and the defendant moved to dismiss. It was objected on the authority of Griffin v. Allen, 11 Ch.D. 913, that no costs of the motion should be allowed, as no gemand had been made for costs of the appeal:-Held, that Griffin v. Allen, supra, did not lay down the established practice in these matters, but merely indicated the course the Court would pursue in such cases, and no such practice having been established in this Court, the application should be allowed with costs, but the rule in Griffin v. Allen was a very proper one, and in the future the Court would not, in the absence of good cause, allow costs of an application to dismiss for want of prosecution of an appeal, unless the applicant has made a previous demand for costs of the appeal, which has not been complied with.

Wessell v. Tudge, 2 Sask. R. 231.

-Surrogate Court-Amendment of notice of appeal.]—Appellants, being dissatisfied with an order of the Surrogate Judge, gave notice of appeal therefrom "to a Judge of the Supreme Court of Saskatchewan," and of intention the property of the Supreme Court of Saskatchewan," and of intention the most of the Surrogate Court of Saskatchewan," and of intention the property of the Surrogate Court of Saskatchewan," and of intention the surrogate Court of Saskatchewan," and of intention the surrogate Court of Saskatchewan, and surrogat "to move to the presiding Judge in Chambers on." This notice was given on the last day for appealing. On the hearing of appeal it was objected that the appeal was not taken to the proper tribunal, under the Surrogate Courts Act, and on this objection being made an application was made to amend the notice:—Held, that the appeal given by the Surrogate Courts Act is to a Judge of the Supreme Court sitting in Court, and as rules have been promulgated fixing the sittings of Court for each judicial district, the appeal is to a Judge sitting in Court at such appointed times, and as the notice here evidently contemplated the Judge in Chambers as the tribunal to which the appeal was to be taken it was irregular, and no action could be taken upon it. 2. That inasmuch as the time for appeal had expired and the right of appeal was gone, no amendment could be made in the notice of appeal. 3. That in any event the subject matter in question did not exceed $200, and there was therefore no right of appeal in any case.

Where an information is laid in the name of an individual describing himself as the agent of a society named, the society does not thereby become a party to the proceedings and it has no locus standit to appeal from the justice's order dismissing the charge. 2. The notice of appeal must in such cases be taken in the name of the agent personally, otherwise it may be quashed. 3. Where a notice of appeal under the summary convictions clauses is served on the justice who tried the case, instead of on the respondent, it must show on its face that it is so served on the justice for the respondent.

Hostetter v. Thomas, 4 Terr. L.R. 224.

—Inscription in review—Return of notice of inscription.]—The fact that notice of inscription in review was served on the opposite party within the eight days allowed for making the deposit, but not returned into Court within such delay, is not a ground for rejecting the inscription, and a motion to reject such inscription will be dismissed, where it is shown that the notice, after service, has been filed on the nearest following judicial day after the expiration of the eight days.

The corporation, having returned the deposits, appealed to a Divisional Court and the plaintiff moved to quash the appeal on the ground that the corporation had accepted and acted on the judgment and that C. would not now earry out the purchase:—Held, that the mere payment of money, as directed by a judgment, is not a bar to an appeal from that judgment by the party making such payment: and mere obedience to a judgment, not such as to signify conclusive acceptance of its terms, does not destroy the right of appeal: and that here the repayments of the deposits involved nothing inconsistent with the relief, which the corporation sought upon its pending appeal and in no wise signified a conclusive submission to the judgment appealed from. Held, also, that no change in attitude upon C.'s part at this stage of the case could debar his co-defendants from taking steps by appeal to relieve themselves from an onerous judgment which they alleged had been pronounced in error.

-New trial - Surprise.] -- Defendant agreed to "feed and winter" 47 young cattle for plaintiff and to be responsible for the loss of any of the cattle in any other way than by death from ordinary disease. Twenty-nine of the cattle died and plaintiff sued for damages. At the trial, plaintiff had a verdict on the strength of evidence proving that the stable in which defendant had kept the cattle was too small for so many cattle. There was nothing in the statement of claim to inform defendant upon what grounds he was held liable, and he filed affidavits to show that he had been unable to ascertain such grounds on the examination of the plaintiff for discovery, also that the stable, which had been taken down and removed before the trial, had been of quite sufficient size to accommodate the cattle:-Held, that there should be a new trial on the ground of surprise in the evidence produced by the plaintiff as to the size of the stable. Labbah v. Kirnel, 11 Que. L.R. 153-Ct.

-Motion to adduce fresh evidence on appeal.]-A party moving the Court of Appeal for leave to adduce fresh evidence, must give notice and serve affidavits in support:-Held, in this instance, that, the party having knowledge of a fraud, and not having been reasonably diligent in exposing it at the time, he should not be assisted in doing so on appeal. A strong and clear case must be made out in order to gain such an indulgence.

Woodford v. Henderson, 15 B.C.R. 495.

-Review-Deposit-Intervention.]-A posit of $50 with the inscription in review by an intervenant is sufficient when his interest in the subject matter of the intervention does not amount to $400, and its object is to obtain a declaration that the effects seized for rent are not subject to the -Admission of fresh evidence on appeal.] —Where the order of a Court upon an appeal has not been issued, the appeal is still pending and within the control of the Court, pending and within the control of the Court, and the Court is at liberty, of its own motion or on application, to recall the opinion which has been pronounced, and, on a proper case, to admit further evidence for the purpose of the appeal, under Con. Rule 498. The rule which governs the administration was appeal in the court of the purpose of the properties of the properties of the court of t mission of new evidence upon appeal is fenced round with strict limitations. There must be no remissness in adducing all possible evidence at the trial; the new evidence must be practically conclusive; merely corroborative evidence, evidence to admit which would be merely setting oath against oath, evidence obtained under suspicious circumstances, or evidence which might merely enable an opponent's witness to be cross-examined more effectively, will not do; as a rule, the evidence must be of some fact or document essential to the case, of the existence or authenticity of which there is no reasonable doubt, or no room for serious dispute. After an order had been pronounced by a Divisional Court reversing the judgment in the plaintiff's favour of an Official Referee in an action to enforce a mechanic's lien, but before the order had issued, the plaintiff applied for leave to adduce fresh evidence to show that, by a mistake of his bookkeeper, certain items in respect of materials furnished had been charged as extras, whereas in fact the materials had been furnished under the contract. The Divisional Court allowed the evidence to be given, and, although it had always been in the possession of the plaintiff, there being no suspicion of bad faith, credited it, recalled the order pronounced, and substituted an order affirming the judgment of the Referee-the evidence being conclusive upon the question involved in the appeal:-Held, that the discretion of the Court was properly exercised. Order of a Divisional Court, 19 O.L.R. 428, affirmed. Rathbone v. Michael, 20 O.L.R. 503 C.A.

-New trial-Misdirection as to contributory negligence-Practice-Judge's charge not excepted to at the trial or in first appeal.]-In an action for damages for the death of the appellant's son while acting as engineer of the respondents' lumber train the respondents were charged with negligence in respect to the train having been equipped with defective brakes and an incompetent brakesman, while the deceased was charged with contributory negligence in jumping from the train. The jury found for the appellants, but a new trial was ordered by the Supreme Court. One Judge was dissatisfied with the verdict on the ground of misdirection in regard to contributory negligence, and another Judge held, contrary to both his colleagues, that the damages were excessive:—Held, that the order must be reversed. It was too late for the respondents to rely on misdirection which they had not excepted to at the trial or in the notice of appeal or in oral argument before the Supreme Court. There were no sufficient grounds for a new trial on the head of excessive damages.

—Conditional allowance of—Reduction of damages — Election — Further appeal.]— After the plaintiff's damages had been assessed by a jury, the trial Judge dis-missed the action. The plaintiff appealed, and the Court of Appeal ordered that, if the plaintiff elected to reduce the damages assessed by the jury, her appeal should be allowed with costs, and judgment entered for her for the reduced amount with costs, or otherwise that there should be a new trial:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have a clause inserted in the order of the Court protecting her, in the event of an appeal by the defend-ant to the Supreme Court of Canada, against her election to reduce the damFahey v. (2) It was running at too great speed. The Judge at funning at too great speed. The sough at the trial charged the jury, in case they found for plaintiff to state what negli-gence they pointed to. The jury found the company responsible (1) Because the ear was on the wrong track according to the general custom. (2) The motorman and his appliances were on the rear instead of at the front, the car being reversed. A verdict was entered for plain-Appeal the company claimed that the verdict was special and reasons should not have been given but only facts stated from which the Court could decide. The Court of Appeals sustained the verdict, holding that it was general not special. The company appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada:—Held, that the question whether the verdict was general or special was a matter of procedure only in which the Court would not interfere. Appeal dismissed with costs.

—Reversal of trial Judge's finding of fact.]

—Upon an appeal from the findings of a Judge who has tried a case with the intringing the Court appealed to does not and cannot abdicate its rights and its cuty to consider the evidence. And if it appear from the reasons given by the trial Judge that he can be a suitable to consider a material.

part of it, and the evidence which has been believed by him, when fairly read and considered as a whole, leads the appellate Court to a clear conclusion that the findings of the trial Judge are erroneous, it be-comes the plain duty of the Court to reverse the findings. In an action to recover damages for the destruction of property of the plaintiff by fire alleged to have been started by sparks from a locomotive of the defendants, the trial Judge (MacMahon, J.), found in favour of the plaintiffs:— Held, by a Divisional Court, reversing the finding, which was based upon a misapprebension of the evidence, that the plaintiffs had failed to meet the onus cast upon them by the law to prove that the fire which caused the damage came from the defendants' engine. In every case there must be evidence from which it can fairly be in-ferred not simply guessed, that the damage was caused by the defendant.

-Motion for new trial-Verdict against weight of evidence.]-A new trial will not be granted on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence if the verdict was one which the jury, acting as reasonable men, could have found. McLeod v. White, 39 N.B R. 32.

-New trial - Misdirection - Questions for jury.]-An order for a new trial should not be granted merely on account of error in the form of the questions submitted to the jury where no prejudice has been suffered in consequence of the manner in which the issues were presented by the charge of the Judge at the trial and the jury has passed upon the questions of substance. The judgment appealed from (18 Man. R. 134) was affirmed.

Winnipeg Electric Railway Co. v. Wald, 41 Can. S.C.R. 431.

-Court of Review-Reduction of damages.]-There can be no appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from a judgment of the Court of King's Bench, appeal side, quashing an appeal from the Superior Court, sitting in review, for want of juris-diction. City of Ste. Cunégonde v. Gou-geon, 25 Can. S.C.R. 78, followed. In an action for damages where the plaintiff obtains a verdict at the trial and the Court of Review reduces the amount awarded thereon the judgment of the Superior Court is confirmed and, therefore, no appeal lies to the Court of King's Bench, but there might be an appeal from the judgment of the Court of Review to the Supreme Court of Canada. Simpson v. Palliser, 29 Can. S.C.R. 6, distinguished.

Hull Electric Co. v. Clement, 41 Can. S.C.R. 419.

-New trial-Counsel reading judgments to jury.]-At the trial the plaintiff's counsel was allowed, subject to objection, to read as a part of his closing address a judgment on a former motion for a new trial in this cause delivered in this Court, and also a judgment delivered on appeal in the Su-preme Court of Canada. These were both dissenting judgments, they dealt with the same facts and expressed opinions on the facts, but covered a wider range of questions than those on which this jury was asked to find; the trial Judge expressed his opinion that the jury could not have been biased by the reading of these judgments; this was the third trial of the cause and at each trial the plaintiff had a verdict, and the weight of evidence was in favour of the findings of the jury:-Held, that while it was improper to allow the judgments to be read, yet under the special cir-cumstances this was not a ground for a new trial. Held, also, that the objection was cured by section 376 of the Supreme Court Act, C.S. (1903) c. 111, as no substantial wrong or miscarriage of justice had been thereby occasioned.

Harris v. Jamieson, 39 N.B R. 177.

Question of fact-Conflicting evidence.1-Bent v. Morine, 3 E.L.R. 108 (N.S.).

-Appeal on questions of fact-Judge's charge.]-Where disputed questions of fact are left to the jury, and the Judge's charge distinctly leaves the matter to them to find for the plaintiff if they believe his evidence, and for the defendant if they believe the defendant's evidence, and there is evidence to support a finding either way, the verdict will not be disturbed on appeal. Brenan v. Hopkins, 39 N.B.R. 236.

VIII. EFFECT.

-Certificate of judgment-Stay of proceedings.]-After the decision of the Court of Appeal has been certified by the Registrar, the case is no longer pending in that Court, and, by Rule 818, the subsequent proceedings are to be taken as if the decision had been given in the Court below. A Judge of the Court of Appeal has, therefore, no power, under the Judicature Act, R.S.O. (1897), c. 51, s. 54, or 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, s. 1 (D.), or otherwise, after certificate, to make an order staying proceedings upon the judgment pending a proposed application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Rev v. Beamish, 8 B.C.R. 171 (Walkem, J.).

—Appeal to Privy Council—Stay of execution.]—A Judge in Chambers of the Supreme Court of Canada will not entertain an application to stay proceedings pending an appeal from the judgment of the Court to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Adams & Burns v. Bank of Montreal, 31 Can. S.C.R. 223.

-Effect of allowing appeal-Non-appealing party-Costs.]-Action to restrain a township corporation and a contractor from constructing a drain authorized by by-law of the township. The judgment of the High Court granted an injunction against and ordered costs to be paid by both defendants, and ordered the corporation to indemnify the contractor if he paid them. The corporation appealed to the Court of Appeal, making the contractor a respon-dent; the latter appeared at the hearing of that appeal, but did not himself appeal. The appeal was allowed with costs:-Held, that the result of allowing the corporation's appeal was that, as the plaintiff's right to recover against the contractor depended upon his right to recover against the corporation, the action must be dis-missed as against both defendants, but the contractor could have no costs of the appeal:—Semble, that he should have his costs below against the plaintiff.

Challoner v. Township of Lobo et al. (No. 2), 1 O.L.R. 292 (C.A.).

—Removing stay of execution—Rule 827—Discretion—Grounds for removal.]—An appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from an order of a Judge thereof, in Chambers under Rule 827, directing that the execution of the judgment appealed from shall not be stayed pending the appeal. Such an order is not a purely discretionary one; a proper case must be out for allowing the respondent to enforce what has not yet become a final judgment, the appeal being a step in the cause. A Judge in Chamberr having ordered the removal of the stay upon the ground that the appellants' financial position was weak, his order was reversed by the Court, where the appeal appeared to be prosecuted in good faith, and on substantial grounds, and the effect of the execution would practically be to close up the business of one of the appellants.

-Stay of reference pending appeal—Ruling of Master in Ordinary—Appeal from.]

-A judgment directed the Master in Ordinary to make partition of lands; ordered that the parties should execute and deliver all necessary conveyances, to be settled by the Master, and should give possession to each other in accordance therewith; and directed the Master to ascertain the plaintiff's damages for ouster, mesne profits, and waste. The defendants ap-pealed from the judgment of the Court of Appeal, and gave the security provided for by Rule 826:-Held, that the reference was stayed pending the appeal. Construction and application of Rules 827 and 829. The ruling of the Master that the reference was not stayed was a ruling upon a question of practice, and therefore came within the exception in s. 75 (2) of the Judicature Act R.S.O. (1897), c. 51; and an appeal from his ruling lay to a Judge in Court. Monro v. Toronto Ry., 5 O.L.R. 15.

—Stay of proceedings—Appeal to Privy Council.]—The Superior Court cannot, on the mere affirmation of a party that he intends to apply to His Majesty's Privy Council for leave to appeal from a final judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada, suspend the execution of said judgment.

—To Supreme Court (Can.)—Stay of proceedings.]—Upon giving the security prescribed by s. 46 and sub-clause (e) of s. 47, defendants are entitled to a stay of proceedings in respect of the plaintiffs' whole judgment, including the costs of the action.

Eggleston v. C.P.R. (N.W.T.), 1 W.L.R. 570 (Scott, J.).

—Appeal from order for new trial—Security on appeal—Stay of trial.]—A new trial having been ordered by a Divisional Court, the plaintiff gave notice of trial, but the defendants appealed to the Court of Appeal from the order directing the new trial, and gave the security required by Con. Rule 826, which was duly allowed:—Held, that the order for a new trial was "a judgment or order appealed from," within the meaning of Con. Rule 827 (1), and the security for the appeal having been allowed, the execution thereof, by proceeding to a new trial or otherwise, was stayed pending the appeal, by the force of that rule, such judgment or order not being one of the excepted cases mentioned in the Rule. The Rule is not confined to a case of a judgment or order directing the payment of money, but extends generally to all appealable judge.

ments or orders which are to be "executed" by proceedings to be taken thereunder or in consequence thereof. In a proper case the stay may be removed and permission given to proceed to trial notwithstanding the appeal; but as a general rule such permission ought not to be granted; and in this case it was refused. Uylaki v. Dawson, 10 O.L.R. 683.

—Judgment for part of claim—Execution—Inscription in review by plaintiff—Acquiescence.]—The issue of a writ of execution or a saisie-arret by the plaintiff whose action has been maintained in part only does not annul the inscription in review by the plaintiff, especially when, in the flat and execution, he states that it is issued "without prejudice and under reserve of plaintiff's inscription in review fyled herein." Quaere. Can a plaintiff who has inscribed in review from a judgment for part of his claim only, execute said judgment, from which defendant has not appealed, for the part in his favour!

—Appeal to Privy Council—Stay of proceedings.]—The judgment of the Court of Review dismissing an action to set aside the will of plaintiff's husband having been reversed by the Supreme Court of Canada the plaintiff brought an action for partition of the property of a partnership of which her husband was a member:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to an order staying the proceedings in said action for partition until an application for leave to appeal from the judgment of the Supreme Court to the Privy Council had been heard and decided.

Cardinal v. Picher, Q.R. 26 S.C. 523 (Sup. Ct.).

—Appearance — Withdrawal of — Conditional appearance.]—An application by a defendant resident in Montreal, in an action brought in Ontario on two promissory notes payable, if at all, in Montreal, to withdraw his appearance and enter a conditional appearance, was refused, it having been shown that the defendant had not only appeared, but had also successfully resisted a motion for immediate judgment on material alleging his intention to counterclaim to have a partnership between the plaintiff and himself in Ontario wound up. Croil v. McCullough, 11 O.L.R. 282 (M. G.).

ARBITRATION AND AWARD.

Liability for tort—Agreement to refer—Refusal of arbitrator to act.]—An agreement between a contractor about to build and the occupant of neighbouring premises, for the payment of damages, to be ascertained by arbitration, likely to be caused by the works, does not relieve the contractor from liability as for tort, and if no arbitration is had in consequence of his arbitrator's refusal to act, an action to recover the damages lies de plano.

Rosenveesen v. Thackeray, 38 Que. S.C.

-Oral submission and award-Irregularity -Absence of prejudice.]-The plaintiff sued in the District Court for $12, the amount of an award, the action being brought under the small debt procedure. The plaintiff found cattle upon his land, doing damage, and impounded them. The cattle in fact belonged to the defendant's mother, but it was not shown that the defendant had not some interest in them; and he, in order to have them released from the pound, signed a written undertaking to pay for the damage done by the cattle on the plaintiff's land. He also agreed orally to an arbitration, and the damages were assessed, by an award (not in writing) of 3 men, at $12. The defendant was not present when the 3 men inspected the land and made their award, nor was he notified:-Held, that the undertaking was signed by the defendant for good consideration; and he was personally responsible to the plaintiff for unascertained damages; that there was an oral submission to arbitration; that the procedure under it by the plaintiff and the arbitrators was irregular, but the defendant was not prejudiced by it, the award being a fair one; that the submission, not being in writing, was not governed by the Arbitration Ordinance; that the oral submission was valid, and so was the award; that the award made the damages a debt, and so within the small debt procedure; and the plaintiff was entitled to judgment. Erbach v. Bender, 14 W.L.R. 720.

—Award made by Judge—Enforced statutory arbitration.]—H. attempted to appeal to the Court en bane from an award made by Harvey, J., under the provisions of the Edmonton charter, fixing compensation for lands expropriated. The charter gives no appeal and makes no reference to the Arbitration Act:—Held, that the award was not an order of a Judge within the meaning of c. 7 of the statutes of 1908, "An Act respecting the Enforcement of Judges' Orders in Matters not in Court;" that the Arbitration Act does not apply to an enforced statutory arbitration, the charter not declaring that the proceedings under it shall be deemed a submission; and that no appeal lay by virtue of these statutes or otherwise to the Court en bane. Semble, that the only method by which H. could impeach the award was by action based upon the equitable grounds of fraud, misconduct, or mistake.

-Agreement-Set-off for deficiency-Arbitration condition precedent to right of ac-tion.]-In an agreement between the parties for the purchase and sale of a logging plant, one of the provisions was: "The said parties of the first part further guarantee that the balance of the assets of the said Company are truly and correctly set forth in the said schedule, and if upon investigation and examination it turns out that the said assets or any of them are not forthcoming and cannot be delivered, the value of said deficiency shall be estimated by three arbitrators . . . and the amount of the award of the said arbitrators shall, in the manner hereinbefore mentioned, be deducted from the said purchase-money still owing and unpaid under this agreement":—Held, on appeal (affirming the judgment of Clement, J.), that the holding of an arbitration to determine any deficiency was a condition precedent to the claiming of any set-off against the purchase-price.

—Order for enforcement of award—Appeal from—Objections to award.]—Upon appeal from an order granting one of the parties to an arbitration leave to enforce an award:

Re Mitchell and Mitchell, 14 W.L.R. 701.

—Failure to attend after notice.]—On motion to set aside an award it appeared from the affidavits before the Court that one of the parties to the arbitration, anticipating an award against him, purposely absented himself from the final meeting of arbitrators, at which a conclusion was to be arrived at, and connived with one of the arbitrators to do the same, with the view of preventing the holding of the meeting, of which both had notice, and thereby preventing the making of an award:—Held, that it was not open to such party to complain of the award made by the two remaining arbitrators in the absence of himself and the arbitrator who abstained from attending at his instance.

Lesser v. Cohen, 44 N.S.R. 132.

Case stated by arbitrators - Time - Remission to arbitrators.]—An application to the Court by one of the parties to an arbitration, under s. 41 of the Arbitration Act R.S.O. (1897), c. 62, for an order directing the arbitrators to state a case for the opinion of the Court as to the admissibility and relevancy of evidence before them must be made before the execution of the award, and it is too late for them to state a case under that section after the award is made. The Court will not remit the matter to the arbitrators for reconsideration on the ground of mistake unless the mistake appears on the face of the award. or unless the mistake is admitted by the arbitrators. Where after an award was made two of the arbitrators certified that they had admitted and considered certain evidence, the admissibility of which they considered doubtful, the Court refused to remit under s. 11 of the above Act the matters in question in the arbitration.

—Time for making award—Power to extend—N.S. Acts of 1895, c. 7, s. 2, sub-sec. (e).—By the terms of an agreement for submission to arbitration the matters in difference between the parties were referred to the award, etc., of M. and B., and in case they disagreed, or failed to make their award before the 1st day of August, then next, then to the award, etc., of such umpire as said arbitrators should nominate and appoint, "so as the said arbitrators or umpire do make and publish his and their award ready to be delivered on or before the 10th day of August next, or on or before any other day to which said arbitrators or umpire shall, by writing indorsed by these presents, enlarge the time for making such award or umpirage." On the 29th July the arbitrators appointed J. as umpire, and on the same day, by indorsement on the award, extended the time for making the award by the arbitrators from the 1st to the 25th August, and for the umpire from the 10th to the 30th August. On the 25th August the arbitrators further extended the time for making the award by the arbitrators to the 10th September, and for the umpire to the 20th September. On the 20th September the umpire extended the time for making his award to the 30th September, and on that date he again extended the time to the 10th October. On the 7th October he made and published the award on which plaintiff's action was brought:-Held, per Ritchie, J., Graham, E.J. concurring, that, under the terms of the agreement, the power of the arbitrators to consider and deal with the questions submitted absolutely terminated on the 1st of August, after which date the umpire was the only person who had authority to make an award. Held, also, that the arbitrators had no authority to extend the time within which the umpire could make his award, and that as such time, if not legally extended, expired on the 10th August, and the umpire did not attempt to extend it until the 20th September, the award made by him was irregular and void, and plaintiffs could not recover. Held, also, that the provisions of the Arbitration Act, Acts of 1895, c. 7. s. 2, sub-sec. (e) were not applicable, a contrary intention being expressed in the submission, which fixed the date before which the arbitrator was to make his award or extend the time. Held, also, that the section, if applicable, would not assist plain-tiff, as the umpire did not begin to extend the time until September 20th, and the authority of the arbitrators had terminated more than a month previously. Per Meagher, J., McDonald, C.J., concurring. Held, that the power of the arbitrators to make their award, and consequently their authority to extend the time for doing so, did not terminate until they disagreed upon the terms of the award, and, in the absence of evidence to show when this disagreement occurred, the enlargement of time made by them was valid. Held, also, that it must appear from some clear term or exrression that it was intended to exclude the provisions of the Arbitration Act from the submission. Held, also, that, under the terms of the Arbitration Act, the umpire had one month after the original or extended time for making the award of the arbitrators, in which to make his award, and that, as he had made it within that time, it could not be said that he had no authority to do so.

Holmes v. Taylor, 33 N.S.R. 415.

-Appointment of third arbitrator by first two named—Injunction—Grounds of objection-Onus.]-Certain rights and easements of plaintiffs were expropriated by the L. Gas Co. under an Act of the legislature enabling the company to make such expropriation, and providing for the determination of the amount of remuneration to be paid by arbitration. Plaintiffs appointed C. to be one of the arbitrators, and the company appointed D. Plaintiffs claimed a declaration that D., who was alleged to have been agreed upon by C. and B., as the third arbitrator, was not duly appointed, and an injunction to prevent him from acting (1) because the appointment of D. was not agreed to by C.; (2) because the appointment was not made in writing; and (3) because the appointment, if agreed to by C. in the first in-stance, was revoked by C. withdrawing his consent thereto before action brought: -Held, 1. The onus of establishing the grounds relied upon was upon plaintiffs.
2. The question as to whether C. did or did not assent to the appointment of D. was one of fact, and the finding on the point being adverse to plaintiffs, and the weight of evidence being in favour of the finding there was no reason for setting it aside. 3. In the absence of anything to require the appointment of the third arbitrator to be made in writing the same law would govern as in the case of the appointment of an umpire under a submission, which may be made by parol if no particular mode of appointment be prescribed. 4. D. having been appointed and having consented to act his appointment could not be revoked by subsequent dissent of the parties.

Where a submission provides that the reference shall be two arbitrators, the Arbitration Act, R.S.O. (1897), c. 62, s. 8 (b), gives power to the party who has appointed an arbitrator (if the other makes default as specified) to appoint that arbitrator as sole arbitrator; and it is provided that the Court or Judge may set aside any such appointment:— Held, that notice of the appointment of the sole arbitrator should be given to the party in default, who, if not notified, is not called upon to move against the appointment. Held, also, that the agreement was not to be read as suspending the choice of a third arbitrator till there should be a dispute, but it imported that the three arbitrators should act from the outset; and therefore, s. 8 (b) did not apply.

Plaintiffs appointed C. to be one of the arbitrators, and the company appointed B. Held, that the question as to whether C. did cr did not assent to the appointment of D. was one of fact, and, the finding of the trial Judge on the point being adverse to the plaintiffs, and the weight of evidence being in favour of the finding, there was no reason for setting it aside. If the period fixed has expired without any report having been made, the submission becomes inoperative, and the Court cannot thereafter grant an extension of the delay. Beaudoin v. Dubrule, 200 Que. S.C. 575 (Davidson, J.).

—Jurisdiction of arbitrators—Deed of Submission—Construction.]—By agreement of submission dated April 10th, 1893, the provinces of Ontario and Quebec referred to a statutory tribunal the "ascertainment and determination of the amount of the principal of the Common School Fund and the method of computing" interest thereon and of the amount for which Ontario was liable. That fund was established by Canadian Act (12 Vict. c. 200), and consisted (inter alia) of the proceeds of public lands received by Ontario and paid to the Dominion:—Held, that a claim by Quebec that Ontario should be debited with uncollected prices of land sold by it, being a claim for wilful neglect and default and in the nature of damages, not suggested in but heterogeneous to the matters actually specified in the submission was not on its true construction included therein.

Attorney-General for Ontario v. Attorney-General for Quebec (1903), A.C. 39.

—Stating case—Matter "arising in the course of the reference"—Revoking submission—Arbitration Act.] — Arbitrators were appointed under the arbitration clause in an agreement between two companies, whereby, inter alia, one agreed to provide the other daily with a certain quantity of cordwood, which the latter agreed to carbonize into charcoal, and to deliver to the former to the maximum quantity of $5,000 bushels per month. The arbitration clause provided that "in case of any dispute . . . arising between the parties in regard to the meaning or construction of this agreement.

or of the mutual obligations of the parties . . . or of any other act, matter or thing relating to, or concerning the carrying out of the true spirit, intention, or meaning of these presents, the same shall be determined by arbitration." Disputes arising between the parties, one of the claims referred to the arbitrators was for damages for alleged short delivery of charcoal, such shortage being claimed whatever the proper construction of the agreement in that regard. On application by one of the parties, under s. 41 of the Arbitration Act, R.S.O. (1897), c. 62, for a direction to the arbitrators to state a special case as to what was the true construction of the contract as to the amount of charcoal called for per month under it-a matter upon which they had reached and announced a conclusion:-Held, this was a question of law "arising in the course of the reference" within the meaning of the said section, and a special case might properly be directed as to it. Held, also, that a special case having been directed as to this, the principal question, it might properly be made to include two other questions in dispute, though had they been the only questions which the applicants desired to have stated, it would not have been proper to direct the case as to them. A party to a reference is not entitled ex debito justitia to have a special case directed whenever a question of law arises in the course of a reference. This is a matter resting in the discretion of the Court. There is no general rule that where the arbitrators are specially qualified to decide the question of law, this direction should not be given, at all events where the arbitrators have ruled upon the question. Semble, that different considera-tions apply to the exercise of the discretion to give leave to revoke a submission (R.S.O. 1897, c. 62, s. 3), a discredith, J.).

-Landlord and tenant-Valuation buildings-Extension of time for making award-Interest. |-- By a lease made on the 1st November, 1879, land was demised for a term of twenty-one years, and it was agreed that all the buildings on the land at the end of the term should be valued by valuators or arbitrators, and that the reference should be made and entered on and the award made within six months next preceding the 1st November, 1900; and it was further agreed that within six months from that day the value of the buildings found by the arbitrators should be paid by the lessors, with interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum from that day, and that until paid it should be a charge on the land. By deed, dated the 23rd October, 1900, the parties agreed that the time for making the award should be extended to the 1st December, 1900, and until such further day as the valuators or arbitrators might extend the same. The time was duly extended until the 30th November, 1901, on which day an award was made fixing the value of the buildings. Possession of the lands and buildings were given up by the lessees to the lessors on the 31st October, 1900:—Held, Osler, J.A., dubitante, that, supposing the extension of time and delay to have been agreed to for the convenience of both parties and without the fault of either, the lessees were entitled to interest on the value of the buildings from the 31st October, 1900, to the 30th November, 1901, for the first six months at seven per cent., and for the remainder of the time at the legal rate of five per cent. Toronto General Trusts Corporation v. White, 5 O.L.R. 21 (C.A.).

—Submission—Appointment of sole arbitrator—Arbitration Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 62, s. 8—Appeal.]—A submission contained in a policy of insurance provided "that, if any difference shall arise in the adjustment of a loss, the amount to be paid . . . shall be ascertained by the arbitration of two disinterested persons one to be chosen by each party, and, if the arbitrators are unable to agree, they shall choose a third, and the award of the majority shall be sufficient ":—Held, reversing the decisions of a Divisional Court, 3 O.L.R. 93, and of Street, J., 2 O.L.R. 301, that the submission was not one providing for a reference "to two arbitrators, one to be appointed by each party," within the meaning of the Arbitration Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 62, s. 8, and, therefore, one party having failed, after notice from the other, to appoint an arbitrator, the other could not appoint a sole arbitrator. Re Sturgeon Falls Electric Light and Power Co. and Town of Sturgeon Falls (1901), 2 O.L.R. 585, approved. Held, also, that the order of Street, J., dismissing an application to set aside the appointment of a sole arbitrator, was not made by him as persona designata, but was a judicial order from which an appeal lay.

S. 45 of the Act does not apply to such an application, but only to applications to set aside awards. An order under s. 13 is necessary when the reference has been made out of Court. —Making award a judgment—King's Bench Act, Rules 754-764—Arbitrators delegating their duty to third person.]-Plaintiff's action was to recover a balance on a building contract, alleging completion. Defendant denied completion and counterclaimed against plaintiff on several grounds. After the record had been entered for trial the parties entered into an agreement to refer to two named arbitrators and a third one to be appointed by the latter " all matters whatsoever in dispute " between them. The arbitrators thus appointed having made their award in plaintiff's favour, he moved, under Rules 754-764 of the King's Bench (Act Man.) to have the award made a judgment of the Court:-Held, dismissing the motion with costs, that the award was bad on the following grounds:-1. It showed on its face that the work under the plaintiff's contract had not been completed, so that the plaintiff was not entitled to re-cover anything at all in this action. 2. From evidence taken on the hearing of the motion it was clear that the arbitrators had not taken into consideration 'all matters whatsoever in dispute," but had failed to deal with a number of such matters which had been brought to their attention, 3. The arbitrators had attempted to delegate to another person unascertained) their authority to decide whether the sum of $110, part of the amount awarded, should or should not be paid.

Blakeston v. Wilson, 14 Man. R. 271 (Richards, J.).

-Setting aside award-Misconduct of arbitrator-Waiver.]-A party to an arbitration does not waive his right to object to an award on the ground of misconduct on the part of an arbitrator by failing to object as soon as he becomes suspicious and before the award is made; he is entitled to wait until he gets such evidence as will justify him in impeaching the award. Where two out of three arbitrators go on and hold a meeting and make an award at a time when the third arbitrator cannot attend, it amounts to an exclusion of the third arbitrator and the award is invalid. A party by attending at such a meeting and not objecting (although he knew of the third arbitrator's inability to attend) does not waive his right to object afterwards. Per Hunter, C.J.:-It is not necessary that there should be absolute proof of misconduct before an award will be set aside on that ground; it is enough if there is a reasonable doubt raised in the judicial mind that all was fair in the conduct of the arbitrators.

In Re Deborer and Megaw's Arbitration,

-Arbitration Ordinance-Remission for reconsideration refused-No authority to appoint new arbitrator.]—Sec. 11 of "The Arbitration Ordinance" provides that "In all cases of reference to arbitration the Court or a Judge may from time to time remit the matters referred or any of them to the reconsideration of the arbitrators or umpire." Remission was refused because after the submission was entered into one of the arbitrators commenced an action against the party who had nominated him to recover an amount agreed to be paid for procuring settlement of the matters in dispute. Where the instrument of submission names the arbitrators the Court or Judge has no power to appoint a new arbitrator in lieu of one who has become incompetent.

-Disinterested party - Ratepayer of town.]—By the Acts of 1902, c. 80, the town of Glace Bay was empowered, for the purpose of obtaining a water supply, to enter upon any lands in the county of Cape Breton, and it was provided that the damages, if any, payable to the owner of such land, should be determined by arbi-Objection was taken to the tration. award of damages on the ground that C. F., one of the arbitrators appointed under the Act, was not a disinterested party, he having been assessed as a ratepayer in the town:--Held, dismissing with costs the appeal from the decision of Townshend, J refusing a writ of certiorari. (a) That if the arbitrators were acting in a judicial capacity, e 39, R.S. applied and the fact of one of the arbitrators being a ratepayer afforded no valid objection to the award made by him. (b) That if the arbitrators were not acting in a judicial capacity a writ of certiorari would not lie to remove into this Court any award made by them. Rex v. Town of Glace Bay, 36 N.S.R. 456.

-Setting aside award-Misconduct of arbitrator-Partiality-Evidence - Jurisdiction of majority-Decision in absence of third arbitrator.]—A reference under the British Columbia Arbitration Act authorized two out of three arbitrators to make the award. After notice of the final meeting the third arbitrator failed to attend, on account of personal inconvenience and private affairs, but both parties appeared at the time appointed and no objections were raised on account of the absence of the third arbitrator. The award was then made by the other two arbitrators present:-Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (10 B.C.R. 48), that under the circumstances there was cast upon the two arbitrators present the jurisdiction to decide whether or not, in the exercise of judicial discretion, the proceedings should be further delayed or the award made by them plone in the absence of the third arbitrator, and it was not inconsistent with natural justice that they should decide upon making the award themselves. Held. further, that although the third arbitrator had previously suggested some further audit of certain accounts that had already been examined by the arbitrators, there was nothing in this circumstance to impugn the good faith of the other two arbitrators in deciding that further delay was unnecessary. Where it does not appear that an arbitrator is in a position with regard to the parties or the matter is dispute such as might east suspicion upon his honour and impartiality, there must be proof of actual partiality or unfairness in order to justify the setting aside of the Held, also, that (an application having been made bona fide to him before the award was signed to state certain questions of law in a special case for the opinion of the Court or to adjourn the matter until an application to the Court to direct him to state a special case had been disposed of, his refusal to do so was a ground for remittance to him for further con sideration. -Partnership-Nomination of arbitrator to adjust accounts-Staying action.]—A partnership agreement contained a provision by which the parties thereto nominated and appointed a named person "as sole and final arbitrator in case of the death of either of the partners before the expiration of the said contract to finally adjust and settle all matters between the survivor and the personal representatives of the deceased partner within such time and on such conditions as they may see fit:"—Held, upon the application of the surviving partners in an action brought against them by the personal representatives of the deceased partner to have the accounts of the partner to have the accounts of the partnership wound up, that this clause applied, and the action was stayed and a reference to the arbitrator directed.

Royal Trust Company v. Milligan, 10 O.L.R. 456 (Britton, J.).

-Lands taken or injuriously affected-Inclusion of other matters in submission-Appeal.]—Certain parties having appointed arbitrators under the Municipal Act in respect to lands taken by the municipality in connection with their water works system —afterwards entered into an agreement under seal defining the scope of the arbitration, and included a claim for damages for breach of contract and other matter not within the Municipal Act. They did not provide in the agreement for an appeal under s. 14 of the Arbitration Act, R.S.O. (1897), c. 62. The arbitrators in their award awarded one sum both for the claim "under the Acts and in respect of the matters referred to in the said submission'':-Held, affirming the judgment of Teetzel, J., that as the matters not under the Municipal Act could not be dis-tinguished in the amount awarded from the questions referred under the Act, the award being one and indivisible in its present form, and as the agreement come to by the parties defining the scope of the arbitration did not provide for an appeal under the Arbitration Act, no appeal on the merits lay, or was possible.

—Arbitration — Injunction — Jurisdiction.]—An injunction will not be granted to restrain a party from proceeding with an arb.tration where the result of the arbitration will be merely futile and or no injury to the party seeking the injunction. An injunction to restrain an arbitration to determine the value of land of the plantiff taken by the defendants on the ground that a condition precedent to the taking of the land had not been complied with, refused.

-Setting aside award-Pleading-Prayer for general relief.]-When the plaintiff, in answer to the defence of an award covering the amount of his claim, amends his statement of claim by setting up facts which, if true, would entitle him to ask specifically to have the award set aside, the statement of claim is good on demurrer, if it contains a prayer for general relief, although it does not ask for that specific relief. 2. This Court has jurisdiction over awards whether or not they are awards to which the provisions of 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 15 apply. 3. Per Mathers, J., Rule 773 of the King's Bench Act provides a code of procedure only for the enforcement of awards, and Rule 774, which reads, "The former practice with respect to awards shall not be abolished, but the same shall only be followed by special leave of the Court or Judge," should be interpreted as if it read, "The former practice relating to the enforcement of awards," etc.

Johannesson v. Galbraith, 16 Man. R. 138.

—Motion for leave to issue execution.]—
Upon an application made under R.S.O.
(1897), c. 62, s. 13, to the Court for leave to issue an execution to enforce an award the Court has discretion upon affidavits produced to say that in face of facts disclosed, execution should not issue for the present, as was done in this case, and proceedings were stayed for 30 days to enable the objecting party to apply for leave extending the time for moving against the award.
A local Judge has jurisdiction to make an order for leave to issue execution to enforce an award.

—Powers of expropriation — Arbitration clause—Right to sue for damages.]—An arbitration clause in a private Act of Parliament will not oust the jurisdiction of the Court, and an action for damages will lie, unless the necessary steps are taken under the Act, to vest the power to exercise the right, or to do the thing for which compensation would be due under the Act. Held, also, following Watt v. Watt (1905) A.C. 115, that the Court has no jurisdiction without the defendant's consent to make a new trial dependent upon the consent of the plaintiff to reduce the damages.

Barter v. Sprague's Falls Manufacturing Company, 38 N.B.R 207

Time for award—Failure of arbitrators to extend-Action-Stay of proceedings.] -A submission to arbitration, dated the 4th October, 1904, was under seal, and bound the parties to abide by the award so as it was made on or before the 30th October, 1904, or any subsequent day to which the arbitrators should by writing extend the time. There was no covenant not to take other proceedings. The arbitrators proceeded to consider the matters referred to them and continued the arbitration, with the assent of the parties, for nearly two years, but did not by writing extend the time for the award. The plaintiff brought this action for an account in respect of the matters referred, the arbitration being still uncompleted, and the defendant pleaded the submission and proceedings of the arbitrators as an answer to the action: -Held, that the assent of the parties to the arbitration being proceeded with after the time had expired was equivalent to a parol submission only; section 3 of the Arbitration Act, which makes submissions of the same effect as an order of the Court, and irrevocable without leave of the Court applies, by virtue of section 2, to submissions in writing only; the same is the case with section 6, which allows an application to stay proceedings; no order extending the time had been made under section 10; and therefore the arbitration proceedings afforded no answer.

Ryan v. Patriarche, 13 O.L.R. 94 (Magee, J.).

Under Railway Act.]-See RAILWAY.

—Costs—Disposition of—Exceeding powers conferred.)—An action for trespass to land was brought by M. against H. and an action of ejectment by T. M. H. against M., both actions resulting from a disputed boundary between the lands of the respective parties. By agreement the question of the boundary was referred to arbitration "including the disposition of costs in the said actions." The arbitrators totalled the costs in the two actions and in their award directed them to be paid in certain proportions:—Field, that the words of the submission in reference to costs meant clearly "party and party costs" and that the arbitrators having undertaken to deal with the costs and expenses of both sides in the two actions, including costs between solicitor and client, exceeded their powers and the award was invalid and must be set aside.

-Law of arbitration-Arbitration as to value of land expropriated also appointed mediators-Award set aside-Terms of submission exceeded.]-When arbitrators were appointed under deeds of submission to value three expropriated lots of ground and fix the indemnity for damages, it being declared that they should act as mediators (amiables compositeurs), but should be bound to conform to the provisions of s. 161 of the Railway Act (1903), and the award, in lieu of valuing the third lot. ordered that the expropriators should return it in part and construct a road on their own adjoining land, to be maintained by them in perpetuity, for the benefit of the parties expropriated:—Held, that arbi-tators who are also appointed mediators cannot disregard their instructions and that the error vitiated the whole award.

—Reference to three arbitrators—Different awards made on different dates.]—In an agreement between the parties, provision was made for the submission of any dispute to three persons as arbitrators, the arbitration to be in accordance with and subject to the provisions of the Arbitration Act. On a reference, following a dispute, under the agreement, the arbitrators being unable to agree, drew up and rendered three separate awards. Two of the arbitrators agreed in their findings, Morrison, J., came to the conclusion that the agreement of a majority constituted an award, pursuant to s. 10, sub-sec. 36 of the Interpretation Act:—Held, that said sub-sec. 38 does not apply to the construction of a document inter partes, as here, but to something done pursuant to statute. McLeod v. Hope, 14 B.C.B. 56

—Setting aside award—Improper rejection of evidence.]—Held, that the fact that the umpire was appointed before and sat with the arbitrators during the hearing is not a ground for setting aside an award, but quaere, whether it might not be a valid objection if the umpire had interfered during the hearing so as to prevent a final agreement. (2) That an award will be set aside if the arbitrators refuse to receive evidence properly offered and relevant to the issue. -Delay in making award-Waiver.]-In order to impeach an award of arbitrators which determined certain specific matters, on the ground that it does not dispose of all the questions to be disposed of under a general submission of matters in dispute, it must be shewn affirmatively that there were matters in dispute other than those disposed of. (2) That, after one of the parties has accepted the award, he is estopped from objecting that it was not made within the time kimited by the submission.

-Statutory arbitrators - Jurisdiction Awards "from time to time"-Res judicata-Common school fund.]-The statutes authorizing the appointment of arbitrators to settle accounts between the Dominion and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec and between the two provinces, provided for submission of questions by agreement among the governments interested; for the making of awards from time to time; and that, subject to appeal, the award of the arbitrators in writing should be binding on the parties to the submission. The provinces submitted to the arbitrators for determination the amount of the principal of the Common School Fund to ascertain which they should consider not only the sum held by the Government of Canada but also "the amount for which Ontario is liable." In 1896 by awar? No. 2 the arbitrators determined that moneys remitted to purchasers of school lands unless made in fair and prudent administration, and uncollected purchase money of patented lands, unless good cause was shown for non-collection should be deemed moneys received by Ontario, and in 1899 the amount of liability under these heads was fixed by award No. 4. In 1902 the Privy Council held that the arbitrators had no jurisdiction to entertain a claim by Quebec to have Ontario declared liable for the purchase money of school lands yet unpatented allowed to remain uncollected for many years. In making their final award in 1907, the arbitrators refused an application by Quebec for inclusion therein of the amounts found due from Ontario for remissions and non-collections and held that they had exceeded their jurisdiction in determining such liability. On appeal from this determination embodied in the final award: -Held, that the arbitrators had no juris-diction to determine the liability of Ontario for moneys remitted or not collected. Attorney-General for Ontario v. Attorney-General for Quebec (1903), A.C. 39, followed. Held, that awards Nos. 2 and 4 in so far as they determined this liability were absolutely null, and, therefore, not binding on Ontario.

-Value of buildings on leasehold property -Evidence of rentals and expenditure.]-Evidence of rentals and other income received from buildings erected on leasehold property, and of all outgoings or expenditure in respect thereof during the term, is admissible on an inquiry before an arbi-trator for the purpose of determining the value of the same, although owing to exceptional circumstances the revenue derived by the lessees may not in fact afford assistance. A question as to the admissibility of evidence is one of law within the meaning of s. 41 of the Arbitration Act.

Rogers v. London and Canadian Loan and Agency Co., 18 O.L.R. 8.

-Award-Option of one of two alternatives-Failure to declare option.]-The party, to whom an arbitration award gives an option to do one of two things, cannot be presumed to have declared for either alternative by mere lapse of time, and if he fails to declare his option, he must be put in default, before the other party can seek to enforce the award. Hence, when the option consists in either taking over hardwood logs sunk in a pond, as being of a stated quantity, for a lump sum, or, as soon as the ice is gone from the pond, of fishing them up jointly with the other party, to be sawed and the output to be divided between them in certain propor-tions, the standing by, after the ice is gone, by the party having the option, or his doing nothing during the summer, does not give the other the right to sue for the lump sum on the assumption that he has implicitly elected the first alternative. A putting in default, mise en demeure, is at least required, before an action will lie. Ross v. Fletcher, 35 Que. S.C. 113 (C.R.).

—Architects—Preparation of plans—Contract—Joint enterprise.]—In an action by architects to recover from a land owner fees for preparing plans and specifications for the erection of an apartment house upon the defendant's land :- Held, upon conflicting evidence, that the plans and specifications were prepared by the plaintiffs, at their own risk, as sharers with the defendant and others in a contemplated enterprise, and that the defendant was not liable to the plaintiffs.

Melville v. Stirrett, 14 W.L.R. 557 (Man.).

-Preparing plans-Value of services-Evidence.]-In an action by architects for fees for preparing plans for a building which was never erected, the plaintiffs were held, upon the evidence, entitled to recover the amount which they claimed, there being no evidence as to the value of their services, of any weight as opposed to the testimony of the plaintiffs themselves. Smith v. Crump (No. 2), 14 W.L.R. 297 (Man.).

-Instructions to architects-Plans for proposed building-Authority of agent.]-The plaintiffs, who were architects, prepared plans for a theatre proposed to be erected on the land of the defendant in a city, having received their instructions from C., who had acted as the defendant's agent in that city (she residing in another country) in the collection of rents and looking after her real estate, etc.:—Held, upon the evidence, that the defendant was not liable for the value of the plaintiffs' services in preparing the plans; the theatre was not to be built for her, but for a company, of which C. and one of the palintiffs were promoters, and her only connection with the enterprise was as a subscriber for shares in the com-pany and lessor of the land upon which the theatre was to be built.

-Contract for services-Divisibility.]-The agreement by which an architect undertakes to prepare plans and specifications, receive tenders and award the contract, direct the contractors and superintend the work of erecting two buildings, creates an obligation divisible and susceptible of executing in portions. Therefore, the absence of the architect during the course of the work only gives the owner a right to a reduction of the sum agreed to be paid to him in proportion to the prejudice suffered. Mann v. Rudolph, Q.R. 37 S.C. 299 (Ct.

Rev.), reversing 36 S.C. 57.

Architect—Whether liable for loss caused by mistakes in estimates.]—In making his estimates of the cost of a building an architect is only required to use a reasonable degree of care and skill, and if he does this he is not liable for any loss caused by error in the estimates.

Grant v. Dupont, 8 B.C.R. 7.

-Contract to prepare plans, etc.-Right to recover where work not proceeded with.]-Plaintiff was engaged by defendants to prepare plans and specifications for an hotel building, to cost not more than $4,000 or $5,000, for which he was to receive a commission of two per cent. on the cost, with one per cent. additional for superintendence. Instructions as to size, number of rooms, etc., were given by defendants. Before the plans were completed changes were made by additions to the original plan, involving an additional expenditure of $1,500. The plans were approved of by the defendants, when completed, and tenders called for, and the work partly pro-ceeded with. It was then found by defendants that, owing to an advance in the price of materials, the building would cost much more than they had expected, and the work was stopped:—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that plaintiff was entitled to recover from defendants the stipulated commission of two per cent. on the estimated cost of the building with the additions agreed upon.

Hutchinson v. Conway, 34 N.S.R. 554.

—Whether liable for loss caused by mistakes in estimates.]—In making his estimates for the cost of a building an architect is only required to use a reasonable degree of care and skill, and if he does this he is not liable for any loss caused by error in the estimates.

Grant v. Dupont, 8 B.C.R. 223, affirming 8 B.C.R. 7.

—Contract to prepare plans—Work not proceeded with—Commission on estimated cost.]—Defendant requested plaintiff to prepare for him plans for a building to cost from $15,000 to $18,000. After inspecting the plans, the defendant objected that the building shown would not give him sufficient room, and suggested changes which, he was told, would increase the cost. Defendant assented, and the plans, as finally prepared, were for a building which would cost $25,000:—Held, that plaintiff was entitled to be paid a percentage on the latter amount, and that, in the absence of evidence to fix the value independent of the special contract proved by plaintiff, the amount allowed by the trial Judge could not be reduced.

Chappell v. Nolan, 38 N.S.R. 74.

-Liability of architect-Plans of house-Servitude.]-The architect employed by a land owner to design and superintend the construction of a house, on a vacant site not subdivided into building lots for sale, incurs no liability from the fact that an oblique view is given through a window, in the house designed by him, onto a part of the land sold by the owner to a third party, after the inception of the building. In this case, the proximate cause of the servitude is to be found, not in the plan devised by the owner of his property, in a manner to make one portion of it bear the relation of a servient tenement, to that on which the house is built.

Saint-Jean v. Strubbe, Q.R. 27 S.C. 266.

—Contract with architect for plans—Parol testimony.]—(1) A contract with an architect for the drawing, at a cost exceeding $50, of plans and specifications for a proposed building, is not a commercial matter and cannot be proved by parol testimony. (2) When inadmissible evidence is received without objection, the party against whom it is given may move for its rejection at any time before the trial is over.

ARREST.

Bond for release of defendant arrested under capias—Abandonment of property.]
—(1) Sureties for a defendant arrested under a capias, that he will make an abandonment of his property within thirty days after judgment is reneered maintaining the capias, and that he will surrender himself within thirty days of the service upon him of a Judge's order to that effect, are not relieved from liability by an abandonment of property by the defendant, which is, after contestation, set aside by a judgment declaring it fraudulent and condemning the defendant to six months' imprisonment in consequence. (2) The undertaking in a bail-bond, under Art. 913 C.P., to pay costs in addition to the principal and interest, includes the costs on all the incidental proceedings in the case of which the capias is the initial one.

McManamy v. Hazer, 38 Que. S.C. 441.

-Criminal proceedings.] — See CRIMINAL

—Capias—Petition to quash—Secretion of property.]—A debtor who sells all his effects and the products of his immoveable property so as to compel the bailiff to make a return of nulla bona and who puts said effects beyond the reach of his creditors, while he himself is able to have the use of them, is guilty of secretion and may be arrested on a capias.

Ethier v. Poirier, 12 Que. P.R. 20.

—Capias—Damages—Exception.]—When a capias is issued for a sum claimed as salary due unuer an engagement in writing and for a specified commission by contract between the parties it is not a case of unliquidated damages. An exception claiming that the capias could not issue without a Judge's order will be dismissed.

Day v. Paillard, 11 Que. P.R. 295.

—Rule nisi—Imprisonment for Costs—Service.]—A rule for a capias for non-payment of the costs of an action will not be made absolute if the bill of costs has not been served on the opposite party nor taxed in presence of both parties. The application for a capias should be preceded by service of an order to pay and notice that the defendant will be arrested in case of non-payment within three months from the date of such service. The new Code of Civil Procedure has not altered the provisions of the former Code in this matter.

Laudskrowner v. Corber, 11 Que. P.R. 397.

Arrest—Discharge from arrest—Terms —Discretion.]—Where an order to arrest is made upon materials which justify it, although the defendant may be discharged from custody under it upon fresh affidavits, the Judge may, in his discretion, impose terms of bringing no action, and may with hold costs.

Sullivan v. Allen, 1 O.L.R. 53.

—Order for arrest—Want of cause—Liability of justice.]—A justice of the Peace who issues a warrant of arrest without inquiry into the informant's grounds of suspicion against the accused is liable to the latter if the complaint is not justified on any serious ground, reasonable or plausible.

Murfina v. Sauve, 19 Que. S.C. 51 (S.C.).

—Prisoner suffered to go at large—Rearrest upon same warrant—Legality of.]—
The prisoner, who had been arrested under a warrant to serve a sentence of imprisonment for an offence against the Canada Temperance Act, was, upon his own request, suffered to go at large for a time by the officer who had the execution of the warrant. Shortly after he was again arrested upon the same warrant and conveyed to the county gaol to serve his term of imprisonment. Upon an application for an order in the nature of a habeas corpus:—Held, (per Tuck. C.J., Hanington, Landry, Barker, and McLeod, JJ., Van Wart, J., dissenting), that the second arrest upon the same warrant was legal, and that the order should be refused.

Ex parte Doherty, 35 N.B.R. 43.

—Judgment debtor—Application for discharge—Interest in real estate.]—A judgment debtor, having made application to be discharged from custody under an execution issued out of a justice's Court, in the course of his examination disclosed that he and his wife resided upon land of which his wife had the fee, and that there were growing crops upon it created by his labour:—Held, that as this disclosed an interest in real property that could not be taken under an execution issued out of a justice's Court, the debtor could not be discharged. The husband's estate of curtesy exists during the lifetime of the wife

Ex parte Geldert, 34 N.B.R. 612.

—Public officer—Art. 833 C.P.Q.]—To subject a person to arrest under Art. 833 C. P.Q., it is necessary that he should have the custody of money or other effects under judicial authority and not otherwise. A secretary-treasurer directed by the trustees of a parish to raise the amount of an assessment for construction of a church is not subject to arrest under a judgment condemning him to make restitution of the money received by him in that capacity.

Trustees of the Parish of St. Antoine de Longueuil, v. Gingras, 3 Que. P.R. 557 (S.C.).

—Damages for personal injuries—Contrainte par corps.]—Under the provisions of par. 4 of Art. 833 C.P.Q., an arrest (contrainte par corps) is permitted on a claim for compensation for personal injuries, in this case for damages in consequence of injuries inflicted on the plaintiff by means of a bicycle ridden by defendant.

Chouinard v. Raymond, 18 Que. S.C. 319 (S.C.).

—Personal injury—Contrainte par corps—Chose jugee — Cession — Art. 833 C.P.Q.]—Damages obtained by plaintiff, a municipal councillor, from a fellow councillor who had taken part in his expulsion from the council on the ground that he was a member of the provincial police when he was only a prison guard, do not constitute 'damages for personal injuries' under Art. 833, par. 4 C.P.Q., and therefore do not justify the demand for defendant's arrest; and it is of no importance that the judgment for such damages declared that they were given for annoyance (avanie) or for personal injury, such judgment not having the force of chose jugée as to the nature of the injury or the question of whether or not it could authorize a demand for arrest. An abandorment of property after the institution of the action, but before judgment was given therein is an answer to a demand for arrest in execution of said judgment when plaintiff did not contest the defendant's schedule with in the four months which he could have done notwithstanding his claim for damages was then opposed by defendant.

Keating v. Burrows, 8 Que. Q.B. 1, discussed; Bedard v. Grosboillot, 18 Que. S.C.

363 (S.C.).

—Capias—Security—Renewal—Art. 913 C. P.Q.]—Failure by a defendant arrested on capias to renew the security furnished, notwithstanding an order of the Court for him to do so, constitutes a good reason for returning him to the custody of the sheriff.

Beliveau v. Boselieu, 4 Que. P.R. 62

(S.C.).

-Execution against body-Decree for payment of money-Disobedience.]-Where defendant made default in paying to the plaintiff under the decree of the Court a sum of money received by the defendant as a donatio mortis causa in favour of the plaintiff an order was granted under Act. 53 Vict. c. 4, s. 114, as amended by Act 58 Vict. c. 18, s. 2, for an execution against his body. An order under the above Act for an execution against the body of a party making default to a decree of the Court for payment of a sum of money will not be granted where the Court is satisfied that the party in default has no means, and has not made a fraudulent disposition of his property, and that his arrest is sought for a vindictive purpose, or to bring pressure upon his friends to come to his assistance.

Thorne v. Perry (No. 2), 2 N.B. Eq. 276.

—Application for discharge—Onus—Intent to defraud—Former absconding—Bond—Restoration.)—The expected departure from Ontario with intent to defraud is an essential ingredient of the case to be made out by the applicant for an order of arrest, but it is a question of fact, and the Judge may infer it from the facts and circumstances shown by traffidavits. The decision of the Judge who grants such an order is subject to review, but the onus of showing that he was wrong rests upon the party who complains of it. Under the circumstances of this case the order was rightly made. The former conduct of the defendant in respect to the same debt was a fact or circumstance to be taken into consideration on the question of intent. The impecunious or insolvent condition of the defendant does not, of itself, minimize or rebut the fraudulent intent. Decision of a Divisional Court, 19 P.R. 207, reversed. Held, also, that the order of the Court below directing that the bond given by the defendant should be delivered up and the surety therein released, was erroneous; the bond ought to have remained upon the files of the Court, being a record thereof; and the order ought only to have directed that an exoneratur be entered thereon; therafore the bond should be restored.

Beam v. Beatty, 2 O.L.R. 362 (C.A.).

--Motion--Contrainte par corps--Service.]
--Before giving judgment on a motion for a rule for arrest (contrainte par corps) the Court will order it to be served on the adverse party.

Ridgeway v. Duckworth, 18 Que. S.C.

-Capias - Affidavit for - Art. 901 C.P.Q.]
-When, in an affidavit to obtain a writ of capias ad respondendum the applicant swears that he is informed of facts on which he bases his demand for issue of the writ, he should give the name of the person who furnished such information, or otherwise the writ will be quashed.

Lemieux v. Bussiere, 18 Que. 8.C. 499.

Ca. re.—Secretion of property—Arts 832, 897, C.P.C.]—Under the law of Quebec, as well since as before the new Code of Procedure, the capias ad respondendum still exists; and not only before but also after judgment, as a means whereby a creditor may cause to be arrested his debtor who, in order to defraud and prevent recovery of the debt, has concealed and carried off his property. Art. 897 C.P.C. is not repugnant to Art. 822, the latter applying only to contrainte par corps, while the other relates to the capins, two things absolutely different.

Elliott v. La Banque Québec, 9 Que. Q.R. 532, affirming 16 S.C. 393.

— Capias — Proceedings to quash.] -- See PLEADING.

Todd v. Murray, 3 Que. P.R. 521.

—Capias—Irregularity or nullity—Waiver by giving bail.]—After the issue of the writ in an action a summons was taken out entitled "In the matter of an intended action":—Held, by Irving, J., dismissing the summons, that it was wrongly entitled. A Judge has power to direct a summons to be issued and be returnable in a registry other that that where the writ was issued. By the giving of special bail, a defendant arrested on a capias waives his right to object to the writ.

Tanaka v. Russell, 9 B C.R. 24.

-Capias-Affidavit-Omission of the word "immediately"—Art. 895, C.C.P.] — The omission of the word "immediately," in the affidavit for capias, in connection with the intended departure of the debtor, is fatal, and the capias will be quashed and set aside.

Kidd v. McKinnon, 20 Que. S.C. 300

(Davidson, J.).

-Ca. re.-Appearance.]-A writ of ca. re. must state the nature of the action. It is not necessary for a person arrested under a writ of ca. re. to enter an appearance before applying for his discharge. Wehrfritz v. Russell (No. 1), 9 B.C.R.

50 (Hunter, J.).

-Capias - Debtor - Order for discharge-Mandamus.]-The order provided for by 60 Vict. c. 28, s. 15, is a substitute for the remedy by writ of mandamus, and it will therefore be granted only in cases where mandamus will lie. In discharging or refusing to discharge a debtor who has made a disclosure under 59 Vict. c. 28, s. 7, the Judge or other officer is acting judicially and not ministerially, therefore the Court refused to make an order until the said s. 15 commanding the Judge of the County Court of S. to discharge a debtor who had made a disclosure before him.

Ex parte Keerson, 35 N.B.R. 233.

-Under warrant of commitment-Temporary release of prisoner-Promise of prisoner to surrender himself-Re-arrest.] -Where the officer executing a warrant of commitment releases the prisoner, at his request, for a temporary period, on his promise to surrender himself, such does not constitute a voluntary abandonment of the arrest, and re-arrest is justified upon the same warrant.

The King v. O'Hearon (No. 2), 5 Can Cr. Cas. 531.

-Contrainte par corps - Discharge - Cession de biens.]—The defendant condemned by a judgment to damages for verbal injuries, and on the point of being im-pri oned under a writ of contrainte par corps may obtain a suspension of the writ by making an assignment of his property provided he gives security for his return into the custody of the sheriff when required. But he cannot be discharged by the assignment before the expiration of the delays given to the creditor to contest ıt.

Frechette v. Prevost, 4 Que. P.R. 404 (Sup. Ct.).

-Contrainte par corps-Action for damages-Malicious injury.]-An action for damages against a person who, through malice, had opened a tap for supplying water to his co-tenant is not one of those admitting of a conclusion for arrest on failure to pay the damages awarded, and conclusion to that effect will be rejected on dêfense en droit.

Phaneuf v. Knight, 5 Que. P.R. 70 (Sup.

-Affidavit for ca. re-Practice.]-The affidavits leading to an order for ca. re. must show that there is a debt due from the defendant to the plaintiff. It is not sufficient to show that there is a debt due from the defendant to one who bears the same name as the plaintiff. A statement in an affidavit that deponent has caused writ of summons to be issued against defendant, without stating in what action the writ was issued, is not sufficient to show that plaintiff and deponent are one and the same person.

Wehrfritz v. Russell (No. 2), 9 B.C.R.

79 (Martin, J.).

-Order for arrest-Setting aside-Inference from affidavits.]-Defendant was arrested under an order for arrest granted on the affidavit of plaintiff's solicitor that he had probable cause for believing, and did believe, that defendant, unless he was arrested, was about to leave the province. The order for arrest was set aside, and the bond directed to be delivered up to be cancelled by order of the Chief Justice at Chambers, who was satisfied, on reading the affidavits produced before him, that defendant, at the time of his arrest, was not about to leave the province:-Held, the judgment of the learned Judge at Chambers was one that the Court, on appeal, would not interfere with. Held, also, following Hunt v. Harlow, 1 Old 709, that a statement of belief that defendant is about to leave the province being all that is required under the practice to procure an order for arrest, defendant is entitled to be discharged if he negatives that intention, unless plaintiff can state facts from which it can be clearly inferred that it was the intention of defendant to leave. Held, also, that such an inference was not to be drawn from affidavits merely tending to show that defendant was keeping out of the way to avoid service of an order for his examination under the Collections Act. Held, also, that it would be futile to allow plaintiff's appeal as, at the time the order for defendant's examination under the Collections Act was served, the order for arrest was effete, and the bond cancelled, and no stay of proceedings had been obtained, and the liability of the sureties could not be restored. Held, that while defendant was entitled to have plaintiff's appeal dismissed with costs, the costs must be set off against plaintiff's judgment in the action.

McLaughlin Carriage Co. v. Fader, 34

-Ca. sa.-Issue of concurrent writ after expiry of original-Motion for discharge.]

-A concurrent writ of ca. sa. should not be issued after the original writ with which it is concurrent has expired by lasse of time under Con. Rule 784, and such a writ so issued will be set aside as having been improperly issued. The right to make a motion for discharge from custody upon the merits and upon the ground of concealment by the plaintiff of material facts upon his application, founded upon Con. Rule 1047, is not confined to the case of an order for arrest made before judgment and does not extend to a ca. sa. fendant had been arrested under an invalid concurrent writ of ca. sa., and was in the custody of a sheriff to the knowledge of the plaintiffs' solicitor, who prepared an affidavit entirely suppressing the fact of the arrest, and upon which he obtained an order for and issued a new writ of ca. sa. Upon an appeal to a Divisional Court from a judgment of a Judge in Chambers refusing to set aside the latter order and writ, and motion for discharge. It was held, that the application should not be treated as an appeal upon new material from the discretion of the Judge who made the order, as such an application having for its object the setting aside of the order and writ, must upon the authorities have failed: Damar v. Busby (1871), 5 P.R. 356, at p. 389. But was really one to the undoubted jurisdiction of the Court to set aside in its dis-cretion orders which had been made by the wilful concealment or perversion of material facts, and that a clear case had should be set aside and prisoner dis-charged from custody. Judgment of Falconbridge, C.J.K.B., reversed.

-Illegal arrest-Claim for special damage—Right to recover for money paid.]—
A warrant for taxes alleged to be due the defendant town was issued by the town treasurer and placed in the hands of a constable for collection. The constable went to plaintiff's place of business to collect the amount, but, it being Saturday night, an arrangement was made between the constable and plaintiff that the latter would go up on Monday morning and see about the taxes. Plaintiff went to the treasurer's office and contended that the amount claimed in the warrant had been paid, but, as the treasurer insisted that the amount had not been paid, plaintiff handed him the amount claimed. It appeared that the amount in dispute was due in respect of a property which plaintiff sold to Y., who agreed to pay the taxes upon it, and paid the same to the treasurer, intimating that it was paid on account of plaintiff's property, but the treas-urer appropriated the amount in payment of a like amount due by Y. personally.

Plaintiff brought an action for illegal arrest, and claimed, as special damage, "amount wrongfully extorted from plaintiff, as set forth in paragraph 4 of the pleadings, 88.25." Paragraph 4, referred to, detailed the issue of the warrant "whereby plaintiff was unlawfully compelled to pay an illegal demand of defendants, to wit, the sum of $8.25":—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that, even on plaintiff's own evidence, the action must fail.

Walker v. Town of Sydney, 36 N.S.R.

—Capias—Affidavit—Amendment — Time and place of debt.]—Held, 1. The affidavit required for the issuing of the writ of capias is not a proceeding susceptible of being amended. 2. That such affidavit must mention the time and place where the indebtedness occurred, within the limits of the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario.

Julien v. Chuna, 5 Que. P.R. 413 (Curran, J.).

-Judgment debtor - Imprisonment of-Fraudulent disposition of property.]-1. The Court will not set aside an order committing a judgment debtor to prison on the ground of his having made a fraudulent disposition of his property whereby the judgment creditor is materially prejudiced in obtaining satisfaction of his judgment, unless it appears that the Judge making the order has taken some manifestly mistaken view of the law of the facts. As such Judge has had the opportunity of hearing the witnesses give their testimony viva voce, and of observing their demeanour, his decision on questions of fact must be taken to have the same weight as the verdict of a jury. 2. On an application for a rule nisi to rescind a Judge's order imprisoning a judgment debtor the applicant can not show by affidavit what took place before the Judge to whom the application was made; the stenographer's return of the evidence must be produced.

Ex parte Despres; In re O'Leary v. Depres, 36 N.B.R. 13.

—Judgment debtor—Committal order—Conditional—B. C. practice, I.—An order to commit under s. 193 of the B. C. County Courts Act must be absolute, not conditional. Where an order to commit a party is made in his absence he must be served with a copy of the order before arrest. Orders to commit should be drawn up and should contain the terms on which discharge out of custody may be obtained as required by Order XIX., R. 13. Where a registrar is present and takes a minute of an order, the minute so taken is conclusive, even though the Judge's recollection of the order is different.

Wallace v. Ward, 9 B.C.R. 450 (Drake, J.).

—Capias—Place where the debt was contracted—C.P. 895.]—When it appears by affidavit for capias that the plaintiff as well as the defendant both reside in the Province of Quebec, it is not necessary to allege specially that the debt was contracted within the province.

Beauchemin v. St. Pierre, 5 Que. P.R. 484 (Tait, A.C.J.).

—Limit bond—Officer of Superior Court—Privilege from arrest—Bond assigned on same day as action brought thereon.]—The arrest of a person, having privilege by reason of his being an officer of a Superior Court, under an execution issuing out of the City Court of S., is not void, nor does such privilege afford any defence to an action on a limit bond entered into by such officer in order to obtain his discharge. If two things are done upon the same day, it will be assumed that that which ought to have been first done was so done; therefore, in an action upon a limit bond by the assignee of the sheriff, it was held, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that, though the assignment and the writ commencing the action were dated upon the same day, the bond was assigned before the writ was issued. Further held, that the assignment by the sheriff being a mere formality, only going to show that the assignee was satisfied with the security, the date thereof was immaterial.

Dibblee v. Fry, 35 N.B.R. 282.

—Demand of abandonment—Debt contracted before ceasing to trade—Capias.]—It is not necessary that a person be actually engaged in trade when a demand of abandonment is made upon him. Even where he has ceased for several years to carry on trade, he is nevertheless subject to a demand of abandonment based on a commercial debt contracted by himself or his firm while he was engaged in trade; and, consequently, in such case, under Art. 895 C.C.P., he is liable to arrest under capias for refusal to make an abandonment Carter v. McCarthy, R.J.Q. 6 B.R., p. 499, followed; and Roy v. Ellis, R.J.Q. 7 B.R., p. 222, distinguished.

Perkins v. Perkins, 22 Que. S.C. 72. Mathieu, Doherty, Lavergne, JJ.

—Capias—Sheriff's mileage.]—A sheriff arresting under a capias is entitled, if there is no gaol in his own country, to confine the debtor in the nearest gaol in another county and to charge mileage therefor.

Carson v. Carson, 10 B.C.R. 83.

-Contrainte par corps-Negligence-Accident-Art. 833 C.P.Q.]-Injuries caused by a mere accident due to the negligence of a person who had no intention of doing harm do not constitute a personal injury for which an arrest (contrainte par corps) of such person may be ordered.

Chartrand v. Smart, Q.R. 23 S.C. 304, 5 Que. P.R. 173 (Sup. Ct.).

—Civil imprisonment—Liberation—Second imprisonment.]—I. A writ or order of the Court or Judge for coercive imprisonment is exhausted by the imprisonment of the debtor, followed by his liberation, and no new arrest or imprisonment can thereafter be executed in virtue of the said writ. 2. A writ or order for coercive imprisonment cannot be issued by a deputy-prothonotary of the Court, and an imprisonment effected in virtue thereof is illegal.

—Capias—Personal debt—Place of contract.]—A capias will be quashed on petition if the affidavit does not show that the debt for which it was issued was a personal debt, or if it does not show the place where the debt originated or became due and exigible.

European Importing Co. v. Mallekson, 5 Que. P.R. 255.

—Capias—Security—Motion to have deposit forfeited.]—A plaintiff who has succeeded upon a capias cannot, by motion, ask to have the deposit placed in the hands of the sheriff, as security, paid over to him.

Rosenberg v. Nelankow, 5 Que. P.R. 378.

Capias ad respondendum—Afidavit—Defendant about to leave Quebec and Ontario.]—An affidavit for capias must set forth that the defendant is immediately about to leave the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario, and a capias issued upon an affidavit merely stating that the defendant is about to leave the said provinces, will be quashed on petition to that effect.

Kidd v. MacKinnon, 5 Que. P.R. 177 (Davidson, J.).

—Capias—Petition to quash writ—Denial of debt.]—Under the new Code of Procedure in a petition to, quash a writ of common capias (bref d'arret simple) the existence of the debt may be attacked, the same being one of the essential allegations of the affidavit for procuring the issue of the writ.

Ex parte Kenatosse, 6 Que. P. R. 89 (K.B.).

-Arrest and imprisonment-Disclosure-Crder of discharge.]-An order of discharge made by the clerk of the peace for the County of Victoria under 59 Vict. (N. B.), c. 28, s. 32, which states that the party discharged had been in custody in the county of Victoria by virtue of an order of render made by the police magistrates of the district of Andover and Perth civil Court; that due notice of disclosure had been given, and that the hearing took place at the time and place mentioned in the notice, which order is signed by the clerk of the peace of the county of Victoria, is a sufficient statement on the face of the order of the territorial jurisdiction of the officer making the same, and will not be quashed on certiorari. If there is evidence from which the officer making the order for discharge might be satisfied that a full disclosure had been made, the Court will not set aside the order, even though they are not satisfied that the disclosure is a full one, or of the bona fides of it.

The King v. Straton; Ex parte Porter, 36 N.B.R. 388.

—Municipal corporation — Special constables—182, 199 M.C.]—Where a writ of arrest, signed by the Mayor and entrusted to special constables of a municipality, is executed beyond its limits, the municipal corporation is not responsible, the said constables, in effecting the arrest, not having acted in the performance of duties for which they were employed.

Gravel v. Lizotte, 7 Q. P.R. 201 (Sup. Ct.).

—Capias—Partnership—Personal indebtedness—Art. 896, C.C.P.]—In an action accompanied by capias ad respondendum, the plaintiff made affidavit, and also alleged in his declaration, that the defendant was personally indebted to him in the sum of $100, the plaintiff being entitled to onefifth of the profits of a partnership of which he and the defendant were members, which partnership had realized $500 profits, and that the defendant was about to leave the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario with the entire sum On inscription in law:-Held, that by the alleged illegal appropriation of the entire profits and the intended departure therewith, the defendant's possession of the sum of $500 had changed its nature, and that, without the previous institution of an action pro socio, a personal indebtedness existed on the part of the defendant to a co-partner entitled to a share of the sum illegally appropriated, which was sufficient to justify the issue of a capias under Art. 895, C.C.P.

At the time of the arrest the constable believed that a robbery had been committed and that defendant was one of the parties who committed it. Defendant, seeing that his name was not mentioned in the warrant, resisted arrest, and in so doing assaulted the constable. Defendant was tried and convicted for assaulting a police officer in the execution of his duty, with intent to resist lawful arrest:-Held, affirming the conviction, that the arrest could be justified under the statute notwithstanding the warrant was insufficient.

The King v. Sabeans, 37 N.S.R. 223.

-Examination of debtor-Evidence on-Divestment of property-Payment of bona fide debt.]-The Judge of the County Court of St. John made an order under 59 Vict. c. 28, as amended by 61 Vict. c. 28, committing the applicant to prison for three months, because, after his arrest in a civil suit in the Saint John City Court, he had made an appropriation of property in payment of another debt without pay-ing the debt sued for. The Judge based the order upon evidence given in a former proceeding against the debtor, and not upon the hearing of any application for the order in question. The order did not show on its face the grounds upon which it was issued. By 61 Vict. c. 28, s. 8, amending 59 Vict. c. 28, an appeal is given to the Supreme Court from any order for imprisonment made under ss. 46, 48, 49, 51 and 53 respectively of 59 Vict. c. 28:— Held, that the fact that the right to appeal is given by statute does not deprive the party of his right to a certiorari, and this Court will grant the writ, if, in their opinion and discretion, the circumstances warrant it. That an order for imprisonment made by a County Court Judge on the ground that the debtor, since his arrest, has divested himself of the means of paying the debt for which he is sued is bad if it does not show on its face the grounds upon which it was issued. That the mere payment of a bona fide debt, after he is sued, is not such a divesting of property as will render the debtor liable to imprisonment under the Act. That an order based upon evidence given in a former proceeding against the debtor, and not re-proved upon the hearing of the application for the order in question is bad.

The King v. Forbes, Ex parte Dean, 36

N.B.R. 580.

-Contrainte par corps-Delays.]-A writ of arrest (contrainte par corps) can only be executed fifteen days after service of the judgment directing it to issue and, in any event, after the expiration of fifteen days from the date of such judgment.

—Writ of capias—Expiry.]—Where a writ of capias issued after judgment has not been served within six months after its issue, and no Judge's order extending the time has been made within the six months, the writ becomes non-existent. The defect is not a mere irregularity and is not waived by failure to invoke it within the delays prescribed for preliminary exceptions, but where the nullity is not so invoked costs will not be granted.

Demers v. Girard, 7 Que. P.R. 214 (Doherty, J.).

—Capias—Affidavit.]—It is not sufficient that a debtor resides in the Province of Quebec for his creditor to have a right to a writ of capias against him, but he must show where the debt was created or is payable, and such place may be within the Province of Quebec or in Ontario.

D'Amico v. Galardo, 7 Que. P.R. 234 (Sup. Ct.).

—Capias—Motion to quash—Arts. 214, 919 C.P.Q.]—There is no necessity for a special defence to an application to quash a writ of capias for irregularity of the affidavit and untrue allegations therein and such defence will be rejected on inscription en droit.

Demers v. Girard, 7 Que. P.R. 134 (Sup. Ct.).

-Capias after judgment-Designation of defendant.]—It is sufficient, in a writ of capias issued after judgment, to designate the defendant in the manner stated in the original writ of summons even though he may since have changed his residence. Gravel v. Lizotte, 28 Que. S C. 338, 7 Que. P.R. 354 (C.R.).

—Capias ad respondendum—Issue of writ pendente lite—Attachment.]—When writs of capias ad respondendum and simple attachment have issued after the return of an action and there have been issues joined on the merits and these write, at the same time, the plaintiff may inscribe for hearing first upon the merits, and, after recovering judgment, proceed upon the contestations of the capias and attachment.

—Capias ad respondendum—Affidavit—Secretion—Delivery of goods sold.)—Under Art. 895 (2) C.P.Q., an affidavit is sufficient for the issue of a writ of ca. sa. when it alleges that, without the benefit of the writ, the plaintiff will lose his recourse against the defendant; charges secretion in the fact that being in breaty with plaintiff for the manufacture of planks, and then insolvent, having obtained an advance of $1,000 to pay the wages of the workmen, he concealed and secreted this sum with the intention of defrauding plaintiff, so that the latter could not get delivery of the goods, the workmen refusing to allow them to be removed.

King Brothers v. Blais, Q.R. 14 K.C. 501.

-Non-payment of costs-Disclosure-Notice of application-Signature.]-A person in custody under a writ of attachment issued out of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick for contempt in not obeying an order to pay costs is entitled to relief under c. 130 of the Con. Stat. 1903, respecting arrest, imprisonment and examination of debtors. A notice of disclosure purporting to be signed by the applicant is sufficient without proof of the signature.

An order for discharge will not be quashed on the ground that the notice of the application to disclose was not entitled in the cause, or that the proceedings and order were entitled in the wrong cause if it sufficiently appear in the body of the notice, proceedings and order, in what proceeding the application and order were made. Service of the notice of disclosure on the wife at the husband's place of abode, he then being within the Province, is good, and po order perfecting the service is required. The officer taking the examination has au thority to order an equitable interest in personal property to be held for the benefit of the creditor, and the disclosure of such an interest is no bar to a discharge. If a debtor makes such a disclosure of his affairs as fulfils the requirements of the Act, a creditor who allows the proceedings to gu by default cannot object that the disclosure was not a full one.

The King v. Straton; Ex parte Patterson.

37 N.B.R. 376.

—Summary conviction—Suspicion and belief—Grounds of—Examination of, by magistrate.]—A magistrate has no jurisdiction to issue a warrant on an information under the Dominion Summary Conviction Act without examining upon eath the complainant or his witnesses as to the facts upon which the information is based. Adams v. Sutherland, 10 O.L.R. 645 (Anglin, J.).

—Capias after judgment—Service more than six months after issue—Fallure to invoke peremption by preliminary plea.]—(1) A writ of capias after judgment is a mode of executing a judgment and is not affected by Art. 120 C.C.P., but remains valid beyond the delay of six months therein mentioned, until it is executed. (2) Even if it be a writ of summons, the peremption in the above article is not absolute, and is waived by failure of the defendant to plead it in the manner and within the delay preseribed in the case of irregularities in such writs.

Demers v. Girard, 28 Que. S.C. 542, 7 Que. P.R. 347 (C.R.).

(2) The omission of the domicile of the deponent and the absence of the date when and the place where the affidavit was made are fatal to the capias.

Burne v. Lee, 8 Que. P.R. 27 (Curran, J.).

Capias—Irregularity—Cause of action—Averment that it arose within jurisdiction.]—It is not necessary that a summons to set aside a writ in the County Court for irregularity should state the irregularity, nor is it necessary that the grounds should be served with the summons. A writ of capias in the County Court will not be set aside because the words 'and of the British dominions beyond the seas' are omitted from the title of the King A County Court capias will not be set aside because it does not aver in the statement of the cause of action that it arose within the jurisdiction of the Court.

If the disclosure reveals a debt due the person making the same, a demand for the assignment thereof must be made and an opportunity afforded to the applicant for discharge to show why the same should not be assigned or the nature of the security to be given to him by the plaintiff for his protection in the event of a failure to recover. See FALSE ARREST; MALICIOUS PROSE-CUTION.

—Rule nisi—Slander—Poverty of defendant.]—The fact that the defendant condemmed to pay damages for slander alleges that he is poor and aged and that the execution of the judgment should be stayed will not prevent the issue of a rule to show cause why he should not be imprisoned in default of payment.

Busière v. Cadotte, 8 Que. P.R. 369 (Fortin, J.).

—Imprisonment—Maintenance—Fraud.]—
A person imprisoned under Arts. 833, 834,
C.C.P., alone has the right of maintenance during his detention; a bankrupt imprisoned for fraud has no such right; in such case imprisonment is a punishment, not a

—Arrest of debtors—Disclosure—Discharge under—Transfer with intention to defraud.]—In disclosure proceedings the questions whether the debtor has transferred any property intending to defraud the plaintiff, or since his arrest given any preference to any other creditor, are for the officer, taking the examination, and the Court will not interfere with his discretion merely because the circumstances of the transfer are suspicious.

The King v. Ebbett, Ex parte Smith, 38 N.B.R. 559.

—Writ of attachment against the person.]
—In applying for a writ of attachment against the person for contempt of Court it is not necessary to show that the equity practice prior to the coming into force of the Queen's Bench Act, 1895, requiring that the copy of the order served should be indorsed with the memorandum pre scribed by former equity Rule 290 and schedule N, has been followed, as the words "circumstances" and "manner," used in Rule 704 of the King's Bench Act. which is the rule prescribing the present practice, do not extend to the material to be used on applying for such writ of at tachment. The Court drew a distinction between the procedure for obtaining the old ex parte writ of attachment and the present practice, under which notice is always necesary before the writ can be obtained.

Evidence—Corroboration.] — Upon the trial of a charge of attempted carnal knowledge of a girl under fourteen who is too young to understand the nature of an oath, a conviction for that offence is not warranted unless her evidence not under oath is corroborated by some other material evidence implicating the accused (Cr. Code 685), but the accused may be convicted of common assault upon the charge so laid if there be corroboration merely by some other material evidence (Can. Evidence Act s. 25).

—Indecent assault—Evidence of complaint.]—(1) It is not essential in all cases of indecent assault that complaint should have been made at the earliest opportunity after the offence, and evidence of such complaint may, under special circumstances, be received after the lapse of several days' delay. (2) The fact of the girl being only seven years of age, that the act was committed without violence and that the girl did not realize the serious nature of the act, are circumstances which make a complaint made ten days afterwards admissible in evidence.

The King v. Barron (N.S.), 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 196.

—Assault upon girl under fourteen years—Form of indictment—Amendment—Objection.]—Defendant was indicted and convicted for a criminal assault committed upon the person of W., "a girl under the age of fourteen years, to wit, of the age of eight years." Application was made to the trial Judge on behalf of the prisoner to reserve a case for the opinion of the Court on the ground that it was not alleged in the indictment that the person upon whom the offence was committed was not the wife of the prisoner. This having been refused:—Held, that the expression in the Code s. 266, "not being his wife," is an exception, and, if it required to be stated in the indictment and negatived, the defect could have been remedied by the Judge by an amendment under s. 723 (2), and that defendant's counsel was obliged to take the objection before pleading to the indictment under s. 629, and not having done so it was not open to him to take it subsequently.

Doucette v. Therio, 38 N.S.R. 402.

—Entering a dwelling house in the night time with intent—Code s. 415.]—The prisoner was indicted, inter alia, under s. 415 of the Criminal Code for being unlawfully in the house of P. with intent to commit an assault on D. The jury, in effect, found that the prisoner was unlawfully in the house, and committed an assault on D.:—Held, that the intent to commit the assault was involved in the committal of it; that the jury could not find the prisoner guilty or committing the assault without finding that he had the intent to commit it, and, he being in and the intent concurring in point of time, the offence was complete and the conviction must be affirmed. —Common assault—Punishment on summary conviction—Maximum imprisonment]— Per Graham, E.J.: — A summary conviction imposing a sentence of sixty lays is not invalid where the statutory maximum is two months, unless there is a reasonable probability of the sixty days' term being in the particular case more than two months. Per Russell, J.:—It being possible that the prisoner might be detained in jail for a longer period than if the sentence had been for one or two months, the conviction is bad and the prisoner entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus.

-Provocation-Mitigation of damages-Finding assault, but no damages.]-In an action for an assault the jury found the defendant guilty, and that the plaintiff had not suffered any damage and returned a verdict for the defendant. A subsequent application to the Judge of the County Court who had tried the cause to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial, or failing that, to enter a verdict for the plain-tiff for nominal damages was refused:-Held, on appeal, that the Court had no power to set aside the verdict for the defendant and enter a verdict for the plain. tiff, and that a new trial will not be granted merely for the purpose of enabling a plaintiff to obtain nominal damages, where no right is affected except a question of costs. That evidence of provo-cation by words spoken three days before the assault by the plaintiff to the defendant was properly admitted in mitigation of damages.

The chairman then asked the foreman, when he replied, "We mean inflicting the blow with a both of the prisoner, replied, "Boh," where-upon the chairman endorsed the verdict on the record as follows: "Guilty of assault as charged, but not guilty of robbery," he so interpreting the finding:—Held, that the verdict was not properly interpreted and acted upon by the chairman, and was not rightly recorded, and a new trial was directed.

—Assault with intent—Preliminary enquiry before a justice—Information by peace officer—Amendment of information to charge common assault.]—(1) A civil action for damages for assault is not barred under Code s. 734 by payment of the fine, if the complaint in the criminal proceedings was laid by a peace officer in his official capacity and not by the party assaulted, and if the latter took no part in the proceedings other than to give testimony. (2) Where an information is laid before a magistrate for the indictable offence of assault with intent to do grievous bodily harm, the magistrate has no power, even with the consent of counsel for the Crown, to reduce the charge to one of common assault and to thereupon convert the preliminary investigation into a summary conviction in the same proceeding.

Assessment-Notice of appeal too late-Waiver-Assessment of poles, wires, etc.] -Appeal to the County Judge from the Court of Revision of the Township of Winchester. A preliminary objection was taken that the notice of appeal to the Court of Revision was not given within the time prescribed by the Assessment Act. It appeared, however, that the Court heard both parties, no objection being taken at the time:-Held, that it was now too late to object to the action of the Court of Revision, that the question was now properly before him on appeal from such Court and that any informality had been waived. Held, also, that the only change made by 1 Edw. VII. c. 29, s. 2, sub-s. (a), in the mode of assessing property in a township such as the one in question, is that the property shall be valued as a whole or as an integral part of the whole. The basis of valuing the whole is not in any way affected by the amending Act. Regard must still be had to sub-s. 1 of s. 28 of the Assessment Act, which requires that such property shall be estimated at its actual cash value as it would be appraised in payment of a just debt from a solvent debtor.

-Exemption of factories-By-laws-Validating statutes.]-By two Acts of the Ontario Legislature, 62 Vict. c. 82 and 63 Vict. c. 98, the council of the city of Stratford were authorized to pass by-laws and enter into agreements with two manufacturing companies, whereby the companies were "to be given exemption from taxation" for the lands and premises whereon their buildings were to be erected, for a period of twenty years. When these special Acts were passed, the Municipal Act in force provided, s. 411, that a municipal council might by by-law exempt any manufacturing establishment in whole or in part from taxation, except as to school taxes, for any period not exceeding ten years; and s. 73 of the Public Schools Act then in force provided that no by-law for exempting any portion of the ratable property of a municipality from taxation in whole or in part should be held or construed to exempt such property from school rates of any kind whatsoever:— Held, Meredith, J.A., dissenting, that in the absence of anything to show that in the special Acts the words "exemption from taxation" were intended to have a larger meaning and to exclude the exception, it should be considered, in accordance with the settled principle of construction, that the Legislature did not intend to do more than to alter the general law in so far as it was necessary to permit a longer period of exemption than by that law the council could grant, or to abandon the settled poncy in respect of school rates since 1892; and therefore were liable to pay school rates in respect of the property exempted by the special Acts. Canadian Pacific R.W. Co. v. City of Winnipeg, 1900, 30 S.C.R. 558, and Regina ex rel. Harding v. Bennett (1896), 27 O.R. 314, distinguished. The plaintiff, on behalf of nimself and the other ratepayers of the city, brought this action against the city corporation and the two companies for a mandamus compelling the city corporation to assess, levy, and collect from the companies school rates, as well for the past as for the future years of the twenty-year period, and for a declaration that the city corporation were in future boung to collect them: -Held, Osler, J.A., doubting, that, while the plaintiff had a remedy by appeal to the Court of Revision, that was not his only remedy; and he was entitled to a declaration of the true meaning and construction of the documents under which the exemp-tions were claimed. In the circumstances, the measure of relief was a declaration applicable to the future only.

Pringle v. City of Stratford, 20 O.L.R.

-Tax sale-Assessment Roll-Indefinite description of land—Joining two lots in one assessment—Invalidity of sale.]—In 1906 a city corporation sold to the defendant for the taxes of 1901 and 1902 nine feet of lot 19 on the north side of Lennox street. The land advertised for sale was "part of lots 18 and 19, plan 120, 42 x 53, commencing," etc. Upon the assessment rolls for 1901 and 1902 the land was set down as a vacant lot on Bathurst street, "rear 767-9, 53 x 50," etc. Neither lot 19 nor lot 18 on the north side of Lennox street had any frontage on and neither lot touched Bathurst street:-Held, that the sale was invalid because there was no valid assessment of the land in 1901 and 1902, and there were, therefore, no taxes legally imposed for which it could be sold for taxes, for those years. If the assessment could be treated as one of lots 18 and 19 according to a registered plan, the joining of them in one assessment was improper, and the assessment was, therefore, invalid. And the defect was not cured by s. 172 of the Assessment Act, 1904. Semble, per Meredith, C.P.C.P., that, as the land was occupied by the defendant when the assessment was made, and was owned by a person not resident in Ontario, who had not required her name to be entered on the assessment roll, it should have been assessed in the name of and against the defendant, and she, for the purpose of imposing and collecting taxes upon and from the land, was to be deemed the owner of it, R.S.O. 1897, c. 224, s. 22; and therefore she was not entitled to become the purchaser at the tax sale, and so to deprive the owner of part of her land, which was sold because the taxes which, if the assessor had done his duty, would have been pavable by the defendant, had not been paid.

Blakey v. Smith, 20 O.L.R. 279 (D.C.).

-Exemption-Bed-rooms rented to members.]—By s. 11 of the plaintiffs' incorporating Act, 63 Vict. c. 140, O., the buildings of the plaintiffs and the land whereon the same were erected were declared to be exempt from taxation, "so long as the same are occupied by and used for the purposes of the association." The preamble stated the "object" of the association to be "the improvement of the spiritual, intellectual and social condition of young men;" and s. 3 stated that "the object of the said corporation shall be the spiritual, mental, social and physical improvement of young men by the maintenance and support of meetings, lectures, classes, reading rooms, library, gymnasiums, and such other means as may from time to time be determined upon. By s. 1 the plaintiffs were empowered to acquire and hold real estate in Ottawa, provided the annual value of the real estate "so held and not actually used for the work" of the association should not exceed $10,000; and to acquire other real estate by gifts, etc., under certain conditions. The plaintiffs erected a building for their use in Ottawa, and moved into it in 1909. A part of the building, containing nearly 100 bedrooms for the sleeping accommodation of the members of the association who chose to rent them for that purpose, was assessed by the defendants in 1909:-Held, that the whole of the building, both before and after the plaintiffs moved in, was occupied by and used for the purposes of the association; "purposes" in s. 11 is not synonymous with "object" in the preamble and s. 3; the renting of the bed-rooms did not take that part of the building out of the plaintiffs' occupancy; and it might be a means for the social and physical improvement of young men to supply them with clean and well-ventilated beg-rooms.

Ottawa Young Men's Christian Association v. City of Ottawa, 20 O.L.R, 567.

—Reduction by Court of Revision to less than $20,000—Right of appeal.]—Properties consisting of a number of lots laid out upon the town-site of Cobalt being part of a mining location, some of the lots being vacant erections thereon, were assessed against a and some having dwelling houses and other mining company, who had acquired both the mineral and surface rights in the lots, at $21,475. Upon appeal the Court of Revision reduced the amounts to $17,700. The company, not being satisfied, appealed to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board. Their appeal was dismissed, and they then applied to the Court of Appeal for leave to appeal to that Court:—Held, that leave should be refused. Per Moss, C.J.O.:—O entitle a person to appeal to the Railway and Municipal Board under the combined effect of s. 51 of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board Act, 1906, and s. 76 of the Assessment Act, it is not necessary that the amount of the assessment fixed by the Court of Revision on one or more of such person's properties should aggregate $20,-000; the amount of the assessment made by the assessor is the determining factor. Buildings upon the lands, whether to be treated as "mineral lands" or otherwise, are subject to be valued and assessed against the owners, and the question of the value is a question of fact, as to which no appeal lies to the Court of Appeal, under s. 51 of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board Act, 1906, or otherwise. Per Meredith, J.A.: -The question before the Board was one of fact, not one of law; and no appeal lay. Re Coniagas and Cobalt, 20 O.L.R. 322.

-Buildings on mineral lands.]-Held, affirming an order of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, that certain buildings on mineral lands, buildings used for mining purposes, were assessable under the Ontario Assessment Act, 4 Edw. VII. c. 23. Per Garrow, J.A.:—The meaning of sub-s. 3 of s. 36 of the Assessment Act is that all buildings which add to the value of the land for any purpose, and not merely buildings which add to its agricultural value, are to be assessed. That is the sole statutory test applicable to all lands and to all buildings thereon. The construction placed upon s. 36 by Boyd, C., in Canadian Oil Fields Co. v. Village of Oil Springs, 1907, 13 O.L.R. 405, is preferable to that placed upon it by a Divisional Court in the same case. The question whether the buildings were assessable was one of law and a proper subject of appeal to the Court of Appeal under s. 51 of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board Act, 1906; with the amount of the assessment the Court of Appeal had nothing to do, that being a question of fact.

Its ultimate destination and mode of expenditure are immaterial, and the obligation of the trustees to pay it to the beneficiaries is not a debt to be offset against it:—Quære, whether the amendment to the section by 63 Vict. c. 34, s. 3 (O.), affects the question. On appeal to the Divisional Court, the judgment, in 32 O.R. 274, was varied by holding that the lands had been validly assessed for the years 1892 and 1893, and that the defendant therefore had a lien for the amount of the purchase money to the extent of the taxes for thosa years, with costs and expenses, ten per cent, interest, and the taxes subsequently paid, with like interest. —Annual estimate of expenses—Taxes.]—
The annual estimate required to be submitted by boards of education and other public school trustees, to the municipal council, of the expenses of the schools under their charge for the twelve months next ensuing, should be of the same character as the estimates of municipal councils for the purpose of striking the municipal yearly rate, and contain the like details as those upon which the board or trustees have based their own calculations, and not merely state a certain sum as required. The municipal council has the right and it is its duty to take some care that it is not made the instrument by which any excess of the powers of a board of trustees are given effect to by levying for them any sum which the law does not authorize them to exact.

-Statutory duty - Prerogative writ of mandamus-Summary application.]-When a public body is required to perform a statutory duty at the instance of one entitled to call for such performance, the practice in England is to move summarily for the prerogative writ of mandamus, according to the prescribed procedure in the Crown office. But in Ontario all the divisions have co-ordinate jurisdiction; and the practice in cases of the prerogative writ is assimilated to that in ordinary applications of a summary nature: See Rules 1084, 1090, 1091, 1092. And where a meritorious application was made, in an action, for a mandamus to compel a city corporation to levy a special rate for library purposes under the Public Libraries Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 232, it was directed that the affidavits should be resworn and intituled as in an application (not in an action) for the prerogative writ. -Distress for taxes-Seizure of goods on premises of person taxed-Claim of title through person taxed.]-A., the owner of a mare, transferred her to the plaintiff to hold as security for the protection of certain persons against their liability upon a pro-missory note which they had indorsed for A. The arrangement was evidenced by a document recorded under the Act respecting Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgages. A. agreed to care for and exercise the mare, and was to be at liberty to enter her at the races. She was then removed from his premises and boarded at a hotel stable. When out for exercise A. took her upon his premises for a temporary purpose, and she was then distrained by the defendant, a tax collector, for municipal taxes due by A. in respect of his premises, and was ultimately sold—the proceeds being paid to the municipality:—Held, that the mare, being upon A.'s land, and the plaintiff claiming title through A., the person taxed, the defendant had the right to take her: Assessment Act, 4 Edw. VII. c. 23, s. 103. The defendant's appointment as tax collector was by resolution, not by by-law, of the municipal council:-Held, that the defendant was duly appointed. Section 325 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 3 Edw. VII. c. 19, providing that the powers of the council shall be exercised by by-law, refers to the exercise of municipal legislative power, and not to the performance of a statutory duty. Under s. 295 it is the duty of the council annually to appoint assessors and collectors; and there is no reason why this duty should not be discharged in any way indicating corporate action, e.g., by resolution. The effect of s. 321 of the Act, and the position of a de facto officer of a municipality, when his actions are directly attacked in proceedings against him personally, referred to but not determined.

The debentures were duly executed, but remained unissued in the possession and under the control of the municipality:-Held, that until the sale or negotiation of the debentures, there was no debt on the part of the township, and that the special rate was not leviable though the time fixed for payment of some of the debentures had passed. Stevenson v. Travnor (1886), 12 O.R. 804, followed. -Tax sale-Invalidity-Onus-Proof of taxes in arrear-Assessor's return-Irregularity-Action not commenced within three years.]-In an action brought on the 23rd April, 1902, for a declaration that a tax sale and conveyance under which the defendants claimed title to, and were in possession of, a certain town lot, were illegal and void as against the plaintiffs, the rightful owners, the plaintiffs proved a sufficient paper title. It was also proved that one of the defendants was in possession and had erected a valuable building, claiming title under a sale by the town treasurer, made on the 7th October, 1898, for arrears of taxes for 1895, 1896, and 1897, and a deed made in pursuance thereof on the 15th November, 1899, registered 12th December, 1899, by the proper officials to the assignee of the tax purchaser, and a subsequent conveyance, duly registered, to the defendant in possession:-Held, that the onus of proof of the invalidity of the tax title rested on the plaintiffs. Taxes for the whole period of three years next preceding the 1st January, 1898, being due and in arrear and unpaid, and those for the year 1895 having been in arrear for three years next preceding that day, the lot was, by s. 152 of the Assessment Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 224, liable to be sold in 1898 for such arrears. The proceedings leading up to the sale were substantially regular, with one exception, the omission of the clerk of the municipality to furnish the treasurer, as he is required to do, by the last clause of s. 153, with a true copy of the list furnished by the latter under s. 152, with the assessor's return, certified to by the clerk under the seal of the corporation:-Quære, whether this requirement of s. 153 was of so essential a character as, conceding that taxes were in arrear, to render a sale invalid if attacked before any statutory limitation upon an action came into operation. Love v. Webster (1895), 26 O.R. 453, distinguished:-Held, however, that as in this case the taxes had been legally imposed, the omission worked no injury to the plaintiffs, who had all the notices and delays to which they were entitled, and in respect to whose land all the other conditions essential to a valid tax sale existed, and, as the action was brought more than three years after the sale and more than two years after the deed, the defendants were entitled to rely upon ss. 208 and 209 of the Assessment Act as a defence.

 Construction of statute — Ejusdem generis.]-The statute 2 Edw. VII. c. 31, s. , amending s. 18 of the Assessment Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 224, provides by sub-s. 3 for the assessment as "land" of "the rails, ties, poles, wires, gas and other pipes, mains, conduits, substructures and superstructures " of companies of the kind referred to in the section,-" upon the streets, roads, highways, lanes and other public places of the municipality,"-and by sub-s. 4, that "save as aforesaid, rolling stock, plant and appliances " of such companies, " shall not be 'land' within the meaning of the Assessment Act, and shall not be assessable ":-Held, that upon the proper construction, this means that the rolling stock, rolling plant, and rolling appliances of such companies, which is found and used on the streets, etc., shall not by reason merely of the wide words "substructures and superstructures in sub-s. 3, be liable to assessment as "land" save as mentioned in sub-s. 3. There is no intention to exempt the companies in question from assessment in respect of such of their plant and appliances, as is otherwise "land" within sub-s. 9 of s. 2 of the Assessment Act, but is not on the street, etc. Held, also, that the lamps, hangers and transformers of an electric light company, though easily transferable from one place to another, were "super-structures" upon the street within the meaning of sub-s. 3.

-Tax sales-Omission to furnish list of lands to be sold-Conveyance by owner after sale.]-The omission of the treasurer of the municipality to furnish to the clerk a list of lands liable to be sold for taxes i. a fatal objection to the validity of a sale for taxes, and neither the limitation sections of the Assessment Act, nor the provisions of the special Act relating to sales for taxes in Port Arthur, 63 Vict. c. 86 (O.), are a protection to the tax purchaser. The owners of land sold for taxes conveyed it after the tax sale to the plaintiff who then brought an action against the tax purchaser, who was in actual possession at the time of the conveyance to the plaintiff, to set aside the sale. The statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, was in force when the conveyance was made, and when the action was brought, but was repealed before the trial of the action:-Held, that the prohibition of the statute applied, and that the action could not be maintained.

—Local improvements—General by-law.]—
The defendant corporation provided by a by-law under s. 667 of the Municipal Act, that every petition for or against the construction of a sidewalk as a local improvement should be left with the clerk of the council, whose duty it should be to examine it, and to report at the next meeting of council whether it was sufficiently signed, what real property would be benefited, and the respective frontages, and the probable lifetime and probable cost of the sidewalk. A petition for the construction of a sidewalk as a local improvement was handed to the clerk, who examined it and came to the conclusion that it was signed by two thirds of the owners. It was on the same day presented to the council, who resolved that the prayer of the petition should be granted, and that the clerk should determine forthwith whether the petition was sufficiently signed. The clerk immediately reported that it was sufficiently signed, and his report was received and adopted, but he did not report as to the other matters. The council then proceeded under s. 672 to have the work done, and on its completion the clerk prepared, and certified to the correctness of, a schedule of the frontages and assessments, etc., and the council passed a by-law directing the assessment of the lands, and, subject to appeal to the Court of Revision, adopted the particulars set out in the schedule and directed notice to be given to the owners affected:-Held, that the assessment was valid, the clerk's failure to observe the provision as to reporting at the next meeting of the council being a mere irregularity and not a fatal objection. Judgment of Falconbridge, C.J., affirmed.

Canada Company v. Town of Mitchell, 7 O.L.R. 482 (C.A.).

-Local improvement by-law-Personal service of notice-Waiver.]-It is a fatal objection to the validity of a municipal by-law authorizing a work as a local improvement, that notice of the intention of the council to undertake the work was not given to the owners of the property benefited thereby, by personal service, etc., as provided by s. 669 (la) of the Municipal Act, 1903. Semble, that an owner might waive such notice; but held, that in this case there was no conduct amounting to waiver. Semble, also, that while the direction of the statute (see 64 of the Assessment Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 224), that the members of the Court of Revision are to be sworn, should not be ignored, it does not follow that neglect or failure to take the oath renders their acts —Lands acquired by municipality at tax sale—Subsequent sale by tender.]—A municipal corporation occupies, as regards corporate property, the position of a trustee, and is amenable to the like jurisdiction of the Courts as is exercised over trustees generally. A number of lots which had been acquired by the corporation of a city for arrears of taxes, were directed to be sold, and where offers should be less than the amount for which they had been acquired and the subsequent taxes, such offers were to be dealt with by a committee composed of the mayor, one of the aldermen and the treasurer. Against the protests of the mayor, the other two members of the committee accepted an offer for a less amount than the mayor stated could be obtained therefor, from the plaintiff, and on the matter being brought before the council it was decided to ask for tenders. This was accordingly done, and tenders put in by the alleged purchaser and the plaintiff, the plaintiff's being the high-er one, but, the council notwithstanding, rejected it, accepting the lower one:-Held, that, under the circumstances the alleged sale could not be supported, and that the sale should have been to the plaintiff; but if the corporation desired an opportunity of showing any good reasons for their action in the matter there might be a further trial on that point.

-Agreement for lease of municipal lands -No covenant to pay taxes--Liability.]-Where an agreement between the appellant railway and the respondent municipal corporation provided for a renewable lease from the latter to the former of a large tract of land for railway purposes, but was silent as to payment of taxes by the appellant:-Held, that the lease should contain a covenant by the appellant to pay the same partly because the effect of the Assessment Act in force at the date of the contract was to impose such liability on the lessees of municipal lands without recourse to the corporation, and partly because a covenant to that effect was shown to be a usual covenant in the sense that the corporation invariably insisted on it in their leases. —Court of Revision and appellate tribunals—Valuation—Business or income tax.]—
The jurisdiction of the Court of Revision and the Courts exercising appellate jurisdiction therefrom, is confined to the question of valuation, namely, whether or not the assessment is too high or too low. Whether the property is assessable or not is for the assessor alone to determine, from which there is no appeal. Toronto R.W. Co. v. City of Toronto, [1905] A.C. 809, followed. There is, therefore, no jurisdiction in the appellate Courts to determine whether or not a business or income tax should be imposed. A bridge over the Niagara River between this Province and the United States was built by a bridge company for the passage over it of trains having connecting lines on either side of the river:—Held, that the rule of valuation to be applied is that provided by s. 43, s. 2 (a), of the Assessment Act, 4 Edw. VII. c. 23 (O.), namely, that part of the structure within the Province is to be valued as an integral part of the whole, and at its cash value as the same would be appraised upon a sale to another company possessing similar powers, rights and franchises, and subject to similar conditions and burdens, and incorporating the provisions and basis of the Assessment Act, set forth in s. 42, sub-s. 2.

This by-law was passed under the authority of a special Act respecting the railway company, 48 Vict. c. 65 (O.), s. 3 of which provided that it should be lawful for the corporation of any municipality through which any line of the railway had been constructed to exempt the company and its property within such municipality, in whole or in part, from municipal assessment or taxation, or to agree to a certain sum per annum or otherwise in gross or by way of commutation or composition for payment of all municipal rates. By a subsequent general enactment, 55 Vict. c. 60, s. 4 (O.), it was declared that no municipal by-law thereafter passed for exempting any portion of the ratable property of a municipality from taxation, in whole or in part, should be held or construed to exempt such property from school rates. The general Act did not by express words repeal the special Act:-Held, that it did not effect a repeal by necessary implicationgeneralia specialibus non derogant. Held, also, that there was nothing to show that the sum which the railway company were to pay was not more than the school taxes which they would be liable to pay if they were not entitled to any exemption.

"the corporation shall grant to the said companies exemption from taxation and all other municipal rates . . . on the income of the companies earned from the working of the said railway":-Held, that the plaintiff's income from dividends upon shares of the capital stock of the Ottawa Electric Railway Company was not, by reason of the agreement in part above recited, nor by reason of an earlier agreement, exempt from municipal taxation. Held, also, that the Ottawa Electric Railway Company is not a company which would, but for the agreements mentioned, be liable to be assessed for income under the provisions of the Assessment Act, 1904; and therefore s. 5, sub-s. 17, does not apply to exempt dividends or income from the stock. And a social club, having no capital stock, and consequently no dividends, profits, or earnings to be divided among its members, although it furnishes meals and liquors to them and their guests, is not a club within the meaning of subs. The assessor also assessed the buildings and mining plant as such, and adding the two latter together entered them on the roll as the assessed value of the buildings:-Held, that that method was an attempt to evade the fair meaning of the Act, and that the assess-ment of the exempted property, the plant, was illegal. It was not for the assessor in the exercise of his judgment to assess the exempted property for taxation at any amount and the illegality being established the Court had jurisdiction to dea! with the matter outside of the machinery provided by the Assessment Act for dealing with such a complaint.

—Timber licenses—Lumber camps—Business tax.]—The company, being manufacturers of lumber, held licenses to cut timber on Crown lands for 1906 and 1907. They were assessed in 1907 upon their licenses, and upon their lumber camps, and for business tax at the camps, and upon slides and dams. The company were not the owners of any land nor had they any office or mills in the township wherein they were assessed, nor did they carry on any business therein, but cut timber there, and hauled and floated it to their mills at Bracebridge, where they owned a mill and factory, and which was their chief place of business, and where they were assessed on such factory and mill and also on business:-Held, (1), that timber licenses are not assessable, not being real property within s. 5 of the Assessment Act, 3 Edw. VII, c. 23 (O.), and also because there is nothing to remove the land from the category of property of the Crown exempt from taxation. What the holder of a timber license acquires is a right to convert into personal property, and to thereby acquire a title to himself in that which until the act of conversion is real property belonging to the Crown. (2) Lumber camps are not assessable. They are mere temporary constructions, and are removed from time to time, so that it is quite possible they may be in one municipality one day and in another the next. (3) The company were not assessable for a business tax, under the conditions mentioned, with respect to their camps. Semble, under s. 10, for a business to be assessable. the land occupied or used for the purpose of the business must be land subject to taxation. (4) Slides and dams constructed on streams running through Crown lands out of logs the property of the Crown, and of no value as timber, and used by all persons who have the right to float down logs are not assessable.

The principle of Re Norfolk Voters' Lists (1907), 15 O.L.R. 108, applied:-Held, also, that the words "upon an appeal of a person, partnership or corporation assessed," in s. 77 (1) of the Act, refer to the appeal to the county Judge and are not referable to the earlier appeal to the Court of Revision.

—Sale of land for arrears of taxes.]—Held, that, according to the true construction of ss. 20 and 26 of R.S.O. 1897, c. 23, the purchaser at a Government sale of lands for arrears of taxes who has obtained a certificate of sale under s. 20 becomes the effective owner thereof if the defaulting owner does not redeem within one year, and is absolutely entitled to a conveyance under s. 26, notwithstanding that the certificate is in the possession of the defaulting owner. Held, further, that the plaintiff, who claimed title under a conveyance from the defaulting owner registered prior to the purchaser's, obtained under s. 26, could not rely on an alleged redemption by him after the expiration of one year, but must in order to succeed prove a valid written transfer to him by the purchaser of the lands in suit. The purchaser having failed to obtain and register his deed of conveyance under s. 20 within eighteen months after the sale:—Held, that priority of registration by the plaintiff did not avail under R.S.O. c. 193, s. 184, sub-s. 1, applicable to the case by virtue of s. 31 of the said c. 23, in the absence of proof his actual purchase.

The appellants in the interval had advertised their intention to purchase in case the amount bid was less than the arrears due, but omitted to give the respondent a notice in writing under s. 184, sub-s. 3, to that effect. In an action by the respondent in September, 1906, to set aside the sale on the grounds (1) that the land was insufficiently described in the assessment roll; (2) that he did not receive the said notice:-Held, (1) that s. 8 of 3 Edw. VII. c. 86, cured the defect (if any) in the assessment roll; (2) that the Act intended that the notice under s. 184, sub-s. 3, should be given to the owner, but that the respondent could and did waive it; otherwise that the failure to give it was within the words of the said s. 8 and was cured by it. Held, further, with regard to the respondent's alternative claim to redeem, that the period of one year from the date of sale allowed by the Assessment Acts of 1892 and 1897 had not been altered by subsequent legislation in any manner applicable to this case.

—Income tax—Mining company—"Income derived from the mine."]—The Assessment Act, 4 Edw. VII. e. 23, s. 36, subs. 3 (O.), provides: "In estimating the value of mineral lands, such lands and the buildings thereon, shall be valued and estimated at the value of other lands in the neighbourhood for agricultural purposes, but the income derived from any mine or mineral work shall be subject to taxation in the same mammer as other incomes under this Act":—Held, that the net receipts for the year's work of a mine, left after deducting working expenses, etc., is "the income" derived from the mine within the meaning of the above section, at any rate where, as in this case, dividends have been declared based upon the net receipts as ascertained.

-Toll bridge over navigable waters-Liability to assessment. |-A toll bridge across the waters of the Bay of Quinté and its approaches, erected by a company incorporated by 50 & 51 Viet. c. 97 (D.), and acquired by the plaintiffs, who were incorporated by 62 & 63 Vict. c. 95 (D.), was held to be liable to assessment, as regards the part situate in the township of Ameliasburg, as real property, within the meaning of the Ontario Assessment Act, 4 Edw. VII. c. 23. The effect of the two Dominion statutes referred to is to confer a perpetual right in the nature of an easement to construct and maintain the bridge across the navigable waters of the Bay of Quinté; the words "real property," in s. 2 (7) of the Assessment Act, by virtue of s. 2 (8) of the Municipal Act, 1903, include an easement; and the bridge comes within none of the exemptions mentioned in the Assessment Act. The interest of the Crown in any property is exempt, but that leaves the interest of any person else not holding for the Crown, or in trust for the Crown, liable under the general words of the statute; and the plaintiffs were not agents or trustees for the Crown. S. 37 of the Act applies only to a bridge forming part of a toll road, and not to this bridge; nor is this bridge a public road or way, within the meaning of s. 5 (5) of the Assessment Act.

-Tax sale-Onus-Proof of validity of assessment and subsequent proceedings.]—
The onus of proving a valid sale for taxes is upon the party setting up title under a tax deed; the production of the deed is not enough; further evidence must be given going to the foundation on which the deed rests, in order that the validity of the assessment and all subsequent proceedings may be exhibited. Jones v. Bank of Upper Canada (1867), 13 Gr. 74, and Stevenson v. Traynor (1886), 12 O.R. 804. followed. The defendant contended that an easement or right of wav enjoyed by the plaintiff over ten feet of land sold for taxes was extinguished by the sale in 1893 as being included in the word "privilege" used in the Consolidated Assessment Act. 1892, s. 137, then in force:-Semble, that the law of Ontario does not provide for the taxation of easements; and the title to an casement cannot be extinguished by the sale for taxes of the servient tenement, without notice to the person who uses it and without opportunity for him to exonerate the land by the payment of taxes.

-Departmental Store. | -By sub-s. 3 of s. 51 of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board Act (1906) 6 Edw. VII. c. 31, an appeal from the decision of the Board on an appeal thereto from a Court of Revision, lies only upon a question of law. Whether or not a firm carried on the busi ness of what was known as a departmental store or that of a retail merchant dealing in more than five branches of retail trade or business in the same premises or separate departments of premises under one roof or in connected premises, so as to be liable to the assessment imposed by s. 10 (1) (e) of the Assessment Act, 4 Edw. VII. c. 23 (O.), is a question of fact and not of law. Leave, therefore, to appeal in such a case from the decision of the Board was refused.

