The observer would set down the two for a well-to-do iarmer and his daughter, who were travelling for business or pleasure. The man looked around. The two vacant seats were on opposite sides of the car. In one of them ast a young, well-dressed, and apparently self-satisfied gentleman, and the space by his side was occupied by a handbag of croodoile leather and a spring over-coat. In the other was another young man, not quites so extravagantly dressed, though neatly clad, and not as handsome as the first, though he had an open and intelligent countenance. The farmer looked around, and, motioning his daughter to the vacant seat, said: There's a place for you Lucy. Then turning to the young man with the satchel, he asked: 'Seat engaged.'

The young man looked top, curled his lip superciliously, and said: 'Man to fill it' llo here presently, I dare say.'

'Ah! said the farmer, coolly removing the gripsack and overcoat, and placing them on the young man's last.' Wan to fill it' llo cenpy it until he comet. And he seated himself accordingly while the young man glared at him. The one on the other side looked amused; and then, rising said: 'You had better exchange seast with ne, sit, and then the young lady and yourself will be together.'

'Thank you,' was the farmer's reply; and the exchange was quietly effected. The two young men were evidently acquainted, for the courteous one said to the other, in a low voice; 'Jin Poulder, you made a mistake there.'

'I never make mistakes, Frank Boling,' replied the other.' I dare say you'll make your fortune some of these days by being polite to the grander population; but my fortune is already made.'

'It is a fact, Lucy,' rejoined the farmer.

The old man, who was evidently intelligent, entered into a general conversation with the younger, and soon showed that he was quite well informed. Bolling was glad of a conference so entertaining, especially when, as his eyes were bent in that direction, he saw the young lady was an interested, and he hoped, a pleased listener. 'Be quiet, Puss, will yon?' replied her father, in the same tone.

'I am told,' resumed the young man, that he has left the bench, and though quite wealthy, has gone back to the bar. I have a letter from him which my father, recalling their youthful friendship, insisted on giving me; but I shall not present it.'

'Why not?' He might be of service to you.'

Searcely, sir. You see, if I am to be a salesman in a country store, I had better accommodate myself to my position. 'No thank you,' replied Bolling. 'That stuff is rather too fiery for me.' 'Here goes alone, then. That's as fine brandy as ever crossed the ocean. Day-day! Keep an eye to my traps, will you! and don't give up my seat to every country yokel who asks it.'

The elegant young gentleman shook himself, and made his way forward to the car especially provided for fumigation.

When he had gone, the old man leaned over the arm of his seat and addressed Bolling.