—"Properties fronting"—Interpretation.]

Sale of land for taxes-Certificate-Possessory action.]-The purchaser, on a sale for municipal taxes under the provisions of Arts. 1000 and 1001 M.C., of part of a lot of land who receives the certificate provided for in Art. 1004 M.C. which does not define the situation or boundaries of the land has not the seizin which entitles him to maintain a possessory action therefor. In such case his action will be dismissed with reservation of his right to sue again, especially where it is impossible, with the evidence adduced, to establish without having a bornage the situation, in one or the other of two municipalities, of the land in question, and, consequently, the validity of the sale of it. The notices required by Arts. 961 and 1006 M.C. need not be given to persons acquiring possession of immovables who have not been made aware, in the manner provided by Art. 746 M.C. of the change of ownership, nor to absentees who have not appointed agents as required by Art.

Saint Apollinaire v. Roger, Q.R. 36 S.C.

-Taxes - Privilege-Liquor license.]-The right to sell intoxicating liquors under a license is distinct from the business and, therefore, is not subject to the privilege for municipal taxes. This privilege on pro-perty results only from statutory provi-sions which should be strictly construed. The provisions creating it for the taxes levied by the city of Montreal (secs. 587a and 388 of the charter) relate only to movable goods and thereby exclude incorporeal rights such as those arising from a license for the sale of intoxicating liquors issued under the Quebec License Act.

Mitchell v. City of Montreal, Que. S.C.

-Tax sale-Redemption-Interpretation of statutes. |-The rule that repeal by implication of an existing enactment will not be inferred from a subsequent one, unless both are incompatible, applies in the case of a statute "to revise and consolidate" those on a given subject, v.g., a city charter. Hence, if, in an existing Act, a right to redeem property sold for taxes by a city is given with a proviso that privileged and hypothecary claims shall thereby revive, a subsequent Act "to revise and consolidate the different Acts of the Legisla-ture relating to that city," that embodies the enactments for the sale of property for taxes and its redemption, but omits the proviso for the revival of privileged and hypothecary claims, will not be deemed to repeal the latter by implication and it continues in force and vigour.

Kennedy v. Godmaire, 38 Que. S.C. 527.

-Tax sale-Irregularity.]-A trustee may sue to annul the sale for taxes, under municipal authority of an immovable belonging to the trust estate. When the charter of a city empowers it to sell immovables for taxes imposed upon them on condition, among others, of announcing the amount due in the notice of sale, the declaration at the sale that it is made for an amount greater than that announced makes it void. It is likewise void when there has been no previous levy on the movables of the owner when the charter provides therefor and requires it.

McConnell v. City of Hull, Q.R. 38 S.C. 434 (Ct. Rev.).

-Valuation - Error - Oral testimony.]-Oral evidence is inadmissible to prove that a cadastral number was given to an immovable in the valuation roll by inadvertence instead of the real number of the immovable valued by the assessors.

Village of Cowansville v. Nozes, Q.R. 38 S.C. 427.

—Valuation rolls—Over valuation.]—(1) The valuation roll of a town may be set aside by the Superior Court, on a petition to that effect, "by reason of illegality," R.S.Q., s. 4376. Such illegality must be of a kind that vitiates the roll, as a whole, and over-valuation in particular cases affords no ground for such a proceeding. The party affected, in such a case, has a right of complaint to the town council, an appeal from the decision of the latter to the Circuit Court, within a prescribed delay. The remedy by petition to the Superior Court, and that by complaint and appeal to the Circuit Court, are distinct in their purposes, and a party using the former will not be allowed to so amend his petition as to make it include the other. (2) Allegations in a petition to quash, setting forth in substance that, in making the valuation roll, the valuators did not give their own estimated value of the property therein, but, at the bidding of the council, over-valued it in order to make the borrowing of money by the corporation more easy, are not demurrable, as they amount to charges of illegality for which, if proved, the roll should be set aside. (3) The oaths of office of valuators need not be in writing. (4) When no substantial wrong is shown, a valuation roll will not be set aside for mere irregularities, such as insufficient notices, irregular adjournments of sessions of the town council, the refusal to examine the valuators at the hearing of a complaint, or mistakes as to valuation in particular cases. (5) When the valuators are two or more in number, they are not bound to jointly visit or inspect the properties they have to value.

Martel v. Corporation of South Marston, 37 Que. S.C. 289.

-Local improvement-Rating in proportion to benefit-Trivial objections first taken in appeal.]-Where a statute for the widening of a street directs that part of the cost shall be paid by the owners of property bordering on the street, the apportionment of the tax should be made upon a consideration of the enhancement in value accruing to such properties respectively and the rate levied in propor tion to the special benefit each parcel has derived from the local improvement. Where an assessment roll covering over half a million dolars has been duly confirmed without objection on the part of a ratepayer that his property has been too highly assessed by a comparatively trivial amount, he cannot be permitted afterwards to urge that objection before the courts upon an application to have the assessment roll set aside. Judgment appealed from (Q.R. 9 Q.B. 142) reversed; judgment of the Montreal Superior Court (Q.R. 15 S.C. 43) restored.

-Pasture land-Valuation - Art. 942a M.C.]—The C. P. Railway Co. had acquired more than 200 arpents of land for railway purposes, but changing its inten tion, let it as a farm by an annual lease, with the condition that it should only be used for pasturage, for which it was entirely unsuited. The company had also prepared a plan for dividing the land into lots, and had taken steps to have it adopted by the corporation and the Govern-ment and a cadastre made. It even gave notice of its sale in lots. For assessment purposes the land had been appraised at its real value, and the company petitioned the corporation to reduce the valuation. This having been refused, the company appealed to the Circuit Court, claiming that the land should be valued according to its value for agricultural purposes only:-Held, that the property should be estimated at its real value, and not according to any value it might possess for agricultural purposes alone.

-Contestation of valuation roll-Discretion of valuators-Interest of petitioners.]

—(1) Valuators must proceed strictly according to law, and it cannot be said, in answer to a petition to set aside a valuation roll, that they have acted in the exercise of their discretion or according to an established practice. (2) It cannot be alleged that the party who contests a valuation roll is acting in the interests of other parties, unless it is also alleged that the petitioner himself is without any interest whatever.

P.R. 225 (Levergne, J.).

-Tax on telegraph companies-Companies incorporated by Parliament—Interprovincial lines.]—1. The Quebec Act, imposing an annual tax of $2,000 on all telegraph companies having a paid-up capital exceeding $50,000, and operating lines of telegraph for the use of the public within the Province, and doing business there, is intra vires of the Legislature. 2. The telegraph company, appellant, although incorporated by Parliament and operating interprovincial lines of telegraph, that is to say, in all the Provinces of Canada, except British Columbia and Prince Edward Island, having a paid-up capital exceeding $50,000, is liable for this annual tax of $2,000, inasmuch as it carries on business in the Province of Quebec and operates a part of its lines of telegraph therein for domestic despatches, that is to say, for despatches sent from one point to another within the Province. 3. The action of the collector of revenue in his capacity as such for the recovery of the tax is presumed to be managed and directed by the Attorney-General, who is dominus litis thereof, and consequently, the intervention of Attorney-General for the purpose of sustaining the constitutionality of the statute is a useless and superfluous proceeding, in respect of which, under the circumstances, he cannot be given costs. 4. The Court of Appeal will not take into consideration objections more to the form than to the merits of the case, which have not been taken in the Court of first instance.

-Prescription-City of Montreal-Special assessment-Contestation-Interruption of prescription.]-Held, (affirming the judgment of the Superior Court, Doherty, J., 23 Que. S.C., p. 461):-1. Under the former charter of the City of Montreal (52 Vict. c. 79), the contestation of a special assessment roll, by a person assessed therein, had not the effect of interrupting prescription as regards other persons subject to such assessment. 2. The fact that the person contesting the roll obtained a temporary order enjoining the city against making any collection under the roll attacked, did not constitute an interruption of prescription as regards other persons assessed by the same roll, where such order was made without objection on the part of the city, and no steps were subsequently taken by the city to obtain the rescission of the order.

—Tax sale—Mistake—Retrocession.]—The sale of another person's property is radically null; thus, the sale of an immovable, through error, for municipal taxes assessed on the adjoining property, is void and does not discharge the hypothees with which the immovable sold is affected. In the ease in Court the retrocession obtained by the real owner from the purchaser or his creditors cannot be deemed an acknowledgment of the validity of such sale; and even when the transaction is recognized as valid by the owner such recognized as valid by the owner such recognizion can only be deemed a new sale by him not affecting the rights of third parties.

Action for municipal and school taxes—Jurisdiction — Declinatory exception.]—In a suit in the Superior Court, claiming municipal taxes to an amount exceeding $100, accompanied with a demand for school taxes, a declinatory exception asking the dismissal of that portion of the demand which is for school taxes, on the ground that the Circuit Court has exclusive jurisdiction, will be maintained, notwithstanding Art. 170 C.C.P., it being impossible in such a case to transmit the whole record to the Circuit Court.

-Sale of land-Warranty-Special assessment-Prescription.]-Where an immovable is sold with warranty against all troubles and charges whatsoever the existence at the time of the sale of a rate for construction of a church does not give the purchaser a recourse on warranty for re imbursement against the vendor if the purchaser at the time was aware of the rate being fixed. School taxes and rates constituting a charge affecting an immovable, being public charges, or of general application, should enter into the calculation of a purchaser of the immovable and are an obligation on him from the time of the sale. A purchaser with legal warranty, who has paid municipal or school taxes due by the vendor, cannot claim repayment thereof from the latter if, at the time of such payment, the debt of the vendor to the municipality for such taxes was prescribed, since the purchaser, being subrogated to the rights of the municipality, was in no better position than the latter as against the vendor.

—Contestation of roll—Limitations of actions—Interruption of prescription—Suspensive condition.]—The prescription of three years in respect of taxes provided by the Montreal City Charter, 52 Vict. c. 79 (Q.), runs from the date of the deposit of the assessment roll, as finally revised, in the treasurer's office, when the taxes become due and exigible, and the prescription is not suspended or interrupted by a contestation of the assessment roll, even although the contestation may have been filed by the proprietor of the lands assessed. —Assessment due on filing of the roll—Action—Limitation.]—Under s. 231 of the City of Montreal charter, 1889 (52 Vict. c. 79), the amount of an assessment becomes due and recoverable on the filing of the roll of assessment in the office of the City Treasurer. In an action by the city to recover after the period of prescription enacted by s. 120, calculated from the date of filing, had elapsed, it appeared that the respondent's predecessor had been a party to proceedings had for its annulment:-Held, (1) That the period was not interrupted thereby within the meaning of Art. 2227 of the Civil Code, for there had been no acknowledgment of liability. (2) That there had been no impossibility to sue with in the meaning of Art. 2232, for the right of action was not by the above Act suspended during the proceedings. (3) That the debt in suit was not dependent on a condition within the meaning of Art. 2236; though s. 144 of the Act limited the time within which the roll might be annulled, it did not make the date of its coming into force conditional on the roll not being either attacked or annulled.

-Municipal corporation-Statute labour-Sale for taxes.] - A municipal corporation may, at the cost of a ratepayer obliged to maintain a public road, cause a ditch obstructed by him to be cleared by the road inspector if he fails to do so himself upon being notified and required to remove the obstruction. (2) The municipality cannot be held liable in damages on account of a resolution to the above effect, nor for including the cost of the work as part of the municipal taxes due by the ratepayer in the statement sent to the secretary-treasurer of the county under Art. 373 of the Municipal Code to be advertised on the sale, for the whole amount, of the property affected in virtue of Arts. 998 to 1001 of the Municipal Code.

—Sale of immovables for municipal taxes —Recitals in deed—Burden of proof—Prescription.]—(1) The sale of immovables for taxes not assessed upon them, or for an amount in excess of such taxes, is null and void. (2) The recitals in a deed of sale, under Arts. 1008 and 1009 M.C., do not afford a presumption juris et de jure of a valid sale, and evidence of its nullity is admissible, e.g., to show that the taxes for which it was made were not due, and that the formalities required by law were not complied with. (3) The burden of proof of the legality of the sale is upon the purchaser when it is challenged or impugned by the original owner, or by those whose title is derived from his. (4) A deed of sale for taxes which is void as stated firstly above, is not a title (juste titre) that can avail as a ground for prescription by ten years, nor does the prescription of two years of Art. 1015 M.C. apply to it.

- "Current year" - Assessment and taxes -Limitation of action-Local improvements.]-By s. 120 of the charter of the City of Montreal, 52 Vict. c. 9 (Que.), the right to recover taxes is prescribed and extinguished by the lapse of "three years, in addition to the current year, to be counted from the time at which such tax, etc., became due." A special assessment for local improvements became due on the 14th of March, 1898, and action was brought to recover the same on the 4th of February, 1902:-Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (Q.R. 15 K.B. 479) the Chief Justice and Duff, J., dissenting, that the words "current year ' in the section in question, mean the year commencing on the date when the tax became due and that the time limited for prescription had not expired at the time of the institution of the action.

-Right to appeal of married woman inscribed as landowner on roll of valuation.] --(1) A married woman who is the owner of real estate in a municipality, whose name is on the valuation roll as such and who is a taxpayer, is qualified and has the right to take the appeal to the Circuit Court given in s. 4 of Article 1061 M.C. (2) Amendments of the valuation roll, in any year in which a new roll is not made, can only be made in the District of Quebec in the months of June or July. Hence resolutions passed by a local council in the District of Quebec in the month of September, to erase the names of proprietors inscribed on the valuation roll and to substitute in their stead the names of a large number of other parties, are null and void and will be quashed on appeal.

—Levying taxes—Notice.]—The proceedings of boards or committees of municipal councils, in the absence of ratification by the latter, cannot be admitted as evidence against the corporation from which the committees were formed. The special notice provided for by Art. 961, M.C., and Arts. 4550, R.S.Q., and by s. 544, sub-s. 2 of 52 Vict. c. 80 (Que.), is only required as a condition precedent for levying municipal taxes by seizure of movables or immov.

ables. Recourse by ordinary action in Court is open in while notice is not required. The expression if when proceedings are taken in 1.52 of 52 Vict. c. 80, refers to seizure of movables or immovables in levying for taxes and not to the recourse by action. In exercising the latter the corporation cannot demand the additional 10 per cent. provided for by the section.

—Tax under repealed by-law—Recourse for repayment.]—The repeal of an Act which authorizes the corporation of a city to impose a tax by by-law involves the repeal of every by-law passed pursuant to such Act. Therefore, a ratepayer who has paid a tax imposed by by-law after repeal of the Act under which it was passed has recourse by action for money paid by mistake (répétition de l'indu) to recover back the amount. The corporation cannot set up against such action the fact that after the payment and before the action was instituted the repealed Act was again brought into force.

—Jurisdiction of the Court of Review—Warranty—Principal action for recovery of school taxes.]—The Superior Court sitting in Review has no jurisdiction over a judgment rendered by the Circuit Court, sitting at Stanstead, in an action of warranty brought by a defendant against whom the principal action is for the recovery of $124 school taxes, and an inscription for review of such a judgment will be struck on motion.

—Valuation roll—Notice of deposit and of revision by the council.]—(1) Notice of the deposit of a valuation roll, under Art. 732 M.C., and of its revision by the municipal council, under Art. 736, may be given simultaneously by one and the same document, no interval of time being required to lapse between the two. (2) Municipal councils in revising valuation rolls have a discretion with which the Courts will not interfere by the exercise of their reforming power except in cases of evident injustice amounting to oppression.

Ledoux v. Ste. Edwidge de Clifton, 30

Que. S.C. 29 (Hutchinson, J.).

—Quality of persons named on roll—Presumption.]—The insertion on an assessment roll of the names of persons as owners of property is not conclusive as to such ownership. Therefore, a person who has paid the taxes on an immovable, having been placed on the roll as owner thereof, has a right to be re-imbursed the amount on establishing that he was not the owner at the time the taxes were imposed.

—Exemptions—Meaning of "parsonage."]
—(1) An appeal lies to the Superior Court sitting in review from a final judgment of a Recorder's Court, for an amount exceeding five hundred dollars, in an action for municipal or school taxes. (2) Under 3 Edw. VII. c. 62, s. 36 (Que.), a parsonage is a house set apart by a church or congregation for the residence of its priest or minister and actually occupied by him as such. Failing either of these two conditions, a house is not exempt from taxation under the statute.

Que. S.C. 257.

-Land sold for taxes-Mode of redemption.]-The right to redeem an immovable sold for taxes under 62 Vict. c. 58, s. 402 (Que.), like that of redemption under the title "sale" of the Civil Code cannot be exercised by a reciprocal deed of retrocession. These rights operate as resolutory conditions and are exercised, by those entitled to them, by a unilateral deed expressing consent the effect of which is to replace matters in the condition in which they would have been if the sale had not been made. The parties remain with their respective rights subject to the legal obligations to which redemption is subordinated. Therefore, one who exercises this right of redemption cannot demand a deed or declaration respecting it especially if provisions are introduced into such documents involving obligations.

Parent v. Kennedy, Q.R. 33 S.C. 55.

—Schools Act—Collection roll—Description of immovable.]—The description of an immovable as "No. P628 of the official cadastre of the parish of ..." in a collection roll for school rates is sufficient within the terms of es. 342 and 360 of the Education Act when part only of the lot described under its cadastral number in the municipal assessment roll is situated within the limits of the school district. Moreover, such an irregularity (if it is one) can only be invoked by a demand for rectification or, at most, as a preliminary objection and cannot be opposed to the merits of an action to recover the amount of the tax. The judgment dismissing an action for non-compliance with precedent formalities is not chose jugée against a second action brought after these formalities have been observed. Where the first action was dismissed with costs the payment of such costs is not a condition precedent to the institution of a second.

-Municipal corporation-Conveyance of land for street-Obligation to open-Sidewalks-Adjoining owners-Action for cost of sidewalks-Notice.]-The agreement by which a ratepayer conveys land to the municipal corporation on condition that it be opened does not oblige the corporation to make sidewalks. When municipal bylaws place on adjoining owners the obligation to construct sidewalks and in default authorize their construction by the municipality after notice to the defaulters and permit it to recover from the latter the cost, the omission to give such notice is a defence to the action only when the sum claimed exceeds what the execution of the work would have cost the defendants had they themselves performed it.

Corporation of Three Rivers v. Dumoulin, Q.R. 31 S.C. 75 (Ct. Rev.).

-Delay for contesting collection rolls-Special exemption from tax by contract.] -(1) An action to recover a debt, which, on the face of the declaration, falls under Art. 2267 C.C., is open to demurrer by the defendant, who may set up the short prescription by inscription in law. When the charter of a municipal corporation provides that its collection rolls for taxes must be contested within a fixed delay, a ratepayer, who has a special right, under a contract, to refuse payment of the tax, is not bound to act thereon within the delay so fixed. He may stand by until called upon to pay, and then set up his right, though the delay to contest the roll has expired.

Joyce v. Town of Outremont, 18 Que. K.B. 447.

-Street railway-Special privileges-As sessment roll-Description of property.]-A municipal corporation which, under authority of a special Act, grants to a street railway company, in consideration of the annual payment of a percentage of its profits, the privilege of establishing its right of way, and erecting poles and other necessary constructions on the streets and elsewhere in the municipality, is not thereby deprived of its power to tax such constructions, etc., under the general powers given to it by its charter. The following description in the valuation and collection rolls of such property, "William Street, St. Ann's Ward, part of 1209 and motive power on subdivisions 1-8, 1218 pt. 1209, land $34,. 000, buildings $60,000, 1-8, 1218 buildings $220,000," is sufficient within the terms of 62 Vict. c. 79, s. 375. A waiver in writing by a ratepayer of the prescription against collecting his taxes is valid and preverts the time from running.

City of Montreal v. Montreal Street Railway Co., Q.R. 35 S.C. 321 (Ct. Rev.).

Assessment roll-Joinder of lots-Sale-Description — Division on sale.]—The joinder, in the valuation and assessment rolls, of two cadastral lots as a single entry for municipal purposes is at most an irregularity of which the owner must take advantage within the prescribed delays, after which he cannot, in the absence of prejudice, have the entry struck out of the rolls. In the statement of taxes due prepared by the secretary-treasurer of the local council, and in the extract sent by him to the secretary-treasurer of the county, as well as in the list of sales published by the latter, all of which is provided for by Arts, 371, 373, 998-9 M.C., the lots should be described as in the said rolls as forming one property. Taking the bid at the sale for the smallest portion as provided in Art. 1001 M.C. is a severance of the two lots so joined as one. Hence, the offer to pay the amount due for taxes and costs by the purchase of one of the two lots is not a valid bid, and the sale of the one chosen by the purchaser and certificate of its delivery to him are void. Donais v. County of Shefford, Q.R. 36 S.C. 367.

-Taxes-Action to recover amount-Defence-Objection to collection roll.]-A ratepayer sued for the amount of his municipal taxes cannot set up as a defence to the action objections to the collection roll for which he could, within the prescribed delay which has expired, have demanded that it be annulled.

Cameron v. Town of Westmount, Q.R. 18 K.B. 300.

-Valuation roll-Over value of the property ordered by the council.]-It is legal, in an action to annul a valuation roll, to allege that the corporation defendant dictated to the valuators to over value the properties, in general, irrespective of the real value of said real estate, this irregularity being sufficient to justify the annulment of the roll.

Percival v. Montreal West, 11 Que. P.R.

—Taxes—Sale of land—Redemption.]—The owner of an immovable, sold by the sheriff under the provisions of s. 401 of the Charter of Montreal for taxes, or his representative, who has redeemed under s. 402 has a right of action against the purchaser for a judicial declaration of his exercise of the right of redemption and observance of the necessary formalities. The purchaser cannot set up, as a defence, the expenses which he has been obliged to incur, but retains the right to claim reimbursement thereof when a demand for possession of the immovable is made on him.

-Appeal from assessment-Judgment confirming—Payment under protest—Res judicata.]—J., having been assessed in 1896 on personal property as a resident of St. John, N.B., appealed without success to the appeals committee of the common council and then applied to the Supreme Court of New Brunswick for a writ of certiorari to quash the assessment, which was refused. An execution having been threatened he then paid the taxes under protest. In 1897 he was again assessed under the same circumstances and took the same course with the exception of appealing to the Supreme Court of Canada from the judgment refusing a certiorari, and that could held the assessment void and ordered the writ to issue for quashing. J. then brought an action for repayment of the amount paid for the assessment in 1896:-Held, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, that the judgment refusing a certiorari to quash the assessment in 1896 was res judicata against J., and he could not recover the amount so paid.

Jones v. City of St. John, 31 Can. S.C.R.

—Assessment, warrant of—Certiorari.]—The municipality of the county of Westmorland having issued a warrant of assessment to the city of Moncton under the provisions of the Act respecting Rates and Taxes, C. S. 1903, c. 170, s. 34, before the same was delivered to the city assessors or any assessment made thereunder the city of Moncton applied for certiorari to remove the warrant alleging that part of the amount to be assessed under it was not properly chargeable to the city. There was no evidence that the city itself was liable to be taxed as a rate payer:—Held, that there was no ground for the application there being no assessment for the Court to act upon and the city as such having no interest in the assessment.

Ex parte City of Moneton, 39 N.B.R. 326.

-Action for rates and taxes-Defence of excessive amount-Proof of assessment.]-Defendant was assessed in the City of Halifax for city, poor, county and school rates and taxes for the years 1894 and 1895, the property upon which the rates were assessed being the S.S. "Newfoundland," then lying in Halifax harbor, of which defendant was alleged to be owner, and the valuation of which, for the purposes of assessment, was placed at the sum of $5,000. Under the provisions of the Halifax City Charter Acts 1891, c. 58, s. 341, a court is established for the purpose of hearing all appeals from assessments, and is empowered, under subsequent sections of the Act, to determine and hear all objections of ratepayers, who shall have duly appealed, to the valuations or assessments which have been made upon such ratepayers and their properties, and to reduce or increase the valuations, etc. In an action by plaintiff to recover from defendant the amount claimed to be due for rates and taxes, defendant pleaded among other things that at the time of the said assessments, defendant was not the owner of more than a onequarter interest in said ship:—Held, (following the Town of Westville v. Munro, 32 N.S.R., p. 311), that the defendant having received notice of the assessment, if he was dissatified therewith, should have brought the matter before the Assessment Appeal Court, established for that purpose, and, having failed to do so, that the assessment was conclusive, and could not be attacked in an action to recover the amount assessed. The only evidence before the court of the assessment and the rate due thereon, was the city collector's certificate of taxes unpaid, and s. 362 of the City Charter, which provides that all rates and taxes shall become due the 31st day of May in each year, and that it shall be the duty of the city collector, immediately thereafter, to take proceedings, etc. There was no evidence to prove the col-lector's signature to the certificate or that he was collector:—Held, that the evidence was wrongly received. Held, nevertheless, that as defendant, in his defence, admitted that he was assessed for the amount claimed, and that the rate alleged to be due on such assessment was correct. it was not necessary for plaintiff to prove the assessment or the rate due thereon. City of Halifax v. Farquhar, 33 N.S.R. 209

Under the provisions of the Halifax City Charter, Acts of 1891, c. 58, s. 336, the following, among other property, is exempted from assessment: "All personal property of military persons residing in government buildings or barracks," etc.:—Held, that a private house in the city, under lease to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department, for the purpose of being used as a place of residence by a military person, for whom there was no suitable accommodation in any barracks in Halifax, was a "government building" within the meaning of the statute, and that personal property contained in such building was exempt from taxation for -City Sewers-Frontage and entry fees-Permits to enter.]-The city of M. by its act of incorporation is authorized to levy on the owners of lots frontage fees for sewers and to collect them as ordinary city taxes; the Act also gives authority to make by-laws to regulate the way and manner of entering the sewers and to prevent the entry of any sewer, unless the entry and frontage fees were first paid. A by-law was made providing that no person should enter any public sewer until all entry and frontage fees were paid. E., the owner of a lot by purchase from the sheriff under an execution by the city of M. for general city taxes (not frontage fees) on which frontage fees had been rated against a former owner and not paid applied for a mandamus to compel the city to grant him a permit to enter a sewer without payment of the frontage fees:-Held, refusing the mandamus, that the city could not be compelled to issue the permit until the fees were paid, even though they had lost the right to enforce payment against the owner of the lot. Ex parte Edgett, 36 N.B.R. 224.

-Road taxes-Certiorari-Proceedings of ministerial character.]-A writ of certiorari was directed to the road commissioners of district 17 in the municipality of Halifax, to remove the record of the assessment roll of said district assessing the inhabitants for road taxes, and the return made to the county treasurer of persons who had made default. A writ was also directed to the stipendiary magistrate for the county to remove the record of a return of defaulters who had not paid or commuted their taxes, and the warrant of distress issued by him thereon. There was a motion to quash or set aside the assessment roll, the warrant of distress, etc. It appeared that the allowance of the writs had not been opposed, and there was no motion to set aside the orders, or to quash the writs or either of them The amount of the tax was fixed by law, the value of the property by the county assessors, and the rate of assessment by the county council, and the stipendiary magistrate, in issuing his warrant of distress against defaulters, was not called upon to exercise any judicial function:-Held, that the proceedings were of a purely ministerial character and were not a proper subject for certiorari. Held, that the process having improvidently issued, the Court had power of its own motion to set it aside and that, under the circumstances appearing in this case, the writs should be superseded and the returns thereto taken off the files of the Court. The affidavits filed showed an intention to attack the legality of the formation of the district under Acts of 1900, c. 23, and the appointment of the commissioners. Held, that this could not be done in this form of proceeding.

Rex ex rel. Corbin v. Peveril, 36 N.S.R.

—Rates and taxes—Discrimination against non-residents by under-valuation.]-In a petition for relief by a non-resident ratepayer under 44 Vict. c. 9 (Acts 1881), it is sufficient evidence of authority to warrant the judge in acting, that the party petitioning describes himself as the agent of the person aggrieved in the matter of the assessment, and swears to the truth of the statements in the petition. The time within which the petition must be presented under the Act does not begin to run until after the assessment complained of has been made up from the corrected list and filed with the County Secretary. and then within one month, either from notice of the assessment from the county officer charged with the duty of giving notice, or from the time the person assessed first heard or knew of such assessment. It is no objection to an application under the Act that objection to the valuation of the property was made to the assessors under Consolidated Statutes, c. 100, s. 59, and that the objection might have been further prosecuted before the valuators under s. 68. Where one of the objections under the Act is that the property of residents had been greatly undervalued, the effect of which was to increase the rate of non-residents, it is not necessary that the residents, the valuation of whose property is attacked, should have notice of the application. Per totam curiam. The right to apply for relief from general county taxes is not waived by payment of the school tax. The petition under the Act must contain facts from which it can be collected that the petitioner is aggrieved, or must state the fact. The specific grounds upon which a certiorari is granted, must, under Rule 7 Mich., 1899, be stated, and a general statement, i.e., " also all other grounds taken at the hearing in the court below," is objectionable.

Railway bonds, secured by a mortgage, are not mortgages within the meaning of s. 121 as amended by 63 Vict. c. 43, and are not exempt from taxation.

which were claimed to be void for want of

at the time the goods were replevied they tion " the road, rolling stock . . exclusively for the purpose of any railway. either in the course of construction or in operation exempted under the authority of any Act passed by the legislature of Nova Scotia.' Prior to the passing of this Act the appellants' railway had always been exempt from taxation, but all former Assessment Acts were repealed by these Revised Statutes, so that it was not "exempted " when the latter came into force. By 2 Ed. 7, c. 25, assented to on March 27th, 1902, the word "exempted" was struck out of the above clause, and in May, 1902, the appellants were included in the assessment roll for that year for taxation on their railway:-Held, by Taschereau, C.J., that under the above recited clause the railway was exempt from taxation. Held, by Sedgewick, Davies, Nesbitt, and Killam, JJ., that if the railway could be taxed under the Assessment Act of 1900, the rate was not authorized until the amending Act of 1902 by which it was exempt had come into force and no valid tax was, therefore, imposed.

Dominion Iron and Steel Company v. Me-

-Right of company operating railway to exemption-Branch lines-Property not used exclusively for railway purposes.]-The Assessment Act R.S. N.S. 1900, c. 73, s. 4, sub-s. (p), (as amended by Acts of 1902, c. 25) exempts from taxation "the read, rolling stock, track, wharves, station houses, buildings and plant used exclusively for the purpose of any railway either in course of construction or in operation under the authority of any Act passed by the Legislature of Nova Scotia:"—Held, that this exemption extended to all lines of railway built, owned or operated by the plaintiff company, including road bed, right of way, piers, and plant and appurtenances of extensions sought to be assessed by the defendant, but not to lands which formed no part of the land used exclusively for railway purposes or which, having been at one time so used, had been abandoned or appropriated to other purposes, or to a steamer used solely for the company's own purposes. It could not have been the intention of the Legislature, in granting exemption, to permit a general system of railways and connections to be so cut up that certain parts should be liable to taxation while other parts were exempted. Neither is it sufficient to deprive a company of the benefit of exemption that, at the time in question, only coal mined by the company is carried over one of its extensions, there being provision under the Railway Act to compel it, if necessary, to carry freight for any other person or com-

-Exemption from taxation-Manufacturing concern-Construction of Act-Words "law" and "county."]-Plaintiff company was given power by its act of incorporation (Acts of 1899, c. 84, s. 6) "to purchase, acquire, hold, use, occupy, sell and convey real estate, etc." By another section (s. 14) it was provided that, if the company should locate any of its works in any part of the County of Cape Breton, all the property, income and earnings of the company should be exempt from taxation "under any law, ordinance, or by-law of any municipal or local authority;" provided that such exemption should not apply "to any building used as a dwelling house, or for any purpose not con nected with the business of the company, nor to land on which the same is erected. The defendant municipality sought to assess lands not purchased for the works or operations, or in connection with the operations of the company, and which were offered to the public for sale at a price greater than that paid for them:-Held, the word "law," as used in s. 14, must be read in the sense of general law of the Province relating to assessment, there being nothing in the context to restrict its meaning. Also, that the word "county must be read as meaning the whole geographical area of the County, including any city or town within its borders. Also, that the wording of the Statute made it clear that with the exception specifically mentioned, the exemption given to the company, was intended to apply to all taxation, whether general assessment for the county or local.

Dominion Iron and Steel Co. v. City of Sydney, 37 N.S.R. 495.

-Municipal by-law-Exemption to "company " - Discrimination.]-By Act, the council of the Town of Woodstock are empowered from time to time, at their discretion, to give encouragement to manufacturing enterprises within the town by exempting the property thereof from taxa-tion for a period of not more than ten years:-Held, that a by-law of the council exempting any company establishing a woollen mill in the town from taxation for a period of ten years, was ultra vires, being a discrimination in favor of a company as against private persons engaged in the same business. A bill alleging that plaintiffs were entitled to exemption from taxation under a by-law passed by the defendants, held sufficient on demurrer without alleging that the by-law was authorized by statute.

Carleton Woollen Company, Limited, v. Town of Woodstock, 3 N.B. Eq. 138, affirmed, 37 N.B.R. 545.

-Parting with property by conveyance after assessment-Liability.]-Under the provisions of the Halifax City Charter, s

303, the annual assessment is to be rated on the owners of real and personal property by an equal dollar rate upon the value of real and personal property within the city. By s. 302, the annual assessment is to be prepared and delivered to the city collector not later than the 15th day of March in each year. Defendant was the owner of a lot of land which was assessed for the purpose of rates and taxes for the year 1903-4, and, on the 15th March, the book of general assessment was delivered to the collector of rates and taxes in the form prescribed by law. Several weeks later, defendant conveyed the lot of land so assessed to a purchaser who went into possession:—Held, that, in addition to the lien on property for taxes, there is also a personal responsibility, and the mere fact of defendant parting with the land by conveyance, after it had been duly assessed, could not in any way affect the liability imposed upon the owner when once the property had been properly assessed in his name

City of Halifax v. Wallace, 38 N.S.R. 564.

-Dyked lands-Cost of making repairs-How assessed-Old and new work-Notice to proprietors - De facto officers.]-A writ of certiorari was allowed to remove a rate made by the Board of Commissioners of the Trecothic Marsh for expenditures incurred in replacing an aboiteau and making repairs to the running dyke, etc., and sought to be recovered from the proprietors, on the ground that the sum of $68 was included which had not been mutually agreed upon or valued by the freeholders under the Marsh Act, R.S. 1900 c. 66, s. 22, Against this sum there was a claim for damages from one claimant amounting to $500, and the affidavits showed that more than the estimated amount was justly due to claimants and must be ultimately raised and paid:-Held, allowing the appeal of the commissioners on this point (and distinguishing the case In re Bishop's Dyke, 20 N.S.R. 263), that there is nothing in the statute now in force to prohibit the commissioners from imposing a rate to meet a liability lawfully incurred until the precise amount is ascertained. Held affirming the judgment on other points. (1) That the rotice called for under s. 22 of the Act relates to new undertakings, as to which the commissioners are judges of the necessity and expediency of borrowing money, and not to the replacing of old work which has been carried away, and that the statute is a directory one instructing the commissioners, if they contemplate borrowing money when they undertake work, that they must proceed in the way indicated. Also, that it is competent for the commissioners to proceed in certain cases without a meeting of proprietors, and to proceed in all cases when there is, as there was in this case, such a meeting. Also, that as the party applying for the writ was present at the meeting when the resolution authorizing the building of the aboi teau was passed, he should have taken the objection at that time. (2) That the applicant, who had notice and was present at the meeting of the proprietors, could not raise the point that others who were present were not notified, without showing that he was ignorant of such want of notice at the time. Also, that there was a presumption in favour of the regularity of the proceedings, and the affidavits of the clerk that all the proprietors of the tract whose names appeared on the previous rate, and who represented the majority in interest under the statute, were notified, should be accepted as evidence on that point. Also, that if notice to every proprietor was not required in the case of commencing a new work, it was, a fortiori, not required in the case of an old work. Also, that the appointment of additional commissioners in charge was sufficient to make the persons so appointed good officials de facto. (3) That in apportioning the contribution among different proprietors the commissioners proceeded properly in arriving at the value of each proprietor's land for purposes of contribution, taking into consideration the quantity, quality and benefit, that is, the value as enhanced by the execution of the work, then striking a rate and ascertaining what each one had to pay. (4) That it was not necessary that each proprietor should be heard before his rate was fixed. (5 and 6) That legal expenses paid by the commissioners to their own solicitor (not adversely to a centestant) were properly included in the rate, as, also, was an amount paid in connection with the abandonment of a con-(7) That as the evidence established that the marsh in question was a "tract " of marsh land to which the Act applied, no plan was required (8) That it was not necessary, under the Act, that bills due for work done and other purposes should have been actually paid before they could be included in the amount to be raised.

-County school fund-Liability of incorporated towns to contribute.]-Prior to the incorporation of the Town of D., the inhabitants of the town and their property were liable, under the provisions of the Education Act, to contribute their proportion of the county school fund, but under provisions contained in the Act incorporating the town, it was held exempted from making such contribution, and thereafter received and disbursed the Government grant, and also its own rates, without contributing to the county fund, or receiving any share thereof. Subsequently, by Acts of 1903, c. 6, s. 7, it was enacted as follows: "The clerk of the municipality of every county or district shall annually add to the amount required for county purposes a sum sufficient to yield an amount equal to 35c. for every inhabitant . of the municipality, and of all incorporated towns which before incorporation territorially formed part of such county or district." Then followed provisions for the collection and division of the amount between the municipality and incorporated towns, in the same proportion as the county fund, and a provision "not-withstanding" the provisions of any statute of Nova Scotia, that every incorporated town should annually, on or before a fixed date, pay to the treasurer of the municipality of the county or district of which it before incorporation territorially formed a part, its proportionate part of the said sum:-Held, that the language of this Act referred directly to the Act incorporating towns, including the Town of D., and its effect was to displace the implication from expressions in the Act of incorporation under which the town had been held exempted from contribution to the county fund. And that the maxim generalia specialibus non derogant was not applicable, the Act incorporating the town being general in its character, while the Act in question was a special one containing special terms and dealing with a special subject, viz., the contribution to be made by incorporated towns to the county school fund. Semble, there is a difference between rendering inoperative implications placed upon expressions contained in an Act and repealing them.

County of Halifax v. Town of Dartmouth, 38 N.S.R. 1, affirmed 37 Can. S.C.R.

-Exemption from taxes-Resolution of council-Discrimination-Establishment of industry.]-By s. 1 of 36 Vict. c. 81, the New Brunswick Legislature authorized tha Town Council of Woodstock from time to time to "give encouragement to manufacturing enterprises within the said town by exempting the property thereof from taxation for a period of not more than ten years by a resolution declaring such exemption.'' In 1892 the council passed the following resolution: "That any company establishing a woollen mill in the Town of Woodstock be exempted from taxation for a period of ten years:"-Held, per Davies, Idington and Maclennan, J.J., that this resolution provided for discrimination in favour of companies and against individuals who might establish a woollen mill or mills in the town and was therefore void. City of Hamilton v. Hamilton Distillery Co., 38 Can. S.C.R. 239, followed:—Held, per Davies, J.: The resolution exempting any company and not any property of a company was too indefinite and uncertain to be the basis for a claim for exemption. In 1893 a woollen mill was established in Woodstock by the Woodstock Woollen Mills Co., and operated for some years without taxation. In 1899 the mill was sold under execution and two months later the Carleton Woollen Co. (appellants), were incorporated and acquired the said mill from the purchaser at the shrift's sale and have operated it since. Held, that the appellants could not by so acquiring the mill which had been exempted be said to have "established a woollen mill without showing that when it was acquired it had ceased to exist as such which they had not done. Judgment appealed from, affirming that of Barker, J., at the hearing, 3 N.B. Eq. 138, affirmed.

-Municipal tax-Foreign company-" Doing business in Halifax."]-An Ontario company resisted the imposition of a license fee for "doing business in the City of Halifax '' and a case was stated and submitted to the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia for an opinion as to such liability. On appeal from the decision of the said Court to the Supreme Court of Canada counsel for the City of Halifax contended that the proceedings were really an appeal against an assessment under the city charter, that no appeal lay therefrom to the Supreme Court of the Province, and, therefore, and because the proceedings did not originate in a Superior Court, the appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada did not lie:-Held, per Fitzpatrick, C.J., and Duff. J., that as the appeal was from the final judgment of the Court of last resort in the Province this Court had jurisdiction under the provisions of the Supreme Court Act and it could not be taken away by provincial legislation. Per Davies, J. Provincial legislation cannot impair the jurisdiction conferred on this Court by the Supreme Court Act. In this case the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia had jurisdicton under Order XXXIII., Rule 1, of the Judicature Act. Per Idington, J. If the case was stated under the Judicature Act Rules the appeal would lie, but not if it was a submission under the charter for a reference to a Judge at request of a ratepayer. By s. 313 of the said charter (54 Vict. c. 58), as amended by 60 Vict. c. 44, " Every insurance company or association, accident and guarantee company, established in the City of Halifax, or having any branch office, office or agency therein shall . . . pay an annual license fee as hereinafter mentioned. . . . Every other company, corporation, association or agency doing business in the City of Halifax (banks, insurance companies or associations, etc., excepted) shall . . . an annual license fee of one hundred dollars: ''-Held, that the words "every other company" in the last clause were not subject to the operation of the ejusdem generis rule, but applied to any company doing business in the city. Judgment appealed from overruled on this point. A carriage company agreed with a dealer in Halifax to supply him with their goods and give him the sole right to sell the same, in a territory named, on commission, all monies and securities given on any sale to be the property of the company and goods not sold within a certain time to be returned. The goods were supplied and the dealer assessed for the same as his personal property. Held, that the company was not ' doing business in the City of Halifax '' within the meaning of s. 313 of the charter and not liable for the license fee of one hundred dollars thereunder. Judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia (39 N.S. Rep. 403) affirmed, but reasons over-

-Non-resident ratepayer-Failure to give notice.]-The Assessment Act, R.S., c. 73, s. 16, provides that the assessors, on the completion of the assessment roll, shall give notice to the parties assessed by: (b) Serving each person . . . not residing within the district . with a notice in writing showing the respective amounts at which his real and personal property has been assessed upon such roll. Sub-s. (2) provides that "No such assessment shall be rendered invalid by failure to serve such notice." The assessment of property of G. was increased from $1,200 to $8,800, and the assessors, expressly relying upon the provision in s. 16, sub-s. (2) of the Act, omitted to give G. notice of any kind, thus depriving him of the right of appeal. The assessment was brought up by certiorari:-Held, (1) That certiorari would lie. (2) That the words of sub-s. (2) did not take away the right of the party assessed to notice, and that in the absence of such notice the assessment was invalid and must be set aside with costs. Per Drysdale, J.—That the costs taxed should not include affidavits read on the question of value, such question not being open to review on this application.

—Municipal taxation—Official of Dominion Government—Taxation on income.]—Subs. 2 of s. 92 B.N.A. Act. 1867, giving a provincial legislature exclusive powers of legislation in respect to "direct taxation within the Province, etc.," is not in conflict with subs. 8 of s. 91 which provides that Parliament shall have exclusive legislative authority over "the fixing of and providing for the salaries and allowances of civil and other officers of the Government of Canada:"—Held, therefore, that a civil or other officer of the Government of Canada may be lawfully taxed in respect

The Assessment Act and the Corporations Taxation Act having been assented to on the same day, it was intended that s. 18 of the later Act should govern and exclude the tax imposable under the earlier.

-Validity of assessment-Meetings of council and Court of Revision not held in municipality-Statute-Tax sale by-law.] - In an action to set aside a sale made in 1898 by the municipality of South Vancouver of lands in that municipality for the taxes of the years 1893 to 1897, the plaintiff alleged that there was never a valid assessment or levy during all those years, by reason of the fact that the various meetings of the municipal council and of the Court of Revision at which the question of taxes was dealt with, were held, not within the limits of the municipality, but in the city of Vancouver:-Held, that there was no reason in law (apart from statute) why the meetings of the council, whether for ordinary business or as a Court of Revision, should not have been held at any place without the limits of the municipality, and the provision in the Municipal Act of 1892, s. 103, had no relation to this question. The statute of 1894, s. 15, provides that "all meetings of a municipal council shall take place within the limits of the municipality, except where the council have unanimously resolved that it would be more convenient to hold such meetings, or some of them, outside of the limits of the municipality." Held, that the existence of this unanimity on the part of members of the council might be proved otherwise than by the passing of a formal resolution entered in the minutes. No hint of objection from any member of the council or from any one else appeared upon the minutes or otherwise during all these years; and, in these circumstances, the condition mentioned in the Act of 1894 was complied with. After so great a lapse of time, the presumption that the meetings were regularly held was insurmountable. Meetings of the council sitting as a Court of Revision were in the same position as ordinary meetings. Held, also, that any illegality such as alleged, if it existed, was cured by statute. The various assessment by-laws of 1898 were valid municipal enactments, being ex facie valid, and not moved against, and were validated by s. 126 of the Municipal Act, 1892, notwithstanding any want of substance or form; and that enactment continued in force until 1899. It was also alleged that in certain respects the municipality did not observe the requirements of their own tax sale by-law, passed in 1898, under which this sale took place. Held, upon the evidence, that the plaintiff must be taken, by his inaction and apparent acquiescence with full knowledge, to have been a consenting party to the sale, waiving the non-observance of any provisions in his favour as to notice, publication, etc. City of Toronto v. Russell, [1908] A.C. 493, followed. Held, also, that there was no substance in any of the objections advanced, such as that public notice of the lands for sale was not given in the manner prescribed, that the notice to the plaintiff was not posted in the proper post office, and that there was no proof of "expenses" incurred, the sale being made to satisfy expenses as well as taxes. On the 5th April, 1899, an order confirming the sale was made by a Judge of the Supreme Court, upon an application by the municipality, ex parte. Held, that the order was properly made ex parte, under the statute then in force, c. 35 of the British Columbia statutes of 1898, s. 14. Re South Vancouver, 9 B.C.R. 572, remarked upon. Held, also, that, even if the order was invalid, the plaintiff could not in this action take advantage of the invalidity. The plaintiff must, if he desired to put an end to the interest of the tax sale purchaser, pursue the remedy provided by the statute of 1898, s. 15, namely, tender to the municipality the purchase price paid. That he had not done; and, even if the confirming order was a nullity, he had nothing more than a right of redemption, enforceable only as set out in the statute.

Anderson v. South Vancouver, 13 W.L.R.

-Value of lands in city-Fair actual value -Farm lands.]-Clause 12 of s. 138 of the Municipal Ordinance provides that "the decision and judgment of the Judge" (i.e., a District Court Judge, upon appeal from an assessment) "shall be final and conclusive in every case adjudicated upon, and can only be appealed from by a unanimous vote of the council:"-Held, that, although a right of appeal was not expressly given, this clause must be interpreted as permitting an appeal if the council by a unanimous vote authorized it-a provision within the powers of the Legislature; and, although no provision as to the Court for hearing the appeal or the machinery of appeal was made, in order to give effect to the right of appeal, it must be assumed that the appeal should be to the same Court and in the same manner as any other appeal from the decision of a District Court Judge. The Strathcona city charter provides that a majority shall be present for the purpose of the transaction of business. Held, that, although only six of the eight aldermen of the city were present when the council voted in favour of an appeal, as the six were unanimous, and were a majority of the eight, the vote was a unanimous vote of the council within the meaning of clause 12 of s. 138 of the Municipal Ordinance. Upon the hearing by the District Court Judge of the appeal from the assessment, neither he nor any other person present took notes of the evidence. Held, that the city corporation, appealing from his decision, should not thereby be deprived of their appeal; and the witnesses who gave evidence before the County Court Judge were called before the Supreme Court en banc, and gave, as far as possible, the same evidence as was given below, but no new evidence. The lands in question, 309 acres, within the city, were purchased by a syndicate, more than a year before the appeal, for $350 an acre. They were assessed at $250 an acre, and that was reduced by the District Court Judge to $150 an acre. Section 3 of title 31 of the Strathcona charter provides that "land shall be assessed at its fair actual value," and continues: "In estimating the value, regard shall be had to its situation and the purpose for which it is used, or, if sold by the present owner, it could and would probably be used in the next succeeding 12 months." There was no evidence of any depreciation in value since the syndicate bought; but the evidence showed that the lands were situated at the outermost point of the city, a mile from the nearest subdivided portion of the city, two miles or more from the chief business portion of the city, and having no communication by roads or streets with other parts of the city; that the lands were not at present used for any purpose, and were covered with bush, and, even if sold, would not probably be used for building within the next 12 months; there was no suggestion of any other use, except for farming purposes; and the assessor stated that adjoining farm lands were assessed at $100 an acre. Held, that the rate fixed by the County Court Judge was the fair actual value of the property. Section 3 of title 31 further provides that there shall be no reduction, unless the difference between the value and the assessment be gross, if the assessment bears a fair and just proportion to the assessment of other lands in the immediate vicinity. Held, that this provision had no application, because the difference was gross, and because there was no evidence from which the relative values of this and other adjoining lands could be ascertained.

-Assessment and Taxation by Province-Property and civil rights-Crown lands.]-The Calgary & Edmonton Land Co., under the Act of Canada, c. 4 of 53 Vict. (1890), and by virtue of a contract entered into pursuant to orders in council issued under that Act, was entitled to receive certain lands from the Dominion of Canada in aid of the construction of a railway. By the terms of the statute it was provided:-"The said lands shall be free grants, subject only to the payment by the grantees" of the survey fees "in cash on the issue of the patents therefor." The company designated certain lands to be allotted to it pursuant to the order-in-council and contract, and in 1892 assigned by deed all its estate, right, title, interest, claim and demand in certain of the said lands to the C. & E. Land Co., which assignment was registered with the Department of the Interior. In 1906, before the land was actually granted, it was taxed by Local Improvement District No. 607, under authority of the Ordinance of the North West Territories (1903), c. 24, as amended by the Ordinance of 1904, c. 8, and by the Act of Alberta of 1906, c. 11. On application to Sifton, C.J., under the provision of s. 91 of the Local Improvement Act, c. 11 of the Acts of Alberta (1907), the assessment was confirmed, from which order the C. & E. Land Co., appealed: -Held, per Harvey and Beck, JJ., that:—(1) After the land was designated by the Railway Co. and after the Railway Co. had dealt with the land as its own by making an assignment thereof, a presumption was raised against the company that it was then entitled to a grant from the Crown pursuant to its contract, and it became, presumably, entitled to the whole equitable interest in the land, the Crown in the right of the Dominion re-taining only the bare legal estate, and thereafter as far as any questions arising under assessment or taxation acts are concerned the land was not land "belonging to" the Crown in the right of the Dominion, within the meaning of s. 125 of the B.N.A. Act, and was therefore not exempt from taxation under that section. (2) The re-servation by the Crown in the right of the Dominion of the right to hold the patent until survey fees were paid did not take away the right of the Province to affect that land by legislation under the sub-section of s. 92 relating to "property and civil rights," and a vesting order made upon default of payment of taxes could be made vesting the land in the Province, subject only to the liability of the Province to account to the Dominion for the amount of the Dominion's claim upon the land. The issue of a certificate of title to land upon a patent issued by the Dominion, is conclusive evidence that the Dominion has no claim upon the land for survey fees. (4) The rule with respect to the interpretation of assessment and taxation acts is that it must be quite clear upon the face of the statute that the person or property sought to be taxed comes within the class of persons or property made liable by the statute to be taxed. There must be strict compliance with the procedure laid down for imposing the tax; once, however, the tax is validly imposed there may be less strict compliance with the procedure laid down for collecting the taxes:-Held, per Stuart, J., that:-(1) Under the circumstances the interest of the Crown in the right of the Dominion in the lands in respect to which survey fees were still payable was a higher interest than the bare legal estate, and (2) The interest only of the C. & E. Land Co. in the land subject to survey fees was taxable but (3) It appearing that the survey fees had been paid, the lien for taxes given by the Taxation Act could be enforced against the whole beneficial interest. (4) As between the Crown in the right of the Dominion and the Land Co., this company was bound to pay the taxes, and the words "free grant" should be interpreted in the same manner as the words would be interpreted as between an ordinary vendor and pur-chaser. Judgment of the Chief Justice affirmed.

Re Calgary & Edmonton Land Co. and Local Improvement District, 2 Alta. R. 446.

—Occupant of Crown Land—Actual and Comparative Values.]—Appellant was a lessee of Crown land and was assessed therefor by the respondent for the full cash value. He claimed to be liable for assessment only in respect of the value of his interest therefor, and in any event that the assessment was excessive:—Held, that in view of the provisions of sec. 26, sub-sec. 2, of the Schools Assessment Ordinance of 1901, which directs that the occupant of Crown lands shall be assessed therefor and, as by the only provision respecting the basis of assessment, section 30 of the same ordinance, it is directed that real property shall be assessed at the actual cash value thereof it must be held that the occupant must be assessed for the full cash value. (2) That the adoption of a flat assessment rate per acre throughout a district does not constitute an equitable assessment, unless it be shown that all the land is equally valuable, and that the rate adopted is the fair cash value of such land, and the land in question not being equally as valuable as are other lands assessed, it must be assessed at its actual cash value.

—Injunction—Levy of illegal tax by municipality.]—A party who brings an action against a municipality for a declaration that he is not liable for a tax imposed upon him, and for an injunction to restrain the attempted levy of such tax, is not entitled to an interim injunction to restrain such levy, as he has another adequate remedy, namely, to pay the tax under protest and sue to recover it back.

Brandon, 19 Man. R. 257.

-Arrears of taxes due school district-Unlawful and excessive distress.]-Plaintiff had been for a number of years an occupant of Crown lands for which he had been assessed by the school district. No taxes were paid by plaintiff, and other parties subsequently assessed for the same land paid none. In 1908, these taxes being unpaid and the plaintiff having 73 head of horses on the land, the defendant school district authorized the defendant Hopper to seize the goods of plaintiff and the other occupants for such arrears. In pursuance of such warrant Hopper seized 73 head of horses belonging to plaintiff and two belonging to the other occupants. At most there was only $200 due for taxes. The proceedings connected with the seizure appeared to be regular. It was objected, however, that the assessment was irregular, but it had not been appealed from, nor were any grounds laid which would invalidate all the assessments. In an action for trespass and excessive seizure:-Held, that while Crown lands cannot be assessed, yet the occupant thereof can be assessed in respect of his interest therein. 2. That even if certain of the assessments were irregular, some of the * taxes were properly due, and distress for a greater amount than that actually due is not per se actionable. 3. That the seizure of 73 head of horses to satisfy a debt not exceeding $200 was an excessive distress for which the plaintiff was entitled to damages. Robertson v. Hopper, 2 Sask. R. 365.

-Exemption-Property leased to the Crown.]-The plaintiff was owner in fee of certain lots in the town of Edmonton, which, with the buildings thereon, had been leased to the Government of Canada, through the Commissioner of the North-West Mounted Police, and were used as a barracks for that force at the Edmonton post. The municipal authorities in the years 1895, 1896 and 1897 assessed the plaintiff for taxes in respect of these lots, and, the taxes being unpaid, were proceed ing to sell the said lots under the provisions of the Municipal Ordinance. Subs. 1 of s. 121 of that Ordinance exempts from taxation " all property held by Her Majesty or specially exempt by the Parliament of Canada or for the public use of the Government of the Territories:" Held, following Attorney-General of Can-ada v. -Exemption from taxation-Board of Revision - Judicial functions.] - The "Vancouver Incorporation Act," 64 Vict. c. 54 (B.C.), by sub-s. 3 of s. 46, provides that "the buildings and grounds of and attached to and belonging to . . . any incorporated seminary of learning, public hospital, or any incorporated charitable institution, whether vested in trustees or otherwise, so long as such buildings and grounds are actually used and occupied by such institution, or if unoccupied, but not if otherwise used or occupied; provided, that such grounds shall not exceed in extent the amount actually necessary for the require-ments of the institution. The question as to what amount of land is necessary shall be decided by the Court of Revision, whose decision shall be final":-Held, per Davies, Duff and Anglin JJ., that the functions in respect of the limitation of exemptions from taxation so vested in the Court of Revision are quasi-judicial and must be exercised in each case with respect to that case alone; it is not vested with power to lay down a general rule based solely upon general considerations. Per Idington J .-That the provision in question was merely a delegation of a legislative or administrative power, probably carrying with it a duty, but in no manner implying the discharge of a judicial duty subject to review or supervision. In proceedings, by certiorari, to remove a decision of the Court of Revision, the evidence adduced in support of the contention that the Court had failed to dispose of the question in a proper manner consisted merely of a minute of its proceedings whereby it was resolved "that all charitable institutions mentioned in subsection 3 of section 46 of Vancouver Incorporation Act be exempted from taxation to the extent of the area occupied by the buildings thereon and an additional amount of land equal to 25 per cent. of the area, and that the assessment roll for 1900, as amended, be confirmed." Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (15 B.C. Rep. 344), that this minute, in the absence of further evidence, was not incompatible with the view that the Court of Revision had examined each particular case before deciding to act in the sense of the minute and that it would be a proper direction in each individual case.

-Validity of assessment-Ratification.]-The powers given to a Court of Revision under ss. 107 to 111 of the School Ordinance and to a Judge under s. 112, do not enable a Judge acting thereunder to inquire into the legality of the whole assessment, and a ratepayer who has resorted to the provisions of these sections is not thereby estopped from taking substantive proceedings to set the assessment aside as being invalid and contrary to law :- Held, further, that a Board of Trustees may by subsequent conduct, adopt an assessment made by a person not legally appointed, and thereby render such assessment invalid.

Bradshaw v. Riverdale School, 3 Terr. L.

-Income-Omission to assess property of other persons-Property purchased at tax sale.]-An appellant from the Court of Revision to a Judge of the Supreme Court is limited to the grounds taken before the Court of Revision and such additional grounds as arise out of the decision of the Court of Revision in respect of such grounds. Wages earned as section-foreman of a railway company is "income," and as such liable to taxation, and it is immaterial that such wages have been invested in property which is also liable to taxation. The purchaser of lands at a tax sale, and who is not in occupation thereof, is not liable for assessment in respect thereof during the period allowed for redemption. Cattle are assessable in the district where they are usually kept, and the district in which the owner resides is prima facie the district in which they are properly assessable. Graham v. -Tax sale - Redemption - Tender -Sufficiency.]-Upon an application by A. to confirm the sale to him on the 20th March, 1909, of a quarter section of land offered for sale by the treasurer of the school district in which the land was situated, to pay the taxes assessed thereon, it appeared that the price paid by A. was $550; that since the sale he had been in continuous possession, and had made considerable improvements, and had paid school and local improvement rates, amounting to $13.39. The treasurer transferred the land to A. on the 22nd March, 1910. The summons to confirm was issued on the 19th July, 1910. On the 22nd September, 1910, M., the registered owner, tendered to A.'s solicitors $700 to redeem the land. Section 2 of the Tax Sale Ordinance, 1901, provides that the land may be redeemed by paying to the purchaser the amount of the purchase-money paid and any further sums charged against the land and lawfully paid, together with 20 per cent. thereon, and such costs as the Judge may allow:-Held, that "sums charged against the land and lawfully paid" did not include sums paid for improvements, and that, as the purchase-money and taxes, with 20 per cent. added, amounted only to $676.07, the tender of $700 was sufficient to satisfy A.'s claim, including costs.

Per Richardson, J., (adopting the opinion expressed in Dicey's Conflict of Laws). Debts, choses in action and claims of any kind must be held to be situate where the debtor or other person, against whom the claim exists, resides; or, in other words, debts and choses in action are generally to be looked upon as situate in the county where they are properly recoverable and can be enforced. Per Rouleau, McGuire and Scott, JJ. If the situs of a debt is the domicile of the creditor, a person as well as a corporation may have, if not for all, at all events, for some purposes, more than one domicile, namely: (1) At the head office of the corporation, and at the actual residence of the person; and also (2) where the business of the corporation, or person, is actually carried on; and, therefore, where the Hudson's Bay Company, whose head office is in London, England, carried on at Battleford an ordinary merchants business, and MacDonald, whose actual residence was in Winnipeg, Manitoba, also did the same, debts contracted to them at the Battleford places of business were, for the purpose of taxation, situated in Battleford.

R. lands-Exemption from taxation -Sale-Proper authority to assess.]-Lands vested in the Canadian Pacific Railway Company subject to a provision that the same should "until they are sold or occupied, be free from taxation for 20 years," were by the company agreed to be sold and conveyed to the appellants as trustees, who were to sell them, accounting for an interest in the proceeds to the company. At the date of the assessment of the lands, the consideration owing by the trustees to the company had been paid: -Held, that the lands had ceased to be exempt from taxation. Held, also, Wetmore and McGuire, JJ., dissenting, that in view of the Ordinances relating to municipalities, and to schools, the lands being situated partly within and partly without the municipality, the school district was authorized to assess and need not make a demand upon the municipality to do so.

-Sale of land for taxes-Right to redeem -Retroactive legislation-Vested rights.] —S. 80 of the Charter of the City of Cal-gary (Ordinance 33 of 1893) provides that if land sold for taxes be not redeemed within one year after the date of sale, the purchaser shall be entitled to a transfer, which shall have the effect of vesting the land in him in fee simple or otherwise, according to the nature of the estate sold; and s. 81 provides that the transfer shall not only vest in the purchaser all rights of property which the original owner had therein, but shall purge and disencumber such land from all payments, lien charges, mortgages, and encumbrances whatever, other than existing liens of the city and the Crown. Certain lots in the city of Calgary were sold for taxes on 16th April, 1900, and a transfer was given to the purchaser on 8th May, 1901, the owners not having offered to redeem within the year: -Held, that s. 2 of Ordinance 12 of 1901, "an Ordinance Respecting the Confirma-tion of Sales of Land for Taxes," passed 12th June, 1901, giving a right to redeem at any time before the hearing of the application for confirmation, is not retrospective, and that the original owners could not take advantage of its provisions. Held, further, that ss. 80 and 81 of the Charter of the City of Calgary are not ultra vires as being in conflict with ss. 54 and 57 of the Land Titles Act, 1894.

-Sale for taxes-Liability of purchaser for taxes imposed in the year of sale-Construction of statutes.]-Certain lots in the city of Calgary were, on the 27th June, 1896, sold for arrears of taxes due thereon for certain years prior to 1896; the sales were duly confirmed by the Court. and on the 10th July, 1897, and 27th June, 1898, the purchaser received certificates of title in due form from the Registrar of Land Titles, and entered into and remained in possession of the lots as owner. The lots were duly assessed for taxes for the year 1896, but no rate was struck until after the sale. The said taxes for 1896 remained unpaid for two years. S. 81 of the Ordinance Incorporating the City of Calgary provides that the transfer from the treasurer to the purchaser shall vest in the purchaser all the rights of property of the original holder of the land and purge and disencumber it from all encumbrances of whatever nature, other than existing liens of the city and the Crown:-Held, that the lots in question were liable to be sold for taxes for the year 1896, and that, under s. 51 of the same Ordinance, the purchaser was personally liable to the city for the amount of the taxes. S. 81 was amended by Ordinance 1900, c. 39, s. 4, by the addition after the word "Crown" of the words "including all taxes unpaid upon such land at the day of the date of such transfer, and whether imposed before or after the day of the date of the tax sale at which said lands were sold." Held, that this amendment did not raise the presumption that the section as it originally stood had not the same meaning: that the amendment was probably made to remove doubts that may have existed.

Canadian Pacific Railway-Exemption from taxation-Crow's Nest Pass Railway -Branch lines-"Superstructure"-Value of round-houses, freight sheds and other buildings.]-Clause 16t (relating to exemption from taxation) of the agreement between the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. and the Government of Canada, as embodied in the Act, 44 Vict. (1881), c. 1, is not applicable to the Crow's Nest Pass Railway, but is applicable only to the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. and to such branches thereof as the company was authorized by clause 14% of the agreement to construct from points on the main line, and does not extend to other distinct lines of railway which the company may have been subsequently authorized to construct. Under the Ordinance respecting the Assessment of Railways, C.O. 1898 c. 71, s. 3, the round-houses, station, or office buildings, section houses, employees' dwellings, freight sheds, and other buildings of like nature belonging to a railway company and situated upon it, are not included in the term "superstructure," but may be assessed separately as personal property under the Municipal Ordinance. Such buildings should not be valued as part of the railway as a going concern, and as having a special value as such, but merely at what they are worth separate and distinct from other portions of the railway. When only two and a half stalls of a round-house were situated within the municipality, and the round-house was shown to be worth $900 a stall, the assessment was fixed at $2,250.

A school district assessor assessed certain of the appellants' lands at $800, and the dwelling houses thereon at $2,000:-Held, that the assessment should stand, although the more correct course would have been to assess the whole as "land" and place a single value upon both soil and buildings as " land."

An objection to an appeal on the ground that the Court has no jurisdiction to hear it, is not a preliminary objection within s. 83 of the Supreme Court Act. Although the Full Court has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal, it has jurisdiction to award costs in dismissing it. Under s. 38 of the Vancouver Incorporation Act, 1900, all rateable property for assessment purposes shall be estimated at its actual cash value, as it would be appraised in payment of a just debt from a solvent debtor:-Held, per Irving, J., that in estimating the value of an expensive residence, built by its owner, it is fair to assume that the owner will not permit his property to be sacrificed, and therefore a valuation approaching to nearly the actual cost is not excessive.

-B.C. Assessment Act, 1903-Wild Lands -Fixing of an average value.]-In assessing 500,000 acres of wild land consisting largely of inaccessible mountains and valleys, the assessor acted on instructions received from the Provincial Assessment Department and fixed the value at $1 per acre for the whole tract. On appeal to the Court of Revision and Appeal, evidence was taken and an average value of 45 cents per acre was fixed. An appeal was taken to the Full Court on the grounds that the valuation was too high and that so far as some of the lands were concerned they were exempt from taxation under the company's Subsidy Act, and on the argument counsel for the company asked the Court to fix the assessable value of the lands at the specific sum of $47,980.23:-Held, per Drake, J., that as some of the land was of some value and some of it of no value, the fixing of a flat rate was not a compliance with s. 51 of the Assessment Act, 1903, and that the assessment should be set aside with costs. Per Irving, J.: The evidence did not enable the Court to form any opinion as to the value of the land within the meaning of s. 51, and as the assessment was improperly levied at the outset the Court should simply declare that there was no proper assessment in respect of which an appeal will lie. Held, per Drake and Irving, JJ. (Duff, J., dissenting), that by the operation of s. 3 of the Amending Act with respect to all lands granted to the company the exemption from taxation conferred by section 7 of the Subsidy Act expired with the expiration of the period of ten years, beginning with 8th April, 1893, and that therefore the lands claimed to be exempt were assessable.

(2) That, however, the form of the assessment did not include mains and pipes, and that the attempted assessment of them was ineffective, and that the roll could not be amended in view of the fact that the value of the mains and pipes had not been made a question in the proceedings. -Income, taxation of-What constitutes incomes-"Outgoings," meaning of-Interest paid by bank to depositors.]-By the Assessment Act (B.C. Stat. 1905, c. 2) it is provided that banks shall be taxed upon their actual gross income derived from business transacted within the Province. subject to certain deductions which are set out in Form 1 of the Act. Form 1 provides, inter alia, a deduction on account of outgoings or necessary expenses incurred and actually paid by the bank in the production of income. The Bank of Hamilton operates two branches in British Columbia, and there was charged as a deduction a certain sum which was ascertained by deducting four per cent. on the average of the weekly sums which, in the books of the head office, were debited to these branches. In ascertaining the profits made by the different branches, the practice of the head office was to charge against each branch this four per cent. The evidence did not show whether this sum (debited weekly against the branches in the books of the head office) in fact corresponded with the amount of money employed by the bank in its banking business in British Columbia in obtaining income. The charge of four per cent. was made up of two items: three per cent. was charged as representing the interest paid to depositors in Ontario on moneys borrowed from them by the bank, and one per cent. was a charge representing the general expenses of the bank in connection with deposit accounts, including, as appeared from the affidavit of the general manager, a certain allowance made for the loss arising from the fact that a considerable sum of money on which interest was paid by the bank remained unproductive. The principal question argued on the appeal was whether these deductions should have been allowed by the Court of Re-vision:—Held, that had there been proper evidence before the Court of Revision that the moneys debited by head office to the British Columbia agencies were moneys on which the head office paid depositors in Ontario three per cent., and that said moneys had actually been employed in the British Columbia business, then the said tbree per cent. should have been deducted from the gross income as an outgoing in the production of income, but that there was not sufficient evidence of these facts before the Court of Revision to warrant the allowance of this deduction. Held, also, that said deduction of one per cent. was rightly not allowed by the Court of Revision as it included elements which did not properly enter into the computation of the statutory deductions.

-Sale of land for taxes-Statutory effect of vesting certificate as evidence of regularity of tax sale proceedings.]-(1) Although by section 166 of the Assessment Act, R.S.M. 1892, c. 101, vesting certificates issued by a municipality in its own favor, upon sales of land for taxes bought in for the municipality, are to have the same effect in all respects as deeds of sale of land for taxes, and by section 191 of the same chapter, as re-enacted by 55 Vict. c. 26, s. 7, a tax deed is made conclusive evidence of the validity of the assessment of the land, the levy of the rate, the sale and all the other proceedings leading up to the execution of the deed, yet it does not follow that such vesting certificate should have the same effect as evidence as tax deeds would have, and the mere production and proof of the vesting certificate does not shift the onus, from the municipality claiming title under it, of furnishing proof of the validity of the tax sale. (2) The provisions of ss. 6 and 7 of 55 Vict. c. 26, as to the evidential value of a tax sale deed, do not apply to vesting certificates, and leave it open to the former owner to show, if he can, that there was no legal assessment or levy for the years in respect of which the land was sold for taxes. (3) A municipality is estopped from questioning the regularity of its own proceedings relating to a tax sale, or of the assessment upon which the same were founded, as against a purchaser in good faith who has paid the purchase money and obtained a deed under the corporate seal of the municipality. (4) The assessment of the land in question for the year 1891 was null and void because (a) the assessor had not signed the assessment roll as required by 53 Vict. c. 45, s. 42. although he had signed the certificate appended to the roll as required by section 43 of the same chapter, and (b) the land was only described as the "N.W. quarter 27," without any mention of the township or range.

municipality, or to a purchaser from it. None of the curative clauses of the Act avail to support the claim of the purchaser in such a case.

It was objected, however, that the assessment was irregular, but it had not been appealed from, nor were any grounds laid which would invalidate all the assessment. In an action for trespass and excessive seizure: -- Held, that while Crown lands cannot be assessed, yet the occupant thereof can be assessed in respect of his interest therein. (2) That even if certain of the assessments were irregular, some of the taxes were properly due, and distress for a greater amount than that actually due is not per se actionable. (3) That the seizure of 73 head of horses to satisfy a debt not exceeding $200 was an excessive distress for which the plaintiff was entitled to damages.

-Sale of land for taxes-Parcels advertised as "patented"-Warranty.]-When the secretary-treasurer of a municipality acting under s. 162 of the Assessment Act. R.S.M. (1902) c. 117, advertises lands to be sold for arrears of taxes as "patented." although in fact they are unpatented, and the purchaser, relying on that statement, buys without making any investigation of the title, he is entitled to recover from the municipality as damages for a breach of warranty the amount he paid for the lands, also all sums paid for subsequent taxes on them with interest. Such statement should be held to be a positive statement of fact made with the intention that it could be relied upon, and not merely an expression of opinion and, being untrue, amounts to a misrepresentation excluding the operation of the rule of caveat emptor. Austin v. Simcoe 1862), 22 U.C.R. 73, and McLellan v. Assiniboia (1888), 5 M.R. 265, distinguished on the ground of differences in statutory enactments:-Held, also, (1) That s. 166 of the Act does not prevent the plaintiff in such a case from recovering back his money. (2) That, notwithstanding s. 229 of the Act, the Court could add the subsequent taxes paid by the plaintiff to the amount paid by him for the land in the first place, and treat the whole as damages suffered by reason of the breach of warranty. (3) That the defendant municipality should be allowed one month within which to redeem the lands under s. 168 of the Act, as having been sold through error, and that, in case of redemption within that time, the judgment should be for costs only.

(1906) is not an assignee for the benefit of creditors within the meaning of s. 382 of the Winnipeg Charter, 1 and 2 Edw. VII. c. 77, so that there is no priority under that section in favor of the city for the business tax imposed upon the company as against other debts. (2) Notwithstanding s. 378 of the Charter, taxes imposed by the city are not due and payable so as to entitle the city to sue for them until after the preparation of the tax roll. Chamberlain v. Turner (1881). 31 U.C.C.P. 460, followed. (3) The assessment for the business tax can be deemed to be made only after notice thereof has been given: Devanney v. Dorr (1883), 4 O.R. 206; and if, at that time, the company assessed is no longer in possession of the permises and the goods though still on the premises are in the hands of a purchaser from the liquidator, there is nothing in the Charter which preserves to the city the lien on the goods for the taxes created by s. 313, for that section only gives the city a first charge during the occupancy on all goods in the premises for which the occupant has been assessed. (4) The statutory right given to the city by s. 369 to distrain for such taxes upon any goods and chattels found on the premises in respect of which the taxes have been levied, although such goods and chattels may be the property, and in the possession, of any other occupant of the premises, is not equivalent to a lien or charge on the goods for such taxes; and, when the liquidator of a company assessed for business tax had, prior to the assessment, given up the occupancy of the premises and sold the goods therein, it was held that the city had no right to be paid the taxes in full out of the funds in the hands of the liquidator, but had the right to rank with other creditors of the company for the same under s. 228b added to the Charter by the Act of 1907. Religious Society-Member of - Service in-Dismissal from-Disfranchisement-Damages.]—The defendant, the Society, was a religious Association, incorporated under the laws of France, having local Institutes in the United States, Ontario, Quebec and other countries, separately incorporated according to the laws of those countries, composed of two classes of women, those destined for teaching and lay sisters employed in household duties, with periods of probation, during the second of which they took vows of poverty, chastity and obedience and became "aspirants." before being permitted to take final vows up to which latter time, the Society, according to its rules, retained the right to dismiss them for grave causes; that right belonging to the Superior General in France who might communicate it to others. Plaintiff became a lay sister in the United States in 1884 and was admitted to the three vows of an "aspirant." but proceeded no further, remaining an "aspirant" only until dismissed. In February, 1901, she was transferred to an Institute in Ontario until the following June. when, in consequence of the great disturbance and destruction of property, ascribed to her, she was removed to an asylum on the certificate of two physicians, as insane, until the following September, when she was declared cured and discharged. The defendant, the Lady Superior of the local organization, reported the facts to the Superior General in France and asked for a discharge of the plaintiff from her vows; which was sent to the Lady Superior, to be used as she considered expedient, and she caused it to be delivered to the plaintiff after her release from the asylum; and the plaintiff executed a release prepared by the Society of all causes of action, contracts, etc., in consideration of $300.00. Plaintiff brought an action against the Society, the Institute and the Lady Superior for compensation as on a quantum meruit in respect of her 17 years' services and damages for wrongful dismissal, false imprisonment and imputation of insanity, alleging the release was obtained from her by importunity and undue influence:—Held, that there was jurisdiction to entertain the action in this Province against the Society, upon the ground that the Society "resides" in this Province and that the defence of the Statute of Frauds failed. Held also, that the action was properly dismissed as against the Institute, and should be dismissed as against the Lady Superior, with neither of whom was there any contract, and the jury had absolved the latter from all liability in tort. Held, also, that there was no liability of the Society for compensation for services or damages, and that the defence based upon the plaintiff's release should be sus-

That the adoption of a by-law imposing a penalty is an additional mode of forcing payment from a delinquent member. On an application for a pension by the applicant, who had been obliged to resign, the board, without any judicial enquiry into the circumstances, resolved to refuse the claim, "seeing that he was obliged to tender his resignation: ''-Held, in an action by the appellant in effect to compel a due administration of the pension fund, that this resolution was void and of no effect. The tender of resignation gave him the right to appeal to the board and to have his claim as affected thereby duly considered and determined. It did not by itself forfeit rights acquired by length of service and regular contribution to the pension fund. Case remitted to the Superior Court at Montreal, with declarations directed to secure to the appellant a due consideration and determination thereof by a differently constituted board.

Administration of funds.]—A writ of injunction will not issue in respect of a matter that is past, its object is to prevent the commission of some act and not to obtain compensation to which one is entitled. All the funds received by a society go into the treasury and should be applied to meet its general obligations; no member can demand that they should be set apart to assure the performance of a special set of obligations or contracts. A member of a society cannot obtain an injunction to prevent it from exercising its charter powers and enforcing its by-laws.

It cannot, however, exact from a suspended member, as a condition of re-instatement, a formal application therefor and payment of an additional fee. When a suspended member resorts to a writ of mandamus to compel the corporation to reinstate him on the ground that the by-law imposing the contribution is ultra vires and the corporation sets up, not only the validity of the by-law, but an alleged obligation for a formal application and payment of a fee, the Court, holding the suspension valid, but the conditions for reinstatement illegal, has a "special reason" sufficient under Art. 549 C.P.Q., to condemn each party to pay his own costs.

Issue-Amount in controversy-County Court - Jurisdiction - Residence of garnichee.]-Where it was charged by a judgment creditor that a fraudulent arrangement had been made between the judgment debtor and his employers, the garnishees, whereby a third person had been substituted for the debtor as the servant of the garnishees, and money paid to such third person, while the debtor continued to do the work: -Held, that the judgment creditor was entitled to have an issue directed, to which the third person should be a party, to determine whether there was at the time of the service of the attaching order any debt due or accruing from the garnishees to the debtor; to entitle the creditor to an issue, it was not necessary to bring home a case of fraud to the persons against whom it was charged; it was sufficient to show unexplained facts and circumstances so unusual as to create a strong suspicion that fraud had been practised. Held, also, that the Judge of a County Court in which the judgment has been recovered has power, when the amount claimed to be due from the garnishee is so large as not to be within the jurisdiction of a County Court, to make the garnishing summons returnable before himself, even where the garnishee resides in another county. Semble, that the proper construction of Rules 917, 918 and 919 is, that the Judge of a County Court in which a judgment has been recovered has power, when the amount claimed to be due from a garnishee residing in another county is within the jurisdiction of the County Court or the Division Court, to order the garnishee to attend before the Judge of the County Court or the clerk of the Division within which he lives. Held, also, that an order for a receiver should not be made in respect of a fund which may be reached by garnishing process.

Millar v. Thompson, 19 Ont. Pr. 294.

-Salary of municipal officer-Payment in advance-Set-off-Equitable Assignment -Premature service of attaching order-Misconduct-Costs.]-Upon an application to garnish the salary of an officer of a municipal corporation, it appeared that by virtue of a by-law his salary was payable monthly, and that the practice of the corporation was to pay all salaries on the first day of the month, or, if that day were a holiday, on the previous day. It was also shown that a number of officers received payments on account of their salary before it came due. The attaching order was served on the 30th April between ten o'clock in the morning and one o'clock in the afternoon. The judgment debtor, before the service of the order, had been paid in full all his salary for the month of April, under an arrangement between him and the treasurer of the corporation that advances should be made on account of salary and stopped from the debtor's cheque at the end of the month. debtor in each case of an advance gave an I.O.U. to the cashier (the treasurer's clerk), who would thereupon advance the debtor the amount out of the corporation's funds, and at the beginning of the month the debtor would endorse his cheque and receive from the cashier his acknowledgements and the balance (if any) in cash, and the cheque would be deposited to the credit of the corporation: - Held, that nothing was due to the debtor by the corporation at the time of the service of the attaching order, for there had been actual payment of the salary by the corporation; or, if not payment, an advance by the corporation which they could set off against a claim for salary; or, if the moneys advanced were to be regarded as misappropriated by the treasurer or the clerk and advanced personally by him to the debtor there was a good (though verbal) equitable assignment of the salary by the debtor to the treasurer or clerk; and, per the Master in Chambers, a debt irrespective of the salary, in any event, would not have accrued due until after the service of the attaching order. Held, also, per Meredith, C.J., in Chambers, that the judgment debtor and the corporation, by its responsible officers, had so misconducted themselves that they should be deprived of costs, although the order of the Master in their favour was in other respects affirmed.

prohibition to the 1st Division Court in the County of Carleton. Plaintiff held a chattel mortgage dated 6th January, 1903, for $1,105.31 made by defendant, payable on 31st March, 1903. Default was made in payment, and on 6th April plaintiff authorized one McDermott as bailiff to seize and sell the chattels covered by the mortgage. This was done, and enough was realized to satisfy the mortgage and all costs, and leave a surplus of $81.84 in the bailiff's hands. The plaintiff alleged that defendant was indebted to him for rent and upon other claims outside of the chattel mortgage, and on 30th April he began this action in the Division Court against defendant for the amount of the debt, joining the bailiff as garnishee:-Held, that as the garnishee had not paid over the money to plaintiff (for payment to defendant), and as defendant had taken no steps against either plaintiff or garnishee for an account, defendant could have an action against the garnishee, and, therefore, the claim is a debt and can be attached under s. 179 of the Division Courts Act.

Re Tomlinson v. Hunter, November 6th, 1903, per Britton, J. (not reported.)

—Garnishment of married men's wages—Exemption—Evidence of marriage—Repute.]—In a Division Court action the Judge held that evidence of repute was not sufficient to prove that a primary debtor was a married man and so entitled to the $25 exemption provided for by R.S.O. 1897, c. 60, ss. 180 and 181:—Held, that he had not decided upon a state of conflicting facts but upon a theory that the best evidence must be given, which was a wrong assumption in point of law, and prohibition was granted. -Of Debts-Rent Payable under lease to administratrix for benefit of others. 1-Plaintiffs, claiming as heirs at law of their father and owners of a lot of land, brought an action for specific performance, which was dismissed with costs. After the trial one of the plaintiffs, G.R., died, and probate of his will was granted to a sister and co-plaintiff, and the action was revived in the names of the remaining plaintiffs and the executrix, and an appeal against the judgment was dismissed with costs. judgment was dismissed with costs. It appeared G.R. owned one-half of the lot and the father of the plaintiffs the other half, and that the lot had been leased to a tenant by one of the plaintiffs as administratrix of the father, who died in or before 1896, and by the executrix of G.R. No caution was registered under the Devolution of Estates Act: Held, that the rent due from the tenant was garnishable for the costs payable by the plaintiffs. Macaulay v. Rumball (1869), 19 U.C.C.P. 284, commented on. Judgment of Street, J., reversed, and judgment of the Master in Chambers restored.

—Interest of residuary legatee—Division Court process.]—A primary creditor in a Division Court, by a garnishee summons served on the executors, attached the interest of a residuary legatee in the estate of a testator, who had died within a year of the attachment. A receiver was subsequently appointed in a High Court action to receive his interest. The Division Court Judge gave judgment against the garnishees. An appeal to a Divisional Court was allowed on the ground that such interest was not attachable under section 179 of the Division Courts Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 60.

-Life Insurance—Assignment of policy— Declaration in wife's favor-Attachment for husband's debts.]-The assured assigned shortly before its maturity an endowment policy to a creditor by an assignment absolute in form, there being an agreement however, that the creditor should apply to the company for the cash surrender value and should pay the surplus thereof over his indebtedness to the assured's wife. The assignee after the time limited by the policy for the purpose elected to take the cash surrender value. After this a judgment creditor of the assured obtained an attaching order against the company. The assignee then before any action had been taken by the company in respect of the election made by him revoked it and the husband executed a declaration that the policy was to be held, subject to the assignment, for the benefit of his wife:—Held, that the assignee's election not having been made within the time limited was a mere proposal to the company; that his revocation before action taken by the company put an end to it; and that the cash surrender value was not payable by the company. Held, also, that in any event, notwithstanding the attaching order, the assured's declaration in his wife's favor took effect and defeated the attaching creditor's claim. The principle of Weeks v. Frawley (1893), 23 O.R. 235, approved and applied.

Held, also, that the cheque for the defendant's salary for the month of February, which according to custom, had been delivered to a messenger to leave at the police station for the defendant, but on service of the order, had been stopped by telephone and brought back to the treasurer had not come into the hands of the defendant's agent before service of the order; but held, also, that there was no debt due as the month's salary was not payable until the end of the month, and that there is no law which forbids an employer to pay his servants' wages in ad-

Conservatory attachment — Commission on sales. —An agent who is to be paid his commission on sales by his principal as the latter might make deliveries and obtain payments, is an ordinary creditor; he has no right to seize by conservatory attachment whatever particular moneys may remain due for the goods delivered and the work done by him in connection therewith. -Conservatory seizure-Writ of possession -Breaking open with violence.]-1. An action of conservatory seizure is subject to the same rules and delays as summary matters and attachments before judgment. Arts. 956, 939, 922, C.C.P. 2. A judgment maintaining a conservatory seizure and ordering that the plaintiff be put in possession of the effects seized "under the authority of this Court," without fixing any delay for the delivery of the effects, is not executory until after the lapse of eight days from its date, and a writ of possession issued before the expiration of that time, without service of the judgment, and without a further order of the court, is premature and illegal. 3. If the debtor be absent, or if there be no one to open the doors of the house, the seizing officer must draw up a minute of the fact, and obtain judicial authority to use all necessary force, but only in the presence of two witnesses. 4. It is a breaking in for an officer, by a false pretence, to procure a person within the house to open the door, and then, without permission, to rush in with violence. He must notify the inmates of his business and demand admittance.

Isaacs v. Tafler, 11 Que. P.R. 359.

-Saisie-arret-Unliquidated damages-Requisites for affidavit. 1-When a saisie-arret after judgment is issued, with judicial authority, for unliquidated damages the amount of the security is fixed by law and need not be indersed on the writ. The following allegations in an affidavit for the issue of a saisie-arret before judgment:-"5. I am credibly informed by a reliable person and beheve that the defendant is about to get rid of the property he sold to me and to transfer his interest in the lease of the house he occupies to another who offers him a better price for it, to my prejudice and to be relieved unlawfully of his obligations to me. 6. I am credibly informed by a reliable person and believe because of declaration made by the defendant himself that he intends, after selling his property and transferring interest in the lease, to leave the province, and that I will lose my recourse against him for the reason above stated," are insufficient and a saisie-arret based thereon will be set aside on application therefor.

The Court will not therefore order him to produce accounts, books of account and correspondence. The proper course for the seizing creditor is to contest the declaration and to proceed to trial upon an issue joined.

—Exemption from seizure—Damages when not alimentary.]—Exemption from seizure is a law of exception since at common law the property of the debtor is the security of his creditors. Laws of exception cannot be extended. Therefore, a sum awarded as damages but not for maintenance (à titre d'aliments) may be seized and the Courts cannot give it an immunity which the law does not accord.

If sued he is entitled to plead these special facts.

Tammaro v. Red Cross Macaroni Co., 11

Que. P.R. 71.

—Saisie-arrêt after judgment.]—The inscription en droit is a defence on the merits to a proceeding based on certain facts when such facts are insufficient in law to justify the proceeding. The affidavit for saisie-arrêt after judgment is not a proceeding which can be attached by inscription en droit; it is only a formality required by law to justify the exercise of an exceptional remedy and the matters alleged in it cannot be contended by a plea en droit.

Prévost v. Canagian Society of Arts, 10

Que. P.R. 379.

-Attachment and sale of hypothecary debts.]-(1) A creditor, who causes an hypothecary debt due to his debtor to be seized by writ of attachment, is a third party, within the meaning of Art. 1571 C.C., as regards the buyer or assignee of the debt seized. (2) Property under seizure, whether corporeal or incorporeal, is unassignable or inalienable, as regards the seizing creditor and hence, the assignee of a debt before seizure thereof, cannot, after it has been made, perfect his title by signification and become "a subsequent transferee who has conformed to the requirements of Art. 2127 C.C.'' (3) The words "every conveyance, or transfer, whether voluntary or judicial," in Art. 2127 C.C., do not apply to the seizure of debts by writ of attachment. To make them do so would be in direct violation of Art. 1147 C.C. (4) As a consequence of the above rulings, the assignment of a debt which has not been signified to the debtor, is of no effect and cannot be set up against a creditor who causes the debt to be seized by writ of attachment.

Issue-Onus of proof-Transfer under seal—Estoppel—Fraudulent conveyance— Vendor's lien-Execution-Priorities-Subrogation.]-A transfer of land had been made by the judgment debtor to the garnishee, and the consideration expressed being a certain sum, the receipt whereof was thereby acknowledged; the transfer was under seal; the oral testimony-that only of the parties to the transfer-was to the effect that the transfer was in fact made in settlement of a debt owing by the transferror to the transferree. A certificate of ownership had issued, pursuant to the transfer, which, however, was marked subject to an execution issued and registered after the execution of the transfer. The transferee afterwards paid the amount of this execution. On an issue, in which the judgment creditor affirmed, and the garnishee denied, that at the date of the service of the garnishee summons there was a debt due or accruing due from the garnishee to the judgment debtor:-Held, per Richardson, Rouleau and McGuire, JJ., (1) that the onus was on the judgment creditor to prove the existence of the indebtedness and the evidence failed to prove it. (2) Had the evidence established that the transfer was really voluntary, or made for the purpose of defeating creditors, it would at most, result in setting aside the sale, and so defeat the claim that a debt existed from the transferree to the transferror.

-Money placed with returning officer as deposit.]-The defendant was a candidate for election as a member of the Legislative Assembly, and under the election laws in force the sum of $100 had to be deposited with the returning officer to be forfeited under certain conditions, but to be returned in the event of the candidate's election. The garnishee was the returning officer, and one McDonald on the defendant's behalf advanced the required deposit from his own funds. Upon the defendant being declared elected, the plaintiff garnisheed the deposit:-Held, that service of a garnishee summons will bind only so much as the defendant can honestly deal with without prejudicing the rights of third parties, and that consequently the money in the hands of the garnishee, not being such as the defendant could honestly deal with, was not attachable.

Creagh v. Sutherland, 3 Terr. L.R. 303.

-Promissory note given by garnishee to defendant-Whether attached.]-The plaintiff sought by means of garnishee process to attach the moneys payable under an undue promissory note given by the garnishee to the defendant:—Held, that inasmuch as it was open to the plaintiff to seize the note under execution, and as the remedy provided by garnishee process was intended to secure to judgment creditors what could not be reached by execution, the promissory note was not garnishable. Simpson v. Phillips, 3 Terr. L.R. 385.

Marcy l'ierce, 4 Terr. L.R. 186, followed. The affidavit need not state the grounds of the deponent's belief; it is sufficient if it follows the Rule-the deponent swearing that, to the best of his information and belief, the proposed garnishee is indebted to the defendant. -Attachment of goods-Affidavit to obtain order-Disclosure of relevant facts-Application to set aside order-Additional evidence to support order-King's Bench Act, Rules 811, 813.]-Application to set aside an order for attachment of defendant's personal property granted ex parte under Rule 811 of The King's Bench Act. The affidavit on which the order had been obtained showed as the grounds of the plaintiff's belief in the fraudulent intent of defendant to delay, defeat or defraud her creditors only, (1) that the defendant had sold her real estate and that the plaintiff was informed of such sale by a person who was present at the sale, and (2) that the plaintiff had good reason to believe and verily believed that defendant was about to assign, transfer and dispose of her personal property, effects and credits with intent to delay, defeat or defraud her creditors, and that he was so informed by an auctioneer to whom the defendant applied to purchase the said goods and to pay her the proceeds over and above a certain chattel mortgage. and to whom the defendant had stated that it was her intention to leave the province as soon as the said goods should be disposed of:-Held, that these statements in themselves did not show sufficient grounds from which to infer fraudulent intent on defendant's part. On the application to set aside the order plaintiff filed a new affidavit setting forth a number of additional facts which, together with what had been shown before, would have been sufficient in the opinion of the Judge to found an order for an attachment, but at the same time disclosing that he held security from defendant for part of his claim and that defendant, prior to the issue of the attachment, had offered to pay a part of the debt for a release of the security. Held, (1) that the new evidence given by plaintiff could not be considered with the view of strengthening his case; (2) that, following the practice on motions for injunctions, the non-disclosure by plaintiff of material facts suppressed or omitted either intentionally or by mistake is good cause for setting aside an order for attachment, even though the plaintiff would have been entitled to the order on a full statement of the facts. Newton v. Bergman, 13 Man. R. 563, Richards, J. (Affirmed by the Full Court.)

-Attachment of Debts Act, 1904-"District Registrar.'']-In an action in the Supreme Court for an account of certain rents and profits, plaintiff obtained an order attaching all debts, obligations and liabilities payable or accruing due from the garnishee to the defendant, to answer a judgment to be recovered by the plaintiff against the defendant up to the amount of $6,245. The order was made and issued by the Deputy District Registrar at Vancouver, acting under the provisions of section 3 of the Attachment of Debts Act, 1904. Defendant applied to Morrison, J., in Chambers, to set aside this order, but the summons was dismissed, and defendant appealed:-Held, by the Full Court, that as the term "District Registrar'' is expressly defined by the Attachment of Debts Act, 1904, to mean District Registrar of the Supreme Court, therefore District Registrars are personae de-signatae, and it was not intended to confer on their deputies the power to make attaching orders; that the provisions of the Interpretation Act do not apply, as a general interpretation statute cannot be invoked to control the plain intendment of a special statute. Per Irving, J. —Garnishee summons—Defect in affidavit

-Garnishment-Purchaser of land under contract-Subsequent assignment of agreement to third party-Order as to payments still to fall due.]-(1) A purchaser of land from a defendant, under an agreement providing for payment by successive annual instalments, cannot escape liability under a garnishing order, served upon him in a suit by a creditor of the defendant, by subsequently assigning his interest in the land to another person and procuring the latter to assume liability for the remaining instalments; and, although none of the instalments are due when the order is served, yet they are all covered by it to the extent necessary to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. (2) After the maturity of one of the instalments, the plaintiff is entitled, under Rule 764 of the King's Bench Act, to an order for payment not only of the overdue instalment, but also, when due, of those still to fall due, until the judgment is satisfied. Smith v. Van Buren, 17 Man. R. 49.

—Garnishee summons—Affidavit—Irregularity.]—A garnishee summons and subsequent proceedings founded thereon were set aside because the affidavits on which the summons was granted did not comply with the provisions of Rule 384. Imperial Bank v. Miller, 13 W.L.R. 260.

-Attachment of debts-Purchase money of land.]-The defendants purchased land from R., and owed him $1,000 on the purchase, for which sum they had given a cheque to a bank manager, to hold at their order until they ascertained that R. had a good title to the land. On the 24th March, 1909, the plaintiff, a creditor of R., served on the defendants an order attaching the sum of $1,000 as due from them to R. At this date the cheque was still in the hands of the bank manager, and was subject to the defendants' order, and the sum of $1,000, though due to R., was not yet payable by him:-Held, that the debt was garnishable, and was attached by the service on the 24th March.

-Attachment of debts-Garnishee summons -Affidavit-Defective summons.]-Rule 384 provides that a garnishee summons "may be issued by the clerk, upon the plaintiff or judgment creditor, his advocate or agent, filing an affidavit" proving the nature of the claim, the indebtedness of the garnishee, etc.:—Held, that to comply with the Rule the affidavit must be made by the plaintiff or his advocate or agent, and the affidavit ot a student-at-law in the office of the plaintiff's solicitor is not a foundation for a summons. Held, also, that this is not a defect which can be cured under Rule 538. Semble, that another defect in the affidavit, viz., that it was not intituled in the cause, as required by Rule 294, might be cured under 538. Held, also, that the defendant was entitled to have the garnishee summons set aside, upon the first objection, although he himself, in his summons to set aside the garnishee summons, had not set out his objections, as required by Rule 540. Rule refers only to motions to set aside for irregularity; and it is doubtful whether it applies to a defect which is more than an irregularity; but, in any event, the purpose of the Rule is simply to give notice to the opposite party, and it is within the terms of Rule 538; and, if no prejudice has been caused by the failure to comply with the Rule, the motion should not be defeated thereby; and in this case there was no suggestion that the plaintiff had been in any way prejudiced by the defendant not having set out the objections in the summons, or that he was unaware of what the objections were. By the group of rules governing attachment proceedings, Rules 813-858 of the King's Bench Act, the process is not declared to be available in every case where money is demanded. By Rule 815 property "may be attached for the payment of a debt or the satisfaction of a cause of action arising from legal liability:" and Rule 817 requires an affidavit stating, inter alia, that the defendant is legally liable to the plaintiff in damages in the sum claimed in the action, "after making all proper and just set-offs, allowances, and discounts:"-Held, that the procedure, if applicable at all to an action of tort, was not applicable to an action such as this, where the damages are not given merely by way of restitution, but may be of an exemplary or punitive nature; and the attaching order was set aside.

Hime v. Coulthard, 15 W.L.R. 288 (Man.).

-South African land warrant-Attachment.]-1. A warrant or certificate granted under 7 and 8 Edw. VII. c. 67 (D.) to a volunteer as a reward for services in the South African war and entitling him to select and obtain a grant of land from the Dominion Government, is in the nature of a document of title to land, and cannot therefore, be seized under a writ of attachment from a County Court.

Inter-Ocean Real Estate Company v. White, 20 Man. R. 67.

-Attachment of debts-Garnishee summons before judgment-Affidavit.]-Before judgment, the affidavit of one of the plaintiff's solicitors was filed, in which he swore that he had a full and personal knowledge of the matters deposed to, and that the two defendants, and each of them, were justly and truly indebted to the plaintiff in a named sum, being the amount due to the plaintiff for principal money and interest on a chattel mortgage, and that he (the deponent) was informed and verily believed that each of the proposed garnishees (named persons) was justly and truly indebted to the defendant M., and that each was within the jurisdiction of the Court. By the statement of claim the plaintiff alleged that each of the defendants covenanted to pay the plaintiff, under a certain chattel mortgage, the amount mentioned in the affidavit:-Held, that the affidavit was sufficient in point of form to sustain garnishee summonses issued thereon; there was nothing in the Rules which required a præcipe to be filed; the requirements of Rule 384 were sufficiently complied with; Rule 295, which requires the grounds of belief to be stated in affidavits used on interlocutory motions, could have no application, because the affidavit was not for use on such a motion, and because Rule 384 itself only requires it to be "to the best of the deponent's belief," without more; and the words used expressed all that is expressed in those words. Held, also, assuming that the liability of the defendants upon the covenant in a chattel mortgage was a joint one, that there was no reason why a debt due to one of two joint debtors might not be attached.

Nohren v. Auten, 15 W.L.R. 417 (Alta.).

-Attaching fund in Court-Stop order.]-In Alberta, where execution creditors seek to realize from a fund in Court a charging order is unnecessary and inappropriate. The proper practice is to obtain a stop order and then to apply for transfer of the fund to the sheriff to be distributed by him under the Creditors' Relief Ordinance. The plaintiffs applied for and obtained an order charging the defendants interested in the fund in Court to the credit of the cause of York v. Inglis with payment of the plaintiffs' claim. Subsequently an order was made in another action, McGibbon v. Inglis, charging the same fund with payment of the other claim:-Held, that the charging orders under the circumstances had the same effect as stop orders, and need not be made absolute. Directions were given for taxation and payment of the costs of both applicants out of the fund in Court to the credit of York v. Inglis after York's claim had been fully satisfied and for transfer of the balance to the sheriff for distribution under the Creditors' Relief Ordinance.

McDougall v. Inglis, 2 Alta. R. 342.

-Jurisdiction-Situs of debt-"Assets in the Territories."]-"Assets in the Territories," used in s.-s. 9 of Rule 18 of the Judicature Ordinance, in order to confer jurisdiction on the Court, must be such class or nature of assets as to which a real locality can be assigned, and should not be extended to include assets which have a mere theoretical or conventional locality. A debt owing by a person residing and domi-ciled in Alberta, to a person residing and domiciled in Ontario, has not any real situs in Alberta, and is not such "asset in the Territories,"

Love v. Bell Furniture Co., 2 Alta. R. 209.

-Judgment against garnishee-Summons to set aside.]—The garnishee not having, so far as the record shewed, disputed his liability to the defendant, an order was made ex parte giving leave to the plaintiff to enter judgment and issue execution against the garnishee, which was done. The garnishee then moved to set aside the order on the ground that it was made ex parte, and also on the ground that he had a good defence on the merits. These grounds were not, however, set out in the summons:— Held, that an order for judgment against the garnishee in default of appearance may be made ex parte. 2. The grounds of the alleged irregularity not having been stated in the summons, the application should not be granted on that ground. 3. The garnishee having shown that he had what might be good ground for disputing his indebtedness, and having accounted for his apparent default, should be allowed to dispute his liability. 4. The plaintiff should not be prejudiced by reason of the mistake of the clerk of the Court in omitting to file with the record a letter written by the garnishee disputing his liability, and that the garnishee must therefore pay the costs of the judgment and of the application to secure the same.

Hunter v. Collings, 2 Sask. R. 207.

-Attachments of debts-Building contract -Failure of contractor to complete work-Debt.]-Defendant had a contract for the erection of a school building for the garnishees, but abandoned the work before completion. The contract provided that the proprietor might in such a case take possession of the premises and complete the work and charge cost against amount due the contractor. It was also provided that the final estimate of 20 per cent. should not be payable until all liens had been paid and defective work remedied. The plaintiff, after the defendant abandoned the work, garnisheed the balance due him under the contract. After the garnishees had paid all liens and completed the building, most of which payments were made after service of the garnishee, there was no surplus remaining:—Held, that the true test as to whether or not there is an attachable debt is to ascertain whether anything has to be done by the judgment debtor as a condition precedent to payment, and as the condition precedent to the payment of the amount due when the garnishee was served was the completion of the building, which was never completed by the contractor, there was not any attachable debt due from the garnishee to the judgment debtor.

Heward Milling Co. v. Barrett, 2 Sask. R.

-Garnishee proceedings - Fire insurance money-When "debt" attachable. j-(1) The liability of a fire insurance company to indemnify the assured against loss by fire is not a debt attachable by garnishee within the meaning of Rule 385, at least until after the fact of liability and the amount of same are ascertained or agreed. (2) The non-appearance of a fire insurance company to a garnishee summons is not such an admission of liability as will convert the claim into a debt. (3) The liquidator of a company defendant is a person "claiming to be interested in the moneys attached" within the meaning of Rule 386 of the Judicature Ordinance, and as such may apply to set aside a garnishee summons.

Hartt v. Edmonton Steam Laundry Co., 2 Alta. R. 130.

-Monies accruing due—Re-adjustment of payments after service.]—The garnishee purchased certain lands from the judgment debtor on deferred payments. After the purchase the judgment creditor caused a garnishee summons to be served on the garnishee. After service of the summons the judgment debtor and garnishee effected a re-arrangement of the payments due whereby they were reduced and terms for payment extended. The garnishee then entered ar appearance admitting liability in accordance with the new arrangement without any deductions. On a motion to enter judgment against the garnishee she pleaded the right to deduct certain monies payable for taxes prior to the purchase of the land:-Held, that the parties could not after service of the garnishee summons make any arrangement whereby the liability of the garnishee was affected. (2) That while the garnishee might be entitled to deduct monies paid for taxes from the monies due to the judgment debtor, yet having appeared and admitted liability without deductions, she was estopped from showing that she was not liable.

Beauchamp v. Messer, 3 Sask. R. 59, 13 W.L.R. 404.

—Garnishment—Form prescribed for affidavit.]—The substitution, though by an error in type-writing, of the word "justly" in an affidavit to lead a garnishee order is not cured by Rule 760 of the King's Bench Act, permitting the use of language "to the like effect" of the forms prescribed, and is such a defect as cannot be amended; but the use of the word "deductions" instead of "discounts" in such affidavit is permissible under the Rule, as the two words mean practically the same thing in that connection.

Johnson v. Chalmers, 19 Man. R. 255.

—Garnishment—Attachment of money in hands of County Court clerk to which debtor entitled.]—Money paid into a County Court for the benefit of one of the parties to a suit in that Court is not attachable in the hands of the clerk of the Court by garnishee process at the suit of a creditor of such party.—Quaere, whether the money could not be reached by way of charging order or equitable execution as by the appointment of a receiver.

Otto v. Connery, 16 Man. R. 532.

—Garnishing order before judgment in action of tort.]—The words ''claim or demand'' used in rule 759 of the King's Bench Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 40, are limited by the following words, ''due and owing'' and do not extend a claim in tort for unascertained damages before judgment recovered therefor, so that a plaintiff having only such a claim is not entitled under that rule to an order attaching moneys due by a third party to the defendant to answer the judgment of the plaintiff to be recovered. Grant v. West (1896), 23 A.R. 533, followed.

-Jurisdiction of County Court - Alleged trust for debtor. J - Under the County Courts Act, R.S.M., 1902, c. 38, a County Court has no jurisdiction to make an order in garnishee proceeding attaching and prohibiting the payment over of moneys owing or acrruing due from the garnishee to a person other than the primary debtor, upon the allegation that such moneys would, when paid over, be held by such other person in trust for the debtor in consequence of some transaction alleged to be fraudulent and void as against the creditors of the debtor, or to make an order for the trial of an issue to determine whether such moneys were an asset of the debtor or not. Donohoe v. Hull (1895), 24 Can. S.C.R. 683, followed.

Adams v. Montgomery, 18 Man. R. 22.

- Attachment of debts - Garnishee summons-Novation-"Due or accruing due" -Legal or equitable debt. 1-A firm composed of A. & B. were indebted to the extent of $500 to another firm composed of X. and Y. By mutual arrangement between the two firms, A., one of the partners, made his promissory note for $500, payable to Mrs. X., wife of one of the partners in "X. & Y." in payment of the debt from "A. & B." to "X. & Y." b. recovered a judgment against X. for $378; and issued and served a garnishee summons upon A. alone. E. recovered a judgment for $95, against X. & Y., and issued and served a garnishee summons upon A. alone. F. recovered a judgment against X. & Y. for $30.50, and issued and served a garnishee summons upon A. alone. G. recovered a judgment against X. & Y., and issued and served a garnishee summons upon A. & B.: -Held, that the garnishee summonses were all ineffective: (a) Assuming the bona fides of the transaction whereby Mrs. X. became holder of the note, because there was nothing due or accruing due from A. & B. or either of them, to X. & Y. or either of them. (b) If the transaction in question were alleged to be fraudulent, on the ground that under the garnishee issue, as directed, the question of fraud could not be tried. Held, in any event, that the garnishee summons issued by D. was ineffective, because:-(1) A debt owing to a firm cannot be attached in an action against an individual member of a firm. (2) An attachment against an individual who is a member of a firm cannot affect a debt owing by the firm; and, for the second reason, the garnishee summonses issued by E. & F. were alike ineffective. Semble, that but for the debt having by reason of the note ceased to be a debt from A. & B. to Z. & Y. the garnishee summons' issued by G. would have been effective; and that a garnishee summons can be issued against a firm in the firm

Minger v. Anderson, 1 Alta. R. 400.

-Writ of attachment-Non-resident foreigner-Detention of goods-Substitutional service.]-Appeals from two decisions of Mathers, J., upon an application to set aside an order of the referee allowing substitutional service of the statement of claim and an application to set aside an order of attachment under which certain goods said to belong to the male defendant had been seized by the sheriff. The statement of claim alleged that the male defendand had, while in the position of treasurer of one of the departments of the Government of Russia, stolen a large amount of moneys of the plaintiff which had come to his hands and had brought the money into Manitoba, where he had bought certain lands with it and had also the goods seized under the attachment. Amongst other things, the plaintiff asked for payment of the moneys stolen, an order for the delivery or sale of the goods, a declaration that the defendants had no claim to the said lands as against the plaintiff, and an order for the sale of them. It appeared that the defendants had left the Province about a month before the commencement of the action and their whereabouts were unknown to the plaintiff. On the hearing of the appeals evidence was allowed in to show that the defendants had, about two weeks before the commencement of the action, executed powers of attorney to one Popoff of Winnipeg, in which each was described as "of Winnipeg, Man., Canada, who was in Chicago, Ill., on this date" and in which Popoff was authorized to sell and dispose of the defendants' property in Winnipeg. Shortly after the defendants came to Manitoba the male defendant bought and furnished a house as a residence, rented a store and bought goods with which to carry on business and the defendants, up to the time of their leaving the Province, were probably domiciled or ordinarily resident within Manitoba; but it appeared from the material used by the plaintiff on the application that the Russian Government had discovered that the defendants were in Canada and was taking steps, in the month preceding their departure, to extradite Proskouriakoff, and that it was probable the defendants had heard of this and left the Province in consequence:-Held, per Mathers, J. (1)-That the facts did not bring the case within rule 201 of the King's Bench Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 40, or any of its subrules, so that it was not a case in which the statement of claim could be served out of the jurisdiction. (2) It could not be said that the defendants had committed a tort in Manitoba within the meaning of paragraph (e) of rule 201. Anderson v. Nobels (1906) 12. O.L.R. 644, followed. (3) A Court has no right to enforce a personal money claim against a person who is neither domiciled nor resident within its jurisdiction unless he has appeared to the process or has expressly agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of such Court; and, therefore, apart from rule 202 of the King's Bench Act, the possession by the defendants of property in Manitoba gave the Court no jurisdiction over the defendants in an action in personam. (4) If evidence had been given that the defendants were possessed of property in Manitoba to the value of $200, it would have been necessary to consider whether, under rule 202, the statement of claim could be served out of the jurisdiction without previously obtaining leave to serve it, and also whether the plaintiff's cause of action against the defendants was upon a contract within the meaning of that rule. (5) The writ of attachment should be set aside with costs as having been issued without jurisdiction; but, as there was a possibility that the plaintiff might succeed in establishing a claim to the specific chattels seized, an order should be made for the detention of them by the sheriff until further order on condition that the plaintiff should always keep the cost of detaining, storing and insuring the goods paid in advance so as to protect defendants against loss in case the plaintiff should fail to establish his claim, with leave to either party to apply at any time to vary or reseind the order. (6) That substitutional service of the statement of claim should not be allowed in a case like the present when personal service out of the jurisdiction was not authorized. Per Howell, C.J.A., and Perdue, J.A.-The evidence showed that the defendants were not, at the time of the commencement of the action, domiciled or ordinarily resident within Manitoba, and the case was, therefore, not within paragraph (c) of rule 201, and, not being within any of the other paragraphs of that rule or rule 202, the Court had no jurisdiction and the appeals should be dismissed. Per Richards and Phippen, JJ.A.-The defendants being shown to have acquired a domicile in Manitoba or to have been ordinarily resident here up to within about a month before the commencement of the action and having described themselves as of Winnipeg only two weeks before, the onus was upon them to show that they had ceased to be so ordinarily resident and had, at the time of the commencement of the action, no intention of returning, and they had not satisfied that onus, and the appeals should be allowed. The Court being equally divided, the appeals were dismissed without costs. [An appeal from this judgment to the Supreme Court of Canada was quashed.

Emperor of Russia v. Proskouriakoff, 18 Man. R. 56.

—Attachment of debts—Priority of attaching creditors.]—In a dispute between a number of attaching creditors for the moneys paid into Court by garnishees:—Held, that such moneys should be paid to the sheriff for distribution under the provisions of the Creditors' Relief Act.

Robert Ward & Co. v. Wilson, 13 B.C.R. 273.

-Moneys due to judgment debtor under mining contract—Attachment by judgment creditors.]-On service of garnishee orders under the Attachment of Debts Act, 1904, c. 7, the garnishees admitted a debt owing to the judgment debtor, but asked the protection of the Court as against mechanics lien-holders claiming the fund. Thereupon an order was made directing the garnishee to pay the fund into Court to abide the determination of an issue between the attaching creditors and the lienholders. In this issue the lien-holders failed, and proceeded upon their liens against the property:-Held, by the Full Court, that the garnishees were not estopped from requiring an issue between themselves and the attaching creditors to ascertain what, if any thing, was owing by the garnishees to the judgment debtor at the time of the service of the garnishee orders.

Under such circumstances a prisoner should not be released unless he pays all the costs occasioned by his misconduct in connection with the lost book, although an application for release without such payment might be entertained if it were shown that, by reason of poverty, such costs could not be paid.

Cotter v. Osborne, 17 Man. R. 248.

—Interpleader by garnishee — Moneys claimed by third parties.]—Held, that a garnishee who admits liability to the defendant in respect of a sum of money, which is also claimed by parties other than the plaintiff, is not entitled to apply for an interpleader summons in the action in which the garnishee summons issued, to determine the rights of all claimants; but must pay the money into Court with a suggestion that there are other claimants, as provided by rule 392 of the Judicature Ordinance.

Mears v. Arcola Woodworking Co., 1 Sask. R. 191.

-Of person.]-See ARREST.

-Amount due under building contract-Failure of contractor to complete. J-Defendant had a contract for the erection of a school building for the garnishees, but abandoned the work before completion. The contract provided that the proprietor might in such a case take possession of the premises and complete the work and charge cost against amount due the contractor. It was also provided that the final estimate of 20 per cent. should not be payable until all liens had been paid and defective work remedied. The plaintiff after the defend-ant abandoned the work garnisheed the balance due him under the contract. After the garnishees had paid all liens and completed the building, most of which payments were made after service of the garnishee, there was no surplus remaining:-Held, that the true test as to whether or not there is an attachable debt is to ascertain whether anything has to be done by the judgment debtor as a condition precedent to payment, and as the condition precedent to the payment of the amount due when the garnishee was served was the completion of the building, which was never completed by the contractor, there was not any attachable debt due from the garnishee to the judgment debtor.

Heward Milling Co. v. Barrett, 2 Sask. R.

-Judgment against garnishee - Application to set aside. | - The garnishee not having so far as the record showed, disputed his liability to the defendant, an order was made ex parte giving leave to the plaintiff to enter judgment and issue execution against the garnishee, which was done. The garnishee then moved to set aside the order on the ground that it was made ex parte, and also on the ground that he had a good defence on the merits. These grounds were not, however, set out in the summons:-Held, (1) that an order for judgment against the garnishee in default of appearance may be made ex parte. (2) The grounds of the alleged irregularity not having been stated in the summons, the application should not be granted on that ground. (3) The garnishee having shown that he had what might be good ground for disputing his indebtedness, and having accounted for his apparent default, should be allowed to dispute his liability. The plaintiff should not be prejudiced by reason of the mistake of the clerk of the Court in omitting to file with the record a letter written by the garnishee disputing his liability, and that the garnishee must therefore pay the costs of the judgment and of the application to secure the same. Hunter v. Collins, 2 Sask. R. 207.

-"Debt or liquidated demand"-Action between partners-Accounts.]-Where one partner sues another for a specific sum, although an account may be necessary to determine the exact sum due, the action is for "a debt or liquidated demand," within the meaning of Rule 384, and, consequently, a garnishee summons can issue to attach a debt due or accruing due from a third person to the defendant; and, semble, that the same principle would apply to an action for an account, and payment of the amount found due:-Semble, that in all cases where the plaintiff takes advantage of an extraordinary interlocutory remedy, e.g., caveat, injunction, or garnishee summons, he may be put on terms to prosecute

Alexander v. Thompson, 1 Alta, R. 501.

— Garnishee proceedings — Rights as between claimant and plaintiff.]—The plaintiff attached certain moneys due the defendant and the garnishees admitted liability and paid the money into Court. The money was claimed by a third party:—Held, that in determining the rights of the plaintiff and claimant to the fund in question, the garnishees having admitted liability, it was not open to the plaintiff to raise as against the claimant a defence which could only be pleaded by the garnishees.

Beaver Lumber Co. v. Northern Construction Co., 1 Sask. R. 264.

- Garnishee proceedings - Assignment of future salary-Equitable assignment-Civil servants-Public policy.]-(1) The salary of a civil servant whose appointment is "during pleasure" accrues from day to day, irrespective of when the salary may have been made payable by Order-in-Council, Departmental Regulation or otherwise. (2) A power-of-attorney authorizing the attorney to collect a sum of money does not per se operate as an equitable assignment of the fund. If, however, it appears from all the surrounding circumstances that it was the intention of the parties that the fund should be assigned, an equitable assignment is established. (3) The rule of law that the salaries of public officers cannot be assigned as being contrary to public policy does not extend to the case of a junior clerk. (4) Salary to be earned in the future is assignable

The plaintiff attached certain moneys earned by the defendant in threshing with a portion of such machinery, and the Waterous Engine Works claimed such moneys under the assignment. It was agreed that the issue should be determined in a summary way upon affidavits:-Held, (1) That the claimant, being really the plaintiff in an issue, was entitled to file affidavits in reply to those filed by the plaintiff in the action. (2) That the intention of the parties in stating the moneys earned by part of the machinery should be assigned was not to limit the amount to the part of the moneys that might be earned by the machinery used, but to describe the debt and all moneys earned, whether with the whole or a part of the machinery, were by the assignment assigned to the claimant. (3) That an equitable assignment may be made of a mere possibility or expectancy of future property.

Lynberg v. Tarbox, 1 Sask. R. 492.

—Application to set aside—No appearance by applicant—Locus standi.]—Defendant moved to set aside a writ of attachment against personal property on the ground that it had been obtained on affidavits which were false. No appearance had been entered by the defendant, and it was objected that until an appearance had been entered had no locus standi:—Held, that the issue of a writ of attachment is not a step in the cause, but is entirely incidental thereto, and a motion may be made to set it aside on the ground of irregularity before appearance.

AUTHOR.

Author and publisher-Refusal to publish -Payment of price-Right to manuscript.] —The defendants, the publishers of a series of biographies called "Makers of Canada," employed the plaintiff, an author, to write one of the biographies, the Life of M. The contract was made by letters and in conversations between the parties, but the plaintiff had written an earlier book in the series, in regard to which there was a formal contract. In the letters referred to there was no mention of publication, but the price was agreed on, and was paid to the plaintiff, who wrote the biography and delivered the manuscript to the defendants. They declined to publish it, on the ground that it was unsuitable for the series, whereupon the plaintiff offered to return the money paid, and demanded the manuscript, which the defendants refused to deliver:—
Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the manuscript. Per Garrow, J.A., that the written evidence must be considered in the light of the surrounding circumstances; that both parties intended when the contract was made that the proposed book should be published as one of the series, and such publication formed a material part of the con-sideration to the plaintiff in undertaking the work; and the inference was, that if, when the book was written, it was considered by the defendants unfitted for the series, they would return the manuscript and thus enable the plaintiff to secure publication elsewhere; they had no right, under any view of the agreement, to keep it, and also refuse to publish; or, in another view, that there was a complete rejection of the book, which the plaintiff accepted as final, whereupon the contract was at an end, and the defendants entitled to get back their money and the plaintiff his manuscript. Per Maclaren, J.A., that the whole contract was not in the letters, and it was impossible to find what the contract was without importing into it the facts and circumstances under which it was made; and the surrounding circumstances all pointed to the conclusion that publication of the work was an implied term of the contract. Per Meredith, J.A., that the terms of the contract were to be gathered from what passed between the parties upon the subject and the surrounding material circumstances; the plaintiff was selling the offspring of his intelligence and education, a thing the chief value of which was in its intangible properties; he was selling it for a specific purpose, publication in the series called "Makers of Canada;" in all the circumstances, there was no reasonable doubt that there were the two corresponding and depending tacit, if not expressed, obligations: (1) that the book would be reasonably fit for the purposes for which it was written; and (2) that, if so fit, it would be published. Per Moss, C.J.O., that there was nothing in the circumstances of this case to take it out of the ordinary rule, or to import into the agreement between the parties the element of obligation to publish, and, in case of failure to do so for any reason, to return the manuscript.

AUTOMOBILES.

Negligence.]—The chauffeur of an automobile is guilty of negligence if seeing that the horse in a carriage encountered was frightened, he merely stops the automobile, but does not turn off the motor, the noise of which causes the horse's fright to continue, and the owners of the automobile are jointly and severally liable with him for the consequences of a resulting accident. The lack of fencing or other protection along the road is no defence to an action against them.

Lubier v. Michaud, Q.R. 38 S.C. 190.

By-law regulating speed of automobiles.]
—The Quebec statute 6 Edw. XII. c. 13, having provided that no municipal by-law to regulate the speed of automobiles shall have any force or effect, an allegation in the declaration of an action (damages caused by collision) against the owner of such a vehicle, that he was unlawfully driving it at a speed "ffar in excess of that permitted by the by-laws of the locality," is irrelevant and will be struck out on demurrer.

Peck v. Ogilvie, 31 Que. S.C. 227.

Liability of owner—Negligence of bailee's chauffeur.]—Two essential conditions must exist to make the owner of a thing liable, as such, for damages from an injury, 1st, the injury must have been caused by the thing, and, 2nd, the thing must have been in his care at the time. Hence, when the owner of an automobile sends it for repairs to a company that carries on the business, and the company, after doing the work, sends out the machine, in the care of one of its own chauffeurs, to test it, and an accident occurs through the fault of the chauffeur, the owner is not hable for the consequences. The fact that his own chauffeur was in the automobile at the time is immaterial.

McCabe v. Allan, 39 Que. S.C. 29.

- Negligence - Onus - Responsibility of owner-Chauffeur on errand of his own.]-A chauffeur, having received permission to have his master's motor for a few minutes. in order to take some things to the house of a fellow servant, at the request of the daughters of the latter, took them for a ride, and, on returning with them to their father's house, injured the plaintiff. The jury held that the defendant had not proved that the accident did not arise through the chauffeur's negligence, and, also, that the latter was acting within the general scope of his employment at the time of the accident:-Held, that, having regard to the terms of 6 Edw. VII., c. 46 (O.) (an Act to regulate the speed and operation of motor vehicles on highways), which casts the onus on the defendant when his motor has occasioned an accident, and makes him responsible for any violation of the Act, there was enough evidence to support the findings. Semble, that under the Act the chauffeur is to be regarded as the alter ego of the proprietor, and the latter is liable for his negligence in all cases when the use of the vehicle is with permission, though he may be out on an errand of his own. Semble, also, that under s. 13 the owner of a motor vehicle for whom a permit is issued is responsible not only in regard to fines and penalties imposed by the Act, but also in damages, for any violation of the Act or of any regulation provided by order of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

Mattei v. Gillies, 16 O.L.R. 558.

—Automobile left standing on side of road—Horse shying—Motor Vehicles Act.]—Under s. 18 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 6 Edw. VII. c. 46 (O.), where any loss or damage is incurred or sustained by a person by reason of a motor vehicle on a highway, the onus is imposed on the owner or driver of proving that the loss or damage did not arise through his negligence. The owner of an automobile—a bright red one—was driving to a village, intending to stop at an hotel there and have dinner. On arriving at the foot of a hill, the road over which led to the hotel, he found that, owing to the condition of the road, it was impracticable to drive the car up the hill, so he drew it up at the side of the road about two feet from the travelled part, locking it, as required by the Act, and taking the key with his, and then went to the hotel and had dinner, remaining there some three hours. While the car was in this position, the plaintiff was in the act of driving down the hill, and, when he was about twenty rods from the car, his horse caught sight of it and showed signs of The plaintiff, notwithstanding, fright. drove him on about a rod, when he again showed fright; the plaintiff still urged him on, and when within a rod and a half of the car he showed an inclination to leave the road, and, on the plaintiff pulling him back, he wheeled round and upset the carriage, whereby the plaintiff and the horse and carriage were injured. It appeared that the car could have been driven to a vard of another hotel some 600 feet away:-Held, that there was evidence of negligence to submit to the jury as to there being an unreasonable user of the highway, and an authorized obstruction thereof, and therefore, a finding in favour of the plaintiff should not be disturbed.

BAILIFF.

Liability for bailiff's fees—Bailiff's association—Arts. 1716, 1722 C.C.]—In the absence of agreement to the contrary the attorney who employs a bailiff is personally liable to him for his fees in serving papers. Per Archibald, J., Though bailiffs cannot form an association for the exercise of their profession itself nothing prevents them doing so for the purpose of dividing their fees; such an association not being mentioned in Art. 1835 C.C., the date of its formation may be proved independently of registration.

Decelles v. Bazin, 4 Que. P.R. 92 (C.R.).

-Bailiff's fees-Partnership of bailiffs-Registration—Arts. 1834, 1835, C.C.]-1. Advocates are personally responsible for the fees of bailiffs in the Province of Quebec employed by them in connection with the cases which they are conducting before the Courts. Such liability, where a partnership of advocates exists, is joint and not joint and several. 2. A partnership of bailiffs does not fall under Arts. 1834 and 1835 of the civil code, and registration of such partnership, not being required or authorized by law, is without effect. Therefore the provisions of Art. 1835, as to disproof of the allegations of the declaration of partnership, do not apply to a declaration of partnership made by a firm of bailiffs, so far as their business as bailiffs is concerned. 3. Although bailiffs cannot act, in the performance of their duties, under a partnership name, they are not precluded from forming a partner ship as regards the financial returns from their individual work, nor from contracting, as a partnership, for the payment of individual services rendered by one or several of them.

BAILMENT.

Acceptance of goods under agreement to sell and account.]—A company in Halifax, of which defendant was president, was engaged in the business of selling gasoline engines and supplies, and in connection with their business acted as agents for the Toronto Gas and Gasoline Engine Co. An engine belonging to the latter company had been placed on board a boat belonging to the Halifax company for the purpose of testing it and exhibiting its capacity. An agent of the Toronto company was about taking possession of the engine for the pur-pose of returning it to Toronto, but, after conferring with defendant, agreed to allow it to remain on the boat for a time on the understanding that defendant would endeavour to sell the boat and engine together, in which case the sum of $350 was to go to the Toronto company for the engine and the balance to the Halifax company for the boat. Defendant carried on business as a ship-broker, and the boat while lying at his wharf was damaged in a storm and partly filled with water. Defendant had insured the boat and made a claim upon the insurance company as for a total loss, which the company declined to recognize, and beyond this he took no steps for the protection of the boat or engine, both of which were eventually lost, and he gave no notice to the company of the risk to which their property was exposed:-Held, that defendant was not a gratuitous bailee, and that when the owners of the engine entrusted their property to defendant's care they had a right to expect that he would hold it with the skill which his profession or occupation implied, and, as he had neglected to use such skill, he was responsible in damages for the consequences. The action was brought in the name of plaintiff company, to whom the Toronto company has assigned, but it appeared at the trial that the transaccions between the parties upon which the action was based occurred prior to the assignment. Held, that the trial judge had jurisdiction to order an amendment making the Toronto company co-plaintiffs, and that his direction that they be so joined was sufficient, and that the Court on appeal had jurisdiction to amend the order to make it conform to the directions so given, the order having been taken out in a different form, viz., substituting the Toronto company as plaintiff, instead of making it a co-plaintiff as directed.

Canadian Gas Power & Launches v. Crosby, 44 N.S.R. 192.

—Negligence of bailee's servant—Certificated engineer.]—A bailee for hire is liable for the negligence of his servant. The engagement of an engineer certificated under the Steam Boilers Act, will not, in the absence of evidence of the competency of the engineer, relieve the employer (bailiee) from liability for injury to a steam boiler the subject of the bailment, occasioned by the negligence of the engineer. The operation of a steam boiler by a bailee for hire after he has discovered defects in the boiler which might probably result in more extended injury, and without notice of such defects being given to the bailor, is negligence for which the bailee is liable; and the implied warranty of the bailor that the boiler is reasonably fit for the purpose for which it was hired is no answer to such a charge of negligence. A bailee for hire must return the subject of the bailment in like good order as he received it, reasonable wear and tear excepted; and if the article is returned with defects not occasioned by such reasonable wear and tear, the onus is upon the bailee to disprove negligence.

Taylor v. Carnell, 2 Alta. R. 237.

Fire—Damages—Sale of goods.]—The defendants agreed to make the plaintiff certain tools used in manufacturing hubs of a special kind, and, in consideration of being allowed to use the tools, to manufacture also a number of the hubs:—Held that the use of the tools was an unconditional appropriation thereof to the contract, so that the property in them had passed to the plaintiff; that while using them the defendants were bailees thereof for hire, and after ceasing to use them, gratuitous bailees; that the defendants having neglected to send the tools to the plaintiff after repeated requests were liable to him in damages; but that these damages were nominal only, and that the plaintiff could not, upon the destruction of the tools by an accidental fire while retained by the defendants, recover from them their value, that destruction not being damage such as might fairly and reasonably be considered as arising from the breach, or in contemplation of the parties.

When, shortly after, the corn was run out to be shipped, a quantity of it was found to be in an advanced state of fermentation:—Held, that the defendants had been guilty of negligence and were liable to the plaintiffs for the loss sustained by

The owner of a sketch, deposited with an en-graver to be reproduced as an engraving in the form of an advertisement, has a right of action to recover its value in default of its being returned, but he can-not recover damages for the loss of advantages that he might have gained through the publication and distribution of the engraving ordered to be made. Gignae v. Woodburn, Q.R. 29 S.C. 431.

-Negligence-Liability for spoiling of meat placed in cold storage.] - The defendants received at different times in their cold storage warehouse fresh meat, to be frozen and kept frozen for the plaintiffs until called for. After a few months the meat was found so spoilt that it had to be destroyed. This action was brought to recover damages for the loss, claimed to have been caused by the negligence of the defendants. When delivered to the defendants the meat was enclosed in wrappers which, according to the evidence, necessitated one or two more degrees of frost to freeze the meat than if there had been no wrapping, and the defendants attributed the damage to this fact and relied on a provision in the receipts given that they were not to be "responsible for any loss from any or damage caused defects in the packages, barrels, wrappers or coverings in which the said goods are contained." The trial Judge made the following findings of fact: (1) The meat was in good and sound condition when delivered at the defendants' warehouse (2) The warehouse was properly constructed for the purpose of cold storage; the plant was a first-class cold storage plant of modern type and sufficient power; that it was operated with the ordinary and reasonable care which might have been expected in the carrying out of the business, and that the men in charge of the plant, while not having that higher and special knowledge which a man of scientific attainment might possess on the subject, yet had such practical and even technical knowledge as might be reasonably expected in conducting such a business in an ordinary satisfactory manner. (3) The real cause of the spoiling of the meat had not been disclosed by the evidence. On these findings, the trial Judge held that the plaintiffs had failed to establish negligence on the defendants' part, and he dismissed the action with costs:-Held. on appeal, that the condition in the receipt above quoted did not relieve the defendants from the consequences of negligence, if proved; but, that the plaintiffs had failed to prove negligence and that the appeal should be dismissed.

—Bailee returning article in damaged condition — Absence of explanation.] — A bailee for hire who returns the property bailed in a damaged condition, and who, being the only person with full knowledge of the circumstances causing the damage, fails to give any explanation of the same, is presumed to have been negligent. This applies to the hirer of a horse and carriage from a livery stable keeper.

—Warehousing—Proviso as to special care

. . . for want of any special care or precaution," does not relieve him from that obligation. Hence, a warehouseman who receives boxes of lemons during the winter and allows them to freeze, is liable for the loss.

accept any wheat to be specially binned The amount of wheat shipped from the bins in which plaintiff's wheat was stored was greater than that mentioned in the tickets, and he claimed this wheat. The plaintiff also claimed damages by reason of the defendants' failure to deliver the wheat to him at Palmerston, Ont., the wheat being in fact delivered at Fort William:-Held, that the plaintiff having accepted ordinary storage receipts under the Manitoba Grain Act calling for the delivery to him of the "above quantity, grade, and kind of wheat," could not claim that the wheat was specially binned under the provisions of the Act, and was entitled only to delivery in accordance with the provisions of the Act when the grain is stored under storage tickets. (2) That the indorsement of the words " specially binned '' on the ordinary storage receipt would not give any greater privilege than those to which the plaintiff was entitled under storage tickets. (3) That the contract between the parties being for delivery of the wheat in car lots at any terminal elevator in the district, the delivery of the wheat at Fort William was sufficient compliance with the contract.

Bills for discount and collection—Bankers' lien.]—When a customer hands over notes and bills to a bank for discount, and part of them only is discounted, the rest being held for collection, the bank acquires not lien on the latter for the customer's indebtedness to it.

Freedman v. The Dominion Bank, 37 Que. S.C. 535.

-- Contract between banks -- Advances --Pledge or sale of assets-Powers of directors. I-By an agreement made between the Ontario Bank and the Bank of Montreal on the 13th October, 1906, it was recited that, owing to recently discovered misconduct of an officer of the Ontario Bank, the directors of that bank deemed it necessary and expedient to make immediate provision for payment or taking up of its debts and liabilities, and had applied to the Bank of Montreal for that purpose, and had exhibited to the Bank of Montreal a statement of its assets and liabilities as of the 29th September, 1906, as summarized in the recital, and that the Ontario Bank had since continued to carry on its business in the ordinary course. The agreement then provided (clause 1) that the Ontario Bank warranted the assets and liabilities to be as set out; (clause 2), that, "in consideration of the premises, the Bank of Montreal hereby agrees to purchase by way of discount and of rediscount at the rate of six per cent. all the call and current loans and overdue debts of the Ontario Bank," etc. This clause and clauses 3 to 8 provided for advances to be made by the Bank of Montreal and the security it was to receive therefor. By clause 9, the Ontario Bank "agrees that it will not carry on business except for the purpose of selling and realizing on its assets and of otherwise providing and by means of the shareholders' double liability furnishing the moneys necessary for the payment as herein provided of its notes in circulation, debts, liabilities, and obligations, including therein all advances and interest and other obligations that may be owing or due to the Bank of Montreal under the provisions hereof or otherwise." Clauses 10 to 14 provided the machinery by which the arrangement between the two banks was to be worked out. Clause 15 bound the Bank of Montreal to account to the Ontario Bank for any surplus realized from the securities transferred to it under the agreement. And clause 16 provided for the payment by the Bank of Montreal to the Ontario Bank of $150,000 for any indirect benefit derived by the Bank of Montreal under the agreement. An order having been made on the 29th September, 1908, for the winding-up of the Ontario Bank under the Dominion Winding-up Act, the Bank of Montreal presented a claim as a creditor, and the question then arose whether the above agreement was valid and binding in whole or in part upon the Ontario Bank and its shareholders, so as to form a sufficient basis for taking an account of what was due to the Bank of Montreal:—Held, that the transaction was not a sale of the assets of the Ontario Bank within the provisions of secs. 99 to 111 of the Bank Act; that it was an arrangement which was within the powers of the board of directors to enter into; that it was binding; and that the Bank of Montreal was entitled to make proof of its claim against the estate of the Ontario Bank upon the footing of it. Bank of Australasia v. Breillat (1847), 6 Moo. P.C. 152, specially referred to. Per Moss, CJ.O.: - A fair reading of the whole instrument, giving to each part its proper effect in relation to the remainder, and bearing in mind the evident object and intention of the parties, leaves no reasonable doubt as to its meaning and effect. The strongest ground in favour of the contention that the transaction was a sale was the use in clause 2 of the expression "purchase by way of discount and of rediscount at the rate of six per cent." But these words merely describe a species of dealing with a particular class of securities which is quite as consistent with a pledge as an absolute sale. Per Maclaren, J.A.:—The banks had the right to make the agreement under the law as it stood in 1900, before the Bank Amendment Act of that year (now secr 99 to 111 of the Bank Act, R.S.C. 1906, 29), the powers conferred by the Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 1, s. 30, and by s. 76 of the Bank Act, being wide enough to include the transaction in question; and the amendment of 1900 did not take away the previous powers of the directors by requiring such an agreement to be carried out exclusively under the provisions and subject to the formalities of secs. 99 to 111.

—Indorsement of note by company to bank —Holder in due course—Fraud—Illegality.j —Defendants, in certain transactions with an insurance company who under their charter had no power to indorse, give or accept negotiable instruments, gave the company a promissory note, which the company indorsed to the plaintiff bank. They did not pay the note when it fell due. The company was heavily indebted to the bank which held this and other notes for advances to the company. The practice was for the company to sell shares and take notes therefor which were discounted with the plaintiff bank. On suit being brought, defendants set up that the note was given for the accommodation of the company who took and held it without consideration; that the bank, having knowledge of the circumstances under which the note was given, and of the company's legal position as to negotiable instruments, was not a holder in due course, and that the note was therefore tainted with fraud and illegality:—Held, upon the evidence, that de-fendants had failed to prove under s. 58 of the Bills of Exchange Act that there was such fraud or illegality in the issue or negotiation of the note as to deprive the plaintiff bank of its status as holder in due course and therefor entitled to recover. Held, further, that the company under s. 48 of the Bills of Exchange Act could, notwithstanding their inability to borrow, indorse over to a third party any negotiable instrument made in their favour, and thus enable such third party to enforce payment against the maker or acceptor; and that the company would be estopped from denying that shares issued for such negotiable instrument were legally issued. Per Irving, J.A.: - The note in question having been given carrying seven per cent. interest until paid, and the trial Judge having given judgment for seven per cent. to due date and five per cent. afterwards to date of writ, the judgment should be corrected to allow seven per cent. to date of judgment.

Merchants Bank of Canada v. McLeod, 15 B.C.R. 290.

-Balance in bank-Appropriation by bank to payment of unmatured note.]-The plaintiffs commenced this action on the 18th November, 1909, and issued a garnishee summons against a bank, which was served upon the bank on that day. On the 17th November the defendant had a balance to his credit in the bank of $756.20; but the bank held a promissory note of the defendant for $700, maturing on the 13th December; and on that day, the 17th November, the bank charged the note to the defendant's account, allowing a rebate for the days it had to run, and thus, if this was effective, reducing the defendant's balance to $60. This was done without the knowledge or consent of the defendant:—Held, that the garnishee summons effectively attached the whole sum of $756.20.

Affirmed sub nom. McFarland v. Bank of Montreal, [1911] A.C. 96.

-The money of a chartered bank was used in purchasing shares of its own stock to the extent of about $400,000. The shares acquired stood in the names of various nominees of the bank, who undertook no personal responsibility. The shares were bought to be again sold, and the plan was to keep up the price of the stock and to make possible profits-the whole transaction being arranged and carried out by the general manager of the bank:—Held, that the money was illegally withdrawn from the funds of the bank and used in violation of the Bank Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 29, s. 76; the transaction amounted to an illegal trafficking in the shares, was ultra vires, in disregard of public policy, and placed in jeopardy the charter of the bank. The directors of the bank, in order to save the bank, divided the shares, so illegally acquired, among themselves and their friends, and they and their friends gave promissory notes to the bank for the shares. In getting notes from their friends and in putting shares in their names, the directors assured them that they were incurring no risk— that they would never be called upon to pay—that the shares were to be held in trust for the bank, and that all would shortly be paid out of the sale of the stock. These notes were indorsed by the bank to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff sued the makers of the notes thereon:-Held, that, although the defendants considered that the notes were given for the accommodation of the bank, that was an understanding not recognized by any one representing the shareholders, and not binding on the bank as a corporate body; and on this branch of the case nothing was proved sufficient to outweigh the legal consequences arising from the making of negotiable promissory notes. But, regarding the notes as given for value, represented by the transfer of shares to each defendant, and in the whole representing the $400,000 of the bank's money illegally expended, which was the consideration, or at any rate a part of the consideration, as between the bank and the defendants, the bank had not the power to transfer the shares or enforce payment for them; the original acquisition of the shares was not merely voidable, but void; it was a nullity, not to be validated by lapse of time or by any action of the bank or the shareholders; and the transfer of these shares to the defendants, in exchange for the notes sued on, was a sale of the shares, and a further act of illegality in violation of the statute; the bank had no power to sell or transfer the shares illegitimately acquired. The bank could not undertake to indemnify the defendants in regard to their having become holders of the stock; the expenditure of the bank's money was a misfeasance in the first place, and any indemnification would be an agreement further to misuse the shareholders' money. The bank had no legal title to the shares, and could confer none; so that, in the hands of any one having knowledge or notice of the facts or of the violation of the statute. the notes could not be enforced by action; and upon the evidence, the plaintiff, as to fifteen of the notes sued upon, had sufficient notice of the situation to prevent his recovering. As to the other nine notes, a case of illegal consideration was shown, and the law east the burden of proof upon the holder to prove both that value had been given and that it had been given in good faith without notice. The plaintiff had not given evidence on this head, and had not satisfied the Court of his right to recover; and, in the circumstances, the case should not be opened up to give nim an opportunity to do

—Security—Pledge of grain—Sale without notice—Customer's receipt.]—The plaintiff obtained from the defendants, a banking corporation, at their Winnipeg office, an advance upon a draft drawn upon a Toronto broker, to which draft were attached six bills of lading for 30,000 bushels of oats shipped to the broker. This was accompanied by a memorandum hypothecation, signed by the plaintiff, which provided that the securities hypothecated, renewals, substitutions, and the proceeds thereof, were to be held by the defendants as a general and continuing collateral security for the payment of the present and future indebtedness and liability of the plaintiff, and any ultimate unpaid balance thereof, and that the same might be realized by the defendants in such manner as might seem to them advisable, and without notice to the plaintiff, in the event of default. The draft on the Toronto broker not having been paid. and the price of oats having dropped, the defendants, without giving any written notice or otherwise complying with s. 98 of the Bank Act, sold the oats for 36 1-2 cents a bushel. Shortly afterwards the price rose. At the end of the month in which the sale was made, the plaintiff signed the usual customer's receipt, whereby he released the bank from all claims in connection with the charges and credits in the accounts and dealings up to the end of the month:-Held, that the release was valid and given for a good consideration, and was sufficient to bar the plaintiff's action for an account in respect of the oats.

Graves v. Home Bank, 14 W.L.R. 291 (Man.).

—Collateral security—Release of, by manager of bank.]—The plaintiffs, a banking corporation, held the defendants' promissory note for $9,000. As collateral security for the payment of the note, the plaintiffs held two promissory notes of C., aggregating the same amount. By a private arrangement between the plaintiffs' manager and C., the manager returned to C. his promissory notes, undertaking with C. to be liable to the plaintiffs for what C. would have to pay. In an action by the plaintiffs upon the defendants' note, the defendants disputed liability upon the ground that the plaintiffs were not in a position to return to them C.'s notes, which were their property and pledged by them as collateral security for the payment of the note sued on. This was set up both as matter of defence and counterclaim:-Heid, a good ground of counterclaim. Upon the evidence it must be taken that C.'s notes were, when returned to him, worth their face value, and so the defendants' damages equalled the plaintiffs' claim upon the defendants' note, and judgment should go for the plaintiffs for the amount of their claim, and on the counterclaim for the defendants for theirs, the one being set off against the other. The act of the manager was the act of the plaintiffs so far as regarded the defendants, between whom and the bank there existed the relationship of pledgor and pledgee. In the case of documents creating or evidencing rights, the thing pledged must be taken to be both the instrument and the right-not the bare instrument without the right, nor the mere right without the instrument.

-Security for debt-Assignment of lease-Transfer of business to bank. J-By section 76, sub-section 1 (d) of the Bank Act, P.S.C. 1906, c. 29, a bank may "engage in and carry on such business generally as appertains to the business of banking;" by sub-sec. 2 (a) it shall not "either directly or indirectly . . engage or be engaged in any trade or business whatsoever; s. 81 authorizes the purchase of land in certain cases of which a direct voluntary conveyance by the owner is not one:-Held. affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, Peterboro v. McAllister, 17 Ont. L.R. 145, that these provisions of the Act do not prevent a bank from agreeing to take in payment of a debt from a customer an assignment of a lease of the latter's business premises and to carry on the business for a time with a view to disposing of it as a going concern at the earliest possible moment.

-Discount of agent's paper-Employment of proceeds-Fraud of agent-Notice to bank. I-A bank which deals with an agent and discounts notes signed by him as such is not obliged to ascertain nor be con-cerned about the use made of the proceeds. But a bank which discounts the personal notes of a customer indorsed by him as agent of a third party also a customer, having a current account, and which sees by its books that all the funds of the principal pass, by this transaction, to the credit of the agent has notice which suffices to put it on inquiry. If, without receiving satisfactory explanations, it continues to discount such notes, it becomes the accomplice of the agent in his abuse of confidence and liable to the principal who has a right of action to recover from it the sums thus diverted. This recourse, however, is subject to the express condition contained in par. 2 of Art. 1048 C.C., and, therefore, no longer exists when the discounted notes have been

-Deposit receipt-Action against indorser -Presentation. |-Defendant secured a receipt from a bank for a sum of money deposited, which the bank agreed to pay on demand. This document he endorsed to plaintiffs, who immediately forwarded it to the agents of the bank for collection. Before the document could be presented the bank became insolvent and suspended payment, and the agent returned it unpaid. Thereupon the defendant was notified of the dishonour. Not hearing from him, the plaintiffs, after five days' delay, caused the document to be again presented and upon dishonour, protested. All this took place in the State of Minnesota, and expert evidence was given to the effect that the document was by the law of that state similar to a promissory note; that the first notice of dishonour would have been sufficient if it had been proved that defendant received it, which could not be done, and that, in any event, the protest was sufficient evidence of the notice of dishonour. No evidence was given as to the law of Minnesota regarding time for presentment:-Held, that the question of presentment and notice is one of evidence for the Court, and, under the Bills of Exchange Act, s. 71, s.-s. (f), the protest must be accepted as prima facie evidence of these facts. (2) That no evidence having been given as to the law of Minnesota regarding time for presentment of a demand note, the Court must apply the principles of the law of Canada, and, applying those principles and having regard to the nature of the instrument and the facts of this particular case, the presentment was made within a reasonable time.

belonging to G., with the machinery and lumber therein, and all lumber that might at any time thereafter be brought on the premises. The mortgage not being registered gave H. no priority over subsequent incumbrances. Two months later G. gave H. a second mortgage on said property to secure a note for $794. Shortly after this a contractor applied to G. for a large quantity of lumber for building purposes. G. being unable to purchase the lcgs asked the Merchants Bank for an advance. The bank, knowing G. to be financially embarrassed, refused the advances to him but agreed to make them if some reliable person would purchase the logs, which was done by G.'s bookkeeper, and in consideration of an advance of $3,500 G. assigned the contractor's order to the bookkeeper and agreed to cut the logs at a price fixed and deliver them to the bookkeeper at the mill site. The latter then assigned to the bank all monies to accrue in respect to the contract, which assignment was agreed to by the contractor, and a day or two after also assigned to the bank three booms of logs by numbers in addition to one assigned previously. This purported to be done under s. 74 of The Bank Act. Two or three days later G. made an assignment for benefit of his creditors, previous to which, however, the logs had arrived at the mill and were mixed with other logs of G. greater part had been converted into lumber when H. seized them under his chattel mortgage:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia (Merchants Bank of Halifax v. Houston, 7 B.C. Rep. 465), that no property in the logs assigned to the bank had passed to G., and H. having no higher right than his mortgagor, could not claim them under his mortgage. Shortly before G.'s assignment for benefit of his creditors his bookkeeper transferred to the bank a chattel mortgage given him by G. to secure payment of $800. The judgment appealed from ordered the assignee in bankruptcy to pay the bank the balance due on said mortgage. Held, reversing said judgment, that the assignee had been guilty of no acts of conversion and was not liable to repay this money. The mortgage was not given to secure advances and did not give the bank a first lien on the property. The bank was in the same position as if it had received the mortgage directly from G. when he was notoriously insolvent.

—Bank Act, ss. 64 and 68—Man. Sale of Goods Act, 1896—Contract of Sale—Consideration—Warranty of title.]—Under s. 68 of The Bank Act security may be taken from the owner of horses for an existing debt by a bill of sale of the horses which expressly states that it is taken only by way of additional security for the debt. and s. 64 of the Act does not prevent the bank from recovering on promissory notes made in its favour by a person who purchases the horses from the transferor. Section 12, sub-s. 1, of The Manitoba Sale of Goods Act, 1896, does not prevent the recovery by the bank of the price of horses sold under such circumstances, for under sub-s. (c) of s. 11, a breach of the implied condition that the seller of goods has a right to sell them could be treated only as a breach of warranty and not as a ground for repudiating the contract:-Held, also, under the circumstances set out in the statement below, that the contract of sale between the vendors of the horses and the defendant was completed, that the property in the horses had passed to him and that he was liable for the price agreed on.

Accounting for securities received as collateral security.]-A creditor who has received collaterals as security for a debt is bound, after payment of the debt, to return them or account to the debtor for their face value in the absence of evidence to show that the respective amounts of them could not be collected. Driffil v. McFall (1877), 41 U.C.R. 313, followed. The County Court Judge disallowed certain sums of money which the defendants swore the plaintiff bank had received on certain collateral securities held for them because their evidence showed that these sums had first been received by defendants and they were unable to give dates and particulars of the payments to the bank, and had no books or memoranda to support their statements, and he was of opinion that they should have given undoubted evidence of the times of receipt and payment to the bank or in some other way brought home to the bank conclusively the receipt and non-credit of the money, but his verdict was not based on any finding that the defendants were unworthy of belief as witnesses: - Held, that, under the circumstances, it was proper for the Court above to review the finding of the County Court Judge upon the evidence, and that, taking into consideration the bank's duty to produce or account for the collaterals which thad failed to do, and the presumption to be drawn from such failure, the defendants had sufficiently proved the receipt of said moneys by the bank and were entitled to judgment for same.

—Set-off—Compensation—Unmatured bill or note—Intervention.]—A deposit in a bank is a loan to said bank, and Art. 1190 C.C., which makes the debt resulting from a deposit incapable of compensation, does not prevent the sum deposited from being set off against a debt due to the bank by the depositor. The compensation between a debt due to a 'ank and that arising from a deposit may have effect until service of a petition for winding up the bank, inasmuch as the two debts are equally clear, and exigible. But the term of a letter of credit or a note is deemed to have been arranged in favour of both creditor and debtor, and therefore the maker or indorser of a note discounted by a bank cannot, by waiving the benefit of the time which the note has to run, set off against the debt arising therefrom a sum on deposit to his credit in the bank. The indorser of a note discounted by a bank only becomes a debtor to the bank when the note is protested and notice of protest served on him. Although a creditor of a bank in liquidation has a right to intervene in an action pending between the liquidators and a debtor of the bank who claims that his debt has been discharged by compensation, to watch the proceedings and take the steps necessary to protect his rights, such credit or will be condemned to pay the costs incurred by the debtor if he files, against the claim of the latter, a useless contestation based on grounds already invoked by the liquidators.

proceedings under The Winding-up Act (R.S.C. ch. 129) and it was objected that the suppliants were not entitled to such moneys because of judicial decision to the contrary in other litigation in respect to the fund:-Held. (1) that if it was clear that the matter had been really determined, effect should be given to the estoppel; but that where to give effect to it would work injustice, the Court, before applying the rule, ought to be sure that an estoppel arises by reason of such decision. In this case there was no estoppel, and a reference to the registrar was directed to ascertain what proportion of the fund in the hands of the minister properly belonged to the suppliants. The rule as to estoppel stated by King, J., in Farewell v. The Queen (22 Can. S.C.R. 558) referred to). (2) One of the equities or conditions attaching to the sale to H. was that a debtor had a right to set off against his debt the amount which he had at his credit in the bank at the date of its insolvency. It appeared that at the time of the bank's insolvency certain of its debtors had at their credit in the bank's books sums which they would, on payment or settlement of their debts, have a right to apply in reduction thereof, and the suppliants claimed that they were entitled to be indemnified in respect of such reductions out of the fund in the hands of the Receiver-General. Held, that the suppliants were not entitle to such indemnity.

Negligence—Material alteration in note
—Liability of branch manager of bank.]—

The defendant, a branch manager of the plaintiffs', accepted a joint instead of a foint and several promissory note as security for an advance, although expressly instructed to require the latter. On discovering the mistake, he inserted the words "jointly and severally" in the belief that this alteration was to be initialled by all the makers, which, however, was not done. After consulting the bank's solicitor, the defendant crossed out the inserted words. In the result the plaintiffs were held to have lost their remedy on the note on the ground of material alteration, and brought this action against the defendant for damages:-Held, that since the note as taken was to all intents and purposes as valid as if made jointly and severally, only nominal damages were recoverable against defendant for his breach of duty in this regard. Held, also, that the defendant was not liable for the result of his subsequent acts, since he acted in good faith, and in ignorance of the legal consequences, and had exercised reasonable care and diligence under all the circumstances, and the mere fact that his judgment was mistaken, and his acts prejudicial to the plaintiffs, was not enough to render him liable.

His evidence at the trial to the same effect was denied by the head manager:—Held, that the jury having believed the defendant's account and given him a verdict which the cvidence justified, such verdict ought to stand.

-Banks and banking-Cheques-Fraud of agent-Payment by bank.]-N. was the assistant superintendent of a life insurance company, as well as its local agent at one of its branches, having sole control of the business there. A number of applications were sent in by him to the head office, which, with the exception of five, were fictitious. As to these five the insurance subsequently lapsed, of which the company were kept in ignorance. Afterwards N., representing that the insured were dead and the claims payable under the policies, sent in to the head office claim papers, filling in the names of the claimants and forging their signatures thereto, when cheques for the respective amounts, made by the company in favour of the alleged claimants and payable at a branch of the defendants' bank, were sent to N., whose duty it was, on the receipt, to see the payees and procure discharges from them. N. was in the habit of certifying to the bank the genuineness of the signatures of the payees of the cheques in payment of claims, and most of the cheques in question had been certified to by him. The endorse-ments of the payees' names were forged by N., and the cheques presented to the bank and paid in good faith, to whom or how did not appear, the amounts thereof being charged to the company's account:-Held, that the company was affected by what had been done by N., so as to preclude it from disputing the right of the bank to pay the cheques and charge the plaintiffs with the amounts.

-Insolvent bank - Liquidator - Action against debtor of the bank.]-Held, affirming the judgment of Pagnue, Co.J. (19 Que. S.C. 556):-1. The liquidator of a bank in liquidation has no right of action as such against debtors of the bank, upon a note which became due before the liquidation proceedings began, but the action should be brought in the name of the bank. 2. In an action so instituted without proper capacity, the liquidator cannot bring in the bank as a party to the case by means of an amendment. 3. An intervention is not a separate distinct demand, but it is incidental to the principal action and must fall with it when such action is null ab initio 4. In the present case, the intervention having been without utility, inasmuch as it was founded upon the grounds already invoked by the plaintiffs, the Superior Court was right in dismissing it with costs. Kent v. Bastien, 12 Que. K.B. 120

-Donation of "all movables and movable effects''-Deposit in bank.]-Held, reversing the judgment of Langelier, J., That the definitions of the meaning of the words and terms "movables," "furniture," "movable property," and "movable things," when employed alone, are declaratory, and given by way of illustration to aid in judicial interpretation in doubtful cases. When the parties to a deed use together several times the terms "movables and movable effects' to designate movables alone, and not moneys or credits, the same words repeated anew in the same disposition, preceded even by the word "all," are presumed to be employed in the restricted sense which the parties have already given to them, and do not include a deposit of money in a bank.

Sabourin v. City and District Bank, 12 Que. K.B. 380.

-Bank Act-Right of bank to hold securities as against creditors - Compromise of action-Effect of possession taken under.] -B. being indebted to the Commercial Bank of Windsor, gave to the bank a document purporting to be a warehouse receipt, and also a general transfer or bill of sale. The bank took possession of a portion of the goods covered by the documents and removed them, and was proceeding with the removal of others of the goods when the removal was forbidden by one of B.'s clerks. Two actions of replevin, brought by the bank to recover possession of the balance of the goods, were compromised by B., who agreed that the bank should take the goods and sell them, and credit him with the amount received: - Held, that, not withstanding any irregularities under the Bank Act, the title of the bank was complete under the compromise made between the bank and B., and that plaintiff, who purchased a portion of the goods from the bank, was entitled to recover against the defendant sheriff who levied on the goods under an execution against B:-Held, also, assuming it to be correct that the security on the goods held by the bank was void under the provisions of the Act, not being for a present advance but for a past due debt, and that the bank was not entitled to hold such security against the creditors of B., that the bank was not obliged to rest its title on the document, and that its defects, if any, would not affect the subsequent transaction by which the bank became the actual purchaser of the goods and dealt with them as its property.

Armstrong v. Buchanan, 35 N.S.R. 559, 1 C.L.R. 506.

-Cheques - Fraud - Payment by bank -"Fictitious person."]—N. was the assistant superintendent of a life insurance company, as well as its local agent at one of its branches, having sole control of the business there. A number of applications were sent in by him to the head office, which, with the exception of five, were fictitious. As to these five, the insurance subsequently lapsed, of which the company were kept in ignorance - afterwards N., representing that the insured were dead and the claims payable under the policies, sent in to the head office claim papers, filling in the names of the claimants and forging the signatures thereto, when cheques for the respective amounts made by the company in favour of the alleged claimants and payable at a branch of the defendants' bank were sent to N., whose duty it was, on the receipt to see the payees and procure dis-charges from them. The endorsements of the payees' names were forged by N., the genuineness of the signatures on most of the cheques being certified by his attestation. The cheques were presented to and paid by the bank in good faith, to whom or how did not appear, the amounts thereof being charged to the company's account:-Held, in this disagreeing with the judgment of Meredith, C.J.C.P., at the trial (Maclaren, J.A., dissenting), that there was no evidence that the bank was aware that N. had any connection with the transactions out of which the cheques arose, and that they were not entitled to rely on his identification of the payees or his attestation of their signatures. Held, however, that under the circumstances the cheques must be regarded as payable to fletitious or non-existent persons, and therefore under subs. 3, s. 7, of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890. 53 Vict. ch. 33 (D.), payable to bearer, and that the bank had the right to pay and charge the company with the amount. -Promissory note-Indorsement for collection.]—1. A bank to which a promissory note is indorsed "for collection," becomes, for that purpose, the agent of the indorser, to whom it is bound to account for the amount collected. 2. The signature of another party, under that of such indorser, does not affect the relative rights and obligations growing out of such restrictive indorsement. 3. The bank is bound to pay a cheque drawn for a part only of funds collected by it under the foregoing circumstances, and is liable in damages for refusal to do so, Perreault v. Merchant's Bank, Q.R. 27 S.C. 149, Champagne, J.

-Securities - Railway bonds - Power of sale.] - As a collateral security to a promissory note, the makers deposited with a bank 300 railway bonds, and, by a memorandum of hypothecation, authorized the bank, upon default, "from time to time to sell the said securities . . . by giving 15 days' noties in one daily paper published in the city of Ottawa . . . with power to the bank to buy in and resell without being liable for any loss occasioned thereby ":-Held, (Osler, J.A., dissenting), that the power was to sell by auction, and that the bank had no power to sell by private contract. Semble, that, even if there was power to sell by private contract, the sale made to the respondents could not, upon the evidence as to the methods adopted, be supported, they having notice that the bank held the bonds as pledges.

—Interest—Cheques as payment—More than seven per cent.—Bank Act, ss. 80, 81.]
—Defendant borrowed large sums of money from the plaintiff bank by way of over-draft and on promissory notes. Having agreed to pay interest, first at 24 per cent., and afterwards at 18 per cent. per annum, defendant from time to time gave the bank cheques on his current account to pay the interest at those rates respectively up to 31st January, 1902. When such cheques were given the account had already been overdrawn, but it was afterwards changed into a credit balance in defendant's favor by deposits or by collections made by the bank for defendant's account. Held, that such cheques should be deemed to have been payment of the interest, and that defendant could not recover back such interest or any part of it, although it was in excess of the seven per cent. rate which the Bank Act permits a bank to charge. Held, also, that, under sections 80 and 81 of the Bank Act, the bank was not entitled to sue for and recover interest accruing after 31st January, 1902, at seven per cent. per annum, but could only recover interest at the legal rate of five per cent. per annum from that date on the principal then due.

Bank of British North America v. Bossuyt, 15 Man. R. 266, Richards, J.

-Bank in liquidation—Compensation—Set off.1-After a bank has suspended payments, and its insolvency is notorious, compensation of a debt due to the bank cannot be effected by a transfer to the debtor of debts due by the bank to third parties, where such transfer has been made to the debtor after the suspension and within thirty days prior to winding up proceed-ings under the Winding Up Act. This rule is not affected by the circumstance that the amounts offered in compensation consisted of monies deposited with the bank by such third parties, for the special purpose of aiding the debtor to meet his indebtedness to the bank, but not transferred to the debtor until after the suspension of payments.

Sisters of Charity v. Kent, 13 Que. K.B.

-Winding-up - Appointment of liquidators-Right to appoint another bank.]-The Winding-up Act provides that the shareholders and creditors of a company in liquidation shall severally meet and nominate persons who are to be appointed liquidators, and the Judge having the appointment shall choose the liquidators from among such nominees. In the case of the Bank of Liverpool the Judge appointed liquidators from among the nominees of the creditors, one of them being the defendant bank:-Held, affirming the judgment of the Court below, that there is nothing in the Act requiring both creditors and shareholders to be represented on the board of liquidators; and that if any appeal lies from the decisions of the Judge in exercising his judgment as to the appointment, such discretion was wisely exercised in this case.

Forsyth v. Bank of Nova Scotia (1890) 1 S.C. Cas. 209. —Unauthorized interest—Recovery.]—Interest at a rate beyond that permitted by the Bank Act, if paid voluntarily, cannot be recovered by the customer, but if simply charged by the bank to the customer, can be reduced upon taking the account.

Canadian Bank of Commerce v. McDonald (Y.T.), 3 W.L.R. 90.

-Cheque payable to order-Forged endorsement-Collection by third party through his bank-Payment over-Liability to refund.]-The defendant, McE., having a cheque on New York payable to his order, of which he claimed to be the owner, indorsed and handed it to the defendant H., who had done business for him, to collect and pay the amount over to him. H., believing McE. to be the owner and entitled to receive the money, handed it to the plaintiffs to be collected; telling their manager that he saw McE. indorse it and that he knew him; but when the manager offered to cash it at once if H. would indorse it, he declined, stating he knew nothing of it and it might not be paid. For the purpose of collection H. signed his name as witness to the indorsement, writing beneath his signature "without any recourse to me whatever." The plaintiffs collected the money and credited the proceeds to H., who accounted for them to McE. The New York bank subsequently demanded the money back, alleging McE.'s indorsement to be a forgery, and the plaintiffs paid back the amount received and brought action against H. and McE .:-Held, that H. having acted honestly, he was not liable in an action for deceit; but that the facts constituted a contract of warranty by him that he was entitled, as agent for the rightful owner of the cheque, to request the plaintiffs to collect it and pay the proceeds to him as such agent when collected, and that if the indorsement was forged, he was liable to repay the amount.

-- Banking Act of 1890-Fire insurance policy-Advances on as collateral-Right of bank to make—Interest in property in-sured.]—Where a company is being wound up under the New Brunswick Winding-up Act, a bank is entitled to an order for the payment to it of the proceeds of policies of fire insurance effected by the company on their property, and made pavable, in case of loss, to the bank, as interest may appear under a verbal agreement between the bank and the company that the policies should be so effected as security for advances which the bank from time to time might make, the bank having no interest in the property insured. -Deed of Settlement - Ambiguity - Discharge of debtor.]-Where the language of an instrument is ambiguous or obscure, the intention of the parties should be ascertained by consideration of the circumstances attending the execution of the agreement. A deed of settlement between B. and a bank declared that he owed the bank $4,731.61 for interest on an advance in respect to a lottery scheme, and a further sum of $18,762.02 for advances on an account for the purchase of stock, two notes being given for these amounts, respectively, and the shares of stock being pledged as security for the large note only. Subsequently, the directors of the bank passed a resolution authorizing the discharge of B., on payment of $15,000 by one V., "jusqu'à concurrence de la dite somme de $15,000," and the transfer of the shares to This resolution was followed by a deed of compromise, V. paying the $15,000 and obtaining a transfer of the shares, and it was thereby declared that, by the transaction, B. was discharged in so far as concerned the bank's advances on the stock account "vis-a-vis la banque des avances qu'elle lui a faites du chef susdit mentionnées en un acte de règlement," etc., the resolution being annexed and the deed of settlement referred to for imputation of the payment, and V. was to become creditor of B. under conditions mentioned, "jusqu 'à concurrence de $15,000," the note which had not become due and the securities being allowed to remain in possession of the bank. In an action by D. to whom the notes held by the bank were assigned:— Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that the effect of the deed of compromise was to discharge B. merely to the extent of the $15,000 on account of the larger note; and further, affirming the judg ment appealed from, that no action could lie upon the smaller note, as it represented interest on a claim in relation to a contract of an illegal nature. On the trial, other returns made both before and after that in respect to which the indictment was laid, were received in evidence without the jury having been cautioned that they were not to be influenced by such other returns in ecming to a conclusion on the main issue respecting the offence charged:-Held, per Townshend, J., and Graham, E.J., that there must be a new trial on this ground. Per Sir R. L. Weatherbe, C.J., and Meagher, J., on the facts, that there was no evidence of guilty knowledge and that the case should have been withdrawn from the jury. Per Russell, J., (who concurred that there was no evidence to warrant a conviction), that there were matters as to which it was open to the jury to draw a conclusion, and that the cause therefore was one which could not be withdrawn from them.

Under this arrangement a draft was made on M. for certain goods that had been shipped to him at N. M. refused to accept the goods and the draft was returned dishonoured. It was then agreed between the bank and the company that the manager of the company should proceed to N., take possession of the goods for the bank, and endeavour to get M. to accept them. It did not appear what the manager did at N., but he did not indues M. to accept the goods, and they remained at the railway station at N. until the S. Co. went into liquidation. It was then agreed between the bank and the liquidator of the company that the latter should take possession and dispose of the goods and hold the proceeds subject to the order of the Court:—Held, that the bank had an equitable lien and was entitled to the proceeds of the sale.

-Crown-Forged cheques-Payment-Representation by drawee.]-A clerk in a department of the Government of Canada, whose duty was to examine and check its account with the Bank of Montreal, forged departmental cheques and deposited them to his credit in other banks. The forgeries were not discovered until some months after these cheques had been paid by the drawee to the several other banks, on pre-sentation, and charged against the Receiver-General on the account of the department with the bank. None of the cheques were marked with the drawee's acceptance before payment. In the meantime, the accountant of the department, being deceived by false returns of checking by the clerk, acknowledged the correctness of the statements of the account as furnished by the bank where it was kept. In an action by the Crown to recover the amount so paid upon the forged cheques and charged against the Receiver-General: -Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (11 Ont. L.R. 595) that the bank was liable unless the Crown was estopped from setting up the forgery. Per Davies, Idington and Duff, JJ., that estoppel could not be invoked against the Crown. Per Girouard and Maclennan, JJ., that, apart from the question of the Crown being subject to estoppel, under the circumstances of this case a private person would not have been estopped had his name been forged as drawer of the cheques. Per Davies and Idington, JJ. The acknowledgment by the accountant of the department of the correctness of the statements furnished by the bank, being made under a mistake as to the facts, the accounts could be reopened to have the mistake rectified. The defendant bank made claims against the other banks, as third parties, as indorsers or as having received money paid by mistake, for the reimbursement of the several amounts so paid to them respectively. On these third party issues, it was held, per Girouard and Maclennan, JJ., the drawee, having paid the cheques on which the name of its customer was forged, could not recover the amounts thereof from holders in due course. Price v. Neal (4 Burr. 1355) followed. Per Davies and Idington, JJ. As the third party banks relied upon the representation that the cheques were genuine, which was to be implied from their payment on presentation, and subsequently paid out of the funds to their depositor or on his order, the drawee was estopped and could not recover the amounts so paid from them either as indorsers or as for money paid to them under mistake. In the result, the judgment appealed from (11 Ont. L.R. 595) was affirmed.

-Forged cheque-Negligence-Responsibility of drawee-Payment-Mistake.]-A cheque for $6, drawn on the plaintiff, was fraudulently altered by changing the date, and the name of the payee, and by raising the amount to $1,000. The drawee refused payment for want of identification of the person who presented it. The defendant bank, without requiring identification, advanced $25 in cash to the forger on the forged cheque, placed the balance, $975, to his credit in a deposit account, indorsed it and received the full amount of $1,000 from the drawee. After receipt of this amount, the defendant paid the further sum of $800 to the forger out of the amount so placed to the credit of his deposit account. The fraud was discovered a few days later, and, on its refusal to refund the money it had thus received, the action was brought to recover it back from the defendant as indorser or as having received money paid under mistake of fact:-Held, that the drawee of the cheque, although obliged to know the signature of its customer, was not under a similar obligation in regard to the writing in the body of the cheque; that, as the receiving bank had dealt with the drawes as a principal and not merely as the agent for the collection of the cheque and had obtained payment thereof as indorser and holder in due course, it was hiable towards the drawee which had, through the negligence of the receiving bank, been deceived in respect to the genuineness of the body of the cheque, and that the drawee was entitled to recover back the money which it had thus paid under a mistake of fact, notwithstanding that, after such payment, the position of the defendant had been changed by paying over part of the money to the forger. Bank of Montreal v. The King, 38 Can. S.C.R. 258, distinguished. Judgment appealed from (17 Man. R. 68) affirmed.

An agreement was entered into between the bank and the partners, executed by them, and by the local manager of the bank on its behalf, whereby the firm agreed to pay $10,000 to the bank, to surrender to it all the assets, and assign the lease of the milling property. The bank, in consideration thereof, assumed payment of certain specified liabilities of the firm as set out in a memorandum attached, which, however, did not specially refer to the accruing rent of the milling property; and agreed to forthwith release the firm, as well as the individual partners, from all liability. At the same time another agreement was executed between the bank, by its local manager, and one of the partners, by which for the more convenient liquidation of the assets and the disposal of the business as a going concern, the partner mentioned was to act as manager and continue the business in the firm's name, the bank indemnifying the partnership against all liability incurred while doing so. The release agreed on, containing recitals of the above, was duly executed by the bank under its cor-porate seal. -Discount-Assignment of warehouse receipts as security-Present advance.]-Before November 28th, 1904, a cream and butter business was being carried on by a married woman under the trading name of the Toronto Cream and Butter Company, her husband being the manager. On that date, with the view of opening an account with the defendants' bank, a letter was written in the trading name stating that a line of credit would be required from $10,000 to $12,000 secured by warehouse receipts on butter, and from $1,000 to $2,000 on the firm's note, to be otherwise secured. In November, 1904, the account was opened and advances made by the bank, and on October 23rd, 1905, the account was overdrawn to the amount of $10,158.01, and there was an outstanding note of $1,700 due in November. On October 23rd the manager discounted a promissory note made under the trading name for $6,000 at three months, and by the same name assigned to the bank as security therefor warehouse receipts of 401 cases of butter, promising also other warehouse receipts to cover the indebtedness. After placing the $6,000 to the firm's credit there remained a debit balance of $4,258.01, which was gradually reduced, and, on December 26th, 1905, when liquidation proceedings were taken, there was outstanding the $6,000 note, a $2,000 note discounted on October 27th, 1905, and an open debit balance of $2,000. No attempt was ever made to draw out the $6,000, but the manager of the bank stated that there was no restriction preventing it. The 401 cases had been warehoused on September 21st and 26th, and October 4th, 10th and 20th, while 99 cases had been warehoused on October 20th and 21st, although no warehouse receipts had been obtained therefor, and there was nothing to show they had ever been assigned to the bank. The firm had been incorporated as a com pany by letters patent, dated April 5th, 1905, one of the objects being to acquire the business as a going concern; and by an agreement dated June 1st, 1905, made between the wife and the company, and executed by both parties, all the property, assets and good-will of the business were sold to and transferred to the company, which agreement was confirmed by a resolution of the shareholders, the husband being appointed manager, and the defendants' bank appointed the company's bank.

Notwithstanding the incorporation and sale to the company, the business continued to be carried on as theretofore in the trade name, no by-laws being passed, and no stock was ever allotted to the vendor of the business, the bank, not being aware of the incorporation and sale until some days after the transfer to them of the warehouse receipts:-Held, that the business was that of the wife and not of the husband, and that there was a valid transfer by her to the company of all the firm's assets and business, so as to vest in them the title to the butter, and though the continuance of the business in the old trade name was objectionable and gave colour to the contention that there was no change in the ownership or control of the business, she was estopped from contesting the company's title thereto:-Held, also, that as to the 401 cases, the transaction was supportable, under s. 73 of the Bank Act, 53 Vict. c. 31 (D.), now s. 86 of the R.S.C. 1906, c. 29, as on the evidence there was a present advance and not a mere form to cover a past indebtedness; but that the bank had no claim to the 99 cases. Held, also, Osler and Gar-row, JJ.A., dissenting, that the bank would not be entitled to hold the warehouse receipts, under the letter of November 28th, as not constituting an agreement to furnish security for advances thereafter to be made. Meredith, J.A., dissenting, on the ground that the note was not "negotiated" within the 90th section of the Bank Act, at the time of the acquisition of the warehouse receipts. Toronto Cream and Butter Company v. Crown Bank, 16 O.L.R. 400.

-Cheque countersigned by representative of bank-Authority of representative-Promise not made in writing.]-A firm of dealers in fruit, whose account was over-drawn at their bank, applied for further advances, which the bank refused to make unless one D. was employed to look after the business, act as bookkeeper, receive all produce, and countersign cheques given for same. D. was so employed, and represented to producers of fruit that it was safe for them to bring their produce to the factory, and that cheques given for same countersigned by him would be paid by the bank. The plaintiff, relying on these representations, delivered peaches, for which he received their cheque countersigned by D. The bank which at the time had liens on the plant and property of the firm, through D, disposed of the whole output of the factory, including the plaintiff's goods, and received the entire profit of same. On the cheque being presented, the bank refused payment, upon which this action was brought:—Held (Meredith, C.J., dissenting), (1) that the bank had such an interest in the goods delivered by the plaintiff as prevented the application of the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds, and were therefore bound by D.'s promise or representation that they would pay the cheque, though not made in writing. The principle of Sutton v. Grey, [1894] 1 Q.B. 285, discussed and applied. (2) That there was evidence to support the finding of the Court below, that there was an original Juability on the part of the bank, on which the plaintiff was entitled to recover, on the authority of Lakeman v. Mountstephen (1874), 7 H.L. 17.

—Bank Act—Security under s. 88—Substitution of goods.]—It is only the owner of the goods who can give security under s. 88 of the Bank Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 29; and a bank which has taken such security on goods from the owner, cannot, under that section, substitute other goods afterwards coming into the possession of the giver of the security as agent for sale. S. 47 extends the class of persons who may give or indorse a warehouse receipt or bill of lading under s. 86, but is not incorporated in s. 88, by sub-s. (6) of that section.

Barry v. Bank of Ottawa, 17 O.L.R. 83.

-Crediting customer with amount of note -Discount-Collateral security-Separate instruments - Sureties different in amounts.]-A bank, wishing to close an account on which a balance of $1,000 of advances to a customer remained unpaid. took a joint and several demand note for $1,000 of the customer and another as surety, payable to it, with interest and credited the customer's account with its face value, writing the word "disc." before the credit entry:-Held, that it was open to the bank to show that the note was in fact taken by it as collateral security merely, and not in payment of the balance due so as to release the accommodation makers of two other notes held by it as collateral security in respect to the same account. Sureties by different instruments for the same principal debt are liable to contribute in proportion to the respective amounts to which they have agreed to be sureties. A person as surety made a note for $3,000 to be held by a bank as security for advances to be made to a customer, and the ultimate balance thereof, and two others, as sureties, made a joint and several note for the like amount and for the same purpose, and another, as surety, made a note for $1,000 for the same purpose. Held, that they were liable to contribute respectively in the proportion of three-sevenths, three-sevenths and one-seventh of the ultimate balance requiring to be paid off.

-Cheque payable to firm-Indorsement and deposit by partner in bank to credit of another firm.]-C., a member of a partnership of R. M. & C., received a cheque payable to the firm for a large sum due to the firm, and indorsed it in the name of the firm, which he had a right to do. Instead, however, of depositing the cheque to the credit of the firm or cashing it and applying the proceeds for the benefit of the firm, he and M., without the knowledge or consent of R., took the cheque to a bank, where they opened an account in the name of a new firm, M. C. & M., of which they were members, and handed the cheque to the bank, indorsed also in the name of the new firm; the bank at once credited the new firm with the amount of the cheque. The assistant general manager of the bank, with whom the business was transacted, made no inquiries of any kind as to the old firm or the new firm. The trial Judge found no negligence and good faith on the part of the bank:-Held, that the transaction was a discounting or purchase of the cheque by the bank; that the trial Judge's findings were supported by the evidence, and that without proof of negligence and bad faith the plaintiff, R., was not entitled to succeed against the bank in an action for conversion of the cheque or misapplication of it in breach of trust.

—Curator—Action to set aside deed.]—The curator to an insolvent's estate who is authorized to take action against the insolvent and the purchaser to have the fraudulent conveyance of an immovable and obtains judgment therefor, may execute it by ordering the immovable to be sold and filing an opposition afin de conserver for re-payment of the price of sale by the insolvent. Creditors of the insolvent cannot contest this opposition but should file their claims with the curator.

Daiveau v. Gagné, Q.R. 36 S.C. 289.

—Advances by bank to lumbermen—Insurance of lumber against fire—Loss payable to bank.]—The defendant bank advanced to C. & Co., lumbermen, money wherewith to carry on lumbering operations. With the bank's knowledge, the plaintiff contracted with C. & Co. to saw their logs into lumber, which he did. C. & Co. then insured this lumber, making the loss payable to the bank; and, while lying in the plaintiff syard, the lumber was burnt. The plaintiff claimed to be entitled to payment, out of the insurance moneys, in priority to the bank, of the contract price of the sawing:—Held, that the plaintiff had, at most, a mere possessory lien upon the lumst, ber, for the price of the sawing, depending net upon contract, but wholly upon possession, and therefore brought to an end by the fire; while the bank had a lien upon the insurance moneys, which the plaintiff was not in a position to attack or displace. Chew v. Traders Bank, 19 O.L.R. 74.

—Subscription for shares—Subscription conditional on bank opening branch— Parol evidence. |-The defendant subscribed in writing for shares of a bank "on the strength of the bank agreeing to open a branch at S., " and the bank did so, but closed it five months afterwards:-Held, that the defendant was bound to pay for the shares, and parol evidence that the agent who obtained his subscription promised that a branch would not only be opened but maintained at S., was inadmissible. Held, also, that notwithstanding ss. 37 and 38 of the Bank Act, R.S.C. (1906) c. 29, directors of a bank may agree with a shareholder as how his shares shall be paid for-at all events, when the times for payment are to be such as they might fix under s. 38 if there were no agreement Farmers Bank v. (d), that "banks may engage in and carry on such business generally as appertains to the business of banking," a bank may lawfully receive money deposited with it in trust, for the purchase of stock to be transferred by it to the depositor. (2) Such a deposit may be law fully made in the hands of the manager of the bank, outside the bank premises at the office of the depositor, to whom the bank, on taking possession of the money. becomes liable for it.

Hooper v. Eastern Townships Bank, 35 Que. S.C. 221.

-Advances-Restrictive clause in trust deed-Notice.]-The trust deed of plaintiff company to secure debentures of the A. P. Co., contained a clause charging in favour of the trustees "its other assets whatsoever and wheresoever with the payment" of all moneys for the time being owing on the security of these presents and providing that "such charge shall rank as a floating charge, and shall in no way hinder the company from selling or otherwise disposing of such assets in the or-dinary course of its business, and for the jurpose of carrying out the same." The deed contained the following restriction, "but the company shall not be entitled to mortgage or charge the same in priority to or pari passu with the security hereby constituted." It becoming necessary for the company to obtain an advance to pay for pulpwood and to carry on its business, the defendant bank was applied to for a loan, and granted the same upon security being given, under the terms of the Bank Act, s. 74, upon the company's wood at different places:—Held, by Townshend, C.J., and Longley, J. (Meagher, J., concurring in the conclusion), that in determining the question whether or not the restrictive clause in the trust deed was brought to the attention of the bank before the money was advanced, the positive evidence of an officer of the company giving details of what occurred must be preferred to the evidence of the bank manager, who testified that he had no recollection on the subject. Also, that so long as the money remained under the control of the bank it was open to the bank to cancel the loan and retain the money upon discovering that the credit was given under a misapprehension as to the nature of the security. Also, the fact that the bank, in making the loan, relied upon the assignment under the Bank Act. s. 74, could not prejudicially affect plaintiff when it was shown that the advance was made after notice of the restriction contained in the trust deed.

-Advance by bank "on call"-Failure to allege call-Collateral securities.] - Upon a motion by the plaintiffs for judgment upon the statement of claim in default of defence in an action to recover a sum of money advanced, repayable "on call," with interest:-Held, that the making of a call was not a condition precedent to bringing an action-there being a present debt and a promise to pay on demand. In re Brown's Estate, [1893] 2 Ch. 300, followed. Judgment was also granted in respect of an alternative claim made by the plaintiffs, with leave to the defendant to elect to accept an offer made by the plaintiffs.

- Powers of provisional directors - Payment of commissions for obtaining stock subscriptions - Breach of trust.] -Dominion Act incorporating the bank, 4 & 5 Edw. VII. c. 125, was in the form set forth in schedule B of the Bank Act, R.S. C 1906, c. 29, and, while it named the provisional directors, conferred no special powers on them: -Held, that the powers of the bank, and of the provisional directors acting for it, depended entirely upon the provisions of the Bank Act; and the provisional directors had no power to authorize pay-ment out of the funds of the bank of commissions to persons who obtained subscriptions for shares of the capital stock; and, in the winding-up of the bank, under the Dominion Winding-up Act, they were properly found liable, upon the ground of breach of trust or misfeasance, to pay to the liquidator the sums which had improperly been paid under their authority. Provisions of the Bank Act considered. Quære, whether even shareholders' directors would have authority under the Bank Act to pay commissions for obtaining subscriptions for stock. One of the provisional directors did not authorize or direct to be paid any money for commission, except in one instance, when he, with the others, signed a cheque tor $700 "on account of commissions;" at most he was aware of other payments being made by his co-directors. Held, following Young v. Naval Military and Civil Service Co-operative Society of South Africa, [1905] 1 K.B. 687, that he was liable for the $700 only.

— Bank — Petition for winding-up — Four days' notice — Waiver — Power of Court to shorten time — Curator.] — The provision of the Winding-up Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 144, s. 13 (2), that "four days' notice shall be given to the company before the making of" an application for a winding-up order, cannot be waived by the company; and, where the full four days' notice has not been given, a Judge has no power to make the order. The Consolidated Rules of Practice are not by any of the provisions of the Winding-up Act made applicable so as to authorize the Court to shorten the time. Where a curator has been appointed for a bank under the Bank Act, R.S.C., 1906, c. 29, he is by ss. 119 and 121, vested with all the powers which directors and solicitor had before his appointment; and after the appointment of a curator, the board of directors have no power to give a solicitor authority to consent to a winding-up order or to anything which may have any effect upon the rights and interests of creditors; and a solicitor has no such authority derivable from his former retainer by the bank; and in this case the consent, admission and waiver of a solicitor, purporting to act on behalf of the bank, though made in good faith, after the appointment of the curator, had no validity. An application for an order for the winding-up of a bank was refused, the curator objecting to the notice. The Judge might have adjourned the hearing under s. 14 of the Winding-up Act; but, as there were other applications pending, he considered that the first applicant who was wholly regular should not be deprived of any advantage to which his adherence to the rules, statutes and practice, entitled him. The applicant was ordered to pay costs to the curator, who opposed the application, but not to creditors and others who appeared upon the -Assignment by insolvent to bank-Advances on security thereof-Bank Act-Bona fides—Knowledge of insolvency.]— One Broley made a general assignment of all moneys due him to the defendant as security for an advance and subsequently made a specific assignment of all moneys due to him by a school district. Later being still indebted to the bank in large sums he conveyed to the bank a house and lot. A further specific assignment of a debt due by the town of North Brantford to Broley was given at a later date and within 60 days of this last assignment Broley made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. Advances were made on the security of all assignments to the bank except that last mentioned. In an action by the assignee to set aside the various assignments and conveyances as being in fraud of creditors:-Held, that the various assignments were valid under the Bank Act, and even if the advances upon such security were not authorized. Broley could not, having received good consideration, assail the pledge, and his creditors occupied no better position. (2) That as to all the assignments save the last the bank acted in perfect good faith and believing ia Broley's solvency and without any intent to defeat, delay or prejudice any creditor or prefer the bank's claim and the assignments were therefore valid. (3) That as no advance had been made on the security of the last assignment which was made within 60 days before the assignment for the benefit of creditors the assignment was void under the provisions of the Assignments Act.

Norton v. Canadian Bank of Commerce, 1 Sask, R. 448.

-Hypothecation of securities-Terms of pledge.]-B. sold property to the syndicate and took as security for the price mortgages on real and personal property and a promissory note and transferred the securities to the bank to secure his present and future indebtedness to it. He signed a document authorizing the bank to realize on the same in its discretion, to grant ex tensions, and give up securities, accept compositions, grant releases and discharges and otherwise deal with them as it might see fit without prejudice to B.'s liability. The note not being paid at maturity, the bank sued the syndicate and B. upon it and on the covenants in the mortgages and obtained judgment against both. In the same action, the syndicate, on counterclaim for damages for deceit, had judgment against B. which was eventually set aside, but, while it existed, the bank made a settlement with the syndicate and discharged the latter from all liability on the judgment of the bank on payment of over $20,000 less than the debt. B. was not a party to this settlement and the bank afterwards refused to give him any information about it or to give him a state ment of his account with the bank itself. In an action by B. for an account and to have the bank enjoined from further dealings with the securities:-Held, that the power given to the bank to deal with the securities was to be exercised for the purpose of liquidating B.'s debt, and, as to the surplus, for B.'s benefit; that, the settlement having been made solely for the benefit of the bank and in sacrifice of B.'s interests, the bank violated its duty, and had not satisfied the onus upon it of showing that, had the whole amount of the judgment been recovered from the syndicate, B. would not have benefited thereby.

Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Barrette, 41 Can. S.C.R. 561.

—Insolvent bank—Right of directors to rely upon representations of officials—personal liability after being put upon enquiry.]—The bank of Y., having suspended payment. plaintiff, who was appointed curator, brought an action under the Winding-up Act, R.S.C. c. 129, against defendants, the former directors of the bank, alleging misfeasance and neglect of duty. The acts chiefly complained of were the advancing of large sums of money to one of the customers of the bank, practically exhausting the capital and reserve of the bank, upon the security of paper drawn upon people who were insolvent, or who had no existence, and, when the paper was returned unpaid or unaccepted, retaining it and treating it as assets. Also issuing improper balance sheets, and paving dividends out of capital. The evidence showed that, down to a certain date, the directors were misled by their cashier, in whom they had the fullest confidence, but that, after the date referred to, when they became aware that they had been deceived by the cashier, and that he had disobeyed in-structions and that the resources of the bank were seriously involved they still continued him in his former position with-out change:—Held, that the directors, in accepting that position, impliedly undertook that they had reasonable skill and ordinary ability for the discharge of the business in which they engaged, but that, in order to hold them accountable for the acts of their officer, gross negligence must be shown, such negligence being a question of fact to be determined upon the evidence, and that the findings of the trial Judge in relation thereto, founded more or less upon conflict of fact and inferences from the evidence, should not be disturbed. Held, also, that the directors were not obliged to examine the books of the bank, but that, if they became aware of anything reasonably suggesting the need of inquiry, it was their duty to seek for full information and explanation. Held, also, that, in retaining the cashier in office, after they became aware of his conduct and the manner in which he had involved the resources of the bank, they were guilty of indefensible misconduct, and were personally responsible for all losses sustained, as the result of his subsequent acts. Held, also, that the payment of a dividend, after the directors became aware that the bank was wrecked, and that it could not reasonably hope to continue business, was ultra vires, and that they were personally liable in relation thereto. Per Russell, J. (concurring), that in view of the evidence of negligence on the part of the directors in the performance of their duties, their personal liability for losses incurred should commence at an earlier date, and that in this connection it was not unreasonable to attribute to them knowledge of the statements of the affairs of the bank prepared for the information of shareholders and the general public. Per Longley, J. (also concurring), that the principle which relieves directors from liability where they have relied upon the representations of their officials, is not to be extended to cases where facts are brought to their attention leading them to suspect the integrity, skill and competence of such

--Banks and banking-Crediting customer with amount of cheque-Negotiation-Holder for value-Dishonour of cheque-Honouring subsequent cheques—Bills of Exchange Act, ss. 22, 54, 56, 58, 70, 74, 165.]—The account of M. at the plaintiffs' On May bank was $409.53 overdrawn. 23rd he posted to the plaintiffs from Chi-cago a cheque of W. & Co. for $1,000, dated May 16th, with the instructions to place the amount to his credit, which the plaintiffs did on receipt on May 26th, thus leaving a credit balance in M.'s favour of $590.47. On the same day the plaintiffs sent this cheque for collection to the clearing house, but it was returned dishonoured on May 27th, W. & Co. having stopped payment on May 23rd. On May 28th cer-tain cheques drawn by M. on his account came in, which the plaintiffs paid and charged up. The plaintiffs again twice sent the $1,000 cheque to the clearing house, but it was on each oceasion returned unpaid, the plaintiffs on each occasion crediting and debiting M.'s account with the $1,000. The plaintiffs now sued W. & Co. on the $1,000 cheque. It was admitted that M. had not given consideration for it, and that, if he were holder, he could not recover on it:-Held, that the plaintiffs, by crediting M.'s account with $1,000 on receipt of the cheque sued on, became holders for value of the latter. The position of the plaintiffs with reference to the cheque sued on, became fixed when the latter was negotiated to them, and nothing which took place subsequently altered the plaintiffs' position, except that by the dishonour of the cheque and notice to M. his liability in respect to it became absolute, baving previously been only conditional. Held, also, that the interval between May 16th, the date of the cheque, and May 23rd, the date of its being mailed to the plaintiffs, was not, in the circumstances, sufficient to give the cheque the character of an overdue bill, so as to make it, under s. 70 of the Bills of Exchange Act, R.S.C. s. 70 of the Bills of Exchange Act, (1906) c. 119, subject in the plaintiffs' hands to any defect of title affecting it. Held, also, that s. 22 of the Bills of Exchange Act applies to cheques.

The goods were insured by M., and the policies had been assigned to the defendant. At the date of the assignment M. was indebted to the plaintiff for rent in the sum of $626.38. $300 of which had accrued due within one year prior to the date of the assignment (R.S.O. 1897, c. 170, s. 34 (1)). From the goods destroyed the plaintiff could, by distress, at or before the date of the assignment, have made the whole of the rent due:-Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a "preferential lien"-the expression used in s. 34 (1)-upon the insurance moneys paid to the defendant in respect of the goods destroyed. Company-Assignee for creditors-Declaration of trust—Right of assignee to sue Cause-By-law-Time for payment of-Forfeiture of stock.]-The plaintiff sued as an assignee for creditors under an assignment which excepted shares in companies not fully paid up, and in which his assignor was declared a trustee for plaintiff, to transfer the shares in such way as he should direct. In this action plaintiff sought to have it declared that he was the owner of certain shares, standing in the name of his assignor, in a company incorporated under R.S.O. 1897, c. 191, and that he was entitled to pay the balance of calls made thereon: -Held, that he was not entitled to call on the company to account to him for the shares or any dealings therewith. Under s. 35 of the above statute, stock may be forfeited by the company where the amount payable on a call is not paid within the time limited by the special Act incorporating the company, or by the letters patent, or by a by-law of the company. Where, therefore, no time was limited in the statute, or letters patent, or in the by-law making the call, such call was held to be illegal and an attempted forfeiture of the stock ineffectual.

Assignment for benefit of creditors -Goods seized by sheriff-Interpleader.]-The company transferred goods by bill of sale to A. on the 2nd July, 1909. Seizure having subsequently been made by a sheriff, under certain executions against the company, of the goods transferred to A., and A. having made a claim, an interpleader issue was directed on the 10th May, 1910. This was determined against the claim of A. on the 30th September, 1910, by a judgment, which, in effect, declared that A. held the goods subject to the executions against the company. On the 4th October the final order of interpleader was made, setting forth that the sheriff, in lieu of selling the goods, had, at the request of A. and the company, continued in possession pending the trial of the issue, and directing the sheriff to sell the goods, and out of the proceeds to pay the executions, costs and expenses-"the said creditors having a special lien therefor." On the 8th October the company made a general assignment to M. for the benefit of creditors, under the Assignments and Preferences Act, and a confirmatory assignment on the 13th October. A. transferred the assets to another company, by an instrument dated the 1st October, and that company transferred to the company in question by an instrument of the same date, but it was admitted that these instruments were not in fact executed until after the general assignment and confirmatory assignment. M. made a demand upon the sheriff for the property in his hands, and the sheriff applied for an interpleader order as between M. and the execution creditors: —Held, that the special provisions of the Creditors' Relief Act, 9 Edw. VII. c. 48, s. 6, sub-ss. 4 and 5, in favour of interpleading creditors, were to be regarded as an exception to the general law regarding the ratable distribution of assets, either under the Creditors' Relief Act or the Assignments and Preferences Act: and that the execution creditors were entitled as against M. to the priority given them by the former order. Held, also, that nothing passed by the assignment to M. but a potential right to vacate, by proper means, the transfer to A., which had already been declared fraudulent as against the interpleading creditors; and the voluntary retransfer by A. did not put the assignee, M., in any better position as regards those creditors. The transfer by the company to A. was valid as between them, and the title and property were out of the company altogether. The circumstances of the case withdrew it from the scope of the Assignments and Preferences Act, 10 Edw. VII. c. 64, s. 14, which applies to goods of the insolvent validly assigned to the assignee under the Act. The goods were not those of the company at the time of the assignment, and the assignee could not take a better title as against the interpleading creditors than A. could give.

-Landlord and tenant-Assignment for creditors-Acceleration clause-Forfeiture -Assignee's election-Payment under protest-Division Court jurisdiction.]-The effect of s. 34 R.S.O. 1897, c. 170, "The Landlord and Tenant's Act," is to place the assignee, who has elected by notice in writing under his hand to retain the pre mises occupied by the assignor at the time of the assignment for the unexpired term of the lease under which said premises were held, in the same position as respects the lease, as the assignor would have been in had the assignment not been made; the landlord in such cases being entitled to the full amount of the rent reserved by the lease, but to nothing more; and where accelerated rent due for the unexpired term of a lease containing the usual forfeiture clause on an assignment for the benefit of creditors being made by the lessor, had been paid by his assignee for creditors, who had elected to retain the premises to the end of the term, he was held entitled to recover back a further sum for rent of the premises for a portion of the same period, which he had paid on demand of the landlord, under protest, to avoid distress. Rent payable under a lease of land is an incorporeal hereditament, and where the right or title to it comes in question, a Division Court has no jurisdiction in an action to recover it. Kennedy v. MacDonell, 1 O.L.R. 250.

— Assignments and preferences — Judgment — Secution — Sheriff — Sale of land.]—Uninvalidity of a preferential transfer of goods is rebutted by showing that it was entered into by the transferce in good faith and without knowing, or having reason to believe, that the transferor was insolvent. —Assignments and preferences—judgment —Execution—Sheriff—Sale of land.]—Under a writ of fieri facias a sheriff seized the interest of a judgment debtor in certain lands and advertised the interest for sale. Three days prior to the time fixed for the sale the judgment debtor made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, pursuant to the provisions of R.S.O. 1897, c. 147. The assignee gave notice to the sheriff of the assignment and asked for a statement of the costs incurred to that time. No tender of the costs was made or undertaking given to pay them, and the sheriff proceeded with the sale and sold the land to the plaintiff. The assignee, notwithstanding the sheriff 's sale, assumed to sell the land to, and executed a conveyance in favour of, the defendant 's son, who allowed the defendant to remain in possession as his agent:—Held, that the assignment for the benefit of creditors did not stand in the way of the sheriff proceeding to sell under the writ of execution, and that the sale by the assignee was nugatory and void, and the sheriff 's vendee entitled to possession of the land.

-Lease-Covenant-Forfeiture-Waiver.1 -A lease to a joint stock company provided that in case the lessee should assign for the benefit of creditors six months rent should immediately become due, and the lease should be forfeited and void. The two lessors were principal shareholders in the company, and while the lease was in force one of them, at a meeting of the directors, moved, and the other seconded, that a by-law be passed authorizing the company to make an assignment, which was afterwards done, the lessors executing the assignment as creditors assenting thereto:-Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal (1 O.L.R. 172), that the lessors and the company were distinct legal persons, and the individual interests of the former were not affected by the above action: Salamon v. Salamon (1897), A.C. 22, followed. The assignee of the company held possession of the leased premises for three months, and the lessees accepted rent from him for that time and from sub-lessees for the month following. Held, also, reversing the judgment appealed from, that as the lessors had claimed the six months' accelerated rent under the forfeiture clause in the lease and testified at the trial that they had elected to forfeit; and as the assignee had a statutory right to remain in possession for the three months and collect the rents; and as the evidence showed that the receipt by the lessors of the three months' rent was in pursuance of a compromise with the assignee in respect to the acceleration; and as the month's rent for the sub-tenants was the only compensation by the latter for being permitted to use and occupy the premises and for their accommodation; the lessors could not be said to have waived their right to claim a forfeiture of the lease. Mortgagees of the premises having notified the sub-tenants to pay rent to them, the assignee paid them a sum in satisfaction of their claim with the assent of the lessors, against whose demand it was charged. Held, that this also was no waiver of the lessors' right to claim a forfeiture. Quaere. Was a covenant by the company to supply steam and power to its sub-tenants anything more than a personal covenant by the company or would it, on surrender of the original lease, have bound the lessor and a purchaser from him of the fee?

-Money paid-Voluntary payment-Insolvency of debtor-Action of assignee-Status.]-S. a trader, in August, 1899, procured the consent in writing of his creditors to payment of his debts then due and maturing by notes at different dates extending to the following March. V., one of the creditors, insisted on more prompt payment of part of his claim, and took from S. notes aggregating in amount $708, all payable in September, which S. agreed in writing to pay at maturity and did pay. In November, 1899, S. assigned for the benefit of his creditors, when the arrangement between him and V. first became known and the assignee and other creditors brought an action to recover the said sum of $708 from V. as part of the insolvent estate:-Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal (3 Ont. L.R. 5), and that at the trial (32 O.R. 216) that S. having paid the notes voluntarily without oppression or coercion could not himself have recovered back the amount and his assignee was in no better position. Held, per Taschereau, J.: As anything recovered by the assignee would be for the benefit of his co-plaintiffs only who would thus receive what would have been an unjust preference if stipulated for by the agreement for extension, the plaintiffs had no locus standi in curia.

Previous to the assignment the assignor had covenanted with the plaintiffs to pay J.R. $100 per quarter on the first day of each quarter during her natural life:-Held, that the growing payments were in the nature of contingent debts; and that the plaintiffs were not entitled under R.S.O. c. 147 to rank upon the estate of the insolvent for the present value of such payments. The primary debtor had recovered a judgment against the insurance company on the 7th December, 1899, and had assigned the judgment on the same day to the claimant. No formal notice of the proceedings in the Division Court or of any contest as to his rights was ever given to the claimant, but he appeared in the proceedings on the 6th July, 1900, and consented to an adjournment to them, and afterwards appeared again before the Judge, when his rights under the assignment were tried, and judgment was given against him setting aside the assignment as an unjust preference:-Held, on appeal, that the transfer to the claimant was not attacked when the summons was issued, nor until the claimant appeared in the proceedings, and, therefore, it was not attacked within sixty days, and its validity could be supported by proof of pressure in procuring it. Held, also, Falconbridge, C.J., dissenting, that, as it appeared from the evidence both of the primary debtor and the claimant, that the latter had asked the former for security shortly before the security was given, and that the security given was that which was promised, there was pressure inducing the giving of the security, and it should be upheld, notwithstanding, that the claimant was merely liable for a debt of the primary debtor which it was expected he should pay, as he did, and notwithstanding that he was not present at the time the assignment was made to him, it having been drawn by his solicitor. The ordinary procedure in an action is not applicable to such a motion; and where an appointment to examine the assignee in support of the application, under Con. Rule 491, was taken out and served, it was held that he was not obliged to attend upon it, the officer having no authority to issue it.

-Defeating creditors-Setting aside conveyance-Absence of fraudulent intent.]-A grantor, believing himself solvent, conveyed, in January, 1903, certain lands voluntarily to his daughter. At the time he owned shares in the plaintiff company, from which he had borrowed upon them. but which shares up to the time of the failure of the company, in June 1903, were saleable above par, and considered then, as when he borrowed on them, ample security for the debt due on them. On the evidence, no fraudulent intent on the part of the grantor could be inferred:-Held, that, although at the time of action brought, the plaintiffs were, by reason of the impeached conveyance, hindered in recovering their claim, this was not the necessary consequence of the grant within the meaning of R.S.O. 1897, c. 147, and therefore the conveyance could not be set aside. -Fraud on creditors-Right of assignee for creditors-Termination of.] - One of the defendants mortgaged land to the plaintiff bank, and then made an assignment under R.S O. 1897, c. 147 to the other plaintiff for the benefit of creditors. The assignee conveyed to the bank the equity of redemption in the land. This action was then brought to have a lease of the land made by the mortgagor to his co-defendant declared void. The bank alleged that the lease, though dated before the mortgage, was not made until after it; and both plaintiffs alleged that the lease was made voluntarily, when the lessor was, to the knowledge of the lessee, in insolvent circumstances, and with intent to defraud creditors:-Held, that the right to relief upon the latter ground could be claimed only by the assignee under section 9 of the Act, and his right terminated when he so dealt with the estate as to render the relief useless to it; and therefore the assignee was improperly joined as a plaintiff. Semble, that the proper order would be to strike out the name of the assignee as plaintiff, and the claim to set aside the lease as fraudulent against creditors. The order made below, 7 O.L.R. 613, was, however, affirmed.

-Assignment for creditors-Purchase by assignee Statutory presumption - Rebuttal.]-On the 15th October, 1896, an insolvent made a second mortgage of his farm to the defendants, solicitors, as security for a bill of costs, and six days later made a statutory assignment to the plaintiff for the benefit of creditors. The assets were realized and a dividend paid to the creditors in June, 1897. The farm was sold, subject to the first mortgage, on the 13th March, 1897, to a nominal purchaser, who conveyed it to the plaintiff himself in August, 1897. After providing for the first mortgage out of the purchase money, there was a balance of $600, which the plaintiff distributed among the creditors. The defendants filed their claim as creditors (but without disclosing their mortgage) in December, 1896, and received their share of the dividend in June, 1897. The defendant's mortgage was not registered until the 10th February, 1897, and the plaintiff had no notice or knowledge of it until October, 1897. The plaintiff took possession of the farm with knowledge of the creditors of the purchase by him, and so remained until he received notice of the exercise of the power of sale contained in the defendants mortgage, on the 10th May, 1903, when this action was begun by the plaintiff as assignee to invalidate the instrument or to stay proceedings thereon. The action was tried without a jury, and the trial Judge dismissed it without hearing the defendants' evidence:-Held, that the plaintiff was still assignee and had a status to maintain the action; his purchase of the farm could not stand for his own benefit, and he was to be regarded as in possession as trustee for the creditors and liable to account, which he submitted to do. Held, also, in view of the conflicting authorities that the defendants should be allowed upon a new trial to give evidence to show the validity of their mortgage notwithstanding the presumption that it was an unjust preference within the meaning of 54 Viet. c. 20, s. 2, sub-s. 2, (b) (O.), and notwithstanding the decision in Macdonald v. Worthingtor (1882), 7 A.R. 531, as to the effect of accepting a nonsuit in an action tried without a jury. Judgment of Britton, J., reversed; Idington, J., dissenting.

—Preferential transfer of cheque—Deposit with private banker—Application by banker upon overdue note—Absence of pre-arrangement and of intent to prefer.]—On the 5th September. 1904, a merchant, being then insolvent, sold his stock-in-trade at 50 cents on the dollar, and received in payment the purchaser's cheque on the defendant's private bank for $1,172.27, payable to his own order, which he took to that bank, where he had an account, and deposited it to his own credit. The defendants knew that the sale was about to be made, and had lent the purchaser the money to make the purchase, and knew that the money was to be deposited in their bank by the insolvent, and, in anticipation of this, had charged up against the insolvent's account (without the latter's knowledge) an overdue note for $1,000 and $40 interest thereon. The deposit of the purchaser's cheque with the defendants was attacked by this action (brought within 60 days thereafter) as a preferential transfer of a bill or security to a creditor, within R.S.O. 1897, c. 147, s. 2: -Held, Street, J., dissenting, that, there being no evidence of any pre-arrangement nor of any intent to prefer, the transaction was not within the scope of the Act.

-Preference-Statutory presumption-Rebuttal-Circumstances rebutting intent to prefer.]-At the revision of the Ontario statutes in 1897, the words "prima facie", were inserted after the word "presumed", where it occurs in sub-s. 3 and 4 of s. 2 of c. 147, and the doubt whether the presumption was rebuttable was thereby set at rest; but even under the language of sub-s. 2 (b) of s. 2 of the Act of 1887, i.e., without the words "prima facie," the presumption was rebuttable; and in the case of a mortgage of land to secure a debt, made on the 15th October, 1896, to the defendants, followed on the 21st October, 1896, by an assignment by the mortgagor to the plaintiff for the benefit of creditors, the defendants were entitled to show that there was no intent to prefer. Lawson v. McGeoch (1893), 20 A.R. 464, followed. Held, also, upon the evidence, that the presumption of intent to prefer was rebutted. Held, also, that the plaintiff, as assignee for the benefit of creditors, occupied no higher position than his assignor, and could not be regarded as a subsequent purchaser for valuable consideration, within the meaning of the Registry Act, so as to avail himself of its provisions with regard to the registration of the assignment before the mortgage. Craig v. McKay, 12 O.L.R. 121 (C.A.).

-Preferential transfer of cheque-Deposit in private bank-Application of funds to debt due banker-Sinister intention.]-McG., a merchant in insolvent circumstances, although not aware of the fact, sold. his stock-in-trade and deposited the cheque received from the price to the credit of his account with a private banker to whom he was indebted, at the time, upon an overdue promissory note that had been, without his knowledge, charged against his account a few days before the sale. Within two days after making the deposit, McG. gave the banker his cheque to cover the amount of the note. In an action to have the transfer of the cheque, so deposited, set aside as preferential and void:-Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (13 Ont. L.R. 232) that the transaction was a payment to a creditor within the meaning cf the statute, R.S.O. (1897) c. 147, s. 3, sub-s. 1, which was not, under the circumsances, void as against creditors.

Robinson v. McGillivray, 39 Can. S.C.R.

-Fraudulent preference-Security to creditor-Knowledge of insolvency.]-G. had assisted S. with loans and also guaranteed his credit at the Dominion Bank to the extent of $3,000. His own cheque at the bank having been refused payment until the indebtedness of S. of $1,900 was settled, the latter promised to arrange it within a month, which he did by transferring to G. goods pledged to the Imperial Bank, G. paying what was due to both banks. Shortly after S. sold out his stock in trade and absconded owing large sums to foreign creditors and being insolvent On the trial of a creditor's action to set aside the transfer to G. as a fraudulent preference, the manager of the Dominion Bank testified that G.'s cheque was not refused from any doubt of S.'s solvency but because he had heard that S. was dealing with another bank and he wished to close the account:-Held, that under the evidence produced G. had no reason to suppose, when the goods were transferred, that S. was insolvent and he had satisfied the onus placed upon him by the provincial statute of showing that he had not intended to hinder, delay or defraud the creditors of S.

Baldocchi v. Spada, 38 Can. S.C.R. 577.

-Assignment by mortgagor for benefit of creditors - Priorities - Assignment of claims of execution creditors-Redemption.]-After judgment for foreclosure of mortgage or redemption judgment creditors of the mortgagor with executions in the sheriff's hands were added as parties in the Master's office and proved their claims. The Master's report found that they were the only incumbrancers and fixed a date for payment by them of the amount due to the mortgagees. After confirmation of the report S. obtained assignments of these judgments and was added as a party. He then paid the amount due the mortgagees and the Master took a new account and appointed a day for payment by the mortgagor of the amount due S. on the judgments as well as the mortgage. This report was confirmed and the mortgagor having made an assignment for benefit of creditors before the day fixed for redemption an order was made by a Judge in Chambers adding the assignee as a party, extending the time for redemption and referring the case back to the Master to take a new account and appoint a new day:-Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal sub-nom. Federal Life v. Stinson (13 Ont. L.R. 127) that under the provisions of section 11 of the Assignments and Preferences Act the assignee of the mortgagor could only redeem on payment of the total sum due to S. under the mortgage and the judgments assigned to him.

Scott v. Swanson, 39 Can. S.C.R. 229.

Assignee for benefit of creditors-Sale of estate of insolvent-Purchase by agents and trustees for assignee.]-In an action by a creditor of H. against C., the assignee of H. for the benefit of creditors, and two persons to whom C. had purported to sell lands forming part of the estate of H., for an account of profits and for damages, etc.: -Held, upon the evidence (Meredith, C.J.C. P., dubitante), that the conclusion of the trial Judge that the other two defendants purchased as agents and trustees for C. was abundantly justified. McG., one of the defendants, resold the house bought in his name, at a profit of $320:-Held, that the measure of liability in respect of this transaction was the $320; interest, occupation rent, and improvements, etc., might be set off against each other. For this sum both C. and McG. were liable. Upon the evidence, it was in McG.'s hands when the action was begun, and his executors (he having died pendente lite) were answerable. Only part of the parcel bought in the name of the third defendant had been resold; the sale was for $200. Held, that, if none of the property had been disposed of, the plaintiff's remedy would have been to have it declared that the property still remained subject to the trust and to have an account upon that footing; or he might have had a resale ordered, taking the increased price realized, and holding the defendants to the purchase if no more was realized; but, as part had been sold, the defendant C. was chargeable with the actual value of the estate at the time it was conveyed to the third defendant; any change of circumstances arising from depreciation of the property while in C.'s hands should be borne by him rather than by the cestuis que trust. Held, however, that the third de-fendant was not liable to account upon this head, for, although he had lent himself to a fraud, no profit had reached his hands. He was a necessary and proper party to the action, and should answer along with C. for the plaintiff's costs. Held, also, that the trial Judge had properly refused to admit in evidence, on behalf of the executors of McG. his depositions upon his examination for discovery; and had properly refused to compel the plaintiff to read an examination de bene esse taken at his instance, which he did not desire to read; but the defendants should have the costs of this examination. Judgment of Latchford, J., varied.

Atkinson v. Casserley, 22 O.L.R. 523

der and delay.] — The defendant company, an incorporated trading company, being pressed for payment of debts by a bank and other creditors, the directors decided to raise money by chattel mortgage. The bank held as security for their advances to the company an assignment of the book debts of the company, a bond for $5,000 given by J., the secretary of the company personally, and the latter's indorsement of certain promissory notes discounted for the company. J.'s brother, the defendant A., who was employed by J., received from J. who was employed by a third person in favour of A., for $7,000, which A. indorsed and handed back to J., who deposited it to A.'s credit in the bank on the 3rd August. 1909. The money represented by this cheque was obtained by J. on his own note, without the knowledge of A. On the 12th August, 1909, the company made a chattel mortgage and assignment of book debts in favour of A. for $8,300, covering all their personal property. On the 13th of August A. gave a cheque to the defendant company for $8,300, which was deposited to the company's credit in the bank, and on the same day the company gave a cheque to the bank for $2,254.50, being the full amount of the company's debt to the bank. On the 14th August there was a further deposit to the credit of A.'s account in the bank of $1,-000, of which a part was obtained from J. and the balance borrowed from another source. On the 7th September, 1909, the bank assigned to A. all their interest in the book debts of the company, the assignment purporting to be in consideration of $8,2 254.52 paid by A .: - Held, upon the evidence, that, at the time the chattel mortgage was given, the company were insolvent; that J. knew and A. knew or ought to have known of the insolvency; that the effect of the transaction was to give the bank a preference and indirectly to benefit J., who was security to the bank; and that it was done with this object in view. Held, therefore, that the intent to delay, hinder, or defeat creditors was established, and that the case was brought within the Statute of Elizabeth and within sub-s. 1 of s. 2 of the Assignments and Preferences Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 147. Burns v. Wilson (1897), 28 1897, c. 147. Bullis v. Vision (1897), S.C.R. 207; Campbell v. ratterson, Mader v. McKinnon (1892), 21 S.C.R. 645, and Allan v. McLean (1906), 8 O.W.R. 223, 761, followed. After the mortgage, the company were allowed to collect the book debts and to use the proceeds for their business. Held, that there was no advance specially in respect of the book debts; the whole advance was one transaction; and A. was not entitled to stand in the shoes of the bank and be subrogated to their position in respect of the book debts; but, if he were, he had lost his security by his own laches, and was not entitled to have his loss made good out of the proceeds of the chattels, to which he had no legal right as against the other creditors. Judgment of Teetzel, J., varied.

—Assignment for benefit of creditors—Separate liability of partner—Bight of creditor of partner—Bight of creditor of partnership to rank on estate of partner.]—A member of a partnership joined with the partnership in making a promissory note for the price of goods supplied to the firm by plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to rank upon the insolvent estate of the partner for the amount of the unpaid note, ratably with the individual creditors of the partner. The plaintiff having elected, before accepting a dividend from the insolvent estate of the partnership, to pursue his remedy against the estate of the partner, the question whether, under the statute, it was necessary to elect, did not arise.

-Assignment for creditors - Examination of assignor-Service of appointment.]-On the examination of an assignor for credittors under the Act respecting Assignments and Preferences, R.S.O. 1897, c. 147, s. 34, 35, 37, sub-s. 1, it is sufficient to serve a copy of the appointment of the special examiner upon the assignor, and it is not necessary to show him the original appointment unless sight of it is demanded. On a motion to commit for failure to attend such an examination, an adjournment of the motion, at the request of the assignor's solici tor, on an undertaking that the assignor would submit himself for examination at his own expense, and that, on default, the order should go, is a complete waiver to any such objection to the regularity of service of the appointment.

Re Ferguson, 17 O.L.R. 576

Assignment for benefit of creditors -Claim on insolvent estate for rent and taxes -Accelerated rent.]-The plaintiffs, for the purpose of carrying on a branch of their business on the 1st March, 1907, became the lessees of a store at B., the lease being for five years, at an annual rental of $800, payable monthly, and containing covenants by the plaintiffs to pay rent, taxes, etc., and not to assign but they were permitted to sublet to an agent to carry on the business. The plaintiffs appointed H. their agent at B. for a term of five years, subject to determination, on notice. The plaintiffs alleged that H. also became sublessee for the term of the lease, and subject to all its liabilities; but, although a proper document had been prepared, no sublease was ever executed it being conditional on H.'s furnishing security, which he failed to do. H. entered into possession, however, and carried on the business, paying the monthly instalments of rent up to September, 1907. On the 9th January, 1908, he made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, to the defendant. H.'s appointment as agent had been cancelled on the 1st August, 1907, and in May, 1908, by an arrangement made with their landlord, the plaintiffs' lease was cancelled:-Held, that H.'s holding was merely that of a monthly tenant, so that, as against him or his assignee, only the monthly rent due under such tenancy could be claimed, and not accelerated rent, made payable under the plaintiff's lease in case of an assignment, etc.; nor could a claim for the taxes be maintained, and taxes, in the circumstances, being properly payable by the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs' right to maintain the action was attacked, on the ground that, being an extra-provincial corporation, they had no license to do business in Ontario, as required by 63 Vict. c. 24, s. 6 and 14 (O). Held, per Riddell, J., that such a license was necessary, but the difficulty was removed by the production of it after the argument of the appeal. Bessemer Gas Engine Co. v. Mills (1904), 8 O.L.R. 647, followed. Judgment of Boyd, C., at the trial, affirmed.

Opposition to seizure - Insolvency of debtor-Cession de biens.]-An incomplete assignment of property (cession de biens) in that it does not contain a sworn list of the debtor's creditors and has not been followed by the prescribed notice cannot be set up against a seizure of the debtor's goods. The modes of execution prescribed by the Code of Procedure (old text) as to immovables transferred by way of cession de biens do not exclude the usual mode open to the creditor, in virtue of his judgment, of proceeding by writ de terris to seizure and sale of the immovables of his debtor.

St. Joire v. Morni, 10 L.N. 14, followed. Birks v. Lewis, 30 Can. S.C.R. 618, affirming 8 Que. Q.B. 517.

- Assignment for benefit of creditors -Fraudulent preference—Bribery—Promissory note—Illegal consideration.]—A secret arrangement whereby the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure respecting equal distribution of the assets of insolvents are defeated and advantage given to a particular unsecured creditor is a fraud upon the general body of creditors notwithstanding that the agreement for the additional pay ment may be made by a third person who has no direct interest in the insolvent's business. A promissory note given to secure the amount of the preference payable under such an arrangement is wholly void. An agreement for a payment to an inspector of an insolvent estate to influence his consent to an arrangement which is not for the general benefit of the creditors is a bribe which is, in itself, sufficient reason to adjudge the transaction, to induce which it was given, corrupt, fraudulent and void.

La Banque Jacques Cartier v. Brigham, 16 Que. (S.C.) 113, reversed. Bingham v. La Banque Jacques Cartier, 30 Can.

—Contestation of statement—Secretion.]—The debtor who makes an assignment for benefit of creditors (cession de biens) must, in case his statement is contested, render an account of the moneys which he has had in his possession during the preceding year. Clement v. La Banque Nationale, Q.R. 14 K.B. 493. Hence, his failure to account for a surplus of $6,000 of receipts on the total of his accounts creates a presumption, equivalent to proof, of the secretion aimed at by Art. 885, par. 4 C.P.Q. The debtor who, within five weeks before his assignment, has negotiated a loan with a creditor who is also his father-in-law, in consideration of a conveyance of real rights is bound, in order to rebut the presumption of secretion, to prove that the transaction was legitimate. It is not sufficient to establish that the money borrowed was paid to his creditors; he must also prove that the conveyance did not amount to an undue preference to the lender and prejudice his other creditors. The intention to appropriate to the debtor's own use the goods secreted is not an essential element in the offence of secretion.

Desmarteau v. Guimout, Q.R. 19 K.B. 25, reversing 34 S.C. 508 and restoring 33 S.C. 78.

—Immovables of insolvent—Seizure and sale.]—A creditor cannot, after his debtor has assigned for the benefit of creditors, cause the immovables of the latter to be sold and the curator has the right to oppose such sale, even if the seizure of the immovable was made before the assignment. The costs incurred by seizure of an immovable before the owner has assigned for benefit of creditors are privileged.

Taylor v. Wilks, 11 Que. P.R. 270.

-Authority to sue-Insolvency of curator. -Authority to the curator of an insolvent estate to sue must be given in the district in which the assignment was made and the Superior Court of another district in which an action is brought cannot order the curator to procure a fresh authority. Insolvency of the curator is not a ground for removing him from the office or for suspending the action. The Act authorizing the curator to sue for the debtor makes him the representative of the body of creditors as well as of the insolvent for the purposes of the action; the creditors cannot individually sue for the same purpose by claiming to exercise the rights of the same debtor.

Lamarche v. Globensky-Wilson, 11 Que. P.R. 347.

—Liquidator—Disqualification.]—It is better that a single person should be appointed liquidator of the estate of an insolvent, the appointment of joint liquidators being often a cause of difficulty and expense in liquidation. It is also to be preferred that a director of a bank which is creditor of the insolvent for a large sum should not be appointed liquidator. When two persons are jointly nominated as liquidators of an insolvent estate, if one of them proves to be disqualified to act the votes cast in favour of the other are thereby annulled.

In re Diguard, 11 Que. P.R. 389.

-Abandonment of property-Petition for liberation.]-Held: That a pretended abandonment, whereby the defendant states that he has no assets whatever, cannot avail against a judgment of the court declaring that the defendant had fraudulently done away with his property, and absconded from the province, especially where the said pretended abandonment had been intituled and filed in another cause, where the plaintiff was not a party, and had not been followed by the appointment of a curator or any other proceeding.

Roumilhae v. Vianez, 3 Que P.R. 362

-Remission of debt-Payment for composition-Illegality.]-In the law of the Province of Quebec voluntary remissions made by creditors to their debtors leave no natural obligation subsisting and in this respect there is no difference between remiasions between traders and non-traders. A payment by a debtor to procure the creditor's signature to a compromise is a violation of the laws of public order and is therefore a nullity, as the contract itself is, and subject to be repaid. Such repayment may be effected by way of compensation. It is too late for plaintiffs to oppose the compensation, when the cause has been sub-mitted for hearing on the merits, when the parties have proceeded to take evidence on the whole action. and when the court is in a position to decide as to both debts at once and to settle them by its judgment. There is then no further impediment to the compensation and the court should give effect to it.

Kirouac v. Maltais, 18 Que. S.C. 158

-Husband and wife-Ante-nuptial contract-Registry - Loan to husband.] - A donation made by the future husband to his future wife in their marriage contract of a sum of money that the latter "shall have and take whenever she sees fit from the first available and convenient property of the future husband" is legal if it was made without fraud, if the husband was solvent at 'be time and the contract was executed and if the debt of the contestant did not then exist; the wife, on the subse-quent insolvency of her husband, may claim this sum and rank au marc la livre with his other creditors. The contract of marriage may be set up against subsequent creditors of the husband if it was registered at the domicile the contracting parties had when it was executed, though it was only registered later at the places where the insolvency was declared. A contract of loan between husband and wife is valid and the wife can claim the sum lent on the husband's insolvency ranking with the other creditors.

—Insolvent partnership—Action by liquidator—Rent and damages—Authority of court—Premature action.]—Liquidators appointed under Art. 1896 (a) C.C. to administer the assets of an insolvent partnership may take proceedings against a debtor (lessee) of the firm for rent due and damages with conclusions for resiliation of the lease, without first obtaining authority from the Court or a Judge or from members of said partnership. When an instalment of rent is payable on a day certain the lessee has the whole of it to pay, and an action brought on such a day is premature.

-Hypothec of Ship-Insolvency of owner -Sale of ship.1-Although the holder of a hypothec on a ship is not thereby the owner, he may dispose of it as absolutely as if he were. The sale of a mortgaged ship, though made en justice and by authority of the court on abandonment of his property by the owner, but without the consent of the hypothecary creditor, has no effect as against the latter and the purchaser may refuse to pay the price until the hypothec is discharged. The mere fact that the creditor was present at the sale, and even that he was a bidder, does not constitute acquiesence therein, when the sum realized is not sufficient to satisfy his hypothecary claim. -Assignment of debt-Curator-Purchase of claims-Litigious rights.]-A creditor of an insolvent has no interest to enable him to contend that the assignee of another creditor did not give valuable consideration, and that the assignment was not served on the debtor. Nothing in the law prevents the curator of a vacant insolvent succession from purchasing from creditors of the succession their claims against it. The plea of litigious rights can only avail if the debtor who makes it offers to reimburse the purchaser for what he has paid

Annulment of sale in fraud of creditors-Simulated sale—Chattel mortgage —Arts. 1025, 1032, 1472 C.C.]-(1) Although a sale of movable effects may be perfect without delivery, the want of deplacement gives rise to the presumption that the sale was simulated. (2) The laws of this province do not permit chattel mortgages, and, in a prominent degree, refuse recognition of subterfuges whereby a creditor may secure advantages at the expense of his fellow-creditors. (3) Where it appears that a pretended deed of sale, without any delivery having taken place, is, in reality, an unlawful pledge of the movables affected, such deed will be annulled.

which govern evidence, and its effects in criminal cases, must be applied, and to justify a conviction the guilt of the debtor as to omission to enter property in his statement, or secretion of property, must be established by clear and conclusive evidence. (2) A discrepancy between two statements made by the debtor—one made 31 December, 1900, showing a surplus of $1,227, and the other, made 26 July, 1901, showing a deficit of $1,849, while it raises a presumption of mismanagement of his business and of extravagance in his expenses, does not show conclusively any omission to enter property belonging to him in the statement filed with his declaration of abandonment, or secretion of any part —Cession de biens—Temporary guardian— Art. 864 C.C.P.]—In case of assignment for benefit of his creditors the fact that the temporary guardian appointed by the prothonotary is creditor for an amount less than that claimed by another creditor is not sufficient cause for his replacement by the latter. The incapacity of a plaintiff or his want of proper quality, in the present case the fact that as curator to an insolvent estate, he was not properly authorized to sue, must be invoked by means of an exception to the form and not by a dilatory exception. 2. If a defendant complains that the formalities which should have preceded the pronouncing of a judgment authorizing a curator to an insolvent estate to sue have not been observed, he must proceed by a petition in revocation of judgment.

--Hotel license-Landlord's privilege Costs—Cession de biens—Arts. 1619, 1620 C.C.]—The proceeds of sale of a hotel license (sold under cession de biens) is not subject to the landlord's lien. The only costs of judicial proceedings which take precedence of special privileges are those incurred in the interest of the privileged creditors and for the preservation of their security (gage). Therefore, in a cession de biens the costs made necessary by the assignment and those for the administration of the assets in insolvency, and their liquidation are not superior to the landlord's claim, but it is otherwise in respect to the costs of sale of the articles subject to his security, of the inventory thereof, and of the distribution of the proceeds of sale. —Duty of curator—Art. 880 C.P.Q.]—The curator of a bankrupt estate should not pay any money received from the property of the insolvent to a creditor, even a privileged creditor, before all the formalities required by Art. 880 C.P.Q. for preparation of the dividend sheet (bordereau de collocation) have been observed. The Court or a Judge should not, as a general rule, order the curator, who nevertheless is under their summary jurisdiction, to derogate from the requirements of said Article.

—Dividend sheet—Objection to claim—Service—Requete civile.]—The curator to a cession de biens having made and given notice of a first dividend in which the creditor Veilleux was, as were the others, collocated for 15 per cent., and having afterwards, with the necessary authority, contested the collocation of Veilleux—his claim being attacked at the same time-is obliged to immediately transmit such contestation to the prothonotary; and it should be served on the creditor. Where it was not so served the judgment by default against the creditor maintaining the contestation was set aside on requete civile. The requete though entitled "requete en revision " will, if it contains all the procedure required for a requete civile be considered as such. The enumeration in Art. 1177 C.P.Q. of the cases in which the requete civile will die is not restrictive. If, instead of serving on the collocated creditor a copy of the contestation of his colle-cation the bailiff, by mistake serves on him a copy of contestation of another creditor's collocation, it will be equivalent to an entire absence of service. On motion for leave to contest the bailiff's proces-verbal of service the Judge will order the taking of evidence avaunt faire droit, and if it is proved that the proces-verbal is false, it will be set aside. A letter written by the contesting curator to the creditor whose claim is contested and who has not been served with the contestation informing him that the same is filed and that he must attend to it or else judgment will be entered against him will not cure the defect of want of service, especially when it is not proved that the creditor received it. Nor is it cured by service on the creditor-who has not appeared and is not represented by an attorney of record-of an order to answer on faits et articles, on which order he also fails to appear. This last order was returned on 6th May. The creditor contested had appeared neither in person nor by attorney. Then on the back of the order the following was written. "By consent continued to 7th instant, 6th May, 1901. F.P.T.R. & Co., attorneys for contest. P. Cancin." The Court takes official notice of the signature of an attorney; it knows, therefore, that "P. Cantin" is the signature of an attorney of that name. But Cantin did not appear for the creditor and there was nothing to show that he signed for the creditor or as authorized by him:-Held, therefore, that the curator cannot from the fact that the signature "P. Cantin" is there, find an acquiescence by the creditor in the proceedings or an act that cures the want of service of the contestation The curator prepared a second dividend sheet providing for payment of 17 per cent. On account of the judgment by default against Veilleux rejecting his collocation on the first sheet his name was omitted from the second. He was not aware of said judgment at this time and contested the second collocation claiming the right to be included therein. When he afterwards became aware of the said judgment he presented a "requete en revision" or requete sented a "requete en revision" or requete civile against the same:—Held, that his proceeding against the second dividend sheet was not lis pendens, but said proceeding and the "requete en revision" were two distinct processes. The insolvent Moisam had contracted to deliver to Veilleux, at the Louise wharf, a certain quantity of wood at a fixed price per foot, the cost of measurement to be paid by Moisam, who was to furnish Veilleux with the specifications, the measuring to be done by measures of the Quebec Harbour Com-mission:—Held, (a) that delivery was only complete on the measuring being finished and the specifications furnished to Veilleux. (b) That it was incumbent upon Moisam (or the curator representing him) to prove that Veilleux had received a larger quantity of wood than the specifications showed or than he acknowledged, and such proof should be clear and certain. In a commercial matter interest or money will not be allowed unless it is alleged and proved that it is the custom of trade to grant. There is in commercial matters mise en demeure by the mere lapse of time. By the failure of Moisam to deliver the quantity of wood contracted for Veilleux is entitled to recover as damages the difference between the sum contracted for and the price for which he might have sold it.

Moisam v. Veilleux, Q.R. 22 S.C. 423 (Sup. Ct.).

—Distribution of assets—Delay in filing claim.]—The creditor who has not filed his claim with the curator to a cession de biens is not for that reason deprived of the right to be paid from the assets of his debtor, but if any money remains to be distributed he may claim to be paid, in preference to the other creditors, an amount proportionately equal to that which had been paid to the latter and to be ranked equally with them for the balance due.

In re Brais, Q.R. 22 S.C. 470 (Sup. Ct.).

—Preference — Fraud — Delay.]—(1) A judgment, and a judicial hypothec created thereby on the property of the debtor while he was insolvent, and procured for the purpose of obtaining a fraudulent preference over the debtor's other creditors, is a proceeding which must be attacked within the delay provided by Art. 1040 C.C. (2) A judgment is a judicial contract. (3) The delay for contesting the fraudulent deed of a debtor does not run only from the date of distribution of his assets, establishing his insolvency, but from the date of the knowledge by the creditor of the fraud, that is of the prejudice to him which results from the fraudulent deed.

—Acceleration of cause of action—Insolvency of debtor—Art. 1092 C.G.].—Under Art. 1092 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada an action to recover the balance of purchase money of land may be brought although the time for payment has not arrived when the debtor has become insolvent or has diminished the value of the security.

—Mandate—Authority to liquidate estate.]
—An insolvent debtor may authorize any person to liquidate his estate for benefit of his creditors. In such case he only gives a mandate, and does not make an assignment of his property. Even if he makes a voluntary transfer of all his property it will only be set aside if made in fraud of his creditors.

—Cession de biens—Contestation—Delay—Proceedings after expiry.]—The plaintiff, having made a demand of assignment (cession de biens) on the defendant, the latter did not oppose it within the delay to two days prescribed by Art. 857, C.P.Q., but after it expired. was filed after expiry of the delay. Mussen v. Tilion, Q.R. 24 S.C. 308 (Ct. Rev.).

-Profits from insolvent's services-Husband and wife—Void agreement.]—A contract by which the wife of an insolvent is to receive for services to be rendered by her husband a certain salary and part of the profits of the business of the other party to the contract, is void as made in fraud of creditors. -Powers of liquidators-Procedure-Form of service.]-An insolvent firm was indebted to the City of Montreal for taxes, and an action was brought to recover the amount against the liquidators, G. and C., who were summoned sur faits et articles, not in their capacity of joint liquidators, but as "being associated together as liquidators under the name and style of G. and C.'' The defendants did not respond to the summons, and the Superior Court ordered the interrogatories to be taken pro con-fessis, and judgment to be entered for the plaintiff. The defendants inscribed in review:-Held, (1) the liquidators appointed to administer an insolvent estate possessing only the powers of a judicial guardian, cannot represent the insolvents in legal proceedings, the latter being still in the free exercise of their rights and alone having the capacity to sue or defend them-selves in courts of law. (2) Moreover, in the present case, the summons sur faits et articles was irregular and illegal, the defendants being summoned, not as joint liquidators, but as members of a firm of liquidators doing business together as such. (3) The service on the liquidators was also irregular and void, being made on one of them only at their place of business. (4) A partnership of liquidators is a moral entity distinct from its members, who are mint liquidators as individuals and not as partners, and cannot, therefore, be sum-moned to reply sur faits et articles in the name of the insolvents of whom they are liquidators. (5) A summons sur faits et articles to the joint liquidators cannot affect the rights of the insolvents, and the interrogatories cannot be held to be established by default inasmuch as the admission resulting from default cannot be made by the liquidators and is beyond their -Action against two indorsers-Insolv ency of one-Composition-Transfer of debt.]-The Bank Ville-Marie, by its pretenom, Harel had obtained judgment on a note against Langlois, first indorser, and on Archambault, second indorser. latter having failed, Harel filed with the curator of his estate a claim based on the judgment for the debt and costs. Shortly afterwards the bank accepted in composiarterwards the bank accepted in composi-tion a certain sum from L. Archambault's daughter, to whom it assigned, with sub-rogation, its claim "as filed" with the curator but retaining possession of the note. Subsequently an agreement was made between Langlois and L., by which the latter released him from any claim she might have under the above men-tioned transfer:—Held, that the assignment by the bank was of its total debt under the judgment, that is to say, of its recourse against all the parties on the said note, and not merely an abandonment of its rights against the insolvent; and that the release obtained by Langlois from the party to whom such assignment had been made was available against the bank or those claiming under it. Langlois v. Harel, Q.R. 13 K.B. 475.

-Cession de biens-Domicile.]-The assignment for benefit of creditors (cession de biens) made to the Clerk of the Superior Court for the District of Quebec by a mer-chant having his domicile and place of business in the District of Three Rivers. is absolutely void, so also are the appointment of the curator and inspectors and all proceedings under such assignment. Any rarty interested may, on application to the Superior Court at Quebee, have such nullity entered on the record of the assignment and service of the application on the curator and inspectors is sufficient, service of the insolvent being unnecessary. this case the application was granted with costs to the applicant without stating against whom.—The costs of such application are costs incurred in the general interest and the applicant may claim payment by lien on the proceeds of a sale by

of

he te the sheriff of an immovable of the insolvent notwithstanding such sale was made under writ of fi-fa. issued by another creditor after the assignment was declared void.—The prothonotary in preparing his collocation sheet should consider the legality of the hypothees recorded by the Registrar, and if it appears by the certificate that a hypothee mentioned therein does not in law affect the immovable so he should not take it into consideration.—The plaintiff in an action paulienne who has obtained the annulment, for fraud against creditors, of a sale made by the debtor of his immovable has a lien for his costs on the proceeds of such sale but the prothonotary should not collocate it unless it is claimed by opposition afin de conserver. The procedure to be followed on contestation of the order or rank in a collocation is different from that in contesting the merits of the debt collocated.

-Landlord's privilege for rent.]—Where insolvent tenants judicially abandoned their property for the benefit of their creditors and the statute law (61 Vict. (Que.) c. 46) at the date of the abandonment restricted the lessor's preference to two years' rent, ranking them as ordinary creditors for the balance, while no such restriction was in force at the date of the leases:—Held, that the existing statute applied to all liquidations which arose after its enactment, and governed the lessor's privilege unless expressly excepted therefrom. Judgment of the King's Bench (Que.) reversed and judgment of Archibald, J., restored.

Ross v. Beaudry [1905], A.C. 570, 14 Que. K.B. 544.

—Workmen's lien—Cutting timber—Contract of sale—Insolvency—Distribution of assets.]—The lien given by Art. 1994 (c) C.O. to workmen hired to cut wood in the forest to secure payment of their wages ceases from the time that the wood passes into possession of a third party who has bought it and paid the price. But the lien is not extinguished by sale of the wood so cut if, in fact, there has been no delivery and it remains in possession of the vendor, and this is so even when the purchaser has made advances to the vendor to an amount exceeding that realized from the subsequent sale of the wood by the curators of the estate of the insolvent ven dor .- A contract for sale of the wood, executed before and during the cutting, the consideration of which is advances and prior debts, is not a fraud on the rights of the unpaid workmen since they retain their lien on the wood notwithstanding. In this case the wood in the litigation wa sold, by authority of the Court, by the curators of the estate of the wood mer-chant and the proceeds deposited in Court subject to the final adjudication. By the judgment of the Superior Court part of the wood was declared to be the exclusive property of the petitioners (purchasers) and part subject to the lien of the workmen:—Held, that the curators were not obliged to remit directly to the petitioners the proceeds of sale of the portion belonging to them but should make a regular distribution of it in the usual form of a dividend sheet.

In re Hurtubise, Q.R. 26 S.C. 137 (Ct. Rev.).

—Judgment against curator—Appeal—Authority.]—The curator of an insolvent estate has no right, without permission of a Judge granted on the advice of the inspectors, to take proceedings in review from a judgment given against him, and the Court of Review may strike out the inscription on this ground though the objection is not taken by the adverse party.—The curator who inscribes in review without being so authorized is personally liable for the costs. A creditor, not of the insolvent but of the curator as such cannot contest a dividend sheet prepared by the latter.

-Composition and discharge-Novation-Reservation of collateral security—Delivering up evidences of debt.]—By deed of composition and discharge the bank agreed to accept composition notes in discharge of its claim against the plaintiff at a rate in the dollar, special reserve being made as to the securities it then held for the debt due by the plaintiff. The original debt was to revive in full on default in payment of any of the composition notes. Upon resurrendered the notes representing the full amount of its claim:—Held, reversing the judgment of the King's Bench (Que.), that the effect of the agreement coupled with the reservation made was that the debtor was to be discharged merely from personal liability on payment of the composition notes but that the securities were to be still held by the bank for the purpose of reimbursing itself, if possible, to the ex-tent of the balance of the original debt. Held, also, that the surrender of the original notes by the bank did not extinguish the debt they represented and under the circumstances there was no novation.

(2) A creditor who has been collocated for a proportionate share in the report of distribution of the funds realized has an interest that all other creditors should be ratably collocated therein, and may contest a colocation based upon an illegal claim which might delay payment of the creditors or diminish the chances of the contestant to payment out of assets of the debtor in the future.

-Collocation and distribution of moneys-Interest of unpaid creditor to contest claims of third parties.]-An unpaid creditor has at all times an interest in pre-venting his debtor's assets from being diverted to pay illegitimate or unlawful claims. When therefore in the distribution of moneys of a debtor by the protho-notary, a party making an unlawful claim is collocated, a creditor to whom an amount is allotted in the same report as if such a claim had not been made, has nevertheless the right to contest the latter, inasmuch as a reduction in the dividend allotted to the other creditors must have the effect of impairing the contestant's chances of payment out of other or future assets of the debtor.

-Restaurant business-License-Curator.] -In the absence of fraud the creditors of a debtor who has made an assignment (cession de biens) are represented by the curator in the judgment against the latter on a claim for return of the property which was regularly served on him Third parties will not be allowed to set up, against the demand for setting aside the sale and restoring the property for default in payment of the price asked by the vendor of a restaurant business, including the license to sell liquor, the fact that the license being personal, is not assignable and cannot be restored. The agreement respecting the license affects only the parties to the contract, and is as to third parties, res inter alios acta. The appeal given to the license by entry and registration on the commissioners' list is a public regulation required by law in the public interest. The creditors of the holder of the license cannot find therein an addition to the assets of their debtor.

-Place for assignment-Business in other districts.]-A merchant who has suspended payments and been requested to make an assignment (cession de ses biens) should do so in the district where he has his domicile of origin and which is the headquarters of his business. It does not matter that he may be engaged in the business of an industry in one or two different districts under a partnership name, and that he has made, before the clerk of the Superior Court of one of them, the declara-tion provided for by Art. 1834 (a), C.C.; such special enterprise is not a basis for particular assignment. Henderson v. Harbec, Q.R. 15 K.B. 338.

Demand-Service-Domicile.] - When the return of the bailiff states that the demand of assignment was served on the defendant at his place of business he not being able to find his domicile, the defendant cannot, in his contestation of the demand complain of such service unless he shows where his domicile is.

Deslongchamps v. Davies, 8 Que. P.R. 386 (Mathieu, J.).

-Curator-Property of third parties-Intervention.]-The cession de biens does not confer on the curator any right to possession of property belonging to third parties who may revendicate them on summary application to the Judge. The curator only represents the creditors in matters affecting the property of the insolvent; in exercising the rights of a single creditor for the latter's benefit only, in respect to property of a third party he exceeds his powers. Movable effects sold on condition that the property therein should pass only on payment of the whole purchase money can be revendicated by the vendor from the purchaser, or the curator apter, if part of the price has not been paid.

O'Cain v. Domina, 8 Que. P.R. 172 (Ct. Rev.).

-Demand-Nature of debt.]-A person who carries on a trade (e.g., dressing skins for gloves) in which he uses material belonging to another which he does not buy in order to re-sell, is not a trader (commercant) within the meaning of paragraph Art. 853, C.C.P. He is not, therefore, obliged to comply with a demand made on him for an assignment (cession de biens). The depositor is not the creditor of the dépositaire for the value of the deposit within the sense of the same article. Therefore, a debt which does not amount to $200 joined with a claim of this nature does not give the right to make a demand for a cession de biens.

Guimont v. Damphousse, Q.R. 30 S.C. 358 (Ct. Rev.).

Demand—Deposit of declaration and statement.] - A demand of assignment (cession de biens) on a commercial firm, not followed by deposit by the latter of the declaration and statement required by Art. 859, C.C.P., or by any other procedure, does not constitute a state of insolvency so as to cause a dissolution of the partnership. A commercial firm dissolved by insolvency continues to exist as a fictitious person and can act as such for the purposes of its liquidation. In either case the firm sued may exercise the recourse en garantie which it may have against third parties.

-Contracts in fraud of creditors-Action brought more than a year after contract-Knowledge obtained by creditor within the year.]-On the trial of a contested action pauliana brought more than a year after the contract impeached was made, but in which the plaintiff alleges that he only obtained knowledge of it within the preceding year, the burden of proof is not on the plaintiff to establish the negative proresition that he did not know of it sooner, but on the contesting defendant to show affirmatively that he did.

-Abandonment for benefit of creditors-Dividend sheet—Funds to meet privileged claim—Conditional order.]—(1) The lessor who purchases the rights under the lease of his insolvent lessee, without prejudice to any claim for rental to which he may be legally entitied, has a right to be collocated by privilege out of the proceeds of the movable property garnishing the leased premises for a proportion of rental for the current year corresponding to the part of it elapsed at the date of his purchase. (2) When on the contestation of a dividend sheet prepared by the curator to abandoned property, by a creditor who claims and has the right to be collocated by privilege out of special proceeds or a special fund, it does not appear whether the curator has in hands an amount sufficient to cover the claim, the Court will maintain the contestation nevertheless, and make a conditional order accordingly.

Imperial Laundry Co. v. Hurtubise, 8 Que. P.R. 209.

-Avoidance of donation made in fraud of creditors-Insolvency of donor.]-A donation of property can only be avoided in an action pauliana, upon clear evidence that the donor became thereby insolvent. When therefore the latter retains in his hands immovable property purchased for a price of $7,000 on which he has paid $2,000, the vendor to whom the balance of $5,000 is due has no action to annul a donation made by his debtor to his son of his other homestead property. Laporte v. Bernard, 15 Que. K.B. 243.

-Deposit to guarantee dividend-Special purpose—Payment by curator of employees.]—The contract by deposit gives rise to the obligation that the depositee will not divert the sum from the purpose for which the deposit was made. There-fore, the deposit with the curator to an insolvent estate as a guarantee that the liquidation will produce a specified dividend cannot be applied to any other purpose without the consent of the depositor and the curator cannot use it as forming part of the assets of the estate. The curators under an assignment for winding up a company can employ and pay, out of the property they have to administer, per-sons to do work necessary and useful in the interest of the creditors.

The sheriff's sale was set aside and M. then abandoned the property to the curator of the estate and filed a claim, as a privileged creditor, for necessary and useful expenses incurred by him in preserving the property for the general benefit of the mass of e creditors, including therein charge for moneys paid as premiums on policies of fire insurance effected in his own name during the time he had held possession:-Held, that, in the absence of evidence to show that such insurances had been so effected otherwise than for his own exclusive interest, he could not be collocated by special privilege, on the distribution of the proceeds of the estate, for the amount of the premiums. When the appeal first came on for hearing upon inscription ex parte, on suggestion by one of the creditors, not made a party to the appeal, the Court ordered the postponement of the hearing in order that all interested parties might be notified.

39 Can. S.C.R. 318.

-Abandonment of property-Distribution of proceeds of real estate.]—(1) A judgment of distribution of the proceeds of the real estate of an insolvent, prepared by the prothonotary in conformity with Art. 879 C.P. as amended by 61 Vict. c. 47, is, notwithstanding Art. 890 C.P., appealable to the Court of King's Bench. (2) The transferee of a hypothecary creditor whose claim is mentioned in the certificate of hypothecs, has, although such transfer was secured after the sale of the property by the sheriff, a prima facie right of appeal from the judgment of distribution. (3) The fact of the appellant having allowed the sheriff to distribute the moneys in his hands does not constitute an acquiescence in the judgment of distribution. (4) If security is given within five days from the filing of the inscription in appeal the appellant may, such security being contested, give additional security to the respondent and the appeal will not be quashed by reason of the insufficiency of the first security or of the lateness or the second, no objection being made to the sufficiency of the latter. (5) The party who appeals from the judgment of distribution of the proceeds of the real estate of an insolvent must give notice of appeal to all parties collocated and not only to the curator, and the Court will, on motion of the latter to quash the appeal, give the appellant delay in which to serve the inscription in appeal upon the other parties to the judgment of distribution or desist from his appeal as regards the collocations in favour of one or more parties.

Bosquet v. Henderson, 9 Que. P.R. 321.

-Curator resigning unconditionally-Petition to get books of insolvent estate.]-If the unconditional resignation of a curator to an insolvent estate has been accepted by the Court, he ceased to be subject to the summary jurisdiction of a Judge of this Court from the moment the judgment was rendered accepting such resignation; a petition asking that he be ordered to hand over to the new curator all the books, papers and documents of the estate will be dismissed.

Lamoureux v. Gibson, 9 Que. P.R. 211.

—Demand of abandonment—Suspension of payments.]—Held, the fact that a trader is temporarily embarrassed in his business, and when his assets greatly exceed all his direct and indirect liabilities, is not a conclusive proof that he has ceased his payments, and a demand of abandonment of property against him will be rejected with costs

-Clerical error - Change of a debtor's name.]-(1) The curator to an insolvent trader has no right or quality to ask that a clerical error, in the bilan be cor-rected; such error might only be corrected at the request of the insolvent alone, but not of the curator. (2) A petition to be allowed to change the name of a debtor of the insolvent in the bilan is useless, the books and deeds showing clearly the name of the debtor whom the curator may sue.

Cleary v. Stevenson, 10 Que. P.R. 176.

-Contested claim-Order against curator -Production of deeds and inventory-Al-legation of fraud.]—The petition of an insolvent for an order requiring the curator to bring into Court the documents in his possession respecting the conveyance of property of the estate, the inventory of said property and the moneys produced by the sale will not be granted if a contested claim has not been passed upon by the Court. The demand of the petition against the vendor and purchaser of the assets that the proceeds of the sale shall be paid to the curator only will also be rejected. If fraud and bad faith are alleged against the vendor and purchaser the proceeding should be by action to annul the sale and not by petition.

-Preference-Confession of judgment-Assignment of book debts-Pressure-Collusion—Presumption of fraudulent intent—Commencement of suit—Act. 58 Vict. c. 6.] The defendant in consideration of a promise by a trader to pay to the defendant a sum of money on account of his indebtedness within a given time or to give security, and believing the trader to be solvent, gave him on credit a further supply of goods. Subsequently the trader becoming insolvent announced the fact to his creditors. The defendant thereupon reminded the trader of his promise to him, and urged and induced him to give a confession of judgment for the amount of his indebtedness to the defendant, and to execute an assignment of his book debts to him:—Held, that the confession of judg-ment having been obtained by pressure, and without collusion, was not within s. 1 of the Act, 58 Viet. c. 6, and that the assignment of book debts having been obtained by pressure was not within s. 2 of the Act. The presumption created by s. 2 (a) of the Act does not arise where the sixty days therein mentioned have expired at the date the writ of summons in the suit is sent to the sheriff for service, though the sixty days had not expired at the date of the teste of the writ.

—Assignment for benefit of creditors— Execution after time provided in deed.]— This was a proceeding by originating summons to determine the rights of certain creditors who executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors after the expiration of the time provided in the deed, but before any dividend was paid. Some of the creditors had not learned of the assignment until after the time had elapsed; others had sent instructions and power of attorney to execute within the time, but the same miscarried, and the execution did not take place until after the time had elapsed. The assignment contained no release:—Held, on the authority of Whitmore v. Turquand, 3 D.F. & J. 107; Haliburton v. DeWolfe, 1 N.S.D. 12; and Douglas v. Samson, 1 N.B. Eq. 137, that the creditors who executed after the expiration of the time limited in the assignment but before payment of a dividend were entitled to participate pari passu with the creditors who executed within the period. Held, also, following Gunn v. Adams, 8 C.L.J., 211, that the costs of all parties should be paid out of the estate.

-Bill of sale-Assignment within 60 days -Presumption of insolvency-Evidence to rebut.]-R. was indebted to the plaintiff F. for an overdue draft which fell due in May, 1901. On August 15th, 1901, F. went to R.'s place of business and bought from him a quantity of stoves. A memorandum of the sale was drawn up showing the number of stoves purchased, the prices and the terms of sale. R. agreed to give F. credit for the amount of the purchase, on contra account, and to hold the stoves subject to the order of F. and to deliver them either at Dartmouth or Halifax free of charge. In September following R. made an assignment under the Assignments Acts to the defendant F., the official assignee, for the general benefit of creditors, under which defendant took possession of and sold the stock of R., including a portion of the goods sold to plaintiff. To an action by F. for the conversion of the goods defendant pleaded (1) that the inventory and receipt given by R. to F. were a bill of sale, and within the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act, R.S. 1900 c. 142, and not having been filed in accordance with the provisions of the Act were void. (2) That R. at the time of the transfer to F. was insolvent and that the transfer was void under the terms of the Assignments Acts, R.S. 1900 c. 145:-Held, (1) The inventory and receipt operated as an absolute bill of sale; that they were not intended to operate as a security for the debts but as an absolute transfer of the title. (2) As the inventory and receipt enumerated the articles sold and the prices and the terms of sale, they did away with any objection under the Statute of Frauds in respect to absence of part delivery. (3) In the absence of evidence of knowledge on the part of F. that R. was insolvent or unable to meet his liabilities; and in the absence of evidence that R was as a matter of fact insolvent at the time of the transaction, apart from the fact that the assignment to defendant was made within a month afterwards, the transaction was not one that offended against the terms of the Assignment Act, R.S. c. 145. (4) The provisions of the Act (c. 145. s. 4), which made an assignment for the benefit of creditors within 60 days pre-sumptively given with intent unjustly to prefer, must be read in connection with previous sections requiring insolvency at the date of the transaction to be established, and moreover only raised a presumption which could be rebutted. (5) The conduct of F. in endeavouring at the time to sell other goods to R. and in perability on the part of R. to meet his debts. (6) The word "insolvent" in the Nova Scotia Act was not to be read differently from the word "debtor" in the corresponding section of the Ontario Act.

-Preference-Evidence of pressure-Presumption-Levy under execution-Held an 'action or proceeding' to impeach or set aside.] - Under the provisions of R.S.N.S. (1900) c. 145, s. 4. (1) "Every transfer of property made by an insolvent person-(a) with intent to defeat, hinder, delay or prejudice his creditors, or any one or more of them; or, (b) to or for a creditor with intent to give such creditor an unjust preference over the other creditors of such insolvent person, or over any one or more of such creditors, shall, as against the creditor or creditors injured, delayed, prejudiced or postponed, be utterly void. (2) If any such transfer to or for a creditor has the effect of giving such creditor a preference over the other creditors of such insolvent person, or over any one or more of them, such transfer shall,—(a) in and with respect to any action or proceeding which is brought, had or taken, to impeach or set aside such transfer, within sixty days after the giving of the same, be presumed to have been made with intent to give such creditor an unjust preference as aforesaid, and to be an unjust preference, whether such transfer was made voluntarily or under pressure. In an action by plaintiff company against the sheriff of the County of Cape Breton, for the conversion of goods levied upon by defendant under executions issued on judgments recovered against R. plaintiffs' title to the goods depended upon a bill of sale from R. The evidence showing that R. was an insolvent person, and the effect of the giving of the bill of sale being to give plaintiffs a pre-ference over the other creditors of R. and the levy made by defendant having been made within sixty days from the giving of the bill of sale:—Held, that the levy was "an action or proceeding" had or taken to set aside the transfer, within the meaning of the Act, and that, under the provisions of sub-s. (2) the bil! of sale must be presumed to have been made with intent to give an unjust preference, and to be such preference, whether made voluntarily or under pressure, and that, as against the creditors represented by defendant, it was utterly void.

—A plea that the defendants were adjudged bankrupt, and a certificate of discharge granted in England, under the Bankruptey Act. 1883, is a good answer to an action for a debt provable against the defendants in bankruptey brought in New Brunswick by the subject of a foreign state who had never resided or been domiciled within British dominions. Nicholson v. Baird, N.B. Eq. Cases 195, considered. Ford v. Stewart. 55 N.B.R. 50s.

—Assignment—Setting aside—Delay in commencing proceedings—Right to account ing.]-In an equitable action to set aside a deed of assignment containing a preference in favour of the assignee, as fraudulent and void against creditors under the Statute of Elizabeth, the action was not commenced until nearly eight years after the making of the deed, and was not brought to trial until nearly fifteen years after the date of the assignment, no explanation being given of the cause of de-lay, and the assignee having died in the meantime:-Held, that the Court, in view of the long delay, unexplained, must regard the proceedings with suspicion, and would not lend its aid to the action without some clear and reasonable explanation. Held, also, that, under the circumstances stated, the assignee being dead, the assignor would not be heard to say that the transaction, as between him and the assignee, was a fraud, and a scheme to defeat other creditors. Held, that plaintiff, not being a party to the deed of assignment, was not entitled to an accounting for what was done under it. Peppet v. McDonald, 38 N.S.R. 540.

-Advance under agreement to give bill of sale-Delay-Suit by creditors.]-A trader when in insolvent circumstances to the knowledge of himself and the defendants executed to them a bill of sale of his stock in trade, pursuant to an agreement made with them nearly four years previously to give it whenever required, the advancing to him upon the faith of the agreement a sum of money for use in his business and giving him a line of credit. Shortly after executing the bill of sale he made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors under c. 141, C.S. 1903:-Held, in a suit by the assignee, that the giving and filing of the bill of sale having been postponed until the debtor's insolvency in order to prevent the destruction of his credit, the agreement was a fraud upon the other creditors, and that the bill of sale should be set aside. Held, also, that the delivery of the stock in trade by the trader-to the defendants, subsequently to the execution of the bill of sale, did not assist their title; s. 2 of c. 141 C.S. 1903, applying. A preferential transaction falling within the provisions of c. 141 C.S. 1903, may be impeached at the instance of creditors, where the debtor has not made an assignment. Where, after the commencement of a suit by creditors to set aside a bill of sale, as constituting a fraudulent preference under c. 141 C.S. 1903, the grantor made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, the assignee was added as a plaintiff.

Tooke Brothers v. Brock & Patterson, 3 N.B. Eq. 496.

—Insolvency—Statutory presumption—Rebuttal—Evidence of pressure]—S. 2 (3) of the Assignments and Preferences Act, c. 141 C.S. 1903, provides that in a suit brought within sixty days from the making of a transfer of property, to have it set side, it shall be presumed that it was made with intent to give the preferred creditor an unjust preference, and to be such, whether made voluntarily or under pressure:—Held, that the presumption is rebuttable but that evidence of pressure is not admissible for the purpose.

Edgett v. Steeves, 3 N.B. Eq. 404.

--Creditors' deed—Balance in hands of trustee—Repayment to debtor—Collection of debts due estate-Negligence of trustce.]-A trustee under a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors ordered to pay to the debtor balance of estate in his hands, where eighteen years had elapsed from the time of the assignment, though but two creditors had executed the deed, it not appearing that other creditors, if there were any, had ever shown an intention of assenting to the deed and the Court being of opinion that they would now be precluded from doing so. A trustee under a deed for the benefit of creditors may employ an attorney to collect debts due the estate. Where an attorney employed for the purpose by a trustee under an assignment for the benefit of creditors collected $211.38 of $1,028.45 book debts due the estate, and it appeared that mostly all of them were for small amounts, many being for less than a dollar, and that one of the reasons for making the assignment was the difficulty experienced by the assignor in collecting even good debts, it was held that the trustee should not be charged with a sum as for debts that he should have got in. The finding of a referee upon questions of fact depending upon evidence taken viva voce before him will not be disregarded except in case of manifest error.

-Assignment of partnership assets only for benefit of creditors.]-An assignment by a firm for benefit of creditors which was construed by the Court to be an assignment of partnership assets only, may be a good and valid assignment within the meaning of the Creditors' Trust Deeds Act of British Columbia.

Eastman v. Pemberton, 7 B.C.R. 459.

-Assignment-Preference for one month's wages.]-The preference given by the B.C. Creditors' Trust Deeds Act, 1901, for wages of persons in assignor's employ at time of assignment, or "within one month before," does not include a workman whose last day of employment was 26th of October when the assignment was made on the 27th November following. Re Clayoquet Co., 9 B.C.R 80.

-Parties to action.]-An insolvent debtor who has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors is neither a necessary nor a proper party to an action by the assignee to set aside a fraudulent preference given by him.

Schwartz v. Winkler, 14 Man. R. 197.

- Fraudulent preference — Assignments Act, R.S.M., c. 7, s. 33-63 and 64 Vict. (M.), c. 3, s. 1—Trust assignment made to a creditor-Pressure-Creditor's knowledge of the debtor's insolvency.]-Under s. 33 of The Assignments Act, RS.M., c. 7, a mortgage given by a debtor to a creditor to secure his claim may be set aside as a preference although it has been obtained by pressure, and was given by the debtor without any active desire to prefer the mortgagee to his other creditors, if the debtor knew or ought to have known that such would be the result of giving the mortgage. When an assignment in trust for creditors is made to one of the creditors of the assignor, the assignee may under s. 39 of the Act bring an action to set aside a fraudulent preference without showing the acceptance of the benefit of the assignment by any other creditor or ecmmunication of it to any other. An assignment of property made by a debtor for the benefit of his creditors generally is, by virtue of s. 2 (a) of the Act, an "assignment under this Act" although the description of the property may not be in the words set forth in s. 3 or in words to the like effect:-Held, also, following Stephens v. McArthur (1890), 6 M.R. 496, notwithstanding the decisions of the Ontario Court of Appeal in Johnson v. Hope (1893, 17 A.R. 10, and Ashley v. Brown (1890), 17 A.R. 500, that it is not necessary to show notice to the transferee of the debtor's insolvent condition; but that, in any case, if the transferee had such a knowledge of the debtor's financial rosition that an ordinary business man would conclude from it that the debtor was unable to meet his liabilities, constructive notice of the insolvency should be imputed to him. National Bank of Australia v. Morris, [1892] A.C. 287, followed. Swartz v. Winkler, 13 Man. R. 493 (Killam, C.J.).

-Fraudulent preference-Assignments Act -Motive actuating debtor in giving security to preferred creditor-Pressure.]-It appeared that the dominant motive of the debtor in giving the impeached security was to make an arrangement for continuing his business. The defendant induced him to give it by promises of assistance in carrying him along and in arranging with other creditors, although not in any definite way enforceable in a court of law; -Held, that under s. 33 of The Assignments Act, R.S.M., c. 7, as amended by 63 and 64 Vict. c. 3, s. 1, there must still be the intent on the part of the debtor to prefer the particular creditor in order to set aside the impeached conveyance; and, while the effect may be to place that creditor in a more advantageous position than other creditors, and the debtor may recognize at the time that such will be the effect, yet, if he gave it for some other purpose, or in the hope that he might thus be enabled to avoid insolvency, it cannot be considered that he gave it with intent to give a preference, and the security should stand. Stephens v. McArthur, 19 S.C.R. 446; New Prance and Gerrards' Trustee v. Hunting (1897), 2 Q.B. 19; S.C. sub. nom. Sharp v. Jackson (1899), A.C. 419; Lawson v. McGeoch, 20 A.R. 464; Armstrong v. Johnson, 32 O.R. 35, followed. Although the amending Act declares that a prima facie presumption of an intent to prefer is to arise from the effect of such a transaction, this does not justify the Court in looking only to the effect and refusing to attach any weight to the proved facts as to the actual intent. The presumption being only prima facie, may be rebutted by evidence. Held, also, that the Court need not determine whether the defendant was acting bona fide or really anticipated that the other creditors could be arranged with and the business continued, it being only the debtor's mental attitude that should be considered. Richards, J., dissented, on the ground that the security was obtained by deceitful representations of the defendant's agent, and should be set aside on that ground. Codville v. Frazer, 14 Man. R. 12.

- Bill of sale to trustee for particular creditors — Assignments Act, 1906.]—The defendant, a trader, on the 11th August, 1909, executed a bill of sale of certain described goods, etc., in favour of N., who resided out of the province, and was not an official assignee therefor. It was recited in the instrument that the defendant was indebted to certain creditors, and had agreed to transfer the property for the purpose of having it sold and the proceeds distributed by N. among the creditors. At the same time an agreement between the defendant and N. was executed, in which it was expressly declared that N. was trustee, as to all the property assigned to him, for the creditors whose names were set out in the schedule to the bill of sale. The plaintiffs were judgment creditors of the defendant, and their name was not in the schedule:—Held, upon an interpleader application by a sheriff who had seized, under the plaintiffs' execution, property claimed by N. under the bill of sale, that the bill of sale and agreement did not constitute an assignment for the general benefit of creditors under the Assignments Act, 1906, being for the benefit of a scheduled list of creditors, and not for the benefit of the creditors generally; if it was an assignment, it was for the special benefit of particular creditors. Not being an assignment for the general benefit of creditors for one purpose, it could not be for any other purpose; and, therefore, it could not be void under s. 5 of the Assignments Act, because not made to an official assignee.

The bill of sale and agreement were also attacked by the plaintiffs as constituting a preference under the Assignments Act, and an issue was directed as to that.

- Chattel mortgage - Preference - Fraud - Pressure.] - One Lachlan Galbraith, being in insolvent circumstances, executed certain mortgages in favour of plaintiffs, upon request of their agent. Galbraith swore that he gave the mortgages voluntarily and without pressure being brought to bear:-Held, that the mortgages having been given at the request of the plaintiff's agent, they were given under pressure, and were valid against creditors under the Preferential Assignments Ordinance, that it was immaterial whether or not the mortgages were aware of the insolvency; that plaintiffs being liable on certain acceptances of Galbraith's was a sufficient reason for desiring and obtaining the security of the mortgages, and that the implied undertaking of the plaintiffs to protect Galbraith against any liability on such acceptances was a sufficient consideration to support the mortgages.

64½ and 75 cents on the dollar. The defendant, among a number of other defences, paid the amount representing this difference into court together with costs up to defence. The jury found in answer to certain questions, (1) that the plaintiffs did not receive the 64½ cents in full of their claim; (2) that they did receive it on account of the 75 cents; and (3) that the 64½ cents were not paid on account of the original claim:—Held, that the plaintiff's action on the promissory notes was discharged by the agreement for composition and discharge, although its terms had not been fulfilled.

-Fraudulent preference-Action by creditor to set aside preference—Amendment of statement of claim-Expiration of time limited for suit.]-Action commenced on 2nd November, 1903, to set aside, as a fraudulent preference, an assignment to defendant, dated 5th September, 1903, by one Cockrill, of certain moneys payable under fire insurance policies to secure defendant's claim against Cockrill. No assignment having been made by Cockrill under the Assignments Act, R.S.M., 1902, c. 8, plaintiff alleged in the statement of claim that they brought the action on "behalf of themselves and all other creditors of Cockrill . . . who are willing to join in and contribute towards the payment of the expenses thereof." Section 48 of the Act provides that, when there has been no assignment under the Act, an action to impeach a transaction as a fraudulent preference must be brought "for the benefit of creditors generally, or for the benefit of such creditors as have been injured, delayed or prejudiced," and s. 40 requires that such an action should be brought within sixty days from the time the transaction impeached took place. On 4th December following, plaintiffs amended the statement of claim by adding, after the words first above quoted, the words "and the same is brought for the benefit of the creditors generally of the said debtor." Held, that there was no suit brought for the benefit of the creditors generally, or of such as had been injured, delayed or pre-judiced, to impeach the transaction in question until the amendment of 4th December was made, which was more than sixty days after the date of the impeached transaction; and that this objection was fatal, notwithstanding the provision in s. 48 (b) that, "in case any amendment of the statement of claim be made, the same shall relate back to the commencement of the action for the purpose of the time limited by the 40th section hereof." The right to sue and the relief to be given are created by the statute and must be construed strictly. The amendments referred to in that provision must, in strict construction, be confined to allegations of law or fact upon which the relief is to be founded, and that provision presupposes an action to have been commenced in the form provided within sixty days. On the merits, also, the findings of fact were that the impeached assignment was not a fraudulent preference within the meaning of the Act, as it was only the last of a series of transactions all connected together which should be treated as a whole and, so treated, were not open to attack.

Ferguson v. Bryans, 15 Man. R. 170, (Perdue, J.)

-Sale of goods by insolvent-Bona fides-Fraudulent preference-Interpleader order —Res judicata.]—K., a trader in insolvent circumstances, sold the whole of his stock in trade to D., who immediately took possession on the 2nd January, 1888. A few days afterwards the sheriff seized the goods under executions issued upon judgments obtained, subsequent to the sale, by T. B. & Co. and the Bank of B.C. On the 14th January an order was made for the trial of an interpleader issue between D. and T. B. & Co., and the order provided that no action should be brought against the sheriff for the seizure of the goods. Upon the trial of the interpleader issue in the County Court an order was made barring the claimant D. and declaring the bill of sale to him by K. invalid against creditors, and this judgment was affirmed upon appeal to the Supreme Court of British Columbia in banco, on the 21st March, 1888. On the 11th January, 1888, D. instituted an action against the sheriff claiming damages for wrongfully seizing, converting and selling the plaintiff's goods. An interpleader order was also made in which D. was the claimant and the Bank of B.C. was defendant, but upon the delivery of the judgment in the other issue between D., claimant, and T. B. & Co., defendants, the court rescinded the second interpleader order, and further ordered that D. be forever barred from prosecuting his claim against the sheriff. D. thereupon abandoned his first action against the sheriff, but instituted a new action against him on the 22nd November, 1888, claiming larger damages for the same wrongs complained of in his first action. On the trial of this cause, the jury found that K. had sold the goods with intent to prefer some of his creditors but that D. had purchased in good faith and without knowledge of such intention on the part of the vendor and, thereupon, judgment was ordered to be entered for the plaintiff for the sum of $9,161 and costs. On appeal, the full court of British Columbia reversed this judgment (McCreight, J., dissenting), on the ground that the bill of sale from K. to D. was void under c. 51, R.S.B.C., being an Act respecting the fraudulent preference of creditors by parties in insolvent circumstances; and secondly, that the judgment in the interpleader issue was res judicata. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada:—Held, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, that as the evidence showed the goods had been purchased by D. in good faith for his own benefit, the sale was not void under the statute respecting fraudulent preferences. also, that the judgment on the interpleader issue could not operate as a bar to the present action. Held, further, that. even if such judgment could be set up as a bar, it ought to have been specially pleaded by way of estoppel by a plea setting up in detail all the facts necessary to constitute the estoppel, and that from the evidence in the case, it appeared that no such estoppel could have been established.

-Preferential assignment - Pressure Knowledge of insolvency.]-The effect of the second session of the Yukon ordinance, chapter 38, Consolidated Ordinances, 1902, is to remove the doctrine of pressure in respect to preferential assignments, and, consequently, all assignments made by persons in insolvent circumstances come within the terms of the ordinance. In order to render such an assignment void there must be knowledge of the insolvency on the part of both parties and concurrence of intention to obtain an unlawful preference over the other creditors. Molsons Bank v. Halter (18 Can. S.C.R. 88); Stephens v. McArthur (19 Can. S.C.R. 446); and Gibbons v. Me-Donald (20 Can. S.C.R. 587) referred to.

-Conveyance having effect of defeating creditors.]-The effect of s. 2 C.O. 1898, c. 42, is that any conveyance made by a debtor in insolvent circumstances which has the effect of defeating, delaying, or prejudicing his creditors, is void. Ross v. Pearson, 1. W.L.R. 38.

-Fraudulent preference-Sale of stock to person who assumes liability of insolvent tc creditor.]-A trading firm being indebted to G. in a large amount, and G. being dissatisfied with the payments received and the manner in which the firm carried on its business, but not knowing or having reason to believe that they were unable to meet their liabilities, an arrangement was made and carried out whereby the traders sold their stock in trade to L., and received the price in cash less the amount of G.'s claim, which was assumed by L., G. giving time to L. for payment, and releasing the traders. Within sixty days the trading firm made an assignment to the plaintiff under the Assignments Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 8, for the benefit of creditors generally: -Held, that, as the sale to L was not impeached, the agreement whereby L. was to pay the insolvent's debt to G. could not be set aside as a fraudulent preference under section 41 of the Act; that the effect of it was the same as if L. had paid the full purchase money to the insolvents and they had paid G. in full out of it, and so the case came within the saving clause of the Act, section 44, protecting payments of money, and that there was no assignment or transfer of anything by the insolvents to G. which could be declared fraudulent and void under section 41. Held, also, that the transaction attacked could not be held void under section 45 of the Act, which is limited in its scope to transfers of considerations other than money, such as bills, notes or goods. Quaere, whether, if the plaintiff had been held entitled to the relief asked for, G. would then have had the right, under section 46 of the Act, to have restored to him the claim he had previously held against a surety for the insolvents, it being urged that the discharge of the insolvents discharged the surety also.

Westfall v. Stewart, 13 B C.R. 111.

-- Chattel mortgage--Insolvency-Interpleader-Subrogation.]-In an interpleader issue the plaintiff claimed by virtue of a chattel mortgage from C. the goods seized by the sheriff under the defendants' execution against C. The mortgage was dated the 22nd April, 1909, and was filed on the 1st May, 1909. The sheriff seized on the 10th May, 1909; and the sheriff obtained his summons for interpleader on the 10th June, 1909. C. was insolvent at the date of the mortgage; the moneys secured by it were advanced in November, 1908:—Held, that the mortgage had the effect of giving the plaintiff a preference over the other cred-itors of C., within the meaning of s. 41 of the Assignments Act, and the mortgage was therefore void. The interpleader proceeding was a proceeding to impeach or set aside the mortgage. Cole v. Porteous, 19 A.R. 111, followed. The plaintiff contended that he was entitled to be subrogated to the rights of R., who held a chattel mortgage upon the same property, and whose claim was paid off by C. with the moneys advanced by the plaintiff. Held, that, as R. was not a party to any agreement that the plaintiff should be subrogated, and the payment made by the plaintiff was not made to protect any interest of his own, and was not made by mistake, the doctrine of subrogation had no application. The Queen v. C'Brien, 7 Ex. C.R. 19, followed. Brown v. McLean, 18 O.R. 533, and Abell v. Morrison, 19 O.R. 669, distinguished.

—Assignment for benefit of creditors— Debtor's transfer within sixty days of assignment.]-A few days before making a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors to the plaintiff, W. assigned to his wife, one of the defendants, his interest under an agreement for sale of land, on which he had paid $200, and had erected on the land a building, the money for which was supplied by his wife, on the understanding that she was to have the property. Three months earlier she had entered into an agreement, with the knowledge and consent of W., to transfer this property to S., the other defendant, in consideration of a promissory note for $1,200 made by W. and indorsed by her, the property to be retransferred on payment of the note with interest. At this time all the parties considered that the property was hers. Just before the general assignment, when the vendors under the agreement for sale were pressing for payment, W. made the assignment to his wife, who then assigned to the defendant S., who subsequently paid the balance due to the vendors, and obtained title. In an action to set aside the transactions and make the property available for W.'s debts, it was held by the trial Judge that the transactions were bona fide, but should be set aside under s. 42 of the Assignments Act, because the transfer by W. was made within 60 days before the general assignment:—Held, that the provisions of s. 42 are not wide enough to authorize this result; the section is limited to conveyances made by the debtor, and does not apply to any subsequent conveyance; and an assignee's rights are only such as are conferred by the statute. The most that could be done, therefore, would be to set aside the assignment by W. to his wife, which would be of no effect. Held, also, that, as W. was in effect a trustee for his wife, who had the beneficial interest under the agreement for sale, he was not assigning his own interest, but hers; and, the Statute of Frauds not being pleaded and no amendment having been asked, it was not necessary to conside whether it applied. Judgment of Beek, J., 12 W.L.R. 585, reversed. Smith v. Sugarman, 13 W.L.R. 671.

Costs of execution creditor. |- Execution creditors who have filed their executions in the Land Titles Office have a lien in Saskatchewan for their costs of judgment and execution in precedence of other debts upon an assignment for benefit of creditors.

Re Scribner & Wheeler. 3 Sask. R. 185.

-Fraudulent conveyance—Conveyance made within sixty days before assignment—Concurrence of intent to defraud disproved.]-In an action by an official assignee to set aside a conveyance of land made by one Willie, the insolvent, to the defendant Sugarman within sixty days prior to the assignment, it appeared that Willie's wife had advanced $2,000 to the insolvent towards erection of a building on the land transferred and that it was verbally agreed then or shortly after that the land should be transferred to her as security; subsequently she had endorsed Willie's note in favour of the defendant, and later the defendant had given up the note to her upon her written promise to transfer the land to him as security. The actual transfer did not take place until a date within sixty days of the assignment:-Held, the conveyance was void under the Assignments Act; but it would have been otherwise if the assignment had not been made within sixty days of the transfer, as concurrence of intent to defraud was lacking. Held, also, defendant was entitled to be protected by a charge on the land to the extent of moneys paid by him to discharge certain encumbrances thereon at time of transfer; he was also entitled to a return of the note delivered up to Mrs. Willie, and entitled, as was Mrs. Willie, to rank on the insolvent's estate. Held, further, the plaintiff having offered before action to take the property subject to payment of the encumbrances, he was entitled to costs. Mrs. Willie, who was joined as a party defendant, was held to have been improperly joined and plaintiff was directed to pay additional costs occa-sioned by reason of her having been joined.

-Assets of foreign insolvent-Appointment of receiver by foreign court—Service out-side of the jurisdiction.]—(1) The appointment by a court of a foreign state of a receiver of the assets of an insolvent cor-poration domiciled in such state does not necessarily effect a transfer to such receiver of assets of such corporation in Manitoba, and, upon the plaintiffs showing that a resident of Manitoba was indebted to such corporation in a sum exceeding $200, which could be garnished, they were held entitled, under Rule 202 of the King's Bench Act, to an order allowing service of the statement of claim outside the jurisdiction. Brand v. Green, (1903), 13 M.R. 101, distinguished. (2) A motion for the allowance of service of a statement of claim out of the jurisdiction is an interlocutory and not a final motion, and, under Rule 507 of the King's Bench Act, an affidavit in support making statements on information and belief with the grounds thereof is sufficient.

Bank of Nova Scotia v. Booth, 19 Man. R. 471.

-Assignment for benefit of creditors-Executions registered against insolvent-Removal of executions. J-B. made an assignment for the benefit of creditors to one C., under the provisions of the Act respecting Assignments and Preferences. At the time of the assignment and subsequently thereto, but before the assignee applied for transmission to him of the land of the insolvent, some eighteen executions were registered in the land titles office. On transmission of the land to the assignee, the registrar endorsed upon the assignee's title memoranda of these executions. It appeared that the costs of the execution creditors had been paid. The assignee applied to the registrar to cancel these endorsements, which the registrar refused to do, and in this action he was sustained by the inspector. From this decision the assignee appealed:-Held, that by virtue of s. 8 of the Act respecting Assignments and Preferences the rights of execution creditors are ex-pressly subordinated to those of the assignee, save only as to costs, and the execution creditors having, save as to costs, which are proved to have been paid, no charge on the land, the registrar was not justified in endorsing a memorandum charging the land with such executions on transmission to the assignee. (2) That the registrar, on an assignment being proved, has jurisdiction to issue a title to the assignee free from executions, notwithstanding the provisions of s 129 of the Land Titles Act, inasmuch as the Legislature has expressly declared that, after assignment, the assignment takes priority to all such executions. Re E. J. Brooks, 2 Sask. R. 504.

-Preferential assignment-Knowledge of insolvency.]-Defendants, just prior to the assignment for the benefit of creditors by a debtor of the defendants, secured an order from the debtor for payment to them of a portion of the moneys payable on the sale of his business, of which they subsequently obtained payment. The debtor having shortly afterwards made an assignment to the plaintiff for the benefit of his creditors. the assignee brought an action to secure the return of the money so paid. It appeared that the defendants had knowledge of the insolvent condition of the debtor at the time of the giving of the order. The debtor was not available at the trial to give evidence, and no direct evidence of insolvency could be given. It appeared, however, that for some time prior to the assignment he had been unable to pay his debts in full, and the assignee showed that the liabilities exceeded the assets which had come into his hands:-Helq, that the evidence was sufficient to establish that the debtor was un-

Jagger v. Turner, 2 Sask. R. 476.

-Deed of land-Priority as between unregistered equitable charge and subsequent registered conveyance — Assignments Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 8—Lien Notes Act, R.S.M. 1902. c. 99.1-The defendant Burnett, having executed an agreement under seal creating an equitable lien or charge on his farm land in favor of the plaintiffs for the price of certain machinery which aggre-ment could not, under section 4 of the Lien Notes Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 99, be registered, subsequently executed a deed of assignment to the defendant Haverson as trustee for creditors. As regards Burnett's lands, the wording of the assignment was as follows: "The said debtor according to his estate and interest therein and as fully and effectually as he lawfully can or may . . by these presents doth hereby grant . . . unto the said trustee . . . all the real estate, lands, tenements, and hereditaments of the said debtor . . . of or to which he may have any estate, right, title or interest of any kind or description with the appurten-ances." This assignment was made and duly registered shortly after the commencement of this action:-Held, that such deed purported to deal only with such estate or interest in the land as the assignor then had and did not operate or assume to operate so as to convey the land free from the equitable charge or lien previously given to the plaintiffs. Sections 6 and 7 of the Assignments Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 8, do not help the assignee, as the assignment, was not in the words, or to the like effect of the words given in section 6, and section 7 provides only that every assignment . . . shall vest the estate "thereby assigned" in the assignee, and does not assume to give the deed any larger effect in the way of passing property than on its face it purports to have. The only interest, therefore, that passed to the assignee being what was left after the plaintiff's equitable charge should be satisfied, neither section 72 of the Registry Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 150, nor section 7 of the Lien Notes Act can have any application, as they only apply to invalidate an unregistered instrument as against a registered instrument that affects the same estate or interest in lands.

Canadian Port Huron Co. v. Burnett, 17 Man. R. 55.

—Fraudulent or preferential transfer— Substance of transaction—Vendor's lien.] —Where a transaction is attacked as void under the Assignments Act 7 Edw. VII. (Alberta) c. 6, the substantial effect rather than the mere form of the transaction should be considered. A vendor's lien comes into existence and continues, by operation of law, unless there is an intention on the part of the vendor to the contrary. The presumption is in favor of the lien—and the fact that part of the purchase money is secured by mortgage, and the balance covered by a promissory note, is not conclusive of intention to waive the lien.

High River Meat Market v. Routledge, 1 Alta. R. 405.

-Assignments Act, 7 Edw. VII. (Alberta) c. 6-Transactions completed prior to Act coming into force—Unlawful preference— Creditors' action.]-So far as it affects transactions completed before its coming into force, the Assignments Act is not retrospective; but, semble, that s. 49, so far as it gives a right of action to the assignee, to the exclusion of creditors, is retrospective, but this only applies to transactions "in fraud of creditors" or "in violation of this Act."-Hence where an assignee under the Act brought an action to set aside certain transactions between the assignor and one of his creditors, completed prior to the Act coming into force, on statutory grounds:-Held, that fraud not having been shown, the plaintiff's action must fail. A mortgage of land under the Land Titles Act, immediately upon its execution constitutes an effective security as binding as between the parties as if registered. The success of a creditors' action, attacking a transaction as a preference, would depend on proof of knowledge of the debtor's insolvency on the part of both parties, and the concurrence of intention to create an unlawful preference.

Horne v. Galt. 1. Alta. R. 392.

-Priorities as between assignee for benefit of creditors and execution creditors.]-Sec. 8 of the Assessment Act, Stat. of Alberta, 1907, c. 6, is not retroactive so as to affect the rights of execution creditors whose writs were in the hands of the sheriff for execution prior to the passing of the Act. Delivery of a writ of execution to the sheriff for execution creates a lien, or "charge," on the property of the execution debtor in favor of the execution creditor; and seizure, though creating a special property in the sheriff, does not enlarge the lien of the execution creditor. Payment of moneys into Court by arrangement between the sheriff, the execution creditor and the assignee, does not affect the lien of the execution creditor; the proceeds stand in the place of the goods.

Deering v. Gibbon, 1 Alta. R. 7.

—Assignment for benefit of creditors—Application to vacate registration of execution issued after assignment.]—A Judge in Chambers, on an application to vacate the registration of an execution against lands issued and registered subsequent to an assignment for benefit of creditors in the absence of evidence that the particular parcel of land affected passed under the assignment and was not reserved as a legal exemption has no jurisdiction to make such order.

Assignments and Preferences Act-Action to set aside chattel mortgage-Intent to obtain preference-Action brought by simple contract creditor.]—Defendant Hourie, being in insolvent circumstances, gave a chattel mortgage to the defendant bank to secure $500 past indebtedness and $250 a present advance. The manager of the defendant bank was well acquainted with the defendant Hourie's circumstances, and must have known him to be insolvent. A simple contract creditor of Hourie brought an action to set aside the mortgage as void under the Assignments and Preferences Act:—Held, that in order to render a conveyance void under the provisions of s. 39 of the Assignments Act, there must be knowledge of the insolvency on the part of both parties and concurrence of intent to obtain an unlawful preference over other creditors. (2) That the chattel mortgage attacked having been given and taken with knowledge of the insolvency of the mortgagor, was as to the past indebtedness of $500 void, but was valid as to the advance of $250, which, although not actually advanced until a few days after the mortgage was given, was intended to be a present advance on the security of the mortgage. (3) That under the Assignments Act any creditor may maintain an action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance under the provisions of the Act, whether his claim has been reduced to judgment or not.

—Consent of majority of creditors obtained subsequent to execution of assignment.]
—Sec. 45 provides that "nothing in the last preceding sections shall apply to any assignment made to an official assignee or with the consent of the majority of the creditors... computed according to the provisions of the twenty-second section of this Act to any other person resident within the province, etc., etc." Section 5 provides, "Every assignment for the general benefit of creditors... not made to an official assignee nor to some other person resident of the province, with the consent of the proportion of the creditors prescribed by the forty-fifth section of this Act, shall be absolutely null and void to all intents and purposes":—Held, that it is essential to the validity of such last mentioned assignment that the consent of the majority of the creditors should be given prior to or concurrent with the execution of the assignment, and that it is not sufficient that the consent of the requisite number of creditors has been subsequently attained. Held, that since the appellants in this case could gain nothing by attacking the assignment, and their objection to it was purely technical without any substantial merit, they were not entitled to costs either of the appeal or of the interpleader proceedings. The Ontario Assignment Act distinguished.

Fairchild Company v. Myrum, 1 Alta. R.

-Settlement with creditors-Discharge of insolvent—Acceptance by creditor of amount less than debt—Cheque marked "in full."]—Defendants, being insolvent, made an arrangement with their creditors for sale of their assets and distribution of the proceeds among their creditors rateably. The trustee appointed by the creditors wrote the plaintiffs asking them to send in their claim, which was done, and, in due course, the trustee sent plaintiffs a cheque for their share of the amount available, and asked an acknowledgment of the receipt of same "in full of account," the cheque also being marked "in full claim R. A. Copeland & Co." Plaintiffs struck out the words on the cheque. and notified the trustee that they would not accept the amount in full, but retained the cheque. In action for the balance of the claim, the defendants pleaded acceptance of the amount paid in full:—Held, (1) that, in order to establish accord and satisfaction of a debt by a payment of less than the amount due, it must be shown that such payment was made in pursuance of an agreement for that purpose or was so accepted by the creditor, and that there was no evidence that the payment in question was so made or accepted. (2) That, following Day v. McLea (1889), 22 Q.B. 610, the keeping of a cheque marked "in full" is not conclusive evidence of accord and satisfaction, but it may be shown that, as a matter of fact, the creditor did not accept the cheque in full.

McPherson v. Copeland, 1 Sask. R. 519.

—Assignment for creditors—Lien of execution creditor for costs.]—The lien of an execution creditor for his costs given by s. 11 of the Executions Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 58, when the writ of fieri facias is placed in the sheriff's hands is not taken away by sec. 8 of the Assignments Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 8, upon the making of an assignment for the benefit of creditors under said Act; but, on the contrary, such lien is expressly recognized in both sees. 8 and 9 of the Act. Thordarson v. Jones, 18 Man. R. 223.

Action for deceit - Assignments Act. R.S.M.]-Plaintiff sued for damages for deceit upon the sale of defendant to him of a business fraudulently represented to of much greater value than it was. Defendant counterclaimed for the balance of the purchase money. After the trial but before judgment plaintiff made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors under the Assignments Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 8, and the assignee was added as a co-plaintiff. In giving judgment the trial Judge awarded $750 damages to the plaintiff with the costs of the action, but he found also that the defendant was entitled to recover a much larger sum on his counterclaim which was not disputed. The Judge also ordered a set-off and that judgment be entered for defendant for the balance and refused to allow the plaintiff's solicitor any lien for costs:-Held, on appeal, (1) The plaintiff's claim against the defendant did not pass to the assignee by virtue of the Assignments Act, not being covered by any of the expressions, "real and personal estate, rights, property, credits and effects," used in s. 6 of the Act, and being something which could not be reached by creditors under ordinary legal proceedings. (2) Such a right of action is not assignable under sub-s. (e) of s. 39 of the King's Bench Act. Blair v. Asseltine (1893), 15 P.R. 211, and McCormick v. Toronto Railway Co. (1906), 13 O.L.R. 656, followed. (3) Even if the plaintiff's claim had been validly transferred to the assignee, the defendant would be entitled to maintain his counterclaim and to have the plaintiff's damages paid by deducting them from it, as both claim and counterclaim rose out of the same transaction, and Rule 293 of the King's Bench Act expressly provides that the Judge may order such set-off to be made. (4) The discretion of the Judge in making such order should not be interfered with, although the effect was to deprive the plaintiff's solicitor of any lien of costs on the amount awarded to his client whether for damages

BARBERS.

Barbers' Association — Annual fee — Breach of by-law—Penalty.]—By its charter the plaintiff association has the power to impose by by-law payment by its members of an annual fee and also a fine for every infraction of the by-laws. In virtue of these powers a by-law was passed fixing the annual fee of members at $2.00 and imposing a fine of $10.00 for every infraction. The defendant took out his license and paid the fee for one year, but afterwards carried on his business for three years without further payment:—Held, that under these circumstances the Association could only recover from the defendant the amount of the fine that he had incurred by his breach of the by-laws and not the arrears due for fees.

Barbers' Association of Quebec v. Charlebois, Q.R. 23 S.C. 287 (Cir. Ct.).

BASTARDY.

Filiation—Inquiry into paternity—Oral evidence.]—On the inquiry into the paternity of a natural child oral evidence in corroboration will be admitted if the defendant, when interrogated sur faits et articles or as a witness, makes admission by his answers of facts, which constitute presumptions or indications sufficiently strong to make probable the allegation that he has had carnal relations with the mother of the child and that he is the father; and in this case the facts admitted by the defendant constitute a series, or succession, of circumstances which, taken tegether, give rise to a strong presumption that the defendant has had such relations with the mother at the date of the conception of the child and nearly to the time of its birth. The facts so admitted became then "ascertained facts" within the meaning of Art. 232 C.C. and sufficient to allow of corroborative oral evidence of the paternity attributed to the defendant. The question whether the facts admitted constitute presumptions or indications sufficiently strong to allow of such evidence is for the appreciation of the Court. Arts. 232-4 and 241 C.C., which modify the mode of proof in an inquiry into paternity adopted up to the date when the Code came into force, leave unchanged what, up to that time, had been considered as constituting strong presumptions or indications of a nature to render probable the fact of carnal relations between the mother and imputed father of the child and, consequently, that of the paternity attributed to the defendant. Although the sole corroborative evidence in the case may be that given by the mother, plaintiff in her capacity of tutrix of her child, who swears positively that the defendant is its father, while on his side the defendant swears no less strongly that he never had carnal relations with the plaintiff, yet the uncontested fact of the child's birth, joined with the admissions of the defendant when examined as a witness, gives to the evidence of the plaintiff a preponderating force sufficient to justify the judgment rendered in her favor. In the absence of evidence to contradict that of the plaintiff, evidence of the identity of 'he child of which she is the mother, and the paternity of which she attributes to the defendant, constitutes sufficient proof and that notwithstanding the fact that, in the certificate of baptism the child is represented as being 'born of unknown parents.'

Common betting house—Betting booth—
Recourse of incorporated association.]—
(1) A moveable booth used on the race-course of an incorporated racing association for the purpose of making bets is an "office" or "place" used for betting between persons resorting thereto as defined in section 227 of the Revised Criminal Code, and the bookmaker using it is properly convicted of keeping a common betting house. (2) Sub-s. 2 of s. 235 of the Revised Criminal Code, which exempts from the provisions of the main section (dealing with the recording or registering of bets, etc.) bets made on the race-course of an incorporated association does not apply to the offence of keeping a common betting-house. BIGAMY.

Certificate of marriage—Evidence.]—A certificate of marriage given by a district registrar of the province of Ontario in virtue of ss. 7, 9, 11 and 20 of c. 44 of the Revised Statutes of Ontario may perhaps be considered proof of what is entered in the book kept by him, but is not proof of the celebration of the marriage, or, at least, is not the best evidence of it.

The King v. Lafrenière, 12 Que. P.R. 83.

Mens rea.]—(1) A guilty mind is an essential ingredient of the offence of bigany, and if a woman, after obtaining information that the man with whom she has gone through a form of marriage is already married, leaves him and marries another man, her honest and reasonable belief that the man she left had a wife living, is a good defence to a charge of bigamy. (2) Semble, the fact of such honest and reasonable belief may be found from the circumstances of the case without strict proof of the man's former marriage.

The King v. Sellars (N.S.), 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 153.

-Foreign divorce - Domicile - Mens rea.] -A woman married in Canada in 1897 to a person who was at the time and always remained a domiciled Canadian, in 1903 went to the State of Michigan intending to separate from her husband and thenceforth to make her home there, and in 1906 obtained a divorce in Michigan, her husband, however, not being served with any notice of the divorce proceedings, nor taking any part therein:—Held, that the divorce was of no validity or force in Ontario. Shortly afterwards the husband, . having obtained a copy of the divorce decree, and legal advice that the same was valid and that he was at liberty to marry again, went through a form of marriage with another woman in Detroit in the State of Michigan. Held, that he was guilty of bigamy under section 295 of the Criminal Code, 55-56 Vict. c. 29 (D.). Held, also that paragraph (a) of sub-s. 1 of s. 295 of the Criminal Code, which defines bigamy as the act of a person who being married goes through a form of marriage with another person in any part of the world, is intra vires of the Dominion Parliament when read with the limitation imposed by sub-s. 4, that no person shall be so convicted in respect of having gone through a form of marriage in a place not in Canada unless such person, being a British subject resi-dent in Canada, leaves Canada with intent to go through such form of marriage. The decision re Criminal Code Sections Relating to Bigamy (1897), 27 S.C.R. 461, held binding.

BILLS AND NOTES.

Ontario.

-Promissory notes -- Company-Signature -- Abbreviations--Powers of officers.]-- To an action upon four promissory notes made by the defendants, an incorporated compuny, the defence was that the defendants had received no money by way of loan; that the notes were not binding; that they were made without consideration; that the plaintiff and one D. had agreed to deal together in real estate, and that any money advanced by the plaintiff had been advanced to D.; that the notes had been procured by the plaintiff from the defendants by conspiracy with D., under the representation that the defendants owed the plaintiff; that the plaintiff and D. and D.'s wife, having agreed to purchase and deal in real estate, used the pretended loan and other moneys and assets of the defendants for such purposes; and the defendants counterclaimed against the plaintiff and D. and his wife, as defendants by counterclaim, for an account of all moneys wrongfully used by them, for a refund, and for further and other relief: -Held, that the counterclaim was properly pleaded, and should not have been struck out at the trial, either under Con. Rule 261 or Con. Rule 254; it was not made to appear that the claim and counterclaim could not be conveniently tried together. Held, also, that, even if an order striking out the counterclaim could be supported, it would be proper to stay the execution of the judg-ment obtained at the trial against the de-fendants until the dealings of the plaintiff with the property of the defendants should be investigated; and that relief should be given to the defendants upon appeal from the order striking out the counterclaim, the judgment at the trial in favor of the plaintiff upon his claim being affirmed; and that judgment to stand for the protection quantum valeat of the plaintiff. Auerbach v. Hamilton (1909), 19 O.L.R. 570, followed. The notes were signed with the name of the defendant company, the words "Company" and "Limited," which were both part of the name, being abbreviated to "Co." and "Ltd.:"— Held, that the notes were signed in the name of the company. Held, also, that the plaintiff, having received the notes in good faith, and having nothing to do with the management of the company, was not affected by the alleged absence of proof that the persons who appeared to have affixed the name of the company to the notes were those having power to do so. Held, also, upon the evidence, that the company were liable upon the notes.

Thompson v. Big Cities Realty and Agency Co., 21 O.L.R. 394.

-Promissory note - Holder for value -Fraud - Onus.] - Where the maker and one of the indorsers of the promissory note sued on, in answer to a motion by the plaintiff for summary judgment under Rule 603, swore that they were induced to become parties to the note by fraudulent misrepresentations made by their co-defendants, particulars of which they set out, whereof they had reason to be-lieve the plaintiff had notice:—Held, hav-ing regard to s. 30, sub-s. 2, of the Bills of Exchange Act, that they were entitled to unconditional leave to defend, notwithstanding the plaintiff's affivadit that he was a holder for value. Fuller v. Alexander (1882), 47 L.T.N. 443, followed.

Farmer v. Ellis, 2 O.L.R. 544.

-Promissory note-Instrument payable on demand.]-A promissory note payable on demand was indorsed to the plaintiffs on the day it bore date:-Held, that it was not overdue when negotiated so as to affect the plaintiffs as holders with defects of title of which they had no notice. Sections 70 and 182 of the Bills of Exchange Act considered. In re George (1890), 44 Ch.D. 627, and Edwards v. Walters, [1896] 2 Ch. 157, distinguished.

—Blank promissory note—Fraudulently filled in.]—Defendant signed a note in blank and handed it to his agent to be filled in and discounted should it become necessary for defendant to raise money to make repairs on certain property. agent fraudulently filled in the note for $1,-000 and pledged it with a bank as collateral security for agent's personal account. This was done long after the note had been left with the agent. Defendant never required to use the note for said repairs and received no consideration:-Held, that defendant was not liable; that he never intended or authorized the paper sued on to be filled up as a promissory note; that the circumstances never arose upon which only the agent was authorized to fill the same the agent was authorized to nit the same up; and that what was done by agent was without authority and in fraud of the defendant; and that the paper sued on never in fact by the defendant's authority became a promissory note. the plaintiff, who was alleged to have notice of such consideration. The plaintiff denied that the note was given for such consideration:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to unconditional leave to defend.

Davey v. Sadler, 1 O.L.R. 626.

Incomplete instrument—Delivery—Holder in due course—Fraud—Suspicion—Duty to inquire.] — The defendant gave his agent, one T., a printed document in the form of a promissory note signed by him (the defendant) with blanks left for the amount, etc., to be used for a specific purpose in a certain event. T. filled it up for $1,000, and indorsed it to the plaintiffs (bankers) as collateral security for his own debt. The defendant never intended or authorized the paper sued on to be filled up as a promissory note; the circumstances never arose upon which only T. was authorized to fill up the note; what was done by T. was without authority and in fraud of the defendant; the paper never in fact by the defendant's authority became a promissory note:—Held, upon these facts, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover upon the note: Bills of Exchange Act, ss. 31, 32. Smith v. Prosser, [1897] 2 K.B. 735, followed. Held, also, upon the evidence, that the plaintiffs had a suspicion of the fraudulent holding of T., and were guilty of negligence in not making inquiry as to the validity of the alleged note.

Ray v. Wilson, 1 O.W.N. 1005 (Clute, J.).

-Alteration-Joint and several liability-Principal and surety.]-The insertion by the holder of a promissory note signed by several persons, some of whom are sureties for the others, of the words "jointly and severally" before the words "promise to pay" is a material alteration which avoids the note, and the subsequent can-cellation of the words by the holder does not do away with the effect of the alteration, even though the makers of the note do not know of the alteration until after the cancellation. A promissory note made by several persons, some of whom are sureties, given to the holder after such alteration in renewal of the original promissory note, and in ignorance thereof, cannot be enforced as against the sureties, there being no consideration to support it. Accepting in renewal of a promissory note, some of the makers of which are to the knowledge of the holder sureties, of a promissory note not signed by one surety discharges the co-sureties. A judgment recovered against debtors in their firm name for a firm debt is not a bar to the recovery of judgment against them in-dividually upon a promissory note given by them as collateral security for the same debt. Judgment of Street, J., varied.

Banque Provinciale v. Arnoldi, 2 O.L.R. 624 (C.A.).

—Equitable assignment—Trust—Cheque on private banker—Bills of Exchange Act, ss. 72 (2), 74.]—The owner of a certain lands, subject to a mortgage made by him, conveyed the property on certain conditions, among which were that the grantee should pay him an annuity, and pay a certain proportion of the mortgage, the mortgag-or remaining liable for the balance. Subsequently, and in order to pay his share of the mortgage money, the mortgagor signed an order on a private banker with whom he had a deposit account, payable to the mortgagee or bearer, which he then delivered to the banker, who, although he informed the mortgagee that he had the money of the mortgagor to pay him, did not tell him of the existence of the order. On being shown the order and informed of what the mortgagee had done, the gran a paid the amount of the annuity then due. Afterwards, and before the money was paid over by the banker to the mortgagee, the mortgagor died:— Held, by Falconbridge C.J.Q.B., that un-der s. 72, sub-s. 2 and s. 74 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 53 Vict. c. 33 (D), the document being drawn on a private bank. er, was not a cheque but a bill of exchange, and that it was not revoked by the drawer's death. On appeal to a Divisional Court, the judgment was affirmed on the ground that the transaction amounted either to an equitable assignment of the amount or a trust to pay over the same to the mortgagee, which became irrevocable on its being communicated to the parties and assented to by them. Trunkfield v. Proctor, 2 O.L.R. 326.

-Notice of dishonour-Husband wife's agent-Knowledge of husband-Form of notice.]-Notice is merely knowledge, and notice to an indorser who is also agent for another indorser, at once becomes in law the knowledge of the principal with all its consequences. In an action against husband and wife, indorsers on a promissory note, given as one of a series of renewals during some years under an agreement of which the husband had knowledge, in which the notice of dishonour given was a letter in the words: "I beg to advise you that Mr. --'s note for $3,500 in your favour and indorsed by yourself and wife and held by our estate was due yes-terday. As I have not received renewal, you will kindly see that the same is forwarded with cheque for discount, as there is no surplus on hand," addressed and sent to the husband only:—Held, on the evidence that the husband was agent for the wife, and that such letter was sufficient notice of dishonour to both. —Conditional delivery—Notice—Innocent holders—53 Vict. c. 33, s. 21, sub-s. 3 (D.).]—On a motion for summary judgment under Con. Rule 616 by the payee of a promissory note against the maker, who alleged on his examination for discovery that he made and delivered the note to a trading company for a purpose other than that for which the company deposited it with the plaintiffs, but did not state that the plaintiffs had notice thereof:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment.

—Cheque—Stoppage of—Money in Court.]

—A vendor of goods, after receiving payment therefor, fraudulently sold them to another purchaser who bought in good faith, giving his cheque in payment. This cheque was drawn on a bank at T., but cashed at a bank in O., on payment being guaranteed by an indorser. The second purchaser, on being served with garnishee proceedings by the first, stopped payment of the cheque, and paid the amount into Court. The indorser, meanwhile, paid the bank at O., and now claimed the money in Court:—Held, that he was entitled to it. Wilder v. Wolf, 4 O.L.R. 461.

—Promissory note—Irregular indorsement
—Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, s. 56.]—
Under s. 56 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, a person who indorses a promissory note not indorsed by the payee is liable as an indorser to the latter, overruling on this point 2 O.L.R. 63; 37 C.L.J. 413.

-Material alteration.] - The plaintiff's claim was on a note made by the defendant payable to the plaintiffs at three months after date. When produced in Court the words "Extended to November 28th, '02,'' were found written in the lower left hand corner of the note with the initials W.H.R. below. These added words were in the handwriting of Mr. Riddell, the secretary of the company. The defendant denied all knowledge of or assent to the extension:-Held, that the words added were more than a mere memorandum giving time for payment, and must be read into the note, and had the effect of changing the note from one at three months to one at four months, and being thus a material alteration the note became void in the hands of the plaintiffs as against the defendants. Mutual Life Assurance Co. v. McLaugh-of his co-maker. When it became due, the latter tendered a renewal note, pur-porting to be signed by the defendant, which the payees accepted and gave up the original note stamped "paid." The primary debtor became insolvent and died, and the payees afterwards sued the dcfendant on the renewal note only in a Division Court, when the defendant swore he never signed it, but, nevertheless, there was verdict and judgment for the plaintiffs. A new trial was then granted, resulting in a verdict for the defendant. A further new trial then being granted, the Judge, at the trial, atlowed the plaintiffs to claim in the alternative upon the original note, as well as on the renewal, and to amend his claim accordingly. A verdict was then returned for the plaintiff on the original note:-Held, that the Division Court Judge had jurisdiction under Rule 4 of the Division courts, to amend the plaintiff's claim as he had done. Held, also, that the renewal note being a forgery, so far as the defendant's signature was concerned, and the plaintiffs, therefore, having been induced by the fraud of the primary debtor to give him up the original note, the plaintiffs retained a right to recover in equity on the latter. Held, also, that a witness was entitled to refer to entries in the books of the primary debtor, made by him or under his direction, to refresh his memory.

-Money paid under mistake of fact-Marked cheque fraudulently altered-Negligence-Notice of dishonour-Reasonable delay.]-A cheque for $5 certified by the respondent bank's stamp was fraudulently altered to $500, and paid by the respond-ent to the appellant, a holder for value, under a mistake of fact, which was not discovered till the next day. In an action by the respondent to recover back $495 from the appellant:-Held, (1) that the respondent was at liberty to prove, as between itself and an innocent holder for value, that the cheque had been fraudulently altered after it had been certified. Scholfield v. Earl of Londesborough (1896), A.C. 514, followed. (2) No negligence was imputable to the respondent in cashing the cheque without examining the drawer's account; and even if it were, it did not induce the appellant to treat the cheque as good. Kelly v. Solari (1841), 9 M. & W. 54, approved. (3) Notice of forgery was unnecessary, and the cheque for $5 was not dishonoured; and, accordingly, the stringent rule laid down in Cocks v. Masterman (1829), 9 B. & C. 902; 33 R.R. 365, to the effect that notice of dishonour of a bill of exchange must be given on the due date, does not apply.

Promissory note—Accommodation indorsers—Co-sureties—Contribution—Order of indorsements.]—The plaintiff and defendant were both accommodation indorsers of a promissory note. The plaintiff was the payee, but, when the instrument was given to him to indorse, the defendant's name was already on the back of it, and the plaintiff indorsed under the defendant's indorsement. Each testified that his liability was to be secondary to that of the other—not that they so agreed with each other, but that the maker so agreed with each of them respectively:—Held, that, being sureties for the one debt, the rule of equitable contribution applied, and the plaintiff having paid the debt, was entitled to recover only half of it from the defendant. Macdonald v. Whitfield (1883), 8 App. Cas. 733, discussed.

Steacy v. Stayner, 7 O.L.R. 684, (D.C.).

—Bills of exchange—When provincial legislation applies—Joint contract—R.S.O. 1897, c. 129, s. 15.]—The Bills of Exchange Act does not deal with the consequences which are to flow from the character which it attaches to the promise which a bill or note contains; and, therefore, these consequences fall to be determined according to the law of the Province in which the liability is sought to be enforced.

Cook v. Dodds, 6 O.L.R. 608 (D.C.).

-Forged note-Ostensible makers lying by-Laches-Estoppel - Liability.] bank on August 15th, 1900, by letter, informed the ostensible makers of a promis-sory note that it had that day discounted the note for the payees. The makers' name had been forged. They, however, did not reply or inform the bank of the forg-ery until December 10th, 1900, having in the meanwhile been corresponding with the forger, urging him to settle the matter. A large part of the proceeds of the discount was not paid out by the bank until after the time when they could have had notice from the defendants that the note was a forgery:-Held, that the defendants' silence, coupled with the resulting damage, estopped them from denying their signature; and that they were liable for the full amount of the note.

Dominion Bank v. Ewing, 7 O.L.R. 90

—Bills of exchange—Indorsement in blank —Alteration to special indorsement—Subsequent substitution of name of new special endorsee.]-A bank, being the holders in due course as collateral security to the account of a customer of a promissory note indorsed in blank, put their name with a stamp immediately above the indorser's name, thus converting the in-dorsement into a special one. Subse-quently, and after maturity of the note, the account was taken over by the plaintiff bank, the intention being that the note in question and other collateral notes should pass with the account. The manager of the transferring bank handed the notes to the manager of the plaintiff bank, who, with a stamp, superimposed upon the name of the transferring bank the name of the plaintiff bank, the manager of the transferring bank authenticating the change by his initials:—Held (Street, J., dissenting), that there had been a valid transfer, and that the plaintiffs were holders of the note in due course. Judgment of Morgan, C.J., affirmed.

Sovereign Bank v. Gorden, 9 O.L.R. 146

-Promissory note - Negotiability - Indorsement-Liability of maker.]-H., a director of a joint stock company, signed, with other directors, a joint and several promissory note in favour of the company, and took security on a steamer of the company. The note was, in form, nonnegotiable, but that fact was not observed by the officials of the bank that discounted it and paid over the proceeds to the company. H. knew that the note was discounted, and before it fell due he had in writing acknowledged his liability on it. In an action on the note by the bank against H.:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal and of the trial judge (Strong, J., dissenting), that although the note was non-negotiable on its face, this afforded no defence to the plaintiffs' action in view of what took place between the defendant and his co-makers and between the defendant and the bank. Held, per Gwynne, J., although, in fact, the note was not negotiable, the bank, in equity, was entitled to recover, it being shown that the note was intended by the makers to have been made negotiable, and was issued by them as such, but, by mistake or inadvertence, it was not expressed to be payable to the order of the of exchange for his own private purposes in the name of the defendants on a firm in Montreal, which was discounted by the plaintiff bank. Before the bill matured, Y. wrote to defendants informing them of having used their name, but that they would not have to pay the draft. The bill purported to be endorsed by the company, per J. M. Y. (one of the defendants) and the other defendant having seen it in the bank, examined it carefully and remarked that "J. M. Y.'s signature was not usually so shaky." J. M. Y. afterwards called at the bank and examined the bill very carefully, and in answer to a request from the manager for a cheque he said that it was too late that day but he would send a cheque the day following. No cheque was sent and a few days before the bill matured the manager and solicit-or of the bank called to see J. M. Y., and asked why he had not sent the cheque. He admitted that he had promised to do so and at the time he thought he would. Y, afterwards left the country, and in an action against the defendants on the bil! they pleaded that the signature of J. M. Y. was forged, and on the trial the jury found that it was forged, and judgment was given for the defendants. fences set up were ratification and estoppel. The Court of Appeal held there could be no ratification of a forgery, and that the plaintiffs had failed to show any injury by reason of the alleged representations, which was an essential element in a claim of estoppel by representation:—Held, that the judgment of the Court of Appeal should be affirmed, and the appeal dismissed with costs. Held, per Sir W. J. Ritchie, C.J., that though fraud and breach of trust can be ratified, forgery cannot, and that the bank could not recover against the defendants on the forged bill. La Banque Jacques Cartier v. La Bank d'Epargne (13 App. Cas. 111) and Barton v. London and North Western Ry. Co. (62 L.T. 164), followed.

Merchants Bank v. Lucas (1890), 1 S.C. Cas. 275.

—Renewal of note—Total failure of consideration.]—On the strength of an agreement for the formation of a mining company, setting out its objects and purposes, including the proposed transfer to it by the plaintiff of two mining locations, the defendant subscribed for 60,000 shares of stock in the plaintiff company at 10e per share, giving two promissory notes therefor of $3,000 each to the plaintiff company, one of which he duly paid, and the other, after being twice renewed, remained unpaid. The objects and purposes of the company, through no fault of the defendant, were never carried out, and became utterly impracticable; no transfer of the mining locations was ever made, and all expectations of ever successfully carrying out the agreement were abandoned:—Held, that there was a total failure of consideration, and not only was the defendant not liable on the unpaid note—the fact of its renewal in no way affecting his position—but that he was entitled to recover back the amount he had paid on the other note.

—Illegality—Unduly lessening competition—Trade association.]—All the porters of coal in a certain town combined themselves into an association and bound themselves not to sell below fixed prices, and that any member who did so should become liable to the association for $1 for every ton of coal so sold:—Held, that the association was an illegal one, being a combination, conspiracy or agreement "to unduly prevent or lessen competition in the purchase, barter, sale, or sup-ply of an article or commodity which might be the subject of trade or commerce," within the meaning of s. 520 (d) of the Criminal Code; and the plaintiff acting as agent of the association, could not recover on a cheque given by a member of the association in pursuance of one of the articles of the association. Semble, that evidence is necessary in such a case to show that competition in the sale of the acticles, concerned has, as a fact, been unduly prevented. The cheque in question was marked "cheque conditional deposit," being intended, as the drawer, a member of the association, explained, to be conditional on his obtaining a certain contract. Held, that it was not an unconditional order to pay, and therefore not a cheque within the requirements of ss. 3 and 72 of the Bills of Exchange Act,

Decision of a Divisional Court, 8 O.L.R. 281, reversed. Per Moss, C.J.O.:—The whole arrangement of which the release formed part was come to and carried out with the knowledge and consent of the defendant, and that knowledge and consent were sufficient to prevent the release of his co-maker operating as a discharge of his liability. Per Osler, J.A .: - Even if the release did in law operate from the moment of its execution, as a discharge of the defendant. there was nothing to prevent the latter, after its execution, from acknowledging and ratifying, by a proper instrument, his continuing liability to pay, just as a surety may do who has been discharged by time given to his principal or by the release of a cosurety. Co-contractors and co-debtors stand in these respects in the same position as co-sureties. The release of one operates in general as a release of all, but the legal operation of such a release may be restrained by the express terms of the instrument, or the co-debtors may reaffirm and ratify their liability notwithstanding the release.

Bogart v. Robertson, 11 O.L.R. 295 (C. A.).

—Promissory note—Indorsement by third party without indorsement by payee — Valuable consideration—Liability.]—The defendant became the endorser of two promissory notes without the payees having indorsed same, being so indorsed by the defendant in pursuance of an agreement with the payees for valuable consideration that he should indorse them and become liable thereon:—Held, that the defendant was liable. Robinson v. Mann (1901), 31 S.C.R. 484 followed. Steele v. McKinley (1880), 5 App. Cas. 754, and Jenkins v. Coomber, [1898] 2 Q.B. 168, not followed. It is the duty of the Courts of the Province to follow the decision of the highest Court in Canada, being the latest decision on the subject, without questioning whether or not it is in accordance with previous cases.

Slater v. Laboree, 10 O.L.R. 648 (D.C.).

-Bills of exchange-Absence of consideration-Evidence, admissibility of.]-In an action upon two promissory notes for $3,000 and $4,000 respectively, the defendants set up want of consideration and that the plaintiff was not a bona fide holder for value. At the trial the defendants tendered evidence, which was refused, to show that the notes were given merely as receipts for stock which had been delivered to defendants for sale as agents, that there was no consideration for the notes, and that the plaintiff, who was a clerk in the office of his solicitors, had given no value therefor; also that a written agreement for the transfer of the stock made between the payee of the note and an other, and one of the defendants' firm, had never been acted upon, or had been abandoned:—Held, that whether or not evidence was admissible to show that the notes were given as receipts, the defendants were entitled to give in evidence all the facts which would tend to establish want of consideration, and this having been denied them, a new trial was directed.

-Erasure of word "renewal"-Material alteration-Holder in due course.]-By the proviso to section 145 of the Bills of Exchange Act, R.S.C., c. 119, "where a bill has been materially altered, but the alteration is not apparent, and the bill is in the hands of a holder in due course, such holder may avail himself of the bill, as if it had not been altered, and may enforce payment according to its original tenor." The defendant gave N. a promissory note intended as a renewal of and to retire a former note for the same amount which N. had discounted at a bank. When the defendant made the note, the word "renewal'' was, at his instance, written near the lower left-hand corner N. erased the word "renewal," the erasure not being apparent without the use of a magnifying glass, and discounted the note with the plaintiffs without taking up the original note, which the defendant had to pay. In an action on the renewal note:-Held. that, the alteration, not being apparent, and the plaintiffs, having taken a note complete and regular on its face in good faith and for value without actual notice. were holders in due course and entitled to recover the amount according to the original tenor, the word "renewal" not forming part of the contract to pay. Maxon v. Irwin, 15 O.L.R. 81.

-Action against guarantors of a promissory note-Dispute between makers and payee as to amount due-Adding makers as defendants.]-In an action against the guarantors of a promissory note for $1,935.46, given by a company for machinery bought from the plaintiffs, it appeared that the company before the maturity of the note was claiming from the plaintiffs $953.68 for breaches of the contract of sale, and it was alleged that when the note was given it was agreed that the exact amount should be adjusted during its currency. The defendants paid into Court $1,195.01 as the amount justly due. and moved for an order adding the company as defendants:-Held, that the defendants were entitled to the order.

Union Investment Company v. Wells, 39 Can. S.C.R. 625.

-Promissory note-Fraud in procuring-Discount-Good faith.]-L. and others signed promissory notes each for the amount of ten shares in a company formed to manufacture rotary engines under an invention of the payee who fraudulently misrepresented to them the prospects and intentions of such company. At the same time each maker signed an application for ten shares. The payee and T., the assignee of his patent of invention, induced W. to discount these notes and received a portion of the proceeds, part being retained by W. in payment of debts due him from these two parties. On the trial of actions by W. on the notes the evidence of T., who had absconded, was taken under commission and he swore that the form of application signed by the respective defendants had been shown to W. before the notes were discounted. W. denied this and swore that he had been told that the notes were given in payment of stock held by the payee:-Held, that the evidence of W., on whom the onus of proof rested, could not be accepted; that the whole testimony and attendant circumstances showed that W. suspected that the proceeds of the notes belonged to the company; and, having discounted them without inquiry as to the right of the payee and T. to receive these proceeds, he was not in good faith and could not recover.

Lockart v. Wilson, 39 Can. S.C.R. 541.

-Promissory note-Past due-Signature by third party-Agreement not to sue-Release of original makers-Insufficient consideration.]—Where a promissory note made by two persons in favour of plaintiff was, after maturity, signed by defend-ant at plaintiff's request, without any agreement or understanding for extension of time or forbearance:—Held, following Ryan v. McKerral (1888), 15 O.R. 460, that the procurement by the plaintiff of the signature of the defendant was not equivalent to an agreement not to sue, and that no change has been made in the law in this respect by the Bills of Exchange Act. (2) Held, also, that even if the original makers were released by the execution of the note by the defendant, such release would not be a sufficient consideration to support the promise of the defendant, inasmuch as there was no evidence of a desire, or request or consent on her part that the other parties to the note should be released. Stack v. Down, 15 O.L.R. 331 (D.C.).

-Cheque-Consideration - Part payment under unenforceable contract-Statute of Frauds.]-A definite oral bargain (good except for the Statute of Frauds) for the sale by the plaintiff to the defendant of an ascertainable and definite parcel of land is a sufficient consideration for a cheque drawn by the defendant upon a bank in favour of the plaintiff for a part of the purchase money; and, the cheque being dishonoured, the plaintiff was held entitled to recover the amount thereof from the defendant, the latter not being in possession, and the plaintiff not having made or tendered a conveyance, but being able and willing to perform his contract. Kinzie v. Harper, 15 O.L.R. 582 (D.C.).

-Promissory note -- Irregular endorsement-Liability.]-On the back of certain promissory notes given by S. to the order of H. appeared the signatures of K. and B., underneath the words, "We guarantee payment of the within note":—Held, that K. and B. were liable as endorsers. Locke v. Reid (1842), 6 O.S. 295, not followed as no longer representing existing law, having regard to the course of decision, and the effect of s. 131 of the Bills of Exchange Act.

-Promissory note-Irregular indorsement -"Holder in due course"-Collateral agreement.]-The plaintiff brought actions on two promissory notes, for $6,000 and $2,000 respectively, made by G. J. C. and W. C. K. as makers, and payable to the order of the plaintiff as payee. The notes were indorsed by the defendant J. S. C. before they were delivered to the plaintiff. who subsequently indorsed them. The notes were given in renewal of a note for $8,000 between the same parties, which also had been indorsed by the plaintiff subsequently to the indorsement by J. S. C. By a sealed agreement of the same date as the $8,000 note (21st May, 1907), which was executed by J. S. C. and the other parties, it was stated that the note was given as security for the price of certain mining claims purchased by him in company with G. J. C. and W. C. K. from the plaintiff, and that J. S. C. was "the indorser of the note":-Held, that the J. S. C. was liable on the notes. Per Osler and Maclaren, JJ. A., that J. S. C. was liable to the plaintiff as "to a holder in due course," within the meaning of R.S.C. 1906, c. 119, s. 131, Robinson v. Mann (1901), 31 S.C.R. 484, followed. J. S. C. was also liable to the plaintiff on the ground of estoppel, inasmuch as he was bound by the agreement of the 21st May, 1907, and it was not open to him to raise any defence based upon the irregular indorsement of the notes. Per Meredith, J.A., that, upon the evidence adduced, J. S. C. had an interest in the lands as a principal as regards the plaintiff, and was liable to pay the contract price; and, even if his liability were only that of a surety for his co-defendants, the deed of the 21st May, 1907, was sufficient evidence of his contract under the Statute of Frauds.

McDonough v. Cook, 19 O.L.R. 267. Quebec.

Transfer of note by general transfer of assets without indorsement—Service transfer.]-1. Where the payee and the maker of a promissory note agreed that it should be released, but the note was after-wards transferred by the payee with other assets to a company incorporated to take over the business of the payee, the maker may prove the release of the note by entries made in the company's books, with the knowledge and under the direction of the payee, and by corroborative verbal evidence of other officers of the company. 2. When a promissory note is transferred after maturity, not by indorsement, but by being included in a general transfer of the assets of a business, the person acquiring the note must have the transfer served on the maker before a right of action exists in favour of such transferee. -Misapplication of cheque-Agency-Liability to account to maker.]-The appellants made their cheque for $400, payable to the order of respondents, intending that it should be applied as a deposit on account of a purchase of material which they wished to obtain from respondents through the intervention of A. They handed the cheque to A. for this special purpose, and the word "deposit" appeared on the face of the cheque. The respondents endorsed and used the cheque, and applied the amount on an old claim which they had against A. Another cheque of appellants, for $100, made payable to respondents or bearer, was treated in the same manner:-Held, that by using the cheque for $400, payable to their order, the respondents became accountable to the appellants for the amount; they became trustees of the makers of the cheque, with the usual liability attaching to such re-And the subsequent cheque, lationship. although payable to respondents or bearer, being part of the same transaction, and being used after notice that it had Leipschitz v. Montreal Street Railway Co., 9 Que. Q.B. 518.

—Want of security for lost note—Rejection of plea—Art. 202 C.P.—Costs.]—Held:
—That in an action on a promisory note alleged to have been destroyed by error, where the plaintiff declares that he has offered to the defendant and is still ready to give him security against any liability thereon, and where the defendant, after having denied all the allegations of the action further pleads want of security, and sets up facts tending to establish that he is not liable, a motion to set aside such defence will be dismissed, but without costs.

Rowan v. Ross, 3 Que. P.R. 391.

—Procedure—Election of domicile—Place of payment—Art. 85 C.C.—63 Vict. c. 36 (Que.).]—Though the provision of Art. 85 C.C., by which the indication of a place of payment in a promissory note or any writing whenever it was made is equivalent to an election of domicile at the place so indicated, has been repealed by 63 Vict., c. 36 (Que.), such repeal does not affect the election of domicile thus made in a note signed before it came into force. Therefore, defendant could be sued at Montreal on a note dated at and payable there though it had, in fact, been signed by him in the Province of Ontario where had his domicile.

Lachance v. Duval, Q.R. 37 S.C. 475.

—Promissory note—Retirement by payee.]
—Where a negotiable promissory note, indersed by the payee and another, was discounted in a bank and retired on maturity by the payee without protest as against the indorser and without demand of payment from the maker for nearly three years, there is a strong presumption in favour of the maker's claim that the note was given without consideration and for accommodation of the payee, and proof of this fact by witnesses is admissible.

indorsed and transferred to respondents, with another of like amount, in settlement of the overdrawn account of S., who was their general manager:—Held (affirming the judgment of the Superior Court, Taschereau, J.): (1) Where the connection between the first note, for which valid consideration was received, and the notes given in renewal thereof is clearly estab-lished, want of consideration is not a valid defence to an action by the payee against the maker on a renewal note in which the latter acknowledges to have received value. (2) Such connection may be proved, as in this case, by a consecutive and uninterrupted series of dates in the payee's books in regard to the transaction, together with the probability that the payee would not have surrendered a valid note without receiving a valid renewal. (3) Even in the absence of positive proof that the first note was indorsed by S. to the company, the Court may reasonably presume that such was the case from the fact that it was delivered to the company and was in the custody of the company's cashier, together with the fact that the note now sued upon was given by appellant for the value received and was payable directly to the company.

Ross v. Western Loan & Trust Co., 11 Que. K.B. 292.

-Bank-Set-off of deposit against-Bill or note-Waiver.]-A deposit in a bank is a loan to said bank, and Art. 1190 C.C. which makes the debt resulting from a deposit incapable of compensation does not prevent the sum deposited from being set off against a debt due to the bank by the depositor. The compensation between a debt due to a bank and that arising from a deposit may have effect until service of a petition for winding-up the bank inasmuch as the two debts are equally clear, and exigible. But the term of a letter of credit or a note is deemed to have been arranged in favour of both creditor and debtor, and therefore the maker or indorser of a note discounted by a bank only cannot, by waiving the benefit of the time which the note has to run, set off against the debt arising therefrom a sum on deposit to his credit in the bank. The indorser of a note discounted by a bank only becomes a debtor to the bank when the note is protested and notice of protest served on him. Although a creditor of a bank in liquidation has a right to intervene in an action pending between the liquidators and a debtor of the bank who claims that his debt has been discharged by compensation, to watch the proceedings and take the steps necessary to proteet his rights, such creditor will be con-demned to pay the costs incurred by the debtor if he files, against the claim of the latter, a useless contestation based on grounds already invoked by the liquida-

Vanier v. Kent, 11 Que. K.B. 373, affirming 20 S.C. 545.

—Promissory note—Funds obtained for election purposes—Dominion Elections Act. c. 8, sec. 131.]—There is no action for the recovery of the amount of a promissory note or of a renewal, originally given for the purpose of raising funds to promote an election.

St.-Pierre v. L'Ecuyer, 23 Que. S.C. 495 (Lynch, J.).

Molsons Bank v. Steele, Q.R. 23 S.C. 316. 5 Que. P.R. 184.

—Promissory note—Insolvency of indorser —Waiver of protest by curator to insolvent.]—(1) The curator appointed upon an abandonment of property under the Code of Procedure has no authority, without leave of a Judge of the Superior Court or the advice of the creditors or inspector, to waive on behalf of the insolvent, protest of a promissory note indorsed by him, and a waiver under such circumstances does not bind the indorser. (2)
The right of renunciation is a personal one belonging to the indorser.

Denenberg v. Mendelsohn, 22 Que. S.C. 474. Affirmed on review, 23 Que. S.C. 128.

—Promissory note—Indorser.] — The obligation of the indorser of a note is conditional, the condition being that on default by the maker, the note shall be protested and notice given to the indorser. In consequence he cannot maintain an action against the maker to be indemnified against his obligation, even though the note is due and unpaid if it has not been protested and notice given.

-Lost note-Security.]-The holder of a lost note cannot maintain an action for its amount by offering merely to reimburse the maker if it should be found, but he should offer to give security that the maker should not be troubled by the note. This rule applies as well to the case of a non-negotiable note merely mislaid.

Pillow & Hersey Co. v. L'Esperance, Q.R. 22 S.C. 213 (Ct. Rev.).

—Law partnership — Promissory note — Joint liability.]—The members of a firm of lawyers are jointly and not severally liable for the payment of a note signed in the name of their firm.

Drouin v. Gauthier, 12 Que. K.B. 442.

-Promissory note-Loss of note-Indemnity to be given by plaintiff.]-(1) Where, in an action on a loan, the defendant admits the loan, but alleges that he gave a promissory note for the amount, and this admission constitutes the sole proof of the loan, it cannot be divided. (2) A person who, on making a loan of money, receives a promissory note for the amount, cannot maintain an action upon the loan without producing and tendering to the debtor the note so given; or, in the event of its being lost, without proving the loss and obtaining an order that its loss shall not be pleaded by the defendant upon plaintiff giving security to the satisfaction of the court or judge against the claim of any other person upon the note. (3) Although the defendant is entitled, in the absence of compliance with the above conditions, to ask for the dismissal of an action, brought simply for the recovery of the loan, yet where he has declared his readiness to pay on proof of loss being made, and indemnity given, the Court, in order to avoid further litigation, may treat the case as an action on a lost note, and give judgment for the plaintiff on condition that security be given according to law-the defendant's costs in such case to be paid by the plaintiff.
Tessier v. Caillé, 25 Que. S.C. 207 (C.R.).

-Promissory note-Art. 85 C.C.-Art. 94 C.P.Q.]-An action on promissory notes dated at one place but signed in another cannot, in the absence of other circumstances conferring jurisdiction, be brought in the district in which the notes were dated.

Cardinal v. Picher, 7 Que. P.R. 147 (Sup. Ct.).

-Promissory note-Indorsement-Renewal.]-A power of attorney to administer the affairs of the principal confers no authority to indorse a note for the accommodation of the maker even when such note is only a reneyal of another already indorsed by the principal. The indorser of a note is entitled to the benefit of time given to the maker. Molsons Bank v. Cooke, Q.R. 27 S.C. 130 (Ct. Rev.).

-Cheque-Stopping payment-Holder in due course.]-The defendant R. having given his cheque for $491.25 to the defendant D., the latter indorsed it to the order of defendant G., who deposited it to her credit in the Banque d'Epargne and drew $450 on account of such deposit. The day after the cheque was signed payment of it was stopped by the maker and when, in the ordinary course of the bank's business, and within a reasonable delay. it was presented to the bank on which it was drawn payment was refused. Plain-tiff, the official who had received the deposit by G. without requiring the cheque to be first marked "accepted" contrary to rule was held responsible for the amount to the Banque d'Epargne and the plaintiff, holding cheque over to him, with subrogation of all their rights as to it that he might exercise his recourse against the parties. To his action against them the maker and indorsers pleaded that he was not a holder in due course since he did not become holder until after payment was refused and he was given notice of such refusal:—Held, that the indorsers could not raise the question whether or not he was a holder in due course, the cheque not being a nullity. That G. was a holder in due course, having become holder before it was presented for payment and, consequently, the Banque d'Epargne and the plaintiff, holding their title from her, possessed, as against the makers and indorsers, all the rights of a holder in due course. That the maker and prior indorser should pay the full amount of the cheque although the Banque d'Epargne had retained the balance of the deposit made by G., which was a personal affair between the latter and the bank.

Gauthier v. Reinhardt, Q.R. 26 S.C. 134 (Ct. Rev.).

-Promissory note-Legal consideration-Renewal of forged paper-Liability of indorser.]-A promissory note given in payment, or renewal, of notes of the maker bearing indorsements forged by him, to the bank which discounted and holds the latter paper and is aware of the forgery on it, is valid, and, as a consequence, the indorser of such a note is liable to the bank for the amount, more particularly if, at the time he indorsed it, he was not aware of the forgery and fraud in question.

La Banque Nationale v. Drolet, 28 Que. S.C. 146 (C.R.).

-Promissory note-Warranty against the indorser.]-A party becoming holder of a note after maturity, is subject to all the equities between the original parties to said note, and the defendant, sued as the maker of the note may, by dilatory exception, have delay to call in warranty the indorser as his garant, to take up his fait et cause.

Levinoff v. Richard, 8 Que. P.R. 72.

—Contract—Election of domicile—Promissory note—Tribunal of competent jurisdiction.]—Where a promissory note has been made and signed in the District of Three Rivers and the contract in virtue of which said note was given was executed there and contains, moreover, an election of domicile in the said district in respect of every dispute that might arise in consequence thereof, an action instituted thereon in the District of Montreal will be dismissed on declinatory exception.

Cie. de Laiterie St. Laurent v. Trottier, 7 Que. P.R. 428 (Fortin, J.).

-Promissory note-Suretyship-Parol testimony-Imputation of payments-Indorsement-Onerous obligation.]-A promissory note in favour of a bank, made as collateral security for payment of a cheque accepted by it, is subject to the ordinary rules of suretyship, and the maker is discharged by repayment of the amount of the cheque to the bank. (2) Parol testimony is admissible to show the circumstances attending the making of the note and repayment of the cheque, as they are matters of a commercial nature. (3) The indorsement of a promissory note by a third person makes it a more onerous debt for the maker within the meaning of Art. 1161 C.C. The holder must, therefore, impute towards such note all moneys received upon the account of the maker by preference over all other notes signed by the latter alone.

Banque d'Hochelaga v. MacDuff, Q.R. 14 K. B. 390.

—Promissory note—Alteration — Acquiescence—Promise to pay.]—One of the joint makers of a promissory note payable to order is considered as acquiescing within the meaning of 53 Vict. c. 33, s. 63 (D.), in an essential alteration made therein when, with knowledge of such alteration, he promised to pay the amount of the note and renews such promise for the purpose of procuring time.

Hébert v. La Banque Nationale, Q.R. 16 K.B. 191.

—Fraudulent consideration — Fraudulent preference to inspector of insolvent estate.]—A promissory note in favour of a creditor and inspector of an abandoned estate to procure his assent to the sale of the abandoned assets to the maker is fraudulent, null and void, and no action will lie to recover on it. Evans & Sons v. Tracey, 29 Que. S.C. 97.

—Promissory notes—Rights of holder— Knowledge of nullity at time of transfer.] —The holder of a note who, at the time of its transfer, had actual knowledge that it was originally obtained by false representations and without consideration, has no action to recover the amount from the maker.

Guimond v. Batalon, 29 Que. S.C. 8 (Curran, J.).

—Promissory note signed and payable outside of the Province of Quebec—Service upon defendant domiciled in Ontario.] — Art. 103 C.P. does not authorize the holder of a note made out of the Province of Quebec by a non-resident, and payable out of the province, to sue the maker thereof before the Courts of the Province of Quebec, because a subsequent endorser of the note, co-defendant, is domiciled therein.

Hackett v. Ryan, 8 Que. P.R. 380 (Davidson, J.).

—Promissory note by husband and wife.]
—(1) A contract whereby a wife separate as to property binds herself with her husband is, as regards her, a nullity, and the party who knowingly acquires such an obligation cannot claim to be a creditor in good faith. (2) When two parties sign a note together, their obligation is joint, not joint and several. (3) The bearer of a note which is not endorsed cannot claim thereunder.

Dagneau v. Decarie, 8 Que. P.R. 141.

-Material alterations-Forgery-Partner ship-Liability of indorser.]-R. induced H. to become a party to and indorser of a demand note for the purpose of raising funds and agreed to give warehouse receipts as security to the bank on discounting the note. It was arranged that the goods covered by the warehouse receipts were to be held and sold on joint account, each sharing equally in the profits or losses on the transaction. Subsequently R. altered the note, without the knowledge or consent of H., by adding thereto the words "avec interêt à sept par cent. par an." and falsely represented to the bank that H. held the warehouse receipts as collateral security for his indorsement. A couple of months later H., for the first time, became aware that the goods had never been purchased or placed in warehouse, that no warehouse receipt had been assigned to the bank and did not, until some months later, know that the alteration had been made in the note. There was some evidence that H. had asked for time to make a settlement of the amount due to the bank upon the note after he had become aware of the fraud and the alteration so made:-Held, that the instrument was a forgery and could not be ratified by an ex post facto assent. The Merchants Bank v. Lucas, 18 Can. S.C.R. 704; Cam. Cas. 275, and Brook v. Hook, L.R. 6 Ex 89, followed. Per Idington, J .: - The circumstances of the case did not show that there had been any assent to the alteration within the meaning of s. 145 of the Bills of Exchange Act. Per Maclennan, J .: - The assent required to bring an altered bill within the exception provided by s. 145 of the Bills of Exchange Act, R.S.C. (1906), c. 119, must be given by the party sought to be bound at the time of or before the making of the alteration. Held, also, that in the special circumstances of the case, there was no partnership relation between the parties to the note for the purposes of the transaction in question and there could be no implied authorization for the making of the alteration in the note. Judgment appealed from, Q.R. 16 K.B. 191, reversed. Hebert v. La Banque Nationale, 40 Can.

—Blank paper signed to be converted into a bill—Conditional authority—Holder in due course.]—A party who signs and delivers a blank paper in order that it may be converted into a bill, on a certain condition, is liable, for the amount of the bill into which the paper is converted, to the holder in whose presence the conversion or filling in takes place, and, a fortiori, to a subsequent holder in due course. Bacon v. Decarie, 34 Que. S.C. 103.

—Transfer after default to pay interest—
"Overdue" bill—Notice—Holder in good faith.]—Where interest is made payable periodically during the currency of a promissory note, payable at a certain time after date, the note does not become overdue within the meaning of ss. 56 and 70 of the Bills of Exchange Act, merely by default in the payment of an instalment of such interest. The doctrine of constructive notice is not applicable to bills and notes transferred for value.

Union Investment Company v. Wells, 39 Can. S.C.R. 625.

-Cheque—Uncertain amount—Rights of indorser.]—A cheque written as follows: "Pay V. N. or bearer $2.50, two-fifty 00/100 dollars," signed "E. N.," is not an order to pay two hundred and fifty dollars. The holder who cashed it for two dollars and fifty cents only is not in fault and incurs no liability to the indorsers. The holder cannot claim that before it was presented he had taken it from a debtor for the larger amount for which the debtor had himself received it from the indorsers. Knowledge of the debtor that the holder had made a mistake, followed by an agreement between them, deprives the in-dorser of the recourse over that he claims to exercise against the holder in the name of the debtor according to Art. 1031 C.C. Nadeau v. Bank of Toronto, Q.R. 32 S.C. 178 (Ct. Rev.).

—Cheque on a bank endorsed by the payee

—Presumption.]—A cheque on a bank indorsed by the payee is not evidence of a loan to him by the drawer. Of itself and unexplained it is a proof of a payment by the drawer to the payee.

Allaire v. King, 33 Que. S.C. 343 (C.R.).

—Evidence—Signature to promissory note —Denial on oath—Onus of proof—Expert evidence.]—(1) The denial of his signature to a promissory note, made on oath by a defendant under Art. 208 C.P., casts upon the plaintiff the onus of proving it, which he must do by positive evidence, as for any other matter of fact. The unsupported opinion of experts will not avail against the testimony of the party himself, especially when circumstances lend probability to his denial. (2) A party who is not clearly proved to have known of the existence of his forged signature to a note, is not estopped on the ground of neglectful standing by, from setting up the forgery against the holder.
Ethier v. Labelle, 33 Que. S.C. 39.

Holder for collection and T. Holder for collection —Holder for collection only—Death of such holder during pendency of suit—Continuance.]—The rights of a holder, for collection only, of a bill of exchange, against acceptor and parties liable, are personal to himself, as the prete-nom of the owner, and are not transmitted, upon his death, to his heirs. When, therefore, such a holder dies during the pendency of a suit brought by him on the bill, his heirs have no right to continue it in his stead.

Marson v. Taylor, 34 Que. S.C. 37.

—Promissory note—Joint makers—''I promise,'' etc.—Joint and several liability.]
—When two persons sign a note which reads ''I promise,'' etc., they are jointly and severally bound pursuant to the terms of s. 84 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, R.S.C. [1906] c. 119, s. 179.

Congregation of Roumanian Jews, Seth David v. Backman, Q.R. 31 S.C. 23.

—Proof of payment of note at maturity— Production of note by the promissor.]— The production by the promissor or maker, of a promissory note payable on a given date, without any indication upon its face or proof aliunde that it remained due after maturity, is prima facie evidence that it was paid and redeemed at, or before that time.

-Assignment of chose in action-Discount of note for benefit of assignor-Liability of assignor.]-The assignment of an hypothecary claim as the consideration for the assignee's discounting the note of a third party for the benefit of the assignor creates no indebtedness by the latter to the assignee.

Buchanan v. Napier, 16 Que. K.B. 347.

-Promissory notes-Parties jointly liable -Holder of redeemed note.]-When A., B., C. & D., shareholders in a company, by way of accommodation to it, become jointly liable for a promissory note, and at maturity it is paid out of the proceeds of a second note signed by A. & B., but not by C. & D., which is ultimately redeemed by the company, no relation of creditor and debtor arises between A. & C. and the former cannot claim to have paid part of C.'s indebtedness. The fact that he holds the note, to which the latter was a party, is no evidence of such a relation, especially when the signatures of all the parties to it have been cancelled and his position of manager of the company makes it likely he is possessed of the note as such. He cannot therefore set up a plea of com-pensation, founded on the above recited facts, to an action for debt brought against him by C.

Lafontaine v. Leveille, 16 Que. K.B. 515.

-Bank-Cheque payable to order-Irregular indorsement.]-A bank upon which a cheque payable to order is drawn and accepted is obliged to pay the amount to a lawful holder though it had previously paid it to a third party on an irregular and insufficient indorsement. And this though such third party has remitted funds to the holder not specifically to cover the amount of the cheque but for what he owed on a current account.

Canadian Pacific Railway Co. v. La Banque d'Hochelaga, Q.R. 18 K.B. 237.

-Promissory note-Payments.]-In an action on a promissory note payable to or-der, evidence is admissible, it being a commercial transaction, to prove that payments claimed by defendant and estab-lished by cheques and receipts bearing dates subsequent to that of the note were in fact made to retire a prior note.

Renaud v. Beauchemin, Q.R. 35 S.C. 193.

-Note signed in blank-Holder in due course.]—The payee of a promissory note made in the manner set forth in s. 31, c. 119, R.S.C. 1906, may, in the same man-ner as an indorsee, be the party to whom it is negotiated, as well as issued, and a holder in due course, within the meaning of the following s. 32, and of s. 56. -Husband and wife-Separate property of wife—Married Woman's Property Acts (N.S.)—Action by wife against husband.]— Under the Married Woman's Property Acts of Nova Scotia, a promissory note indorsed to the maker's wife can be sued on by the latter against her husband.

Michaels v. Michaels, 30 Can. S.C.R. 547, reversing 33 N.S.R. 1.

-Promissory note-Joint and several makers-Action against makers jointly-Recovery of judgment against one.]—The defendants G. and N. were sued jointly as makers of a note for $25. The writ, which was issued in January, 1885, was served on the defendant N., and the defendant G. accepted service. N. appeared and pleaded, but, by arrangement, nothing was done in relation to the claim against the defendant G. In November, 1885, N. withdrew his defence, and confessed the action, and final judgment was enter-ed against him, on which some payments were made. In 1899, plaintiff commenced proceedings against the defendant G., who, under an agreement reserving his rights, appeared and pleaded:-Held, reversing the judgment of the County Court Judge for District No. 6, that the judgment entered on confession against the defendant N., was an answer to the claim subscquently made against the defendant G. McLeod v. Power (1898), 2 Ch. 295, followed. Held, further, that the action having been brought against defendants as joint debtors only, the position of G. in the suit was not affected by the fact that the note in question was a joint and several one, and that plaintiff, in another suit, might have some claim against G. alone. McDonald v. Gillis, 33 N.S.R. 244.

-Accommodation acceptances-Authority of secretary of company to make-Knowledge of party claiming under.]-The secretary of defendant company, whose authority was limited to the acceptance of drafts, indorsed, in the company's name, a number of drafts in which the com-pany had no interest, for the accommodation of C. The learned trial Judge found that the plaintiff bank, where the drafts were discounted, had knowledge that in-dorsements were made for the accommodation of C .: - Held, dismissing plaintiff's appeal with costs, that defendant was not liable. Semble, that where the directors might, under the power given them, delegate to the secretary power to indorse for the company, the bank, taking the paper bona fide, would be entitled to assume that the secretary had such power. although it had not, as a matter of fact, been delegated.

- Promissory note-Presentation-Waiver.]—Plaintiffs inserted defendant's advertisements in two of their publications for the sums of $10 and $15 respectively. Separate agreements were made in respect to each publication, but the agreements were made at the same time, and defendant, at the same time that the agreements were made and signed, gave plaintiffs his promissory note for the sum of $25 payable four months after date at defendant's office. Plaintiffs' statement of claim coutained claims based upon the note and upon the original consideration:-Held, that the claim based upon the original consideration was within the jurisdiction of the Court. Held, that the defence that the note was not presented for payment and that, while it was current, the remedy upon the consideration was suspended must be pleaded. Held, that if defendant were allowed to amend by pleading such defence plaintiffs should also be allowed to amend by alleging that presentment was waived by subsequent promises in writing to pay. Held, that something was to be inferred from the duty of a clerk whose duty it was to make presentments, and who testified that he had done so in the case in question.

Sharp v. Power, 33 N.S.R. 371.

-Draft-Liability of acceptor for accommodation of third party-Not discharged for payment made by drawer.]-Plaintiff agreed to sell certain cattle to M. on condition that M. would procure someone to accept a draft for the price. Defendant, at the request of M., accepted a draft for the amount, and a second draft given in renewal of the first, and agreed to accept a third draft in renewal of the second, but afterwards refused to do so at the instance of M., who in the meantime had become insolvent. Plaintiff furnished all the money used to retire the second draft with the exception of the sum of $10 paid by M.:- Held, affirming the judgment of the County Court Judge with costs, that defendant was not relieved from his liability on the second acceptance by the payment made by plaintiff, and that plaintiff was entitled to judgment for the amount of the acceptance less the sum of $10 paid by M. Held, that the case was distinguishable from one where the acceptor accepts for the accommodation of the drawer, who takes up the bill at maturity and negotiates it to someone who sues the acceptor.

Dill v. Wheatley, 34 N.S.R. 526.

-Conditional indorsement-Principal and agent-Knowledge by agent-Constructive notice-Decett.]--A promissory note indorsed on the express understanding that it should only be available upon the happening of a certain condition is not binding upon the indorser where the condition has not been fulfilled. Pym v. Campbell (6 E. & B. 370) followed. The principal is affected by notice to the agent unless it appears that the agent was actually implicated in a fraud upon the principal, and it is not sufficient for the holder to show that the agent had an interest in deceiving his principal. Kettlewell v. Watson (21 Ch. D. 685), and Richards v. The Bank of Nova Scotia (26 Can. S.C.R. 381) referred to.

The Commercial Bank of Windsor v. Morrison, 32 Can. S.C.R. 98.

- Promissory note - Accommodation maker—Conditional delivery—Bank—Notice to agent.]—In an action brought by the plaintiff bank against the defendant M., as indorser of a promissory note made M., as indorser or a promissory note made by S., and as joint and several maker with S., of two other promissory notes, the defence chiefly relied on was that the notes were signed by M., and delivered to plaintiff's agent under a special agreement, of which plaintiff had notice, that they were not to be used until they had been indorsed or signed by certain other parties, as co-sureties. The evidence show ed that the defendant S. was largely indebted to plaintiff for advances made by plaintiff's agent, for which plaintiff was anxious to obtain collateral security, and that the notes were taken for that purpose, and not as ordinary discounts. Also, that the signature of the defendant M. to the notes was obtained by plaintiff's agent under instructions from the cashier of the bank. Also, that, at the time the notes were signed, plaintiff's agent was told by M. not to take them unless the other signatures were obtained, and re-plied, "that is all right." Also, that the notes were signed in defendant's office, and that no part of the transaction took place in the office of the bank:-Held, set-ting aside the findings of the jury, that the signature of M. was clearly obtained in the course of the business of the agency, and within the scope of the agent's authority, and that his knowledge of the condition upon which the signatures were obtained must be held to be to the knowledge of the bank. Held, also, that if the agent, acting under the authority of the cashier, applied to the defendant M. to sign the notes, and, in order to induce him to do so, agreed to any condition, or did anything to lead M. to believe that they would not be used by the bank until another person had signed them, the bank would be bound, although the conduct of the agent was unauthorized, and knowledge thereof was concealed from its offi-

Promissory note—Payment after action brought — Collateral security.]—The M. Company owed the plaintiff $4,000 for which he held as collateral security the defendant's note for $3,000, made for the accommodation of the company, and some other collateral. After action brought on the note the plaintiff received a dividend from the company, which had gone into liquidation, and realized on some of the other collateral, but these facts were not pleaded. Verdict having been entered for the full amount of the note.—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment for the full amount of the note, but the amount realized upon the collateral and some portion of the dividend should be credited upon the execution.

Gorman v. Copp, 39 N.B.R. 309.

—Estoppel — Forgery — Promissory note— Duty to notify holder.]—On July 15, 1907, defendant received notice of dishonour of a note purporting to be endorsed by him and on October 7 this action was begun against him on the note. On November 26 defendant notified the plaintiff that his endorsement was forged by G. the maker. G. died on December 12 following. There was a genuine endorsement on the note by W. Co. and W. Co. was solvent:—Held, that the defendant was not estopped from denying his signature as the plaintiff had his remedy against W. Co. and against G.'s estate, and the loss of costs in this action was not such damage as would ground an estoppel. Ewing v. Dominion Bank, 35 S.C.R. 133, distinguished.

Connell v. Shaw, 39 N.B.R. 267.

—Promissory note—Consideration—Collateral security.]—M., being indebted to the bank in a large amount upon a note of which plaintiff was indorser, and being about to leave the province, arranged with the defendant to assume the debt, which he did by making a note payable to plaintiff, who, on defendant's assurance that M. had secured him and had arranged for money to meet the note, discounted the note and used the proceeds to discharge M.'s liability. When the note given by defendant fell due he made several payments on account, but ultimately plaintiff had to take it up:—Held, that under these circumstances plaintiff was entitled to recover. One of the grounds of defence was that plaintiff promoted the passage of an Act through the Legislature under which certain stock which M. deposited as security for his indebtedness was rendered valueless. Held, that if the Act had the effect contended for plaintiff could not be held responsible for it, and, further, that if the promoters of the Act were guilty of an improper action defendant was equally guilty with plaintiff.

Hobrecker v. Sanders, 44 N.S.R. 14.

—Defence of illegal consideration.]—The defence to an action on a promissory note was that the note in question was given for money advanced by the plaintiff with knowledge that it was to be used in an illegal stock jobbing transaction:—Held, by Russell and Drysdale, JJ., that, in order to succeed in this defence, it was necessary for the defendant to show that he was engaged in an illegal transaction and that plaintiff knew, when he advanced the money, that it was to be used for the furtherance of such transaction, and that, in the absence of such evidence, there should be judgment for plaintiff for the amount claimed with costs.

Dean v. MacLean, 44 N.S.R. 147.

-Promissory note given in settlement-Right to recover notwithstanding subsequently discovered error.]-Defendant was agent of plaintiff to collect rents and profits of a wharf property. On the termina-tion of defendant's agency, plaintiff brought an action for an accounting, which was settled by defendant agreeing to pay plaintiff the sum of $376, by paying $125 in cash and giving his note for the balance, and by plaintiff agreeing to assign to defendant all debts due in respect to the property during the period covered by the agency. Defendant refused payment of the note given by him on the ground that, before it became due, it was discovered that $100 had been paid plaintiff on account of one of the debts assigned to defendant, and that defendant was entitled to credit for this amount on the note:—Held, per Meagher, J., Ritchie, J., concurring, Weatherbe, J., concurring in result, and Graham, E.J., dissenting, that as defendant's attorney had knowledge of the error, before the compromise, which resulted in the giving of the note, was effected, and as by the compromise plaintiff was prevented from going fully into the accounts, and perhaps establishing a greater liability on defendant's part, she was entitled to recover the full amount of the note.

Worrall v. Peters, 35 N.S.R. 26.

-Promissory note-Holder.]-Where a promissory note was delivered by McG., the holder, to P., whose name McG. wished to use in the collection of the note, and subsequently and before the note was due, McG. got it from P., telling him that he was going to place it with a banker, and he had better direct him to collect it. P. never gave any direction to collect it, and did not, before commencement, authorize the action, but he subsequently ratified it, stating he would have authorized it in the first instance if he had been asked to do so:-Held, in an action on the note in the name of P., that he was entitled to recover as holder.

-Promissory note-Collateral agreement-Admissibility of evidence to vary terms.]

—To plaintiff's claim against the defendant, as maker of a promissory note for $28.58, the defence was set up that, in consideration of defendant's forbearance to commence proceedings, in the Probate Court for proof, in solemn form, of the will of A.C., plaintiff agreed to advance defendant, on account of a legacy to which she was entitled, as guardian of her infant children, a sum of money to be expended in repairs to property of her said children, and that plaintiff, not hav-ing the money required for that purpose, requested defendant to sign a note for the amount, which note was indorsed by plaintiff, to a firm which had done a portion of the repairs, and that said note was given on the understanding that plaintiff would pay it when it became due, and would deduct the amount from the amount payable to defendant, as guardian of her said children:—Held, reversing the judg-ment of the County Court Judge, in de-fendant's favour, that defendant, having violated her agreement, by commencing proceedings in the Probate Court, and having succeeded in setting the will aside, could not set up the agreement as a defence to plaintiff's action on the note. In an action on a second note, for the sum of $150, defendant, on the trial, sought to give evidence to show that the note, although expressed to be payable on demand, was made subject to a condition that defendant should not be called upon for payment, unless her children should die before a legacy, to which they were entitled, under the will of A. C., should become payable. Held, affirming the judgment of the County Court Judge, that the note being absolute on its face, evidence could not be given to vary its terms, there being no evidence to show that it was given on condition, or as an escrow, or only to be treated as a note in a certain event.

McNeil v. Cullen, 37 N.S.R. 13.

-Promissory note-Plea of material alteration-Conflict of evidence.]-To an action on a promissory note defendant pleaded that the note sued on was given in renewal of a prior note for a larger amount, and that the original note was rendered void by being materially altered by the addition thereto of a charge for interest, of which alteration defendants had no knowledge at the time of making the renewal note. There was a conflict of evidence as to the alteration referred to. but plaintiff's version was supported by the appearance of the note itself, which appeared, on the face of it, to have been all written at one time, with the one ink, and in the one handwriting, and bore no evidence of having been altered. The appearance of the note being consistent with plaintiff's evidence, and hardly reconcilable with that of defendants, and the trial Judge, after seeing and hearing the witnesses, having accepted plaintiff's version:—Held, dismissing defendant's appeal with costs, that there was no reason for interfering with his decision.

Brennan v Sutherland, 37 N.S.R. 370.

-Promissory note-Illegal consideration-Burden of proof.]—In an action by plaintiff as indorsee of a promissory against defendants as makers, the defences relied on were that the note was made for the accommodation of plaintiff, and that it was given in connection with a smuggling transaction, and for other illegal purposes. Plaintiff's evidence was unsatisfactory to the learned trial Judge and there was failure on his part to produce the books of account showing how the consideration for the note was made up. There was evidence to support the plea of illegality, and the learned Judge holding that under these circumstances, the burden of proving consideration was upon plaintiff, dismissed the action with costs. On appeal there was an equal division of opinion and the appeal was dismissed without costs.

Ross v. Gannon, 39 N.S.R. 65, affirmed 39 Can. S.C.R. 675.

-Promissory note-Giving time - Good consideration.]-Defendant gave his promissory note to plaintiff for $100, in part payment of a larger sum which he agreed to pay for the transfer of the interest of F. in the Bedford Electric Co., upon which plaintiff held an option. At the time the note was given plaintiff signed an agreement in which he undertook to transfer the interest bargained for to defendant upon payment of the balance of the purchase money as agreed. An action on the note was defended, among other grounds, on the ground that it was made subject to a condition, alleged to be contained in the agreement signed by plaintiff, which had not been fulfilled. The trial Judge having found, as a fact, that the condition relied. upon was not contained in the agreement when it was signed by plaintiff, the Court refused to disturb his finding:-Held, that as plaintiff, at the time he agreed to transfer the interest of F., was entitled to receive a portion of the consideration in cash, and, instead, gave defendant time for the payment, taking his note for the amount, this constituted good consideration for the note.

the payee (deceased) on indorsing a promissory note for the accommodation of the maker, promises without consideration to pay it, and the holder compels payment by the payee's estate, an action for the recovery of the amount lies by the estate against the maker.

Johnston v. Hazen; Re Woodford Claim, 3 N.B. Eq. 341.

—Bill of exchange—Action by drawer—Indorsement after action—Second action by indorsee — Stay of proceedings.]—An action by the transferee of an overdue bill. upon which an action has been already brought by the transferor, wherein an offer to suffer judgment has been made and accepted, was stayed on an application to the equitable jurisdiction of the Court, the transferee having knowledge of the pendency of the first action. An application to compel the plaintiffs to sign judgment on their acceptance of the defendant's offer to suffer judgment in the first action was refused.

Kennedy Company v. Vaughan, 37 N.B. R. 112.

—Deposit receipt — Action on as note— Payable after notice—Demand for immediate payment.]—A writing, signed by the defendant, admitting the receipt of a sum of money, and agreeing to be responsible for the same with interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum upon production of the receipt and after three months' notice, may be recovered upon a promissory note. A demand for immediate payment made more than three months before the commencement of the action is sufficient proof of the notice called for by the receipt.

Babineau v. LaForest, 37 N.B.R. 156, affirmed 37 Can. S.C.R. 521.

-Bill of exchange-General acceptance -Lex loci.]-A bill of exchange dated and drawn at Halifax by the Dominion Antimony Co., Ltd., and addressed to the St. Helens Smelting Co., Manchester, England, was accepted at Manchester, payable at the Manchester and Liverpool District Banking Co., London. An order having been made for service out of the jurisdiction, and judgment given refusing to set the same aside:-Held, that, under the Bills of Exchange Act (1890), s. 71 (1) (b), the interpretation of the acceptance was to be determined by the law of the place where the contract was made, i.e., the place where the bill was accepted, and that as so interpreted the acceptance was not qualified but general, and the acceptor must seek his creditor.

Sanders v. St. Helens Smelting Co., 39 N.S.R. 370.

—Imperial Bills of Exchange Act—Notice of dishonour under — Reasonable time — Direct and regular mail.]-Under the Imperial Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, which provides (s. 49, sub-s. 12) that ''notice may be given as soon as the bill is dishonoured, and must be given within a reasonable time thereafter," and further provides that "in the absence of special circumstances, notice is not deemed to have been given within a reasonable time, unless, where the person giving and the person to receive notice reside in different places the notice is sent off the day after the dishouour of the bill, if there be a post at a convenient hour on that day. and, if there be no such post on that day, then by the next post thereafter." Notice of dishonour of a note payable in London, England, by a person in this province sent the third day after protest by the first Canadian mail from London is not sufficient where there are mails leaving London for the United States between the date of protest and the leaving of the Canadian mail by which the notice would have sooner reached its destination. An agreement by the holder of past due promissory notes made with the maker, with-out the knowledge or consent of the indorser to extend the time for payment to a fixed date, and accept in full satisfaction a compromise if paid at the date fixed, will discharge the indorser, although the compromise was not paid, and it was expressly agreed that in that event the holder's rights against all parties should be preserved.

Fleming v. McLeod, 37 N.B.R. 630.

-Consideration-Forbearance.] - Plaintiffs recovered judgment against defendant and obtained an order from a commissioner of the Court under the Collection Act, after examination, for payment of the debt by instalments. Defendant paid the instalments for a time as required by the order, and then failing to pay, an order was obtained under the Act for an execution to take the body. Defendant having been arrested applied to a Judge of the Court under the Judgment Debtors' Act for his discharge. On the recommendation of the Judge in favour of a settlement defendant gave the note sued on:-Held, that the forbearance by plaintiffs in respect to their judgment, and in respect to asking for a remand, constituted good consideration for the making of the note. At the time of the making of the com-missioner's order defendant was in the employ of the Dominion Government as Inspector of Weights and Measures, and it was claimed that the order was illegal and that the arrest was invalid and constituted duress, and that the giving of the note under the circumstances was illegal. Held, that, in the absence of statutory provisions in the province expressly protecting the salaries of government ofa

Smith v. Frame, 41 N.S.R. 20.

-Note given in substitution - Principal and surety-Discharge by giving time.]--In an action on a joint and several promissory note made by the defendants, W. and P., the defences chiefly relied on were that W. was surety for P. and was discharged by the giving of time to the principal, and that the note sued on was discharged by the acceptance in substitution therefor of another note made by P. and one D. R. The evidence showed that W. paid one-half of an original note made by himself and P., and signed the note sued on on the understanding that payment was to be enforced from P. at maturity. When the note became due P. was not in a position to pay in full and offered a renewal note for the balance due, which plaintiff agreed to accept provided P. would furnish another name approved of by plaintiff. Before the note was made plaintiff expressed his willingness to accept the name of C.R., but P. failed to get that name and sent to plaintiff instead a note signed by himself and D. R. Plaintiff did not return this note but told P., verbally, that he would not accept it:-Held, per Graham, E.J. (Townsend, J., concurring), that the retention of the note by plaintiff was not under the circumstances an acceptance. Also, assuming W. was only a surety for P., it was his duty to see that the obligation of his principal was satisfied. Also, that in the absence of evidence that ought reasonably to satisfy a jury that the note made by P. and D. R. was accepted by plaintiff in lieu of the note upon which W. was liable, there was no necessity for sending the case back for a new trial. Per Russell, J., assuming that the directions of the trial Judge to the jury were erroneous, there need not be a new trial if a verdict for defendant would be set aside as unreasonable.

Rockwell v. Wood, 39 N.S.R. 423.

-Foreign protest—Notice of dishonour to indorser in Canada—Knowledge of address—First mail leaving for Canada—Notice through agent—Agreement for time—Discharge of surety.]—Notes made in St. John, N.B., were protested in Londou, England, where they were payable. The ladorser lived at Richibucto, N.B. Notice of dishonour of the first note was mailed to the indorser at Richibucto, and, at one same time, the protest was sent by the holders to an agent at Halifax, N.S., instructing him to take the necessary steps to obtain payment. The agent, on the same day that he received the protest and instructions, sent, by post, notice of dishonour to the indorser at Richibucto. As the other notes fell due, the holders sent them and the protests, by the first packet from London to Canada, to the same agent, at Halifax, by whom the notices of dishonour were forwarded to the indorser, at Richibucto:-Held, that the sending of the notice of dishonour of the first note direct from London to Richibucto, with the pre-caution of also sending it through the agent was an indication that the holders were not aware of the correct address of the indorser and the fact that they used the proper address was not conclusive of their knowledge or sufficient to compel an interference imputing such knowledge to them. Therefore, the notices in respect to the other notes, sent through the agent, were sufficient. The maker of the note gave evidence of an offer to the holders to settle his indebtedness, on certain terms and at a time some two or three years later than the maturity of the last note, and that the same was agreed to by the holders. The latter, in their evidence, denied such agreement and testified that, in all the negotiations, they had informed the maker that they would do nothing whatever in any way to release the indorser. Held, that the evidence did not show that there was any agreement by the holders to give time to the maker and the indorser was not discharged. If the existence of an agreement could be gathered from the evidence, it was without consideration and the creditors' rights against the sureties were reserved. Judgment of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick (37 N.B. Rep. 630) reversed.

Fleming v. McLeod, 39 Can. S.C.R. 290.

—Promissory note—Instalments of interest—Transfer after default to pay interest—
'Overdue' bill—Notice — Holder in good fath.]—Where interest is made payable periodically during the currency of a promissory note, payable at a certain time after date, the note does not become overdue within the meaning of ss. 56 and 70 of the Bills of Exchange Act, merely by default in the payment of an instalment of such interest. The destrine of constructive notice is not applicable to bills and notes transferred for value.

Union Investment Company v. Wells, 39 Can. S.C.R. 625.

—Promissory note—Fraud in procuring— Discount—Good faith.] — L. and others signed promissory notes each for the amount of ten shares in a company formed to manufacture rotary engines under an invention of the payee who fraudulently misrepresented to them the prospects and intentions of such company. At the same time each maker signed an application for ten shares. The payee and T., the assignee of his patent of invention, induced W. to discount these notes and received a portion of the proceeds, part being retained by W. in payment of debts due him from these two parties. On the trial of actions by W. on the notes the evidence of T., who had absconded, was taken under commission and he swore that the form of application signed by the respective defendants had been shown to W. before the notes were discounted. W. denied this and swore that he had been told that the notes were given in payment of stock held by the payee:—Held, that the evidence of W., on whom the onus of proof rested, could not be accepted; that the whole testimony and attendant circumstances showed that W. suspected that the proceeds of the notes belonged to the company; and, having discounted them without inquiry as to the right of the payee and T. to receive these proceeds, he was not in good faith and could not recover.

Lockart v. Wilson, 39 Can. S.C.R. 541.

-Note delivered conditionally - Indorsement—Liability of partner of payee.] — Plaintiff purchased from C., a member of the firm of R. & C., a quantity of hay, and gave in payment therefor his promissory note, which C. undertook should not be used until the hay was delivered. The hay was never delivered and C., in violation of his agreement, indorsed plaintiff's note to T. for value. An action brought by T. against plaintiff to recover the amount of the note was defended by plaintiff at the instance of R., who practically joined in the defence and acted as if the cause were his own:-Held, affirming the judgment of the trial Judge, that plaintiff was entitled to recover against R. not only the amount of the note for which judgment was recovered against him but the amount of the costs taxed as well.

Ross v. Reid, 42 N.S.R. 232.

-Promissory note-Agreement to release indorser—Sufficiency of consideration.] Plaintiffs sold a wagon to H., for which they took notes indorsed by defendant. H. absconded without making payment and defendant agreed with plaintiffs to deliver up to them the wagon in question, together with another wagon which H. had purchased from plaintiffs and not paid for, both being in his possession, upon being released from liability upon his indorsements. Plaintiffs assented to this, and left the wagons, temporarily, in defendant's possession:—Held, that the change of defendant's position with respect to the wagons was good consideration for plaintiff's agreement to release him, and that whether defendant's agreement was of any benefit to plaintiffs or not was immaterial. DeWolfe v. Richards, 43 N.S.R. 34.

--Presentment--Waiver---Knowledge of default.]---An offer made after its maturity by an endorser of a promissory note to pay the amount of the same will not operate as a waiver of presentment in the absence of evidence that at the time of the offer he knew there had been default in presentment.

—Evidence to vary written contract—Promissory note—Indorsement—Bills of Exchange Act, s. 55, sub-s. 2.]—Parol eviden will not be received to show that a person who indorsed a promissory note to another for valuable consideration stipulated at the time that he was not liable on the indorsement, as that would be contradicting the contract which such indorsement by sub-s. 2 of s. 55 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, imports. Smith v. Squires, 13 Man. R. 360.

-Accommodation note-Holder in due course-Equities attaching to note-Defects in title-Agreement for renewal-Parol evidence.]-Action by endorsee of a note against the maker. The trial Judge found that the note was made by the defendant for the accommodation of K., the payee, subject to the conditions that (1) it was not to be used at all except in a certain stated event; (2) it was to be negotiated, if at all, only at a certain nam ed bank; and (3) it was renewable for a stated period, which had not expired at the commencement of the action. He also found that the second and third of these conditions had been broken; that the plaintiff acquired the note, though for value, after maturity from one C., the trustee for the benefit of the creditors of K., and not from a certain bank which. at the time of the arrangement whereby he acquired the note, actually held it as a collateral security for an indebtedness of K.:-Held, that these conditions were "equities attaching to the note," and their breach "defects in the title of the person who negotiated it''; that the note was affected by them in the hands of both C. and the plaintiff; and that therefore the plaintiff could not recover. Where a note is subject to an agreement for renewal, if the renewal is not contemplated, except on the happening of an event not within the knowledge of the holder alone, the obligation of offering to renew is on the party entitled to renew. Where it is made to appear that a note, transfer or other writing is merely an incident in or part of a larger agreement, and there is no writing in which the parties professed to set down all the terms of their agreement oral evidence of the agreement is admissible. Signature is a conventional mode of declaring a writing to be the retord of an agreement; but it is not essential, except where made so by statute. The fact that such a writing is directed to a third party does not prevent its being taken as the record of such an agreement. At the close of the plaintiff's case, a defence, that the plaintiff was not the holder of the note at the commencement of the action being on record, a motion to dismiss on this ground was made. The trial Judge held that this defence was established, it appearing that the note had been deposited with a certain bank as a collateral security and had not been returned to the plaintiff until after the commencement of the action; but on the plaintiff's application an amendment was allowed adding the bank with its consent as a co-plaintiff on the terms that the bank stand on the title of plaintiff.

- Promissory note-Partnership-Signature of individual name with descriptive words-Liability of firm-Extrinsic evidence.]-In an action against the members of a partnership carrying on business under the name of the O. T. L. Co., on a promissory note reading as follows:-"Sixty days after date we promise to pay D. & B. or order $407.29 at the Imperial Bank here; value received," and signed "W. D. R., Manager, O. T. L. Co.": Held, (1) That evidence of the circumstances surrounding the making and accepting of the note was admissible for the purpose of showing who was intended to be liable on the note. (2) That, on the terms of the note and the evidence of the surrounding circumstances in this case, the defendants were liable. The defendants carried on a lumbering business in partnership. R. was their manager at the place of operations. The partnership kept in the vicinity of their mill a boardinghouse, at which their workmen boarded, and a store for the sale to them of supplies. R. ordered goods which were used in the boarding-house, the store or the mill. Held, that the ordering of the goods was within the scope of R.'s authority and that the defendants were therefore liable.

Ferguson v. Fairchild, 1 Terr. L.R. 329.

—Trading company — Promissory note signed by managing director.]—The defendant company was incorporated by Letters Patent under the Manitoba Joint Stock Companies Act, R.S.M., c. 25, for the purpose of carrying on a trading business, and plaintiffs sued as indorsee of three promissory notes given by the managing director of the company in its name to one Crighton for tea ordered from him but never delivered. There was no by-law, resolution or other act expressly defining the powers or duties of the managing director, but the evidence showed that the course of business of the company was such that he had frequently given similar promissory notes which had been paid by the company's cheques with-out objection on the part of the other directors or the auditors:-Held, that the notes sued on had been made in general accordance with the powers of the man-aging director within the meaning of s. 62 of the Act and were binding on the company.

Imperial Bank v. Farmers' Trading Co., 13 Man. R. 412.

-Promissory note-Holder in due course-Transfer—Indorsement.]—The claim of the plaintiff was set out in the statement of claim as follows: "The plaintiff claims against the defendants for the payment of the sum of $249.84, the amount of a promissory note and interest thereon, dated the 2nd December, 1907, and made by the defendants, payable two years after date, to the order of C. H., at . . ., which said the order of C. H., at . . . , which said promissory note was duly transferred by the said C. H. to the plaintiff, for valuable consideration, before maturity." The evidence at the trial showed an indorsement and deliver and that the all the said that the said the said that the said the said that the said that the said the said that the and delivery, and that the plaintiff was a holder in due course:—Held, that the pleading was insufficient to establish a right of action under the Bills of Exchange Act. The plaintiff was allowed to amend and to allege that the note was duly transferred or indorsed to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff thereby became the holder for value in due course; and the plaintiff was allowed to enter judgment for the amount of the note, with costs of a default judgment, less the defendants' costs of defence as it was admitted that they would not have defended had the pleading been properly framed at first.

Heon v. Bonnet, 14 W.L.R. 534 (Sask.).

--Promissory note--Accommodation co-maker---Knowledge of holder---Extension of time.]--In an action by the payee of a promissory note against the two joint makers, it appeared that the defendant D. signed as maker entirely for the accommodation of the defendant K. and without receiving any consideration therefor, and that the plaintiff knew at the time of taking the note that D. was an accommodation maker only. The plaintiff placed the note with his bankers as collateral security for his indebtedness to them, and the bankers indorsed upon it the words "extended for 9 months." D. was not notified of this extension. There was no notined of this extension. Insere was no evidence that the time was extended for K.'s benefit, either by the bankers or the plaintiff, or that K. was ever informed by either of them that he could have 9 months more in which to pay:—Held, that D. was not released by the extension of time without notice to him. Held, also, that D., as an accommodation maker to the knowledge of the plaintiff, was not entitled under the law merchant or the Bills of Exchange Act to notice of dishonour. The note fell due on the 20th October, 1907; the plaintiff took no proceedings against D. or K. until more than 14 months after that date; D. was never notified that the note had not been paid until the 6th October, 1908; at some time—the evidence did not shew when—K. made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors: the evidence did not shew whether the plaintiff proved his claim against the estate or not, or whether D. might not have done so and obtained some benefit, if he had known that K. had not paid the note:—Held, that there should be a new trial so as to give D. an opportunity of trial so as to give D. an opportunity of proving that he was in some way prejudiced by the omission to notify him of K.'s default—the position being that the plaintiff, the creditor, had failed to proceed promptly against K., the principal debtor, and failed to give D., the surety, notice of K's default, and upon these facts, if damage were shewn, D. would be discharged from his liability. from his liability. Hough v. Kennedy, 13 W.L.R. 674 (Alta.).

—Cheque—Procurement by misrepresenta-tion—Indorsement to third person.]—Plain-tiff, who was a confidential clerk of a director of the defendant company, and had been himself a director of the company, accepted from the said director a cheque of the company for $2,663.59. The cheque had been issued on the understanding that it was to be used only for the purpose of exhibiting it to a tax collector to secure to the said director further time for the payment of taxes on his own property. the disappearance of the director the defendant company stopped payment of the cheque, and plaintiff brought action, claiming he was a holder in due course:-Held, on the evidence, that plaintiff had given no value for the cheque and that he had notice of the defect in title when the cheque was indorsed over to him.

—Promissory note—Indorser—Holder in due course—Estoppel.]—(1) Under s. 131 of the Bills of Exchange Act, R.S.C. 1996, c. 119, a person who indorses a promissory note not indorsed by the payee at the time may be liable as an indorser to the payee. Robinson v. Mann, 1901, 31 S.C.R. 484, and Mc-Donough v. Cook (1909), 19 O.L.R 267, followed. (2) Aithough the defendant company had made the note in question in pursuance of an agreement to assume the debt of another to the plaintiff company; yet, as there was a good and valuable considera-tion given for that assumption, the plaintiffs were holders in due course and the defendant company was liable upon the note. Knechtel Furniture Co. v. Ideal House Furnishers, 19 Man. R. 652.

-Promissory note-Presentment for payment-Waiver. J-Action by indorsees of promissory note given by defendant company to the payees for value. The plaintiffs took the note during its currency as security for an advance to the payees. The note was payable at the Bank of Hamilton, Winnipeg. At its maturity the secretary-treasurer of defendant company went to the office of the payees and gave them a re-newal note without inquiring for the original. The payees then negotiated the renewal note and the defendant company afterwards paid it. The trial judge was satisfied upon the evidence that the original note had been presented for payment be-fore action, but he nonsuited the plaintiffs on the ground that they, being shareholders in the payee company, were personally bound by the wrongful action of that company in taking the renewal note:—Held, per Perdue and Cameron, JJ.A.:—(1) That the nonsuit was wrong, as there was nothing to show that the plaintiffs were not holders in due course. (2) That the action of the defendants in giving the renewal note and subsequently paying it amounted to an acknowledgment that the original note was made with their authority and that they were liable on it. Per Cameron, J.A.:—
(1) That, under s. 183 of the Bills of Exchange Act, presentment of the note for payment before action was not necessary.
(2) That the defendants were liable on the note although it was not duly made under their by-laws, as innocent holders of negotiable securities are not bound to inquire whether certain preliminaries which ought to have been gone through have actually been gone through. Per Richards, J.A.: -That it was necessary to prove presentment be-fore action and this had not been done. Per Perdue, J.A.: - That there was sufficient evidence of presentment before action. Appeal allowed and verdict entered for plaintiffs with costs.

Robertson v. Northwestern Register Co., 19 Man. R. 402, 13 W.L.R. 613.

-Bill drawn to order of bank-Action by drawer.]-Plaintiff, the drawer of a bill of exchange accepted by the defendant, brought action thereon. The bill was drawn payable to the order of the Dominion Bank, and was not indorsed by the bank, but in the statement of claim it was alleged that upon dis-honour the bill was returned by the bank to the drawer, who was then the holder thereof. The defendant appeared and filed a defence which was struck out on a motion for speedy judgment. On such motion the defendant filed no affidavit, but relied on the objection that the bill had not been indorsed to the plaintiff, who could not, therefore, maintain the action:—Held, per Wetmore, C.J., and Johnstone, J., that as the defendant had, in answer to the motion, raised a difficult question of law which might be an answer to the plaintiff's claim, he should be permitted to defend. Per Newlands and Prendergast, JJ., that it was not necessary for the plaintiff in pleading to allege any facts which would be presumed in his favour, and it was therefore unneces-sary to allege that the Dominion Bank were the holders for value, and it might be presumed that when they returned the bill to the plaintiff they were paid by him, and it was therefore unnecessary to allege pay-ment in order to entitle the drawer to recover. (2) That it was not necessary for the Dominion Bank to indorse the bill to the drawer, as when the bank was paid the bill ceased to be negotiable, and the only right of action which exists is the right or action against the acceptor by the draw-er, which he acquires not through the payee but by virtue of his original position as drawer. The Court being evenly divided, appeal dismissed. Velie v. Hemstreet, 2 Sask. R. 296.

"Marked" cheque—"Certified" cheque-Unauthorized acceptance by clerk of bank.] -A junior clerk employed by the Canadian Bank of Commerce obtained by fraud pos-session of the defendant Yuen's cheque for $350 in favour of the defendant Jacques, endorsed by Jacques, dated 9th June, 1906, and on the 30th October, 1906, placed the acceptance stamp of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, his initials and the ledger folio thereon and negotiated the cheque for cash to the plaintiff. In an action by the plaintiff against the drawer and the endorser of the cheque and the Canadian Bank of Commerce as acceptor:—Held, the plaintiff could not recover against the drawer and endorser, for the reason that the plaintiff was not the holder in due course, the cheque having come into possession of the plaintiff on the 30th October, nearly four months after it was drawn,—it being held that the cheque having been in circulation an unreasonable length of time was overdue. In order to constitute estoppel by negligence, it is essential for the negligence to be in or immediately connected with the transaction itself, which is complained of; and while there may be a duty to be careful not to facilitate any fraud in connection with the transaction, it is essential, in the event of a breach of that duty to show that the fraud was the natural and ordinary result of the breach of that duty. Held, therefore, that although the bank may have been negligent in leaving the acceptance stamp and the ledger where it would be possible for an authorized person to make use of them with apparent authority; yet the clerk's fraud did not flow as a natural and ordinary result of such want of care; and the bank was therefore not precluded from setting up want of authority for the acceptance. Held, also, that a cheque after acceptance is subject te all the rules applicable to negotiation of an unaccepted cheque. The distinction explained between a "marked" cheque, according to the English custom of bankers, and "certified" cheque.-The customary certification of a cheque constitutes an acceptance within the meaning of the Bills of Exchange Act. Such an acceptance makes the bank directly liable to the holder. If the payee or a subsequent holder procures the certification of a cheque, the drawer is discharged.

Northern Bank v. Yuen, 2 Alta. R. 310.

Bill of exchange-Acceptance-Stated count-Opening account.]-Acceptance of a bill of exchange is evidence of an account stated to the amount of the bill. In order to open a settled account it is necessary to particularize specific errors in the account. In an action by the drawer of bills of exchange against the acceptor, the defendant pleaded generally that he accepted the bills under a mistake as to the state of the account. This defence was struck out, with leave to the defendant to amend on terms of filing an affidavit verifying the facts to be set out in the proposed amended defence. The proposed amended defence alleged that when the defendant accepted the bills he did so under the mistaken idea that he was indebted to the plaintiff in the amount whereof; that such mistaken belief was occasioned by the plaintiff having represented to him, by statements of account in writing and by drawing the bills, that he justly owed the plaintiff that amount, whereas, in fact, he was not indebted to him in any amount; that the defendant had dealt extensively with the plaintiff for over six years; that in course of such dealings plaintiff had, without defendant's knowledge or consent, made many exorbitant and illegal charges, and that if accounts were taken it would be found that the defendant was not indebted to the plaintiff in any amount. This proposed defence and a counterclaim, based on the same allegations, for an account, were held bad; and were not allowed to be filed, and there being, therefore, no defence on file, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Clark v. Hamilton (No. 2), 5 Terr. L.R. 178.

—Bill of exchange—Unincorporated body —Officers—Acceptance — Personal liability.]—Plaintiff brought an action on the following document, "The Board of Managers, Presbyterian Church, Moose Jaw, Please pay H. McDougall the sum of $817.85 on my account and oblige me. James Brass," and accepted as follows: "Accepted D. McLean, Chairman; A. E. Potter, Treasurer." It was found as a fact that McLean and Potter were members of the board, an unincorporated body: -Held, that (1) the document was a bill of exchange, and (2), that McLean and Potter were personally liable thereon. Brass was the contractor with the board for the erection of a manse. If the contract had been completed $817.85 would have been owing to him; but the trial Judge found that it had been left uncompleted to the value of $80. This was allowed to be set off against the amount of the plaintiff's claim; but it was also claimed that the defendants were entitled to retain 10 per cent. of the contract price for thirty days after the completion of the contract, under the provisions of the Mechanics' Lien Ordinance. Held, that the defendants were not so entitled.

McDougall v. McLean (No. 1), 1 Terr. L.R. 450.

-Collateral security - Accommodation indorser-Principal and Surety-Extending time for payment.]—T. B. L. and A. C. S. being indebted on several promissory notes to the plaintiffs who demanded security, the defendant H. A. S., the wife of A. C. at his request and without knowledge of the purpose for which he proposed to use it, indorsed a blank form of note, which was afterwards filled out as a note made by T. B. L., payable to H. A. S., and indorsed by her and A. C. S., and was then given to the plaintiffs. This note was afterwards renewed, H. A. S. again indorsing a blank form, A. C. S. being made payee and indorsing ahead of H. A. S. While the plaintiffs held this latter note, they kept the several notes, as security for which they held it, renewed, the renewals extending beyond the date of the maturity of the note held as security. In an action on the latter note, H. A. S. pleaded that she was discharged, by reason of the plaintiffs having given time by a binding agreement to T. B. L. and A. C. S., the principal debtors, without her consent:-Held, by Rouleau, J., the trial Judge, and by the Court in banc, McGuire, J., dissenting, that the renewal of the notes constituted such an agreement and that the rule invoked-that giving time to a principal debtor by a binding agreement without the surety's consent, discharges the surety—was applicable; and that H. A. S. was entitled to a dismissal of the action. Semble, per Macleod, Rouleau and Wetmore, J.J.: (1) The fact that T. B. L. falsely stated to the plaintiffs, when they demanded security, that H. A. S. was indebted to him, and asked them if they would accept her

In that und on. ard case, giving him time would in no case onuld relieve the parties to the paper given as security. Per McGuire, J., dissenting:—(1) ial m-There can only be two views of the contract entered into by H. A. S.: (a) Her contract was simply that which the law the ned implied from her indorsement of the note, that is, she thereby became surety for for the payment of that note only-not of the any notes as security for the payment of the which it might be pledged. Her obligation tha was complete when she delivered the note, and oral evidence was not admissible to Brr. attach conditions to her liability as indorser beyond what the law implied. (b) If such evidence were admissible for the purpose of showing that the note she had inindorsed was given as collateral security ing 8. for certain other notes, the evidence was to the effect that she had appointed her ites husband agent to use it as he wished, and ity, that he, in the exercise of that authority, had pledged it to the plaintiffs as a conlge tinuing pledge, and she must in this view to of it be held to have agreed to it being ste. security until the other notes were paid. ote and In either view, the giving of time to the principal debtors on the other notes, did was not affect the question of the liability of vas H. -Bill of lading with draft attached-Surrender of bill of lading before acceptance of draft-Right to examine goods-Liability of drawee.]-(1) Where a consignor of perishable goods draws through a bank upon the consignee at sight for the amount of the contract price and attaches the bill of lading to the draft the consignee is entitled to examine the goods before accepting them or paying the draft. (2) If it is necessary to obtain the bill of lading from the bank and surrender it to the carriers in order to make the examination, the fact that the consignee does so, and thereby makes it impossible to return the bill of lading to the bank does not render him liable to pay the draft. (3) Under s. 73 of the Bank Act the bank has no other or higher rights than the consignors. (4) The fact that the bank indorses the bill of lading to the consignee in order to enable him to examine the goods does not transfer the right of property in them to the consignee and if the latter deals with the goods as his own by reshipping and selling them he becomes liable to the bank, in an action for conversion, for the goods or their value. Where, therefore, the bank, in such circumstances, sued for the amount of the draft, and the defendant pleaded that a large portion of the goods were worthless, and paid into Court, the invoice price of the portion sold by him, and it appeared in evidence that the portion unsold were absolutely worthless, the Court directed an amendment of the statement of claim so as to make it an action of detinue, and gave judgment for the amount paid into Court, but without costs.

-Stamp Act, 1853, s. 19 (Imperial) not applicable to British Columbia-Bills of Exchange Act (Can.).]-Section 19 of the Stamp Act, 1853 (Imperial), which exonerates bankers from liability if they pay on what purports to be an authorized indorsement is inapplicable to British Columbia, and hence did not come into force by virtue of the English Law Act. Even if it were brought into force, it was annulled by the repugnant legislation of the Bills of Exchange Act, although not mentioned in the repealing schedule to the Act. The Canadian Bills of Exchange Act was intended to modify and alter as well as to codify the law relating to bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes. A local manager of an incorporated company. who was authorized only to indorse cheques for deposit with the Bank of British Columbia, indorsed and cashed at the Bank of Montreal cheques payable to the company drawn on that bank:— Held, the Bank of Montreal was liable to the company for the amount of the cheques so cashed.

that defendant, A. M., was an endorser of the note, liable as such to the payee, and entitled to notice of dishonour. M. M. died before maturity of the note, and defendants A. M. and H. were appointed two of his administrators; after their appointment and before maturity, they had a conversation with the plaintiff in respect of the note, and plaintiff swore that he told them when it would be due, and one of them asked for an extension of time, which was granted. Defendant A. M. swore that plaintiff told him not to worry, that he would not look to him for payment, but take whatever the estate was able to pay, and he did not ask for an extension, nor did he hear defendant H. ask for any. Defendant H. could not remember what took place. Held, insufficient to prove that defendant A. M. waived presentment or notice of dishonour. The plaintiff also, be-fore maturity, pursuant to administrators advertisement for creditors, filed with their solicitor a copy of the note and a statutory declaration that it was unpaid. Held, that this is not such a presentment as is required by s. 45 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890. Held, also, that, notwithstanding the endorser became one of the deceased maker's administrators before maturity of the note, presentment and notice of dishonour were nevertheless necessary.

—Promissory note—Signature of maker obtained by false representation—Holder in due course.]—According to findings of fact at the trial, the evidence did not clearly show that the promissory notes sued on had been signed by the defendants, and it was proved that, if they had signed them, they did so without knowing that they were promissory notes and in the belief, induced by the false representations of the agent of the payee, that the documents they signed were petitions to the Government for a road:—Held, following Foster v. McKinnon (1869), L.R. 4 C.P. 704, and Lewis v. Clay (1897), 77 L.T. 653, that, notwithstanding the language of ss. 29 and 38 (b) of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, the defendants were not liable to the plaintiffs, although they were holders in good faith, for value, and without notice of any defect or fraud and had acquired the notes during their currency.

—Promissory note—Endorsement without value—Fraud.]—Action by an endorse or against the maker and the endorser of a promissory note. Caldwell v. McDermott, 2 Terr. L.R. 249 (Scott, J.).

-Promissory notes-Partial failure of consideration.]-The defendants bought cattle from the plaintiff, gave her the promissory notes sued on for the price and took and kept the cattle, all parties believing that the plaintiff had an absolute title to them. It was subsequently ascertained that the plaintiff had only a life interest in the cattle. After learning this fact, defendants paid a year's interest on the notes and neither returned nor offered to return the cattle:-Held, that defendants were liable on the notes, as there was no fraud and no total failure of consideration. They were bound to repudiate the transaction at once on learning of the defect in plaintiff's title, if they wished to object, and must by their conduct be held to have elected, with knowledge of the tacts, to affirm their purchases.

-Promissory note-Holder for value with out notice-Delivery on condition of signature by another joint maker.]-The defendants, thirteen in number, and one Lee, formed a syndicate for the purchase of a stallion. The vendor's agent afterwards induced the defendants to sign an agreement for the purchase and promissory notes for the price on the representation that he would get Lee to put his name also on the notes. The defendants then took possession of the horse and used him for one season and part of another, when he died. Shortly before signing the notes the defendants became aware that Lee had refused to sign the notes. They did not ask then for a return of the notes or do anything to indicate that they did not intend to be bound by them. On the contrary, they acted from that time as though the syndicate was composed of themselves alone, ignored Lee in the matter and collected and retained the earnings of the horse for themselves until he died. The vendor discounted the notes with the plaintiffs, who proved that they had no notice or knowledge of any fraud or irregularity in obtaining them:-Held, that -Promissory note-Holder-Equitable setoff against drawee.]-One Maloney, to secure a claim of $867.00, endorsed to the administrators of the estate of John S. Ewart, a promissory note made in his favour by the defendant. At the same time it was arranged that the administrators should hold the balance of the proceeds in trust, first to pay certain other claims against Maloney and the residue to pay over to him. Subsequently, but before the note became due, Maloney executed an assignment to the plaintiff of all of his interest in the moneys secured by the note in trust to pay the claims previously arranged for and certain additional claims amounting to more than sufficient to exhaust the proceeds. The administrators before action endorsed the note to the plaintiff, taking from him an agreement to protect their interest. The defendant claimed to be entitled to deduct from the amount payable by him certain indebtedness of Maloney to him incurred in some collateral transaction, on the ground that the assignment was void under Rev. Ord. (1888), c. 49, or that it was no more than an assignment of a chose in action, and that the plaintiff took subject to the equities between the maker and the payee: -Held, affirming the judgment of Rouleau, J., that the assignment, having been procured by pressure, was not void; that the administrators at all events were holders in due course, and the plaintiff could rest upon their title; and that there could, therefore, be no set-off against the plain-

-Holder in due course-Rescission of contract-Plea of fraud.]—(1) The indorsee of a promissory note made payable with interest, payable annually, who acquired the note after default in payment of one of the annual interest instalments and with knowledge of the default, is not a holder of the note in due course as defined by s. 29 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, and the defences of fraud and misrepresentation set up by the makers of the note against the payees are available as against such indorsee. Defendants, who had given their promissory notes for the price of a horse purchased by them, had been defrauded in the transaction, but did not acquire certain knowledge of the fraud until after the death of the horse:-Held, (1) That they were not too late in exercising their right to rescind the contract, although they took no steps to do so until they set up the plea of fraud in this action. (2) Defendants had a right to rescind without restitution in this case as the horse had died without any detault or neglect on their part. Moore v. Scott, 16 Man. R. 492.

-Promissory note-Instalments of interest -Transfer after default to pay interest-"Overdue" bill-Notice - Holder in good faith.]-Where interest is made payable periodically during the currency of a promissory note, payable at a certain time after date, the note does not become overdue within the meaning of ss. 56 and 70 of the Bills of Exchange Act, merely by default in the payment of an instalment of such interest. The doctrine of constructive notice is not applicable to bills and notes transferred for value.

Union Investment Company v. Wells, 39 Can. S.C.R. 625.

-Promissory note-Fraud in procuring --Discount-Good faith.] -- L. and others, signed promissory notes each for the amount of ten shares in a company formed to manufacture rotary engines under an invention of the payee who fraudulently misrepresented to them the prospects and intentions of such company. At the same time each maker signed an application for ten shares. The payee and T., the assignee of his patent of invention, induced W. to discount these notes and received a portion of the proceeds, part being retained by W. in payment of debts due him from these two parties. On the trial of actions by W. on the notes the evidence of T., who has absconded, was taken under commission and he swore that the form of application signed by the respective defendants had been shown to W. before the notes were discounted. W. denied this and swore that he had been told that the notes were given in payment of stock held by the payee:—Held, that the evidence of W., on whom the onus of proof rested, could not be accepted; that the whole testimony and attendant circumstances showed that W. suspected that the proceeds of the notes belonged to the company; and, having discounted them without inquiry as to the right of the payee and T. to receive these proceeds, he was not in good faith and could not recover.

Lockart v. Wilson, 39 Can. S.C.R. 541.

-Promissory note-Garnishment.]-An instrument in the following form:- "Winnipeg, June 20th, 1907. Received from A. B. the sum of five hundred dollars advance to be repaid at expiration of 9 months. C. D.'' is a negotiable promissory note, and the money payable under it is not attachable by garnishment proceedings before its maturity.

Halsted v. Herschmann, 18 Man. R. 103.

—Promissory note given for goods to remain property of payee — Memorandum thereon—Endorsement.]—In an action by an endorsee of a document in the form of an ordinary promissory note, but having on the face of it a memorandum, "Given for Suffolk stallion 'Hs Grace,' same to remain the property of J. H. Truman until this note is paid'':—Held, that the docu-ment was not a promissory note and that the rights of the parties under it could consequently not be assigned by the simple endorsement. - Estoppel-Failure to defend action on prior note forged by same person - Forgery.]-A person whose indorsement on a promissory note has been forged is not estopped from denying his signature by the fact that he had allowed judgment to go against him by default in a previous action by the same plaintiff on an indorsement of his name on a prior promissory note forged by the same person, although the forger negotiated the second note after such judgment.

Simon v. Sinclair, 17 Man. R. 389.

-Proof of presentment of promissory note payable at a particular place.]-Although a promissory note is payable at a particular place, it is not necessary, in an action upon it in a County Court, to allege presentment at that place in the particulars of claim, or to prove presentment at the trial unless the defendant has expressly set up non-presentment in his dispute note. Teague v. Scoular, 17 Man. R. 593.

-Promissory note-Collateral security -Fraud-Holder in due course.]-A bank or person, to whom the promissory note of a third person is endorsed by way merely of collateral security, for an indebtedness then current, but which has not yet matured, takes such promissory note without giving consideration therefor (at any rate in the absence of a new agreement, and provided there is no right in the principal debtor to anticipate the date of payment), and such an endorsee is not a holder in due course. W. was induced by fraudulent misrepresentation and concealment on the part of the company to subscribe for shares in a limited company. In payment he made promissory notes payable to the company, the notes were endorsed to the bank of C., as collateral security for ad-vances made by the bank to the company, not yet due or matured. After such endorsement, but prior to the maturity of the indebtedness of the company to the bank, A. notified the bank of the frand: Held, that under the facts as stated the bank gave no consideration, was not a holder in due course, and that the maker could successfully plead fraud as a defence in an action by the bank on the notes. A defendant is, under such circumstances, entitled to rely on the defence of fraud, and to bring in the company as third parties, notwithstanding that the company is in liquidation and the defendant has not taken steps to have his name removed from the list of sharehold. ers, if the defendant has repudiated his contract to take shares with reasonable promptitude, and the action is begun before the commencement of winding-up proceedings. In such a case non constat that the third party notice is not issued until after commencement of winding-up pro-

 Association or syndicate—Liability of subscribers where full number not complete-Promissory note-"Holder in due course"—Interest appearing on face of note to be overdue.]—Where, at the instigation of the seller of certain goods, a number of persons agreed to form an association and to subscribe for shares of stock, and it was represented that the association should consist of a definite number of subscribers, unless the full number of bona fide subscribers were secured, and the stock all taken up by them, the subscribers who have taken shares are not liable on a joint (?) promissory note, not indorsed to and held by a holder in due course, made by them in payment of the goods sold and delivered, at least, under the circumstances in this case. When a promissory note shows on its face that interest thereon was overdue at the time of its transfer, the transferee is put upon inquiry before purchasing, and it is a circumstance which, coupled with other suspicious circumstances, will prevent the transferee being deemed a holder in due course.

Thomas (1894), 2 Q.B. 759; 63 L.J.Q.B. 761, that a promissory note does not become due when it is presented for payment and dishonoured on the last day of grace and the holder thereof cannot take action for the recovery of the amount of such note until the expiration of such day of grace, and a seizure under a chattel mortgage given as collateral security to a promissory note effected after dishonour of the note, but before the complete expiration of the last day of grace, is premature and unlawful. Held, also, that the measure of damages in an action for unlawful seizure is the value of the goods seized less the amount due to the party making the seizure by virtue of the security under which the seizure was made.

Westaway v. Stewart, 1 Sask. R. 200.

-Bill drawn to order of bank-Not indorsed-Action by drawer.]-Plaintiff, the drawer of a bill of exchange accepted by the defendant, brought action thereon. The bill was drawn payable to the order of the Dominion Bank, and was not in-dorsed by the bank, but in the statement of claim it was alleged that upon dishonour the bill was returned by the bank to the drawer, who was then the holder thereof. The defendant appeared and filed a defence which was struck out on a motion for speedy judgment. On such motion the defendant filed no affidavit, but relied on the objection that the bill had not been indorsed to the plaintiff, who could not therefore, maintain the action:—Held (per Wetmore, C.J., and Johnstone, J.), that as the defendant had, in answer to the motion, raised a difficult question of law which might be an answer to the plaintiff's claim, he should be permitted to de-fend. Per Newlands and Prendergast, JJ., that it was not necessary for the plaintiff in pleading to allege any facts which would be presumed in his favour, and it was therefore unnecessary to allege that the Dominion Bank were the holders for value, and it might be presumed that when they returned the bill to the plaintiff they were paid by him, and it was therefore unnecessary to allege payment in order to entitle the drawer to recover. (2) That it was not necessary for the Dominion Bank to indorse the bill to the drawer, as when the bank was paid the bill ceased to be negotiable, and the only right of action which exists is the right of action against the acceptor by the drawer, which he acquires not through the payee but by virtue of his original position as drawer. Velie v. Hemstreet, 2 Sask. R. 296.

-Indorsement of note payable to order of an unincorporated non-trading association.]-The indorsement of a promissory note payable to the order of an unincorporated non-trading association such as a trade union with the name of the association and the signatures of two or more of its officers will not enable the person to whom it is delivered so indersed to sue the maker upon it. There is no valid method of indorsement of such a note, so as to pass a title to it under the law merchant, except by the signature of all the members of the association.

— Promissory notes — Hand-writing — Drunkenness — Incapacity to contract.] — In an action by endorsees of promissory notes against the maker, there was no evidence that the endorsees were holders in due course. The defence set up that the defendant was to the knowledge of the payee so drunk at the time of signing the notes as to be incapable of transacting business: -Held, (1) That knowledge on the part of the payee of the defendant's state of mind was immaterial. (2) That the fact that defendant was drunk at the time the notes were signed was prima facie evidence that the payee did have such knowledge, so as to cast on the plaintiffs the onus of proving want of knowledge on the part of the payee. (3) That in the absence of evidence on the part of the plaintiffs that they were holders in due course, they cannot under the circumstances recover.

-Promissory note - Assignment - Plaintiff's right to sue.] - The statement of claim was based on an alleged promissory note made by defendant, payable to the order of one Bertrand and assigned to the plaintiff. The defendant denied such assignment. The evidence disclosed that the alleged assignment was not written on the note, but on a separate piece of paper, and purported to assign a "promissory note":— Held, that the assignment, not being written on the note, was invalid and bad; and that, assuming the instrument sued on not to be a promissory note, the assignment was invalid and bad, as it did not contain apt words as required by R.O. 1888, c. 50. Hamilton v. Bjarnason, 3 Terr. L.R. 398.

-Bills of exchange-Order for payment-Notice of dishonour-Verbal agreement to give a reasonable time for payment.]—Defendant being indebted to plaintiff, gave to the plaintiff at his request on account, an order for $31.50 on one Thompson payable to plaintiff or order on the understanding that the plaintiff would give the defendant a "reasonable time" to pay the balance of his indebtedness. The plaintiff duly presented the order to Thompson, who refused to accept for more than $20.00, claiming that was all he owed the defendant. The plaintiff the eupon, without returning the order or giving any notice of dishonour, issued a writ for the full amount of his claim:-Held, that notice of dishonour was necessary to support the action quoad the amount represented by the order. Held, further, that a promise to give a "reasonable time" for payment is not too indefinite. Held, further, that the agreement to give the defendant a reasonable time was a binding agreement, under the circum-

-Promissory note - Signature - Signed in blank - Note overdue - Indorsees Innocent holder.] — The plaintiffs were indorsees of an overdue promissory note signed in blank by defendant and given by de-fendant in payment of certain indebtedness. By error the note was filled up for more than the amount of defendant's indebtedness. Plaintiffs were innocent holders: Held, that notwithstanding the provisions of s. 20, sub-s. 1, and 1. 30, sub-s. 1 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, this consti-tutes an equity to which the note was subject, and plaintiffs could not recover anything more than the payee could had he sued on the note, but that, as plaintiffs were innocent holders, and defendant had set up numerous defences that failed, thus driving the plaintiffs to trial, the plaintiffs were entitled to costs of suit.

-Alteration in indorsement of promissory note-Holder for value without notice -Partnership for non-trading purposes.]--A bank, with knowledge that the partnership is a non-trading one, has no right to dis-count for one of the partners for his own purposes a promissory note made in favour of the firm, although indorsed in the name of the firm, and will be liable to account to the other partners for his share of the proceeds in the absence of circumstances creating an estoppel. (2) The conversion of a special indorsement on a promissory note into an indorsement in blank by striking out the words "pay to the order of the Home Bank of Canada," above the signatures by the firm and the individual partners on the back, was a circumstance sufficient to put the defendant bank on its inquiry as to the right of one of the partners to discount it for himstances-Notice-Absence of enquiry-Evidence of previous similar transactions between the payee and endorsee.]-It being shown that a maker of a promissory note has been induced to sign it by fraud, if there is evidence sufficient to raise a doubt in the jury's mind as to the good faith of an endorsee, though the evidence may not conclusively establish bad faith on his part, the Court will not interfere with the finding of the jury that the endorsee had not satisfied the burden cast on him by s. 58-Bills of Exchange Act,-of es tablishing good faith. Evidence that the endorsee had on previous occasions bought promissory notes from the same payee under similar suspicious circumstances, and had heard rumours of their fraudulent nature, is admissible to prove notice or suspicion in the mind of the endorsee, and that he deliberately refrained from enquiry.

Chattel mortgage—Renewal statement—Statement of payments.] — A renewal statement filed by a chattel mortgagee was not signed, but on the back was an affidavit, signed and sworn by the mortgagee, referring to the statement:—Held, a sufficient compliance with R.S.O. 1897, c. 148, s. 18. Barber v. Maughan (1877), 42 U.C.R. 134, followed. The statement of payments made did not set forth in detail the date and amount of each payment, but only the total sum paid. It went on to state "that no payments have been made upon the said mortgage;" but it clearly showed that payment of a certain sum had been made on account of interest, and no other payments:—Held, that the statute had been sufficiently complied with.

Christin v. Christin, 1 O.L.R. 634.

-Agreement to give mortgage-Mortgage subsequently given — Right to rely on agreement-R.S.O. 1897, c. 148, s. 11.]—Where an agreement to give a chattel mortgage is duly made and registered under R.S.O. 1897, c. 148, s. 11, and subsequently a mortgage is made and registered, the giving of such mortgage whereby the legal title becomes vested in the mortgage does not revest in the mortgage the equitable title, which the mortgage had by virtue of the agreement, but it continues to exist as before, and the mortgage is enabled to rely on it where the mortgage is ineffectual for any reason. Judgment of Boyd, C., 2 O.L.R. 128, affirmed.

—Chattel mortgage—Executed in blank—Filled in.]—Plaintiff as assignee of the estate of H. M. Craig, of Huron county, brought action to recover damages for alleged illegal seizure and sale of Craig's goods. Defendants seized the goods, before plaintiff's assignment, on chattel mortgages, which Craig had signed in blank and which were filled in later according to Craig's instructions. Teetzel, J., held, that the mortgages were valid, despite the manner in which they were made. Counterclaim was also dismissed. The Divisional Court affirmed above judgment on the ground that the statute was sufficiently complied with.

Wade v. Bell Engine & Thresher Co., 1 O.W.N. 1052, 16 O.W.R. 636.

—Chattel mortgage — Consideration.] — Under s. 56 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, a person who indorses a promissory note not indorsed by the payee may be liable as an indorser to the latter. The provisions of the Ontario Chattel Mortgage Act required the consideration of a mortgage to be expressed therein is satisfied when the mortgage recites that the indorsement of a note is the consideration and then sets out the note. Only the facts need be stated, not their legal effect.

Robinson v. Mann, 31 Can. S.C.R. 484, affirming in result 2 O.L.R. 63 (C.A.).

—Chattel mortgage—Statement of rate—Interest Act (Gan.) 1897—Waiver.] — A chattel mortgage provided for the payment of $125, the principal money, in consecutive monthly instalments of $3 each, and for payment of $5 more with each instalment for interest. The yearly rate to which this was equivalent was not stated, but there was a clause in the mortgage waiving in explicit terms the necessity for stating the yearly rate and waiving also the benefit of the Interest Act, 1897:—Held, that this being an Act passed on grounds of public policy for the benefit of borrowers, its application could not be waived and that the mortgagee was entitled to interest only at the legal rate.

Dunn v. Malone, 6 O.L.R. 484 (D.C.).

Affidavit of bona fides-Mistake in statement of amount advanced-Limitation of security-After-acquired goods - Description of premises.]-In an action against a bank for conversion of goods covered by a chattel mortgage to the plaintiffs, an incorporated company, it appeared that the affi-davit of bona fides was made by the president of the plaintiffs, and stated that the mortgagor was justly and truly indebted to the mortgagee in the sum of $5,000, instead of $5,066.74, which was the amount stated in the mortgage. The mortgage was given in good faith, and was intended to secure $5,066.74 actually advanced:—Held, that the mortgage was not invalidated by the mistake, but should be considered as so limited as to be a security for $5,000 only. -It was not necessary to consider whether a document asserted by the bank to be a security under s. 88 of the Bank Act was of any value in view of s. 90 of the same Act; but semble, that, if it should be held to be in contravention of that section, the bank, as simple contract creditors of the mortgagor, semble, that, if it should be held to be in contravention of that section, the bank, as simple contract creditores of the mortgagor, would have no status to attack the plaintiffs' chattel mortgage.—Held, that the chattel mortgage covered the goods converted by the bank, being sufficiently worded to cover after-acquired goods, and the premises whereon the goods were or were to be brought being specifically described. Held, also, that an assignment of book debts by the mortgagor to the bank, without notice of the assignment of the same to the company under the chattel mortgage, followed by notices to and collections from the debtors, vested the debts and the proceeds thereof in the bank against the claim of the company, who had given no notice to the debtors: Judicature Act, s. 58 (5).

A. E. Thomas, Limited, v. Standard Bank of Canada, 1 O.W.N. 379, 548 (D.C.).

-Chattel mortgage-Renewal statements -Payments on account-Repetition in subsequent statements.]—Successive renewal statements of a chattel mortgage need not show all the credits on account of the mortgage; it is sufficient if each statement contains the payments made since the last renewal. Christin v. Christin (1899), 1 O.L.R. 634, specially referred to, Kerr v. Roberts (1897), 33 C.L.J. 695, overruled.

Rogers v. Marshall, 7 O.L.R. 291 (D.C.).

—Bills of sale—Security in form of absolute sale—Non-compliance with Chattel Mortgage Act—Invalidity.]—When a transaction is, as it was in this case, in fact, a security for an existing debt, the parties cannot evade compliance with ss. 2 and 3 of the Bills of Sales and Chattel Mortgage Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 148, relating to such a transaction, merely by adopting the form of an absolute sale. If, however, the real transaction is a sale with a right of repurchase upon certain terms, the vendor can only be required to observe the requirements of s. 6 of that Act.

Hope v. Parrott, 7 O.L.R. 496 (C.A.).

-Sale of goods-Agreement for chattel mortgage or hire receipt.1-B. sells to P. on time, a quantity of machinery, and the agreement of sale contains a provision by which P. agrees to give B. a hire receipt or a chattel mortgage as security. A few days after L. had brought an action against P. for the price of goods sold and delivered, P. gives B. a chattel mortgage:—Held, that the mortgage in question was given with intent to delay, hinder and defraud creditors, and was void. Held, per Taschereau, J., approving the judgment of Hagarty, C.J.O., that the equitable doctrine under which the mortgage was unheld in Clarkson v. Sterling (15 Ont. App. R. 234), did not apply, first, because there was no absolute contract to give a chattel mortgage-the contract was alternative, either a hire receipt, or a chattel mortgage; -and, secondly, the mortgage given was not that contracted for but in cluded additional goods.

Brown v. Lamontagne (1889), 1 S.C.

—Chattel mortgage—Renewal—Time of filing—Computation of year.]—In computing the year within which the renewal of a chattel mortgage must be filed under s. 18 of the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 148, the day on which the mortgage was filed is to be excluded.

(O.), the affidavit of bona fides and the affidavit required upon the renewal of a chattel mortgage, where the mortgagees are an incorporated company, if made by the president, vice-president, manager, assistant manager, secretary, or treasurer of the company, need not state that the deponent is authorized by resolution of the directors in that behalf, nor (Riddell, J., dissenting) that he is aware of the circumstances connected with the mortgage and has personal knowledge of the facts deposed to; the words "officer or agent" in the section, according to its proper construction, being confined in their application to an officer or agent who is not one of the principal officers above enumerated. Bank of Toronto v. McDougall (1865), 15 C.P. 475, and Freehold Loan and Savings Co. v. Bank of Commerce (1879), 44 U. C.R. 284, applied and followed, notwithstanding the amendments to the statute. Per Mabee and Riddell, JJ., that the statute does not make it imperative that the position of the deponent should be sworn to:-Semble, per Britton, J., that a creditor, although suing on behalf of himself and all the creditors of his debtor, the latter not having made an assignment for the benefit of creditors not having been declared an insolvent, cannot follow the proceeds of goods taken under a conveyance not void for fraud in fact, but simply declared invalid by reason of non-compliance with the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act.

-Transfer of ownership of movables as security for debt, without transfer of possession—Title of transferee as against other creditors—Articles 583, 1025, 1027 C.C.]—The defendant, by an agreement in writing, transferred to the opposant, his creditor, the ownership of his furniture, as security for opposant's claim. The transfer was made subject to a right on the defendant's part to recover the ownership on paying the amount of his indebtedness, for which he had given the opposant a demand note. By the contract transferring the effects, it was agreed that the opposant should have the right to take possession of the effects if the note were not paid, and that the effects should be left in the defendant's possession until he had made default to pay the note. The note had not been paid, but some small payments had been made on account, and judgment had been obtained by the opposant on the note. The effects transferred having been seized in the defendant's possession by the plaintiff, a judg-ment creditor, the opposant claimed them as his property, under the transfer:-

Held, that where there is no evidence of intention to defraud or of simulation, a debtor from whom his creditor demands security, can, for the purpose of furnishing such security, transfer to the creditor the ownership of movable effects, so as to give the latter, without his taking possession the movables transferred, a good title thereto as against other creditors of such debtor, including even a creditor anterior to the one whose claim was secured by the transfer.

Creed v. Haensel, 24 Que. S.C. 178 (Doherty, J.).

—Agreement to convey movables—Breach of contract—Revendication—Personal action.]—An agreement by which the maker of a note undertakes, in case it is not paid at maturity, to transfer to the payee, as security, certain specified movables of which he retains the possession in the meantime, does not give the payee the right to revendicate the movables after the note falls due and remains unpaid. The proper remedy in such a case is a personal action for breach of contract.

-Chattel mortgage-Verbal license to mortgagor to sell or exchange mortgaged property-Ordinary course of business.j --The defendant, a farmer, executed a chattel mortgage to one M., whereby he assigned to M. all the goods, chattels and property mentioned in a schedule thereto annexed, and also any and all the property that might thereafter be brought to keep up the same, in lieu thereof and in addition thereto, either by exchange or pur-chase. The instrument also contained a proviso that the defendant should remain in possession of the mortgaged property until default with power to use the same in the ordinary way while so in possession, but with full power, right and authority to M. to enter and take possession of the property in case of default of payment, or on the death of the defendant, or in the event of the seizure of the property at the suit of any creditor, or in the event of the defendant disposing of or attempting to dispose of or make away with said property or any part thereof without the written consent of M. Included in the property mortgaged was a stallion "Prince Albert," which a few months after the execution of the mortgage and before any default on the part of the defendant, but without the written consent of M., he exchanged with the plaintiff for a horse belonging to him. After the exchange plaintiff, having discovered that the stallion was covered by the mortgage, attempted to avoid the transaction, sending the stallion back to the defendant and demanding the return of his own horse, which the defendant refused to deliver up. The plaintiff thereupon replevied his horse, and a claim of property having been put in by the defendant, the same was decided in his favour by the County Court Judge, who relied upon a verbal license that had been given to the defendant before the execution of the mortgage by the agent of M., whereby the defendant was authorized in general terms to use the mortgaged property in the way he had. Upon an appeal being taken from this decision, it was held (per Landry, Barker and Van Wart, JJ., Tuck, C.J., and Hanington, J., dissenting), that, as the mortgage must be taken to contain the whole contract entered into between the defendant and M., the Judge of the Court below was in error in giving any effect to a mere werbal license, which preceded the mort-gage and which was not in harmony with many of its provisions; and further, held (per Landry, Barker, VanWart and Mc-Leod, JJ., Tuck, C.J., and Hanington, J., dissenting), that it was clearly a condi-tion of the mortrary and the intaction of tion of the mortgage and the intention of the parties thereto that the defendant should be allowed to sell or exchange the mortgaged property, provided such sale or exchange was in the ordinary course of the defendant's business, and as to whether this exchange had been in the ordinary course of the defendant's business or not was a question of fact, which had not been passed upon by the Court below, there should be a new trial in order to have that point determined

-Cenveyance from husband to wife -After-acquired property—Mistake—Fraudulent conveyance—N.B. Bills of Sale Act (1893).]-J. E. F., who was the husband of the plaintiff and a livery stable keeper, being indebted to C., in December, 1895, gave him a chattel mortgage of his stock, which was in the terms following: "All and singular the goods, chattels, and property mentioned and set out in the schedule hereunto annexed, marked A, which is to be read in connection with these presents and form a part thereof, and also any and all the property that may hereafter during the continuance of these presents be brought to keep up the same in lieu thereof, and in addition thereto, either by exchange or purchase, which so soon as obtained, and in actual or constructive possession of the said party of the first part, shall be subject to all the provi-sions of this indenture." The schedule was as follows: "Eight horses and harness now in livery stable owned by said J. E. F. Six wagons in storehouse. Four pungs, coach harness, buffaloes and robes now in said stable." In March, 1896, J. E. F. being indebted to the plaintiff, his wife, to the extent of six hundred dollars and upwards, gave her a chattel mortgage, in which the property conveyed was describ-ed in almost the same words as were used in the mortgage to C.; but the schedule thereto, after enumerating specifically a number of articles, concluded as follows: "Also all other goods, furnishings and articles and materials now or hereafter during the continuance of these presents, used in connection with the livery stable, now owned by the said J. E. F., and all property hereafter acquired therein." In July, 1896, C. assigned to the defendant his mortgage, which had been reduced to two hundred and seventy-two dollars for a consideration of two hundred and fifty dollars, but the assignment was silent as to after-acquired property. In September, 1896, J. E. F. gave a further chattel mortgage to defendant, which covered all the property he had formerly mortgaged to plaintiff, and shortly after handed him a delivery order authorizing defendant to take possession of everything connected with the livery stable business, which de-fendant did. Plaintiff had also given to her husband one hundred dollars with which he was to buy for her a phaeton buggy. He, without her knowledge, bought a buggy on credit for one hundred and forty dollars, which he delivered to his wife, and which was accepted by her. This buggy, though not mentioned in any of the mortgages, was seized by defendant when he took possession under the delivery order. The mortgage from J. E. F. to plaintiff was first drawn to secure the sum of five hundred dollars, but afterwards and before execution, the sum secured was changed to six hundred dollars in every place except in the recital, where the word "five" was inadvertently left in place of a six. In an action of trover for the conversion of the phaeton buggy and all the property conveyed to secure the plaintiff's debt, except such as was covered by the mortgage to C .: - Held (1) That the mortgage was not invalid by reason of its having been made by the husband directly to the wife. (2) That there was no evidence that it was made to delay or hinder creditors. (3) That it contained a sufficient d'escription of the mortgaged property to satisfy the Bills of Sale Act (1893); and that there was no such untrue statement in the affidavit attached to the mortgage as would invalidate it, the evidence affording a satisfactory explanation of the mistake in the recital. (4) That it was sufficient to cover afteracquired property. (5) That it was not bad under the Act. 58 Vict., c. 6. (6) That the mortgage to C. and the assignment thereof to. defendant were insufficient to cover after-acquired property. (7) That the circumstances under which the phaeton buggy was purchased made it the Fraser v. Macpherson, 34 N.B.R. 417. (Affirmed on appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada).

Bills of sale—Document having the effect of-Effect of possession under in absence of filing, as against subsequent attacher.]—Plaintiffs sought a declaration that a transfer of a stock of goods and merchandise from the defendant, J. H. to his brother, G. H., was void under the provisions of c. 11 of the Acts of 1898, relating to Assignments and Preferences by Insolvent Persons, and under ss. 1, and 4 of the Revised Statutes (5th Series), c. 92, "Of the prevention of frauds on creditors by secret bills of sale," because it was not filed in the office of the registrar of deeds for the county. The transfer in question was a document executed by J. H., January 12th, 1899, under which he transferred to G. H. a stock of goods in store to the amount of $1,500, and agreed to pay for the same by paying notes of B. & Co. to the amount of $500, and by giving ten notes for the balance, of $100 each, one payable every six months. The document of transfer concluded:--"The said G. H. to hold the goods in store, and whatever goods may come in shall become the property of the said G. H. until the said G. H. claim is paid in full. If I fail to pay any of the above named notes, the said G. H. can take over possession of the business, and all stock in the said store at the time of me failing to meet or pay the above or aforesaid named notes." This document was not filed in the registry of deeds for the county, and was not accompanied by any afficavit. After G. H. had taken possession of the stock of goods under the power to do so contained in the document, plaintiffs attached the goods as the pro-perty of J.H., an absent or absconding debtor, and sought to have the transfer to G. H. set aside on the grounds above mentioned. G. H. counterclaimed against plaintiffs for the conversion of his goods:— Held, affirming the judgment of the trial Judge, and dismissing plaintiff's appeal, that the document in question came within the term "Bill of Sale," as defined by R. 8. (5th Series), c. 92, s. 10, and should have been filed, and was liable to be defeated for non filing up to the time that G. H. took possession under it. Held, also, that G. H. did not come within the category of a "hirer, lessor or bargainor" within the meaning of s. 3 of c. 92, and that such section had therefore no appli-

-Property remaining in possession of grantor-Provision for redemption not reduced to writing - Defeasance - Verbal agreement.]—Defendant, a constable, levied upon goods and chattels in the possession of S. under an execution issued on judgment recovered against S. by M. At the time of the levy the goods were covered by a bill of sale to plaintiff to secure the sum of $150. The document purported on its face to be an absolute transfer with a right to immediate possession, but it was referred to in the affidavit as a bill of sale, and the evidence showed that there was an understanding, not reduced to writing, that S. should get the property back on payment of the amount secured. After the filing of the bill of sale the property was allowed to remain in the possession of S.:

—Held, that the fact of the property remaining in the possession of the grantor was not a fraud in itself, but a matter for the consideration of the trial Judge, and he having found that the amount named as the consideration was due from the grantor to the grantee, and that the trans-action was not tainted with fraud, and the amount of property transferred not being excessive, there was no reason for disturbing his finding. Held, that the same principle would apply to the fact that the provision for redemption of the property covered was not reduced to writing. Held, that the verbal agreement for the return of the property was not a "de-feasance" in the sense in which that term is used, and that the section of the Act which requires every defeasance to which a bill of sale is subject to be filed with it, was not applicable. The bill of sale having been made and filed prior to the passage of the Bills of Sale Act of 1899. Held, that it was validly filed, subject to the special clause as to the filing of a renewal statement, and, the time prescribed for the filing of a renewal statement not having elapsed, that the bill of sale was in no way affected by such provision.

—Bill of sale—Absence of fraudulent circumstances—Fossession—Affidavit of bona fides.]—A bill of sale of a business was held by the vendor for the benefit and protestion of plaintiff, who had indorsed certain promissory notes given by the vendee in payment of the purchase money. This bill of sale having expired, in consequence of failure to renew it under the provisions of the Act, plaintiff, in pursuance of an agreement made at the time of the sale, demanded and received a second bill of sale, to secure the amount for which he remained liable in respect of the original indorsements, as well as certain amounts for which he had become liable as indorser of other promissory notes. There being no question of insolvency on the part of the maker at the time, the second bill of sale was given and no fraudulent purpose, and the terms of the agreement being accurately set forth:— Held, that there was no pretence for holding the bill of sale void under the Statute of Elizabeth. Hela, also, that the fact that plaintiff had taken possession under his bill of sale, and was in possession at the time the sheriff made his levy, was sufficient, in the absence of fraud, to enable plaintiff to maintain his action. Held, also, following Creighton v. Reid, 27 N.S.R. 72, that the afficavit to the bill of sale was not bad because it had been sworn before the solicitor by whom the bill of sale was prepared, the rule in the Judicature Act (O. 36, r. 16) referring only to matters litigated in Court, and not to outside matters such as affidavits to bills of sale. Mosher v. O'Brien, 37 N.S.R. 286.

-Purchase and hiring agreement-Failure to record under Bills of Sale Act-Incomplete clause.]—Plaintiffs, through their agent K., sold to F. a piano for the sum of $300, F. paying a portion of the purchase money in cash and giving his promissory notes for the balance extending over a period of thirty-four months. Immediately after the sale and after receiving delivery of the piano, F. signed a purchase and hiring agreement, under which, upon completion of the payments to be made by him, he was to become owner of the piano, the title to which, in the meantime, remained in the vendors. It was further agreed that in the event of F. becoming insolvent, or attempting to sell or part with the possession of the piano, all rights of F. should cease and the vendors should be at liberty to retake possession. F. sold the piano to the defendant while about one-half of the purchase money was still unpaid:-Held, that the agreement signed by F., having been taken by way of security should have been filed under the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act, R.S. 1900, c. 142, s. 8, in order to be valid against creditors or an innocent purchaser for value, and not having been so filed, plaintiffs could not recover. One of the clauses of the agreement contained a number of blanks which by inadvertence were not filled up at the time the agreement was executed. Held, that the Court could not give effect to the clause in question, but must deal with the agreement as if the clause were not there at -Chattel mortgage-Approbating and reprobating transaction-Right to redeemOral evidence to vary deed.]-The appellants were judgment creditors of one H. and the respondents grantees under a chattel mortgage made by H. The appellants levied on and sold part of the goods described in the mortgage and became purchasers from the sheriff. Respondents claimed goods under the mortgage. The appellants then filed a bill, alleging that the mortgage was made in fraud of creditors, and was also paid off, and asked for a decree that it be set aside or de-clared satisfied:—Held, that the plaintiff had not made out a case of fraud and the judgment below should be affirmed; that the plaintiff was not entitled to approbate and reprobate the same transaction and that a bill so framed was demurrable; that a bill to set aside a mortgage as fraudulent under 13 Eliz. and asking for an account should be coupled with an offer to redeem; that oral evidence to show a different consideration from that expressed in the deed was admissible.

Halifax Banking Company v. Matthew (1889), 1 S.C. Cas. 251.

—Bill of sale not registered—Fraudulent attempt to defeat.]—A bill of sale of a horse, given to secure a balance due on the purchase price, although unregistered, cannot be defeated by a fraudulent sale to a third party with notice. In an action for the alleged wrongful taking and detention of a horse, defendants relied on an unregistered bill of sale given to the defendant B. by the owner M. in trust to sell the horse, retain a balance due on the purchase price, and pay the balance to M.:—Held, that the bill of sale so given, although unregistered, was not defeated by a fraudulent sale to plaintiff who was not a bona fide purchaser for value, and who had notice of the claim. McLeed v. Doucette, 38 N.S.R. 151.

—Chattel mortgage—Staying sale—Payment into Court—Amount.]—In a suit by the mortgager to set aside a bill of sale by way of mortgage, an interim injunction order to restrain a sale by the mortgage was granted upon condition of the mortgagor paying into Court the amount due the mortgage. The bill of sale was collateral security for promissory notes, some of which had been indorsed over for value:—Held, that the amount to be paid into Court should not be reduced by the amount of such notes.

absconding debtor's warrant. While the horse was in the possession of the sheriff under the warrant, negotiations were had with H. by persons professing to be acting for F., and a bill of sale of the horse was given by them to H., and the horse was returned to F. The amount secured by the bill of sale not having been paid, H. seized the horse under the bill of sale, and F. brought an action in the Kent County Court against H. for a conversion of the horse. On the trial the Judge told the jury that the only question was, who was the owner of the horse at the time it was taken, and that the plaintiff was not estopped by the bill of sale from recovering in the action:-Held, on appeal from a judgment affirming a verdict entered on a finding on this direction, that the direction was right.

Hannay v. Fraser, 37 N.B.R. 39.

-Fraudulent misrepresentation-Party to fraud.]-Defendant, as bailiff of D., levied upon goods in premises occupied by R. as tenant of D., but which were claimed by plaintiff under a bill of sale given to secure a debt due for services rendered. The evidence showed, and the trial Judge found, that the wife of R., being entitled to a sum of money held in trust for her, D. and R. were parties to a misrepresentation to the trustee, as the result of which D. obtained possession of a portion of the money so held in trust, it being agreed between the parties that D. should retain a portion of the money in payment of a debt due to him for professional services, and that the balance should be applied by him in payment of the rent of the premises occupied by R. as tenant of D. It was further shown and found that the amount received by D. was more than sufficient to satisfy the debt due him for professional services and the rent due up to the time of the distress:-Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that as plaintiff was not shown to be a party to the fraud, and was not a privy in any sense which would subject her to its consequences, and as her title to the property in question was founded on a bill of sale given for good consideration, defen-dant's principal could not be heard to make the contention that the money obtained from the trustee was received under a fraudulent proceeding to which he himself was a party.

Hains v. Leblanc, 38 N.S.R. 528.

-Chattel mortgage -- Coercion -- Sale of chattel -- Executory contract--- Return of chattel. -- A lease of store premises was obtained by plaintiffs through a guarantee of payment of the rent by defendant. Subsequently at plaintiffs' request defendant took out in his own name a lease of the premises for a further term of four years upon an agreement to assign it to them in consideration of their purchase from him of an automatic electric piano. The purchase price was $750, upon which a payment of $100 was to be made. The cash payment subsequently was waived and notes for the full amount of the purchase money given. After the purchase, plaintiffs incurred an additional indebtedness to defendant of about $400. This amount together with the notes, some of which were overdue, was outstanding when the plaintiffs asked for an assignment of the lease. This the defendant demurred to giving, desiring to retain the lease as security. The plaintiffs then, but against the defendant's advice, executed a chattel mortgage of their stock-in-trade to him, whereupon he made over the lease to them:-Held, that the chattel mortgage should not be set aside on the ground of having been obtained by coercion. While the rule, that in the absence of agreement the purchaser of a specific chattel cannot return it on breach of warranty, may not apply to a sale providing that the property shall not pass until payment of the purchase price, it will apply in such case where the vendee, in addition to keeping the chattel a longer time than reasonable or necessary for trial, has exercised the dominion of an owner over it, as by giving a chattel mortgage of it to the vendor.

Petropolous v. F. E. Williams Company (No. 2), 3 N.B. Eq. 346.

-Consideration - Substitution for previous bill of sale.]-On the trial of an action to set aside a bill of sale, as made with intent to hinder and delay creditors, evidence was given to show that the bill of sale in question was given in substitu tion for a bill of sale executed some two years previously, from which a provision as to after-acquired property was alleged to have been omitted, although it was understood and agreed that such provision should be included. Evidence was given on the other hand to show that the written memorandum of instructions for the original bill of sale contained no reference to after-acquired property; that neither the solicitor by whom it was drawn nor a witness who was present at the time, and knew of the terms of the negotiations, made any mention of it: and that on an occasion when both the defendants in this action gave evidence before a commissioner under the Collection Act touching the affairs of the defendant, by whom the bill of sale was made, no such arrangement was suggested. The trial Judge having given judgment for defendants, and the Court being of opinion that the precarious character of the evidence given by defendants at the trial had not been sufficiently considered, a new trial was order-

Farlinger v. Thompson, 37 N.S.R. 513.

-Secret trade agreement-Power to seize goods and book debts of debtor.]-Plaintiffs in 1898 agreed to supply M. S., dry goods dealers, with goods under an agreement in writing that such goods should remain the plaintiffs' property, and that should the plaintiffs at any time consider that the business of M. & S. was not being conducted in a proper way or to the plaintiffs' satisfaction, plaintiffs should be 'at liberty to take possession of our stock, book debts and other assets, and dispose of the same, and after payment in full of any amount then owing to you by us, whether due or to become due, the bal-ance of the proceeds shall be handed to us." The agreement was not filed under the Bills of Sale Act, c. 142, C.S. 1903. Goods were supplied from time to time under the agreement. On February 17th, 1905, the business not being conducted to the plaintiffs' satisfaction, and M. & S. being insolvent, plaintiffs entered the store of M. & S. by force and took possession of all the stock and effects on the premises, and of the books of account. The stock seized was made up of good's supplied by the plaintiffs of the value of $5,000, and of goods supplied by other unpaid creditors of the value of upwards of $10,000. The account books showed debts due M. & S. of the estimated value of $2,000. Later on the same day M. & S made an assignment for the general benefit of their creditors:—Held, (1) That plaintiffs were not limited to taking possession of goods supplied by themselves. (2) That as to goods supplied by the plaintiffs, as the property therein did not pass to M. & S., the agreement was not within the Bills of Sale Act, and that as to goods not supplied by plaintiffs, as the agree-ment was not intended to operate as a mortgage, but as a license to take possession, the Act did not apply. (3) That while the license in the agreement to take possession of the book debts did not amount to an assignment, and the powers given by it had not been exercised by notice to the debtors, plaintiffs were nevertheless entitled to them as against M. & S. assignees.

mortgagee.]—Where the bookkeeper of a mill owner, to enable the owner to carry out a contract, bought logs with advance made for this purpose by a bank, which logs were cut at such owner's mill and the bookkeeper indorsed the owner's notes to the bank:—Held, by the 'ull Court, that the logs, and lumber manufactured therefrom, did not come under a chattel mortgage covering all lumber which might at any time be brought on the premises, and that the bank was not prevented by the Bank Act from taking the usual security in respect of the logs.

—Buildings—Chattels appurtenant to real estate—Estoppel.]—The defendant gave a chattel mortgage to the plaintiffs on certain buildings, and also a certain ferry, and "the ferry boat with cables, pulley and other machinery used therewith:—Held, 1. That detinue or replevin would not lie for the buildings, at least where the defendant was in possession of the land on which they stood; nor for the ferry boats or attachments, as they were appurtenant to the ferry, which was an easement arising in respect of land. 2. That there'was no estoppel by the chattel mortgage, in such sense as to make detinue or replevin an appropriate remedy for property of the character in question.

No form of affidavit of execution is given:-Held, that neither (1) the omission to state the address and occupation of the witness after his signature; nor (2) the omission of the deponent's name and occupation in the body of the affidavit of execution, which was signed by him; nor (3) the omission to state in the jurat a more definite place than "the Northwest Territories''; rendered the registration of the mortgage invalid. statement that the property in them was to remain in the defendant until paid for in full and that on default the defendant might enter and retake them:-Held, in the absence of evidence to prove that defendant had obtained the lien note by fraud or misrepresentation, that it might be treated as a chattel mortgage on the articles for the debt secured by it as against the person who had signed it. The defendant had not put on the articles his name or any other distinguishing name so as to comply with s. 2 of the Lien Notes Act, R.S.M., c. 87:-Held, notwithstanding, that the lien note was valid as against the maker of it, as the provisions of that section are only for the protection of bona fide purchasers or mortgagees without notice of the claim of the lien holder. The lien note was not registered under the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, 63 and 64 Vict. c. 31, and the maker of it, before maturity of the debt, became insolvent and made an assignment to the plaintiff under the Assignments Act, R. S.M., c. 7, for the benefit of his creditors. Held, that, for want of such registration, the lien note being an instrument intended to operate as a mortgage of goods which remained in the debtor's possession until the assignment, was null and void as against his creditors, including the plain-tiff as his assignee by virtue of paragraph (a) of s. 2 of the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act. It was doubtful upon the wording of the assignment whether the aebtor had reserved any exemption to which he would be entitled under sub-s. (f) of s. 43 of the Executions Act. R.S.M. e. 53, viz.: "The tools . . . and necessaries used by the judgment debtor in the prac tice of his trade, profession or occupation to the value of five hundred dollars." within which description the articles came, and it was not shown that the debtor had ever claimed any of them from the assignee or asked to have any of them set aside as exempt, or that he had not got out of other articles of his estate all his exemptions under that sub-section; and the orticles were not shown to have depreciated in value. Held, that defendant could not claim the benefit of any such exemption even if it was reserved by the debtor in the assignment. Cox v. Schack, 14 Man. R. 174.

-Bill of sale—Possession by grantee—Defeasance or condition—Fraudulent preference—Pressure—Authority of partner to execute bill of sale.]—Where the goods comprised in a bill of sale are within twenty-one days after execution of the bill of sale bona fide taken possession of by the grantee, the Bills of Sale Act does not apply, and it is immaterial even though the bill of sale was given subject to a defeasance not contained in it. D. B.,

A. O. B. and T. G. W. carried on business in partnership as hardware merchants under the name of the Greenwood Hardware Company, the money being supplied by D. B. and A. O. B., and the business being managed by W. The firm became indebted to both the McClary Company and the Howland Company, and the latter, under threat of commencing an action, obtained on the 27th of June, 1900, a bill of sale by way of mortgage of all the firm's assets, and immediately took possession. The bill of sale was executed on behalf of the firm by W., and also by W. per sonally, D. B. and A. O. B. both being absent; when A. O. B. returned he protest. ed against the execution of the bill of sale, but subsequently withdrew his protest and consented to a sale of the goods on the understanding that plaintiffs and defendants should share pro rata in the proceeds. The arrangement that plaintiffs and defendants should share in the proceeds was not carried out. On the 27th of July, 1900, the McClary Company recovered a judgment in respect of their claim against the firm and obtained judgment under Order XIV., the judgment being entered up against D. B. and A. O. B., and also against the Greenwood Hardware Company, although not a party to the action, and an execution issued was returned nulla bona. The McClary Company thereupon sued to have the bill of sale set aside on the ground that it was fraudulent and void as being given with the intent to defeat and delay creditors, and that W. had no authority to give it on behalf of the firm. Under an order of Court the goods were sold and the proceeds paid into Court to abide the result of the action. The Howland Company recovered a judgment in January, 1901, against the firm for the amount of its indebtedness to them, and an execution issued thereunder was returned nulla bona. At the trial in July, 1902, Martin, J., dismissed the plain-tiffs' action, holding that the bill of sale was not a fraudulent preference but was given bona fide under pressure:-Held, on appeal, affirming decision of Martin, J., that the bill of sale was not a fraudulent preference, but was given bona fide under pressure. Per Hunter, C.J., and Drake, J.: W. had implied authority to execute the bill of sale. Per Irving J .: - W. was not the agent of his partners to execute the bill of sale, but they had either ratified his act or become astopped from denying his authority. Per Hunter, C.J.: The plaintiffs had no locus standi to attack the bill of sale on the ground that it was executed without proper authority. Per Drake, J .: -The McClary Company's judgment against the firm was invalid and hence the company had no locus standi to attack the bill of sale.

-Share of grain grown on farm leased to execution debtor-kills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, E.S.M., 1902, c. 11, s. 39—Seizure of equitable interest.]—Interpleader issue between an execution creditor and the claimant of a quantity of grain seized in stack, unthreshed. The claimant let to the execution debtor the farm on which the grain had been grown by an indenture reserving as rent "the share or portion of the whole crop which shall be grown upon the demised premises as hereinafter set forth," and the lease provided that the lessor might retain from the share of the crop that was to be delivered to the lessee a sufficient amount to cover taxes and to re pay advances and other indebtedness; that the lessee, immediately after threshing, should deliver the whole crop, excepting hay, in the name of the lessor, at an elevator to be named by the lessor; that all crops of grain grown upon the said premises should be and remain the absolute property of the lessor until all covenants, conditions, provisoes and agreements therein contained should have been fully kept, performed and satisfied; and that the lessor should deliver to the lessee two-thirds of the proceeds of the crop to be stored in the elevator, less any sum retained for taxes, advances, indebtedness or guaranties previously mentioned. The grain in question had, until its seizure under the plaintiff's execution, remained on the farm in the possession of the lessee. The claimant claimed it as owner under the terms of the lease, and not for rent:-Held, 1. That the lease did not operate to prevent the lessee from ever having any property in the grain to be grown. 2. That, even if the legal ownership of the grain was to be in the lessor, it was still, as to two-thirds, held for the benefit of the lessee subject to the lessor's charge for taxes and advances, etc., and the lessee had an equitable interest in it, and the lessor's lien or charge would be void under the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, now chapter 11, R.S.M. 1902, s. 39, as being a charge upon crops to be grown in the future. 3. That the interest of the lessee in the grain whether legal or only equitable, was subject, under section 182 of the County Courts Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 38, to seizure and sale under execution, and that the claimant's interest could not prevail over that of the —Bill of sale—Sale of business as a going concern—Chattel mortgage by new firm covering book debts.]—V. and C. sold their grocery business, including all their stock in trade and book debts, to H. & B., who shortly afterwards gave a chattel mort-gage to E. covering the stock in trade of the grocery business, and also all book debts due to H. & B. in the business carried on by them as grocers:—Held, by the Full Court, reversing Hunter, C.J., that the book debts originally due to V. & C., and assigned by them to H. & B., were covered by the chattel mortgage.

Robinson v. Empey, 10 B.C.R. 466.

-Chattel mortgage-Collateral contract-Rectification of mortgage.]—The plaintiff sued for damages for wrongful seizure and conversion of horses. The defendant alleged that the horses were seized under a chattel mortgage made by the plaintiff to him, the defendant. The mortgage contained a clause enabling the defendant to seize if he felt insecure. The defendant alleged that at the date of the seizure (14th October, 1908), the payments under the chattel mortgage were overdue, and also that the plaintiff had attempted to sell the horses, and that he (the defendant) felt insecure. The amount of the chattel mortgage was, by its terms, to be repaid in two instalments, on the 1st August, 1907, and the 1st February, 1908. The defendant counterclaimed for the balance due under the chattel mortgage, after crediting the proceeds of the sale of the horses, and also for expenses incurred for the plaintiff at his request in defending an action, and also for damages for breach of an agreement whereby the plaintiff agreed to deliver cord-wood to the defendant. In reply the plain-tiff alleged that the chattel mortgage was given as security for the wood agreement, given as security for the wood agreement, under which the plaintiff was to deliver the wood before the 1st April, 1908; that he did deliver large quantities of wood, until, on the 30th January, 1908, the defendant requested him to postpone delivery of the residue until the following winter, and that he (the plaintiff) had always been willing and ready to complete. The plaintiff also asked that the chattel mortgage should be rectified, so as to conform to the agreement:—Held, that, even if the mortgage were rectified, the plaintiff would still be in default, as on the 1st April, 1908, he admittedly had not wholly repaid the defendant either in wood or money; and, upon the evidence, the plaintiff had not established that the defendant had re-quested him to delay delivery of the rest of the wood. Held, also, that, on the evidence, the plaintiff was not entitled to succeed upon his counterclaim. Both action and counterclaim dismissed with costs.

ownership of certain goods seized by the defendants, and based his title upon two absolute bills of sale made by F. The defendants set up that the property was theirs by virtue of a contract between them and F, whereby F agreed to perform certain work for the defendants, and one of the terms of the contract was that all the plant, materials, etc., provided by F. for the work, was to become and until the completion of the work be the property of the defendants for the purpose of the works, but upon the completion of the work, such plant, materials, etc., as should not have been used and converted, should be delivered up to F .: - Held, that the true intent and meaning of this was that the plant, materials, etc., were to be retained by the defendants as security for the performance by F. of his contract; and the contract did not come within the Bills of Sale Act so as to require registration. Since, in the nature of things, it was impossible at the time of the execution of the contract to identify the plant, materials, etc., provided under it, they could not then be articles capable of "complete transfer and delivery," and it is only a bill of sale of such articles that the Act requires to be registered. It was contended that the defendants put an end to the contract, and could, therefore, claim nothing under it; but held, upon the evidence, and the proper construction of the contract, that this con-tention was not sustained by the facts. Semble, that the plaintiff's bills of sale were intended as a security and not as evincing an absolute sale; but s. 8 of the Bills of Sale Act in such cases only makes the registration void; and, as to an alleged defect in the affidavits of execution of the bills or sale, as to the residence of F., s. 7 makes a bill of sale void only against the classes of persons therein named, and the defendants did not come within any of those classes. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the value of any goods seized by the defendants which had not been pro-vided by F. for the works contracted for; to come within those terms they must have reached the field of F.'s operations, that is, a point beyond which they would be handled by F.'s men only; and the kitchen supplies and utensils were not plant, materials, or things provided for the work.

-Chattel mortgage-Printed form-Blanks not filled in-Construction and effect.]-Lien-notes given by the plaintiff to the defendant G., the agent of the defendant company, for the price of goods sold to the plaintiff, were indorsed by G. to the company, and, after they were overdue, the plaintiff executed a document purporting to be a chattel mortgage upon some wheat in shock to secure the amount due upon the notes. The document was a long printed form of chattel mortgage, containing many blanks to be filled in, but only some of the blanks were filled in, namely, those left for the names of the mortgagor and mortgagee, the consideration for executing the document, $312.98, and the property intended to be mortgaged. The form contained what was intended to be a redemption clause, but the amount to be paid or when it was to be paid was not filled in. It appeared from extrinsic evidence that the $312.98 was the amount due upon the notes:—Held, that the instrument was a mortgage to secure $312.98, payable on demand, with interest at 5 per cent. Held, also, that, upon the evidence, the Court could not interfere with the finding of the trial Judge that the defendants seized the plaintiff's grain under the mortgage; but that the finding that the defendants agreed to allow the plaintiff to market the grain could not be supported. Held, also, that it was immaterial whether the seizure was legal or illegal; if it was illegal, the measure of damages would be the value of the goods seized, less the intcrest of the mortgagees therein; if it was legal, the defendants, not having sold the regar, the detendants, not having soid the grain at public auction, but by private sale, would be liable to be charged with the highest price obtainable if the defendants had used reasonable and proper care, as prudent persons, to obtain the best price; and the trial Judge having found that they did not use such care, and having charged them with the highest price, the Court would not be justified in interfering with his finding; but the defendants were entitled to charge against that the amount due on their mortgage and what they paid out for carriage, etc., but not more than the amount provided for by C. O. c. 34. Held, also, that the finding that 506 bushels of wheat were delivered at the elevator, and that the defendants were chargeable therewith, ought not to be disturbed. Held, also, that the allowance of $75 as "general damages" was unwarranted. Held, also, that nothing could be allowed for special damage, as, e.g., that the plaintiff's landlord descend-ed upon him for rent, no such damage being specifically alleged in the statement of claim; and quære, whether such damage would not be too remote. Held, also, that the defendants were not, in the circumstances, entitled to charge the plaintiff with a fee paid to a solicitor for drawing the chattel mortgage; and certain other charges should also be disallowed. Chattel mortgage—Exercising power of sale—Moving horses.]—A chattel mortgagee in exercising his power of sale must not be negligent and will be liable to the mortgagor for any loss occasioned to the mort-gaged chattels by his negligence. It is neg-ligence on the part of a chattel mortgagee after seizure of horses to drive a large, mixed band of horses, mares, colts and stallions a long distance in hot weather after dipping of horses for mange. Amendment allowed at trial, after notice, setting up provisions of Bank Act, prohibiting the tak-ing of greater rate of interest than seven per cent. Leave given to surcharge and falsify. Semble.—Where the bank contracts for a rate of interest greater than seven per cent. the rate recoverable is not seven per cent., but the legal rate of five per cent. Charges for sale made by mortgagee's agent in excess of the fees fixed by the schedule to the ordinance respecting extra-judicial seizures are illegal and may be recovered from the mortgagee. Recovery of treble the amount taken for expenses in excess of the tariff prescribed by the ordi-nance can only be had when the goods seized are in the judicial district where the suit was commenced at the time the action brought or (quere) where the goods were seized in the judicial district where action brought, but there is no jurisdiction where goods seized were neither in the judicial district at the time of seizure nor at the time of action.

-Chattel mortgage-Seizure-Negligence of mortgagee in advertising-Loss by theft.]-The defendant seized 184 horses of the plaintiff under chattel mortgage, and published on the 24th July the following advertisement in the Calgary Herald: "Auction sale of 100 horses under forced sale, at Alberta Stock Yards, Calgary, Wednesday, July 29th, 1908, at 2 p.m. sharp. For particulars apply to The Alberta Stock Yards Company, Limited, Calgary, P. O. Box 1062, phone 301;" also a similar advertisement in the Edmonton Bulletin of 27th and 28th July, and a considerable number of posters and hand-bills were distributed about Calgary on the 25th July and a number of letters were mailed at Calgary on the 25th July to horsemen, ranchers, livery stable keepers and others. On the 29th July 160 horses were sold, and 24 were sold on the 31st. The horses sold on the 29th realized an average price of $51. Those on the 31st realized an average price of $70:—Held, that the advertisement had not been sufficient and that the defendant was liable for the loss. A chattel mortgagee, in the absence of negligence, is not responsible for loss by theft of mortgaged goods while in his pos-

-Consideration for chattel mortgage.]-The consideration for a chattel mortgage, which was given to secure payment of two notes for $31,000 and $3,000 respectively, and an overdraft of $2,233, which notes were given for a past indebtedness, and which, at the time the mortgage was given, were current, was stated as follows: "In consideration of $36,233 paid by the mortgagee to the mortgagor at or before the sealing and delivery of these presents":—Held, that the mortgage truly set forth the consideration for which it was given.

Twiss to them, which said chattel mortgage is dated 7th November, 1903, and was registered on the 9th November, 1903:"-Held, that the statement of registration was an admission both of the execution and due registration, as under the Bills of Sale Ordinance, proof of due execution was necessary for registration thereunder.

—Chattel mortgage—Registration—Subsequent purchaser—Removal of goods.]—For the purposes of registration of deeds the Northwest Territories is divided into districts, and it is provided by ordinance that registration of a chattel mortgage, not followed by transfer of possession, shall only have effect in the district in which it is made. It is also provided that if the mortgaged goods are removed into another district a certified copy of the mortgage shall be filed in the registry office thereof within three weeks from the time of removal, otherwise the mortgage shall be null and void as against subsequent purchasers, etc:-Held, reversing the judgment in appeal, that the "subsequent purchaser" in such case must be one who purchased after the expiration of the three weeks from time of removal, and that though no copy of the mortgage is filed as provided, it is valid as against a purchase made within such period.

provides by section 9 that "every mortgage filed in pursuance of this ordinance shall cease to be valid as against the creditors of the persons making the same after the expiration of one year from the filing thereof, unless a statement, etc., is again filed within thirty days next preceding the expiration of the said term of one year." A chattel mortgage was filed on August 12th, 1886, and registered at 4.10 p.m. of that day. A renewal of said mortgage was registered at 11.49 a.m. on August 12th, 1887:—Held, affirming the decision of the Court below that the renewal was filed within one year from the date of the filing of the original mortgage as provided by the ordinance. Per Patterson, J .: - In computing the time mentioned in this section the day of the original filing should be excluded and the mortgagee would have had the whole of the 12th August, 1887, for filing the renewal. Section 6 of the same ordinance provides that: "All the instruments mentioned in this ordinance whether for the mortgage or sale of goods and chattels shall contain such sufficient and full description thereof that the same may be readily and easily known and distinguished." The description in a chattel mortgage was as follows: "All and singular the goods, chattels, stock-in-trade, fixtures and store building of the mortgagors, used in or pertaining to their business as general merchants, said stock-in-trade consisting of a full stock of general merchandise now being in the store of said mortgagors on the north half of section six, township nineteen, range twenty-eight west of the fourth initial meridian:-Held, affirming the decision of the Court below (1 Terr. L.R. 159), that the description was sufficient. McCall v. Wolff (13 Can. S.C.R. 130) distinguished. Hovey v. Whiting (14 Can. S.C.R. 515) followed. Per Patterson, J., that although the interpleader issue did not contain an express statement that the judgment and execution on which the goods were seized were against the makers of the chattel mortgage, that fact should be — Chattel mortgage of growing crops— Seed grain—Affidavit of bona fides—Distress for rent.]—(1) Under a lease for a year, dated 6th April, veserving as rent one-third of the crops and providing that the lessee should thresh the grain and draw it to the elevator or cars to be stored and shipped as might be agreed between the parties in the name of the lessor but fixing no time when that was to be done, there is no rent due until the end of the year and a distress by the landlord in November following, is illegal. (2) A distress for rent is unlawful if the tenant is not in possession at the time. (3) A chattel mortgage will not be held void, under section 12 of the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 11, because the affidavit of bona fides made by an agent stated that he had "a knowledge of all the facts connected with the said mortgage," instead of saying, in the words of the section, that he was 'aware of all the circumstances." (4) It is no objection to a mortgage on growing crops to secure the price of seed grain supplied, that the grain had not been sold to the mortgagor by the mortgagee himself, but was purchased by him for the mortgagor from a third party. (5) Under section 39 of the Act, it is a fatal objection to a mortgage on growing crops or crops to be grown, if it is taken for anything beyond the price of the seed grain furnished and interest thereon.

Meighen v. Armstrong, 16 Man. R. 5 (Dubuc, C.J.).

-Bill of sale-Transfer of goods in the ordinary course of business-Sale of stock en bloc.]-Plaintiff sold his stock en bloc, and defendants attacked the sale on the ground that it was part of a scheme between the vendor and purchaser to de-fraud certain wholesale houses. A jury found that the transaction was bona fide. but on motion for judgment, defendants questioned the validity of the bill of sale on a number of grounds, one of plaintiff's replies to which was that the Bills of Sale Act did not apply, as this was a transfer of goods in the ordinary course of business, excluded from the operation of the Act by section 2 (R.S.B.C. 1897, c. 32; B.C. Stat. 1905, c. 8, s. 3):—Held, that the words "transfers of goods in the ordinary course of business," were wide enough to include the sale of a stock in trade en bloc. Greenburg v. charges made. Smith v. McKay, 3 Terr. L.R. 102.

By a contemporaneous agreement under seal the mortgagor agreed for three years to give his whole time and attention to looking after the horses and cattle, and mortgagee agreeing to allow the mortgagor to sell sufficient to pay running expenses. Graveley v. Springer, 3 Terr. L.R. 120.

-Chattel mortgage-Affidavit for renewal —Words having same meaning as those in form prescribed—Ownership of offspring— Removal of chattels.]—(1)The legal estate in the offspring of mares comprised in a chattel mortgage covering them and also "the increase" from them is in the mortgagee, and title to such offspring cannot be acquired by one who purchases them in good faith for value although he receives delivery from the mortgagor before the mortgagee attempts to get possession. (2) Section 20 of the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 11, is sufficiently complied with by the use of the expression "kept on foot," in the mortgagee's affidavit for renewal of a chattel mortgage, instead of the words "kept alive" used in that section, as the two expressions mean the same thing. Emerson v. Bannerman (1891), 19 S.C.R. 1, followed. (3) The "subsequent purchaser" mentioned in section 29 of the Act, against whom a chattel mortgage will cease to be valid upon goods removed out of the division where it is registered, unless a certified copy is registered in the division to which the goods have been removed within six months after the re-moval, must be one who purchased after the expiration of such period of six months. Hulbert v. Peterson (1905), 36 S.C.R. 324, followed. Roper v. Scott, 16 Man. R. 594.

-Affidavit of bona fides-Jurat to affi davit-Meaning of word "sworn."]-(1) The affidavit of bona fides on a chattel mortgage is sufficient, although it purports to be the joint affidavit of two mortgages and the jurat does not show that they were severally sworn. Moyer v. Davidson (1858), 7 U.C.C.P. 521. (2) The insertion in the affidavit of a clause reading, "That I am the duly authorized agent of the mortgagee," was an apparent mistake and did not vitinte it, although it was the affidavit of the mortgagees themselves. (3) The fact that it is stated in the jurat that the affidavit has been "sworn," whereas the deponents affirmed, is not a fatal objection, as by the Interpretation Act the expressions "swear" and "sworn" respectively include "affirm solemnly" and "affirmed solemnly." (4) The Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 11, s. 5, does not require that the occupation of the mortgagee should be stated in the aflidavit of bona fides. Brodie v. Ruttan (1858), 16 U.C.R. 297, followed.

-Fraudulent preference-Chattel mortgage—Exemptions.]—A chattel mortgage although given under circumstances entitling a creditor to have it set aside as a fraudulent preference under s. 41 of the Assignments Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. S, will nevertheless, be held valid as to any goods covered by it which would, under s. 29 of the Executions Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 58, be exempt from seizure under execution. Field v. Hart (1895), 22 A.R. 449, fo!lowed.

Bates v. Cannon, 18 Man. R. 7.

-Chattel mortgage given within the jurisdicion to non-resident - Action to set aside.]—The mere taking of a chattel mortgage, without taking possession of the mortgaged goods, although it may constitute a fraudulent preference under the Assignments Act, cannot be said to be a tort within the meaning of paragraph (e) of rule 201 of the King's Bench Act, R. S.M. 1902, c. 40, and there is no jurisdiction to serve a statement of claim out of the jurisdiction in an action against a non-resident to set aside such a chattel mortgage, although given to him by a resident debtor on goods within the jurisdiction Emperor of Russia v. It was not possible to send the instrument to Toronto and have it returned for filing with the registrar with the affidavit of bona fides within the five days required by s. 7, sub.-s. 2, of the B. C. Bills of Sale Act, 1905:—Held, that, in the order granting an extension of time for filing the instrument, there should be a provision protecting intervening rights. Re W. P. ne n-Chattel mortgage-Seizure under-Frivate sale.] — When a mortgage seizes chattels under a chattel mortgage, he must, if he sells the goods, realize the best price that can be obtained; and if he fails to make use of such means as may be necessary to secure such price, he must account to the mortgagor for the full value of the property.

Grimes v. Gauthier, 1 Sask. R. 54.

-Chattel mortgage to secure future advances-Affidavit of bona fides-Officer of incorporated company.]—It is not essential to the validity of a chattel mortgage to secure future advances that such advances should be made to enable the mortgagor to enter into business as well as to carry it on. A mortgage dated 8th February, 1907, whereby the time fixed for repayment is 8th February, 1909, does not extend the liability beyond two years from its date. Where the affidavit of bona fides is made by an officer of an incorporated company, the company is, like an individual, bound by the recitals in the mortgage, e.g., a recital of an agreement in writing for future advances. The affidavit of bona fides, where the mortgagor is an incorporated company, may be made by the company's vice-president, who need not be described as agent.

Newlands v. Higgins, 1 Alta. R. 18.

-Conflict of laws-Bills of Sale Ordinance (C.O. c. 43), as law of one Province -How far effective in the other Province--Chattel mortgage - Removal of goods from one Province to the other.]—The Ordinances of the Northwest Territories continued in force by the Alberta Act and the Saskatchewan Act respectively in each of these Provinces, have no different or more extensive effect than if they were Acts of the legislature of each Province respectively. Consequently, the Bills of Sale Ordinance (C.O. c. 43), as a law of one Province is effective only within the limits of that Province, and cannot affect the rights or title of persons to goods in the other Province, to any greater extent than if it were actually the law of a foreign state. The owner of goods, having executed a chattel mortgage, which was duly recorded in the proper registration district in the Province of Saskatchewan, afterwards fraudulently removed them to the Province of Alberta, where he sold them to a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the mortgage: - Held, that such sale conferred no title to the goods as against the chattel mortgage, the mortgage being good as between the parties, and the Bills of Sale Ordinance, which requires a certified copy of the mortgage to be filed in the registration district to which the goods are removed, being inoperative as a law of the Province of Saskatchewan, beyond the boundaries of that Province. If the mortgage is good according to the law of the situs of the goods at the time of execution as between the parties, it is good in every other situs to which the goods may be removed, even as against subsequent purchasers and creditors; and if registration is only required by the law of the original situs to protect creditors and subsequent purchasers, this means creditors and subsequent purchasers, seeking to enforce their claims within the judicial territory of the original situs; and, consequently, whether registered in either jurisdiction or not, the mortgage, valid between the parties, is valid to all intents and purposes, in any foreign (including other provincial) jurisdiction. Semble, that in an action by the mortgagee for a return of the goods and damages for detention, the goods having been returned, the measure of damages is the amount of the interest on the price paid by the defendant for the goods.

-After-acquired goods-Purchase of business and property subject to liabilities of vendor.]-The plaintiff company in May. 1907, in pursuance of a previous agreement purchased the business, plant and stock-intrade of Lyone Bros., subject to their debts and liabilities. One of these was a loan of $4,000 from the defendants secured by a chattel mortgage of all the plant and stock-in-trade of Lyone Bros. This chattel mortgage contained a provision that it should cover all after-acquired goods and chattels brought upon the premises owner or occupied by the plaintiff company or used in connection with their business during the currency of the mortgage. The plaintiff company had been in-corporated prior to the date of the chattel mortgage and Lyone Bros. were the principal promoters and became its president and vice-president respectively, being in fact the controlling shareholders. $2,104.64 of the money lent by the defendants to Lyone Bros. was handed over to the plaintiff company and by it applied towards payment of the debts of Lyone Bros. The plaintiff company paid an instalment of the interest due to defendants on the $4,000 loan:—Held, 1. That the provision in the chattel mortgage as to the afteracquired goods was as binding upon the plaintiff company as purchasers of the mortgaged property with notice of it as it would be upon the executors or admin-istrators of the mortgagors, and that de-fendants had a good valid lien au-charge upon all after-acquired goods brought upon the premises in question by the plaintiff company. 2. That the plaintiff company was under the circumstances estopped from disputing such lien and charge, and defendants were entitled to show in evidence the facts constituting such estoppel although it had not been pleaded, as an estoppel in pais need not be pleaded to make it obligatory. 3. The mortgage was not void as to the afteracquired goods because of the generality and vagueness of the description.

Imperial Brewers v. Gelin, 18 Man. R.

-Bill of sale-Consideration-Past indebtedness.]-The claimant in an interpleader issue claimed under a bill of sale whereby the goods seized were assigned to her for an expressed consideration of $1,000. In support of this consideration she proved a marriage settlement whereby the defendant in the main action, her busband, in consideration of marriage settled on her the sum of $3,000 and charged this sum on his property and she alleged that the bill of sale was given in pursuance of this settlement, which settlement was properly made and executed in accordance with the laws of the Province of Quebec:-Held, that under the provisions of s. 11 of the Bills of Sale Ordinance, c. 43, C.O. 1898, the bill of sale was void as against creditors inasmuch as the consideration therein was not truly expressed.

Saskatchewan Lumber Co. v. Michaud, 1 Sask. R. 412.

-Seizure of goods under chattel mortgage -Goods held by mortgagor under agreement for conditional sale.]-Plaintiff delivered a team of horses to his son, under an agreement for conditional sale whereby the property in the horses was reserved to the plaintiff until the purchase price was paid. Subsequently the son mortgaged the horses, and the mortgage came into the hands of the defendant company. Default being made, the company authorized its bailiff, the defendant Cornell, to seize the horses. On the seizure being made the plaintiff notified the bailiff of his lien and the registration thereof, but, by reason of a change in the boundaries of the registration district, mentioned the wrong office as the place where the note was registered. Search on two occasions at the office named failed to show the lien registered, and the defendants thereupon sold the horses. The note had in fact been properly registered before the changes in the boundaries. In an action for conversion:-Held. that although the defendants acted innoently and in good faith in selling the property in question, there was nevertheless a wrongful conversion.

Reinholz v. Cornell, 2 Sask, R. 342.

-Chattel mortgage - Collateral security for payment of promissory note-Days of grace on notes-Aceleration clause.] -Plaintiff purchased a stock of goods from defendant Stewart, giving promissory notes in payment, and as collateral security to such notes, a chattel mortgage expressed to be payable on the days when the notes were respectively payable, and to be collateral thereto. The mortgage to be collateral thereto. The mortgage also contained the usual acceleration clause, and a provision that the mortgage deeming the mortgage insecure he might declare it due at any time. The plaintiff having made default in payment of one of the notes, defendant caused the goods mentioned in the mortgage to be seized, the seizure being made before the expiration of the last day of grace on the note, but after the payment became due as expressed in the mortgage. The plaintiff sued for damages for unlawful seizure and conversion of the goods:-Held, that a mort. gage given as collateral security to a promissory note cannot be enforced for default in payment until after the expiration of the last day of grace for payment of such note. 2. An action cannot be main. tained on a promissory note until the expiration of the last day of grace. 3. That in order to justify entry and seizure before default, under a chattel mortgage containing a clause providing for entry and seizure, provided the mortgagee deems the mortgage to be insecure before the sum payable thereunder is due, it must appear that the mortgagee did actually deem the mortgage insecure at the time he mad the entry, and that such entry was made on that ground. 4 That it is a matter entirely in the discretion of the trial Judge whether he assess the damages claimed in an action himself or refer it to the local registrar to do so.

Westaway v. Stewart, 2 Sask, R. 178.

-Bills of sale ordinance-Chattel mortgage-Resolution to authorize mortgage by directors.] - Held, 1. That s. 98 of the Companies Ordinance relating to the powers of a company to borrow and mortgage, applies only to mortgages and other securities to secure money borrowed, and does not restrict the implied power of a trading company to give security for existing debts. 2. That the unanimity of the members of a company in authorizing a mortgage obviates the necessity of any meeting. 3. That the affidavit of bona fides of a chattel mortgage may be sworn before a solicitor acting for the mortgagee. 4. Where there is lacking a knowledge of insolvency and intent to prefer, delay, defeat, hinder or prejudice creditors, on the part of either the mortgagor or the mortgagee, the mortgage not being attacked within sixty days from the date of its execution, is not invalid under the Assignments Act. 5. Where a mortgagee is a director and one of the shareholders of a company mortgagor, concurrence of intention will be presumed. 6. Where there are two mortgagees named in one mortgage and Barthels v. Winnipeg Cigar Co., 2 Alta.

—Chattel mortgage—Mortgagee in possession—Lien for money paid—Substituted chattels.]—The plaintiff held a chattel mortgage on a stallion called Richard the 3rd, executed on April 27th, 1893, by one McDougall, against whose goods the defendant had previously placed a fi. fa. with the sheriff, but of which the plaintiff was unaware at the time of taking the mortgage. The mortgage was taken to secure a bona fide indebtedness. The plaintiff, in September, 1893, was in possession of the stallion under his mortgage, and gave him to the mortgagor, McDougall, as agent, to be sold in British Columbia and the proceeds invested in other horses. This was done, and such horses were brought back to the plaintiff's premises at Qu'Appelle, where they were seized by the sheriff under the fi. fa. An interpleader issue having been directed and tried, held, that the property in the horses was in the plaintiff to the full extent of the plaintiff's claim.

Bell v. Lafferty, 3 Terr. L.R. 263.

-Chattel mortgage-Setting aside-Descriprion—Possession.]—Held, (1) The execution of a chattel mortgage by the mortgagor and its delivery to and acceptance by the mortgagee or his agent constitutes such mortgage a valid and binding instrument as between the parties to it, without any further act on the part of the mortgagee. (2) A mortgagee's solicitors are his agents for accepting such delivery. (3) A mort-gagee of chattels cannot validly repudiate the mortgage without giving proper notice to the mortgagor. (4) The substitution of one chattel security for another has the effect of cancelling the substituted security. (5) To constitute a chattel mortgage a preference it must be "the spontaneous act or deed" of the insolvent, and must have been given "of his own mere motive and as a favour or bounty proceeding voluntarily from himself." Moisons Bank v. Halter (18 Can. S.C.R. 88), and Stephens v. McArthur (19 Can. S.C.R. 446), applied. (6) Although a mortgagee may have no right to take possession of the mortgaged chattels, still if he does do so, and the mortgagor assents thereto, the possession is lawful quoad the mortgagor, and such assent may be implied from conduct. Dedrick v. Ash-down (15 Can. S.C.R. 227), distinguished. (7) Where in a chattel mortgage there are some items that can be identified and others that cannot, such mortgage is void in toto only if the items that can be distinguished are few and insignificant, but where such items are neither few nor insignificant the mortgage is quoad such items valid.

-Sale of growing crop-Subsequent mortgage of crop to third party.] - Plaintiffs agreed to purchase certain lands from one K., who held under contract with C., the first mentioned contract containing a clause that the crop then growing and unharvest ed on the land should be the property of the purchasers. Subsequently plaintiffs acquired the interest of C. in the land. K. remained in possession, cut and harvested the crop and mortgaged it to defendants, who sold it and applied the proceeds in payment of K.'s indebtedness to them. In an action for conversion K, swore that he did not understand that he was selling the crop to plaintiff, but the whole arrange-ment was one by which the plaintiffs would get paid before his other creditors:-Held. that the sale of the crop was void as against the defendants under the provisions of s. 9 of the Bills of Sale Ordinance, c. 43, C.O. 1898, not being followed by an actual and continued change of possession.

Mihm v. Balcolvski, 1 Sask. R. 415.

—Chattel mortgage — Validity — Consideration.]—Where a chattel mortgage was in fact given to secure a past indebtedness, but on its face purported to be given in consideration of money "in hand well and truly paid" by the mortgage to the mortgagor:—Held, that the consideration was duly expressed within the meaning of s. 7, of Ordinance Number 18, of 1889. A small inaccuracy in the statement of the consideration is not sufficient to avoid a chattel mortgage.

BOUNDARIES.

Dominion Lands Act-Error in original survey—Boundary between quarter-sections.]—Plaintiff was the owner of the southwest quarter of a section of land, while defendant was the owner of the northwest quarter of the same section. In making the original survey the surveyor had placed the corner mounds of the section as required by the law then in force, but by mistake the distance between these two points was only seventy-two chains instead of eightyone as required by law. The central mound between the northwest and southwest corner had either not been placed or if placed had been obliterated. A dispute arose as to the location of the line between the two quarter-sections, and an action was brought to determine the true line:-Held, that the line should be ascertained by taking a point equidistant between opposite northwest and southwest corners of the section and con-necting that point with the ascertained nound on the east side. (2) That the provisions of s. 106 of the Dominion Lands Act of 1879 requiring that the boundary be ascertained by drawing a line from the point ascertained to be equidistant at right angles to the line in which such point is situated to the opposite boundary was intended to apply in ordinary cases, but in exceptional cases like the present, where the effect would be to create an unequal division of the land, the practice authorized by s. 105 and fol-lowed herein should be adopted. -Party wall-Contract-Windows.]-Parties to the action agreed that a certain wall should be a party wall. Either party was to have right to build upon this wall after it was completed, but it was to retain its character of a party wall. Boyd, C., granted an injunction restraining defendant from placing windows in the wall, holding that that was a derogation from the method of its construction according to the meaning of the contract.

Party wall—Addition to wall—Openings.]
—In an action to compel the defendants to remove a wall:—Held, that if the wall, which had been added to or built upon the original party wall, could be called an external wall, there was the right to put windows in it; if the extension or addition had the character of a party wall and was to be so designated, the windows were a derogation from that method of construction. By the contract between the parties, the original wall might be afterwards built upon and added to by a further party wall, which might be used by the party who did not build it as a party wall. But, whether he elected to use it or not, the addition to the party wall was, in the contemplation of the parties, to retain its character as a party wall; and to attach any other character to it by constructing it with openings or windows was in violation of the contract. —Removal of line fence—Connecting fences to protect land from cattle.]—The proper place for the erection of a boundary fence is on the true line, and where it is so erected it becomes the property of the adjacent land-owners as tenants in common. But, in this case, the original line fence, being wholly on the plaintiff's land, was the property of the plaintiff, the fence being regarded as part of the freehold, and the ownership of the freehold, determining the ownership of the fence. The fence being on the plaintiff's land, the defendant took down the main portion of it, and out of the material built a new line fence on his (the defendant's) land. The defendant also removed a portion of the southerly boundary fence on the plaintiff's land abutting on the highway, which had been originally built by the defendant wholly on the land now owned by the plaintiff, and incorporated the material therefrom in the new line fence. Shortly afterwards the plaintiff built small pieces of fence at the northerly and south extremities of his farm to connect with the new line fence. These the defendant pulled down, and cattle got upon the plaintiff's land and destroyed his crops:

—Held, that, in the circumstances, the plaintiff was justified in building the small portions of fencing to connect with the new line fence. It would be unreasonable to expect the plaintiff to reconstruct a new line fence throughout on the true boundary line, because the defendant wrongfully earried his new line fence beyond the true boundary line; and the defendant was liable for the consequences of his acts in pulling down the connecting fences. Damages assessed at $100.

-Encroachment on highway-Rebuilding-Party wall.1-In 1872 C. was the lessee of a Party wall.,—In 1872 C. was the lessee of a parcel of land in a town, at the corner of P. and S. streets, for the unexpired portion of a term of 50 years from the 20th July, 1843. By a sublease, C., through whom the plaintiffs claimed, leased the southerly 32 feet of this lot to M., through whom the defendant claimed. M. by the instrument feet of this lot to M., through whom the de-fendant claimed—M., by the instrument, agreeing to construct, upon the land leased to him, a wall extending from P. street easterly upon the north limit of the de-mised land, which C. was to be at liberty to use as a partition wall for any build-ing he might erect upon the land retained by him, and, for that purpose, to insert beams, joists, etc., in the wall, spoken of as "the northern wall of M.'s building." Both buildings were erected as contemplated, the whole of the wall referred to standing on M.'s land. After the erection of the buildings, a survey was made of the town, and it was found that the buildings on P. street, including the two mentioned, en-croached 20 inches upon the highway. By 47 Vict. c. 50 (O.), the survey was confirmed, subject to the provision that, where any building had been erected encroaching upon the highway as shewn upon the plan, it should not be incumbent upon the owner or occupant to remove it off the street until the rebuilding of such building or the repair to the extent of fifty per cent. of the then cash value thereof; and the future occupation of the street was not to be deemed to create or confer any estate therein. In April, 1910, the defendant's building was destroyed by fire, but the partition wall remained intact:—Held, that the effect of the provisions of the sublease was to confer on C. the same right to use the wall as if it were a party wall, and, when it was so used by building into it the beams and joists of C.'s building, it became an integral and necessary part of that building; the right to use the wall as a partition wall, and to fit beams, etc., into it, was more than an easement—it was an interest in the land itself; the plaintiffs were not re-building, nor was their building being repaired, and the license conferred by the statute was, therefore, still subsisting, and it was not open to the defendant to pull down the part of the wall encroaching upon the street.

Sterling Bank v. Ross, 22 O.L.R. 231.

-Survey-Excess-Buildings and fences Encroachment.]-The plaintiff and defendant owned adjoining lands in block 21 in a city, and the plaintiff alleged that the defendants so constructed a certain building on his own land that the eaves and eavestroughs projected over the plaintiff's land, and so constructed a fence that it en-croached upon the plaintiff's land beyond the dividing line. The issue was as to the proper location of the dividing line between the southerly 10 feet of lot 15, owned by the plaintiff, and the northerly 15 feet of the same lot, owned by the defendant. The plaintiff based his claim on an excess in length of 3.3 feet shewn on the plan of a survey of the block made in 1894. He contended that this excess should be distributed over the whole length of the block; and that, by doing this along the northern boundary of the block, one inch would be added to the width of each 25-foot lot, with the result that the line in dispute, instead of being just 360 feet from the southern boundary of the block, on the basis of allowing 25 feet for each lot, would be moved 1.4 feet to the north:—Held, that the main scheme, based on the predetermined and fixed dimensions, was the staking out of the bulk of the block in 25-foot lots; and the rest of the block was treated as a remnant of yet undefined quantity, to be dealt with as further consideration would suggest; and the discrepancy should be thrown on the north end of the block, which would not affect lots 1 to 28. Held, also, that the plaintiff would not, in any event, be entitled to damages, an injunction, or a mandamus, but only to compensation for the land encroached upon.

Thordarson v. Akin, 15 W.L.R. 115.

-Sale of immovable-Guarantee against eviction-Action in warranty.]-The purchaser of an immovable against whom the adjourning owner has set up, by an action en bornage, a claim for a dividing line based on an acquired prescription and involving a partial eviction, has a remedy against his vendor by a formal action in warranty. The action in warranty in such a case is none the less connected with the principal action from the fact that it contains subsidiary conclusions for a money condemnation in case of eviction. The sale of an immovable by metes and bounds is that of a certain and fixed entity and regard should be had to the precise limits marked in the title rather than to the area which is merely subordinate. When, in the description of an immovable sold, it is said to front on a cadastral lot, the latter should be understood as found on the plan and cadastral register, and not with additions that a prescription acquired may have given to its owner. By application of the rule that the debtor is liable for non-performance of his obligation, for damages only which are the direct and immediate consequences thereof, the vendor of a vacant lot must indemnify the purchaser, evicted from part of it, only for the value of such part and for the shrinkage in value of the land delivered resulting from its diminution in area. He is not liable for depreciation in value of buildings erected by the purchaser after the sale resulting from the latter's eviction.

Fallée v. Gagnon, Q.R. 19 K. B. 165.

-Adjoining lands-Building operations.]-An interlocutory injunction will not be granted to prevent a party from building on his own land and placing half of his wall or his neighbour's land on the ground that the same is an encroachment, especially if there has never been a legal bornage between the two properties.

Racicot v. Maher, 11 Que. P.R. 208.

-Monuments - Conventional line - Mistake. 1-In an action for trespass where title to land was in question and both parties claimed under the same title, and defendant's deed was long prior in point of time to plaintiff's, the title to the land in question depended upon the reading of the description in defendant's deed, the material portion of which was as follows:-"Thence running in an eastwardly direction along the said highway until it comes to a crossway," (a kind of wooden culvert or bridge) "in the public highway, and running in a southerly direction until it comes to the waters of Broad Cove, etc." It was proved that on the highway there were two crossways, and the dispute was to which was meant:—Held, that there was no authority for rejecting the first crossway in favour of the second. Also, that the words, "running in a southerly direction, etc." did not demand a straight course but only a southerly direction. Also, that defendant was not bound by an alleged conventional line agreed to between the parties "if bound to be cor-rect," in the absence of evidence to show that it was found to be correct, and when it appeared that, at the time the agreement was made, there was uncertainty in the minds of the parties as to which crossway was meant. Also, that in interpreting the agreement, both the agreement and the plan referred to in it must be considered. Circumstances which do not contradict the terms of the deed, may be looked at in order to a proper construction of the instrument. Effect must be given to the instrument, where possible, against the grantor. Reddy v. Strople, 44 N.S.R. 332.

-Boundary line between lots-Agreement-Possession.]—The plaintiff owned, subject to a mortgage, lot 33 in the 3rd concession of the township of Alfred, and the defendant lot 34, immediately to the west thereof. Most of the line between these lots was well ascertained, but there was a dispute concerning about six rods at the south; and this action was brought to determine the boundary at that place:—Held, that, although part of the line between the two lots had been agreed upon or fixed by the Strtute of Limitations, that had no effect in or towards establishing a line in continuation thereof. It was contended that the defendant had been for more than ten years in possession of the strip of land claimed by the plaintiff, and so had acquired title by the Statute of Limitations:-Held, upon the evidence, that there was no exclusive possession: the plaintiff was the rightful owner of his own lot and the defendant of his, and each was in constructive possession up to the true line, wherever that might be. Rogers v. Nixon, unreported decision of a Divisional Court, Queen's Bench Division, 21st December, 1889, followed. The defend-ant also contended that the plaintiff had not such possession as enabled him to sue in trespass:-Held, that, where one has the paper title to a piece of land and comes upon it and occupies in fact part thereof, he is considered in law in possession of the whole, unless another is in actual physical occupation of some part to the exclusion of the true owner; here no other person was in actual possession; and the plaintiff had sufficient possession. Held, also, that the fact that the plaintiff was merely a mortgagor was tendered immaterial by the Ontario Judicature Act, s. 58 (4). McMullen v. Free, unreported decision of a Divisional Court, Chancery Division, 8th January, 1887, followed. It was also contended by the defendant that the plaintiff had not made out the true line. The original survey of the township was made in 1797. In 1880 H. was appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor to make a survey of the east boundary line of North Plantaganet and the west boundary line of Alfred, from the Ottawa river to the front of the 11th concession. H., in making the survey, placed a stone monu-ment at the northwest corner of the 3rd concession of Alfred, at the place at which an old post had previously been, and another stone monument at the southwest corner of the 3rd concession, and the line between these became the true western boundary of the township, and the governing line: R.S.O. 1897, c. 181. ss. 14, 15, 17, 23, 24, 36. The road at the southeast corner was rightly placed so that the monument was in the middle of the road. A survey was made for the plaintiff by W., who found these two posts, but, not having heard of H.'s survey, thought the monument at the north was at the true position for the east side of the road, thirty-three feet east of the west boundary of Alfred. The result was that the line which W. found made an angle with the true line of about 1' 43". Then he took a post on the northeast corner of lot 34, admitted to be at the place of the original post, and ran from this a line parallel to the line he had determined from H's monuments, thus running the line thirty-three feet east of the true line at the south end of the lot, and taking off certain of the plaintiff's land and putting it on the defendant's lot, of which the plaintiff did not and the defendant could not complain: -Held, that the boundary was determined by the line run by W. A Court is not concerned with the question whether the surveyor took the prescribed means for deter-mining his data—he should follow the directions of the statute; the Court is concerned with the facts, and not with the manner of determining the facts. The monuments planted by H. were found by W.; and it was a matter of indifference what method he adopted to satisfy himself that they were real monuments. Held, also, that there is no necessity for finding the true astronomical bearing of the governing line, so long as the line to be run is on the same astronomical course. Held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the action, although the damages assessed against the defendant did not exceed the amount paid into Court by him, the defendant not having admitted the plaintiff's title, which was the main matter in dispute, and there being nothing in the conduct of the plaintiff which should deprive him of costs.

Description where no boundary marks.]

—Where land claimed by a petitory suit was situated in a locality of which there was no cadastral plan, and no fences or other boundaries, the judgment was held to be executable and the land to be sufficiently described as the lot of land situate at Fox Bay, Anticosti, on which the defendant had built a dwelling house and which the defendant occupied.

Menier v. Whiting, 18 Que. S.C. 113.

—Line fences—Agreement to keep in repair—Trespass—By-law.] — The plaintiff and defendant, adjoining land owners, made an arbitrary division of the line fence between their lots, which was less than five feet in height, which they were to build and keep in repair. By reason of the defendant allowing his portion to get into disrepair, his cattle and admaged it. The defendant also allowed his cattle to escape and run at large on the highway, from whence, by breaking down the plaintiff's fences, they got on to the plaintiff's fences, they got on to the plaintiff's land, and further damaged it. A township by-law provided that no fence should be less than five feet high, etc., and prohibited the running at large of all breachy cattle, i.e., cattle known to throw down or leap over any fence four feet high, and provided for impounding them, Held, that the defendant was liable for the damages sustained by the plaintiff; and that such liability was not displaced by the by-law.

Garrioch v. McKay, 13 Man. R. 404.

-Trespass-Line fence-Burden of proof.] -Plaintiff and defendant were owners of adjoining lots of land, the title to which was derived from the same original grantor. Plaintiff's lot was described as being bounded on the north by the south line of defendant's lot. In an action claiming damages for trespass plaintiff complained that defendant, in erecting a new fence had placed it on a line different from the line of the fence which existed previously, and which was admitted to have been on the true line between the two lots. The question whether defendant had, as a matter of fact, departed from the old line or not, having been left undetermined:-Held, that there must be a new trial. Per Weatherbe, J., dissenting:-Held, that the burden was upon plaintiff to prove the south line of defendant's lot, and that as she had failed to do so she could not re-

-Party wall-Raising-Notice to adjoining owner-Damages.]-A person desiring to raise a party wall should first give notice to the adjacent owner to enable him to prepare for it, in order to avoid all liability except such as should arise from his negligence or want of care. If the damages caused to the co-proprietor of the party wall are the result, not of the raising of the wall, but of the demolition of the house adjoining it, the one who did the work of raising it is not responsible therefor. In other words, the co-proprietor of the party wall has no recourse against him who raised it unless the damage which he suffers is caused by defects in the construction of the latter's own build-

-Action for removal of ore-Boundary line in lease controlled by fixed monument -Plan-Copy put in by one party without restriction, may be used by other to prove measurements — Falsa demonstratio.]—In an action brought by plaintiff to recover damages for the mining and removal of iron ore, claimed by plaintiff, under a lease from the Crown, judgment was given lease from the defendant company, on the ground that, in order to recover, it was necessary for plantiff to establish the south line of land originally granted to G. The starting point in plaintiff's lease was a marked stone, located a given dis-tance from a marked maple tree, on the south line of lands originally granted, etc. There being evidence to show the actual starting point of plaintiff's lease:—Held, following Fielding v. Mott, 6 R. & G., 339, and 14 S.C.R. 254, that the trial Judge erred in holding that plaintiff could not recover unless he established the south line of the land granted to G., as such line, if shown to be in a different place from the marked tree, would be rejected as falsa demonstratio. Held, that a copy of a plan from the Crown Lands office, as to which one of plaintiff's witnesses was cross-examined, and which was put in by defendant's counsel, without restriction, as part of his general evidence, was in for all purposes to which plaintiff might apply it, and was properly used for the purpose of proving measurements made on the ground.

Bartlett v. Nova Scotia Steel Co., 35 N.S.R. 376.

-Line fence-Mitoyennete.] - If a line fence (cloture deligne) can be mitoyenne, that is, made and maintained by adjoining owners at their common cost, it is usually divided equally among the owners, each being the sole proprietor and responsible for his share. In such case one owner may maintain a petitory action against a neighbour who has taken possession of his share.

Proulx v. Renaud, Q.R. 23 S.C. 511 (Sup. Ct.).

-Action en bornage-Examination of witnesses.]-In a cause en bornage the defendant who has not filed his pleas has the right to examine witnesses.

-Common wall-Footing courses-Rights of neighbour-Art. 520 C.C.]-(1) The proprietor who first builds a house wall, intended to become common, has a right to establish the base of the wall on the first soil sufficiently solid to support the wall which he intends to construct, and is not obliged to go deeper, although his neighbour may require a greater depth, and may offer to bear the cost of the increased excavation and masonry. If the neighbour desires to have a heavier building, necessitating a deeper foundation, he must make the understructure at his own expense. (2) The proprietor first building a wall destined to become common, has a right to extend the footing courses more than nine inches on his neighbour's land, where such extension is necessary to secure the solidity of his wall. (3) Article 520 C. C. has no application to house walls, but refers to fence walls only; house walls being governed, not by positive law, but entirely by custom, which varies according to local conditions and usages, which, in the city of Montreal, require a footing course wider than the body of the wall, where the same is necessary for the solidity of the wall.

Roy v. Strubbe, 24 Que. S.C. 520, (Archibald, J.).

—Surveyor's field notes — Existence of posts and blazings—Possession by contiguous owner.]—Oral evidence of the setting of a boundary (bornage) by a surveyor with the production of his field notes, of the existence of posts at either end there-of and of blazings along the line from one to the other and of eighteen years' legal possession by one of the contiguous owners in conformity therewith, is admissible and sufficient to establish a settlement of boundaries (bornage), in the absence of an official statement or authentic procesverbal thereof. (2) The costs of suit in an action of boundary are subject to the rule which applies to litigation in other matters and should be awarded to the party whose pretensions, as set forth in the pleadings, are upheld by the judgment. Laurentides Mica Co. v. Forti, 15 Que.

Interference with possession—Revendication—Warranty.]—The action en bornage by which the plaintiff complains of an encroachment and asks to be declared owner of the part of an immovable his enjoyment of which is interfered with, takes he character of a revendication and from that time the remedies on garantic which the defendant could have are open to him.

Drulard v. Welsh, 14 O.L.R. 54 (C.A.).

Recovery of double cost of erecting fence.]—Plaintiff sued under the provisions of R.S. 1900, c. 93, s. 6, sub-s. 3, to recover double the expense of making a boundary or division fence between the properties of defendant and an adjoining owner. The only defence offered was that the fence constructed was not of the height of four and one-half feet as required by the Statutes, 3. The trial Judge having found that the fence was built to the proper height as required by the statute:—Held, that his judgment on this point should not be disturbed. Cross v. Legag, 41 N.S.R. 419.

Specification of documents.]—In an action en bornage, a motion by plaintiff that the which he has in his control and which relates to the contestation, is too vague and indefinite, because it does not call for any

Paradis v. Parks, Q.R. 32, S.C. 263 (Ct. Rev.).

—Encroachment — Building — Knowledge and acquiescence of owner.] — A slight encroachment on neighbouring land by a party who builds a house, made in good faith and with the knowledge of the owner of such land, and without objection on his part, will not give the latter the right to revendicate the strip taken, nor to sue for the demolition of the building. His recourse, in such a case, is for an indemnity of which the measure is the value of the land taken.

Lidstone v. Simpson, 16 Que. K.B. 557.

-Trespass-Title by possession - Evidence.]-P. petitioned the Crown for a grant of land in the parish of Saint Martins, in the county of Saint John, and on the 24th of July, 1834, the Crown gave him a ticket of possession of a tract called lot B of 200 acres, more or less, describing the tract as bounded on the north by the grant to Isaac and David Springstead, on the east by lot C, on the south by vacant land, and on the west by lot A. P. went into possession under the ticket of lot B. In 1837 the Crown granted to B. lot A, describing it by metes and bounds, and stating that it contained 300 acres, more or less. In 1838 (the Crown having ascertained that there were not 200 acres be-tween lots A and C) issued a grant of lot B to P., describing it by metes and bounds, and stating that it contained 134 acres, more or less. The plaintiff acquired the title to lot B by mesne conveyance from P., referring to the grant and describing the lot by metes and bounds as therein described. In an action of trespass by the plaintiff against the defendant, the successor in title of lot A, where the question in dispute was the location of the eastern boundary of lot A, and the western boundary of lot B:—Held, that as the title of the plaintiff was by conveyances describing the lot by metes and bounds as given in the grant, the possession of her predecessors in title under the ticket of possession, or otherwise outside of the bounds of the grant would not enure to her benefit, and the ticket of possession was improperly received as evidence of either title or possession.

dence of either title or possession. Ingram v. Brown, 38 N.B.R. 256.

-Bornage-Cadastral plan-Designaton of contents and extent—Fixing boundary line—Title and possession.]—The plaintiff in an action en bornage in which the boundaries of the immovables are described according to the numbers they bore on the cadastral plan for registry of real rights is not to be considered as recognizing the correctness of said plan and the contents of the immovables stated therein. rights of the parties as to the extent of their respective lands and the establishment of the line separating them results from their respective titles and possession. Court of Appeal. Forcier v. Bélanger, Q.R. 16 K.B. 289.

—Deed—Erroneous description — Latent ambiguity.]—In a deed from T. H. to S. the lands were described as beginning at a stake standing on the west side of the highway road, being 6.86 chains at right angles from T. H.'s south line, thence north 84° 45′ west, 25 chains to a cedar post standing on Lenihan's east line, thence north 5° 45′ east, along said line 6.86 chains to T. H.'s south line, thence south 84° 45′ east, along said line to the west side of said highway road, thence south 84° 45′ east, along said line to the south 84° 45′ east, along said line to the establishment of the south 84° 45′ east, along said line to the south 84° 45′ east, along said line to the south 84° 45′ east, along said line to the south 84° 45′ east, along said to the the southerly along west side of said road to the place of beginning, containing 20 acres, more or less. The description as it stood could not be applied to the land, and evidence was admitted as to the location of the stake and post of a former survey:—Held, on the evidence that the words T. H.'s "south line" in the description, intended to describe the northern boundary of the lot, were an error and the lot bounded on the north by T. H.'s north line would pass under the deed.

Chute v. Adney (No. 2), 39 N.B.R. 93.

-Construction of house-Encroachment-Prescription.]-The right of every owner of land to compel his adjoining owner to submit to a bornage does not the less exist when the latter has built a house the wall of which forms a fixed and certain limit within the line of division between the lands. The fact that the wall was built without the other owner's consent suffices to preserve to the latter his right of action en bornage which otherwise would not be the case. The boundary in such case should be placed on plaintiff's land at the distance from the wall required by law, the right of bornage not going beyond the limits of his own land and the other owner being mis en cause only to make the proceedings litigious. In an action en bornage in which the plaintiff claims that a building upon the adjoining land encroaches upon his own the defendant can successfully set up against the conclusions drawn from such claim an acquired prescription by ten years' possession based upon a deed conveying the property.

Brown v. McIntosh, Q.R. S.C. 464.

—Encroachment—Proof of location—Authority of surveyor to determine.]—The posts planted at the time of the survey of a city lot having been destroyed by a general fire which swept over the block of land in which the lot was included:—Held, on appeal, that a surveyor could not determine the location of the lot by apportioning the apparent shortage among all the lots in the block.

Barry v. Desrosiers, 14 B.C.R. 126.

—Action by contiguous owner to annul deed fixing boundaries—Reservation of right to recover.]—An action by the owner of an immovable against the owner of a contiguous immovable to have a deed in which the division line had been agreed upon by their predecessors in title, declared null and void, "under reserve of the plaintiff's right to afterwards proceed en bornage, or otherwise, to recover the part of his property possessed by the defendant under the authority of the deed," is a trouble de droit which gives the defendant the right to sue his seller in warranty against eviction.

BRIBERY.

Corrupting witnesses.] — The prisoner was charged on two counts, with (1) having attempted to dissuade a witness, B., by a bribe, from giving evidence before a Court of Revision held in connection with a contested provincial election; (2) with having attempted to obstruct the course of justice by giving to one B., $10 to induce him to abstain from attending such Court of Revision. B. was the person whose vote had been objected to and appealed against: -Held, that it being charged that B. was dissuaded as a witness, not as a party, the first charge fell properly within clause (a) of s. 154 of the Criminal Code, 1892; but that the second charge was defective, at all events in omitting to state that B.'s absence from the Court of Revision would lead to a defeat of justice.

BROKER.

Purchase of shares for customer on margin-Hypothecation.]-The plaintiff sued for the conversion of and other wrongful dealings with shares of stock purchased for her by the defendants as her brokers, "on margin," the complaint being that the defendants had pledged the shares bought for the plaintiff for a larger amount than that owing by the plaintiff:-Held, on the facts, that there was no breach by the defendants of their contract with the plaintiff, which was largely a tacit one, both parties under-standing the terms on which they were deal-ing. (2) That the terms of the bought notes afforded at the least some evidence of what the real tacit contract was; and they very plainly set forth a term as to raising money upon the bought shares, in any way most convenient to the defendants. (3) That, assuming that the defendants were guilty of converting the plaintiff's shares, she could recover; for, at the appointed time and in the agreed manner, her shares were duly transferred to her, accepted, and resold and retransferred to her; and the "conversions" brought no profit to the defendants nor loss to the plaintiff. agent's right to commission. —Defendant listed certain land with plaintiff for sale on certain terms, and a commission of $200 was agreed upon. Subsequently no payment being made under the contract other than the deposit of $50, the vendor cancelled the contract.—Held, that, the plaintiff, having secured a purchaser who was willing to purchase for the price agreed and who was accepted by the defendant, was, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, entitled to his commission. (2) That, even if the time of payment of the commission had been postponed, yet, as the defendant had by this action in cancelling the contract made it impossible for the purchaser to complete his contract, so that the plaintiff would be entitled to receive his commission, the plaintiff was entitled to recover notwithstanding the arrangement for postponement. McCallum v. Russell, 2 Sask. R. 442. —Commission on purchase of real estate.]—

(1) A plaintiff who sues as a real estate agent and claims $325 as a commission of 2½ per cent. agreed upon for procuring the purchase of real estate for the price of $13,000, may prove the agreement by testing the purchase of the purchase of the price of $13,000, may prove the agreement by testing the purchase of the purc mony. (2) He may also urge his claim as one "de in rem verso" (Article 1046 C.C.). and prove in like manner his services, their value and a customary commission of 2½ per cent. on such transactions.

Zaid v. Delicato, 37 Que. S.C. 159.

-Commission-Failure of agent to complete sale.]-Where the agent entrusted with the sale of a mining property, upon certain terms involving the payment of a considerable portion of the purchase money in cash, for which he was to receipe a commission of ten per cent., failed to carry out the object aimed at and his principals were subsequently approached by the parties with whom their agent had been negotiating and where induced to agree to a sale of the pro-perty for a different consideration from that originally contemplated, consisting wholly of bonds and preferred and common stock in the company by which the property was acquired, the latter proposition being one that was open to the vendors before the matter was placed in the hands of the agent:-Held, that the transaction was not to be regarded as substantially the same disposition of the property that the agent was employed to effect and that the principle of law in regard to the payment of commissions when a sale is made of the same property to the same parties by the principals direct, did not apply.

leries, 43 N.S.R. 485.

-Joint liability of principal and agent-Performance by agent.]—When, by the custom of trade, in a sale made through an agent, the latter is held jointly liable with his principal, for its performance, an action will lie in his favour to recover from his principal whatever he may have expended for that purpose. Hence, a broker, in Montreal, has an action to recover from a customer, together with his commission and charges, an amount expended to fill an order for the sale of stock, in consequence of repudia-tion by the customer and of his joint liability, as a broker, to the purchaser, by the custom of trade governing stock exchange operations in Montreal. Parol testimony is admissible to prove such custom of trade, as well as the price for which the broker was authorized to sell the stock.

Pitbaldo v. Rosenthal, 37 Que. S.C. 443.

-Commission-Introduction of terms not authorized by vendor.]-To entitle himself to a commission for finding a purchaser of land for his principal, the agent must show that the purchaser found was not only in a situation and ready and able to carry out the purchase, but was also willing to carry it out on the terms authorized by the principal, so that, if the purchaser stipulates for an additional term giving him the privilege of paying off, at any time, the part of the purchase money to be secured by mortgage and the vendor has not authorized, or does and the vendor has not atthorned, or does not agree to, such additional term, the agent is not entitled to any commission.

Egan v. Simon, 19 Man. R. 131.

-Commission-Different claimants to same amount.]—Relief by way of interpleader may be granted, under Rule 899 of the King's Bench Act, to a vendor of land as between two agents each claiming the same amount as commission on the sale of land. the vendor admitting that the amount is due to one or other of the agents.

Webb v. Rodney, 19 Man. R. 120.

-Commission on sale of land-Necessity to get purchaser bound in writing.]-When the agent has found a purchaser ready, willing and able to carry out the purchase for the price and on the terms stipulated for by his principal, he will be entitled to his com-mission, although he has not secured a demission, atthough he has not secured a de-posit or got the purchaser bound by any writing, in a case where the principal, after being informed of the willingness of the purchaser to buy, simply ignored the agent and dealt directly with the purchaser by selling the land to him at the stipulated price less the commission.

-Introduction of purchaser-Options-Severance of land-Renewed negotiations.]-T., in 1904, having listed his property with plaintiff at the selling price of $30,000, the latter introduced P., who obtained from T. a three months' option, upon which $100 was paid. This was renewed for $50, and the second option was also allowed to lapse. A small portion of the property was sold to one L. after the expiration of the second option, on which plaintiff received a commission. In 1906, negotiations were revived between T. and P. which resulted in a sale to P. of the property for $26,000, but plaintiff was unaware of either the negotiations or sale at the time. Plaintiff, on learning of the sale, claimed a commission:-Held, on appeal, that he was entitled to recover. Lee v. O'Brien, 15 B.C.R. 326.

-Cheque given to agent as deposit on scrip to be purchased—Purchase by agent—Cheque handed to vendor.]—The plaintiff alleged that he gave a cheque for $200 to the defendant company to pay as a deposit on a purchase by the company of land war-rants for him, and that before the purchase he revoked the authority. Dart v. Coward Investment Co., 14 W.L. R. 52 (Man.).

-Sale of land-Agreement to pay commission only in event of purchase money being paid.]—The defendants sold land to B. through the instrumentality of the plain-tiffs acting as agents for the defendants. The defendants agreed to pay the plaintiffs $2,400 as commission, by instalments, the dates for payment of the instalments being contemporaneous with the dates agreed upon by the defendants and B. for the payment of the instalments of the purchasemoney by the latter. The agreement be-tween the plaintiffs and defendants contained a proviso that the amount payable thereunder should be payable only in case the defendants should receive the amounts due under the agreement with B. B. made enly one payment under his contract, and the plaintiffs received their proportion of the plaintins received their proportion of that. B, failed to make the other pay-ments, and the contract between B. and the defendants was cancelled by consent, B. returning his copy to the defendants, who retained the amount paid to them:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover the balance of their commission, al-though B. subsequently repurchased the land from the defendants, there being nothing in the evidence to lead to the suspicion that the cancellation of the first agreement and the making of the second was for the purpose of evading payment of the plaintiffs' claim. -Commission-Purchaser found by agent.]
-An owner who had listed his property with an agent for sale on certain terms, subsequently and without notice to the agent, gave an option for sale to a third party. The latter, when the time for takparty. The latter, when the time for taking up his option arrived, had 'he property conveyed to a party originally found by the agent, and with whom the agent was negotiating for a sale. The purchase price was the same in both cases:—rfeld, on appeal, that the circumstances connected with the granting of the option precluded any idea of a mere agency on the part of the option holder, and his position as pur-chaser was not affected by the feat of his aser was not affected by the fact of his selling to the purchaser with whom the agent was negotiating. White v. Maynard, 15 B.C.R. 340.

-Commission on sale of land-Purchaser found by agent-Sale by principal.]—On the 8th January the defendants "listed" land for sale with the plaintiff, a land agent, at $6,000, but four days later told the plaintiff that, as property had gone up, they should want $6,000 net. On that day the plaintiff had brought the property to the notice of C., but C. had not seen it, and had not decided to purchase. The plaintiff then changed his advertisement of the sale of the property so as to make the price read of the property so as to make the price read of the property so as to make the price read. of the property so as to make the price read $6,500, instead of $6,000, and tried to get $9,000, instead or $9,000, and tried to get C to pay $6,300, but he refused, and eventually bought for $6,000 direct from the defendants:—Held, that the defendants had properly revoked the plaintiff's authority to sell at $6,000; and the plaintiff was not entitled to commission on the sale.

-Agent's commission for procuring pur-chaser—Terms of purchase.]—In an action by land agents to recover a commission as remuneration for their services in procuring a purchaser for land placed by the defend-ant in their hands for sale:—Held, upon the evidence, that the plaintiffs had not procured a purchaser upon the defendant's terms, which included the giving of security by the purchaser if only $1,000 was

-Contract made in name of principal-Repudiation by principal.]—The defendant, as agent of persons in Manitoba, was authorized by them to sell a block of land in Saskatchewan for $37,000 cash. He made an agreement with the plaintiff, which was reduced to writing and signed by him as agent on behalf of the owners, to sell the agent on benait of the owners, to seil the lands to the plaintiff for $37,000, of which $1,000 was to be cash, and the balance was to be paid in a foreign country upon the delivery to a bank there of transfers and duplicate of certificates of title. The cash payment was made to the defendant. The owners, on being advised of the terms of sale, refused to ratify the contract, taking the position that the defendant had no authority to enter into such a contract. The plaintiff insisted upon the performance of the contract in its entirety or not at all, and the sale fell through. The plain-tiff then brought this action for money had tiff then brought this action for money had and received:—Held, treating the action as one for recovery of the money because of misrepresentation on the part of the defendant as to his authority to enter into the contract, or for damages for breach of the contract of warranty implied from the act of the agent in entering into such a contract, that the defendant had in fact exceeded his authority, and that, by entering into and signing the agreement of sale, he had represented to the plaintiff that he had the authority of his principals to the extent represented by the agreement, and the plaintiff was entitled to recover from him $1,000.

-Agent's commission-Sale of land-Purchaser found by agent—Sale by principal.]
—The defendants "listed" a lot with the The defendants "listed" a lot with the plaintiff, a land agent, for sale at $15,000. R. saw the plaintiff's "for sale" notice on the lot, and spoke to the plaintiff about it; R. said the price was too high. The plaintiff, after seeing the defendants, who said they would cut the price down a little, offered R. the property for $14,500, and R. said he would think about it. D., also a said he would think about it. D., also a land agent, and known as such to one of the defendants, approached that defendant, and asked him his price for the property, and was told $15,000. D. paid the defendants $50, and the defendants, by a writing gave D. the right, for a defined period, to purchase the property at $15,000. D. then, without taking a conveyance from the defendants, sold to R. at $14,750, of which he raid the defendant at $14.250 and kept. he paid the defendants $14,250 and kept $500 for himself. D. said that the defendants, after the writing was signed, promised him a rebate of 5 per cent.:—Held, on the evidence, reversing the judgment of Lampman, Co. C.J., the trial Judge, that the bargain between O. and the defendants the bargain between O. and the gerenants was made in good faith, and not with collusive intent to defeat the plaintiff of his commission. D., without knowledge of what the plaintiff had done in bringing the property to the attention of R., got his option to purchase, and paid $50 for it; he came in contact with R. not by reason of anything that the plaintiff had done; and the defendants were not aware until after the whole transaction was closed that R. was the purchaser. D. was not an agent, but a purchaser; the defendants understood that D. was purchasing for himself; and the reduction in price was not by way of commission. And, on these facts, the plaintiff was not entitled to a commission on the sale.

White v. Maynard, 15 W.L.R. 388 (B.C.).

-Claim for work done before revocation-Commission on sale of land—Quantum meruit.]—An agent who has been given the exclusive sale of real estate for a limited period on terms of being paid a com-mission in case of sale is entitled to substantial damages upon a revocation of his authority, if he has, within the time limited, found a purchaser for the property as the result of special efforts and the expen-diture of money in advertising and otherwise which the principal knew or had rea-son to believe the agent would make and incur to find a purchaser. Although the principal may have power to revoke the authority given to the agent, he has not always the right to do so without liability for damages.

Aldous v. Swanson, 20 Man. R. 101.

-Commission on sale of land-Absence of evidence to show employment.]—The plain-tiff, a land agent, was held, not entitled to a commission upon a sale of land made by the defendants to a purchaser, although the land was brought to the notice of the purchaser by the plaintiff, and although the plaintiff had obtained from a clerk of the plaintiff had obtained from a clerk of the defendants a list of properties for sale, which included the one so sold, and had been told by the clerk that he would be entitled to the regular commission if he brought about a sale of any of them, the clerk having no authority the plaintiff clerk having no authority, the plaintiff having had no communication with any officer of the defendants, no contract of agency, and no ratification or recognition of his voluntary agency.

-Promise to pay share of commission-Sale of land to syndicate-Agent member of syndicate.]—In an action by a land agent against another land agent for a share of a commission earned by the defendant upon the sale of land to a syndicate of purchasers, of whom the plaintiff was one:—Held, that the defendant's promise to pay the plaintiff a share of the commission was well proved, on the evi-dence adduced at the trial, and the plaintiff was entitled to recover notwithstanding his interest in the purchase, and not-withstanding that in his pleading he alleged that one C., who was merely a trustee for the syndicate, was the purchaser, it being immaterial who the purchaser was.

-Commission on sale of land-Secret agreement to divide commission with agent of vendor.]-(1) An agreement between the agent of the vendor company and the manager of the company for an equal division of the commission to be received by the agent on a sale of the company's real property, though kept from the knowledge of the company, is no bar to the right of such agent to recover the commission in case a sale is effected, as it places neither the agent nor the manager in a situation where their interests would be in conflict with their duty to their employers in getting the best possible price for the property. Rowland v. Chapman (1901), 1 Times L.R. 669, and Scott v. Lloyd (1894), 35 Pac. Rep. 733, fol-lowed. (2) Unless, however, the company knew of and acquiesced in such an agree-ment, they could recover the half commis-sion from their manager if he received it, and therefore the agent could have judgment for only half the commission.

Haycock v. Findlay, 38 Que. S.C. 265.

-Commission on sale of land-Agent introducing prospective purchaser—Failure to complete sale—Sale on different terms.]— The agent was a solicitor who transacted the business of the principal. When the principal was leaving on a long journey, he spoke to the agent with reference to the sale of certain lands, and asked the agent to communicate any offers he might receive. The agent subsequently learned of a likely purchaser, and asked for the principal's price. This was received, but the terms proved unsatisfactory, and the sale was not made. This prospective purchaser mention-ed the property to two other parties, who were to purchase with him, and these par-ties, on the principal's return, waited on him and completed a purchase of the pro-perty in question on different terms. The principal was not aware that these parties were in any way connected with the original negotiations or of the agent's relation to the sale. The agent, on learning of the sale, claimed commission :- Held, that the agent, not having secured a purchaser upon the original terms, could not recover upon the contract of agency. (2) An allowance by way of quantum meruit is based upon the acceptance by the principal of the agent's efforts, and an implied agreement to com-pensate him in respect thereof, which im-plies knowledge on the part of the principal of the agent's previous connection with the transaction, and, therefore, where the principal had no knowledge of or reason to suspect the agent's previous connection with the transaction, no allowance could be made. Vachon v. Straton, 3 Sask. R. 286.

—Sale by principal to purchaser on different terms—Agent's right to commission.]—Defendants listed land with plaintiffs, real estate agents, for sale on specified terms, and within a limited time. At the time of such listing the defendants mentioned the name of a possible buyer. Plaintiffs saw this party, but were unable to make a sale within the time limited. Subsequently this party purchased from the defendants without plaintiffs' intervention, but on more favourable terms and for a less price than mentioned in the memorandum given the plaintiffs. At the time of the original listing the price was increased to cover the plaintiffs' commission, and defendants refused to allow the commission asked unless an increased price were obtained. The plaintiffs sued for the agreed commission or alternatively on a "quantum meruit":—Held, that (following Yates v. Reser (1909), 41 S. that (following Yates V. Reser (1999), 41 S. C.R. 577) as the plaintiffs did not procure a purchaser ready and willing to purchase on the terms stated, they could not recover. (2) That (distinguishing Boyle V. Grassick (1905), 2 W.L.R. 284) the plaintiffs were not because the party who ultimately purchased was not found by the agents, but was mentioned to the agent by the principal. Blackstock v. Bell, 3 Sask. R. 181.

Burchell v. Gowrie and Blockhouse Collieries, [1910] A.C. 614, on appeal from Nova Scotia.

-Moneys intrusted to agent for purchase of shares-Appropriation of shares of agent to principal.]-An agent, stock broker or other agent, employed to buy stock for another. cannot be allowed to transfer so much stock of his own as a fulfilment of his mandate. An agent may, indeed, sell to his principal pro-perty of his own, if it be proved that no advantage was taken by the agent of his position, and that the transaction was entered into in perfectly good faith and after full disclosure; but the onus of proving this lies upon the agent. The defendant, having instructions from the plaintiff to buy for her 500 shares of the capital stock of a company, and having received $500 for her for that purpose, did not buy for her 500 shares at all, but bought for himself 2,000 shares of pooled stock, out of which he intended to give her 500 shares (as being bought from himself) when the stock should be issued. The defendant did not give evidence to show good faith and full disclosure:—Held, that he was liable for the return of the $500 and interest. The original plaintiff died after having been examined for discovery in the action, and the action was continued by her executor by virtue of an order obtained for that purpose:—Held, that the depositions of the original plaintiff upon her examination could not be read as evidence to prove the plaintiff's case: for (1) the evidence could not be used at any stage of the action against the defendant upon any proceeding

Plaintiffs then, as they alleged, purchased the shares to satisfy their own liability and sued for amount paid:-Held, by Drake, J., dismissing the action, that as no stock was ever delivered or intended to be delivered, and as the intent was to make a profit from the fluctuations of the stock market, the transaction was illegal.

-Stock broker-Dealings on margin-Obligation of broker to sell.]-There is no obligation on a broker, in the absence of the customer's order, to sell shares during a falling market, after he has demanded further margins and received no reply from his customer; and therefore if he does not sell the stock under such circumstances, he is not liable for any loss that may arise to the customer.

Kerr v. Murton, 7 O.L.R. 751 (Teetzel,

-Broker-Mandate-Speculation on stock exchange—Delivery of goods—Article 1927 C.C.]—Held, reversing the judgment of the Superior Court, Lemieux, J., 23 Que. S.C., p. 190:-1. Where a broker enters into a transaction on the stock exchange for the purchase or sale of goods in behalf of a customer, and the transaction takes place in the ordinary course of business, the broker's sole interest being his commission. he is entitled to recover from the customer the amount of the loss resulting from the operation. 2. The broker's claim is not restricted to the amount of the margin in his hands, but, in the absence of any contract to the contrary, includes the entire loss. 3. A contract does not fall under the head of gaming contracts merely because it is entered into in furtherance of a speculation. It is a legitimate commercial transaction to buy a commodity in the expectation that it will rise in value, and with the intention of realizing a profit by its resale. 4. Where a real contract of purchase has been made and carried out by a broker on behalf of a principal, delivery of the goods to the broker by transfer of warehouse receipts is delivery to the principal, just as much as if it had been made directly to himself.

Morris v. Brault, 24 Que. S.C. 167 (C.

-Stock transactions-Bourse-Buying on margin.]-Operations on the Bourse consisting of the purchase of stocks on margin are permitted by law and cannot be compared to gambling and the like. Brokers are not bound to notify their clients of their intention to sell the latter's stock when margins to cover unexpected fluctuations on the market have not been furnished. A demand for margins by telegraph only creates, so far as the brokers are concerned, an obligation not to sell the stock of a client so long as the latter has agreed to furnish the margin demanded and has notified the broker of such consent.

afterwards plaintiffs introduced a purchaser for the property, who, after inspection, authorized plaintiffs to offer $12,500. On this offer being communicated to defendant, he told the plaintiffs that he would not accept any less than $14,000, and that he wanted that net, which plaintiffs understood meant clear of commission. Plaintiffs tried to induce the purchaser to buy in these terms, but he afterwards dealt with the defendant directly and bought the property for $14,000:—Held (Perdue, J., dissenting), that plaintiffs were entitled on a quantum meruit to recover the full amount of the usual commission on the $14,000.

Aikens v. Allan, 14 Man. R. 549.

—Real estate agent—Commission on sale of land—Duty of agent to secure contract binding on purchaser.]-After the plaintiff had procured a purchaser ready and willing to carry out the purchase of the property in queston on terms satisfactory to the defendant, the proposed purchaser discovered that the north wall of the building on the property was out of plumb, and slightly overhung the adjoining lot, and called on the defendant to make good the title to the building which formed part of the property bought. Being unable or unwilling to make good the defect in the title or to make satisfactory terms with the owner of the adjoining lot, defendant proposed to the purchaser that the agreement of sale should be cancelled, and it was cancelled accordingly:—Held, following McKenzie v. Champion (1887), 4. M.R. 158; Wolf v. Tait (1887), 4 M.R. 59, that plaintiffs had earned and were entitled to be paid a compensation for their services in finding a purchaser, not necessarily the amount agreed on as commission, but a compensation as on a quantum meruit or by way of damages, and that under the circumstances it was competent for the trial Judge to award compensation equivalent to the amount of the commission agreed on had the sale gone through. Held, also, following McKenzie v. Champion, that plaintiffs were entitled to be paid notwithstanding the fact that they had not procured the purchaser to execute a binding agreement of purchase.

Brydges v. Clement, 14 Man. R. 588.

—Commission on sale of land — Appeal against findings of fact—Byldence.]—The defendant had a property for sale which he had placed in the hands of several estate agents. The plaintiff, who was not known to defendant to be a real estate agent, and who had no office as such, went to defendant, ascertained that the property was for sale, and asked the terms, which the defendant gave him. Plaintiff tried to find a purchaser; and, at a subsequent interview, he told defendant that he had found one. In answer to defendant, plaintiff gave the name of the purchaser. De-fendant stated the terms as before, but said he would require a larger cash payment than plaintiff had previously under-stood would be accepted. Plaintiff then said that the purchaser would take the property on these terms, and brought the purchaser to the defendant. The purchaser then proposed that, instead of $10,000 cash. he should pay $5,000 cash and $5,000 in six months—The other payments to be as agreed on—to which the defendant acceded and the sale was carried out. There was some conflict of testimony as to whether defendant understood that plaintiff was working for a commission on the sale, but the trial Judge, in dismissing the action, said that he did so with hesitation, and that all the witnesses had impressed him with the honesty of their belief in their statements:—Held, that the Court on appeal was in as good a position to judge of the evidence and its effect as the trial Judge, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the usual commission on the sale. Wolf v. Tait (1887), 4 M. R. 59, followed. Where there are two persons of equal credibility and one states positively that a particular conversation took place, whilst the other positively denies it, the proper conclusion is to find that the words were spoken, and that the person who denies it has for gotten the circumstances. Lane v. Jackson (1855), 20 Beav. 535; King v. Stewart (1902), 32 S.C.R. 483.

Wilkes v. Maxwell, 14 Man. R. 599.

—Real estate agent—Special agreement as to remuneration.]—Defendant commission-deplaintiff to sell his house and lot and agreed to pay five per cent. commission; plaintiff offered it to R., the tenant who paid the rent to plaintiff as agent for defendant, who did not want to buy at the time; defendant became dissatisfied at plaintiff's not being able to sell and told him he was going to put the property in other agents' hands for sale, but not withdrawing it from plaintiff's, and that his price was $3,000 net, and whoever sold it was to look for remuneration to what he could get a purchaser to pay above that sum; another agent sold to R. for $3,150, defendant realizing $3,000:—Held, anirming Harrison, C.O.J., that plaintiff was not entitled to commission in respect of the sale.

Johnson v. Appleton, 11 B.C.R. 128.

—Commercial usage—Mandate — Sale on commission.]—The allegation of a custom or commercial usage will not be struck out of an inscription en droit especially where it is claimed that the same had always been recognized by the parties in their business dealings and especially in the transaction on which the action was founded. The mandate of a broker or agent employed to sell immovables on commission is a civil contract which cannot be proved by oral testimony; and in an action by the agent for payment of his commission he will not be allowed to give evidence in his own favour except for a commencement of proof in writing.

February, 1905.

—Real estate agent—Commission for pro-curing purchaser—Commercial corporation —Powers of general manager.]—A land broker volunteered to make a sale of real estate owned by a trading corporation and obtained, from the general manager. a statement of the price, and other par-ticulars with that object in view. He brought a person to the manager who was able and willing to purchase at the price mentioned and who, after some discussion, made a deposit on account of the price and proposed a slight variation as to the terms. They failed to close and the manager sold to another person on the following day. The broker claimed his commission as agent for the sale of the property, having found a qualified purchaser at the price quoted:—Held, affirming the judg-ment appealed from (14 Man. Rep. 650) Taschereau, C.J., and Girouard, J., dubit-ante, that the broker could not recover a commission as he had failed to secure a purchaser on the terms specified. Under the circumstances, as the owner did not accept the purchaser produced and close the deal with him, there could be no inference of the request necessary in law as the basis of an obligation to pay the plaintiff a commission. Per Taschereau, C.J., and Girouard, J.:—That the general manager of a commercial corporation could not make a binding agreement for the sale of its real estate without special authorization for that purpose.

Calloway v. Stobart, 35 Can. S.C.R. 301.

-Purchase of shares on margin-Sale by broker without notice-Acquiescence.] -Defendant instructed plaintiff's manager at Winnipeg to purchase for him, on a margin of 3 per cent., 100 shares of Erie Railway stock. Plaintiffs, through their agents, bought the shares on the New York Stock Exchange, and the agents thereafter held them subject to the control and order of the plaintiffs. Defendant was informed within an hour of the purchase and the price paid. The next day he received the usual advice note of the transaction in which it was stated that on all marginal business the plaintiffs reserved the right to close transactions when margins are running out without further notice. Two weeks afterwards the price of the 'ares began to fall, and the margin became so small that the manager telegraphed de-fendant at Gladstone to send $500 additional margin; and later on the same day tional margin; and later on the same day the margin being entirely lost, he tele-graphed defendant to put up $1,000 fur-ther margin. Defendant replied to these telegrams: "Will attend message; down to-morrow." The manager gave no express notice that he would sell the shares unless the margins demanded were put up, but waited until delivery of the mail from Gladstone the next morning. Then, not having heard from defendant, he telegraphed to have the shares sold, which was done at a loss of $1,150:-Held, 1. There was an actual purchase of the shares for the defendant, and it was not necessary that the shares should have been actually transferred on the books of the railway company, either to the defendant or to the plaintiffs. 2. There was an actual sale of the shares regularly made on defendant's account, according to the usages of the stock-broking business. 3. The plaintiffs were entitled under the terms of the notice sent to defendant, to sell the shares without notice to him when the margin was exhausted, as the defendant, not baying objected to these terms, must be taken, after a reasonable time, to have assented to them.

Van Duzen-Harrington Co. v. Morton, 15

Man. R. 222 (Dubue, C.J.).

-Authority of agent to sell land-Implied powers of real estate agent.]-(1) Although an agent for the sale of land, having only a verbal authority from the owner, may sign for him a contract of sale of the land which will be binding under the Statute of Frauds, yet, if disputed, the evidence of the agent should not be accepted as sufficient proof of such authority without corroboration, unless it is of the clearest and most convincing kind and such as bears overwhelming conviction on its face. (2) The authority ordinarily conferred upon a broker em-ployed in the sale of land is limited to the duty of finding a purchaser ready and willing to buy the property at the named price and on succified terms, and to intro-duce him to his principal; and, without a clear and express provision, such authority does not warrant the agent in signing a contract of sale so as to bind the principal. Hamer v. Sharpe (1874) L.R. 19 Eq. 108; Prior v. Moore (1887) 3 T.L. R. 624, and Chadburn v. Moore (1892) 61 L.J. c. 674, followed. (3) Where the owner has authorized his agent to sell on terms requiring payment of $1,000 cash this will not authorize him to sign an agreement of sale by which the purchaser is to pay the money "on acceptance of title." Affirmed, 37 Can. S.C.R. 422.

-Real estate-Commission on sale of land-Property in hands of two agents-Liability of agent on contract made on behalf of principal.]-Defendant, living in New York, placed a farm in the hands of plaintiff and S., two different real estate agents in Winnipeg, for sale. Plaintiff found a purchaser at $12 per acre in cash, and informed defendant by letter. Defendant replied accepting the offer, but asking plaintiff to call on S., and arrange regarding commission so as to avoid having to pay more than one commission. Plaintiff did not communicate with S., but introduced his purchaser to defendant's solicitor in Winnipeg. This purchaser paid the solicitor $500 on account, and was ready and willing to pay the balance on receipt of a transfer. Meantime S. also made a sale of the farm at the same price. This latter sale was carried through by defendant who paid S. the usual commission:-Held. that the plaintiff was also entitled to his commission, as he had done all that was necessary to earn it. The title to the property was in defendant's father and plaintiff knew that; but defendant held a power of attorney to sell and convey it, and the Court held that the defendant's state-ments to the plaintiff, both verbally and in letters, and his conduct throughout, justified the plaintiff in looking to defendant alone for his commission:-Held, following Story on Agency, pp. 306, 309, and Jones v. Littledale (1837) 6 A. and E., 490, that the defendant was personally liable for the commission.

Bell v. Rokeby, 15 Man. R. 327 (Dubue, C.J., and Perdue, J.).

—Real estate agent—Authority.] — The term 'sell' is the term that would be ordinarily used when a person lists property with a broker to find a purchaser, and unless there is something to indicate that there was an intention to give authority to sell, it would be inferred that the intention merely was to authorize the broker to find a purchaser.

—Sale of land—Authority to make contract — Specific performance.]—The defendant gave a real estate agent the exclusive right, within a stipulated time, to sell, on commission, a lot of land for $4,270 (the price being calculated at the mite of $40 per acre on its supposed area), an instalment of $1,000 to be paid in cash. and the balance, secured by mortgage, payable in four annual instalments. The agent entered into a contract for sale of the lot to the plaintiff at $40 per acre, $50 being deposited on account of the price, the balance of the cash to be paid "on acceptance of title," the remainder of the purchase money payable in four consecutive yearly instalments and with the privilege of the pr ilege of "paying off the mortgage at any time." This contract was in the form of a receipt for the deposit and signed by the broker as agent for the defendant: Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (15 Man. Rep. 205), that the agent had not the clear and express authority necessary to confer the power of entering into a contract for sale binding upon his principal. Held, further, that the term allowing the privilege of paying off the mortgage at any time was not authorized and could not be enforced against the —Contract — Consideration — Revocation of agency to sell land.]—The plaintiffs, being entitled to a commission for finding a purchaser for the defendant's farm placed in their hands for sale, consented to forego the commission on the defendant giving them the special sole right to sell the land for a fixed higher price within a time named:—Held, that defendant could not revoke the agency thus conferred, and was liable in damages for having, before the expiration of the time limited, notified the plaintiffs that he would not sell. A special agreement of agency founded on a distinct and valuable consideration cannot be revoked at the will of the principal.

Gilmour v. Simon, 37 Can. S.C.R. 422.

Richardson v. McClary, 16 Man. R. 74 (Dubuc, C.J., and Mathers, J.).

—Mandate—Obligation of mandatary to account—Condition precedent to suit for salary.]—Where a person agrees, in consideration of a fixed monthly salary, to obtain custom and business in Montreal for a firm of brokers in New York, and, for that purpose, is constituted and holds himself out to the public as their representative, the contract between them is one of mandate rather than of lease and hire of work, and the obligation arises from it for the mandatary to account to his principal, as provided in Art. 1713 C.C. This obligation is a condition precedent to the exercise by the mandatary of the right to bring suit for wages or salary.

Violett v. Sexton, 14 Que. K.B. 360.

—Estate agent—Failure to account—Interest.]—An agent refusing to give an account and pay over balance is chargeable with interest. Costs disallowed to an estate agent of preparing a receipt contain.

ing a schedule of leases and securities delivered up to the principal. Costs of suit against an agent for an account ordered to be paid by him where he had disregarded requests for an account, and had filed an improper account in the suit.

Simonds v. Coster, 3 N.B. Eq. 329.

-Agent to sell mine-Agreement for commission — Termination of agreement.] — Plaintiff obtained from defendants an option on a mining property, to expire May 31st, 1902, under an agreement by which he undertook to find a purchaser for the property for the sum of $27,000 for a commission of $5,000, but with a provision that in case it might be found necessary to make a reduction in the price of the property, the commission payable to plaintiff should be 20% on the purchase price. Some time before the expiration of this option, on the 12 March, 1902, plaintiff wrote defendants informing them that he had failed to bring about a sale of the property, but that he had induced a person whose name was mentioned, to join with him in purchasing it, and making a cash offer of $15,000 for the property as it stood, payable in 30 days, and saying, among other things: "This is only a game of chance as far as I am concerned, for I am now a buyer instead of a seller ... this is a cash offer ... and it is all I can afford or will offer, whether accepted or rejected." The offer was not carried into effect, and defendants having subsequently made an arrangement to sell the property to other parties, plaintiff claimed commission: — Held, that the relationship established between plaintiff and defendants under the first arrangement, which was practically that of principal and agent, was terminated when plaintiff made his offer of the 12th March, and that plaintiff, having then elected to associate himself with the parties who were proposing to purchase the property, was estopped from claiming remuneration from defendants in connection with the sale made subsequently. Also, that the re-lationship between plaintiff and defen-dants having been severed on the 12th March, the burden was on plaintiff to show, by express evidence, that it was subsequently revived.

Fleming v. Withrow, 38 N.S.R. 492.

—Contract — Action — Lex loci.] — An agreement whereby a party undertakes to purchase fruit, at a distant point, during the season about to open, upon a rate of commission on the price, to be fixed later on, is a contract of a personal nature, in respect of which action may be brought before the Court of the place where the contract was made, as provided in the fifth clause of Art. 94 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Archambault v. Laroche, Q.R. 14 K.B.

—Carrying stock on margin—Advances by broker—Sale of shares—Measure of damages.]-On an appeal from a Divisional Court reported 9 O.L.R. 631:-Held, on the evidence, that the plaintiffs, having admittedly paid money for the defendant at his request, they had the usual right of action at law on the common counts for money paid. That the defendant not having sought to redeem his shares nor made any tender of the amount due by him, he could say the plaintiffs would not have restored his shares, which could have been bought in the market for a lower price than they were sold for and credited to him. And, that, even if the plaintiffs were wrongdoers or had committed a breach of their contract, he was not entitled under the circumstances of this case to damages greater in amount than the price for which the shares had been sold and credited to him. Judgment of a Divisional Court affirmed.

-Contract for sale of land-Authority of agent-Statute of Frauds-Memorandum in writing-Absence of vendor's name.]-In an action to enforce specific performance of an alleged contract for the sale of land the only written memorandum of the contract was a receipt for $100 'in part payment of lot 16,' etc., describing it, mentioning also the balance of the price and the purchaser's name, but not disclosing the name of the vendor, and signed "P. W. Black, agent":-Held, that this was not sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, parol evidence to sup-ply the name of the vendor not being admissible. Semble, also, on the evidence, that the agent had no authority to bind the vendor by executing a contract, and that, on account of the inadequacy of the price, the Court would be slow to enforce specific performance.

R. v. Bastien, 15 Que. K.B. 16.

-Condition requiring production of purchaser willing to sign a written agreement to buy land—Commission on sale.] — The defendant agreed for a good consideration that, if the plaintiff would, within a time , produce to him a bona fide purchaser willing to enter into an agreement to purchase certain lands at named prices and ready and willing to pay one-quarter of the purchase money in cash and who had signed an offer in writing therefor, then he, the defendant, would pay to the plaintiff twenty-five per cent. commission on such purchase price, in case the defendant refused to make the sale. On the 13th of March and within the limited time an agent of the plaintiff received from A. M. Lewis an offer in writing to purchase the lands in question on the terms and at the prices mentioned in the defendant's agreement, coupled, however, with the state-ment that, if not accepted before ten o'elock a.m. on the 16th of March, the offer would be withdrawn. The agent at once wrote to the plaintiff informing him of the offer and its condition, and urging haste in communicating it to the defendant, but without disclosing the name of the purchaser. The plaintiff, who lived in Winnipeg, received the letter on the morning of the 14th, and made every effort by telegram and letter to induce the defendant, who lived in Gretna, to accept the offer, informing him fully of the terms of the offer and its condition, but not giving the name of the purchaser, which the plaintiff did not then know himself. Defendant wrote by first mail to his solicitor in Winnipeg instructing him to see plaintiff and make inquiries, and communicate the result by telephone in the evening of the 15th. The solicitor met the plaintiff in the afternoon of the 15th and ascertained all particulars including the name of the purchaser, and spoke to the defendant over the long distance telephone between six and seven o'clock in the evening, when he received instrustions to accept the offer; but through some mischance the plaintiff was not informed of this in time to allow him to notify Mr. Lewis of the acceptance before ten o'clock on the 16th and the offer was withdrawn at that hour. Plaintiff sued for the twenty-five per cent. commission, contending that he had produced a purchaser in accordance with the agreement, and that, under the eireumstances, it should be held that defendant had refused to make the sale:-Held, that plaintiff could not recover. Per Howell, C.J.:-The plaintiff and not produce a bona fide purchaser willing to enter into such an agreement as was referred to. An offer, which had to be accepted in less than two days after defendant received it, was not an offer contemplated by the agreement. Per Phippen, J.A.:—The plaintiff had to produce a purchaser, and neither his telegram nor his letter did this. The earliest production was when the name was mentioned to defendant's solicitor, and the solicitor was entitled to a reasonable time to communicate the name to his client.

Rogers v. Braun, 16 Man. R. 580.

—Conditional deposit—Performance of condition.]—A broker who accepts money on deposit from a number of customers undertaking to reimburse them if a certain event happened and afterwards made returns to some of them thereby acknowledges that the conditon has been fulfilled and is bound to carry out his engagement to all, even to those who, objecting to the amount, refused a first offer made to them. Pitl v. Hamel, Q.R. 15 K.B. 373.

Stock—Purchase on margin—Pledge of stock by broker-Possession for delivery to purchaser.]-C. instructed A. & Co, brokers, to purchase for him on margin 300 shares of a certain stock, paying them $3,000, leaving a balance of $6,225 accord ing to the market price at the time. A. & Co. instructed brokers in Philadelphia to purchase for them 600 shares of the stock, paying $9,000, nearly half the price, and pledged the whole 600 for the balance. The Philadelphia brokers pledged these shares with other securities to a bank as security for indebtedness and later drew on A. & Co. for the balance due thereon, attaching the script to the draft which was returned unpaid and 475 of the 600 shares were then sold and the remaining 125 returned to A. & Co. In an action by the latter to recover from C. the balance due on the advance to purchase the shares with interest and commission: -Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal (12 Ont. L.R. 435, affirming 10 Ont. L.R. 159), Fitzpatrick, C.J., dissenting, that the brokers had no right to hypothecate the shares with others for a greater sum than was due from C. unless they had an agreement with the pledgee whereby they could be released on payment of said sum; that there never was a time when they could appropriate 300 of the shares pledged for delivery to C. on paying what the latter owed; and, that, therefore, they were not entitled to recover. The bought note of the transaction contained this memo: "When carrying stock for clients we reserve the right of pledging the same or raising money upon them in any way convenient to us." Held. per Davies and Idington, JJ .: - That this did not justify the brokers in pledging the shares for a sum greater than that due from the customer. Per Duff, J .: - That the shares were purchased before this note was delivered, and it could not alter the character of the authority conferred on the brokers; and that no custom was proved which would modify the common law right and duties of the brokers and their customer in the transaction.

Conmee v. Securities Holding Company, 38 Can. S.C.R. 601.

-Sale of land-Agent's commission.] -The defendant employed the plaintiffs, real estate agents, to sell certain property at a certain price, agreeing to pay a commission. They procured a purchaser able and willing to pay the price, and submitted a written offer. On receipt of the offer, defendant, making no objection to it, said he wanted to look into the matter, and used the offer as a lever to close a pending offer of his own to another party at the same price, in order to save the commission:-Held, that plaintiffs had done all they were called upon to do when they obtained a purchaser ready and willing to purchase, and that they were entitled to their commission. Sibbald v. Bethlehem Iron Co. (1881), 83 N.Y. 378, at p. 383, specially referred to.

Marriott v. Brennan, 14 O.L.R. 508 (Riddell, J.).

-Real estate agent-Commission-Engagement to procure purchaser at a given fig. ure—Sale subsequently at a lower figure to the same person.]—H. being pressed by his mortgagees, applied to B. to procure a loan of $58,000. Negotiations to that end by B., and also further effort to procure a sale of certain of the property for $56,000, failed. Subsequently the person with whom B. was negotiating was introduced by his (the prospective purchaser's) banker to the agent of the mortgagees, and a sale was brought about for $50,000, H. paying the agent a commission. In an action by B. against H. for a commission for having first introduced the purchaser:---Held, on appeal that B. was engaged to find a purchaser at a certain figure, and having failed to do so, he was not entitled to a commission on a sale, although made to the person originally introduced by him. Per Hunter, C.J.:-When, prima facie, the agreement is to pay a commission on a named figure it is for the agent to show in the clearest way that the intention of the parties was to pay a commission on any figure at which the sale goes through. Bridgman v. Hepburn, 13 B.C.R. 389, affirmed, 42 Can. S.C.R. 228.

—Terms of agent's employment—Purchaser found by principal.]—The defendant (appellant) employed the plaintiff (respondent) to find a purchaser for certain lands at a certain price clear of all commission. The land was subsequently sold to a purchaser found by the principal, but at a price less than that at which it was listed. The agent performed some services in connection with the sale, but was unable to sell at the price authorized:—Held, that as the agent was not instrumental in bringing the vendor and purchaser together and as his employment was of a special character, namely, to sell the land at a specified price which he was unable to do, he was not entitled to a commission or to recover for his services upon a quantum meruit.

Munro v. Beischel, 1 Sask. R. 238.

-Breach of duty by agent-Interest in purchase of principal's lands intrusted to agent for sale-Non-disclosure-Resale at profit.] -The defendant B., an estate agent, was authorized by the plaintiff to sell for him 225 acres of land for the best price obtainable, but not for less than $30 an acre. B. to receive a commission. On the 3rd March, 1906, or later, B. sold or pretended to sell the land for the plaintiff to the defendant C. at $35 per acre, B. and the defendant M. having between them a half interest with C. in the purchase. The purchase was completed and the land transferred to C., and on the 8th August, 1906, the defendant D. became the purchaser from C. at $125 per acre. The facts were not disclosed to the plaintiff, and he did not know until after the sale to D. that B. and M. had an interest with C .: - Held, that B. and C. were in fact partners in an arrangement for the purchase and disposition of the land, and that C. was liable, equally with B., to account to the plaintiff for the profits; but that M. was led by B. to believe that C. was the purchaser from the plaintiff, and that B. was buying from C., and not that B. and C. were buying from the plaintiff; and nothing was brought home to M. which should make him liable to the plaintiff. Per Newlands, J., dissenting as to C., that, as the contract could not be set aside because of the sale to D., who was a bona fide purchaser for value without notice, the only remedy of the plaintiff against C. and M. was in damages for any loss sustained by the plaintiff; and there was no fraud on the part of the defendants C. and M. nor any damage sustained by the plaintiff on account of the sale to them. Judgment of Johnstone, J., 3 Sask. R. 51, 13 W.L.R. 248, varied.

- Sale of goods-Commission-Right of agent to recover where sale not completed.]-Defendant company entered into an agreement in writing to pay plaintiffs a commission of five per cent. upon all sales effected in the district of H. and vicinity on condition that plaintiffs would give their best services as might be desired from time to time, etc. Plaintiffs assisted defendant to obtain a contract with the city of H. for the purchase of one of their engines, to be constructed according to specifications attached, provided the engine when completed should undergo certain tests to the satisfaction of persons to be appointed by the city for that purpose. The engine, when completed, failed to undergo the stipulated tests and was not accepted:—Held, that plaintiffs, notwithstanding, were entitled to their commis-

-Commission on sale of land-Knowledge of vendor that purchaser sent to him by agent.]—The defendant listed his property with the plaintiffs, real estate agents, for sale at a fixed price and on named terms. The plaintiffs mentioned the property to one Forrest who thereafter negotiated with defendant for the purchase of the property and concealed from him the fact that the plaintiffs had sent him. Defendant then without any knowledge of the plaintiffs' intervention sold to Forrest on terms less advantageous to himself than those contemplated in the agreement between the plaintiffs and himself. There was nothing in the circumstances to put defendant upon his inquiry as to whether the plaintiffs had sent Forrest to him:-Held, that the plaintiffs could recover neither a commission on the sale nor anything for their services by way of quantum meruit.

-Negotiations commenced through agent and continued between principals alone.]
—When P. employed C. to sell real estate at a stated price for a commission of 5 per cent. and C. having found a purchaser M., the sale was not completed, but further negotiations were carried on betwen P. and M. alone, with C.'s consent, and resulted in a sale for a sum exceeding that originally sought, C. was entitled to re-cover his commission on the price actually paid. The fact that C. was a practising advocate was no bar to his claim.

-Commission-Sales for less than listed price—Right of agent to remuneration.] -- Where a sale is effected to parties introduced by the agent, such agent is entitled to remuneration, notwithstanding that the price realized was less than that at which the property was originally listed.

-Commission-Right of agent to recover.] -An agent employed to sell upon commission is entitled to recover commission upon a sale resulting from negotiations brought about by his efforts. Schuchard v. Drinkle, 1 Sask. R. 16.

-Commission on sale of land-"Completion of the sale."]-A dispute having arisen as to the plaintiff's right to a com mission on the sale of certain property belonging to the defendant, the former claiming $5,000, the latter denying liability for anything, the parties compromised at $2,000 and the defendant gave the plaintiffs a letter which was in part as follows:- "In connection with the sale of (description) from Mrs. Cordingly and myself to John A. Lock et al., I hereby agree that, on the completion of the said sale, I will pay your firm a commission of $2,000 . . This amount to be paid on com-pletion of the deal.'' The purchaser had previously made a deposit of $2,000, but had not signed a formal agreement to pur-chase. A few days afterwards the formal agreement was executed by all parties and a further payment of $8,000 was made. The purchaser made default in payment of further instalments of the purchase money, and the defendant took back the land, retaining all money paid, and released the purchaser from further liability. The defendant resisted the action for the $2,000 commission on the ground that the sale had not been completed within the meaning of his letter. He had, however. on several occasions after the agreement had been executed asked time for payment of the $2,000:-Held, that, interpreting the letter in the sense in which the parties intended the words to be understood at the time, as gathered from the document it-self and the surrounding circumstances and the defendant's promises to pay, what the parties meant by the words "comple-tion of sale" and "completion of the deal" was the execution of a binding agreement of sale, and the plaintiffs were entitled to recover.

Haffner v. Cordingly, 18 Man. R. 1.

-Sale of land-Commission-Assisting to procure purchaser — Quantum meruit.]-Held, that when the principal lists lands with an agent and communicates to such agent the information that a third party has been enquiring with a view to purchasing the land and as a result of such information the agent opens negotiations with such third party but fails to make a sale and the principal thereafter owing to the neglect or inability of the agent to effect a sale opens negotiations directly with the third party, and effects a sale at substantially the price originally listed, the agent cannot be said to have introduced the purchaser or so assisted to effect a sale as to entitle him to recover his commission.

Thompson v. Milling, 1 Sask. R. 150.

— Principal and agent — Secret profit — Trust — Clandestine transactions by broker—Sham purchaser—Commission — Quantum meruit.]—H., a broker, undertook to obtain two lots for F., as an investment of funds supplied by F., for that purpose, at prices quoted and on the understanding that any commission or brokerage chargeable was to be got out of the vendors. H. purchased one of the lots at a price lower than that quoted, receiving, however, the full amount quoted from F., and, by representing a sham purchase of the other lot, got an advance from F. in order to secure it:—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that H. was the agent of F. and could not make any secret profits out of the transactions, nor was he entitled to any allowance by way of commission or brokerage in respect of either of the lots so purchased.

Hutchinson v. Fleming, 40 Can. S.C.R.

—Sale of land—Remuneration—Finding a purchaser, able, ready and willing to purchase—Added terms by vendor.]—In an action by an agent to recover the amount of his commission, he must show that he has produced to the principal a purchaser ready, willing and able to enter into a binding agreement to purchase; and the agent is entitled to his commission if, the parties having been shown to be agreed upon the terms, the sale is subsequently prevented by the fault or default of the vendor. Grogan v. Smith (1890), 7 T.L.II.

Bagshawe v. Rowland, 13 B.C.R. 262.

—Commission on sale of land—Exchange of lands.]—The defendant listed his property with the plaintiffs, real estate agents, for sale. They then introduced to him a probable purchaser who afterwards arranged with the defendant an exchange of some lots of his own for the defendant's property:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to one-half the commission that they would have earned if they had effected a sale of the property.

Thordarson v. Jones, 17 Man. R. 295.

Sale of mining land — Commission — Change of purchaser-Continued transaction.]-M., owner of mining lands, agreed to give G. a commission for effecting a sale thereof. G. introduced a purchaser to M. and a contract for sale of the lands to said purchaser was executed. This was replaced by a later contract by which the sale price was reduced in consideration of an incumbrance on the property being paid off by the purchaser who borrowed the money for the purpose and assigned his interest in the contract to the lender, also signing a release in favour of M. of any claim against him on the contracts. M. afterwards sold the mining lands to a person buying for the lenders of the money to pay off the neumbrance. In an action by G. for his commission:-Held, that he was entitled to the commission on the full amount received for the land as finally sold. Held, also, that the sale of the land was not a transaction independent of the contract with the purchaser introduced by G. but was a continuance thereof.

agent employed to find a purchaser for land, who finds a purchaser ready and willing to purchase upon terms which, al-though not identical with those in contemplation at the time of his employment, are satisfactory to the owner, is entitled to compensation for his services, notwithstanding that no sale is actually made by reason of refusal of the owner to sell the property for reasons unconnected with the terms of purchase. McKenzie v. Champion (1885), 12 S.C.R. 649, followed:—Semble, where in the proposed vendor's instruc-tions to the agent there is not something to indicate that it was his intention to give the agent authority to sell, it will be inferred that the authority extended only to finding a purchaser.

-Broker selling on grain exchange-Contract in broker's name—Liability of principal—Board rules—Indemnity.]—On 14th August, 1907, the defendant, who resided in the State of Nebraska, wrote the followowing letter to the plaintiffs, grain dealers at Winnipeg, Man.: "Yours of recent date enclosing market report received. I shall be north in about four weeks to look after the new crop and, if you can sell No. 2 oats for 37c. or better, in store at Fort William, you had better sell 4,000 bushels for me, and I will be up at Snowflake then so I can look after the loading of them, and I will send the old oats then." The plaintiffs, who were also brokers on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, sold the oats at 38½ cents on the "Board," without disclosing the name of their principal, for October delivery, becoming personally liable for the performance of the contract according to the rules of the Ex change. Upon defendant refusing to deliver the oats the plaintiffs purchased the quantity of oats so sold at an advance in price in order to make the delivery and brought the action to recover the amount of their loss thus sustained:-Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (18 Man. R. 111), that the authority so given did not authorize the plaintiffs to make a sale under the Grain Exchange Rules binding upon their principal; that no contract binding upon the principal outside of these rules had been entered into, and, consequently, that he was not liable to indemnify them for any loss sustained by reason of their contract.

 Commission on sale of land—Duty of agent—Sale without agent's knowledge.] -Plaintiffs, as executors, sued on a promissory note. Defendant counterclaimed for commission on sale of land, it appearing that deceased had promised him a commission if he could procure a purchaser. The defendant interested a party in the property, but the latter, finding it impossible to raise sufficient money to carry the sale through, mentioned the property to a third party, who went to the deceased and purchased on the terms stated to the defendant without defendant's knowledge, and without the deceased being aware that the purchasers had learned that the property was for sale through any efforts on the defendant's part:-Held, that in order to entitle the agent to commission on sale of land it must be shown that the sale is the direct result of the agent's efforts, and it is not sufficient that he mention the property to another person who is not his agent, nor the agent of the purchaser, and who afterwards mentions it to a third party, who purchases. Vachoe v. Straton, 2 Sask. R. 72.

-Commission on sale of land.]-Action for commission for finding and introducing a purchaser for land owned by defendant. The plaintiffs were carpenters occupying a shop on the property as tenants of defendant. They were not real estate agents but had occasionally earned commissions on sales. Plaintiffs had discussed price and terms with defendant on several occasions with the view of their effecting a sale and on one occasion had introduced to him a prospective purchaser, and it was agreed that if that sale went through plantiff should be entitled to a commission, but no general agency to sell had been conferred upon them. One Forrester, passing by the property and thinking that it might be suitable for his purpose, entered the plaintiff's shop and inquired of the plaintiff Robertson if the property was for sale. Robertson informed him it was. Did he know the owner? Yes, Mr. Carstens. And the price? $16,000. Could it not be bought for less? Robertson would inquire and at once called up the defendant by telephone. What followed is thus stated in the judgment of the majority of the Court, reversing in part the findings of fact by the trial Judge. Robertson told the defendant he had a prospective pur-chaser for his property and asked his best terms. Defendant said $15,000. Robertson then asked if defendant would pay his commission out of that and defendant said he would. Robertson told defendant he would have the purchaser call and see him. He then quoted the new price to Forrester, wrote defendant's name and address on a card which he handed to Forrester and asked him to present it to defendant when they met. Defendant met Forrester by appointment the same evening, when after some negotiation he gave Forrester an option on the premises for $14,000 cash. The sale was completed next day for that sum. Forrester did not mention Robertson's name to the defendant and the latter said he did not associate Forrester with his telephone conversation with Robertson. Defendant saw plaintiffs a few hours after the completion of the sale when plaintiffs promptly claimed their commission:-Held, that the defendant was put upon inquiry when a prospective purchaser appeared a few hours after the conversation with Robertson and he should have ascertained that Forrester was the person referred to by Robertson, and that, upon the above findings, the plaintiffs were entitled to commission on the $14,000 at the usual rate.

Robertson v. Carstens, 18 Man. R. 227.

-Failure to keep an appointment-Travelling and necessary expenses incurred in consequence of the appointment—Agent who acts in his own name.]-A party who, in execution of a promise of sale, makes an appointment with the intending purchaser to effect the sale and sign the deed, but who is unable to do so on the day fixed, through legal hindrances and want of authorization of part owners and sellers under age, is liable in damages to the purchaser for his travelling and other necessary expenses. Nor is he relieved therefrom by the fact that he is merely the agent of the owners, having acted in his own name, without disclosing the names of his principals.

—Vendor refusing to complete—Broker's commission—Remuneration for procuring purchaser.]—A broker instructed to sell lands for a price to be deposited in a bank pending arrival of clear title, procured a purchaser who made the deposit to his own credit without appropriating it to any special prrpose. On refusal by the vendor to complete the bargain, the broker sued him for a commission or remuneration for the services rendered:—Held', reversing the judgment appealed from (Yates v. Reser. 1 Sask. L.R. 247), that there had not been such compliance with the terms of the instructions as would entitle the broker to recover commission or remuneration for his services in procuring a purchaser.

Reser v. Yates, 41 Can. S.C.R. 577.

-Commission on sale of land-Purchaser found by principal—Agent's services in effecting sale.]-The defendant (appellant) employed the plaintiff (respondent) to find a purchaser for certain lands at a certain price clear of all commission. The land was subsequently sold to a purchaser found by the principal, but at a price less than that at which it was listed. The agent performed some services in connection with the sale, but was unable to sell at the price authorized:-Held, that as the agent was not instrumental in bringing the vendor and purchaser together and as his employ. ment was of a special character, namely, to sell the land at a specified price which he was unable to do, he was not entitled to a commission or to recover for his services upon a quantum meruit.

-Commission on sale of land-Vendor ignorant that purchaser sent by agent.]-A vendor who has placed his property in the hands of his agent for sale on commission will not be liable to the agent for commission if he afterwards sells to a purchaser in ignorance that such purchaser has been sent to him by the agent. Locators v. Clough (1908), 17 M.R. 659, unless there are circumstances sufficient to put the vendor upon inquiry as to whether the purchaser was not in fact sent to him by the agent. In this case the circumstances set forth in the judgment were held to be such as to put the defendants upon such inquiry and that, as their manager had failed to make sufficient inquiry, and the purchaser had in fact been sent by the plaintiff, the defendants were liable for his commission on the sale.

Hughes v. Houghton Land Co., 18 Man.

-Commission on sale of land-Implied representation of authority. 1-One Meredith. then a director of the defendant company, in a conversation with the plaintiff, assured him that if he, the plaintiff, would pro-cure a purchaser for the property in question owned by the company, he felt sure the company would quote the price at $550,000 and, in the event of a sale, would pay the plaintiff a commission of $50,000. but any abatement of the price down to $500,000 was to be borne by the plaintiff. There was no evidence that Meredith had any authority to sell the property or employ an agent to find a purchaser. After Meredith became president of the company, the property was sold for exactly $500,000 by the company to a purchaser to whom it had been introduced by the plaintiff to the knowledge of Meredith:-Held. that the company was not liable to the plaintiff either for a commission on the sale or for the value of his services as on a quantum meruit. Held, also, that Meredith was not liable to the plaintiff for any misrepresentation of authority from the company to enter into the alleged contract with the plaintiff, or for failing to prevent the company from selling the property for $500,000 or less.

Bent v. Arrowhead, 18 Man. R. 632.

- Sale of immovable on commission -Implied mandate.]-A principal who commits the sale of an immovable to a real estate agent, on commission, for a period of six months, and, after the expiration of that time, renews the mandate, under modified conditions, for a further period of six months, and afterwards, himself sells the property, owes no commission to the agent. The facts (a) that the latter had put up an advertisement board on the property with his address thereon which was not removed after the period of the renewed mandate up to the time of the sale, (b) that the purchaser, whose attention was attracted by this advertisement, first applied to the agent before dealing with the owner, and (c) that the latter had written a letter giving the agent liberty to sell at a figure clear to himself (the owner), higher than that afterwards obtained, do not imply a continuance of the agency, nor an undertaking to pay a commission, nor do they afford a commencement of proof in writing of such an under-

He then said that he withdrew the property, and at or about the same time, consummated a deal for the property mentioned by Callaghan to the plaintiffs, Callaghan having opened up negotiations with him direct:-Held, that the relationship of vendor and purchaser had been brought about by the plaintiffs, and that Callaghan had endeavoured, by approaching defendant. to deprive them of their commission.

BURGLARY.

Possession of stolen property - Inference of guilt—Lapse of time.]—The jury in a criminal trial may be sent back for further deliberation when, upon being polled, one of the jurors dissents from the verdict of "guilty" announced by the foreman; and a subsequent unanimous verdict of "guilty" may properly be accepted. Upon the trial of the prisoner for burglary and burglariously stealing property, the Judge in his charge to the jury remarked that if they did not believe the evidence of a certain witness, they were "brought face to face with the fact that the prisoner is found in possession of a pouch which was stolez . . . and that he has not given a satisfactory explanation of how he came into possession of it":-Held, that the Judge did not thereby suggest to the jury that the prisoner might have given evidence in his own behalf, or that an inference unfavourable to him might be drawn from the fact that he had not done so. The burglary was on the 18th or 19th December, 1903, and the prisoner was arrested on the 16th February, 1904, with one of the articles stolen upon his person. Held, that the Judge could not properly have rule, in all the circumstances of the case, that the lapse of time was so great as absolutely to repel any presumption that the prisoner was concerned in the burglary; and that the possession of the article and other circumstances warranted the jury in drawing an inference of guilt. Leave to appeal was refused, and rulings of Street, J., at the trial, were affirmed. Rex v. Burdell, 11 O.L.R. 440 (C.A.).

By-law respecting cab stands—Cab waiting for hire.]—A livery stable keeper made an agreement with the proprietors of a hotel to keep at all times three carriages in attendance at the hotel ready for immediate use by guests, each carriage to be deemed as hired by the proprietors, from the time of attendance until dismissed or engaged for use by a guest, at the rate of one cent an hour, and the proprietors made themselves responsible for the payment by guests of the fees properly chargeable:—Held, that in keeping carriages in attendance pursuant to this agreement the livery stable keeper was not guilty of a breach of a municipal bylaw providing that no cab should stand upon any street while waiting for hire or engagement, or while unengaged. Conviction quashed.

CANADA TEMPERANCE ACT.

Serving summons outside county of issue. |-The defendant, residing in the county of Saint John, was personally served there with a summons issued by a justice of Carleton County for an offence under Part II. of the Canadian Temperance Act. He did not appear and was convicted in his absence:—Held, that such service was good under s. 658 of the Criminal Code, and on proof of such service the magistrate could proceed ex parte to convict. Prior to the Act 8-9 Edw. II. (Dom.) c. 9, amending the Criminal Code, a magistrate might issue a summons for an offence against the Canada Temperance Act without taking evidence substantiating the information upon which he could exercise his judgment and discretion as to whether summons should issue or not.

Where a proclamation bringing into force the second part of the Canada Temperance Act in any county was issued several years prior to the offence charged thereunder and remains unrevoked, it is not necessary to prove the date of liquor license expiry on which the proclamation would take effect, as none of such licenses could legally be in force for more than one year.

The King v. Nickerson; Ex parte O'Regan, 39 N.B.R. 428.

—Jurisdiction — "Absence" — Magistrate acting for another.]—The word "absence" in s. 65 of the City of Moneton Incorporation Act, 53 Vict. c. 60, does not mean absence from the place of trial, but inability to attend to the business of the Court. Here the police magistrate was in the court room during part of the trials, but during the trials was obliged to attend before a commissioner appointed by the Provincial Government to inquire into his official conduct.

The King v. Steeves; Ex parte Cormier, 39 N.B.R. 435.

Rex v. Johnson, 9 E.L.R. 37 (N.S.).

Conviction for first offence-Costs.]-Defendant was convicted before a stipendiary magistrate for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor contrary to the provisions of the second part of the Canada Temperance Act, being a first offence, and was adjudged, for such offence, to forfeit and pay the sum of $50 penalty and $23.05 costs, and in default of payment to be imprisoned for the term of two months:-Held, that the conviction was good, and that the application to set the same aside must be dismissed. The proceedings being under the Liberty of the Subject Act, no costs were allowed. Since the amendment of the Canada Temperance Act, Acts of 1888, c. 51 and c. 34, s. 14, it is clear that the mode of enforcing payment of the penalty is to be fixed and included in the conviction.

The King v. Whiting, 43 N.S.R. 332. 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 414.

Warehousing liquor—Government railway,]—The Crown, not being expressly mentioned in the Canada Temperance Act, E.S.C. 1906, c. 152, is not bound thereby, and therefore a station agent of the Intercolonial Railway, a Government railway, cannot be convicted under s. 117 of the Act as amended by 7-8 Edw. VII. (Dom.) c. 71, for warehousing and keeping for delivery, in the course of his duty as station agent, intoxicating liquor brought to his station by the milway.

The King v. Marsh; Ex parte Walker, 39 N.B.R. 329.

-County stipendiary magistrates—Quashing search warrant.]—The effects of Acts N.S. 1903-04, c. 37, ss. 2 and 3, and Acts 1905, c. 11, as amending R. S. N. S. 1900, c. 33, is only to regulate the appointment of magistrates after those statutes, and does not interfere with the jurisdiction of appointees before the amendments. A search warrant issued under the Canada Temperance Act is not an "order or conviction" within the meaning of R. S. N. S., c. 40, s. 6, and need not be quashed in order to maintain an action for trespass against the justice who issued it.

Johnston v. McDougall, 44 N.S.R. 265.

-Parish Court commissioner - Jurisdiction -Two informations tried together.]-A Parish Court commissioner by the Act respecting Parish Courts, C. S. 1903, c. 120, s 17, is given the power conferred upon two justices by the Dominion Act respecting summary convictions, Part XV. of the Criminal Code, and has therefore jurisdiction to try offences under the Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 152. Two informations were laid against the defendant under the Canada Temperance Act for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor; the first charging a sale between June 25 and September 20, 1909; and the second charging a sale between July 1 and September 20, 1909. After hearing the first information, the magistrate proceeded with and heard the second; and after the second had been heard the defendant was convicted of both offences. There was evidence in the first case of a sale to W. and in the second case evidence of a sale to P.:-Held, the convictions were good, there being evidence of a distinct offence in each case. The refusal of the commissioner to adjourn in order to procure attendance of counsel is a matter in his discretion and does not go to his juris-

The King v. Alexander; ex parte Monahan, 39 N.B.R. 430.

—Substitutional service of summons—Delivery to inmate of last place of abode.]—
The jurisdiction of the magistrate to proceed ex parte on the return of a summons attaches only on proof of service and where service was made substitutionally upon a brother of the accused at the defendant's hotel upon failure to find the defendant himself, proof that the brother served 'stay-ed at the hotel most of the time" is insufficient to show that he was an "inmate" of the defendant's last or most usual place of abode within Code s. 658, and the conviction made in defendant's absence was set aside.

The King v. Francy, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 441.

—Jurisdiction—Summons, service of.]—
The defendant residing in the city of St.
John was served there with a summons issued by a justice of Carleton county for unlawfully causing intoxicating liquor at the city of St. John in the county of St.
John to be shipped into the county of Carleton, contrary to Part II. of the Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 152.

The defendant appeared on the trial by counsel and gave evidence in his own defence, but was convicted:—Held, affirming the conviction, that the justice was given jurisdiction over the offence by sub-s. 4 of s. 127 of the Canada Temperance Act, amended by 7-8 Edw. VII. (Dom.) c. 71, and also by ss. 584 (b) and 707 of the Criminal Code and that the defendant by appearing waived any defect in the service of the summons. Since the Act 9 Edw. VII. (Dom.) c. 9, amending s. 717 of the Criminal Code, R.S.C. 1906, c. 146, it is not necessary for the prosecutor to negative exceptions in ss. 117 and 127 of the Canada Temperance Act.

The King v. Dibblee; Ex parte McIntyre, 39 N.B.R. 361.

-Unlawfully bringing liquor into county -Withdrawal of information-Second information for same oftence. J-Section 138 of the Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 152 and ss. 1124 and 1125 of the Criminal Code, R.S.C. 1906, c. 146 are applicable to offences under the amendments to the Canada Temperance Act, 7-8 Edw. VII. (Dom.) c. 71, and it is therefore unnecessary to negative exceptions in proceedings for such offences. Upon the trial of an information for violation of the Canada Temperance Act after some evidence taken, the prosecutor, having some doubt as to the magistrate's jurisdiction, asked that the information be withdrawn. No one appeared for the defendant, and the mag-istrate gave a certificate of withdrawal stating the facts:—Held, that this was not equivalent to a dismissal of the information and not a bar to a subsequent information. (Ex parte Case, 28 N.B.R. 652 followed.)

The King v. Nickerson; Ex parte Mitchell, 39 N.B.R. 316.

-Conviction - Evidence - Certiorari.] -Certiorari having been taken away in proceedings for violation of the Canada Temperance Act a conviction for having un-lawfully kept for delivery intoxicating li-quor will not be interfered with though there is insufficient evidence of the offence charged, the magistrate having jurisdiction over the person and the offence. Upon a conviction against the agent of an express company for having unlawfully kept for delivery intoxicating liquor in violation of the Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 152, amended 7-8 Edw. VII. (Dom.) c. 71, certiorari will not be granted on the ground (1) no evidence that the de-fendant had any knowledge that the packages kept by him contained intoxicating liquor or (2) no evidence that the liquor received was not for personal or private use or (3) no evidence that the liquor was brought into the county where the offence was committed in violation of the Act. (Ex parte Daley, 27 N.B.R. 129, followed.)

The King v. Hornbrook; Ex parte Morison, 39 N.B.R. 298, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 28.

-Replevin-Officer seizing under search warrant goods in custodia legis. J-Liquor consigned to McK. was seized under a search warrant issued under Part II. of the Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 152, s. 136, on information of C., a liquor license inspector, and given into C.'s custody for safe keeping. The warrant was issued by the proper officer and was regular and valid on its face. McK. replevied the goods from C. who put in a claim of property under C.S. 1903, c. 111, s. 361:—Held, reversing the judgment of the County Court Judge, that C. was entitled to retain possession of the liquor until it should be disposed of according to law, such possession being necessary to the carrying out of the Act. Semble-An appeal lies direct to the Supreme Court of New Brunswick from the judgment of a County Court Judge on a claim of property under C.S. 1903, c. 111.

McKeen v. Colpitts, 39 N.B.R. 256, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 488.

— Magistrate — Interest — Action pending between defendant's husband and magistrate.]—A bona fide action brought by the husband of a defendant against a stipendiary magistrate, before whom an information is laid, for a violation of the second part of the Canada Temperance Act, is sufficient to disqualify him.

Ex parte Scribner, 32 N.B.R. 175, distinguished.

Ex parte Hannah Gallagher, 34 N.B.R. 413, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 486.

—Two informations for same offence — Withdrawal of one after hearing of evidence—Power of magistrate to allow — Concurrent proceedings.]—1. After the evidence has been heard in summary proceedings the Justice is not bound either to convict or öischarge the defendant; he may allow the prosecutor to withdraw the charge. 2. Such withdrawal may be allowed even when another information covering the same offence has been laid by the same prosecutor against the same defendant, and the determination thereof is still pending.

Ex parte Wyman, 34 N.B.R. 608, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 58.

—Conviction by parish Court commissioner—Jurisdiction—Plea of autrefois acquit— Commencement of prosecution.]—Where a person is convicted of an offence under the Canada Temperance Act, committed at a time falling within the period covered by a previous information upon which he was acquitted, in order to sustain a plea of autrefois acquit he must show that the offence for which he was convicted and that for which he was acquitted were identical. The laying of the information is the commencement of the prosecution. Whether the sale of the liquor was by the consent or contrary to the order of the defendant is a question for the magistrate. Section 103 (d), c. 106 of R.S.C. (the Canada Temperance Act), in so far as it attempts to confer upon parish Court commissioners jurisdiction to try offences against the Act is ultra vires of the Parliament of Canada.

Ex parte Flanagan, 34 N.B.R. 577. 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 82.

-Magistrate-Bias-Pecuniary interest -Disqualification.]—Both the police and the sitting magistrate of the city of M. were residents and ratepayers thereof, and the police magistrate was in receipt of a fixed salary from the city as court commissioner. Fines imposed for violation of the Canada Temperance Act therein were paid over to the treasurer of the city, by him placed to the credit of its general funds and used to meet unforeseen expenses. The city, by one of its policemen employed for the purpose of enforcing the Act, was the prosecutor in all the cases:-Held, that there was no disqualification of either the police or the sitting magistrate by reason of pecuniary interest, nor was there such a probability of bias on the part of either by reason of their being corporators of the city, which was the virtual prosecutor, as to invalidate convictions made by them for violations of the Canada Temperance Act in the said city of M. Ex parte Driscoll, 27 N.B.R. 216, considered. Section 872 of the Criminal Code, 1892, allows imprisonment without the awarding of distress.

—Selling liquor between certain dates — Autrefois acquit—Onus of proving identity of charges.] — 1. A defendant, pleading a former acquittal in answer to a summary proceeding for an offence must show that the two charges are identical and where the offence is that of keeping liquor for sale between certain dates, the mere fact that the prior charge was for keeping liquor for sale between the same dates will not alone prove the identity of the offences. 2. The second charge may be properly based either upon the information in the first charge reworn after the dismissal of that charge for irregularity in the summons or upon a fresh information.

— Express company—Delivery of liquor C.O.D.]—A consignment of liquor was shipped by Dominion Express from Amherst to Moneton, C.O.D., and delivered to the purchaser at the latter place by the agent of the company upon payment of the price:—Held, that the agent was not guilty of an offence against the Canada Temperance Act. Rule absolute for certiorari to remove conviction.

Ex parte Trenholm, 37 C.L.J. 43 (S.C. N.B.).

-Dismissal of charge by justices-Appeal by prosecutor to County Court-Jurisdiction of Judge to allow costs of appeal against defendant.]—Upon the trial of an information charging defendant with a violation of the provisions of the second part of the Canada Temperance Act, before two justices of the peace, the justices dismissed the charge and made a formal order of dismissal. From the order so made the prosecutor appealed to the County Court, and, the appeal having been heard, it was ordered that the order made by the justices be set aside and quashed, and that defendant be convicted of the offence charged, and that he pay, in addition to the fine imposed, etc., the prosecutor's costs, amounting to the sum of $27.16, and that the same be levied by distress, etc .:-Held, (Ritchie and Henry, JJ., dissenting), that the County Court Judge had jurisdiction to include in the penalty imposed the costs of appeal to that Court.

ing unlawfully kept for sale in his hotel at K., in said county, intoxicating liquors, contrary to the provisions of the second part of the Canada Temperance Act then in force in said county. The conviction was attacked on the following, among other grounds: (1) Because the justices who made the conviction were not clothed with jurisdiction by proper legislative authority to sit as a Court of summary criminal jurisdiction. (2) Because the justices had no jursdiction to adjourn the trial from the hour named in the summons to a later hour of the same day, and, in so adjourning, lost jurisdiction. (3) Because the justices, at the time they made the adjournment, had no evidence before them to prove the service of the summons:-Held, that the Provincial Legislature having made provision for the appointment of justices of the peace, and having conferred jurisdiction upon them to impose penalties and punishments for the enforcement of provincial statutes, it was competent for the Parliament of Canada, by statute, to provide that punishments and penalties for the enforcement of laws of the Parliament of Canada might be recovered and inflict. ed before these Courts. Held, therefore, that the magistrates had jurisdiction, and that the motion to quash the conviction must be dismissed. Held, that the justices having met at the hour appointed did not lose jurisdiction by the fact of their hav-ing adjourned the hearing until a later hour of the same day. Held, that proof of the service of the summons being a part of the hearing it was not necessary that the justices should have had such proof before them as a preliminary to making the adjournment. Held, that the delay in the hearing of the case from the hour of ten o'clock in the morning until two o'clock in the afternoon of the same day was not unreasonable.

The King v. Wipper, 34 N.S.R. 202. 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 17.

- Stipendiary magistrate for county -Jurisdiction where offence committed in incorporated town-R.S.N.S. (1900), c. 33.] -Defendant was convicted by the stipendiary magistrate in and for the County of Cape Breton, of the offence of having kept for sale upon his premises intoxicating liquors, contrary to the provisions of the second part of the Canada Temperance Act. The offence for which defendant was convicted was committed within the limits of the town of Sydney, an incorporated town in the County of Cape Breton. Under the provisions of R.S.N.S., 1900, c. 33, relative to the appointment and authority of stipendiary magistrates, it is enacted that "every stipendiary magistrate shall have jurisdiction, power and authority throughout the whole of the county for which he is appointed":-Held, that in the absence of legislation giving exclusive jurisdiction to the stipendiary magistrate for the town of Sydney, the words of the statute must be construed as including that part of the county embraced within the limits of the town. Held. that s. 14 of c. 33, which was relied upon as indicating a contrary intention, was not to be given a construction, but was merely intended to give certain powers to stipendiary magistrates for the counties, where exclusive jurisdiction had been conferred upon the magistrates for incorporated towns. Appeal allowed and order below reversed with costs, including costs of the appeal.

The King v. Giovanetti, 34 N.S.R. 505. 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 157.

-Conviction made in absence of defendant—Question as to previous conviction under s. 115, sub-s. (a).]-On application to quash a conviction for a fourth offence against the provisions of the Canada Temperance Act, on the ground that the question whether defendant had been prevously convicted was not addressed to the defendant, as required by s. 115 sub-s. (a) of the Act:-Held, dismissing the application with costs, that it was not necessary that the question referred to should be addressed to defendant in a case where he was represented by counsel. Held, that if defendant could be adequately represented by counsel in pleading to and trying the main case (which it was clear he might be, under ss. 850, 854, 855, 856 and 857 of the Code), he could equally be represented by counsel in respect to this inquiry.

The King v. O'Hearon, 34 N.S.R. 491. 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 187, 531.

—Prohibition—Justices of the peace—Disqualification—Interest — Membership in temperance alliance—Canada Temperance Act.]—(1) Justices of the peace, who belong to an association (a temperance alliance) of which the president is the party prosecuting, and to which association any fine to be imposed upon the accused for the offence against the liquor law with which he is charged would be paid under resolution of the municipal council, are disqualified from trying the charge, and will be prevented by a writ of prohibition from so doing.

Daigneault v. Emerson, 20 Que. S.C. 310, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 534.

—Canada Temperance Act—Intoxicating liquors sent by express, C.O.D.—Sale by express agent.]—The agent of an express company in the county of W., where the Canada Temperance Act was in force, in the ordinary course of business, delivered a parcel containing intoxicating liquor, by the person to whom it was addressed, and collected from him the price thereof, the liquor, by the buyer's instructions, having been sent to him by express, C.O.D. The sale of the liquor was effected at a place outside of the county of W.:-Held (per Tuck, C.F., Hanington, Barker and Me-Leod, JJ., Landry, J., dubitante), that the agent could not be convicted of selling intoxicating liquor contrary to the provisions of the said Act.

The Queen v. Cahill, 35 N.B.R. 240. 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 204.

-Third offence under-What necessary to constitute.]-An information for a first offence under the Canada Temperance Act was laid on the 13th of May, and a conviction had thereon on the 27th of May, for an offence on the 8th of May. Information for a second offence was laid on the 6th of August, and a conviction had thereon on the 19th of August for an offence between the 1st of June and the 11th of July. An information for a third offence was laid on the 10th of October, and a conviction had thereon on the 2nd of November, for an offence on July 12th: Held, per Hanington and Landry, JJ., that a third offence to be punishable as such must be one committed after a conviction for the second offence, and the third conviction in this case was bad. Per Barker and Gregory, JJ .: - That the conviction was bad because the information for a second offence had not been laid before the commission of the offence for which the third conviction was made.

The King v. Marsh; Ex parte McCoy, 36 N.B.R. 186, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 485.

-Informations for similar offences pend ing at same time.]-Defendant was summoned to appear before the stipendiary magistrate of Sydney, C.B., to answer two informations for selling intoxicating liquor in violation of the second part of the Canada Temperance Act. Evidence was heard in both cases, and both cases were then adjourned until a subsequent day, when judgment was given, convicting defendant under one information and quashing the other:-Held, that the conviction must be quashed, the magistrate having heard evidence in both cases, and had them pending before him when he made the conviction, and the evidence in the one case, although dismissed, being calculated, under the circumstances disclosed, to influence the magistrate in the case in which defendant was convicted. R. v McBerny, 26 N.S.R. 327, followed.

Rex v. Burke, 36 N.S.R. 408, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 14.

-Third offence-Conviction-Omission to recite that information for first offence preceded third offence.]- (1) A conviction for a third offence under the Canada Temperance Act is valid if it follows the statutory form without reciting that such third offence was committed after information laid for the first offence, if such was in fact the case. (2) The fact that the information for the first offence had preceded the commission of the alleged third offence as required by statute, may be shown by affidavit filed in answer to a certiorari application.

The King v. Swan, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 86, (Townshend, J.).

-Local vote-Bringing into effect in county-Subsequent establishment of city within the county.] — (1) The prohibitory clauses of the Canada Temperance Act remain in force in the whole district which comprised the "county" when the Orderin Council proclaiming Part II. of the Act came into operation in the county, notwithstanding that a portion thereof has since been incorporated as a city. (2) Semble, the detaching from a district which has adopted a prohibitory liquor law on a part of its territory and the addition of such part to another district, leaves the portion of territory so dealt with still subject to such liquor law.

The King v. McMullin, (N.S.), 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 531, 38 N.S.R. 129.

-Sale of liquor to be disposed of contrary to law-Action for price dismissed.] -To an action by plaintiff for goods sold and delivered, defendant pleaded that plaintiff's claim, if any, was for the price of intoxicating liquors sold by plaintiff to defendant, at North Sydney, in the county of Cape Breton, the plaintiff well knowing that the same were to be sold, and were actually sold, within said county, in which the second part of the Canada Temperance Act was, at the time of such sale, in force and effect. The date of purchase of the liquor, and the price, were admitted; also, that plaintiff knew that the Canada Temperance Act was in force in North Sydnev.

where defenciant was carrying on business as a dealer in intoxicating liquors; also that the order for the liquor was given by defendant to an agent of plaintiff at North Sydney, such order being subject to the approval of plaintiff. Defendant proved that the liquor in question was purchased through D., with whom he had dealt as an agent for the sale of liquor for a number of years, and that, when he made the purchase, D. was aware that the defendant was in the retail trade:—Held, dismissing plaintiff's appeal with costs, that there was sufficient ground to justify the judgment for defendant.

Ross v. Morrison, 36 N.S.R. 518.

-Imprisonment in default of payment of fine-Provision for enforcing payment.]-A conviction made against defendant for an offence against the Canada Temperance Act was sought to be quashed because the stipendiary magistrate by whom the same was made ordered that defendant, in default of paying the fine and costs in the conviction mentioned, should be imprisoned in the common gaol, etc., for the term of three months unless the several sums in said conviction mentioned were sooner paid:-Held, following The Queen v. Horton, 31 N.S.R. 217, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 84, that the term of imprisonment being imposed by way of punishment, and not as a term of imprisonment to be inflicted in default of payment of the penalty, the provision for enforcing payment of the pecuniary penalty was to be found in the Criminal Code of Canada, s. 872, as amended in 1894 and 1900, and the application to quash must be dismissed with costs.

Rex v. Blank, 38 N.S.R. 337; 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 358.

-Third offence-Certificate of prior convictions—Identity of accused — Action against magistrate—Disqualification.]—In the absence of an admission by the accused of the fact of previous convictions, certificates of such previous convictions are under section 115 sufficient proof of such convictions, and it is not necessary that evidence apart from such convictions should be given of the identity of the accused with the person formerly convicted, where he was present at the trial and did not raise the question of identity. A magistrate is not disqualified from trying a charge under the Act by reason of a writ having been made out and sent to the sheriff for service in an action by the accused against the magistrate for alleged misconduct as a judicial officer, where the writ was not served before the conviction was made.

The King v. Byron; Ex parte Batson, 37 N.B.R. 383.

Ex parte Batson, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 240.

—Information — Amendment charging another offence — Adjournment.]—On the trial of an offence under the Canada Temperance Act, the information may be amended or altered, and any other offence uneer the Act substituted and the trial continued to conviction without an adjournment, if the defendant is present and does not allege he is misled and ask for an adjournment.

The King v. Byron; Ex parte Batson, 37 N.B.R. 386, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 240.

-Stipendiary magistrate-Appointment of -Proof - Towns Incorporation Act, 1896.] -T. was convicted of an offence against the Canada Temperance Act by C., who, in making the conviction, professed to be acting as stipendiary magistrate of the county of W. No record of his appointment to this office could be found either in the minutes of the Executive Council or in the office of the Provincial Secretary; but there was a record of his appointment to the office of stipendiary magistrate of the Parish of S. C. swore (and herein he was corroborated) that upon it being discovered that his commission as stipendiary magistrate of the Parish of S. was illegal, a new commission, appointing him stipendiary magistrate of the county of W., was issued to him, which commission had been lost, but under which he had been acting without objection for many years. Afterwards, when the town of S. was carved out of the parish of S. and incorporated under the Towns Incorporation Act, C. was appointed police magistrate of the town. Sub-section 2 of section 131 of the Towns Incorporation Act provides, inter alia, that on an appointment of a police magistrate for a town incorporated thereunder, the appointment and commission of a police or stipendiary magistrate theretofore acting in such town shall thereupon ipso facto be cancelled, and he shall cease to hold office as such police or stipendiary magistrate:-Held, that there was sufficient proof of C. having been duly commissioned to act as stipendiary magistrate of the county of W., and that under the above sub-section he did not vacate such office upon being appointed police magistrate of the town of S.

—Proof that liquor was intoxicating — Certificate of analysis—Agreement of counsel—Improper evidence.]—G., L. and C. were convicted for keeping liquor for sale contrary to the Canada Temperance Act. Orders nisi to quash the convictions were granted on the ground that improper evidence was admitted, without which there was no evidence that the beer was intoxicating. The evidence objected to was the certificate of one P., an analyst, of the percentage of absolute alcohol in the beer sold. Affidavits of the prosecutor, his counsel, and the magistrate, were read on the return of the orders stating that on the trial of a prior complaint against one T., P., a chemist and analyst, gave evidence, and it was agreed between the counsel for the prosecution and the counsel for the accused that his evidence might be used in the cases against the accused. In affidavits in reply the accused denied the alleged agreement, and no reference was made to it in the magistrate's return:

—Held, that there being some evidence to justify the conviction, the orders must be discharged.

-Conviction-Jurisdiction of stipendiary magistrate making-Effect of amending Act-R.S.C. c. 33-Acts of 1904, c. 11.]-Defendant was convicted at Canning in the county of Kings of an offence against the Canada Temperance Act alleged to have been committed at Aldershot in said county. The stipendiary magistrate who made the conviction was appointed under the authority of R.S.C. c. 33, in which it was provided that "one or more stipendjary magistrates may be appointed by the Governor-in-Council for each county in the province to hold office during pleasure." Subsequent to the appointment, and before the making of the conviction, the Act respecting the appointment of stipendiary magistrates was amended by the Acts of 1905, c. 11, by striking out the word "county" and substituting therefor the word "municipality." No new appointment was made for the municipality of Kings under the amending Act, and the boundaries of the municipality were the same as those of the county:-Held, that the stipendiary magistrate before whom the matter was heard had not lost jurisdiction to act, and that the application for a certiorari and to set aside the conviction made by him must be dismissed.

-Warrant to search and order for destruction of liquor-Procedure-Form inconsistent with provisions of Act.]-On motion for a writ of certiorari to remove into the Supreme Court a record of search warrant made by two justices of the peace authorizing and requiring the constables to whom the warrant was directed to enter the premises of defendant and there search for intoxicating liquor, and also. an order for the destruction of liquor made by the same justices three days later:-Held, that under, the provisions of the Canada Temperance Act, ss. 108, 109, as amended by the Statutes of Canada. 1888, c. 34, the warrant to search for liquor unlawfully kept for sale may precede the prosecution for the penalty for unlawfully keeping for sale. Also, it is not necessary under the amended Act to set out causes of suspicion or particulars of the offence in the information upon which the warrant is issued, such particulars not being ascertainable until after the goods are seized. Also, the sense of the enactment in this respect being at variance with the form given in the statute, the direction in the form is not to be followed. If otherwise, the direction was sufficiently complied with, there being an allegation that liquor was unlawfully kept for sale and the place being sufficiently indicated.

-Conviction-Penalty-''Not less than $50.'']-(1) A commitment on conviction for an offence against Part II. of the Canada Temperance Act is a commitment in a criminal case and a Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada has power to issue a writ of habeas corpus. (2) Under Part II. of the Canada Temperance Act which enacts that a fine may be imposed of 'not less than $50" for a first offence and of "not less than $100" for a second offence, the magistrate cannot impose a fine of more than $50 for a first offence. (3) On application to a Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada for a writ of habeas corpus he may refer the same to the full Court which has jurisdiction to hear and dispose of it.

-Fine-Imprisonment in default-Delay in issuing warrant of commitment.]-(1) Section 739 of the Revised Criminal Code, 1906, applies to authorize imprisonment forthwith for non-payment of a fine imposed for a first offence under the Canada Temperance Act without the necessity of distress, notwithstanding that the statutory form T to the latter Act giving a form of conviction for a first offence thereunder is drawn as for a distress in default of payment. (2) Form T to the Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 152, is not to be deemed to be exclusive of all other forms of convictions for a first offence, and the effect of sections 135 and 151 (formerly 51 Vict. c. 34, ss. 9 and 14), is to authorize an alternative adjudication of imprisonment without distress and a corresponding form of conviction framed under the Criminal Code. (3) Upon a summary conviction imposing a fine and imprisonment in default of payment forthwith, a delay of twenty-nine days in issuing the warrant of commitment will not affect its validity.

-Action for goods illegally taken and detained-Goods seized under warrant.]-In an action against defendants (a police constable and a Scott Act inspector) for the wrongful seizure and detention of a quantity of intoxicating liquors, the evidence showed that the liquors were seized upon the premises of S., who had been several times convicted and fined for violations of the Canada Temperance Act. Both plaintiff and S. swore that the liquors in question were the property of plaintiff and were not kept for sale. In the absence of any evidence to the contrary, the trial Judge gave judgment in favour of plaintiff for a return of the goods, but deprived him of costs on the ground of doubt as to the truthfulness of the evidence, and suspicion as to the purpose for which the liquor was meant to be used:-Held, that the illegal purpose was relevant and there was no reason for interfering with the aiscretion of the Judge.

Fraser v. Watters, 41 N.S.R. 201.

-Issue of search warrant before prosecution-Writ of certiorari refused-Practice as to special leave to appeal in Criminal cases.]-Under the Canada Temperance Act, 1888 (51 Vict. c. 34), a search war-rant was issued and duly executed, and large quantities of intoxicating liquor found in the hotel and premises searched and a conviction of the appellant subsequently obtained in regard thereto, with a consequent order for the destruction of the liquor:-Held, that the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, having dismissed applications for writs of certiorari to remove into the said Court the record of the said search warrant and destruction order, special leave to appeal therefrom must be refused. The decision was plainly right, having regard to s. 10 of the Act under which the warrant was issued.

Townsend v. Cox [1907] A.C. 514. 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 509.

—First offence—Penalty.]—A conviction for a first offence against the second part of the Canada Temperance Act, imposing a penalty of $200 under c. 41 of the Acts of the Parliament of Canada (1904), which imposes a penalty for a first offence of not less than $50, is a good conviction. Semble, that such a conviction would not be sustained if it imposed such an exorbitant penalty as to imply that the convicting magistrate acted from motives that were not judicial.

Rex v. Kay; Ex parte Henry Cormier, 38 N.B.R. 3, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 339.

—Imprisonment without option of a fine.]
—Chapter 41 of the Canada Statutes, 1904, enacting 'Every one who by himself, etc., keeps for sale, etc. . . . any intoxicating liquor in violation of the second part of the Canada Temperance Act shall, on summary conviction, be liable to a penalty for the first offence of not less than $50, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month, etc. . . '' gives an alternative penalty so that either a fine or a term of imprisonment may be imposed.

-Police magistrate for parish-Jurisdiction in county-Offences committed in city or town.]-A police magistrate appointed under 46 Vict. c. 37, for the county of Westmoreland, with civil jurisdiction with in the parish of Shediac, has jurisdiction to try offences against the Canada Temperance Act committed at the city of Moncton, and such jurisdiction is not restricted by the "Act relating to the jurisdiction of police or stipendiary magistrates." Also that it was not necessary that the information for the search warrant should precede the information for the search. Objection was taken to the magistrate's acting on n the ground of interest in the result:—Held, affirming the judgment of the trial Judge, that the magistrate was not incapacitated from acting on account of interest in the result, there being no other justice who could act in the making of the order, and if he were held disqualified, the provisions of the Act would be defeated. Held, also, that it made no difference to whom the liquor seized belonged if it were in fact being kept for sale in violation of the Act. McNeil v. McGillivray, 42 N.S.R. 133.

-Amendment-Application to localities previously adopting—Sentence of imprison-ment—Absence of accused.]—An amend ment to the Canada Temperance Act, authorizing imprisonment without the option of a fine for a first offence, applies to localities that had adopted the Act prior to the amendment. If the accused has proper notice of the proceedings, and is aware that judgment may be pronounced against him, and he might have been present, it is no objection to the conviction that judgment was pronounced and sentence of imprisonment imposed in his absence. A conviction which states in terms that the accused is convicted of the offence charged, though not in the words of the Act, is sufficient, and will not be quashed on certiorari.

The King v. Kay; Ex parte Landry, 39 N.B.R. 332.

-Amendment-Application to localities previously adopting-Previous conviction for same offence.]-The amenament to the Canada Temperance Act (Rev. Stat. of Can. 1906, c. 152, s. 127) authorizes imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month, with or without hard labour, without the option of a fine for a first offence (a), and applies to localities that had adopted the Act prior to the amendment. Where information is laid before a magistrate he acquires jurisdiction over the offence charged, and his jurisdiction is not ousted by a subsequent information before and determination by another magistrate of the same offence. If a party charged with an offence, sets up as a defence a previous conviction for the same offence. the onus in on him to prove the identity of the offences.

The King v. Kay; Ex parte Gallagher, 38 N.B.R. 325.

—Variance between information and summons—Conviction against accused in his absence.]—On an informaton for keeping intoxicating liquor for sale contrary to the Canada Temperance Act the accused was summoned to answer a charge of selling, he did not appear and a conviction was made for keeping for sale:—Held, that as the accused had not been summoned to answer the information laid, the magistrate had never acquired jurisdiction over the person, and the conviction was bad, and was not cured by s. 669 or s. 724 of the Criminal Coöe.

The King v. Kay; Ex parte Melanson, 38 N.B.R. 362.

—Commencing prosecution within three months after the offence—Jurisdiction.]—A conviction under the Canada Temperance Act for selling between two dates, where one day in such period would be more than three months before the date of laying the information, is bad. (See s. 134)

The King v. Kay; Ex parte Hebert, 39 N.B.R. 67. Ex parte Hebert, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 165.

—Sale by druggist—Physician's prescription—'Repeat once only.']—A prescription for ten ounces of gin signed by a physician containing the words "use for medicine only.' and 'repeat once only.' and the name of the purchaser, is not sufficient to justify a druggist in making a second sale of the liquor under the Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 152, s. 125.

The King v. Kay; Ex parte Nugent, 39 N.B.R. 135, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 276.

—Second offence — Time of, as regards prosecution for prior offence.] — (1) A second offence under the Canada Temperance Act to be punishable as such must be one committed after conviction for the first offence, and a summary conviction made as for a second offence committed after the information was laid for the first offence, but before conviction thereon, is bad. (2) Sec. 143 of the Canada Temperance Act — s not displace the common law rule is that respect. (3) The information for the second offence must allege the previous conviction.

The King v. Jordan, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 130.

—Percentage of spirits.]—The Court will not quash a conviction under the Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 152, for selling liquor when there is some evidence to sustain the conviction, although that evidence is little more than opinion. (Exparte Daley, 27 N.B.R. 129, followed.) Liquor containing a little over ½ percent. of spirits may be an intoxicating liquor under the Act.

police officer who was appointed by such board. The Police Commissioners merely exercise a function of the provincial government and are not responsible for the acts of the police officers they appoint. The validity of a conviction under the Canada Temperance Act R.S.C. 1906, c. 152, is not affected by the fact that the evidence upon which the conviction is based was obtained by means of a search warrant, the information for which was insufficient: Semble, that the police officers of the city of Moncton have authority to make -"Intoxicating liquor"-"Malt liquor." -Beer manufactured from malt, although not in fact intoxicating, is a "malt liquor," and therefore an "intoxicating liquor" within the meaning of the Canada Temperance Act. Upon a charge for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor in violation of the Canada Temperance Act, it is not necessary to prove knowledge on the part of the defendant that the liquor sold was intoxicating.

-Search warrant for liquor-Informant executing warrant as chief of police.] The fact that the informant as chief of police laid the information for and executed a search warrant under the Canada Temperance Act will not invalidate a summary conviction for keeping liquor for sale although based upon the result of the search under the warrant.

CARNAL KNOWLEDGE.

Carnal knowledge of girl under fourteen Second count for illicit connection when girl over fourteen-Trial of defendant on both.]-The indictment against the prisoner contained two counts: (1) under s. 301 of the Criminal Code, for carnal knowledge in 1907 of a girl under fourteen years of age; (2) under s. 211, for illicit connection in 1909 with the same girl, then being over fourteen and under sixteen years of age, and of previously chaste character. The trial proceeded on both counts, but at its close the Judge struck out the second count on the ground that, the girl having sworn to the connection charged in the first count, she was not chaste at the time of the connection charged in the second count. The jury found the accused guilty under the first count. According to the report of the proceedings at the trial, no request was made for separate trials on the two counts; but it was stated in argument that such a request had been made. The jury were were plainly told that evidence admitted upon the second count was not admissible upon, and not to be applied to, the first count. The trial Judge recorded a conviction and refused to reserve a case; the defendant asked for leave to appeal and for a direction to the Judge to state a case:-Held, that it was within the power of the Court to try the prisoner upon the two counts at the same time (ss. 856, 857 of the Code); it was a matter for the discretion of the trial Judge; if the question as to the manner of trial was one of law, a reserved case was properly refused; and, if not one of law, there was no power to reserve a case. Held, also, that, as the evidence applicable only on the second count was with-drawn from the jury, the defendant was not, as a matter of law, prejudiced by that evidence, whether admissible or inadmissible on the second count. During the trial the child of the prosecutrix, the issue, as she swore, of her connection with the accused in 1909, was produced and shown to the jury, and its resemblance to the de-fendant pointed out. Held, not improper nor inadmissible. Per Meredith, J.A.:—It would be better and more regular to have the likeness testified to by witnesses. Rex v. Hughes, 22 O.L.k. 344.

Carnal knowledge of young girl by householder upon his own premises—Proof of knowledge of age.]—The defendant was charged with an offence against s. 217 of the Criminal Code, which provides that "every one who, being the owner or occupier of any premises . . . induces or knowingly suffers any girl under the age of eighteen years to resort to or be in or upon such premises for the purpose of being unlawen fully or carnally known by any man, whether such carnal knowledge is intended to be with any particular man, or generally, is guilty of an indictable offence . . . :"— Held, that it was not necessary for the Crown to prove that the defendant knew that the girl was under the age of eighteen years. Held, also, Maclaren and Magee, JJ. A., dissenting, that it is not an offence, within the section, for the owner of the premises to induce or suffer a girl within the prescribed age to be thereon for the purpose of himself having connection with her; the object of the section is to forbid the use of premises as assignation-houses to which young girls may, or may be induced, to resort; the section is applicable to cases of permission, not commission.

CARRIERS.

Express company-Conditions of carriage -Knowledge of consignor. |-The assent necessary to form a contract cannot exist on the part of a party who is ignorance of its purpose. Hence, the acceptance by the shipper of the receipt of an express company who carries goods for him does not constitute an agreement on his part to conform to the conditions printed on the back which are neither read over nor explained to him, especially if he is unable to read of write. The carrier is liable for the loss of goods carried up to their value at their destination but not for the profit that the owner might have made by selling them if nothing took place when the contract for carriage was made to make him aware that such would be the consequence of his failure to execute it.

Black v. Canadian Express Co., Q.R. 36 S.C. 499.

Express company—Wrong-billing—Negligence—Excessive tolls.]—On an application to recover damages for the company's alleged negligence in way-billing a skiff to the wrong address, and charging excess tolls for sending it in a roundabout course to its proper destination, it being in dispute who was responsible for the erroneous way-billing:—Held, the board could only investigate the error in computing express tolls.

Rogers v. Canadian Express Co., 9 Can. Ry. Cas. 480.

-Perishable article—Loss through unavoidable delay, i—Defendants, an express company, undertook to forward a quantity of fresh fish for plaintiffs from Port Mulgrave, in the Province of Nova Scotia, to New York, and the evidence showed that defendants spared no effort to have the fish forwarded with all possible despatch, but on account of the journals of the car upon which they were placed heating, the car was delayed at two points, and when the fish arrived at their destination they were spoiled, and that the accident which caused the delay was one which could not have been avoided:—Held, that the trial Judge erred in not submitting to the jury questions tendered on behalf of the defendants, and intended to secure the finding of the jury as to where the defendants were negligent or failed in their undertaking, such finding being material to the decision of the case. The jury found in answer to the only question submitted that defendant company did not deliver the fish within a reasonable time, looking at all the circumstances of the case:-Held, that the latter finding was against the weight of evidence and could not stand, and that there must be a new trial.

Matthews v. The Canadian Express Co., 44 N.S.R. 202.

Ferryman — Transportation of live animals — Responsibility for loss of animal.]-(1) To render a person liable as a common carrier he must exercise the business of carrying as a public employment, and must undertake to carry goods for all persons indiscriminately, and hold himself out, either expressly or by course of conduct, as ready to engage in the transportation of good's for hire as a business, not merely as a casual occupation. Therefore the owner of a boat propelled by oars and rowed for hire across a river from time to time, by employees usually occupied in other ways, does not fall within the definition of a common carrier. (2) Where a traveller put his horses upon a ferry boat of the above description with side-rails only 15 inches high, saw the risk to which his animals were exposed, and kept them under his own charge during the crossing, he is not entitled to recover from the owner of the ferry boat the value of a horse which became frightened, jumped overboard and was drowned where the accident occurred through no fault of omission or commission on the part of the carrier or his employees, but from the restless disposition of the horse and the inability of the owner to keep him quiet.

—Licensed expressman—Carrying goods for hire—Liability for loss by fire.]—The defendant, duly licensed as an expressman by virtue of a city by-law, was engaged to carry for hire a load of furniture to the railway station in one of his wagons. —Express companies—Connecting lines—Responsibility for goods damaged during transit—Limited responsibility, and knowledge thereof by consignor.]—An express company is not responsible for the damages to goods entrusted for carriage, when the accident happened on another and connecting line of transfer, and the bill of lading contained a clause by which the company was relieved from any liability if the loss or injury happened at a place beyond its lines or control.

Neil v. American Express Co., 20 Que. S.C. 253 (Lynch, J., Circuit Court.).

-Shipping receipt-Limitation of liability ·-Negligence-Connecting lines-Wrongful conversion-Sale of goods for non-payment of freight.]-Conditions in a shipping receipt relieving the carrier from liability for loss or damage arising out of "the safe keeping and carriage of the goods," even though caused by the negligence, carelessness or want of skill of the carrier's officers, servants or workmen, without the actual fault or privity of the carriers, and restricting claims to the cash value of the goods at the port of shipment, do not apply to cases where the goods have been wrongfully sold or converted by the carrier. A shipping receipt with terms as above was for carriage by the defendants' line and other connecting lines of trans-portation and made the freight payable on delivery of the goods at the point of destination. The defendants had previously made a special contract with plaintiff but delivered the receipt to his agent at the point of the shipment with a variation of the special terms made with him in respect to all shipments to him as consignee during the shipping season of 1899, the variation being shown by a clause stamped across the receipt, of which the plaintiff had no knowledge. One of the shipments was sold at an intermediate point on the line of transportation on account of nonpayment of freight by one of the com panies in control of a connecting line to which the goods had been delivered by the defendants:-Held, that the plaintiff's agent at the shipping point had no authority, as such, to consent to a variation of the special contract, nor could the carrier do so by inserting the clause in the receipt without the concurrence of the plaintiff; that the sale, so made at the intermediate point, amounted to a wrongful conversion of the goods by the Jefendants, and that they were not exempted by the terms of the shipping receipt from liability for their full value. As the evidence showed definitely what damages had been sustained, and there being no good reason for remitting the case back for a new trial, the Supreme Court of Canada, in reversing the judgment appealed from (9 B.C. 82), ordered that the damages should be reduced to those proved in respect of the goods sold and converted. Armour, J., however, was of opinion that the judgment of Craig, J., at the trial, including damages for the loss on other goods, should be restored.

T. G. Wilson v. Canadian Development Company, 33 Can. S.C.R. 432, on appeal from the Supreme Court of British Columbia, sitting in appeal from the Territorial Court of Yukon Territory.

-Agreement as to cost of transportation-Obligation to show bills of lading.]-The appellant agreed with the agent of the company, respondent, at a fixed price for the transportation of goods from France. The respondent having carried a package to Montreal, to the appellant's address. refused to deliver it unless he paid $11.84 for disbursements and cost of transportation, and this without the production of bills of lading and waybills, of which the originals had been sent to New York: -Held, reversing the judgment of Charland, J., that the respondent company could not arbitrarily, and as a condition of delivery, impose upon the plaintiff the payment of this sum, except upon verification and subsequent rebate for overcharge, if any, and that it was liable to indemnify him for such damages as he may have suffered on account of the non-delivery of the package.

Poindron v. American Express Co., 12 Que. K.B. 311.

-Non-delivery and conversion of goods-Termination of transitus-Conditional refusal of consignee to accept.]-Trees consigned by the plaintiffs to one C. at Aylmer, Quebec, were delivered by a railway company, by mistake, at Aylmer, Ontario. The defendants, pursuant to a message received from the railway company, "Ship by express C.'s trees to Aylmer, Quebec," carried the trees as far as Ottawa, and were about to send them on by wagon to Aylmer, Quebec, when C., who was the only person known in the transaction by the defendants, appeared at Ottawa and said to the defendant's agent that he would not accept the trees until he saw one F. There were no further communications between the defendants and C. The defendants held the goods and sought out the consignors and notified them of C.'s refusal:-Held, in an action by the consignors for damages for non-delivery and conversion of the trees, that the defendants' contract was not one to deliver the goods to C. at Aylmer and not elsewhere, and his refusal to accept, even if not absolute, was such as dispensed with any further action on the part of the defendants till they had a message from C. that he was ready and willing to receive; and this never having come, the defendants acted reasonably in holding the good's and notifying the consignors, and were not liable for the loss. The findings of the jury not having supplied material for a final disposition of the case, the Court, acting under Con. Rule 615, instead of directing a new trial, set aside the findings and gave judgment on the whole case for the defendants, deeming that if the proper questions had been put to the jury they could have been answered only in one way.

-Carriers-Express company-Contract to forward perishable goods-Delay in transmission.]-The defendants undertook to forward a consignment of fish from Selkirk, Manitoba, to Toronto, Ontario, subject to certain conditions expressed in the contract:-Held, that the defendants' engagement implied that a safe and rapid transit would be furnished for the whole distance, and that contract was broken when the perishable goods were transferred to a freight train in Winnipeg by which delivery was delayed; and this was negligence for which the defendants were liable as common carriers. A special condition that the defendants should not be liable for loss or damage unless it should be proved to have occurred from the gross negligence of the defendants or their servants, did not avail the defendants, because the railway companies were to be regarded as the defendants' servants, and the negligence was to be accounted gross negligence. Another condition was that a claim for loss or damage should be presented to the defendants in writing "at this office:"-Held, that presentation at the head office of the defendants satisfied this requirement.

-Express company — Damages direct and remote.]—Damages for breach of contract must be direct and none are recoverable that are indirect or remote. Hence, where a carrier for hire loses a piece of machinery, sent through him for repairs, the owner is not entitled to recover from him, as damages, the loss incurred through having been deprived of the use of it for a season.

Thiauville v. Canadian Express Co., 33 Que. S.C. 403. -Carriage by express-Liability for safety of goods-Onus of proof.]—(1) An express company that formally undertakes to forward goods is not a mere agent or intermediary between the shipper and the actual carriers, It is itself a common carrier, and, as such, liable for the safe carriage and delivery of the goods, and the onus of proof is on it to show that loss of them is due to irresistible force or the act of God. (2) A clause in a bill of lading for goods forwarded by express that the company will not be bound in case of loss beyond a stated amount unless their value be declared in it, is valid and binding.

Dominion Express Co. v. Rutenberg, 18 Que. K.B. 50.

-Lost luggage-Contract of carriage-Receipt-Condition limiting liability.]-The defendants were an incorporated company, a main part of whose business was to carry and deliver baggage or luggage for customers, to and from railways, steamboats, and other public conveyances. The plaintiff, who was a passenger on a steamer, on his arrival at the wharf in Toronto handed the steamer check for his trunk to his father-in-law, R., to have the trunk sent up to R.'s house. R., who was an employee in the Customs, handed the check to H., also a Customs officer, and asked him to pass the trunk and have it sent up to the house. H. gave D., the defendants' agent, on the wharf, the check and twenty-five cents which R. had given him, told him to have the trunk sent up to R.'s house, and walked away. D. then gave the money to S., a soliciting agent of the defendants, and proceeded to take the steamer check off the trunk. H. returned in about fifteen minutes after he had left the check and the money with D., and asked him for a receipt for the trunk. S. then wrote out the receipt and handed it to H., who looked at but did not read it, nor was his attention called to any terms upon it. He knew, however, that the defendants were in the habit of giving receipts upon taking over baggage for transfer. About an hour and a half thereafter H. handed the check to R., who passed it on to the plaintiff, who did not read it till about ten days afterwards. The receipt was a document which had legibly printed on its face a notice by which the defendants agreed to receive and forward the article for which the receipt was given, subject to a condition that they should "not be liable for any loss or damage of any trunk . . . for over $50." The receipt was in a form generally used by the defendants in the course of their business, and no proof was given that their agents who did the work of receiving and receipting for baggage had authority to receive it on any other footing. The trunk was lost or stolen: but without negligence on the part of the defendants. The defendants tendered to the plaintiff $50 as in full discharge of their liability under their contract, which the plaintiff refused, and brought this action:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the full value of the trunk and its contents, inasmuch as the defendants, who as common carriers were liable to their customer for the full value of the property entrusted to their care in the absence of notice, brought home to the customer, that their liability was limited to a certain sum, had failed to discharge the onus which lay upon them to show that the plaintiff at the time when he made his contract with the defendants had received notice that their liability was limited, or that the stipulation limiting their liability had been at any time accepted by him as a term of his contract.

CEMETERY.

Distinction between "lot" owner and "grave" owner.]-The petitioner acquired two graves in the cemetery of company respondent. Subsequently he acquired two other graves. Owners of lots for which they have paid $20 are entitled by law to become shareholders in the cemetery company, and the petitioner had paid more than this amount. But the four graves did not form a complete lot on the plan of the cemetery, there being a fifth grave belonging to another person in the same lot. On a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the respondent to enter his name as a shareholder:-Held, that the price alone did not entitle the petitioner to the privilege of becoming a shareholder; the land acquired must form a complete lot. The distinction between a "lot" owner and a "grave" owner, which had always been recognized since the organization of the company, though not set forth in the charter or by-laws, was a reasonable one, and the owner of one or more graves forming only a part of a lot, was not entitled to be classed as a shareholder, or to have the graves entered as a lot in the books of the company.

In 1890 one of the family erected on the plot, or what he supposed to be the plot, a monument to two of his ancestors, and surrounded the supposed plot with a hedge:-Held, upon the evidence, affirming the judgment of Teetzel, J., that there was a burying ground in respect of which the reservation was made in the deed of 1838; that there was not an abandonment; that the hedge planted in 1890 enclosed a portion at any rate of the original plot; that neither the defendant nor any of his predecessors in title had acquired a possessory or other title to the plot; and that the plaintiffs had shown a sufficient interest in or title to the plot to enable them to maintain the action. The plot being a land-locked piece of ground, reserved out of a grant of the surrounding property, there was an implied way of necessity to and from it, limited to the purposes for which the plot was expressed to be reserv-

CERTIORARI.

Status of prosecutor as applicant-Recognizance.]-Rules 1279 et seq., made by the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario on the 27th March, 1908, pursuant to ss. 576 and 1126 of the Criminal Code, requiring among other things, a recognizance or deposit in all cases in which it is desired to move to quash a conviction, order, warrant, or inquisition, do not apply where the prosecutor is moving for a certiorari; the prosecutor in effect moves on behalf of the Crown, and the Crown is not bound by the Rules, not being expressly named. Where magistrates, having dismissed a complaint under the Indian Act, ordered that the costs should be paid by the prosecutor; and a warrant was issued by one of the magistrates for the arrest of the prosecutor and for his imprisonment for thirty days unless the costs were sooner paid: -Held, that the prosecutor was entitled to a certiorari to remove the order and all the proceedings into the High Court, although he had not given security by recognizance or deposit, and the application was not made within six months, as required by the Rules.

Re Martin and Garlow, 20 O.L.R. 295. 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 446.

The King v. Murray; Ex parte Damboise, 39 N.B.R. 265; 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 292.

—Jurisdiction of inferior tribunal.]—On application for a writ of certiorari the Court has only to inquire whether or not the inferior tribunal exceeded its jurisdiction or if, in the proceedings taken, it followed the rules prescribed by law. The writ will not be granted if the applicant complains only that he did not receive justice and that the decision of the inferior tribunal was wrong.

Wightman v. City of Montreal, 11 Que. P.R. 318.

—Removing interlocutory order of County Court Judge.]—Certiorari will not be granted to remove an order of a County Court Judge setting aside a judgment obtained in such County Court and letting the defendant in to defend.

Ex parte Joiens, 39 N.B.R. 589.

—Return to writ—Declaration—Misdescription.]—If the Judge who grants an application for the issue of a writ of certiorari does not fix a date for its return the prothonotary may do so. It is not necessary that a declaration should accompany the writ. The error of designating the official who rendered the judgment attacked as coroner instead of justice of the peace is not fatal. The Judge of the Lower Court made a party to the proceedings on certiorari has no interest in the litigation and cannot, by exception to the form, complain of irregularities in the procedure even that of having been served with a copy of the writ instead of the original.

—Certiorari—Restrictive statute.] — A statute which declares that convictions thereunder shall not be removed by certiorari into any superior Court is not a bar to the issue of a certiorari upon the ground of improper conduct of the magistrate by which the accused was deprived of a fair trial.

Re Sing Kee, 8 B.C.R. 20. 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 86.

—Summary conviction — Amendment on certiorari. —The powers of amendment conferred by Code s. 889 in respect of convictions removed by certiorari do not apply where there is an inherent defect in procedure which has deprived the accused of a fair trial, ex. qr. a view of the locus in quo taken by the magistrate in the absence of the parties.

(2) A statutory provision taking away the right to certiorari does not deprive the Superior Court of its power to issue the writ to quash a proceeding on the ground of want of jurisdiction. (3) Where there is a defect in the jurisdiction of justices or inferior Courts, the common law right of certiorari should not be refused merely because a new trial might be had by means of an appeal. (4) Even when an appeal is pending a certiorari for want of jurisdiction should not be refused unless the question of jurisdiction is being raised on the appeal. (5) A writ of certiorari may be claimed by the Crown as a matter of right on application of the Attorney-General without the production of any affidavit. (6) Except where applied for on behalf of the Crown, a certiorari is not a writ "of course," and the Court must be satisfied that there is a sufficient ground for issuing it. the sontion certhe urt, and the Court had no jurisdiction to quash the convictions. Held, that the mere fact of the papers referred to being found on the files of the Court was not sufficient to constitute a cause in Court, in respect to which the application to quash the convictions could be made. -Removal of proceedings by certiorari - Subsequent issue of commitment-Invalid-ity-Amendment.] - The defendant was convicted on the 3rd February, 1903, before a Judge designated under s. 91 of the Ontario Liquor Act, 1902, of an illegal act within the meaning of that section, and was sentenced to be imprisoned for one year and to pay a penalty of $400. On the same day a warrant was issued by the Judge, committing the defendant to gaol in pursuance of the conviction, and under this warrant he was arrested and lodged in gaol. On the 30th January, 1903, a writ of certiorari was issued to the Judge and a county Crown attorney, commanding them to send to the High Court of Justice all summonses, proceedings, etc., had before the Judge, against the defendant and two others. This was served on the Judge on the 2nd February, before the date of the conviction and before the issue of the warrant:-Held, that the proceedings against the defendant were removed from the Court below by the issue and service of the certiorari, and that the subsequent proceedings were void. By 2 Edw. VII. c. 12, s. 15 (O), the provisions of the Crim inal Code respecting amendment of proceedings before justices of the peace are made applicable to all cases of prosecutions under provincial Acts. Held, not to apply to proceedings under the Liquor Act, 1902. Semble, that in a conviction of this kind it was no objection, on habeas corpus that the name of the informant did not appear, nor that the prisoner was prosecuted under the name of "Foster," whereas his name was "Forster." Semble, also, that there was a sufficient sentence and adjudication, although the particular language which might have been necessary in a conviction by a magistrate was not made use of in the record of the proceedings; but, at all events, there was no reason why the sentence of imprisonment should not stand good, even if the adjudication of the fine were objectionable.

-Motion to issue same after delay fixed-C.P. 1292.]-A party who has obtained a writ of certiorari must cause the same to be issued and returned within the delay fixed when his application was granted, and cannot, by motion, obtain leave to issue it afterwards.

Joannette v. Buller, 6 Que. P.R. 146 (Davidson, J.).

-Costs of conveying to gaol.]-The Superior Court has jurisdiction to review, by way of certiorari, every decision of a justice of the peace, even in criminal matters. A Recorder has no right, on imposing a fine and costs of suit with imprisonment on default of payment, to make payment of the expenses of conveyance to prison, in addition to such costs, a condition precedent to the discharge of the debtor, and such order will be quashed on certiorari.

Leonard v. Pelletier, Q.R. 24 S.C. 331. 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 19.

-Justice of the peace-Minute of conviction-Quashing.]-Where a justice of the peace convicts or makes an order against a defendant, and a minute or memorandum of such is then made, the fact that no formal conviction has been drawn up is no reason why the conviction should not be quashed. The Court has jurisdiction by virtue of section 119 O.J.A. to award the costs of a motion to quash a conviction under an Ontario statute against either the justice of the peace or informant. Rex v. Supreme Court Act, section 5.
The King v. Tanghe, 10 B.C.R. 297, 8

Can. Cr. Cas. 160.

-Jurisdiction-Recorder's Court.] - The sole duty of the higher Court on proceedings by certiorari is to inquire if the inferior tribunal has acted within the scope of its jurisdiction and has followed the forms and rules prescribed for the proceedings, and in the latter case the writ will not be sustained unless the applicant shows that he has been prejudiced. Hence, the writ will be quashed and the convic tion of the inferior Court maintained if the applicant, not alleging any serious irregularity in procedure, complains only that he has not received justice and that the decision of the inferior Court is wrong.

-Deposit of fine and costs-Quashing of certiorari-Return of deposit.]-One Wing Tle, the plaintiff's assignor, having been condemned to pay a fine and costs for violation of the License Act, proceeded against his conviction by certiorarı atter having served a portion of his term of imprisonment imposed in default of payment. On applying for the certiorari he deposited with the defendant clerk of the peace at Montreal, $114.83, amount of fine and costs, and $50 for subsequent costs as provided by Art. 217 of the Quebec License Act (63 Vict. c. 12). The writ of certiorari having been quashed, Wing Tle returned to jail and offered to serve the balance of his term claiming at the same time a return of said sum of $114.83 from defendant which was refused:-Held, that such deposit was only required as security and could not be turned into a payment of the fine and costs; that the application for certiorari could not deprive the person convicted of his option to submit to the term of imprisonment to which he had been condemned in default of payment, that the writ of certiorari in suspending the execution of the sentence, had, when it was quashed, only the effect of rendering Wing Tle liable to payment or imprisonment as before it issued and if he chose imprisonment he was entitled to be reimbursed the amount of the deposit representing the fine and costs.

Joanette v. Weir, 26 Que. S.C. 288 (Davidson, J.).

-Question of fact-Art. 5617 R.S.Q.] -There is no appeal to the Superior or Circuit Courts by way of certiorari from decisions of Courts of inferior jurisdiction, on the ground of mal juge, or where the Judge of the lower Court has failed to properly appreciate the evidence.

—Parties—Recorder's Court.] — A certiorari against a decision of one of the recorders of the city and district of Montreal may be issued against the recorder personally and not necessarily against the Court. —Givil proceeding—Summary conviction—Complaint under city by-law—Order dismissing—Quashing order.]—An order dismissing a complaint under the Summary Convictions Act in a civil matter may be quashed on certiorari. -Summary conviction-Civil proceeding-Corporation-Recognizance preliminary to certiorari-Deposit in lieu of recognizance.]-(1) Where a corporation cannot enter into a recognizance, it can only comply with section 4 of the Manitoba Summary Convictions Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 163 (requiring the entering into of a recognizance or making a deposit with the justice of the peace or magistrate as a necessary preliminary to the application for a certiorari to quash a conviction), by making such deposit. (2) A recognizance under that section is defective if it is conditioned for the due prosecution of "a writ of certiorari issued," etc., instead of a writ to be issued. (3) Following Ex parte Tomlinson (1869), 20 L.T. 324, and Regina v. Robinet (1894), 16 P.R. 49, the defendant company should have leave to make the necessary deposit with the convicting magistrate within fourteen days, and then to renew the motion.

—Justice of the peace—Order for payment of costs—No conviction—Order quashing —Condition.]—After a magistrate had entered upon the hearing of a complaint of having used insulting and abusive language, the charge, at the complainant's instance, actuated apparently by compassion, was withdrawn, the accused to pay the costs. Subsequently, such costs not having been paid, the magistrate, in the absence of, and without convicting the accused of any offence, made an order directing the payment by her of the costs; and in default of payment, directing the same should be levied by distress, and, in default of sufficient distress, directing imprisonment. The costs were then paid by the accused, but before launching this application they were tendered back to accused and refused:—Held, that the or-der was invalid and was directed to be quashed without costs, but conditionallyunder sections 889 to 896 of the Criminal Code made applicable by 1 Edw. VII, c. 13, s. 1 (O.)—that no action should be brought against the magistrate, etc., otherwise the motion was to be dismissed with costs.

more than thirty days after judgment, the reviewing Judge may, in the exercise of his discretion, require an explanation of the delay, but such explanation is not essential to jurisdiction to hear the merits and affidavits explaining the delay may be received at any time during the hearing. An order for review setting aside a verdiet for the plaintiff and directing that unless the plaintiff bring the cause down to another tral within two months, the verdict entered for the plaintiff be reversed, is a proper order and within the power of the reviewing Judge under the statute.

The King v. Wilson, 37 N.B.R. 650.

-Summary conviction—Excessive term of imprisonment imposed—Power of Court to amend.]—(1) Where upon the return to a writ of certiorari the Court, upon perusal of the depositions, has no doubt as to the commission of the offence for which the defendant has been tried and convicted, but the conviction is defective in awarding a longer term of imprisonment than the statute permits, the Court has power, under ss. 883, 889 of the Code, to amend the conviction so as to make it conform to the law. (2) It is not necessary, before making such amendment, that the Court should retry the case by having the witnesses orally examined before it.

-Irregular conviction — Amendment by justice on return.]—In the return to a writ of certiorari to remove two convictions with a view to quashing the same on the grounds that they did not follow the minute of adjudication, and were made on an information and summons for a single offence; the convicting magistrate returned the original convictions and an amended conviction in which the objections were cured:—Held, the magistrate had power to amend, and the rule nisi to quash should be discharged. A conviction will not be quashed because the costs are ordered to be paid to the party aggrieved instead of the prosecutor.

The King v. O'Brien; Ex parte Grey, 37 N.B.R. 604.

—Hackmen's tariff—Merits of the conviction.]—When the arguments urged in support of a writ of certiorari attack the merits of the conviction, they then constitute an appeal, and no appeal can be taken by means of a writ of certiorari. Lesarrheau v. Poirier, 8 Que. P.R. 415.

—Jurisdiction—Conviction for breach of a municipal by-law.]—A Judge in Chambers has jurisdiction to order the issue of a writ of certiorari to bring up the record of a conviction for a breach of a municipal by-law, if the application is made when neither the Court of Appeal nor the full Court of King's Bench is sitting. But all further proceedings after the return of the writ must be taken in one or other of these Courts.

Re Hunter, 16 Man. R. 489.

—Summary conviction — Jurisdiction of magistrate.]—(1) The jurisdiction of an inferior Court must appear on the face of the proceedings or it will be presumed to have acted without jurisdiction. Therefore a summary conviction under the "Liquor License Act" which does not state where the offence was committed, or even that it was committed in Manitoba, should be quashed. (2) Notwithstanding section 887 of the Criminal Code, 1892, certiorari proceedings may be maintained although there has been an appeal from the conviction, upon any ground which impeaches the jurisdiction of the magistrate.

-Separate offences-One penalty.]-Where a summary conviction is in form for two separate offences, and shows that the penalty adjudged is for both although within the legal limit for one, but one of the offences is defectively described, the conviction must be quashed on certiorari; it cannot be amended by striking out the of-fence defectively described as the Court has no power to make a fresh adjudication by apportioning the penalty which was discretionary with the magistrate.

-Grounds for-Conviction-Prejudice.] The writ of certiorari will only be granted when the proceedings complained of contain grave irregularities and there is reason to believe that justice has not been or will not be done. An application for the writ on the ground that the applicant had been convicted by the record of Montreal without the evidence being reduced to writing will be refused if it does not appear that he was prejudiced thereby. -Omission to read evidence over to witnesses-Affidavit to vary return.1 - The provision of s. 721, sub-s. 3 of the Criminal Code, requiring the evidence to be read over to the witnesses on the trial of an information or complaint is a matter of procedure, and its omission does not go to the jurisdiction of the magistrate. Ex parte Gallagher, 38 N.B.R. 498, followed. The Court will not hear an affidavit contradicting the return of a magistrate as to what matter was put in evidence at the trial before him. own credit, and had no right of indemnity against the assignors:—Held, a champertous assignment; and champerty is not obsolete, but is defined, forbidden, and the agreement is made invalid by R.S.O. 1897, c. 327, ss. 1 and 2. When the action is brought by the assignee, in his own name, and the assignment is shown to be champertous, the Court treats it as "invalid" and void for all purposes; and, the illegality appearing, refuses, upon grounds of public policy, its aid to the plaintiff whose title is tainted by illegality. Power v. Phelan (1884), 4 Dorion (Quebec) 57, approved. And the action was dismissed upon an issue of law determined under Con. Rule 259 and a motion for judgment under Con. Rule 616.

Sale of litigious rights for share in proceeds-Illegality-Retrait successoral.] -The heirs of one M. induced several persons related to them either by consanguinity or by affinity to assist them as plaintiffs in the presecution of a lawsuit for the recovery of lands belonging to the succession of an ancestor, and, in consideration of the necessary funds to be furnished by these persons, six of the respondents and the mis-en-cause, entered into the agreement sued on, by which said plaintiffs conveyed to each of the seven persons giving the assistance one-tenth of whatever might be recovered should they be successful in the lawsuit. The present action au pétitoire et en partage was brought by the respondents who furnished such funds, for specific performance of this agreement:-Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, Davies, J., dissenting, that the agree-ment could not be enforced as it was tainted with champerty, notwithstanding that the consanguinity or affinity of the persons in whose favour the conveyance had been made might have entitled them to maintain the suit without remuneration as the price of the assistance. Held. further, 1. That there could be no objection to the demande au pétitoire being joined in the action for specific performonce. 2. That the defence of retrait de droits litigieux could not avail in favour of the defendants, as it is an exception which can be set up only by the debtor of the litigious right in question. Powell v. Watters, 28 Can. S.C.R. 133, referred to. 3. That as the conveyance affected a specified share of an immovable the exception of retrait successoral could not be set up under Art. 710 C.C. Baxter v. Phillips, 23 Can. S.C.R. 317, and Leclere v. Beaudry, 10 L.C. Jur. 20, referred to. Moreover, in the present case, the controversy does not relate to the succession, and, in any event, the assignor cannot exercise the droit de retrait successoral. Semble, however, that the retention of a fractional interest in the property might have the effect of preserving the right to retrait successoral. 4 That the laws relating to champerty were introduced into Lower Canada by the Quebec Act, 1774, as part of the criminal law of England and as a law of public order, the principles of which and the reasons for which apply as well to the province of Quebec as to England and the other provinces of the Dominion of Canada. Price v. Mercier, 18 Can. S.C.R. 303, referreá to.

-Mineral claims-Title to land-Champerty.] - In Briggs v. Newswander (32 Can. S.C.R. 405), the plaintiff was held entitled to a conveyance from defendants of a quarter interest in certain mineral claims. In that action Newswander et at. were only nominal defendants, the real estate in the claims being in F. After the judgment was given plaintiff conveyed nine-tenths of his interest to G., the expressed consideration being moneys advanced and an undertaking by G. to pay the costs of that action and another brought by Briggs, and by a subsequent deed, which recited the proceedings in the action and the deed of the nine-tenths, he conveyed to G., the remaining one-tenth of his interest, the consideration of that deed being $500, payable by instalments. Briggs afterwards assigned the above-mentioned judgment and his interest in the claims to F. In an action by G. against F. for a declaration that he was entitled to the quarter interest:-Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, Briggs v. Fleutot, 10 B.C.R. 309, that the transfer to G. of the nine-tenths was champertous and the Court would not interfere to assist one claiming under a title so acquired. Held, also, that the transfer of one-tenth was valid, being for a good consideration and severable from the remainder of the interest.

—Litigious rights.]—(1) A number of persons having small claims of the same kind can put them into one hand for the purpose of recovering the same by suit in a single action, and the exception of litigious rights does not then apply. Elliott v. Lynch, 9 Que. P.R. 313.

Action by assignee of claim — Agreement to divide fruits—Illegality.] — The judgment of Middleton, J., 22 O.L.R. 33, dismissing the action, upon the ground that it could not be maintained because the plaintiff's title to the chose in action was asserted under a champertous assignment, was affirmed by a Divisional Court. The general principle is, that all champertous agreements are void; and, if a party to a champertous agreement must rely upon it to sustain an action, he fails; but, if he, although a party to such an agreement, can make out his case without the agreement, its existence does not void the right of action he has without it. Per Riddell, J.—Leave to amend by adding the plaintiff's assignors or substituting them as plaintiffs,

-Maintenance-Agreement to assist party to action-Consideration.]-Plaintiff, who had been a shareholder and secretary of a mining company for a number of years and had charge of its books and an intimate knowledge of its affairs, entered into an agreement in writing with defendant, the principal shareholder of the company, to give him certain assistance for the purpose of enabling him to win a suit then pending between defendant and another shareholder in relation to an option upon an adjoining property originally held by the company, but which defendant had had transferred to himself. In consideration of the proposed assistance, defendant agreed to pay plaintiff a sum of money in cash in the event of his winning the suit, and a further sum when a sale of the property was effected. At the time of the agreement plaintiff had ceased to be a shareholder and had been paid his salary as secretary, and no interest, either legal or equitable, was shown to justify his interference in the litigation:—Held, allowing defendant's appeal with costs, that the contract was illegal on the ground of maintenance and that plaintiff could not recover.

Craig v. Thompson, 42 N.S.R. 150.

--Maintenance--Malicious motive.] -- A defendant against whom a lawsuit has been successfully prosecuted cannot recover the costs incurred for his defence as damages for the unlawful maintenance of the suit by a third party who has not thereby been guilty of maliciously prosecuting unnecessary litigation. Bradlaugh v. Newdegate, 11 Q.B.D. 1, distinguished; Giegerich v. Fleutot, 35 Can. S.C.R. 327, referred to. Judgment appealed from 12 B.C.R. 272, affirmed.

-Arrest for alleged evasion-Damages.]-Plaintiff was arrested on the 30th August, 1907, at the instance of defendant, a preventive officer, acting under instructions from the collector of customs, for an attempted evasion of the provisions of the Chinese Immigration Act, R.S.C. c. 95, and was detained for some days in custody without a warrant having been issued, and without having been brought before a magistrate for examination. Plaintiff brought an action claiming damages for such arrest and detention, on the trial of which the learned Judge directed the jury among other things, that defendant was only li-able from the time he preferred a charge against plaintiff, which was on the 6th day of September. The jury came into Court and the foreman announced that they found a verdict for defendant, and handed in a memorandum to that effect. On another piece of paper handed in, signed by the foreman but not attached to the verdict, was a memorandum to the effect that the jury found that plaintiff was entitled to $1 a day, $7, and his solicitor was entitled to the sum of $40 for securing his release. This the learned trial Judge treated as a verdict for plaintiff, and ordered judgment accordingly in favour of plaintiff for the sum of $47 with costs to be taxed:— Held, setting aside the verdict and ordering a new trial, with costs, that the only matter in respect to which defendant could be held liable was the detention between the date of the arrest and the date (6th September) when the charges were laid before the magistrate, or whether plaintiff, having been arrested (justifiably) without warrant, was not held an unreasonable length of time before being brought before the magistrate. Also, that defendant was entitled to costs of his application to have the entry of the verdict made in accordance with the oral announcement of the jury, and the entry thereof made by the prothonotary.

CHOSE IN ACTION.

Assignment as security-Notice to debtor -Right of assignee to moneys collected by assignor.]-The plaintiffs had an assignment from one Thomas of all his book debts, notes and other choses in action as security for their claim, but did not notify the debtors or any of the other creditors of Thomas although they knew there were such creditors. They allowed Thomas to collect the accounts and pay over the proceeds to them. The defendants, not knowing of the assignment, and having a large claim against Thomas, induced him to allow them to receive the proceeds of the collections of some of the debts and a number of the promissory notes covered by the assignment, and the plaintiffs brought this action to recover these moneys and notes including some received after notice of the plaintiffs claim:-Held, that the defendarts were equitable assignees of all such moneys and notes as they had reduced into possession before receiving notice of the assignment and were entitled to retain them, but that the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment for all collections of book debts made by the defendants after receipt of such notice. Held, also, that there was no estoppel against the plaintiffs by rea-son of their failure to notify the defendants of their assignment.

It appeared that the work was hauling with teams of horses owned by the defendant and driven by himself and men employed by him. It also appeared that the assignment was given mainly, if not wholly, for past advances, and that the money paid into Court comprised earnings not accrued due at the date of the assignment:-Held, that these future earnings of the defendant were not "wages" within the meaning of the Act (c. 2 of 1909) respecting assignments of wages or salaries to be earned in future—and mentioning "wages" in the assignment did not alter their real character-and the moneys were validly assigned. Semble, that, if the earnings were wages, the claimant could not take the benefit of the exception in the latter part of s. 1 of the Act, as the defendant gave the assignment simply to secure past and present advances in money, and not to secure "a past indebtedness for necessaries" or "an account for necessaries to be thereafter supplied"-even if he did use in the past, or intended to use in the future, such moneys for necessaries. Held. also, that, as the claimant did not know that the plaintiff had recovered judgment against the defendant, Rule 768 did not

This arrangement was carried out, and the lease and assignment executed at a meeting at which D., the plaintiff, and the defendants were all present: - Held, that the lease and assignment formed one entire agreement, to which the defendants were parties; and therefore, in an action by the plaintiff for rent due, it was not necessary to show notice of the assignment to the defendants, in pursuance of the provisions of the statute regarding notice of assignments of choses in action.

Equitable assignment—Order — Specific fund.)—The Dominion Government was indebted to Bull, for transport services rendered during the N.W. Rebellion. On the 25th July, W., a Government transport officer, notified Bull by letter to put in his account, certified, to the H. B. Co., Winnipeg. "where it will be paid." Bull, being indebted to the plaintiffs, wired them 1st August: "Will send order on Please pay Messrs. G. F. & J. Galt, or order, amount of my account." This order was presented to the company, but payment was refused for the reason assigned that the Government had stopped payment of transport accounts. Subsequently Bull made a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors to the defendant, to whom the Government eventually paid the amount of Bull's claim. The plaintiff sought to recover the amount from the defendant, as money had and received to their use:-Held, that the order per se did not constitute an equitable assignment.

Before the garnishee proceedings defendant had accepted the following order drawn upon him by Nicholas & Barker, to whom he he was indebted on a sub-contract: "Please pay to Champion & White the sum of $270 and charge the same to my account for plastering Place Block, Hastings street, W., in full to date;" which order the defendant thus indorsed in favour of Grant: "Please pay that order and charge to my account on contract for Robert Walker Block on Hastings street, city'':-Held, in interpleader, by the full Court, affirming McColl, C.J., that apart from the order there was a parol assignment specifically appropriating to the assignees the sum in question, of the moneys to arise out of the contract.

—Assignment of debt—Curator—Purchase of claims—Littigious rights.]—A creditor of an insolvent has no interest to enable him to contend that the assignee of another creditor did not give valuable consideration and that the assignment was not served on the debtor. —Assignment of debt—Set off—Insolvency Act—Statute of Elizabeth—Execution—Interest in partnership—Sale.]—Action by husband and wife to set aside an assignment to a bank by the husband's execution debtor of his share or interest in the assets and business of a partnership. The assignment was made in February, 1896, as security for a part due debt exceeding the amount of the assignor's interest in the partnership. The husband recovered judgment against the assignor in May, 1896, in an action brought before the assignment, and placed execution in the sheriff's hands in July, 1896. Under that execution, the sheriff, without making any actual seizure of the partnership assets, purported to sell and convey to the wife, in October, 1896, all the undivided share or interest of the assignor exigible under execution in the partnership assets or business. This action was begun in November, 1898:-Held, that the assignment was not invalid under the Bank Act, nor under the Statute of Elizabeth, there being no evidence that it was made with intent to delay and defraud the husband in his action against the assignor. Under the law as it stood at the date of the assignment, notice thereof to the assignor's partners was not necessary to its validity. Per Armour, C.J.O .: - Debts are not included in the expression "goods, wares and merchandise," as used in the Bank Act. The effect of placing the execution in the sheriff's hands was to bind the goods of the partnership, so that they were liable to be seized, but no seizure of any specific assets having been made, and all the assets of the partnership having been sold, realized and disposed of, the execution creditor lost any benefit which he might have derived from the seizure of any specific assets, and the sale thereunder of the undivided interest of the execution debtor therein; and nothing passed to the wife by the sale to her. -Assignment of debt-Action by assignee.]-The plaintiff had assigned to the Colonial Investment & Loan Co. a claim against the defendant. The debtor afterwards agreed to the transfer so that there was the mutual assent of the assignee and the person whose debt was assigned whereby the latter became the debtor of the assignee:-Held, that under these circumstances the assignee cannot maintain an action against the debtor in the name of the assignor even though the deed of transfer, to which the debtor was not a party, authorized the assignee to use the assignor's name. The assignee should take action in his own name.

Montreal Loan & Investment Co. v. Plourde, Q.R. 23 S.C. 399 (Sup. Ct.).

—Signification to debtor of transfer of debt—"Third person"—Civil Oode, Arts. 1570 and 1571, —Under Arts. 1570 and 1571 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada, signification to the debtor of the act of sale of his debt need not be by a notarial act:—Quaere, whether the debtor is a "third person" within the meaning of the latter section against whom signification is necessary in order to perfect possession. Murphy v. Bury (1895), 24 Can. S.C. 688, doubted. The institution of an action against the debtor is itself a sufficient signification of the transfer of the debt.

-Assignment of-Notice to debtor-Sufficiency. 1-A creditor of the defendants to whom they owed $184.98, being $124.80 for oak lumber, and 60.13 for basswood lumber, assigned his claim to the plaintiff. The only notice, however, which the defendants had of this assignment was in a letter from the plaintiff stating that he had an order from the creditor for the amount due in respect to a purchase of "oak lumber" bought by the defendants' agent. The plaintiffs drew on the defendants for the whole amount, who refused to accept the draft on the ground that they had no order from their vendor to do so. Thereupon the present action was brought:-Held, that though there was sufficient to put the defendants upon enquiry in the notice they received, yet it was not sufficiently clear and express to entitle the plaintiff to sue in his own name without making the assignor a party, under the section of the Judicature Act relating to assignments of choses in action.

-Chose in action-Equitable assignment-Form of-Verbal agreement.]—No writing or any particular form of words is necessary to constitute an equitable assignment, an intention to pass the beneficial interest being all that is required. Hughes v. Chambers (1902), 22 C.L.T. 333 approved. A client, who was indebted to a solicitor for costs incurred, informed him that, on the receipt by the solicitor of certain moneys, which he was instructed to collect for the client, he was to pay certain obligations of the client, including the client's bill of costs:—Held, that this constituted a good cautiable assignment.

—Sale of debts by curator—Evidence of debt—Return or abatement of price.]—The sale of debts includes the obligation to deliver the evidence of the debts. A curator to an assignment who sells the debts without warranty and at the risk and peril of the purchaser, is obliged to deliver to the latter the notes, if any, of the debtors, and the details of accounts due on sales of goods. In default of so doing, the purchaser has a right of action against him for the return or diminution of the price, as the case may be, and costs will be given against the curator up to the time of delivery of the evidence of indebtedness.

-Assignment of moneys under a contract to secure advances-Equitable assign ment.1-A firm of contractors having a contract with a town desiring advances from a bank, assigned "all or any money, or moneys due or which may become due from the corporation of the town," and thereafter the cheques for all moneys coming to the contractors, payable to their order, were handed to the bank. The contractors subsequently by assignment as follows: "We hereby, for and in consideration of advances heretofore made . . . assign, transfer and make over to" (another branch of the same bank) "as a general and continuing collateral security, balance of the account" against the town assigned to the bank. It was admitted that the bank knew that there was but one contract upon which the contractors would be entitled to receive money from the town, and that the assignments were simply taken as security for the advances made or to be made to the contractors:-Held, that the assignments to the bank were good equitable assignments, and that no notice of them to the town was necessary.

notice of them to the town was necessary.

Sovereign Bank v. International Portland Cement Co., 14 O.L.R. 511 (Riddell, J.).

—Damages — Assignment of claim for.]—The plaintiff brought this action for damages for personal injuries sustained by his being run down by a car of the defendants, and for the killing of his master's horse which he was riding at the time, and in respect to which he claimed under assignment from his master:—Held, that the action was properly dismissed as to the latter claim upon the ground that it was not an assignable chose in action.

McCormack v. Toronto R.W. Co., 6 Can, Cr. Cas. 474, 13 O.L.R. 656.

-Equitable assignment-Priority.]—Held, that a signature inserted in such a manner as to govern the whole instrument is a sufficient signature. 2. That under the provisions of c. 41 of the Consolidated Ordinances, 1898, an assignment of an undefined portion of a future debt is valid. 3. That as between two claimants under assignments of different dates where the fund has not been paid over by the stake holder that assignment which is first in point of time has priority, notwithstanding that the last assignee has first given notice of the assignment.

Re A. B. Miller, 1 Sask. R. 91.

-Assignment of book debts to creditor-Notice.]-Plaintiffs were assignees of certain book debts, notice of the assignment of which was not given to the debtors. Subsequently the debts were paid by cheques to the assignor who was collecting them for the plaintiffs under an arrangement with them. The defendants who were also creditors of the assignor and who had notice of the assignment obtained possession of the cheques from a clerk of the assignor:-Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount of the cheques, as absence of notice to the debtors under sub-s. 5 of s. 58 of the Judicature Act could not be taken advantage of by the defendants, after the debtors had paid the agent of the assignees.

Eby-Blain Co. v. Montreal Packing Co., 17 O.L.R. 292.

—Assignment of debt—Service on debtor—Costs.]—The service of a sale or transfer of a chirographic debt is not a condition precedent to the bringing of an action by the assignee to recover the amount of it from the debtor. The summons, which informs the latter of the transfer, and proof of it (in this case by its production) suffice to give the plaintiff a useful possession of the debt as against the debtor at the time of the hearing of the merits of the case. The Court is then in a position to know the grounds of the action and can take into account the faults and mistakes of the parties in the adjudication of costs. Brunel v. -Possession of land-Good faith-Right to payment for improvements-Transfer of rights.]-The right of a person who, in good faith, is in possession of land to remain so until reimbursed for his improvements and expenses is transferable, there being no law forbidding it. The sale of an immovable with the rights and improvements of the vendor, includes the right to retain possession until so reimbursed. When the purchaser of an immovable, sued in revendication, sets up a right to retain possession transferred to him by his vendor, the plaintiff cannot set off against this a personal debt of said vendor assigned to him though it was for part of the price of the immovable which the vendor himself owed to his auteur. The person in possession of an immovable belonging to another, who proves that he purchased from a former possessor for a legal consideration, that he has held possession, by himself and auteurs as owner to the knowledge of the real owner's agent for fifteen years and paid the municipal taxes for that time, is sufficient evidence of possession in good faith which entitles him to reimbursement for improvements and expenses. The acknowlegdment of a fact in a document filed by a party to an action is evidence against him of such fact in another action.

CHURCH LAW.

Wardens—Incapacity—Contractor.]—The churches in the Roman Catholic parishes of Quebec are public corporations and the clurchwardens hold a public office. Therefore, a course to the writ of quo warranto is open to any interested party who, being ineligible, is elected to and performs the duties of, such office. A contractor to perform work on, or furnish materials for, a church is ineligible for the office of churchwarden. When rights or privileges are acquired for the future by the exercise of an elective public charge, the Court wisely uses its discretionary power in permitting the issue of the writ of quo warranto on the day before the expiration of the term for which the incumbent was elected.

Election of churchwardens-Right to vote-Resident parishioners-Householders —Custom.]—The words "paroissiens tenant feu et lieu" in Art. 3438 par. 3. R.S.Q., and the word "householder," used in the English version of that article, comprise and designate all heads of families, even married sons living with their parents, working, lodging and boarding with them, and such married sons have, under the text of said law, a right to vote at the election of churchwardens. Unmarried sons living in the same way with their parents are not "paroissiens tenant feu et lieu" and cannot vote at such election. One cannot invoke the custom followed in a particular parish or in the surrounding parishes for interpretation of said article, the law overriding the custom which has authority only in the absence of a positive enactment.

CIVIL ENGINEERS.

Society-Right of admission.1-The Act incorporating the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers, passed in 1898, gives to any person who practised as a civil engineer in the province at the time it was passed the right to become a member. The plaintiff, claiming that he fulfilled this requirement, presented an application for admission, the allegations of fact in which were supported, as required by law, by a deposition under oath. Upon the refusal of the society to grant his application he applied for the issue of a preemptory writ of mandamus to compel it to do so:-Held, that the Court was not called upon to decide whether or not the plaintiff was a qualified civil engineer or had gone through the course of study and acquired the knowledge of the profession, but only whether or not he had practised as a civil engineer at the time the Act was passed. One who has himself performed work demanding knowledge peculiar to a certain profession is not deemed to exercise such profession as is the one who devotes himself to it for the public and carries it on in fact, though his clientéle may be very small. The sworn deposition of the plaintiff does not constitute complete and unassailable proof of the facts it contains but is only a formality intended to prevent futile applications and merely establishes a presumption which may be rebutted.

CIVIL SERVICE.

Postmaster's salary—Claim for difference between amount authorized and that paid—Interest—Civil Service Act, R.S.C., c. 17—Extra allowances.]—By the Civil Service Act (R.S.C. c. 17, sched. B.), a city postmaster's salary, where the postage collections in his office amount to $20,000 and over, per annum, is fixed at a definite sum according to a scale therein provided. No discretion is vested in the Governor-in-

Council or in the Postmaster-General to make the salary more or less than the amount so provided. Notwithstanding the statute, it was the practice of the Postmaster-General to take a vote of Parliament for the payment of the salaries of postmasters. For the years between 1892 and 1900, except one, the amount of the appropriation for the suppliant's salary was less than the amount he was entitled to under the statute. Upon his petition to recover the difference between the said amounts:-Held, that he was entitled to recover. 2. That the provision in the 6th section of the Civil Service Act to the effect that " the collective amount of the salaries of each department shall in no case exceed that provided for by vote of Parliament for that purpose" was no bar to the suppliant's claim, even if it could be shown that, if in any year the full salary to which the suppliant was entitled had been paid, the total vote would have been exceeded. Such provision is in the nature of a direction to the officers of the Treasury who are entrusted with the safekeeping and payment of the public money, and not to the Courts of law. Collins v. The United States (15 Ct. of Clms. at p. 35) referred to. 3. The suppliant was not entitled to interest on his claim. 4. The provision in the 12th section of the Civil Service Amendment Act, 1888 (51 Vict. c. 12), that "no extra salary or additional remuneration of any kind whatsoever shall be paid to any deputy head, officer or employee in the Civil Service of Canada, or to any other person permanently employed in the public service," does not prevent Parliament at any time from voting any extra salary or remuneration; and where such an appropriation is made for such extra salary or remuneration, and the same is paid over to any officer, the Crown cannot recover it back.

B. D., with the object of acquiring and taking over the business and property of two trading concerns, in both of which these two defendants were interested as shareholders or owners. These defendants were also directors and president and manager respectively of the plaintiff company. Shortly after the incorporation of the plaintiff company, the defendant F. B. D. made an offer to the company to sell the assets and goodwill of the two concerns for $65,-000 in cash and the assumption by the company of liabilities amounting to $14,600. This offer was accepted by a by-law passed by the directors of the company, and both businesses were taken over. The cash payment of $65,000 was to be made with moneys derived from sales of shares in the plaintiff company, which were then being offered to the public. Moneys were not procurable in this way, as it turned out; and a promissory note for $65,000 was signed in the name of the plaintiff company by the defendant F. B. D., as managing director, indorsed by the defendants M., F. B. D., and G. R. D., and two of the other directors of the company, and discounted by a bank, through its local manager, the defendant C. The proceeds of the note were transferred to the credit of the company in the bank, and, by cheques of the company, signed by F. B. D. as manager, at least $25,947.76, representing the profit of F. fully aware of the interests of the defendants M. and F. B. D., in the transaction. Upon the evidence, the affair was really arranged between the defendant F. B. D., the vendor, and at the same time the real manager of the plaintiff company, and the defendant M., the president of the plain-tiff company, and at the same time interested in the selling concerns. It was not intended that the company should be one in which the shares are allotted to the owner of the business concerns taken over, in consideration of the transfer of the property and business; from the beginning the intention was that ready money or its equivalent should be paid for the properties and business to be acquired, and that the necessary cash should be obtained by the sale of shares to the public. Held, therefore, that the defendants were accountable to the company for the sum divided among them as profits, each to the extent to which he shared therein. Judgment of MacMahon, J., reversed.

—Powers of trading company—Authority of president — Seal — Signature — Abbreviation of word "Limited."]—It was contended that a guaranty purporting to be given by an incorporated trading company, and signed "A. E. Thomas, Ltd.—A. E. Thomas, Pres."—the name of the company being "A E. Thomas, Limited"-did not bind the company, because it was beyond the power of the company to enter into such a guaranty, and because it was not under seal, and no authority was shown in the president to sign it, and the company's proper name was not affixed:-Held, that, the transaction being in good faith, and the bank to whom the guaranty was given having no notice of the by-laws of the company restricting the authority of the president and providing that the corporate seal should be attached to all such contracts, the bank were entitled to assume that the president had been duly clothed with the authority which he was assuming to exercise when he signed the guaranty; that the signature was sufficient to bind the company under the Statute of Frauds; and the bank were entitled to succeed in an action upon the guaranty.

by vendor.]—The plaintiff's claim was for damages for breach by the defendant of an agreement made on the 22nd January, 1902, between M. and the defendant, and for repayment by the defendant of a sum of $250,000. The plaintiff, by his statement of claim, after setting out the instruments constituting the contract, which showed that it was to be fully performed on both sides on or before the 1st June, 1902, alleged that the defendant carried out no part of his obligations under it, but made default in the same; and on the 3rd June, 1902, by letter addressed to M. and one W., the defendant formally repudiated the contract; and that all the rights of M. and W. had been duly assigned to the plaintiff, of which express notice in writing had been given to the defendant. The action was commenced on the 26th February, 1907. By an instrument dated the 28th April, 1902, M. assigned all his interest in the contract to W., who, by an instrument dated the 10th January, 1907, after first declaring therein that he wholly abandon ed any right, title, and interest which he had in the contract, purported to relinquish, assign; and transfer all his rights to the plaintiff. The contract was with reference to the acquisition by M. and W. of the defendant's interests in two Canadian railway systems, M. and W. paying therefor $10,000,000. These interests were largely in the shape of shares in the capital stock and bonds of the railway companies. Although the notice of the 3rd June, 1902, was received by M. and W., and the plaintiff was aware of it, there was no protest from any of them, nor any expression of readiness, willingness, or anxiety to perform the contract on their part, nor any steps indicating an intention or desire to have it performed, so far as the defendant was aware, until the commencement of the action. The sum of $250,000 was paid by M. and W. to the defendant as security for the due carrying out of the agreement, and it was agreed that in the event of any default being made in the payment of the money under the terms of the agreement, on the 1st June, 1902. or sooner, the $250,000 should be forfeited and remain the defendant's absolute property as liquidated damages for such default:-Held, upon the evidence, that M. and those interested with him in the contract were responsible for the failure to complete on the day named in the contract, and the plaintiff was not entitled to damages, and the defendant was entitled to retain the $250,000. Judgment of Ma-bee, J, affirmed. Per Moss, C.J.O., that the case was one in which, even in equity, time would be deemed to be of the essence, and the circumstances showed that the parties so regarded it. On the 3rd June, 1902, when the defendant gave the notice, the contract was at an end, and the notice could give no right of action; the plaintiff could not maintain that the defendant, while the contract was on foot, repudiated it so as to give the plaintiff the right to treat it as at an end and sue for damages. Supposing the plaintiff entitled to recover if he could prove his readiness and willingness to complete within a reasonable time after the stipulated day, he had wholly failed to prove his readiness and willingness. No action for damages could be maintained, because there was no actionable breach by the defendant. And, if the plaintiff had sought specific performance or in the alternative damages, and failed, as he must have failed, as to specific performance, he would also fail as to damages. The conditions of the agreement as to the $250,000 were substantially the same as the law attaches to a deposit made on a contract of sale and purchase; and there was nothing in this case to take it out of the ordinary rule that, if the contract be performed, the money is brought into account as part payment of the purchase money, but, if the purchaser makes default, it may be retained. That was the contract of the parties; and there was no ground for relief against the forfeiture, if it could be treated as one; the delay alone would be a serious obstacle in the way of that relief. Per Meredith, J.A., that there was a substantial failure of the purchaser to carry out the transaction on his part; in the terms of the agreement between the parties, the $250,000 became the property of the vendor; and there was nothing in law or equity preventing the words which the parties employed being given effect to. --Statutory contract-Bonds of railway company-Government guarantee.] - The Government of Canada, in a contract with the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co., published as a schedule to and confirmed by 3 Edw. VII. c. 71, agreed to guarantee the bonds of the company to be issued for a sum equal to 75% of the cost of construction of the Western division of its railway. By a later contract (sch. to 4 Edw. VII. c. 24) the Government agreed to implement its guarantee, in such manner as might be agreed upon, so as to make the proceeds of said bonds a sum equal to 75% of such cost of construction:—Held, that this second contract only imposed upon the Government the liability of guaranteeing bonds, the proceeds of which would produce a defined amount and not that of supplying, in cash or its equivalent, any deficiency there might be between the proceeds of the bonds and the said 75%.

Powers of general manager-Contract not under seal-Commencing business contrary to requirement of statute.]-1. A company incorporated by letters patent under the Manitoba Joint Stock Companies' Act, R.S. ii. 1902, c. 30, for the purpose of buying and dealing in land, will, by the combined effect of sections 26, 31 and 64 of the Act, be bound by a contract for the sale of land signed on its behalf by one of the persons named in the letters patent as the provisional directors of the company representing himself, with the acquiescence and knowledge of the other directors, to be the general manager, although no proceedings, subsequent to the issue of the letters patent, had been taken to organize the company, no by-laws had been adopted and no directors elected, if the purchaser deals with the company in ignorance of the absence of these formalities. Allen v. Ontario & Rainy River Ry. Co. (1899), 29 O.R. 510, followed. 2. The Act speaks only of first directors and contains nothing to indicate that their authority is only temporary or limited, and, therefore, though called provisional in the letters patent, the persons named were, under section 26 of the Act, directors of the company with all the powers and duties set out in ss. 31, 64 and other sections of the Act. 3. Under s. 64 of the Act, the contract need not be under seal, nor was it necessary to prove that it was made in pursuance of any by-law or specal resolution or order. 4. It makes no difference in such a case that the company had commenced business in violation of s. 22 of the Act, ten per cent. of the authorized capital not having been subscribed, nor ten per cent. of the subscribed capital paid up, for that provision should be held to be directory and not mandatory, as far as concerns dealings with strangers ignorant that it had not been complied with.

Sale of property—Resolution authorizing conveyance. J—The Mortlach Mercantile Company being indebted to several parties, the deferdant Belcher was appointed a trustee for creditors, and with his consent the business was transferred to a company known as Hudsons, Ltd., which agreed to assume the liabilities of the previous company and to pay the same in regular payments. The new company being behind with its payments, a resolution was passed authorizing the sale of the business and conveyance thereof to J. W. Hudson upon execution of certain notes, which it was found as a fact were never made. Notwithstanding, the conveyances were made by the officers of the company, and Hudson went into possession. After the delivery of these documents Belcher recovered judgment against the company, and execution was issued to the sheriff, the defendant Fletcher, who issued a warrant for seizure. The plaintiff Hudson at this time lived over the store premises in which the business was carried on. When the bailiff arrived he found the store premises locked and Hudson refused to open, whereupon the bailiff forced an entrance. There was no connection between the living apartments and the store premises. After the seizure Hudson first verbally claimed all the goods as his. Subsequently, however, he filed a written claim, which was admitted. In an action for wrongful seizure he alleged other goods were his, and claimed damages. In an action to set aside the conveyance of the land, it appeared that at the time of the transfer Belcher was pressing his claim, tlat other claims were outstanding, that the goods were mortgaged in a considerable sum, and that the assets if sold would be insufficient to meet the liabilities, and that Hudson must have been aware of the state of affairs:-Held, that the notes to be given in payment of the goods not being delivered, the conveyance thereof to Hudson was not in accordance with the resolution of the company authorizing it, and was therefore invalid, and the property in the goods never passed to him. 2. That the store and dwelling, while not connected, being under one roof, the breaking by the sheriff of the door of the store premises was technically a breaking of the dwelling, and therefore an unlawful breaking. 3. That Hudson having made a formal claim in writing to certain goods after seizure, under the provisions of the rules of Court, could not afterwards allege that other of the goods seized belonged to him, and maintain an action for unlawful seizure in respect thereof. 4. That the company, at the time of the transfer of land to Hudson, being unable, if its assets were presently realized and if compelled to sell at a forced sale, to pay its debts in full, must be deemed to have been insolvent at that time, and Hudson being aware of this, and the conveyance to him being apparently to defeat the creditors of the company, the conveyance must be deemed to have been fraudulent under the Act respecting Assignments and Preferences, and should be set aside.

-Transfer of assets of partnership to incorporated company - Assumption of liabilities.]-A trading partnership, indebted to the plaintiffs for goods supplied down to the 1st April, 1909, on the 10th of that month agreed to transfer all its assets and property to a new concern to be incorporated; the new company to assume the liabili-ties of the partnership. The company was incorporated under the Ontario Companies Act on the 15th April, 1909, and certificated as entitled to begin business on the 22nd June, 1909. After the incorporation, the partnership transferred its assets and property to the company, and the prospectus of the company, filed with the Provincial Secretary, set forth that the company had "purchased the former business and assets, subject to the liabilities of the said firm, which are to be assumed by the new company." A copy of this prospectus was sent by the company to the plaintiffs on the 6th May, 1909, with a letter regretting that the new company could not send a cheque, but saying that they "expected to be shortly in a position to meet your account," and trusted that an extension of time would be given. Correspondence followed during some months the plaintiffs pressing for payment and the company promising to pay and asking for time. A promissory note made by the company and by the members of the old partnership was in the course of the correspondence sent to the plaintiffs, but returned by them as not satisfactory. In October, 1909, the plaintiffs began this action, against the new company and the members of the old partnership, to recover payment of their debt, but did not press for judgment against the members of the partnership:—Held, that the company having made a direct promise to the creditors to pay the debt, and having negotiated for an extension of time, there was sufficient evidence of the creation of the relationship of debtor and creditor to give a direct right of action; Osborne v. Henderson (1889), 18 S.C.R. 698, distinguished. Held, also, that, notice having been given to the plaintiffs of the incorporation of the company and the taking over of the old assets and the assumption of the old liabilities, and the assent of the plaintiffs being in effect asked, and they acceding and giving time, there was sufficient evidence of an election by the plaintiffs to accept the new company as their debtor in substitution for the original debtors.

 Reserve fund — Dissentient minority — President—Purchase for company—Secret profit-Directors-Salaries.]-An ordinary trading company can, without special authority, set apart a reserve fund, but the majority of the shareholders cannot, against the wishes of the minority, accumulate out of the profits a reserve fund which is far larger than is required to provide for all liabilities of, and vicissitures in, the business; and where such a fund had been accumulated and portions of it had from time to time been invested, by the directors elected by the majority, in unauthorized and hazardous investments, the court, at the instance of the minority, ordered a reasonable proportion to be set aside as a reserve fund and the balance to be distributed among the shareholders as undrawn profits. The president of a company cannot, unless with the consent of all the shareholders, make a profit by selling to the company a property which he knows the company requires and which he buys, with that knowledge, for the express purpose of selling to it. The president and vice-president of a company drew for several years, without proper authority but with the acquiescence of their co-directors, elected by, and closely connected with, the majority of the shareholders, large sums, ostensibly as salaries as general manager and managing director respectively:-Held, that the propriety of the payments could be inquired into at the instance of dissatisfied shareholders, although the majority were prepared to ratify them. Nor can such a sale made in good faith be restrained at the instance of a dissentient minority of the shareholders on the ground that irregularities have occurred in the conduct of the proceedings of the company leading up to the sale, or on the ground that the approving majority are also shareholders in a rival company and are, in carrying out the sale, furthering the interest of the rival company. The shares were allotted and the loan granted upon certain conditions, which included the payment of a membership fee, and certain monthly dues, and the execution, as collateral security, of a mortgage, which was to continue until the maturity of the shares, or until payment of the loan was made. Under the by-laws of the company the rate of interest on loans was declared to be six per cent., but under the provisions of the mortgage executed by defendant, the rate of interest payable where the stock payments, dues, and interest were not promptly paid, was 15 per cent .: - Held, that, defendant having made default in her payments, the company were entitled to payment of the amount due them, with interest at the latter rate. Held, that the contract of membership as a shareholder was distinct from the mortgage contract, and was not to be considered in the foreclosure suit. Held, that if her shares were wrongly forfeited, defendant's rights as a shareholder were to be sought in a separate action, and afforded no defence as to the foreclosure suit.

(3) Where no proof of a protest, or the waiver of protest, is made, the indorser of a promissory note who pays, cannot recover, and he must be held to have paid without any obligation to do so; and the payment must be attributed to his own generosity. (4) Where the person who accepts an hypothec to secure the payment of certain debts, does not bind himself personally, there is no obligation on his -Principal and agent-Promoters of company-Agent to solicit subscriptions False representations-Ratification-Bene. fit.]-Promoters of a company employed an agent to solicit subscriptions for stock and W. was induced to subscribe on false representations by the agent of the number of shares already taken up. In an action by W. to recover the amount of his subscription from the promoters:-Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal (Wilson v. Hotchkiss, 2 Ont. L.R. 261) that the latter having benefited by the sum paid by W. were liable to repay it, though they did not authorize and had no knowledge of the false representations of their agent. Held, per Strong, C.J., that neither express authority to make the representations nor subsequent ratification or participation in benefit were necessary to make the promoters liable; the rule of respondant superior applies as in other cases of agency.

Milburn v. Wilson, 31 Can. S.C.R. 481.

-Contract on behalf of, before incorporation-Ratification-Principal and agent-Implied warranty of authority-Consensus ad idem-Evidence-Burden of proof.]-In the absence of a new agreement made by a company after its incorporation, a contract made before its incorporation by a person purporting to contract for the company is not binding on the company, although the parties afterwards carry out some of the terms of the contract and act on the supposition that is binding on the company. A person who enters into a contract, expressly as agent for a principal impliedly warrants his authority; and if he has in fact no such authority he may be sued under that implied contract, and is bound to make good to the other contracting party what that party has lost or failed to obtain by reason of the non-existence of the authority. In an action on a verbal contract, the evidence as to its terms being contradictory, showing that, if each of the parties to the contract gave in evidence a truthful statement of its terms according to his recollection, there was a misunderstanding between them as to whether a certain important provision (the existence of which was the whole basis of the action) formed part of it, the trial Judge declared himself unable to ascertain the truth, and, applying the principle laid down in Falck v. Williams, [1900] A.C. 176, that it is for the plaintiff in an action for breach of contract to show that his construction is the right one-dismissed the action.

Attorney-General v. Vancouver V. and E. Ry., 9 B.C.R. 338.

—Managing director—Powers—Breach of trust.]—The defendant promoted the formation of the plaintiff company for the manufacture of pulp, upon the understanding that slab wood from his saw mill should be used as fuel and pulp wood by the company. P., residing in England, contributed two-thirds of the capital under an agreement that he was to control the building of the mill, supply the machinery and have the selection of the manager. He was elected president and the defendant was elected managing-director of the company. The mill was erected under P.'s and treated as rendered without authority. There was ground for inferring collusion. and a question as to whether plaintiff was entitled to recover anything in his action against the company:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Chambers Judge, that the judgment entered against the company was properly set aside, and that the applicant G., the secretary of the company, was properly permitted to defend and plead a counterclaim on behalf of the company. Northwest Transportation Co. v. Beatty, 12 App. Cas. 596, distinguished. Held, also, as to the remedy in equity, that if plaintiff's claim was not properly due, and the directors, representing a majority of the shareholders, were acting collusively in allowing judgment to go by default, the applicant G., could, on behalf of himself and the others in the minority, maintain an action against plaintiff and the directors to restrain proceedings in the judgmen action. Held, also, that, by virtue of the Judicature Act, R.S. c. 135, s. 18, sub-s. 5, the applicant G., could have the remedy in the action itself. Dimock v. Central Rawdon Mining Co., 36 N.S.R. 337.

-Debentures-Security-Hypothec to trust company—Holder of coupons—Exclusive right of action in trustee.]—The holder of coupons is bound by conditions in the debentures to which they had been attached both as to payment and the mode of recovering the same; he is, therefore, in the same position as the owner of the debenture before the coupons were detached and, in the present case, is, like said owner, subject to a condition of a deed by which the real estate of the railway company issuing the debentures were hypothecated as security for their payment. namely, that such trustee should have the exclusive right of enforcing payment both of capital and interest, and, the Legislature having passed an Act to ratify the contract between the company and the trustee, an action taken in the name of the holder of coupons, even when the same were payable to bearer, was not well founded and was dismissed.

Q.R. 13 K.B. 523.

 Mining company—Subscription for stock
 Renewal of note given therefor—Total failure of consideration.]-On the strength of an agreement for the formation of a mining company, setting out its objects and purposes, including the proposed transfer to it by the plaintiff of two mining locations, the defendant subscribed for 60,000 shares of stock in the plaintiff company at 10c. per share, giving two plans, near the defendant's mill, and was fitted with machinery for the use of millwood both as pulp and fuel. A by-law provided that the managing-director should have general charge of the property and business of the company, and he was given by the directors a free hand in the management. The defendant without orders, but with the knowledge of all the directors, except P., erected at a cost of about $17,000 to the company, a fuel house and conveyors thereto from his saw mill for the conveyance of mill-wood. The expenditure was necessary if the company was to use mill-wood. The defendant supplied the company with mill-wood under an agreement that it should be paid for on the basis of its relative value to round wood for pulp and coal for fuel. The wood was invoiced by the defendant at $2.00 per thousand of mill cut, on account of which he had paid himself $52,391.30, leaving a balance due of $10,589.57. The wood was of a poor quality. No practical test was made of its relative value to round wood and coal. In the absence of any other than an approximate estimate, the Court held that it should be charged at $1.90 per cord for pulp wood and .90 per cord for fuel wood, on which basis the defendant had overpaid himself $2,432.92. The defendant resigned his position as managing-director at the end of ten months, and the company ceased to use mill-wood. The company sought to charge the defendant with the cost of the fuel house and conveyors, which were no longer of use, as an unauthorized and improper expenditure, and made for the defendant's benefit. The defendant had always been willing to have the price of the mill-wood determined by an actual test. Charges of fraud against the defendant were preferred in a number of sections of the bill, which were unsupported at the hearing:-Held, that the defendant should not be charged with the cost of the fuel house and conveyors, that the decree in plaintiffs' favor for the balance due by the defendant on overpayment should be without costs, and that the defendant should have the costs of the sections of the bill alleging fraud.

-Judgment entered against company by collusion of directors representing major ity of shareholders-Remedy of minority.] -At a meeting of directors of the defendant company a resolution was passed that an action brought by plaintiff, who was president of the company and held a majority of stock, against the company, should not be defended, that plaintiff should be allowed to take judgment for the amount of his claim with interest, and that an account rendered to plaintiff by the secretary of the company should be withdrawn promissory notes therefor of $3,000 each to the plaintiff company, one of which he duly paid, and the other, after being renewed, remained unpaid. The objects and purposes of the company, through no fault of the defendant, were never carried out, and became utterly impracticable; no transfer of the mining locations was ever made, and all expectations of ever successfully carrying out the agreement were abandoned:-Held, that there was a total failure of consideration, and not only was the defendant not liable on the unpaid note-the fact of its renewal in no way affecting his position-but that he was entitled to recover back the amount he had paid on the other note.

-Purchase of land-Authority to contract Quorum of directors-Ratification.]-The Montreal & St. Lawrence Light & Power Co., formerly called "The Chambly Mfg. Co.," had obtained from the Legislature s charter (61 Vict. c. 65 (Que.) consolidating the Acts which governed it and enlarging its powers. It had at the time an establishment and used a water power on the Richelieu near Chambly. In the summer of 1901, having in view a contract for lighting the city of Montreal, it opened negotiations with R., owner of land on the Cascades Rapids in the St. Lawrence in Beauharnois County which it wished to secure in case it obtained the lighting contract. On July 17th a resolution was passed by the directors (two only being present at the meeting) authorizing the president and secretary of the company to effect a purchase in the shape of an option, the company paying down $15,000 the balance of the price being $260,000, with the right, if it did not wish to make further payments, to abandon the purchase and forfeit the $15,000 paid. On July 18th a deed of sale pure and simple of the property was executed between R. and the company and by a deed of defeasance (contre lettre) it was provided that the latter should be entitled to abandon the sale before the 30th of November following forfeiting the $15,000 and re-conveying the property to R. At a subsequent meeting of the directors the minutes (proces verbal) of the meeting of 17th July were confirmed, and at another meeting on December 4th a resolution was passed suthorizing the president and secretary to re-convey to R. the said property purchased on July 18th and on the same day a protest was served on R. tendering the deed of re-conveyance:-Held, that the company, under the above mentioned charter had power to acquire the property in question. That the company could not set up against R. the want of a quorum at the meeting of July 17th which it had represented to be a regular meeting of its directors. That the resolution of July 17th sufficiently authorized the purchase of said property with a right to re-convey it before 30th Nov. That the resolution and protest of Dec. 4th constituted a sufficient ratification of the purchase on July 18th, assuming that the same was not authorized by the resolution on July 17th, and such ratification was not subject to the conditions of Art. 1214 C.C.

VII. c. 17, s. 4:—Held, that the contract referred to in clause (b) of 4 Edw. VII. c. 17, s. 4 is not restricted to such contracts as are mentioned in sub-s. 5 of s. 2 of R.S.O. 1897, c. 205, and held, also, that as the effect of clause (b) is to prohibit the making of such contracts as are dealt with by that clause under the penalty therein mentioned, the enactment is intra vires the Provincial Legislature.

the stock purchased as collateral security, and to be paid five per cent. interest, or, at their option, to have the dividends on the stock, and to receive one-half of any profit that might be realized on the stock when sold:-Held, on the evidence fully set out in the case, that the transaction was a bona fide one, and not merely a device to enable the E. -Officer of company acting fraudulently in execution of powers-Fraudulent warehouse receipt-Shareholder.]-By by-law of ¿ cold storage company, the president, vicepresident and secretary-treasurer had power to sign all negotiable instruments. One of the officers of the company thus expressly authorized, signed and issued fraudulently a number of warehouse receipts previously signed by the other officer of the company who had to be a party to them. There were no goods in storage to represent these receipts:-Held, 1. That a shareholder of a company, from the day on which it is put in liquidation, must be considered a creditor, on a contestation of a claim made against the company, and he is entitled to demand, by direct action, what he might have demanded on a contestation of a claim against the company. 2. Litis pendence cannot be pleaded, to such direct action, on the ground that a contestation of the claim had been filed in the hands of the liquidator, where the contestation was filed subsequent to the institution of the direct action. 3. Whenever the very act of the agent is authorized by the terms of the power, that is to say, whenever, by comparing the act done by the agent with the terms of the power entrusted to him, the act is in itself warranted by the terms used, such act is binding on the principal as to all persons dealing in good faith with the agent. The apparent authority is the real one. Consequently, warehouse receipts of a cold storage company, signed fraudulently by one and negligently by another of the company's officers expressly authorized to sign such receipts, are valid as between the company and third persons acting in good faith. 4. The liability of the company being that resulting from an offence, the fact that other persons may be responsible does not diminish the liability of the comrany, which is jointly and severally liable with the others responsible for such

A number of such shares were in 1901 and 1902 issued by the company to the plaintiff or had been assigned to him, called "prepaid terminating shares." on each of which he paid $50, and on which he was to receive a semi-annual dividend not exceeding six per cent. out of the profits available therefor, and the balance of the profits after payment of expenses was to be applied on the stock until the maturity value thereof was reached, as stated in the report, the owners of such stock having the right of withdrawal after three years by giving thirty days' notice in writing to the company on the conditions mentioned in the report. The plaintiff was also the holder of dividend-bearing terminating stock certificates fully paid, issued under the by-laws of the E. them a proportionate share of whatever bonds and certificates of stock he might receive for these consolidated properties upon the flotation of the scheme then being promoted by him and other associates. In order to hold some of the areas it became necessary to borrow money and the lender exacted a bonus in stock and bonds which the defendant gave him out of those he received for conveyance of the properties to the company. After deducting a ratable contribution towards this bonus, the defendant delivered to the plaintiffs the remainder of their proportion of stock and bonds, but did not then inform them that such deductions had been made, and they, consequently, made no demand upon him for the balance of the shares and bonds until some time afterwards when they brought the action to recover the securities or their value:-Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that whether the defendant was to be regarded as a trustee or as the agent of the plaintiffs, he was not entitled, without their consent, to make the deductions, either by way of salvage or to indemnify himself for expenses necessarily incurred in the preservation of the properties, and that, under the circumstances, their failure to demand delivery of the remainder of the securities before action did not deprive the plaintiffs of their right to recover. If the defendant is to be considered a trustee wrongfully withholding securities which he was bound to deliver, he is liable for damages calculated upon the assumption that they would have been disposed of at the best price obtainable. If, however, he is to be regarded as a contractor who has failed to deliver the securities according to the terms of his agreement, he is liable for damages based on the selling price of the securities at the time when his obligation to deliver them arose.

-Costs of procuring Act of incorporation —Liability.]—(1) A company incorporated by a special Act is not liable for the expenses of procuring its incorporation in the absence of a provision in the Act that it shall be so liable, unless after incorporation it agrees to pay such expenses; and solicitors have no equitable claim against a company for the costs of procur-ing such an Act on the ground that the company has taken the benefit of their services. In re English and Colonial Produce Co. [1906] 2 Ch. 435, followed. (2) Where, however, the company has made a payment on account to its solicitors, they may be permitted to appropriate such payment to their claim for pre-incorporation costs, as was done in the above cited case. The company, which was in process of winding up, was a mutual hail insurance company and the Act permitted the directors to make assessments annually to cover only losses by hail during the crop season and the expenses for the year, and no assessment could be made to pay any part of the solicitors' bill, part of which was for work done for the company after incorporation. There was, however, a reserve fund accumulated under the Act which might "be applied by the directors to pay off such liabilities of the company as may not be provided for out of the ordinary receipts for the same or any succeeding year ":-Held, that those credit-ors for the payment of whose claims an assessment could be made should be compelled, in the first place, to have recourse to that method of payment so as to leave the reserve fund available as far as possible to pay such portion of the solicitors' bill as the company was liable for, that the assessment already made should stand, the proceeds to be applied first in payment of the claims against the company other than the costs in question, and that any remaining debts, including the amount found due on taxation to the solicitors for services subsequent to the incorporation, should rank pro rata on the reserve fund, after payment of the receiver's costs.

-Provincial companies' powers-Operations beyond Province.]-Held, per Idington, Maclennan and Duff, JJ., that a company incorporated under the authority of a provincial legislature to carry on the business of fire insurance is not inherently incapable of entering outside the boundaries of its Province of origin into a valid contract of insurance relating to property also outside of those limits. Per Fitzpatrick, C.J., and Davies, J.:-Sub-s. 11 of s. 92, B.N.A. Act, 1867, empowering a legis-lature to incorporate "companies for provincial objects," not only creates a limita-tion as to the objects of a company so incorporated, but confines its operations within the geographical area of the Province creating it. And the possession by the company of a license from the Dominion Government under 51 Vict. c. 28 (R.S. 1906, c. 34, s. 4) authorizing it to do business throughout Canada is of no avail for the purpose. Girouard, J., expressed no opinion on this question. An insurance company incorporated under the laws of Ontario insured a railway company, a part of whose line ran through the State of Maine, "against loss or damage caused by locomotives to property located in the State of Maine not including that of the assured." By a statute in that state the railway company is made liable for injury so caused and is given an insurable interest in property along its line for which it is so responsible:-Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, 11 Ont. L.R. 465, which maintained the verdict at the trial, 9 Ont. L.R. 493, that the policy did not cover standing timber along the line of railway which the charter of the insurance company did not permit it to insure. Held, also, Fitzpatrick, C.J., and Davies, J., dissenting, that the policy was not on that account of no effect as there was other property covered by it in which the railway company had an insurable interest; therefore the latter was not entitled to recover back the premiums it had paid.

Canadian Pacific Railway Company v.
Ottawa Fire Insurance Company, 39 Can.

-What is an agreement under the seal of the company-Informal sealing.]-It is not necessary to the validity of a contract by an incorporated company that it should be under seal when the contract is for goods of a character likely to be required in the business the company is authorized to carry on. In the absence of evidence that a company has adopted a special seal if seals are placed after the signatures of the president and secretary, accompanied by a testimonium clause indicating that the parties have set their hands and seals to the document, the agreement is to be deemed as being under the company's seal. An incorporated company, against whom judgment has been entered in an action founded upon an agreement for the sale of goods is estopped by the judgment from setting up the alleged invalidity of the contract, and such estoppel will also extend to the liquidators of the company in case of winding-up proceedings. A chattel sold under the condition that the title shall remain in the seller until payment of the price, does not lose its character as a chattel by being annexed to the soil as otherwise to be a fixture, except as against a bona fide purchaser for value without notice. It is not essential to the validity of a conditional sale as between the parties that it should be registered. The recovery of judgment in an action by the seller against the buyer does not extinguish the condition that the title shall remain in the buyer:-Semble, that a company, having accepted goods purporting to be sold by an agreement made in the name of the company prior to its incorpotation, and having paid promissory notes for a portion of the price, is estopped as against the seller of the goods from denying that the agreement is as valid and binding on the company as if formally executed under the seal of the company subsequent to incorporation.

-Power to issue bonds-Purposes for which bonds may be issued-Guarantee or suretyship of bonds of one company by another.]-(1) A company whose charter provides that it "may acquire, own, lease and sell real estate," and "build, sell, lease and otherwise deal with elevators, etc.," and further " may issue bonds bearing interest to an amount not exceeding the cost of any elevator built by it," has the power to issue such bonds for the price of an elevator bought by it. (2) A guarantee of bonds issued by an elevator company for the price of an elevator, given by a railway company to which the elevator is leased and amounting in effect to an undertaking to pay the rent to a trus-tee for the bondholders, is valid and binding and may be enforced against such railway company.

sum, as security of the fulfilment of the conditions. Even if the authorization of the shareholders were required, failure to get it would not defeat the right of the municipality to the security, on the ground of the nullity of the hypothee, but would make it the duty of the company to cure the irregularity by giving a valid hypothee instead. (2) The reservation by the assignee, in a deed of assignment of the hypothecated property, of his right to contest the validity of the hypothee, or his repudiation of the claim of the municipality, can in no wise affect the legality of either the claim or the hypothee.

- Extra remuneration-Ultra vires act of directors - Ratification - Recovery of moneys illegally paid-Mistake of law.]-By a resolution of the directors, the secretary of the company had been authorized to sell the company's bonds, for which he was to be paid a commission at the rate of 5 per cent. on the amounts received. Subsequently, at a time when they had no authority to do so, the directors converted the preferred stock held by certain shareholders into bonds, and paid the secretary for his services in making the conversion at the rate of 5 per cent. on the amount of bonds thus disposed of. In an action to recover back from the secretary the moneys so received by him as commission:-Held, that, although the secretary had received the commissions under mistake of law, yet, as he must be assumed to have had knowledge of the illegality of the transaction, the moneys could be recovered back by the company. Subsequently the scheme of conversion was approved of by a resolution of the shareholders, but it did not appear that they had been fully informed as to the arrangement for the payment of a commission to the secretary in that respect, in addition his regular salary. Held, that the resolution of the shareholders had not the effect of ratifying the payment of the commissions.

—Company—Receiver—Leave to bring action—Bondholders — Priorities.] — Leave given to bring an action against receivers of a company incorporated under the Ontario Companies' Act, to restrain them from carrying out a certain scheme for a fresh bond issue, notwithstanding that the legality of the scheme had been upheld on motion before a Judge of the High Court of Justice in England.

Diehl v. Carrett, 15 O.L.R. 202 (Riddell, J.).

—Promoters — Contract — Ratification.]
—A contract projected between a private person and a company to be formed is of no effect, as respects the latter, after its constitution by the issue of letters patent. Having had no legal existence it cannot be ratified. To make it effective it is necessary for the company after incorporation. through its board of directors to subscribe to it or become formally bound in the manner provided by law. Therefore, when the promoters of the company draw up in writing a project for launching it, in which it is declared that a certain person will be managing-director with a specific salary and other perquisites, when the shareholders on signing their applications are made aware of this document, and when, after the issue of letters patent and the adoption of by-laws by the provisional directors, a resolution is passed at a general meeting of the shareholders declaring the scheme for constitution definitive and ordering it to be transcribed in the company's books and the original deposited with a notary, these proceedings do not establish a contract between the individual designated and the company so as to give the former a right of action against the company for arrears of salary.

-Debentures-Receivers and managers under order of Court-Proceeding against, without leave of Court.]-A paper manufacturing company having become financially embarrassed, J.C. and G.E. were appointed by the Court joint receivers and managers to carry on the business of the company on behalf of debenture holders to whom its property and assets had been mortgaged. Previously to this appointment the company had entered into contracts with the defendants to supply them with paper at certain prices for certain periods of time, and after their appointment it was alleged that J.C. and G.E. had continued to deal with the defendants under these contracts, and other contracts into which J.C. had entered at a time when he was acting as sole receiver and manager. J.C. and G.E. at various times assigned the indebtedness of the defendants under these contracts to the plaintiffs, who brought this action to enforce payment. The defendants thereupon set up a counterclaim, adding J.C. and G.E. as defendants thereto, and alleging that J.C. and G.E. had wrongfully terminated these contracts at a time when they were in full force, on which account the original defendants were obliged to enter into contracts with other manufacturers of paper at a greatly increased price, whereby they suffered and would suffer damages, greatly in excess of the amount claimed by the plaintiffs, which damages they claimed to set off against the claim of the plaintiffs to the extent of that Semble, that an appeal did not lie to the Court of Appeal against the or-der of the Divisional Court, the matter being one of procedure only, not affecting the ultimate rights of the parties.

-Action by shareholder to prevent illegal business by company-Bookmaking at races.]-The plaintiff, a director and shareholder in defendant company, brought an action for an injunction restraining the defendants from carrying out an arrangement entered into with a bookmaker named Jackson. The material points of the arrangement were that Jackson should be allowed to carry on his business as a bookmaker at a race meeting to be held on the defendants' race-track at Victoria, provided that he carried on his betting operations at no fixed spot on the racetrack, but kept moving about. He was, however, to be allowed to pay off his bets at a booth on the track:-Held, following Rex v. Sale of railway — Vendor's Waiver.]-The acceptance by the vendor of a railway of the bonds of the company purchasing the road is a waiver by implication of his lien, if any, for a balance of the price remaining unpaid:-Semble, that a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase money does not obtain in the case of the sale of a railway under the operation of the Railway Act, R.S. 1906, c. 37. The rights of the vendor in such a case are limited to the remedies prescribed by the -Bonds held as security by creditor-Transfer-Purchase of railway by trustee -Breach of trust-Judgment by original bondholder against railway.]-H. had a claim guaranteed by bonds against a railway. It was agreed between H., together with certain other creditors, and D., that the latter would purchase the railway at sheriff's sale in trust for such creditors, and that after the purchase D. would execute a mortgage in favour of these creditors, H. to benefit by such mortgage to the amount of his claim guaranteed by the bonds. To facilitate such arrangement H. transferred the bonds to D. The railway was purchased by D. but thereafter he refused to execute the mortgage as agreed. H., on the 4th July, 1901, obtained a judgment against the railway directing D. to execute in his favour a valid hypothec upon the railway, and in default thereof that the judgment should stand in lieu of such hypothec. D. not complying with the direction, H. regis-tered this judgment. D. having allowed a bank, for whom he professed to act in purchasing the railway, to assume the right to dispose of the same, the bank sold the road to a company incorporated for the purpose of acquiring it, and D. conveyed the road to the company on the 7th August, 1900:-Held, that although H., upon the facts, was not entitled to assert his claim as a hypothec against the railway in the hands of the company, inasmuch as the bank had guaranteed the purchaser a clear title the claim was allowed to be collocated upon the moneys coming to the bank from such sale.

-Railway-Bonds-Irregularity in issue-Trustee - Transfer of bonds - Bona fide holders.]-A railway company issued bonds under the usual deed of trust. The N.T.C., a body incorporate, was the original trustee, but after having executed the deed, resigned. Another trustee was appointed who signed and issued a number of the bonds a few days before the company passed into hands of receiver. The bonds on their face recited that they should not be "obligatory until certified by the N.T.C., trustee." D., the new trustee, signed the bonds in the name of the original trustee, adding thereto "succeeded by D." The bonds were also signed by the president and secretary of the company:-Held, that the apparent irregularity in the signature of the bonds by the trustee was not sufficient to put a bona fide purchaser for value upon enquiry, and that the bonds were valid in his hands. (2) A certain number of the bonds were handed to H., the president of the company, by the trustee D., after he had signed them. H. borrowed money for his own use from R., and gave some of the bonds as collateral security, also depositing sixteen of them with R. for safe keeping. R. used all the bonds as collateral for a loan subsequently obtained by him for his own use. The holders of these bonds for value and without notice made claim, and they were allowed to recover against the company on the ground that the company had by their negligence in allowing H. to have the bonds under his control made it possible for the bonds to find their way into the hands of bona fide purchasers.

-Debentures-Validity-Powers of provisional directors-By-law-Ratification by shareholders-Preferential lien on personalty.]-At a meeting of the provisional directors of a joint stock company incorporated under the Ontario Companies Act, a by-law was passed, under the power conferred by s. 49 of the Act., authorizing the directors from time to time to borrow money upon the credit of the company, to issue bonds or debentures of the company for the amounts borrowed, and to pledge the real or personal property, rights and powers, of the company, to secure such bonds or de-bentures. On the same day a meeting of the shareholders of the company was held, at which all the shareholders were present, when this by-law was confirmed, and all the provisional directors duly elected the directors of the company. This by-law directors of the company. This by-law purported to be enacted by the directors (not the provisional directors), and had the seal of the company affixed to it:-Held, that, whether or not the provisional directors had power to pass the by-law (as to which there was a difference of opinion in the Court), it was a valid by-law and sufficient authority for the subsequent issue of debentures by the directors. Held, also, Garrow, J.A., dissenting, that the debentures issued, though purporting to create a lien or change upon the property of the company, were not mortgages or conveyances intended to operate as mortgages of goods and chattels of an incorporated company, within the meaning of the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, and were not, therefore, void as against the defendant, the assignee of the company for the benefit of creditors, because not registered under the provisions of that Act.

- Corporation sole - Appointment of bishops.]-Where, in an action by a corporation, the defendant denies that the plaintiff has a corporate existence the latter must prove status, but this rule does not apply when the action is brought to enforce a contract between the parties in which such status is expressly admitted. The rule applies to Roman Catholic bishops created corporations sole by special Acts inasmuch as they cannot claim the status of public functionaries. The existence of such corporation does not depend on these acts as they provide that on the death of the incumbent the corporation continues in the person of the administrators of the diocese. In the absence of a statutory requirement to that effect, the ratification by the Crown of the nomination of a bishop is not a condition of the existence of the corporation.

Merger - Conditional Sale - Mortgage bonds and preferred stock as price of sale - Non-fulfilment of condition.] - When a projected company is in course of formation to buy up the stocks and take over the business of several existing companies, a sale to the promoters of shares in the stock of one of them, to be paid for by bonds and preferred stock of the new company, such shares to remain in the hands of a third party in trust, until all the shares of the company shall have been so purchased and its real estate conveyed to the new company, when a mortgage deed shall be executed to secure the bonds thereon, is a conditional sale and, failing the fulfilment of the condition, the seller has the right to demand the rescission of the sale. Difficulties in the acquisition of the whole stock and of the real estate of the old company, and the offer of bonds not secured as mentioned in the sale, afford no grounds of defence to the action.

capital. A committee of subscribers to the new stock was appointed to act with the directors of the company with a view to the immediate commencement of operations, and a call of 25 per cent, on the stock was made and was paid by 27 out of 49 subscribers. After certain liabilities hab been incurred for machinery, materials, etc., the project was abandoned, and a petition was filed to have the persons who paid the call made upon the stock made contributories in winding-up proceedings:—Held, refusing the application with costs, (1) that the stock subscriptions being conditional upon an arrangement for the union of the two bodies going through as a whole, and the project having fallen through, there was a failure of consideration, and there of the call from recovering back the amounts paid by them. (2) The payment of the call, under the circumstances, did not waive the condition.

-Variance between prospectus and memorandum of association-Subscriber - Estoppel.]-Defendant with others signed a memorandum in writing addressed to the provisional directors of a proposed company requesting the allotment to him of two shares in the company when formed. Attached to the memorandum was a prospectus in which the objects of the company were generally set out. The company was incorporated April, 1907, and defendant's name was entered upon the register as a shareholder, and calls were made from time to time to December, 1907, of which defendant had notice. There was no repudiation of liability on the part of defendant, until after action brought in December, 1909, when the objection was made that the powers taken in the memorandum of association were wider than those set out in the prospectus: -Held, affirming the judgment of the trial Judge, that defendant having failed to raise the objection promptly, could not now be heard on the point.

Dominion Companies' Act - By-law to change number of directors - Formalities -Election of directors under such by-law.] -(1) The formalities prescribed in the Companies' Act, c. 79, R.S.C. 1906, s. 76, for the adoption of a by-law to change the number of directors of a company, must be complied with under pain of nullity. Hence, a by-law to reduce the number from seven to five, passed at a general annual meeting, without special notice and not published in the Canada Gazette, is null and void. (2) An election held under such a pretended by-law is also void and confers no right on those elected to act or hold office as directors. (3) An action in the nature of quo warranto proceedings under Art. 987 et seq. C.P., lies to oust those who assume, under colour of such an election, to act as directors of a private company and may be brought by a shareholder present at the meeting when it took place, and not objecting. No acquiescence can cover the nullity above mentioned.

Sherker v. Rudner, 39 Que. S.C. 44.

— Shareholders — Rectification of register —Fraud—"Sufficient cause."] — By s. 116 of the Ontario Companies Act power is given to the Court to make an order for the rectification of the register of shareholders of a corporation "iff the name of any person is without sufficient cause entered in or omitted from" the register. H. applied for an order rectifying the register by removing his name therefrom as the holder of shares, alleging that he had been defrauded by those connected with the organization of the company. Whatever complaint he had was based on what took place before the issue of the charter. By the charter he was declared to be a shareholder:—Held, that that was "sufficient cause" for his name appearing on the register, and it could not be removed on account of antecedent fraud.

- Services of president - Salary - Sanction of shareholders - General meeting.] S. 88 of the Ontario Companies Act, 7 Edw. VII. c. 34, should be given a broad and wholesome interpretation, and should be construed as wide enough to prevent a president and board of directors from voting to themselves or any one or more of themselves, any remuneration for any services rendered to the company, without the authority of the general meeting of the share-holders. Birney v. Toronto Milk Co., 5 O. L.R. 1, 6, applied and followed. There must, in the first place, be a directors' by-law, and this must be followed by "confirmation" at a general meeting, which implies some resolution or by-law passed at such meeting. It is not enough to show that every shareholder of the company was at the time content to pay the salary—the statute must be lived up to. Apart from statutory authority, a director cannot receive remuneration for his services out of the shareholders' money except with the sanction of a shareholders' meeting - and therefore remuneration for services rendered based upon a quantum meruit could not be allowed. Mackenzie v. Maple Mountain Mining Co., 20 O.L.R. 615, distinguished. Finding of a referee, upon a reference for the winding-up of a company, that E. had become liable or accountable for money of the company paid to him for salary as president, affirmed.

of dividends - Estoppel.] - The plaintiffs sued the defendant upon a promissory note, the only consideration for which was an alleged purchase and allotment of shares of the capital stock of the plaintiffs:-Held, upon the evidence, that the defendant had received no shares, and the plaintiffs had not done what was necessary to make him the owner and holder of ten shares for which he had agreed to pay. Although the onus of showing want of consideration was on the defendant, and though he did receive and use certain dividend warrants, the receipt of these did not estop him from showing the true facts. The plaintiffs' position was not altered to their detriment or to a degree that the return of the dividends would not fully restore. A verdict in favour of the bank was set aside by the Court of Appeal:-Held, Idington and Duff, JJ., dissenting, that the onus was on M. to prove that the stock was issued to the public without authority and such onus was not satisfied. Held, per Idington and Duff, JJ., that such onus was originally on M. but the evidence produced, and the said admission of counsel had shifted it to the bank, which did not furnish the requisite proof. Acts that are ultra vires adopted by the majority of shareholders, at regularly convened meetings, are null and void and therefore not binding on the minority. (2) An act of a joint-stock company that amounts to an implied renunciation to its charter rights, or involves the risk of forfeiture of its franchise, is ultra vires. Such an act is the demise by a manufacturing company, by a twenty-one years' lease, for a fixed rental, of all its property, "mills, plant and accessories," practically a surrender of its whole business Therefore, a judgment ordering the issue of a peremptory writ of mandamus is chose jugee against them as well as the company itself. An agreement among all the shareholders of a joint stock company only to sell or transfer their shares on certain conditions is not equivalent to a by-law of the company for such purpose and has no effect as against third parties. -Transfer of paid-up shares-Refusal of directors to allow.]-A company incorporated under the Dominion Companies Act, P.S.C. 1906, c. 79, purporting to act under the authority of s. 80, passed a by-law pro-viding that shareholders might, with the consent of the board of directors, but not otherwise, transfer their shares, and that no person should be allowed to hold or own stock in the company without the consent of the board, and that all transfers of stock must be approved by the majority of the directors before being entered:—Held, that it was beyond the powers of the company, as defined by the Act, to prohibit the transfer of paid-up shares. Order of Teetzel, J., requiring the company to allow a transfer of paid-up shares to which the directors had refused to consent, affirmed by a Divisional Court. Leave granted to the company to appeal to the Court of Appeal. Re Good and Jacob Y. Shantz, Son & Co., 21 O.L.R. 153.

-Sale of property to company by director -Agreement with co-directors-Secret profits.]-A trustee cannot make a profit for himself without the full knowledge of all his cestuis que trust, and so the directors of a company when it is intended to sell stock, stand in a fiduciary relation not only to those who are members at the time but to all who may come in afterwards. The five promoters of a company, who were the only shareholders, as shareholders and directors, assented to the purchase of property from one of them for the company for $5,000, and each of the other four received from the vendor a cheque for $1,000, which was applied in payment of the liability of the four to the company for stock subscribed. The exact nature of the agreement did not appear from the evidence, but it was clear that each of the four received $1,000 from the vendor, and that that fact was not disclosed to the shareholders who had been or were thereafter invited to take stock in the company:-Held, in an action against the five original shareholders and the company, brought by two persons who afterwards became shareholders, that the four had received a secret profit for which they must account to the company. As the conduct of the four was fraudulent, a class action was maintainable; and the right to compel the defendants to account for the advantage so received could not be lost by any delay short of the appropriate statutory limitation. Held, also, that the judgment should direct that the money be paid into Court, and that the plaintiffs should have a lien upon it for their costs, as between solicitor and client, properly incurred, on the principal of salvage, in creating the fund for the company.

-Assignment of amount due by subscriber for shares-Action by assignee.]-The plaintiff, claiming under an assignment from an incorporated company, sued to recover moneys alleged to be due by the defendant in respect of shares of the capital stock of the company, for which the defendant was a subscriber. The assignment was made to the plaintiff as security only for money lent. An order was made, under the Winding-up Act of Canada, for the winding-up of the company, before any steps were taken by the defendant to repudiate the shares, on the ground of misrepresenta-tions alleged to have been made in order to induce him to subscribe for them, or on any other ground:-Held, that, even if the defendant had made out a case which would, before the commencement of the winding-up, have entitled him to rescission, it would have been no answer to an application by the liquidator to place him on the list of contributories; and he was precluded in the same way from setting it up as an answer to the plaintiff's claim. In the winding-up the liquidator sought to have the defendant placed on the list of contributories in respect of the shares in question, and the defendant succeeded in having his name removed from the list, on the ground that the unpaid calls had been assigned to the plaintiff. Held, that the defcndant, having escaped from the liability as a contributory by establishing the assignment under which the plaintiff claimed, eculd not now attack the validity of the assignment, either on the ground of misrepresentations or on the ground that the directors had no authority to borrow; he could not approbate and reprobate.

—Issue of new shares—Purchase of inventions—Transfer of common shares—Bonus to purchasers of preferred shares—Colourable transaction.]—The defendant company was incorporated in 1901, under the Ontario Companies Act, with a capital stock of $700,000. On the 22nd July, 1907, the directors adopted a by-law to increase the stock to $1,500,000, by the issue of 50,000 shares of new common stock of the par value of $10 each, "which may be issued as a bonus, share for share," and by the issue of 30,000 shares of new preferred stock of the par value of $10 each, "which will be sold for cash," and "that the new shares, both common and preferred, be issued and allotted in such manner and proportions as the directors of the components.

pany may deem proper for the benefit of the company." This by-law was approved by the shareholders at a general meeting. Supplementary letters patent were granted authorizing the increase of the stock to $1,-500,000 by the issue of $800,000 shares of $10 each, all of common stock. The directors each year appointed an executive committee, as authorized by the by-laws of the company, to do all things that the directers of the company could do, with the limitation that the committee should report to the board of directors. After the increase in the capital stock, the committee on the 18th June, 1908, resolved that 50,000 shares of the common stock be allotted to McB. in accordance with his application of the 16th June, 1908. By an agreement, bearing that date, between McB. and the company, it was recited that McB. was in possession of certain new and valuable discoveries (described), and had agreed to transfer his interest therein to the company, in consideration of the transfer to him of 50,000 shares of common stock, on the terms and conditions set forth, among which were: that he was immediately to apply for 50,000 shares of common stock; he was to be called upon to pay over at once only $10, being the par value of one share; to transfer to the company all his rights for Canada and one-half interest in his rights for other countries; he was to transfer 40,000 shares to a person to be mutually agreed upon between himself and the president of the company, so that the 40,000 shares, or part thereof, in the sole discretion of such person, might be given as a bonus to purchasers of preferred stock, to promote the sale of the remainder of the company's stock; the remaining 10,000 shares to be transferred to the person agreed upon, not to be delivered until a Canadian patent should issue; this person to have the sole right to vote on the stock; and on the fulfilment of the agreement by McB. he to be released from liability on his application for shares:-Held, that it must be taken that the application of McB. for the shares was in pursuance of this agreement, and that McB. was not to pay for the shares in cash or otherwise except as mentioned in the agreement. The executive committee passed a resolution that the company purchase from McB. the patents described in the agreement, on the terms set forth therein, and that the performance on his part thereof be accepted in satisfaction of the balance due for shares allotted to him; and on the 30th June, 1908, he signed a receipt for a certificate for 50,000 shares. This action was bought by certain shareholders of the company, who, by amendment made at the trial, sued on behalf of themselves and all other shareholders, for a declaration that the transfer of the shares to McB. was null and void, and that the shares should be retransferred to the company; a declaration that the issue of the $800,000 additional stock was fraudulent and illegal and for cancellation thereof; and for other relief. The defendants were the company, McB., and C., the managing director and president. The defendants disputed the right of the plaintiffs to maintain the action. Held, that, if the acts complained of were ultra vires the corporation, the action could not succeed; but the agreement provided an indirect method of selling the company's preferred stock with a bonus from the company of common stock; it was a colourable transaction entered into for the purpose or with the obvious result of enabling the company to issue its shares at a discount; and was ultra vires of the company; and therefore the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain the action. The whole contract was not void, however; the real price for the inventions was the block of 10,000 shares of the 50,000, and to that block McB. was entitled; the contract was double, and the two portions were separable; the part relating to the 40,000 shares should be declared void; and the other should stand, there being no evidence of value or other evidence of fraud on which it could be impeached, even if the action were properly constituted. Ooregum Gold Mining Co. v. Roper, [1892], A.C. 125, and Mosely v. Koffyfontein Mines, Limited, [1904], 2 Ch. 108, followed. Re Lake Ontario Navigation Co. (1909), 20 O.L.R. 191, distinguished. Where the effect of a judgment upon the appeal of one defendant is to establish the validity of a transaction between two defendants, the transaction may be declared valid in respect of the other, who has not appealed. Judgment of Clute, J., varied in favour of the defendant B., who did not appeal, as well as of the other defendants.

Lindsay v. Imperial Steel and Wire Co., 21 O.L.R. 375.

—Unsatisfied judgment—Action against shareholder — Unpaid shares — Counterciaim.]—The plaintiff recovered judgment against a company, incorporated under the Ontario Companies Act, for $674.08 damages and $22.54 costs. He at once placed a writ of fi. fa. in the sheriff's hands, and requested a return of nulla bona, as he wished to commence proceedings against the shareholders of the company. Thereupon the sheriff, without inquiry as to available assets, indorsed on the writ a certificate that there were no goods and chattels in his bailiwick upon which he could levy as commanded by the writ. The writ was not returned, but remained in the sheriff's possession. The plaintiff then began this action, to recover from the defendant, as one of the shareholders, the amount of the judgment. The defence was a simple denial. Ey counterclaim against the company the defendant set up that he sold the company certain property for $2,468, and agreed to accept 2,468 shares of paid-up itional stock therefor; that he subscribed for 500 id for shares as part of the 2,468; that the comrelief. pany did not deliver the shares; that the MeB. shares had no market value; that, therepresifore, the company owed him $2,468 as the purchase price of the property; that the right plaintiff and his father had not paid for their shares; that the plaintiff and the action. were could company were acting in collusion in the led an matter of the fi. fa. and direction to the sheriff; and he claimed from the company pany's e com-(made defendants by counterclaim) the sum of $2,468:—Held, that the claim at urable ose or tempted to be set up in the counterclaim ig the was not "relating to or connected with the count: original subject of the cause or matter," so r; and as to come within the Ontario Judicature ed to Act, s. 57 (7); it was a claim sounding in damages against the company only; and ntract ce for the counterclaim was struck out. S. 69 of 10,000 the Ontario Companies Act, 1907, allows a c MeB. set-off to be pleaded, but against the claim le, and made in the action only, and not against e part any one other than the plaintiff. Held, as to the plaintiff's claim in the action, that be destand. he had not proved himself within s. 68 of the Companies Act, which provides that a other shareholder shall not be liable to such an be imaction "before an execution against the roperly Co. v. company has been returned unsatisfied in whole or in part." Semble, that, if this 7. Kofinitial difficulty could have been got over, h. 108, on Co. the plaintiff would have been entitled to Where recover; for the facts alleged in the counterpeal of claim did not constitute a defence to the alidity action; since the change in the Con. Rules adants, made in 1888, under statutory authority ((on. Rule 373 of 1888, Con. Rule 251 of alid in pealed. 1897), a defendant has not the right to set up as a defence by way of set-off a claim our of sounding in damages-he must set it up eal, as by way of counterclaim; and, the Companies Act, 1907, having been passed with re Co., the law in this condition, the shareholder, had the action been brought by the company, could not have pleaded by way of against defence a set-off sounding in damages; but ounterbe might "set up" such a claim against the igment ler the company if the company sued; and the Act says that he may plead by way of defence any set-off which he could set up against damplaced the company; there was no reason, thereis, and as he fore, why he could not plead this set-off nst the by way of defence in the present action, although he would need to take another proceeding to set it up if the company had reupon ailable executed a transfer to the husband (on the back of the certificate), had not been validly forfeited by the company, and that the husband was owner thereof and entitled to be registered as such, it appeared that the husband was a director of the company, a party to the resolution of the board making calls on the said shares and to the subsequent resolution declaring them to be delinquent and forfeited, and that notice dated May 22, 1895, of the call of that date and of the liability to forfeiture if unpaid was mailed by the secretary to the wife's address in Vancouver, being the address given by her husband in all proceedings connected with the company from 1891 onwards (no address being registered or given on the certificate):—Held, that the plaintiffs had, by their conduct, disentitled themselves to the relief prayed for; that the notice fulfilled all the requirements of the Canadian Companies' Act, 1890, s. 35, and the 9th and 10th by-laws of November 5th, 1891; and that any objections to the absence of due formalities in the service on the husband of acts to which he was a party, and to the illegality of the allotment, calls and forfeiture of the shares due to technical irregularities in the original appointment of the husband and others as directors, must be dis-

-Managing director-Appointment by directors of one of themselves to salaried position.]-Plaintiff, a director in defendant company, was appointed at a meeting of his co-directors to the position of managing director:-Held, on appeal, that the directors had no power to appoint one of their number a managing director and fix his rate of remuneration. Minutes of a directors' meeting were taken down in shorthand by the solicitor for the company and afterwards transcribed and handed to the secretary and re-transcribed into the minute book. They were not confirmed at any subsequent meeting. The solicitor died before the action came to trial. Held, per Morrison, J., at the trial, that such minutes or re-transcribed notes, were not admissible to prove what transpired at the meeting in question.

amount of the account, and hold the amount for the plaintiff. The company was allowed by the plaintiff $10 a month in part for its trouble in collecting. The plaintiff did not discharge the liability of the men for the goods bought by them until the money had been actually paid over by the company:—Held, that there was a good equitable assignment of the wages; and, the company having debited the wage-earners' accounts with the amounts of the plaintiff's accounts for two months, and not having paid either the plaintiff or the wage-earners, the plaintiff was in a position to sue the company for the amount of his claim. He did so, joining "in one action with certain wage-earners, and, the company not appearing and not objecting, the plaintiffs in that action obtained a judgment against the company for the amounts of their several claims respectively. Execution against the company having been returned unsatisfied, the plaintiff, under s. 94 of the Ontario Companies' Act, 7 Edw. VII. c. 34, sued the directors of the company for the amount for which judg-ment had been recovered by him alone. Held, that the judgment, though irregular, could not be attacked by the defendants, in the absence of fraud, which was not alleged; and the plaintiff, as an assignee of wages, came within s. 94, and was entitled to recover against the directors. - Contributory - Shares - Conditional application-Allotment-Conduct approbating contract.]—D. made an application in writing to the company for 130 shares of stock, of the par value of $13,000, agreeing to pay therefor the sum of $1,300, "on the condition that no further call be made thereon." At a directors' meeting the applica-tion was accepted by resolution, and the shares allotted to D., in consideration of $1,300 to be paid on demand. In the minutes of the proceedings at the meeting there was a memorandum, following the resolution, that the shares "were allotted and issued on the condition that no further call would be made thereon." The meaning was that the shares were to be considered as fully paid up. No written notice was giv-er to D., but H., the president, informed him of the action of the directors, and D. gave the company his cheque for the $1,-300, and gave a proxy in favour of another shareholder to vote at a meeting of shareholders. The proxy was used for voting for directors at the meeting, but objection was raised as to the right of D. to vote on these shares. H. informed D. of the objection raised, and D. at once stopped payment of his cheque, and informed H, that he would have nothing more to do with the shares. Three months later a winding-up order was made. It appeared that D.'s name was on the register as the holder of 130 shares, and there was among the company's papers a certificate, signed by the president and secretary, stating that D. was the owner of 130 shares, but not stating whether they were fully paid up or not. There was no evidence that D. was aware either of the entry or the certificate:—Held, that D. was not liable as a contributory. Per Maclaren, J.A., that it was not necessary, in the circumstances, for D. to bring an action to have his name removed from the register; his repudiation was sufficient. Held, also, that, D. not being liable, H. could not be liable for misfeasance for acquiescing in the stopping of payment of D.'s cheque, and thereby causing a loss to the company of $1,300. Decicision of Teetzel, J., 18 O.L.R. 354, reversed.

-Action for deceit-Agreement for sale of shares in company-False representations —Compromise—Notice.] — P., living in Montreal, owned stock in a Cobalt mining company, and D., of Ottawa, looked after his interests therein. Being informed by D. that the mine was badly managed and the property of little value, and that other holders were selling their stock, P. signed an agreement to sell his at par. D. assigned this agreement to a third party. Later P., learning that the stock was selling at a premium and believing that he had made an improvident bargain, entered into negotiations with the holder of his agreement, and a compromise was effected by a portion of P.'s holdings being sold to the assignee at par and the remainder returned to him. It transpired afterwards that D. and the assignor were in collusion to get possession of the stock, and P. brought action against D. for damages:—Held, that the compromise having been effected when P. was in ignorance of the real state of affairs, it did not bind him as against D. from whom he could recover as damages, the difference between the par value of his remaining shares and their market value at the date of such compromise. Judgment of the Court of Appeal (12 Ont. W.R. 824) reversed and that of the trial Judge (9 Ont. W.R. 380) affirmed by a Divisional Court (11 Ont. W.R. 127) restored. Pitt v. Dickson, 42 Can. —Salary of president — Remuneration — Resolution fixing amount.]—The purpose or object of s. 88 of the Ontario Companies Act, 7 Edw. VII. c 34, providing that no by-law for the payment of the president or any director shall be valid or acted upon until the same has been confirmed at a general meeting, is that those who govern the company shall not have it in their power to pay themselves for their services without the shareholders' sanction; and:—Held, reversing the decisions of Clute, J., and a Divisional Court, 20 GLR. 170, that there had been, on the facts there set out, a substantial, if not a literal, compliance with the enactment; and the plaintiff was entitled to recover the salary voted to him as president. A seal is not necessary to the validity of a by-law, unless it is required by the constitution or by-laws of the company.

—Action for account—Onus—Particulars.]
—In an action en reddition de compte by a company against its president it is for the defendant who alleges that the board of directors of the plaintiff is not complete to prove it. The plaintiff company demanding that in default of rendering an account the defendant be condemned to pay a certain amount which it had been informed he has received under certain contracts, is not bound to state at what date and from what persons such sum was received.

Temiscouata Railway Co. v. Macdonald, 3 Que. P.R. 462 (S.C.).

-Subscription for stock-Necessity for allotment-Calls.]-On September 1st, 1899, the defendant subscribed for shares in the plaintiff company by agreement covenanting with the company and directors to accept the same when allotted, and pay as calls might be made. The company was incorporated under the British Columbia Companies Act, 1897, which so far as affected this case is identical with the English Companies Act, 1862. On December 14th, 1899, the directors resolved that all shares should be called up, and between that date and November 22nd, 1900, many interviews took place between the president and the secretary-treasurer and the defendant, at which the latter's liability was discussed and demand for payment made, which also was demanded in several letters written by them to the defendant, but to which the defendant made no reply. On November 15th, 1900, the defendant wrote formally withdrawing his "offer" to take shares. In reply, the treasurer on November 22nd, 1900, again notified him for immediate payment, and on November 29th, 1900, the directors passed by-laws for the issue and allotment of shares to the defendant to the number subscribed for, and also that the whole should be at once called up:—Heid, that the defendant was not liable on his shares, having withdrawn his subscription before allotment. Nelson Coke and Gas Co. v. Pellatt, 2 O.L.R. 390 (Lount, J.).

-Undertaking to subscribe for shares in a company to be formed-Action to declare a subscriber.]-The defendant wrote a letter to A., who was desirous of organizing a driving park company, undertaking to subscribe for $1,000 of stock in a company to be formed, subject to the conditions that before the formation of the company an amount of $7,000 be guaranteed, and that this subscription be obtained within three months from date. Subsequently the defendant cancelled this letter, and refused to sign the stock book. In an action for a first call, instituted by all the underwriters on the stock book, before the incorporation of the company:—Held, that an action for a first call could not be maintained on the defendant's letter, until the company had been organized. In the absence of a special contract on the part of and between the coadventurers, no legal call can be made prior to the organization of the corporation, because until then there is no board of directors capable of making a call.

Cazelais v. Picotte, 18 Que. S.C. 538 (Davidson, J.).

-Mandamus-Protection of stock register.]-Plaintiff, a toreign shareholder in a foreign corporation doing business in the Province of Nova Scotia, obtained a mandamus ordering the defendant company to produce for the inspection of plaintiff the register of stockholders, showing the names and places of residence of persons holding shares and stock in the company, and the number of shares held by each person. Also to produce and file in the office of the Provincial Secretary an abstract of receipts and expenditures, profits and losses of the company within the province for each year during which the company did business within the province. Also to file at the office of the Commissioner of Mines for the province a copy of the charter or act of incorporation of the company and of the bylaws and regulations of the company, together with a list of officers, etc.:—Held, setting aside the order and allowing defendants' appeal, that it was not just and convenient to grant the order as the effect of it would be to decide the whole case upon affidavit, leaving nothing to be disposed of at the hearing. And that while such an order may be useful in some cases in order to preserve the rights of parties or the subject matter until there could be a deliberate disposition made of it at the hearing, or where the matter could not wait until a hearing, it should not otherwise be disposed of in a summary way. Semble, that under the rules enabling a case to be set down for hearing at any time, a strong case must be made out for pursuing a different course. Held, that as the merits of the case must be disposed of later the costs of both parties to the appeal ought to abide the event.

-Calls-By-law-Time for payment of-Forfeiture of stock.]-The plaintiff sued as an assignee for creditors under an assignment which excepted shares in companies not fully paid up, and in which his assignor was declared a trustee for plaintiff, to transfer the shares in such a way as he should direct. In this action plaintiff sought to have it declared that he was the owner of certain shares, standing in the name of his assignor, in a company incorporated under R.S.O. 1897, c. 191, and that he was entitled to pay the balance of calls nade thereon:—Held, that he was not entitled to call on the company to account to him for the shares or any dealings therewith. Under s. 35 of the above statute, stock may be forfeited by the company where the amount payable on a call is not paid within the time limited by the special Act incorporating the company, or by letters patent, or by a by-law of the company. Where, therefore, no time was limited in the statute, or letters patent, or in the by-law making the call, such call was held to be illegal and an attempted forfeiture of the stock ineffectual.

—Shares Certificate and transfer—Parties out of jurisdiction.]—A transfer of certain shares in a company was executed by the holder of the shares in favour of her brother-in-law on the 29th September, 1900, and application to the company was at once made by the transferee for a certificate, but he did not receive one, and on the 25th October he was informed by the company that his transferor had set up a claim that the transfer was procured by fraud. On the 19th November the transferor brought an action against the company and the transferee to restrain the company from transferring the shares, for a declaration that the shares belonged to the plaintiff, and to set aside the transfer executed by her. On the 23rd November the transferee began an action against the company to compel the delivery of a certificate or for damages equal to the value of the shares, and of a mandatory injunction. On the 28th November the company applied for an interpleader order. Pending the applica-tion the transferee discontinued his action, and asserted his claim against the transferor and the company as a counterclaim in the action brought by the former:-Held, that the company were entitled to relief by way of interpleader, notwithstanding the claim against them for damages made by one of the claimants. Held, also, that although both claimants were out of the province, and the company's head office was also outside of the province, there was jurisdiction to make an interpleader order, the claimants themselves having brought the company into the jurisdiction, and the documents being within the jurisdiction. Held, also, that the laches of the company had not been so great as to disentitle them to the relief claimed, and the charge of collusion between the company and the transferor was not sustained. Held, also, that the transferee was entitled to have preserved to him any claim he might have for damages against the company.

One of them sold part of his allotment at a discount and had them transferred by the company direct to the purchasers, who were not aware that the shares were not really paid up:-Held, in an action by the company, that the purchaser were not liable for the discount on such shares, inasmuch as the company was bound by its statement in the certificates that the shares were "fully paid and non-assessable."

anything on their judgment, brought action against H. as a shareholder, in which they failed from inability to prove that he was owner of any shares. They then brought action against G. in which evidence was given, not produced in the former case, that the shares once held by G. had been transferred to H., but were not registered in the company's books. On this evidence the court below gave judgment in favour of G.:—Held, affirming such judgment, 33 N.S.R. 77, 1900, C.A. Dig. 58, that the shares were duly transferred to H. though not registered, as it appeared that H. had acted for some time as president of, and executed documents for the company, and the only way he could have held shares entitling him to do so was by transfer from G. Held, also, that although there appeared to be a failure of justice from the result of the two actions, the inability of plaintiffs to prove their case against H. in the first could not affect the rights of G. in the subsequent suit. The company in which G. held stock was incorporated in 1886 and empowered to build a certain line of railway. In 1890 an Act was passed intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend" the former company, but authorizing additional works to be constructed, increasing the capital stock, appointing an entirely different set of directors, and giving the company larger powers. One clause repealed all Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent therewith. G. had transferred his shares before the latter Act came into force. The judgment against the company was recovered in 1895. Held, that G. was never a shareholder of the company against whom such judgment was obtained —Payment for shares—Equivalent for cash—Written contract.]—M. and C. each agreed to take shares in a joint stock company, paying a portion of the price in cash and receiving receipts for the full amount, the balance to be paid for in future services. The company afterwards failed:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal (27 Ont. App. R. 396, 1900), that as there was no agreement in writing for the payment of the difference by money's worth instead of cash under s. 27 of the Companies Act, R.S.C. 1886, c. 119, M. and C. were liable to pay the balance of the price of the shares to the liquidator of the company.

— Action for calls — Insolvency — Reprise d'instance—Defence.]—A shareholder sued for payment of calls by a company placed in liquidation pending the action cannot set up, against the application of the liquia-tor to be allowed to take up the instance in the name of the company, an allegation that his liability to contribute to the stock of the company can only be enforced against him by virtue of a fresh call by the liquid ator which should be based upon the amount required to pay the debts of the company and the costs of winding-up and which would make the former calls of no effect, but the shareholder will be permitted to plead these grounds as a defence to the action continued by the liquidator.

-Action for calls—Defence.]—In an action by an incorporated company to enforce payment of calls on shares subscribed for, the defendants cannot plead that the conditions of the Act of incorporation have not been complied with, and that the company has for more than a year carried on the business of insurance in violation of the conditions of the statute incorporating it.

Dig. 75, that the defendants undertaking to take shares in the plaintiff company, when issued and allotted, being by deed, for valuable consideration, and being delivered to an agent of the company, was not revocable as a mere offer would be, and that the resolutions of the company and the letters to the defend-ant were a sufficient "issue" and "allotment'' of the shares. Xenos v. Wickham (1886), L.R. 2, H.L. 296, followed. Nasmith v. Manning (1880-1), 5 A.R. 126, 5 S.C.R. 417, distinguished. Held, also, that provision therefor having been made in the memorandum and articles of association, the preference shares of the company were lawfully created.

— Subscription for shares — Contemporary condition—Allotment — Notice — Liability as contributory.]—Held, per Street, J., under the circumstances of this case, where an applicant had agreed to take shares in a company corditional on his receiving certain moneys to pay for them, that he had the right to withdraw his application, as he did, not having received any formal notice of allotment, by informing the company of his inability owing to non-receipt of the moneys to pay for the shares, and that he was not liable as a contributory.

-Prospectus - Unreasonable delay-Subscription for shares—Departure from prospectus-Res judicata.]-On January 28th, 1899, defendant and others subscribed for shares in a projected hotel company. The prospectus stated that a charter would be applied for forthwith and building commenced as soon as $40,000 had been subscribed, at an estimated cost of $45,000, to be ready by the summer season of 1899. After March 29th, 1899, by which time only $28,700 had been subscribed, no further subscriptions to stock were taken till October 24th, 1899, nor was the company incorporated, nor anything done towards having the hotel ready by the time mentioned. After October 24th, 1899, however, additional subscriptions were obtained, which shortly brought the total subscribed to On November 24th, 1899, the company was incorporated, and about July 1st, 1900, the hotel was completed at a cost however, of about $15,000 over the estimated figure. There was no evidence that the defendant had at any time after October 1st, 1899, agreed to be bound by his subscription or approved of proceeding with the erection of the hotel, or of the cost subsequently incurred in its erection: -Held, under the above circumstances, as the undertaking had not been proceeded with within a reasonable time from its inception, defendant could not now be held bound by his subscription to take shares. Semble, that the fact that in an undefended action brought by defendant against the company judgment had been recovered by the defendant, which contained a declaration of the Court that he was not a shareholder, did not in itself afford any defence in this action brought against him to compel him to pay for the shares he had sub-scribed for. The change in the law contained in the present Ontario Company's Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 191, s. 9, as to who become shareholders in a company incorporated by letters patent, specially referred to. Patterson v. Turner, 3 O.L.R. 373.

—Division of profits—Reserve fund.]—A company formed by letters patent under 27 and 28 Vict. (Can.). c. 23, is not bound to divide all its profits on each occasion amongst its shareholders. It can legally reserve any portion thereof at its own discretion and a court has no jurisdiction to regulate it. Whether the undivided portion is retained to credit of profit and loss or carried to credit of a reserve, it may lawfully, in the absence of any express power, be invested on such securities as the directors may select, subject to the control of a general meeting, but not restricted to such investments as trustees are authorized to make.

-Shares in building society-Mortgage of shares held "in trust"-Notice-Purchaser of land subject to mortgage collateral to loan on shares without notice that shares pledged for prior loan-Consolidation-Purchaser of trust shares.]-The defendant mortgagor being the holder of six shares of class "A" permanent stock in her own name, and six shares of class "C" instalment stock "in trust," and other shares of class "B" stock in a building society, obtained a loan of $700 from the plaintiff's company and transferred to their treasurer as security, "all my stock in the said com-pany, consisting of shares of classes A. B. and C. stock, held by me in the said company," and "all other stock or shares held by me in the said company." Subsequently she obtained a further loan of $600, and transferred to the treasurer, as security, six shares of class C instalment stock, the intention being to transfer the six shares held "in trust" and already assigned, as the plaintiffs contended to secure the prior loan of $700, giving also a mortgage on land, reciting that she was the owner of six shares of the capital stock of the plaintiff's company, and that the plaintiffs had agreed to advance $600 upon the said shares, with such mortgage as further se-curity. The mortgagor afterwards conveyed the lands to a purchaser, subject to the $600 mortgage, who assumed the mortgage, and also purchased from the mortgagor her equity on the six shares of instalment stock so held "in trust," subject also to the $600 mortgage. In an action by the plaintiffs claiming consolidation of the loans and payment of both mortgages or foreclosure:-Held, that the use of the words "in trust" put the plaintiffs upon inquiry, and they were affected by the notice that the mortgagor was not the owner of the shares and had no power to mortgage. Held, also, that s. 53 of c. 205 R.S.O. 1897, which relieves a company from seeing to the execution of any trust to which shares are subject, did not empower the plaintiffs to disregard the trusts. The purchaser brought into Court the arrears due on the collateral mortgage, and the plaintiffs accepted the amount in satisfaction of such arrears. Held, that the plaintiffs could not consolidate the two mortgages as against the purchaser, as she was a purchaser for value without it being shown that she was aware, at the time she bought the equity of redemption in the -Increase of capital-Statutory restrictions—Payments to directors—Dividends— Reserve fund-Investment in business-Plant and building fund.]—By 50 Viet. c. 85 (O.), "An Act to further extend the powers of the Consumers' Gas Company of Toronto," the defendants were given authority to increase their capital stock to $2,000,000. By s. 4 it was provided that the new stock should be sold, and that all surplus realized over the par value of the shares should be added to the reserve fund until it should be equal to one-half of the paid up capital stock, the true intent and meaning being that the defendants might at all times have a reserve fund equal to but not exceeding one-half of the then paid up capital, which fund might be invested in specified securities. By s. 6 it was enacted that there should be created and maintained by the defendants a plant and buildings renewal fund, to which should be placed each year five per cent. on the value st which the plant and buildings in use by the defendants stood in their books at the end of their then fiscal year, and that all usual and ordinary repairs and renewals should be charged against this fund. By s. 7, any surplus of net profit remaining at the close of any fiscal year, after payment of (1) fees to the directors not exceeding $9,000 per annum, (2) a dividend at ten per cent. on the paid up capital, (3) the estab-lishment and maintenance of the reserve fund, and (4) providing for the plant and buildings renewal fund, was to be carried to a special surplus account, and whenever the amount of such surplus should be equal to five cents per 1,000 cubic feet on the quantity of gas sold during the preceding year, the price of gas should be reduced for the current year at least five cents per 1,000 enbic feet. By s. 8, if in any year the net profits should not be sufficient to meet the requirements of the defendants for the payment of fees, dividends, and provision for the plant and buildings fund (as in s. 7), the directors were empowered, in their discretion, to draw upon the reserve fund to the extent of such deficiency, and to restore from earnings any amount so drawn, but it was provided that the reserve fund should not otherwise be drawn upon. By s. 9 the plaintiffs were authorized to be parties to the annual audit of the defendants' affairs:-Held, that the defendants were not bound to keep the reserve fund. as an actual separate sum of money, apart from their own property, and invested in the securities mentioned in s. 4, but were at liberty to use it in their business, as they did from year to year, without objec-tion by the plaintiffs' auditors; and were not bound to carry to the credit of the fund its share of the increase in the value of defendants' property which it had helped to acquire while invested in the business. (2) That charges for decrease in the value of gas mains, for iron gas lamps which became useless, and for gas meters destroyed, were not charges for renewal or repair, but for depreciation and loss, and did not come within s. 6 so as to be chargeable to the plant and buildings renewal fund. (3) That under s. 6 the defendants were entitled to continue to contribute to the plant and buildings renewal fund the five per cent. authorized, even although it should not appear necessary to do so for the purposes for which the fund was to be used. These sections were construed in Johnston v. Consumers' Gas Co. (1895), 27 O.R. 9, upon a special case, but the decision was reversed (23 A.R. 566, [1898] A.C. 447), although not on the question of construction. Held, that the Court was not bound by the views expressed in that case.

-Transfer of stock-Power of attorney-Scope of-Payment to directors-Validity of.]-The directors of a company under the belief, which was erroneous, that there was no unallotted stock, procured through an agent, powers of attorney from several persons, which were pasted by the secretary in the transfer book. The powers authorized the agent "to receive from the vendors a transfer" of a specified number of "shares in the company, purchased by me from him," and "to sign in the books of the company my name to the acceptance and transfer" thereof. One of the appointors, whose power called for three shares, subsequently signed an application therefor, and, on his payment for the stock, received a stock certificate. Another appointor, whose power of attorney called for five shares, forthwith paid the company for two and received a stock certificate therefor, and, on his subsequently paying for the remainder, received stock certificates therefor. The other appointors also paid for the amount of shares specified in their powers and received stock certificates, no transfer then being made of the stock by any vendor nor any acceptance thereof, what took place amounting to an allotment of stock by the company. Several months afterwards P., an original shareholder, and provisional director and subsequently a director and superintendent of the company, becoming aware of the existence of these powers of attorney, and of no trans-fers having been made thereunder, filled in opposite the names of the various appointors transfers of stock from him to them, to the numbers specified in their powers, procuring the agent, as their attorney, to accept the transfers, for which the agent was paid by the company at P.'s instance $60 for alleged commission. On the winding up of the company:-Held, by the Court of Appeal that neither the transfers of stock made by P. nor the $60 payment could he supported, and that P. must be placed upon the list of contributories. The judgment of Meredith, C.J., limiting the liability of P. to certain of the shares referred to, and as to his non-liability for the $60, reversed. Shortly after the incorporation of the company, a meeting of the provi-sional directors, who were then the only shareholders, was held, when a resolution was passed under which P. was paid $300 out of capital, for alleged services, it not appearing that any service had then heen rendered by him. The minutes of this meeting were confirmed at a subsequent shareholders' meeting. At the time no profit had been made by the company, and, so far a the books showed, nothing had been paid on account of the stock. No by-law was passed authorizing these payments. Held, that the payment of $300 could not be supported.

- Memorandum of association-Conditions imposed by statute-Public policy-Preference stock-Election of directors.]-In the memorandum of association of a joint stock company formed under the provisions of the British Columbia "Companies Act, 1890," and its amendment in 1891, there was a clause purporting to give to the holders of a certain block of shares, being a minority of the capital stock issued, the right at each election of the board of directors to elect three of the five directors or trustees for the management of the busiress of the company, notwithstanding anything contained in the Act:-Held, that the shares to which such privilege was sought to be attached could not be considered preference shares within the meaning of the statute, and that the agreement was ultra vires of the powers conferred by the statute, and rull and void, being repugnant to the conditions as to elections of trustees and directors imposed by the Act as matters of public policy. - Shares - Deposit of certificate - Bailment.]-The plaintiff loan company became the holders of 525 shares in the capital stock of a coal company and of 50 shares in a steel company, and deposited the certificates for the shares with the defendant trust company for safe keeping. The defendant trust company executed and delivered to the plaintiff loan company a document under seal by which they acknowledged the receipt of the certificates, and agreed to hold in their safe deposit vaults to the order of the loan company any dividends received in respect thereof, and guaranteed to the loan company that the certificates would be kept safely in deposit vaults and delivered upon demand under proper authority. The document also provided for the remuneration of the trust company. The certificates were put in the name of the trust company. It appeared that 375 of the shares had been acquired by the plaintiff loan company under an agreement with the Atlas Loan Company, who had an interest in the prospective profits to be derived from the sale of the shares. While the certificates were in possession of the defendant trust company both loan companies were ordered to be wound up under the Dominion Act, and the defendant trust company were appointed liquidators of the Atlas Loan Company, and the plaintiff trust company liquidators of the plaintiff noan company. After the commencement of the liquidations the plaintiff trust company, as liquidators, demanded the certificates from the defendant trust company, but the latter refused to deliver them up, and this action was brought for damages for the detention:-Held, that the defendant trust company were merely bailees and not trustees; but, if they were to be regarded as trustees, the failure to hand over the certificates was not a breach of trust for which they ought fairly to be excused under 62 Vict. (2) c. 15, s. 1 (0.); owing to their dual character as trustees and also liquidators, they did not act with singleness of purpose, and therefore not as required by the Act; and the direction of the Master in Ordinary, to whom was referred the winding-up of the Atlas Loan Company, that the whole 575 shares should be retained by the defendant company as liquidators, was made without jurisdiction, and did not protect them as trustees. 2. -Subscription for shares-Principal and agent—Authority of agent—Conditional agreement.]—S. signed a subscription for shares in a company to be formed and a promissory note for the first payment, both of which documents he delivered to the promoter of the company to which they were transferred after incorporation. In an action for payment of calls S. swore that the stock was to be given to him in part payment for the good will of his business which the company was to take over. The promoter testified that the shares subscribed for were to be an addition to those to be received for the good will:-Held, that, though S. could, before incorporation, constitute the promoter his agent to procure the allotment of shares for him and give his note in payment, yet the possession by the promoter did not relieve the company from the duty of inquiring into the extent of his authority and, whichever of the two statements at the trial was true, the promoter could not bind S. by an unconditional application. -Promoter—Fiduciary capacity—Profit—Action to recover.]—The owner of a patent, in April, 1898, induced the defendants to agree to take an interest in it, with a view to introducing the patented article into public use. They subsequently decided to form a company. An actual assignment to the defendants was executed in June, 1898, pending incorporation, the expense of which the defendants undertook to bear, and by agreement of even date they agreed to sell the patent to the company, when incorporated, in consideration, inter alia, of $5,000. In August, 1898, after incorporation of the company, an instrument was accordingly executed by the defendants and the company, adopting and confirming the agreement above mentioned. and the patent was assigned to the company, and the $5,000 paid:-Held, that the defendants were entitled to retain the $5,000, as against the company, as they did not become promoters until after they were entitled by agreement to the interests in the patent, which were afterwards and before incorporation actually transferred to them. Semble, that even if the defendants had acquired their interests without consideration, that would have made no difference unless acquired for the company.

-Subscription for shares-Condition not fulfilled-Representations of agent-Contemporaneous oral contract.]-In an action by a corporation to recover the amount alleged to have been subscribed by the defendant for shares in the corporation, the defendant testified that he was induced to subscribe by the representations of the plaintiff's agent that two other named persons had each subscribed $10,000 of shares upon the condition that subscriptions for $50,000 were obtained by a certain date; that the defendant's sub-scription was required to make up the $50,000; and that his subscription would not be binding unless the $50,000 was fully subscribed by the date named. It was proved that neither of the named persons had subscribed or promised to subscribe for $10,000 each, either conditionally or unconditionally, that they did not do so at any time after the defendant's subscription, and that $50,000 was not subscribed on or before the date named. The defendant's testimony was not contradicted, the plaintiff's agent having died some years before the commencement of the action; and the trial Judge credited the testimony:—Held, that it was sufficient without direct corroboration, and, in the absence of facts or circumstances of countervailing weight, should be accepted. Held, also, that the plaintiffs were bound by the material representations of the agent, who was duly authorized to solicit subscriptions for shares, whether those re-presentations were made in good faith and with a belief in their fulfilment or not. Held, lastly, that where contemporaneously with a written agreement there is an oral agreement that the written agreement is not to take effect until some other even; happens, oral evidence is admissible to prove the contemporaneous agreement. Loan Company, that the whole 575 shares should be retained by the defendants as such liquidators, was made without jurisdiction and so afforded no protection, and that damages for the detention (delivery having been made pending the action) should be based on an estimate of what had been lost by the detention, the measure thereof being the highest price which could have been procured for the shares between the demand and the delivery. -Stock issued as "fully paid-up"-Part payment-Liability - Contributory - Setoff by shareholder. 1-A certificate of 238 shares of stock was issued to one McN. described as fully paid-up, pursuant to an understanding between him and the directors. He paid for 171 shares, and accepted the certificate knowing that 67 shares were not paid for, but believing that there was no further liability on him in respect to them. There was no evidence of any application for them by him or any allotment to him. He transferred one chare, surrendered his certificate, and got a new one for 237 shares, and acted as a director of the company. His name was in the stock ledger and stock register as a holder of 237 shares:—Held, that he was a share-holder with all the rights and liabilities of a shareholder, and that he was properly put upon the list of contributories for the amount actually unpaid in respect of the shares. McN. had paid $1,500 on a guarantee given for the company, and claimed to set-off that amount against his liability on the shares. Held, that s. 37 of R.S.O. 1897, c. 191, has reference only to an action against a shareholder in the nature of a sci. fa. by a creditor of the company, and that its provisions do not extend the right of set-off to proceedings against shareholders under that Act, and that such right did not exist on the broad ground of absence of mutuality between the claim of the liquidator against McN. and the latter's claim as a creditor against the company. The Maritime Bank v. Troop (1889), 16 S.C.R. 456, followed, and the judgment of King, J., in the Court below referred to with approval.

- Contributories - Consideration shares.]-H. and others, interested as creditors and otherwise in a struggling firm, agreed to purchase the latter's assets and form a company to carry on its business and they severally subscribed for stock in the proposed company to an amount representing the value of the business after receiving financial aid which they undertook to furnish. A power of attorney was given to one of the parties to purchase said assets, which was done, payment being made by the discount of a note for $2,000 made by H. and indorsed by another of the parties. The company having been formed the said assets were transferred and the said note was retired by a note of the company for $4,000 indorsed by H., which he afterwards had to pay. H. also, or the company in Buffalo of which he was manager, advanced money to a considerable amount for the company which eventually went into liquidation. After the company was formed, in pur-suance of the original agreement between the parties, stock was issued to each of them as fully paid-up according to the amounts for which they respectively subscribed, and in the winding-up proceedings they were respectively placed on the list of contributories for the total amount of said stock. The ruling of the Local Master in this respect was affirmed by a Judge of the High Court and by the Court of Appeal:-Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, Davies and Nesbitt, JJ., dissenting, that as all the proceedings were in good faith and there was no misrepresentation of material facts, and as H. and S. had paid full value for their shares, the agreement by which they received them as fully paid-up was valid and the order making them contributories should be rescinded. Held, per Davies and Nesbitt, JJ., that as they did not pay cash or its equivalent for any portion of the shares as such the order should stand. Held, also, that it is the duty of the Supreme Court, if satisfied that the judgment in appeal is erroneous, to reverse it even when it represents the concurring view of three, or any number of, successive Courts before which the case has been heard.

-Transfer of shares-Right to have recorded—Resolution closing books—Invalidity of.]—A transferee of fully paid-up shares in a company incorporated under the Ontario Companies Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 191, is entitled, on the presentation to the company of a transfer of shares, to have same recorded in the books of the company, the company having no discretion whatever in the matter. Where, therefore, under a resolution of the directors, the books were closed for a brief period for the alleged purpose of avoiding confusion or inconvenience in ascertaining the share-holders entitled to vote at the meeting, and during such period the company refused to record a transfer of shares, a mandamus was granted compelling such transfer to be recorded.

In winding-up proceedings:—Held, that such shareholders were not entitled to rank as creditors upon the assets of the company with the other creditors, depositors and debenture holders, and that any claim they had against the company and its reserve fund was subject to the payment of the debts of the company. —Directors—Filling vacancies in board— Quorum—Special meeting of shareholders.] -The by-laws of a company, incorporated under the Ontario Companies Act, provided that there should be seven directors, four of whom should be a quorum. Four of the directors ceased to be qualified, having sold and transferred their stock:-Held, that the remaining directors had not the power, under s. 43 of the Act, to fill the vacancies, notwithstanding that by s. 40 the board might consist of only three members. Held, also, that the vacancies could only be properly filled by a meeting of the shareholders duly called for that purpose. Sovereen Mitt, Glove and Robe Co. v. Whitside, 12 O.L.R. 638 (D.C.).

-Sale of shares-Terms of payment-Absence of covenant to pay-Default in payment.]-By an agreement of 11th August, 1903, between the plaintiff and defendant, after reciting that the plaintiff was the owner of 302 fully paid-up shares of the common stock in a named company, of the par value of $100 each, and his agreement to sell the same to the defendant for the consideration therein made, and subject to the terms thereinafter expressed it was witnessed that the plaintiff had agreed to sell the shares to defendant for $18,120, with interest at six per cent. until same were fully paid—viz., on his paying $500 on account, he was to have the right of paying the balance in the manner set out in the agreement. The plaintiff was to deposit in a bank the stock certificates, endorsed in blank, to be delivered to defendant on payment of the purchase money in full; but he was at liberty to pay into the bank the sums of money thereinbefore referred to, to be held to his credit, and which should fully discharge him in respect of the payment of the purchase price and interest, and entitle him to the delivery of the shares; the defendant was to pay the plaintiff the $500 on account upon the deposit of the certifi cates so indorsed; and in consideration of the premises and of the payment of $500 the plaintiff covenanted and agreed with the defendant that he would not for five years from the date of the agreement, directly or indirectly, erect or cause to be erected in Canada a mill for the manufacture of book and writing papers, or of coated papers, or associate himself or accept employment from any mill erected during the said period for manufacturing such papers:-Held, that the terms and whole effect of the agreement completely negatived the existence of any covenant on defendant's part to pay for the shares.

-Manufacturing company-Managing director - Authority of - Ratification of acts.]-The plaintiff in equity, though successful as to part of its claim, was deprived of the general costs of the suit on the ground that unfounded charges of fraud were made as to the other part, and it was ordered to pay the costs of the sections charging fraud. The managing director of a company, without the authority, but with the knowledge of all of his company's directors except one, erected, at a cost of $17,000, a fuel house for the storage of mill wood and a conveyor for the purpose of moving the mill wood from his mill to the company's pulp mill to be used for fuel and pulp. The fuel house and conveyor became of no use to the company by reason of the discontinuance of the use of mill wood:-Held, that there was no such gross negligence on the part of the managing director as made him liable for the expense of erecting the fuel house and conveyor.

A director acting in a certain way, with the primary object of deriving an improper personal advantage, financial or otherwise, cannot save himself by showing that his action was also of benefit to the company. -Action to recover money paid for shares -Statements contained in prospectus-Responsibility of directors. |--Plaintiff sought to recover payments made to the defendant company and damages on account of statements alleged to be false and fraudulent contained in a prospectus issued by the directors of the company on the faith of which plaintiff was induced to subscribe and pay for a number of a new issue of One of the principal preference shares. matters complained of was a statement to the effect that undrawn profits or assets of the company to a large amount had been appropriated to a "reserve fund." whereas, as plaintiff alleged, the company never had an reserve or sinking fund. The evidence showed that profits which were supposed to have been earned, instead of being distributed in dividends, were transferred to an account referred to and known as the "reserve account:"-Held, affirming the judgment of the trial Judge, that the words "reserve fund," as used in the prospectus, did not necessarily mean a reserve fund which was invested, but the important thing was the reserving of the amount out of property available for distribution in dividends, and appropriating it in the books of the company to meet contingencies, which was shown in this case to have been done. And that even if plaintiff understood the fund to be invested, this, in the case of a manufacturing company, would not be a material representation which would influence the conduct of plaintiff in taking shares. Held, also, it appearing that the directors employed competent managers, upon whom they were dependent for information, and that their auditor used due care in the performance of his duties. that the directors were not responsible for a representation in regard to the cost of materials, affecting the profits, which was not discovered to be mistaken until some time after the prospectus had been issued. Held, also, as to a representation in the prospectus, as to the appropriation of profits earned in payment of dividends on common and preferred stock, that the ex-pression "appropriated" did not mean "paid," but that the sum mentioned was appropriated or devoted to a particular purpose and might be payable later. The prospectus contained a representation that the proceeds of the issue of stock would be applied, among other things, to replacing working capital" already expended in the erection of a mill, known as "Cowie's mill." Held, that the words "working capital" were not a technical expression or likely to mislead plaintiff, it being usual to speak of money used in the business of a company, whether borrowed on debentures or raised by the sale of shares, as "capital." Held, also, as to the application of -Company-Act of directors-Unauthorized expenditure—Liability of innocent di-rectors.]—The directors of a limited company, without authority from the shareholders, passed a resolution providing that, in consideration of a firm of which two directors were members carrying on business of a similar character continuing the same until the company could take it over, the company indemnified it from all loss occasioned thereby. K. and F., two members of the firm, refused their assent to the terms of this resolution and declared their intention, of which the majority of the directors were made aware, to retire from the firm. F. subsequently wrote to the president and another director reiterating her intention to retire, and declared that she would not be responsible for any further liability. The company afterwards took over the business of the firm, paying therefor $30,000 and receiving assets worth $12,000, and having eventually gone into liquidation, the liquidator brought an action to recover from the members of the firm the difference. The Court of Appeal held that K. and F. were not liable, though their partners were:-Held, that K. and F., having received the benefit of the money paid by the company, were also liable to repay the loss.

The manager, who was a creditor of the company, was to have his debt secured and to receive an allotment of shares in the new company proportionate to those held by him in the old company, and he agreed that he would not reveal this understanding to the other shareholders:—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (11 B.C. Lasell v. Hannah, 37 Can. S.C.R. 324.

-False statement of earnings to directors -Payment of dividends - Damages.]-In an action by an incorporated company to recover from the executors of the deceased president of the company damages alleged to have been suffered by the company by reason of false and fraudulent representations made by the deceased:-Held, upon the evidence, that the statement of approximate earnings laid before the directors of the company by the deceased on the 15th December, 1902, and the annual statement presented by him to the directors on the 27th January, 1903, and afterwards to the shareholders, were untrue to his knowledge. and that the earnings for 1902 were wilfully misrepresented by him in order that the directors might be induced to declare dividends which they would not have declared had they been made aware of the true earnings, and that the directors acted upon the misrepresentations made to them in declaring five per cent. half-yearly dividends in January and July, 1903. Held, also, that the plaintiffs, the company, had suffered damages by reason of the payment of the dividends, notwithstanding that the payment was not made out of the actual fixed capital and was not ultra vires of the company, and notwithstanding that it was made to the persons who were then the shareholders of the company; the company having parted with sums of money which, but for the misrepresentations, would still have been at the company's credit. Damages were assessed against the estate of the deceased in the sum of $34,500, made up by taking the amount of the misrepresentation at the end of December, 1902, to have been roundly $30,000, and adding three years' interest at five per cent. It was urged by the defendants against the credibility of the principal witness for the plaintiffs, that having, at the instance of the plaintiffs, though before this action was brought or contemplated, and while the president was still alive, made a statutory declaration as to the truth of the facts which he afterwards deposed to at the trial, he was in vinculis, and was not free to vary from it except at the risk of a prosecution for perjury:—Held, that the taking of unnecessary statutory declarations is a practice which should be avoided, and in this case a simple signed statement would have been as effectual; but the witness was en-

-Executory contract-Corporate seal-Authority of general manager.]-By letter, signed by their managing-director, the defendants, a joint stock company, agreed to furnish the plaintiffs malleable iron coupler parts of their manufacture as might be ordered, the letter being subscribed "accepted" by the plaintiffs. No by-law had been passed defining the general powers of the Board of Directors or of the managing-director of the defendant company except as to borrowing for the purpose of the business. The managing-di-rector did not consult the Board before signing the letter and there was no formal subsequent approval or disapproval by the Board of what had been done. The managing-director knew that to carry out the contract a substantial extension of the defendants' plant and premises would be necessary, and the plaintiffs also knew this. But there was no evidence that they knew anything about the defendants' capital or commercial circumstances, or their ability to furnish the additional plant:-Held, that in the absence of bad faith or notice the plaintiffs were entitled to assume that the managing-director was authorized to enter into the agreement, which when orders were actually given by the plaintiffs, became a binding contract and one to which the Board of Directors would have had power to bind the company. Held, also, that the circumstance that the contract required an increased plant for its full performance was not in itself sufficient to render it ultra vires; though it would have been otherwise if such increased plant had been required to carry on a new or different business from that then being carried on by the company. As it was, the supplying such additional plant would fall under the head of "Management" and would therefore be within the general scope of the directors' authority. Held, also, that there was no need of the corporate seal although the contract was an executory contract. Held, therefore, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover so far as they had given orders for the couplers under the contract.

-Directors-Transfer of shares before first payment made to insolvent persons -Breach of duty.]-On the issue of letters patent under the Ontario Companies Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 191, incorporating a com-pany, the directors subscribed for stock, making no provision, however, for the payment nor making any calls thereon-while applications for stock by others were only accepted on their paying 25 per cent. on subscription and 25 per cent. on allotment. Subsequently, and some time before the company was declared insolvent, the directors, knowing of its insolvent condition, and desiring to get rid of their stock, on which nothing had been paid, employed the promoter of the company to procure persons willing to take the stock. He accordingly procured five persons, whom he knew were of little or no substance, and as to whom he had carefully abstained from any inquiry, to take all of the directors' stock, except one share each on which they could qualify and make the transfers, informing the transferees that they would become directors, and, as to four of them, that they would incur no liability on the stock; as he would arrange for its disposal. The purchasers gave their promissory notes for the first 25 per cent., payable in six months without interest, before the transfers were made, payable to the company itself in-stead of to the directors, the object being that they should be treated as payment of the 25 per cent. for which the directors were liable:—Held, that the transfers were invalid, as being made contrary to s. 30 of the Act before all calls had been paid, the liability of the directors for the 25 per cent. being substantially the same as a call; and also in that the directors were guilty of a breach of trust in not exercising their powers in the best interests of the company by taking special care and caution in procuring responsible transferees. The directors were therefore directed to be placed on the list of contributories for this stock.

-Directors-Reduction of numbers of-Preferred shares—Issue of—By-law—Resolution.]—The Ontario Companies R.S.O. 1897, c. 191, s. 45, provides that a company may by by-law increase or decrease the number of its directors, but no such by-law shall be valid or acted upon unless sanctioned by vote of not less than two-thirds in value of the shareholders at a meeting of the company duly called for considering the subject, nor until a copy certified under the company's seal has been transmitted to the Provincial Secretary and published in the Gazette. By section 22 it is enacted that the directors may make a by-law for creating and issuing any part of the capital stock as preference stock, but no such by-law shall have any force or effect whatever until after it has been unanimously sanctioned by a vote of the shareholders present or represented at a general meeting duly called for considering the same, or unanimously sanctioned in writing by the shareholders, or approved by the Lieutenant-Governor as therein provided. The plaintiff company, at its first general meeting of shareholders, at which all of the existing shareholders, being the five persons named as provisional directors in the letters patent of incorporation, were present, unanimously adopted a resolution that the number of the directors of the company should be four, and thereupon four of the provisional directors were elected directors. Another motion was then earried authorizing the directors to arrange for terms and conditions of sale of stock, preferred and common, and to allot or dispose of the same on such terms as Thereupon the four they deemed best. directors immediately held a meeting, elected officers and adopted a form of application for preferred stock. It was then moved and carried "that we offer for sale not more than 1,500 shares of the company to be sold as preferred stock of the company at par value at $10 per share, etc." Immediately after this directors' meeting the shareholders' meeting was resumed, all shareholders being present, and the full minutes, resolutions, etc., of the Board of Directors were presented and confirmed unanimously. Some two months afterwards the first annual general meeting of the company was held, when a motion was carried that the shareholders "approve and confirm the sale by the directors of $3,900 of the preferred capital stock of the company, and hereby authorize the directors to make any further sales of the said preferred capital stock that they may deem necessary in the interests of the com-pany: "-Held, that the preferred shares had not been properly and validly issued, for s. 45 above mentioned, with regard to decreasing the number of directors, had not been complied with; and although if the motion for issue of preferred shares carried at the directors' meeting amounted to a by-law, although in form only a resolution-which was very doubtful-s. 22 required that such a by-law should be passed by the directors first and then confirmed by the shareholders, thus prescribing consideration twice, and by two different bodies, acting in different capacities; and, moreover, the resolution did not create any specified number of shares as preferred shares, as it should have done, but left uncertain not only the amount of preferred stock, but also the amount of common stock. Held, therefore, in this action, in which the plaintiff sued the defendant upon a note given for the amount due in respect of certain preferred shares alleged to have been alloted to him, that as there were in fact under the above circumstances no such shares to allot, there had been a total failure of consideration for the note, and the action must be dismissed. Semble, that where an application for shares contains an absolute covenant to pay, notification of withdrawal before allotment is invalid.

- Shares - Payment - Disbursements of secretary-treasurer - Credit in company's books-Set-off.] - The appellant was secretary-treasurer of the company and the holder of shares upon which 50 per cent. of the value had been paid. On the 6th October, 1905, the balance due upon the shares, $275, was called up by the directors, and was payable on the 10th October. The appellant on the 31st December, 1905, entered to his credit in the company's cash-book, for "services rendered," $275, thereby showing his shares as having been paid up in full. In fact, the company at that date owed the appellant $271.06, moneys properly disbursed for the company. The appellant acted in good faith. A windingup order was made on the 31st March, 1906, and it was sought to make the appellant liable as a contributory in respect of the whole balance of $275:—Held, that the disbursements made by the appellant constituted a good payment in fact upon his shares, and that the effect was the same as if he had credited the sums from time to time as they were disbursed. It was not necessary to consider the effect of the winding-up order upon the general right of -Prospectus - Misrepresentation - Agent -Liability of directors—Rescission of contract to purchase shares-Delay.]-Where a broker employed by a company to sell shares in its capital stock, issues, though without the knowledge or authority of the company, a prospectus containing untrue material statements, on the strength of which shares are purchased, the purchase money being paid to the company, the purchaser may rescind the contract as against the company, the broker's statements being binding on his principal as made within the scope and course of his employment. A broker employed by a company to seil shares in its capital stock, issued a prospectus stating, among other things, that while in the past the company's earnings had been applied to the improvement of its property, "henceforth it is the intention to declare regular half-yearly dividends as the net earnings of the business will warrant. In view of past results, and the very favourable prospects for increased earnings, shareholders can with confidence look forward to receiving satisfactory returns on their investments in the shape of dividends." No mention was made of the debts or assets of the company. It owed a large sum to its bankers, but its assets considerably exceeded its liabilities: - Held, that the statement amounting to no more than an announcement of policy, and which the directors were at liberty to pursue, a company having power, though in debt, to pay dividends out of profits, the failure to disclose the indebtedness to the bankers did not render the statement misleading. there also being no duty to disclose in the prospectus the assets and liabilities of the company. Directors adopting a resolution to sell shares in the capital stock of the company and to employ a broker for the purpose held not responsible in damages for misrepresentation in a prospectus is-sued by a broker employed by them under the resolution, at the instance of a purchaser of shares who had purchased in reliance upon the prospectus the prospectus having been issued without their knowledge or authority, and the broker being the agent of the company. The plaintiff learned on January 24, 1904, that material representations, upon which he had been induced to purchase shares in the defendant company on June 24, 1903, were untrue. On February 16, and on March 8, he demanded at meetings of the company a return of the purchase money. Neither demand was assented to, and on April 13. the company communicated to him a formal refusal. A suit for reseission was commenced by him on December 27, following. Held, that the suit was barred by delay.

-Liability of directors for wages.]-(1) Persons who accept transfers of shares in a company incorporated under the Manitoba Joint Stock Companies Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 30; and are elected and act as directors of the company, cannot escape the liability for wages of employees imposed upon directors by s. 33 of the Act by showing that they do not hold the shares absolutely in their own right, but only as security or in trust, notwithstanding that, under s. 27 of the Act, such persons are not legally qualified to be directors. (2) The provisions of s. 33 are remedial and not penal in their nature, being only the withholding from directors, in respect of wages, of the freedom which the statute would otherwise give them from personal liability for all debts of the company.

—Sale by auction of shares pledged—Notice of sale to shareholders only.]—The pledgee who is authorized by the contract to dispose of the thing pledged in default of payment of the debt and to apply the proceeds thereto, can only do so by a public sale duly advertised. Where a number of shares in a joint stock company were pledged with the above covenant, a sale of them by auction, at which the pledgee bought them for less than their value, of which notice was given by private circular to the other shareholders of the company only, was not such a "disposing" of them as was intended by the contract.

-Election of directors-Proxies - By-law regulating-By-law proper for directors-General power of shareholders.]-Action by certain shareholders of a company, on behalf of themselves and all other shareholders, except the individual defendants, to have the election of the latter as directors set aside for irregularity:-Held, that the action must be dismissed unless the plaintiffs obtained the consent of the company to sue in the company's name; as, however, the company was a party defendant and all necessary parties before the Court it was proper to dispose of the case on the merits, conditionally on such consent being obtained and the record amended. Under s. 47 of the Ontario Companies Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 191 (7 Edw. VII. c. 34, s. 87), by-laws regulating the requirements as to proxies are to be made by directors, and shall have force only until the next annual meeting of the company, and, unless confirmed thereat, shall cease to have force. The shareholders, themselves, therefore have no power to initiate and pass such a by-law at general meeting; and, in the absence of any valid by-law regulating the matter, rothing more is necessary to a proxy than valid execution by the shareholder.

-Shares-Forfeiture for non-payment of call—Promissory note—Non-presentment.] -The plaintiff, in subscribing for 10 shares of the capital stock of the defendants, an incorporated company, covenanted under seal to pay $12.50 per share and 'all other calls, if any, as the same may from time to time be made.'' He paid the $12.50 and an additional call of 21/2 per cent., and received a stock certificate. The defendants subsequently made a call of 5 per cent., and, in writing to the plaintiff requesting him to pay $50 therefor, they offered to take a promissory note for that amount, and enclosed a blank note for the purpose, stating in the letter that the giving of a note simply meant an extension of time for payment, and that in the event of non-payment the shares would be liable to be forfeited. The plaintiff filled up and signed the note, but made some alterations therein—one being the addition of the words "at the Molsons Bank, market branch." This was accepted by the defendants, but was not presented for payment at the branch indicated, where the plaintiff at all times had a sufficient balance to pay it, and it was not paid. The board of directors thereupon purported to forfeit the plaintiff's shares, and notified the plaintiff of the forfeiture:-Held, that, giving effect to the notice in accordance with which the note was sent, and consequently to the terms of which the plaintiff must be considered to have agreed, the sole effect of the note was to give time to pay the debt; and, the debt admittedly not having been paid at the due date of the note, the defendants were within their legal rights in forfeiting the shares. But, if there were no such condition, the most that could be said was that the note was given for and on account of the debt, and the only effect of non-presentment upon such a note is upon the question of costs (Bills of Exchange Act, s. 183); the note is, quoad the debtor, a promise to pay generally; and the debt, as the note became overdue and was unpaid and unproductive in the hands of the creditor, revived. Dictum of Armour, C.J., in Merchants Bank of Canada v. Henderson (1897), 28 O.R. 360, followed. -Liability of shareholders for calls on stock - Allotment - Validity of acts of board of directors when some of their number disqualified-Election of directors without balloting.]-(1) Subscribers for shares in the stock of a company who have already paid one call cannot be heard to deny the allotment of their shares. (2) The production of a certificate of indebtedness for unpaid calls on stock in a company incorporated by letters patent under the Manitoba Joint Stock Companies Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 30, made in accordance with g. 53 of the Act, is prima facie evidence of notice of the call as well as of the other matters referred to in that section. (3) The presence on the board of directors of such a company of three who were not qualified, by reason of being in arrears in respect of unpaid calls at the time of their election, is not sufficient to invalidate the acts of the board if done by a legal quorum of properly qualified directors. (4) Although the Act requires that the election of directors shall be by ballot, an election by unanimous vote without balloting will be valid if no more than the necessary number are nominated.

A suit for rescission was commenced by him on December 27, following:-Held, affirming the judgment of the Court below, that the suit was barred by delay; that directors who adopted a resolution to sell shares of the company and to employ a broker for the purpose are not responsible in damages for misrepresentations in a prospectus issued by the broker, to a holder of shares who had purchased relying upon the prospectus, it having been issued by the broker without their authority as the agent of the com-

Farrell v. Portland Rolling Mills Co., 38 N.B.R. 364.

-Lien on shares for debt due to company -Power to make by-law providing for lien -Estoppel-Waiver.]-A company incor-porated under the Manitoba Joint Stock Companies Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 30, has, by virtue of s. 41 of the Act, power to make a by-law providing that a lien shall exist upon the shares of any stockholder for any debt or liability to the company; and, if such by-law has been passed, the company may maintain such lien as against an execution creditor of a stockholder whose shares have been seized by the sheriff under execution. The shares in question, which were not fully paid up, stood in the name of defendant's wife, but the plaintiff on the first day of May, 1907, recovered a judgment against the defendant, his wife and the company declaring that the said shares were the absolute property of the defendant Mitchell and available under execution in satisfaction of the plaintiff's judgment. At that time a note given to the company for the balance due on the shares was held by the bank in which it had been discounted; but, before the time of the seizure of the shares by the sheriff, that note had fallen due and had been taken up by the company:-Held, that, at the time of the recovery of the last mentioned judgment, there was no debt due from Mitchell or his wife to the company for which the company could then have set up a lien, and it was not estopped by the judgment from setting up the lien as soon as it had taken up the note. Held, also, that the right to the lien had not been waived or lost by the taking and discount ing of a promissory note for the debt for which the lien was claimed.

Montgomery v. Mitchell, 18 Man. R. 37.

-Directors-Increase of capital stock-Allotment of new shares by directors to them selves at par.]—The directors of an electric railway company passed a by-law increasing the capital stock by 2,000 shares, and this was sanctioned by a majority of twothirds in value of the body of shareholders at a meeting. The first batch of 350 shares the directors ex parte allotted at par to five of themselves, and also allotted the remaining 1,650 to the same five, but after issuing a circular to the body of shareholders, whereby the latter were invited to state whether they desired to increase their holdings, and wherein it was set forth that such shares migut be allotted as seemed to the directors desirable and necessary. The plaintiff and other shareholders acting with him made no response except by way of protest. By the company's Act of Incorporation, 56 Viet. c. 95, ss. 13 and 46 (O.), the capital stock could be increased, and certain traffic and other arrangements with other companies could be permitted, only upon approval by two-thirds in value of the shareholders. The directors did not wish or intend to allot the new stock among the shareholders pro rata, but so to deal with the last 1,650 shares as to appropriate for themselves enough shares to give them more than a two-thirds majority in value of shareholders:—Held, that the minority shareholders were not required to submit to the form of application proposed by the circular; there was not recognition of any right on the part of existing shareholders to claim a pro rata division of the proposed new issue, and at this time, by the appropriation of the 350 shares, the minority had become less than one-third in value of the shareholders; and, therefore, the plaintiff was not precluded from seeking relief in respect of the total issue and allotment of the new stock. The only statutory direction affecting this company as to the allotment of stock is in the general Railway Act of Ontario, R.S.O. 1897, c. 207 (incorporated with the special Act), s. 34 (16) of which enacts that the directors shall make by-laws for the management and disposition of stock, not in-consistent with the laws of the Province; but no by-laws appeared to have been made with relation to the allotment or disposal of new shares. Held, that the disposal made by the directors of the new shares was not within the general powers and functions of the directors of such companies; it was a one-sided allotment of stock, which ignored the just claims of many shareholders, and in effect amounted to a prejudicial encroachment on the voting power of the minority; it was not within the power conferred upon the directors by s.6 of the Act of incorporation, to exclude any one from subscribing for stock who, in their judgment, would hinder, delay, or prevent the company from proceeding with and completing their undertaking under the provisions of the Act; and, therefore, the allotment should be declared invalid, and the defendants be restrained from voting upon the increased capital shares. The plaintiff was allowed his general costs, although he had alleged fraud, and had not established it; any costs arising from the charge of fraud were excluded.

—Directors—Action to recover amount improperly paid by officer of company—Wrongful dismissal—Damages.]—The directors of plaintiff company paid defendant, the manager and secretary of the company, a commission for services rendered in connection with the conversion of preferred stock of the company into bonds. Defendant would have been bound under the terms of his employment to render the services in question without compensation beyond the amount of his salary and expenses. In the absence of evidence of ratification by the shareholders:—Held, that the company was entitled to recover back the amount paid. Defendant counter-claimed damages for wrongful dismissal and judgment was given in his favour for his salary for the unexpired portion of his year. The dismissal took place on the 1st May, 1905, and the current year of service expired Nov. 2nd of the same year. Defendant appealed against the order for judgment in which the amount fixed covered only five months' salary instead of six months as claimed. Held, that the appeal must be allowed with costs, and the amount increased as claimed. Held, also, that the burden was upon plaintiff of showing that defendant might have obtained other employment and so reducing the damages.

Sydney Land & Loan Co., Ltd., v. Rountree, 42 N.S.R. 49.

Shares—Transfer on company's books— Mandamus to enforce transfer.]-The owner of two shares of stock in the defendants' railway, assigned them to the plaintiff, endorsing the assignment on the certificate. The plaintiff called at the head office and demanded that the necessary transfer should be made on the company's books, and also saw the president; and after some correspondence, the transfer not having been made, he procured a duplicate assignment of the stock, and placed the matter in the hands of his solicitor, who thereupon wrote the company demanding a transfer, and enclosed one of the duplicate assignments, and stated that he would attend on a named hour, ready to surrender the certificate, and have the transfer completed. and, on receiving a reply that it could not be attended to, this action was brought, in which an order for a mandamus was claimed. An interlocutory order made by a Judge in Chambers directing a mandamus to issue, was, on appeal to the Divisional Court, set aside, and the matter left for decision at the trial.

-Representations by agent of promoters-Company not liable for where not expressly adopted.]-Plaintiffs were induced to sign an agreement to take stock in a proposed company upon the representation of P., acting for the promoters in securing subscrip-tions, that one of the plaintiffs G. would be appointed agent and representative of the company for the Province of Prince Edward Island. After the incorporation of the company, notices were sent out to subscribers requiring payment of a first call upon the stock subscribed for by them. Plaintiffs paid the amount of the call, but subsequently, the company having refused to appoint G. as their agent, as agreed by P. at the time the agreement to take shares was signed, claimed a rescission of the contract and a return of the money paid by them:-Held, that plaintiffs could not recover. in the capital stock of an industrial company on the faith of statements in a prospectus prepared by a broker employed to sell them. In January, 1904, he attended a meeting of shareholders and from something he heard there suspected that some of said statements were untrue. After investigation he demanded back his money from the broker and wrote to the president and secretary of the company repudiating his purchase. At subsequent meetings of shareholders he repeated such repudiation and demand for repayment and in December, 1904, brought suit for rescission:-Held, that his delay, from January to December, 1904, in bringing suit was not a bar and he was entitled to recover against the company. Held, also, that he could not recover against the directors who had instructed the broker to sell the shares as they were not responsible for the misrepresentations in the prospectus. - Sale of shares - Misrepresentation -Fraud-Action for deceit.]-G. a director in an industrial company transferred 290 shares of the capital stock to the president to be sold for him. The president instructed an agent to sell said shares along with some of his own and some belonging to the company. The agent sold 25 shares of G.'s stock to J. G. representing and believing, that it was treasury stock and getting a note for the price in favour of the company. The note was indorsed over to G. Later J. G. discovered that the stock he had bought was not treasury stock and had some correspondence with the secretary of the company in which he complained of having been deceived by the agent. Eventually he gave a four months' note in renewal of that given for the price of the stock but when it fell due refused to pay it the company having in the meantime become insolvent. In an action on the renewal note he filed a counterclaim for damage based on the misrepresentation and deceit. Judgment was given against him or the note and for him on the counterclaim:-Held, that G. was responsible for the fraud practised on the purchaser of his shares by the misrepresentations of the agent who sold them. Held, also, that the settlement of the claim for the price of the shares by giving the renewal note and thus obtaining further time for payment was not a release of the purchaser's right of action for deceit.

—Remuneration of officers—Retrospective remuneration.]—The Act of incorporation of a charitable society provided that the corporation might assign to any of its officers such remuneration as they might deem requisite:—Held, that a grant by the shareholders at an annual meeting to the treasurer of a sum of money as remuneration of his services during the past 30 years was intra vires under the above section.

-Transfer of shares-Agreement not to transfer.]-In the absence of a prohibition in the charter or by-laws of a joint stock company incorporated under the Companies Act of Canada the holder of shares in the stock of the company can sell or transfer them and the transferee may demand registration, as provided by law, of the sale or transfer so made to him. An agreement among all the shareholders of a company that shares shall only be sold or transferred under certain conditions cannot stand in the place of a by-law forbidding a sale and is of no effect as against third parties who may acquire shares. One who acts as prêté-nom of another has only the status of mandataire as respects his principal. As to third parties he remains the main person interested and may exercise against them the remedies arising out of contracts made in his name. Therefore, if he acquires shares in a joint stock company he is entitled to a mandamus to compel the company to register the sale or transfer made to him.

—Subscription for shares—Acceptance and allotment—Allotment to third party.]—The subscription for shares in the capital stock of a joint stock company becomes a contract when the company accepts and allotment may be by implication as well as express. Hence, the transfer to a third party of the amount paid for shares applied for, followed by notice to the subscriber, is an acceptance of the subscription and an implied allotment of the stock.

tion of securities-Powers of company-By-law.]-The defendant was induced to subscribe for one share of the stock of an incorporated manufacturing company and to give a promissory note for the amount of the par value thereof, by a false and fraudulent representation made by an agent of The note showed on its the company. face that it was given for a share in the company, and it was indorsed to the order of the plaintiffs, a chartered bank, by an indorsement in the name of the company, with the name of the secretary thereof signed thereto. A by-law was passed by the directors of the company, and confirmed by the shareholders at an annual meeting, authorizing the borrowing of money, following the words of s. 49 of R.S.O. 1897, c. 191. It was also resolved by the directors, and confirmed by the shareholders, that an account be opened with the plaintiffs; that all moneys, orders, and other securities belonging to the company and usually deposited in the ordinary course of banking be deposited in said bank account; that the san e might be withdrawn therefrom by cheque, bill, or acceptance in the name of the company, over the names of any two of four specified officers (one being the secretary); and that for all purposes connected with the making of deposits in the bank account, the signature of any one of the four should be sufficient. By a memorandum over the seal of the company and the hands of three of the officers, it was agreed that the plaintiffs should hold all the company's securities at any time in the plaintiffs' possession as collateral security for present and future indebtedness; and it appeared that the note above referred to, upon which this action was brought, with a large number of others, was delivered to the plaintiffs as a collateral security, accordingly. The secretary was also a director of the company, and indorsed notes, as he indorsed that in question, almost daily, with the knowledge cf his co-directors, for a year and a half :-Held, that the by-law was sufficient to authorize the hypothecation of the company's securities to secure the present and future indebtedness of the company to the plaintiffs; that the indorsement over the signature of the secretary was sufficient to pass the property in the note to the plaintiffs; that the plaintiffs were entitled to assume that a share had been properly allotted to the defendant, and that the note represented the debt due by him to the company for such share, and that the company had the right to negotiate it; and (upon the evidence) that the plaintiffs were holders in due course, for value, without notice of the fraud, and were entitled to recover.

Shares—Sale—Transfer — Registration. -The plaintiff purchased from the defendants 1,000 shares of mining stock, and received from them a certificate for that number of shares, made out in favour of one C., and by him indorsed with a transfer in blank:-Held, that this completed the duty of the defendants as sellers, and it was not incumbent upon them to see that the plaintiff should become registered as owner of the shares upon the books of the company; but they were under obligation to do nothing to prevent the plaintiff from having the shares registered in his name. The plaintiff, having contracted to sell the shares at a profit, endeavored to have himself registered as the owner of 1.000 shares and to obtain two certificates for 500 shares each, which were required by the plaintiff's vendee as a term of his purchase, but was refused registration because of an injunction, obtained by the defendants, restraining the transfer agents of the mining company from registering any transfers of shares standing in the name of C. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendants as damages the difference between the price at which he had contracted to sell the shares and the price which he afterwards obtained when the injunction was dissolved and he was registered as owner of the shares.

Boultbee v. Wills, 15 O.L.R. 227 (D.C.).

-Sale of shares-Resolution of company empowering president to sell-Note given for purchase price-Note and shares placed in bank in escrow pending payment of the note.]-Defendant purchased 50 shares in plaintiff company, giving his note for $5,000 therefor, payable 10 days after date, signing at the same time an application for the shares. There was some evidence of an arrangement between defendant and the president of the company that defendant was to be employed as a foreman by the company, and that if he proved unable to perform the work, the president would take back the shares and refund the money. Apparently there was no formal allotment of the shares by the company, beyond a resolution empowering the president to dispose of the shares, but the president placed the shares and the note in escrow in the bank, the shares to be delivered up on payment of the note:-Held, that upon the signing of the application and the delivery of the note, the defendant became the owner of the 50 shares, with power to forthwith validly assign them to anyone else, or to have bound himself to do so on the issue of the certificates if the company's articles of association required indorsement of the certificates; and that there was no notice of allotment necessary.

—Application for charter—Subscription for stock.]—One who joins with others in an application for incorporation of a joint stock company and permits his name to be rentioned in the letters patent as subscribers for a specific number of shares is a shareholder and cannot, in case the company is wound up, repudiate his liability as a contributor on the ground that the company was never formally organized and could not, therefore, incur the obligations which brought it into liquidation.

Lafleur v. Saint-Amour, Q.R. 18 K.P. 400.

-Broker-Purchase of shares for customer on margin—Hypothecation—Conversion.]— The defendants, who were brokers, purchased for the plaintiff certain shares of the stock of incorporated companies; she paid them a small portion of the purchase money therefor, and owed them the bal-ance, the defendants being entitled to hold the shares until the plaintiff paid them the amount owing in respect thereof. The defendants borrowed, on the security of these shares and of others, a sum of money in excess of the amount owing by the plaintiff. After the lapse of some months the plaintiff applied to the defendants for the shares, and, upon her paying the amount claimed by the defendants as due in respect thereof, they were at once transferred to her. At no time was delivery wrongfully withheld from her, and she sustained no actual damage because of the hypothecation of the shares. It was contended by the plaintiff, however, that upon hypothecation of the shares by the defendants, there was a conversion, and that all moneys paid by her on account of the purchase money were recoverable as damages in an action of deceit-that the defendants had so dealt with the plaintiff's property that the could not in an action of trover, be allowed to deliver the shares in mitigation of damages:-Held, that the plaintiff was not damaged by the hypothecation of the shares, and there was, therefore, no misrepresentation which gave her a cause for action. The delivery of the shares to her annulled the effect of their previous technical conversion, and restored both parties to their former positions, thus leaving the plaintiff in debt to the defendants for the unpaid purchase money. An agreement to pay the interest charged was implied from her conduct and same could not be recovered by plaintiff. Clark v. Baillie, 19 O.L.R. 545.

-"Prospectus"—Advertisement — Director—Penalty.]—A mining company incorporated on the 17th November, 1908, pursuant to the provisions of the Ontario Companies Act, 7 Edw. VII. c. 34, filed a prospectus with the Provincial Secretary on the 27th November, 1908, and subsequently inserted in certain newspapers an advertisement, for which the defendant, one of the directors, was responsible, giving particulars about the organization of the company, the mining lands owned by the company, and the operations of the company, and stating that shares were for sale at a named price, but not complying in all respects with the requirements of the Act as regards a prospectus, and not filed with the Provincial Secretary:—Held, that the advertisement was a "prospectus" within the meaning of s. 99 of the Act, being an advertisement designed to accomplish the purpose mentioned in s. 95 (1), and that the defendant was liable to the penalty imposed by s. 100. Semble, that an advertisement merely stating that a company are offering shares for sale, and that a prospectus can be obtained upon application, would be a "prospectus" within the meaning of the Act.

-Directors allotting themselves shares as fully paid up-Malfeasance.]-An original subscriber and provisional director of a company who had only paid $25 on account joined with the other provisional directors in passing a resolution, at the organization meeting of the company in 1902, that the shares of capital stock subscribed for by them should be allotted to them as fully paid up, which was done. In 1904 he transferred his shares, receiving therefor the sum of $125 more than he had paid. In 1906 the shares were forfeited, by resolution of the directors, for non-payment of a call of 100 per cent. made upon them: -Held, in winding-up proceedings (Meredith, J.A., dissenting as to the measure of damages), that the original subscriber for the shares was liable as for breach of trust under s. 123 of the Winding-up Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 144, in assuming to accept the shares as fully paid up; but the measure of damages was the market value of the shares at the date of the allotment, and the sum of $125 was all that he was liable for in this proceeding. Per Meredith, J.A .: - The measure of damages was the par value of the shares.

—Action of shareholders—Control of Court.]—Outside of the case specially provided for by the charter of a joint stock company the will of the majority of shareholders, lawfully expressed, respecting the affairs of the company should generally prevail. Nevertheless, if what they propose implies the abandonment of the enterprise or cessation of its independent working or a deviation from the charter as to its business purposes such as the assignment, sale or even lease for several years of the franchises, factories, etc., it must be to the manifest interest of all the shareholders before the minority can be bound by it. The Superior Court, with its powers of control and reformation (Art. 50 C.P.Q.) may at any time, on application of a shareholder, inquire into the circumstances and annul the proceedings if not clearly to the equal advantage of all, perfectly honest and in the company's interest and especially if there appears to be a fraudulent combination for purposes of speculation profitable to a part only of the shareholders even if it is the majority. Amyot v. Dominion Cotton Mills, Q.R.

-Forfeiture of shares-Abandonment by acquiescence in forfeiture.]-The plaintiff, H. A. Jones, one of the original shareholders of the defendant company, organized in 1891, transferred 240 shares to his wife, the co-plaintiff, Clara B. Jones, on September 26th, 1893, and on the same day took an assignment of the same shares from her to himself. The assignment was never registered. The par value of the shares was $100, on which 80 per cent. had been paid and notice was given to her requiring her to pay a call of 21/2 per cent., payable on June 14th following, with the usual penalty of forfeiture in case of default. Default was made, and the shares were declared de-linquent, were offered for sale, but there being no bid, were withdrawn. In March, 1896 (new by-laws having been adopted in the meantime), a call of 6 per cent. was made on all shares, including those of the plaintiff, Clara B. Jones. Default was made and in due course the shares were declared delinquent. In April, 1897, a further call of 9 per cent. was made. On the 21st of May, 1898, a resolution was passed by the directors that Mrs. Jones be served with a notice requiring her to pay the call of 21/2 per cent. by the 24th of June, and that in the event of default the shares would be forfeited. At a meeting of the directors on the 25th of June, a resolution of forfeiture, reciting the facts, was put, when Mrs. Jones' husband and co-plaintiff, who was present and a director, offered to pay $100 on account if the shares were not forfeited for six months. This offer was refused and the resolution was passed. In May, 1907, Mrs. Jones' solicitors inquired of the company whether the shares had been forfeited, and offering to pay up the arrears, but were informed that the shares had been forfeited. She then brought action:-Held, on appeal, that the plaintiff Clara B. Jones had elected to abandon the undertaking by acquiescing in the forfeiture at a time when the company's prospects were doubtful, and such abandonment could not be recalled when it was found that the company was prosperous.

- Ownership of shares—Assignment of revenue—New issue.]—A. held a number of shares in the capital stock of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. of which B. was entitled to the revenue. The company made a new issue and each present holder was entitled to subscribe for one share for every five of his holding. A. subscribed for and was allotted shares in the new issue:-Held, that the latter shares were not revenue from the original holding but an augmentation of the capital. They were, therefore, the property of A. not of B.

-Directors-Discretion of as to purchaser and price of shares.]-At a meeting of the directors of an incorporated company they allotted all the unissued shares, being 40 per cent. of the capital stock, to the secretary of the company at par, he having subscribed for them, and immediately afterwards he disposed of a number of these shares at par to the directors individually. No shares had been sold for three years previously, and in the meantime the company's real estate had greatly increased in value, and the plaintiff had recently purchased a large number of shares, nearly all at a premium, and some at a premium of 150 per cent.:—Held, that this transaction by the directors was not illegal, as the shares were allotted bona fide to the secretary with intent to further the company's interests and without intent on the part of the directors to profit personally thereby; that the directors were acting within their powers when they exercised their discretion and sold shares at par which might have brought a premium; and that they were not obliged to offer the unissued shares to all shareholders pro rata or put them up at auction before disposing of them to one shareholder at par.

In an action by the assignee of the purchaser, without tendering the price, to recover back the deposit as the bonds were not ready for delivery at due date:-Held, that as the evidence showed that the purchaser or his assignee was responsible for the non-production and non-completion thereof, there was default by him in pay709

-Sale of stock-Evidence of title-Duty of vendor-Defective certificate.]-When shares in the stock of a company are sold for cash and a certificate delivered with a form of transfer indorsed purporting to be signed by the holder named therein who is not the seller, the latter must be taken to affirm that a title which will enable the purchaser to become the legal holder is vested in him by virtue of such certificate and transfer. A transfer was signed by the wife of the holder at his direction but not acted upon until after his death:— Held, that the authority of the wife to deal with the certificate was revoked by the holder's death and on a cash sale of the shares the purchaser who received the certificate and transfer so signed being unable, under the company's rules, to be registered as holder had a right of action to recover back the purchase money from the seller. The fact that the purchaser endeavoured to have himself registered as holder of the shares was not an acceptance by him of the contract of sale which deprived him of his right of action to have it rescinded. Nor was his action barred by loss of the defective certificate by no fault of his nor of the seller. Judgment appealed from (13 B.C.R. 351) reversed. Castleman v. Waghorn, 41 Can. S.C.R. 88.

-Petition for incorporation-Memorandum of agreement—Subscription to previous memorandum—Withdrawal of subscription.]-A company was incorporated under the Ontario Companies Act, R S.O. 1897, c. 191, on April 4th, 1907. One R. did not s.gn the memorandum accompanying the petition as prescribed by s. 10, sub-s. 2, of that Act, but he had signed a memorandum in the same form subscribing for $500 of steck in the proposed company, and alleged that this subscription was not meant to bind him unless the company attempted to buy out a certain rival business, and, this not being done, he notified the company before it was organized that he would not take the shares. In 1907 the company drew on him for calls, but he refused to accept the drafts. In January, 1908, for the first time, the company allotted stock to R., and he attended a meeting of the shareholders on April 6th, 1908, but only to protest against his being considered to be one. No stock certificate was issued to him:-Held, that since the memorandum which R. signed was not the memorandum which accompanied the petition for incorporation, he did not become a shareholder by virtue of the statute, and he was not liable as a contributory on the winding-up of the com-pany. It was estab-lished in evidence that the transaction was for the purpose of retaining control of the company, in order that it might be carried on for the purposes for which it was organized. It was also established that the plaintiff had previously purchased a large number of shares, for many of which he had paid a premium:—Held, that this allotment of shares by the directors was not illegal, as the transaction was bona fide, and not ultra vires of the corporation itself; that the directors were acting within their powers when they exercised their discretion, and in the interest of the whole body of shareholders sold shares at par which might have brought a premium. Held, that as no fraud had been shown, and relief was sought only for the com-pany, the bill should have been filed in the name of the company itself.

There was some evidence of an arrangement between the defendant and the president of the company that defendant was to be employed as foreman by the company, and that if he proved unable to perform the work, the president would take back the shares and refund the money. ering the president to dispose of the shares, but the president placed the shares and the note in escrow in the bank, the shares to be delivered up on payment of the note:—Held, affirming the judgment of Hunter, C.J., that upon the signing of the application and the delivery of the note the defendant became the owner of the shares.

-Sale of shares—Resolutive condition— Hypothecary security.]-By the judgment appealed from (Q.R. 18 K.B. 63), affirming the judgment of the Superior Court (Q.B. 30 S.C. 56), it was held that the acceptance of a proposal to purchase shares in a joint stock company for a price payable half in bonds and half in the stock of a new company to be formed to take over the business of the first mentioned company, on condition that the shares so sold should be deposited in trust as security for the payment of the bonds and that, so soon as all the shares of that company were so deposited and its real estate transferred to the new company, a mortgage on the real estate should be executed to secure payment of the bonds, was a sale subject to a resolutive condition to become complete and effective only in the event of the new company acquiring the property of the first company and executing the mortgage, and that, on breach of the condition respecting the security to be given for payment of the bonds, the sale became ineffective and should be rescinded. —Shares—Application—Allotment —Withdrawal of application—By-laws—Number of directors.]—At a general meeting of the shareholders of the plaintiff company, incorporated under the Ontario Companies Act, it was resolved that a board of three directors should be elected to manage the affairs of the company, and three of the five provisional directors were elected as directors. The three directors met and adopted by-laws, one of which provided that the affairs of the company should be managed by a board of five directors, and another provided for the terms upon which stock subscriptions should be received. About ten months later, a document in the form of an agreement to purchase stock was signed by the plaintiff, and the words "accepted by" written at the foot over the signature of one of the three directors, who had been elected president and general manager; and at a meeting of the directors a resolution was passed giving to the president full power to deal with the defend-ant's "application." On the following day the president wrote to the defendant notifying him that calls had been made upon the shares subscribed for by him, "which have this day been allotted to you by by-law of this company." Nothing further was done in the way of allotting shares to the defendant and the name did not appear in the register of shareholders. About two weeks after the receipt of the president's letter, the defendant wrote to the company withdrawing and cancelling his application:-Held, in an action for the amount of calls alleged to be due, that the directors had no power to delegate to the president their authority as to the allotment of shares or their authority to accept the offer of the defendant; there was, therefore, no valid allotment, and the withdrawal was effectual. Semble, that the fact that the by-laws passed by the directors provided for a board of five directors, while a board of only three assumed to manage the affairs of the com-pany, would be a bar to the plaintiffs' success in the action.

The seller of shares in a company does not fulfil his obligation to deliver them by indorsing and forwarding the certificate and stating thereon that he retains one of the shares when he has only paid forty per cent. of their par value. B. is not the shareholder, A. is. The case is governed by Ont. Ins. Act, R.S.O. 1897, c. 203, s. 21. Winding-up — Preferred claims of lienholders — Mechanics' Lien Act.] — The commencement of a mechanics' lien is coincident with the commencement of the work. Liens claimed by different lien-holders were in respect of work done in building upon the lands of a company prior to the date of the service of a petition for the winding-up of the company, but some of the claims for liens were not registered until after that date, though all within 30 days after the commencement of the liens:—Held, that all the liens existed by force of the Mechanics'

Lien Act prior to the service of the petition, and their efficacy and precedence were not disturbed by the subsequent winding-up proceedings; and the lien-holders had a valid claim attaching upon the land and to be paid in priority to ordinary creditors. S. 84 of the Winding-up Act, K.S.C. 1908, c. 144, does not apply to mechanics' liens. The lien-holders had, therefore, preferential claims upon the assets of the company in liquidation.

- Railway company - Trust deed - Registration — Trustee's salary — Prescription —Salary of director — Privilege of bond-holder.] — Held (by the registrar, as referee) that the deposit of a trust deed by a railway company with the Secretary State and notice thereof given in the Canada Gazette, as required by s. 94 of 51 Vict. c. 29, satisfies the requirements of Title XVIII. C.C.P.Q. with respect to registration. 2. The holding of a railway bond by one of several trustees of a railway company as collateral security for the payment of salary to such trustees is an interruption of prescription under Art. 2260 C.C. from the time it was deposited with such trustee. 3. The power of the Parliament of Canada to legislate upon the subject of railways extends to civil rights arising out of, or relating to, such railways. 4. A cestui que trust cannot act as trustee for his own trustee and recover remuneration for his services as such. 5. A director of a company is not entitled to any remuneration for his services, without a resolution of the shareholders authorizing the same. 6. The failure on the part of a bondholder to deposit his bonds within a certain period, in the hands of a named trustee in compliance with the terms of a scheme of arrangement, duly confirmed by the Court under the pro-visions of the Railway Act, deprives him of any privilege attached to his bonds, and he must be ranked only with the unsecured creditors. 7. Where bonds find their way into the hands of a creditor as a mere pledge for his debt, not being bought in open market, the creditor can only recover the amount of his debt and not the face value of the bonds. 8. Leave to amend under Rule 86 of the practice of the Court becomes null and void if not acted upon within the period fixed for the purpose. 9. Under the law of the province of Quebec a hypothec cannot be acquired by the registration of a judgment upon the immovables of a person notoriously insolvent at the time of such registration, to the prejudice of existing creditors. 10. Under the facts of this case, trustees under a debenture-holder's trust deed were held to be entitled to be indemnified in preference to all other creditors out of the trust property, for all costs, damages and expenses incurred by them in the performance of the trust. By its statement of claim the plaintiff company asked among other things, that certain mortgage bonds of the defendant company held by them together with a mortgage deed in favour of the plaintiff, as trustee, made by the defendant company to secure certain bonds or debentures, be declared a "first claim and privileged debt" ranking on the property of defendant company's railway. Held, that judgment should be entered declaring that said mortgage bonds and trust deed constituted "a claim and privileged debt," but that their rank, amount and priority should be determined by the registrar of the Court, to whom a general reference was directed to take accounts and ascertain what was due to the several creditors and what the priorities were as between them, and whether there were any prior claims, and, if any, for what amounts respectively.

-Railway - Insolvency - Sale - Prior enquiry into claims of creditors - Pledge of bonds - Trustee for bondholders.] - An enquiry before a referee into the validity and priority of the claims of creditors of an insolvent railway may be ordered before an order for the sale of the railway is made under the provisions of s. 26 of the Exchequer Court Act (R.S. 1906), c. 140. 2. A pledgee of railway bonds has a sufficient interest (in the nature of that of a mortgagee) in such bonds to institute an action for the sale of the railway under the provisions of s. 26 of the Exchequer Court Act. 3. A trustee for the bondholders of an insolvent railway may become a purchaser, as such trustee, at the sale of the railway. 4. Under the terms of s. 26 of the Exchequer Court Act part of a railway may be sold when the railway is in default in paying interest on its bonds. 5. A director, being a creditor of a railway company, present at a meeting where authority is given to pledge the bonds of the company, is estopped from setting up the invalidity of such bonds in an action by the pledgee. 6. For this nothing was given to the company by the shareholders or by any one. In the annual return to the Government made by the company in January, 1907, and in the company's books, the transaction appeared as if $7,500 had been paid on account of stock in 1906. The names of the shareholders were placed on the register in respect of these shares, and they (or some of them) accepted the shares and allowed their names to remain on the register, and they appeared there at the time when an order was made for the winding-up of the company :- Held, that the issue of the unissued stock belonging to the company, to the extent of $7,500, as paid-up stock, was in violation of the statute, and ultra vires; all the shareholders, and not merely the directors, were affected with notice or knowledge of this; and, whatever remedy they might have had before the winding-up order, they had no right, as against the liquidators, representing creditors, to say that the shares were fully paid-up. There have reached him the following day. was no evidence that this letter did reach the party to whom it was addressed on that day or that he was an agent or officer of the company authorized to receive such a notice. In the meantime and without notice of withdrawal the company accepted the application and allotted the shares, but notice of allotment was not given until twelve days later. On an application to settle contributories:—Held, that an application for shares cannot be withdrawn after allotment. 2. That in the absence of a statutory provision or custom of business to the contrary, a notice sent by mail is not operative in the absence of evidence that it was actually received. An applicant for shares resisted the application to place his name on the list of contributories on the ground that he had been induced to take the shares by misrepresentation. Held, that fraud was no answer to the application, as the applicant should have taken proceedings to have the shares cancelled before winding up. A shareholder set up that the company was indebted to him in a large amount, being for amount due under destroyed by fire, and claimed the right to set off each amount. Held, that in view of the provisions of sub-s. 2 of s. 44 of the Companies Ordinance and par. 2 of s. 14 of the Winding-up Ordinance, the shareholder was entitled to set off such debt.

the grounds of insolvency under the provisions of the Companies Winding-up Act (Dom.). The petition set out that the petitionser was a creditor, and that the company was indebted to other persons in large amounts; that the company, unable to pay these debts, and that certain persons in charge of the company's business had ad-mitted its insolvency. This petition was verified by affidavit, which stated "that such of the statements in the peti-tion as relate to my own acts and deeds are true, and such of the statements as relate to the acts and deeds of others I believe to be true." No other evidence was filed with the petition, nor was notice of any other affidavit served until two days before the application was to he heard, when three further affidavits were served and leave was asked to read them: —Held, that the affidavit did not verify the petition as required by the rules, and was insufficient to support it. 2. That the original affidavit filed being totally insufficient, there was no evidence on file when the petition was presented to support it, and leave should not be given to file further affidavits in an endeavour to make out a case after the return of the motion. 3. A petition by three shareholders to wind up the company under the Ontario Companies the ground that it was "just and equitable" that the corporation should be wound up, was dismissed, no case for a winding-up order being disclosed. Any suspicion that the company is being mismanaged is insufficient. The whole substratum of the teompany could not be said to be gone, the property acquired under the charter existing and there being a means of working it. A winding-up petition cannot be resorted to merely because there is dissension within the company.

In the winding-up of the company he contested his liability as a contributory to the extent of the $200 actually unpaid upon the shares, but did not offer to return the dividend:-Held, that, as the company had no power to issue shares at a discount, the shares must be regarded as only half paid, and C. was estopped from denying that he was a member of the company in respect of the eight shares; and he can Co., Ex p. Bank of England, [1895] 1 Ch. 37, and The Bellcairn (1885), 10 P.D. 161 followed. An incorporated company brought an action against McK., as the holder of shares of the capital stock, to recover money alleged to be due by him in respect of calls. McK. pleaded several defences - among others, that he was not the holder of the shares, and that the calls were not duly made. The action came on for trial, and, upon consent, a judgment dismissing it was pronounced, signed and entered. Afterwards, the company being in liquidation under a winding-up order, the liquidator sought to make McK. a contributory in respect of the same shares upon which the calls had been made:—Held, that, as it was impossible from the pleadings and judgments to ascertain upon which of the grounds of defence McK. succeeded, the Court might look at the admissions made before the referee in the winding-up proceedings; and those admissions, coupled with the judgment and record, warranted the conclusion that the ground upon which McK. succeeded in the action was that he was not a shareholder in the company; and, therefore, the former recovery was a bar to the claim of the liquidator, which was based upon its being established that, McK. was a shareholder at the commencement of the winding-up.

-Action by liquidators-Sanction of Court -General manager-Transactions on his own behalf.]-In an order for the windingup of a company, it was provided that the liquidators with the consent and approval of the inspectors appointed to advise in the winding-up, might exercise any of the powers conferred upon them by the Winding-up Act without any special sanction or intervention of the Court. Instituting or defending an action constituted one of the powers. S. 38 enables the Court to provide by any order subsequent to the windirg-up order that the liquidator may exercise any of the powers conferred upon him by the Act without the sanction or in-tervention of the Court. The liquidators having brought an action, proceeding under the above order, Morrison, J., at the trial held that it was necessary to obtain an order subsequent to the winding-up order before s. 38 enured:—Held, on appeal, that the action having the consent and approval of the inspectors, was properly brought. Defendant as general manager of a company engaged a timber cruiser to cruise and locate certain timber, which he did. On his way home from this work, the cruiser discovered a quantity of timber which he disclosed to the defendant, and entered into an arrangement with him for staking and acquiring it, but declined to deal with defendant as representive of the company. Defendant drew a cheque on the funds of the company for the Gov-ernment dues on this timber, but did not cash the cheque, and the transaction appeared in the books as "Kitimat limits." Held, on appeal, reversing the finding of Morrison, J., (reported (1909), 14 B.C.R. 390), that as the limits were acquired for the company in the first instance, and the company's funds used for that purpose that the defendant was merely a trustee for the company, to which he was bound to account. Held, further, that the trans-action was one within the scope of the company's operations.

-Mortgage made within three months-Presumption-Pressure-Mortgage to bank to secure existing liability.]—The defendants, a chartered bank, advanced $6,000 to a brewing company in the ordinary course of dealing. Frequent demands for payment having been made, the company agreed to secure the amount by mortgage on their lands, and the directors met and passed a by-law for the purpose of implementing the agreement. The by-law contained a recital that s. 73 of the Ontario Companies Act authorized the directors to borrow money for the purposes of the company. This assertion was unnecessary, and was also inapplicable, as the directors were not about to borrow or give security for a present loan, but to secure by mortgage an existing liability. Aside from this, the by-law contained all that was necessary to authorize the preparation and execution by the president and secretary of a mortgage to secure the liability of $6,000:-Held, in an action by the liquidator of the company for a declaration that the mort-gage was void, that, the debt being an outstanding liability of the company, and the intention and agreement being to mortgage the company's real property, s. 78 of the Act gave the directors ample power to do so, and all that was needed was that they should act under the powers vested in them by that section; and the by-law was a sufficient authorization of the mortgage, notwithstanding the recital referring to s. 73 and the failure to refer to s. 78. Held, also, per Moss, C.J.O., that the objection to the by-law was not open to the company, and in this respect the plaintiff, as liquidator under a winding-up order, occupied no higher position. The defendants, having received a mortgage apparently duly executed on behalf of the company, were entitled to assume that everything necessary to its valid execution had been regularly and properly done. Judgment of Sutherland, J., upon this branch of the case, reversed. Held, also, per curiam, that the presumption of intent to defraud the company's creditors, arising from the circumstance that the mortgage was made within three months next preceding the commencement of the winding-up (s. 94 of the Winding-up Act), was rebuttable, and, upon the evidence, was rebutted, pressure being shown. Judgment of Sutherland, J., upon this branch of the case, affirmed.

The company had an account with the bank (claimant), and the manager of the company (who had power to sign notes for the company) had also an account at the same office of the bank. The claim of the bank against the company in winding-up proceedings included a number of promissory notes made by the manager and indorsed by the company. The liquidator showed that notes so made and indorsed had been charged at maturity to the company's account by the direction of the manager, and that renewals of these notes formed part of the bank's claim:-Held, that the liquidator, in examining the agent of the bank for the purpose of showing that the original consideration for several of the notes included in the bank's claim was an advance to the manager for his own private purposes, and that the agent, knowing these notes to be the private debt of the manager, had, at his request, charged them to the company's account, was entitled to refer to the manager's own account with the bank, though the manager was not a party to the proceeding; more especially as the bank had set up certain transfers of cash from one account to the other as justifying them in charging the company's account with the manager's liabilities. Held, also, that there was nothing to prevent the liquidator, who stood in the place of the company, from impeaching the consideration for the notes offered in proof by the bank, just as the company itself might have done, but no further. Held, also, that periodical acknowledgments given by the manager to the bank of the correctness of the company's account could not be set up as a bar to an inquiry into the account, where specific errors in it were charged, to the knowledge of the bank.

-Distribution of surplus-Shareholders-By-laws—Resolutions.]—A municipal water company, incorporated under the Ontario Joint Stock Companies Act, sold their undertaking and franchise to the municipality, and passed a resolution providing for payment at par value to the shareholders of the stock allotted to them in proportion to the amounts paid on their respective shares, and for payment of the liabilities and the costs of winding-up, etc, and directing that the surplus should be distributed amongst the members according to their rights and interests in the company. By by-law of the company, holders of second preference shares were to be paid divi-dends at six per cent., and for a period of five years were not to participate further in the profits of the company. In case of default in payment of any dividend, the deficiency was to be paid out of the net profits of succeeding years, and no dividend was to be paid on the ordinary stock until such deficiency should be fully paid. Second preference shareholders also had the right, under the by-law, upon foregoing their secured dividend of six per cent., to surrender their shares and receive the par value thereof, or a corresponding number of ordinary shares, in which case they would have the same rights and privileges as the ordinary shareholders; but none of them exercised this option. The by-law also provided that, in the event of the company being wound-up, if any surplus Held, also, that the surplus was divisible among the ordinary shareholders in proportion to the amount of their shares, not to the amounts paid on their shares. Birch v. Morrow v. Peterborough Water Co., 4 O.L.R. 324 (MacMahon, J.).

-Liquidator's bond-Money received as assignee-Appeal-Finality of certificate. -After the assignee for the benefit of creditors of an incorporated company had sold part of the assets and received the proceeds he was appointed liquidator under the Winding-up Act, and gave security by a bond which recited all the proceedings and orders and was conditioned to be void if the liquidator should duly account for what he should receive or become liable to pay as liquidator:—Held, that the funds and property in the hands of the assignee became vested in him as liquidator upon his appointment as such and that the sureties were responsible for his subsequent misappropriation thereof. The bond provided that the certificate of the Master in Ordinary of the amount for which the liquidator was liable should be sufficient evidence of liability as against the sureties and should form a valid and binding charge against them:—Held, that the sureties had the right to appeal from the certificates in accordance with the usual practice of the Court. Judgment of a Divisional Court affirmed.

—Voluntary liquidation—Notice of meeting.]—A notice sent by mail to all the shareholders of a company of a special meeting for the purpose of placing the company, which was not insolvent, in voluntary liquidation, and accompanied by forms of proxies, is sufficient, and if a resolution is passed for the winding-up of the company no further notice is required of the application to the Court. The intention to nominate a certain person for liquidator is sufficiently indicated by the mention of his name in the forms of proxies sent to prevent any interested party from claiming that he is taken by surprise if such person is appointed liquidator.

But the sheriff having, notwithstanding, proceeded with the sale under the execution against the lands of the company, and executed a deed of the same to the purchaser:-Held, that there was no jurisdiction in the Court under the Winding-up Act to make an order summarily declaring the sale void.

-Pending action for calls-Counterclaim for rescission-Leave to proceed refused.]-Previous to an order for the winding-up of the company under the Dominion Windingup Act, an action had been brought by the company against a shareholder for unpaid calls, and the shareholder had delivered a defence and counterclaim praying that his application for shares should be cancelled on the ground of misrepresentation and of false and fraudulent statements in the prospectus:—Held, that the shareholder could have in the winding-up proceedings all the relief that he claimed by his defence and counterclaim; and his application for leave to proceed in the action notwithstanding the winding-up order was refused, but leave to apply again was re-served. Dictum of Strong, C.J., in Re Hess Manufacturing Co., 23 Can. S.C.R. 644, at pp. 665-6, explained. -Winding-up-Final order-Order dissolving company-Order rescinding.]-On March 24th, 1902, a County Court Judge made an order, upon an affidavit of a liquidator, declaring the above association dissolved. On June 21st, 1902, on the application of a dissatisfied shareholder, he made an order revoking his former order and also one which he had made on April 7th, 1902, staying proceedings in actions against the association:-Held, that the order of June 21st was an appealable order, for even if the appeal to the Court of Appeal under s. 27 of the Ontario Winding-up Act was to be restricted to appeals from final orders, yet this was a final order since it put an end to the order of dissolution. Held, however (Maclennan, J.A., dissentiente, on the ground that County Court Judge had been misled when making the order), that the County Court Judge had no authority to make the order of June 21st, as he had no further material before him than he had had when making that of March 24th, and there was no reason for saying that he had been misled in making the former order, and the proper way to have attacked the latter order was by appeal.

Security taken bona fide-Holder of-Regularity of proceedings — Liquidator suing in his own name—Liability for costs.]-Where an action is brought by the liquidator of a company in liquidation in his own name he is personally liable for costs; the fact that he obtained leave from the Court to sue will not relieve him of his liability in this respect. A person who bona fide takes a security in the ordinary course of business from an incorporated company is not bound to inquire into the regularity of the directors' proceedings leading up to the giving of the security; he is entitled to assume that everything has been done regularly. In this respect a shareholder stands on the same footing as a stranger. Jackson v. Cannon, 10 B.C.R. 73.

—Winding-up—Leave to bring action—Secured creditors—Proving claims.]—A secured creditor has a right to apply for and obtain leave to bring an action to enforce his security. It is not optional for a secured creditor to either prove his

Under the Winding-up Act (Can.), 1886, ss. 15 and 31, a company in liquidation retains its corporate powers including the power to sue, although such powers must be exercised through the liquidator under the authority of the Court. The liquidator must sue in his own name or in that of the company, according to the nature of the action; in his own name where he acts as representative of creditors and contributories; in that of the company to recover either its debts or its property. Where liquidators sued in their own name to re-cover a debt due to the company:—Held, that the error was one of form, which the Court had power to give leave to amend under ss. 516 and 521 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The defendant having admitted the debt and pleaded set-off, and not having excepted to the form of the action, leave to amend should have been given in the sound exercise of judicial discretion.

_Contributories_Preference shares_Common shares-By-law-Directors - Allotment of shares.]—The shareholders of the company passed a resolution in favour of the creation of preference stock, with a direction to the directors to pass a by-law, which the directors failed to do: - Held, that s. 22 of the Ontario Companies Act not having been complied with, there was no valid creation of preference stock, and G., a person who had signed an application for sixteen shares of preference stock, could not be held liable as a contributory in respect of these shares, there being no acquiescence, delay, or conduct on his part to estop him from alleging and shewing that, at the time when he made his application, and thenceforth until the liquidation proceedings, the company were not in a position to give him that for which he applied. G. also applied in writing for eight shares of the common stock, and undertook to accept the same or any less amount, paying therefor $60 per share according to the terms named in the prospectus. But, in lieu of these terms, it was arranged between G. and an agent of the company that he should give a promissory note at twelve months for the whole amount, which was done. The application was never brought before or dealt with by the directors, but the secretary notified G. that the directors had allotted him the shares in accordance with his application. They had not, however, passed a by-law or otherwise ordained, as required by s. 26; they had merely passed a resolution that "the secretary be instructed to allot all stock as applications are passed in:" -Held, that the directors could not delegate their duty to a subordinate officer, and there never was any valid acceptance of G.'s application, and he was, therefore, not liable as a contributory in respect of the eight shares. Held, also, upon the evidence, that, at the time of G.'s application, the company held no shares of the common stock which they could validly allot to him. In the case of R., another person charged as a contributory:-Held, that it was covered by the decision in G.'s case, the additional circumstances set out in the report making no difference. In the case of H., another person charged as a contributory, the allotment of shares was professed to be made by the secretary, and the notice thereof was given in the same manner and under the same circumstances and authority as in the other cases. But at the time of H.'s application there were shares of the common stock which could have been allotted. H. gave his promissory note for the price of shares for which he applied, and afterwards made payments thereon, and he attended meetings of shareholders and moved resolutions thereat. He had no notice, however, until after the liquidation, of any irregularities in the creation of the preference stock, and was not aware of the irregularities in connection with the allotment of shares:-Held, that, as there was no contract in fact, both by reason of there being no preferred stock in existence and the want of allotment, making payments in ignorance of these facts was not a conclusive act, and the attendance and conduct at the meetings was not such an active participation in the affairs and business as to debar any question as to the status of an alleged shareholder. If there was any holding of himself out as a shareholder by H., it was not under circumstances which could affect creditors or create any change of position to their prejudice.

-Contributory-Subscription for shares-Contract under seal-Offer-Acceptance-Allotment.]-The respondent, by a writing under seal, dated the 29th July, 1903, sub scribed for one share in the capital stock of the company, and agreed to pay $100 for it, 10 per cent, on application, 15 per cent. on allotment, 25 per cent. two months thereafter, and the balance as the directors might deem advisable. It was arranged that the company should draw upon the respondent for the amount payable on application. On the next day, and before anything had been done by the company, the respondent wrote to the company, cancelling his subscription. The company drew on the respondent for the 10 per cent., but he refused to accept the draft, and, being pressed by the company, by letter of the 16th September, 1903, to eccept the draft, again declined to do so. On the 8th September, 1903, a resolution was passed by the directors "that the stock now subscribed be allotted and notice sent to each subscriber that we are drawing on them for their second pay-The company did not draw on the respondent for the second payment, and he was not notified of the allotment, but his name was recorded in the book required by s. 71 of the Ontario Companies Act to be kept by the company, as a shareholder holding one share. He was not afterwards in any way treated or dealt with as a shareholder. In a proceeding for the winding-up of the company, it was sought to make him liable as a contributory:-Held, following Nelson Coke and Gas Co. v. Pellatt (1902), 4 O.L.R. 481, that the instrument signed by the respondent was not a mere offer which he could withdraw before acceptance; but that the company never accepted or intended to accept him as a shareholder unless the down payment of 10 per cent. was made, and, after the refusal to make that pay-

Semble, however, that such a shareholder, if a director, commits a breach of trust in being a party to the allotment of the shares as fully paid up, as well as in putting them off on his transferees to the prejudice of the company as fully paid up shares; and such a case is a proper one for an order under s. 83 of the Winding-up Act.

-Contributories-Application for shares-Withdrawal-Absence of allotment and notice-Notice of call.]-An agent of the company canvassed the respondents to subscribe for shares and took them to the company's office, where they signed and handed to the manager an application, not under seal, by which they subscribed for 25 shares of the common stock of the company, at the par value of $100 per share, for which they agreed to pay upon the delivery of the regular stock certificate. In the stock ledger of the company, under the names of the respondents and the heading "common stock," of the same date as the application, an entry was made: "Allotted bought Dr. 25 shares, amount $2,500, balance 25 shares, Dr. $2,500." On the same day the respondents gave the canvassing agent a cheque for $100 on account of the payment for the shares, but on the following morning they determined to withdraw from the application, and stopped payment of the cheque, which had been already presented and payment refused for want of funds. On the same day they told the agent that they would have nothing more to do with the stock they had applied for, but they gave no written or other notice of withdrawal. The company's minute book contained no note or entry nor was any evidence given of any resolution of the directors allotting stock to the respondents or directing notice of allotment to be sent to them, and a formal notice of allotment was not sent. No attempt was made to enforce payment of their cheque, and they received no further communication on the subject of the shares until three months later, when the company's manager sent them notice of a call and demanded payment. There were two subsequent calls, of which notices were also sent to the respondents, and all three were authorized by resolutions of the directors:-Held, that neither of the respondents ever became a shareholder of the company, and that they were therefore properly struck off the list of contributories in a winding-up. Per Osler, J.A., that there had been no allotment or appropriation of specific shares to the respondents; the entry of their name in the stock ledger was not conclusive; the resolutions authorizing the calls, dealing with stock which had been already allotted, could not be regarded as equivalent to an allotment; the fact that notices of calls were sent to the respondent amounted to nothing if the stock had not been already allotted to them by the directors. Quere, per Osler, J.A., whether notice of a call can be regarded as equivalent to notice of allotment. Semble, also, per Osler, J.A., that, on the evidence, the respondents, as they had a right to do, withdrew their application, and that this came to the notice of the company on the day after the application was signed, which would be another answer to the liquidator's demand. Per Meredith, J.A.: - The real question is not whether there was or was not a formal allotment of stock; but is whether there was a concluded bargain for the sale of the shares; the onus of proof of the company's binding acceptance of the offer to buy was upon the liquidator, and that was not clearly proved. Upon the whole evidence it ought to be found that there was no acceptance binding upon the company, at the time of the withdrawal of the offer to buy.

-Judge's order—Power to vary—Mistake.]—A company against which a winding-up order had been made obtained at the instance of the large majority of its shareholders and holders of its bonds an order in an action by it against C., granting leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from a judgment of the Supreme Court of this Province confirming a judgment of the Supreme Court in Equity, and entrusting the conduct of the appeal to the company's solicitors. Subsequently the liquidators of the company moved to vary the order by adding a direction that the case on appeal should not be settled until an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from the judgment of the Supreme Court of this Province refusing to set aside the winding-up order was determined, and that the company's solicitors on the appeal in the action against C. should act therein only on instructions of the liquidators or their solicitor:-Held, that as there was no error or omission in the order resulting from mistake or inadvertence, and the order expressed the intention of the Judge who made it, the motion should be refused.

-Order for liquidation-Form of-Appeal -Bond secured by trust mortgage-Right of holder to petition-Valuing security-Company when deemed insolvent.]-An order made under the Winding-up Act, 2 Rev. Stat. of Can. c. 129, directing the winding-up of a company instead of the business of a company, is good. The Court refused to dismiss an appeal taken under s. 74 of the Act, where an order had been made settling and allowing the appeal on the ground that the appellants had not complied with the practice governing in similar cases of appeal by serving or filing a notice or the grounds of appeal. A company issued bonds payable to bearer, the payment of which was secured by a trust mortgage, by which the company purported to assign certain of its property to trustees, in trust, for the benefit of the bondholders, and covenanted with the trustees for the payment of the principal and interest of the bonds to the bondholders:-Held, per Barker, McLeod and Gregory, JJ., that the holder of some of the bonds, the interest on which was overdue, was entitled to petition for the winding-up of the company. Held, per Tuck, C.J., and Hanington, J., that the bonds and trust mortgage must be read together, and that under the terms of the trust mortgage a bondholder was not a creditor within the meaning of the Act, and was not entitled to petition for a winding-up order. Per Tuck, C.J., Barker, McLeod and Gregory, JJ., that a secured creditor can make a demand under s. 6, and petition for the winding-up of the company, and is not bound to value in his petition his security under s. 62; that where a demand is made under s. 6, and the time for payment has elapsed, and the demand has not been complied with, and no reason is given why payment is not made, the company must be deemed insolvent within the meaning of the Act; that where the Judge has exercised his discretion under s. 19 and refused to regard the request of a majority of the creditors and shareholders opposed to the petition,

Per Hanington, J., that the refusal to regard the wishes of all the unsecured creditors and the great majority of the secured creditors and shareholders was not a reasonable exercise of judicial discretion under s. 19, and the appeal should be allowed on that ground. Cushing Sulphite Fibre Company v. Cushing, 37 Can. S.C.R. 427.

-Application by shareholder for windingup.]-A company incorporated under the Nova Scotia Companies Act, R.S. (1900), c 128, for the purpose of carrying on mining operations after operating its property for a time at a loss, disposed of it to another company, the consideration for the transfer being shares in the latter company. Application was made by one of the shareholders for a winding-up order under the provisions of the Companies Winding-up Act, R.S. (1900), c. 129, s. 5, the grounds being (1) that the substratum of the company had gone; (2) that it was not possible for the company to carry on the business for which it was created, and (3) that the sale of its property for shares in another company was illegal and un-authorized. The application was opposed by the company and it did not appear that either the creditors or the shareholders generally desired a winding-up:-Held, that the Judge to whom the application was made, was right under these circumstances in refusing an order. Also, that before giving effect to the application and taking the matter out of the hands of the directors and of the company, the learned Judge was right in requiring the shareholder to bring himself within the principle of the cases by showing, inter alia, that the company was in such a state of solvency that there was a reasonable probability of sufficient assets being left for the shareholders to give him a tangible interest in having the company wound up.

In the following August, the debenture holders seized the property and put in charge a receiver and manager, to whom plaintiff delivered the books of account, plaintiff himself having actually made the seizure. He afterwards continued in the same position as before the seizure, but was paid by the receiver:-Held, reversing Forin, Co. J. Rule 209, directing that two out of a large number of shareholders should be joined as third-party defendants, as a test case, but no order for their representing the class was obtained, though it was stated that if they appeared such order would be applied for. On appeal by the plaintiff and the third parties, to a Judge in Chambers, the order was set aside. An appeal therefrom by the defendants to a Divisional Court was dismissed, the plaintiff undertaking that any moneys realized in the action would not be distributed without notice to the defendants and without leave therefor being obtained from the local Judge.

Subsequently an order for the winding-up of the company was made, and the liquidator sold the premises without giving the plaintiff an opportunity to exercise his option:-Held, that the winding-up order did not in any way cut down the rights of the plaintiff or change his position; that the liquidator was authorized to sell the premises, but only subject to the terms and conditions of the lease; and that he was bound to submit to the plaintiff, who had not waived his rights, the offer received, and, not having done so, the company was liable in damages, notwithstanding that the plaintiff was aware that the liquidator was making efforts to sell the premises.

-Directions of Court to liquidator-Proceedings against former directors for fraud.1-The company being in process of voluntary winding-up under the Manitoba Winding-up Act, R.S.M. 1902, c. 175, the liquidator applied, under s. 23 of the Act, for a direction as to whether or not he should take proceedings against a number of former directors of the company to cancel certain shares in the stock which they had issued to themselves as fully paid up, but without payment of any kind, and to recover the dividends which, to the extent of over $62,000, they had afterwards paid to themselves on said shares:
-Held, that this was not "a question arising in the matter of the winding up" for the determination of which an application may be made to the Court under s. 23, and that no order could be made as the liquidator in such a proceeding is not an officer of the Court or under its control, except to the extent stated in subs. (f) of s. 19 of the Act. The Judge, however, expressed 'he opinion that it was the liquidator's duty, under the circumstances, to take the suggested proceedings and that, if he refused, the Court would have jurisdiction, under sub-s. (f) of s. 19, to compel him to do so.

-Winding-up order-Company-Stay of actions against-Decree of foreclosure-Leave to proceed—Right of mortgagee.]-By s. 16 of the Winding-up Act (Rev. Stat. Can. c. 129), proceedings by a mortgagee under a decree of foreclosure of the company's premises is stayed, but the mortgagee has the absolute right to have leave to proceed unless special circumstances make it inequitable for him to do so. The exercise of discretion in granting or refusing leave by the Judge having charge of the winding-up proceedings may be reviewed on appeal. The liquidators have no equity to have the conduct of the sale under foreclosure proceedings, and an order made at their instance by the Judge directing the winding-up proceedings, postponing the sale and directing the referee as to the advertising and fixing a subsequent date for the sale is bad. A Judge other than the Judge directing the winding-up proceedings may grant leave to appeal from his order, and any Judge has the abstract right to make orders in a winding-up proceeding, but cught not to do so unless specially requested by the Judge in charge, or under exceptional circumstances. The appeal from the order of a Judge in charge of winding-up proceedings is to the Court, and can not be varied or rescinded by an order of a single Judge, though made in excess of his jurisdiction under the Winding-up Act.

Instituting or defending an action constituted one of the powers. S. 38 of the Act enables the Court to provide by any order subsequent to the winding-up order, that the liquidator may exercise any of the powers conferred upon him by the Act without the sanction er intervention of the Court:-Held, that it is necessary to obtain an order, subsequent to the winding-up order, so as to get the benefit of s. 38. Defendant, as general manager of a company, engaged a timber cruiser to cruise and locate certain timber, which he did. On his way home from this work, the cruiser discovered a quantity of timber, which he disclosed to defendant, and entered into an arrange-ment with him for staking and acquiring it, but declined to deal with defendant as representative of the company. Defendant drew a cheque on the funds of the company for the government dues on this timber, but did not cash the cheque, and the trans action appeared on the books as "Kitimat limits." Held, in an action to account for the proceeds of the sale of this timber, that defendant was not acting as the representative of the company, and was not a trustee; and that the making of the entries in the books did not estop him from explaining the circumstances.

He also objected that his membership in the company had not been properly proved, as the register had not been produced:-Held, that the register of the company is not conclusive or the only evidence of membership therein, but membership may be proved without reference to the register. (2) That the application for shares being an unconditional one, and there being no evidence that any notice of a condition attached had ever been given to the company, Robertson's name must be placed on the list of contributories.

-Contributories-Shares payable in cash - Time for signing agreement-Shares subscribed for by memorandum of association, when deemed issued.]-Shares in the capital stock of the company, registered under the Companies Ordinance, which have been subscribed for by the memorandum of association, are deemed to be issued at the date of the registration of the company. Consequently an agreement filed with the registrar of joint stock companies, subsequent to such date, although the shares certificates were not issued until after such filing, cannot be relied on to relieve the shareholder from a liability to pay for the shares in question under the Companies Ordinance, s. 43. The repeal of s. 43 by 7 Edw. VII. c. 5, s. 13 sub-s. 4, has not altered the liability of the shareholder in the above respect so far as the liability existed at the date of the repeal of the section. S. 43, read with s. 47 of the Companies Ordinance, fixes the liability in such case. The effect of the new subsection substituted for sub-s. (6) of s. 110 of the Companies Ordinance by 7 Edw. VII. c. 5, s. 13, sub-s. (6), is to continue the liability to pay in cash, in the absence of a contract of sale or for services or other consideration in respect of which such allotment was made, but to permit of the contract being filed subsequent to the issue of the shares, within the time specified. The consideration, however, for which the shares were issued must be a valuable consideration, and must have been something existing at the time and not semething subsequently accruing. The provision that "the Court, if satisfied that the omission to file the contract or a sufficient contract was accidental or due to inadvertence, or that for any other reason it is just and equitable to grant relief," has no application where there was no contract at all in existence at the time of the issue of the shares. In any case, before granting relief, the applicant must satisfy the Court that creditors will not be injuriously affected by the order. Consideration of the circumstances in this case which rendered it not "just and equitable" to grant relief:-Quære, whether it is possible for a subscriber to a memorandum of association to escape liability for payment in cash for the shares subscribed for, and if so, under what considerations.

- - Mortgagees-"'Proceeding against the company."]-A company being in liquidation, the mortgagees went into possession prior to the issue of the winding-up order. On an application to restrain the mortgagees from selling under their security, objection was taken that the attendance of the mortgagees on the application and the approving of the winding-up order was such a taking part in the winding-up as gave the Court jurisdiction to restrain them. This being overruled, the liquidator sought to restrain the mortgagees from selling without the sanction of the Court on the ground that such sale would be a "proceeding against the company" under s. 22 of the Winding-up Act, R.S.C. c. 144:-Held, that the mortgagees were proceeding rightfully.

-Winding-up order made after contestation by the company-Right of a shareholder to attack it by opposition to judgment.]-(1) The general rule that a winding-up order made against a company, after appearance and contestation by it, is conclusive against the shareholders, does not apply where the ground taken is that the company was not subject to the Winding-up Act, or that the petition for the order had not been served upon it and was a fraudulent abuse of the process of the Court. (2) The Winding-up Act, R.S.C. c. 144, applies to a foreign company which has done business in Canada, although the same has been discontinued for a period of five or six years, if there be unsatisfied obligations arising therefrom. (3) A foreign company doing business in Canada is subject to the Winding-up Act and the Superior Court has jurisdiction and power to make a winding-up order against it thereunder, although no liquidation precedings are taken against it at its domicile, and the correct view is that, in its application, the act is to be construed, not strictly, but liberally.

ing 34 Que. S.C. 432.

—Jury trial—Judgment refusing same—Leave to appeal.]—In winding-up proceedings, leave to appeal is obtainable from a Judge of the Court in regard to "an order or decision," without limitation as to whether it is final or interlocutory. Therefore leave to appeal will be allowed from a judgment refusing a jury trial in a winding-up proceeding.

-Representation of shareholders by a company in winding-up proceedings.]—(1) A winding-up order made against a company, after appearance and contestation by it of the petition, is res judicata and conclusive against the shareholders. (2) The authority of attorneys and advocates who have acted for and represented a party, in judicial proceedings, cannot be challenged otherwise than by disayowal.

-- Conclusiveness of list of contributories-Res judicata-Alleged insolvency of compeny-Necessity for meeting of directors to call general meeting of shareholders to pass winding-up resolution.]-Shares in the capital stock of a company, registered under the Companies Ordinance, which have been subscribed for by the memorandum of association, are deemed to be issued at the date of the registration of the company, consequently an agreement filed with the registrar of joint stock companies subsequent to such date, although the share certificates were not issued until after such filing, cannot be relied on to relieve the shareholder from his liability to pay for the shares in cash, under Companies Ordinance, s. 43 (x):-Semble, that the decision of the Judge in settling the list of contributories in winding-up proceedings, is as to all questions involved res judicata. Semble, that the mere fact that a company has large liabilities, and has decided that in view of them it is unable to carry on its business, is not proof of "insolvency." Where no regular meeting of directors was held to proceed to convene an extraordinary meeting of the company to consider a resolution for winding up, but it was shown that the requisite number of shareholders had joined in the requisition pursuant to s 118 of the Companies Ordinance, among them being all the directors, all of whom subsequently signed an endorsement directing the secretary-himself a director-to call the meeting, held, that the want of a regular meeting of the directors, was a mere irregularity, and did not invalidate the meeting of shareholders subsequently held in pursuance of notice by the secretary at which the winding-up resolution was passed.

—Limitation of action—Liquidator—Fraudulent deed.]—An action by the liquidator of an insolvent company to set aside a deed executed in fraud of creditors should be brought within one year from the date on which the liquidator was appointed; otherwise the right of action is barred. Hyde v. Ross, 10 Que. P.R. 334.

—Trading company—Petition for winding-up—Service.]—A company for the manufacture and sale of gas for lighting purposes is a "trading company" under c. 144, s. 2 (d) of R.S. [1906] and is subject to the provisions of that Act. The powers given to the Superior Court by said Act (the Winding-up Act) may be exercised by a Judge in Chambers. Service of a petition for a winding-up order may be made at the office of the company by delivering a copy to an employee who is in charge.

-Rights of purchase of railway at sale-Incorporation of company-Directors' salary-Set-off.]-A purchaser of a railway does not acquire an absolute right to the railway. What he acquires is an interim right to operate the railway to be followed up by incorporation as provided by s. 280 of 51 Vict. c. 29. (See now s. 299 of the Railway Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 37.) (2) While an independent purchaser buying with his own money and selling at an enhanced price to a company, with full disclosure and without fraud, can claim his profit, promoters, who stand in a fiduciary relationship to the company, cannot take such profit. Hence, where promoters bought with the moneys of a company ircorporated by themselves, to whom they turned over the property, they were not permitted to recover against the company any profits on the transaction. (3) A resolution of shareholders is necessary to authorize the payment of salaries to directors of a company. (4) Having regard to the provisions of Arts. 1031 and 1187 C.C.

P.Q., creditors were allowed by the referee to set off the claims of certain debtons, officers of the company, for salaries taken by them without proper authority, and for expenditures made by them out of the company's funds for a purpose reltra vires of the company. No objection was taken to this ruling before the referee, and the Court, on appeal from his report, confirmed such ruling, but expressed some doubt as to the jurisdiction of the referee to set off such claims.

Minister of Railways and Canals v. Quebec Southern Railway Company; Hodge's Claim, 12 Can. Exch. R. 11.

—Contributories—Allotment of shares—Withdrawal of application.]—On the day after signing an application for shares in a company the applicant decided to withdraw and mailed a notice of such intention to the party who had taken the application, which in the ordinary course of the mail should have reached him the following day. There was no evidence that this letter did reach the party to whom it was addressed on that day or that he was an agent or officer of the company authorized to receive such a notice. In the meantime and with out notice of withdrawal the company accepted the application and allotted the shares, but notice of allotment was not given until twelve days later. On an application to settle contributories:-Held, that an application for shares cannot be withdrawn after allotment. (2) That in the absence of a statutory provision or custom of business to the contrary, a notice sent by mail is not operative in the absence of evidence that it was actually received. An applicant for shares resisted the application to place his name on the list of contributories on the ground that he had been induced to take the shares by misrepresentation. Held, that fraud was no answer to the application, as the applicant should have taken proceedings to have the shares cancelled before winding-up. A shareholder set up that the company was indebted to him in a large amount, being for amount due under one of the company's policies upon property destroyed by fire, and claimed the right to set off each amount. Held, that in view of the provisions of sub-s. 2 of s. 44 of the Companies Ordinance and paragraph 2 of s. 14 of the Winding-up Ordinance, the shareholder was entitled to set off such debt.

Company having ceased to do business—Shareholder opposing judgment granting a winding-up order.]—A shareholder is deemed to have been represented by the company in the proceedings which have led to the granting of a winding-up order of said company, when the company appeared and contested the petition for said order; this shareholder is without right to attack by an opposition the judgment granting the same, said judgment being chose jugge against him. —Payment to creditor within 30 days—Preference—Restoration of trust momeys.]
-On the 14th October, 1905, a sum of $1,340.57 was deposited in a bank to the credit of H., executor, and was on that day withdrawn by him and placed to the credit of a company, of which he was president, in its account with the same bank. This money was held by H. in trust for the children of M., and the placing of the money to the credit of the company was a breach of trust by him. On the 6th December, 1906, the company being then insolvent, H. withdrew from the assets of the company for his cestuis que trust a sum of $1,969.61, the purpose being admittedly to protect the cestuis que trust and to give them a preference. This sum was debited to an account in the books of the company, Leaded "H. in trust for M., " etc., at the credit of which there was a large balance, including the $1,340.57. A petition for an order for the windingup of the company was served on the same day on a solicitor who accepted service on behalf of the company, and on the 11th December, 1906, a winding-up order was made:-Held, that the money handed over by the trustee to the company was, when the $1,969.61 was withdrawn, no longer capable of being ear-marked, and it was impossible for the cestuis que trust to follow it; the company was simply a debtor to the trust estate for the amount which it had received from the trustee, and the withdrawal of the company was in substance and effect a payment by the company to its creditors of so much of what it owed them; and therefore s. 90 of the Winding-up Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 144 applied, and the liquidator of the company was entitled to recover from the trustee and cestuis que trust the amount withdrawn. By s. 99 the payment is void when made to a person knowing the inability of the company meet its engagements, and the view the debtor in rasking the payment is not made an element to be inquired into in the applica-

IV. REGISTRATION AND LICENSING.

-- Registration-Commencement of "operations and business."]-1. A penal action against a company for its failure to file a declaration according to law is prescribed if it is not taken within one year from the expiry of the sixty days after it commenced to do business; the failure to file such a declaration is not a continuous offence and there is a single penalty. 2. The words "operations and business" in Art. 4754 R. S. Q. mean that the prescription of one year runs, not from the beginning of the operations of the company, id est, the election of officers, purchase of land, borrowing of money, erection of buildings, etc., but from the beginning of the business intended to be carried by the company, in this case, the renting of rooms and the giving of baths. 3. A motion to amend the declaration, the object of which is to revive a prescribed or dead action into a live one, cannot be granted.

-Foreign Companies Ordinance-Carrying on business—Liability to register.]—The plaintiff, an unregistered foreign company, was shown to have made contracts with different merchants who purchased its goods, giving exclusive rights in respect thereof, and preserving privileges to the plaintiff; was shown to have advertised its goods throughout the province, and designated its customers as "exclusive agents" for its goods. It was also shown that the customers who purchased plaintiff's goods for retail were entitled to use the plain-tiff's trade-mark; one advertisement stated that if the prospective purchaser should not be suited from the stock carried by the retailer he could go to the retailer and have the plaintiff's brand of goods made to order:-Held, that although the plaintiff's customers took full responsibility as to the soles of plaintiff's goods and were not strictly agents for sale, but themselves were purchasers and sellers, they were representatives of the plaintiff within the meaning of sub-s. 3 of s. 3 of the Foreign Companies Ordinance, 1903, as amended by c 19, s. 1, c? the Ordinances of 1903, second session, and the company, under the circumstances, was carrying on part of its business within the meaning of and contrary to the provisions of the Ordinance. Also, to produce and file in the office of the Provincial Secretary an abstract of receipts and expenditures, profits and losses of the company within the province for each year during which the company did business within the province. Also, to file at the office of the Commissioner of Mines for the province a copy of the charter or Act of incorporation of the company, and of the by-laws and regulations of the company, together with a list of officers, etc.: -Held, setting aside the order and allowing defendants' that it was not just and convenient to grant the order, as the effect of it would be to decide the whole case upon affidavit, leaving nothing to be disposed of at the hearing. Held, that while such an order might be useful in some cases, in order to preserve the rights of parties, or the subject matter, until there could be a deliberate disposition made of it at the hearing, or where the matter could not wait until a hearing, it should not otherwise be disposed of in a summary way. Semble, that under the rules enabling a case to be set down for hearing at any time, a strong case must be made out for pursuing a different course.
