BELA KUN OUSTED FROM THE LEADERSHIP OF HUNGARIAN COMMUNIST GOVERNMENT

Troops Returning from the Czech Front Are Reported to be Entering Budapest in Large Numbers and the City is in Disorder.

BELA KUN FIGHTING WITH ALL LEADERS

Assumed Leadership Last March and Immediately Got in Touch With Russian Soviets—Founder of Hungarian Communists.

Paris, July 17.—(By The A. P.)—Bela Kun, head of the Hungarian communist government, has been ousted, according to despatches from reliable sources in Vienna received by the peace conference.

Troops returning from the Czech front were reported entering Budapest in large numbers. Budapest was in disorder.

Herr Boehm and Herr Lander have taken over control of the Communist government.

Bela Kun was reported, in a Budapest despatch received Wednesday, to have broken off with nearly all the socialist leaders. Officers of the Soviet army were said to be deserting at every opportunity.

The Communist leader was quoted as saying, to his minister of education, that he was tired of trying to ride Socialist and Communist horses at the same time.

Herr Boehm, who has been commander of the Hungarian armies, was reported in prison, in a despatch from Vienna on Wednesday. This despatch also stated that Bela Kun was seeking some excuse to leave Hungary and that he would not return.

Bela Kun assumed the post of foreign commissary, or minister of foreign affairs in the Hungarian Soviet government, which succeeded the republican government set up by Count Karolyi. He took office in March 1918 and immediately got into touch with the heads of the Russian Soviet government. He was considered the founder of the Communist party in Hungary.

The Council of Five at Paris on July 6, reached the conclusion, it was stated, that it was impossible to make peace with Bela Kun's government. Consequently it was considered necessary to maintain the blockade.

Recent events in Budapest have preaged trouble. An attack was made on the Soviet headquarters by three monitors in the Danube, aided by land forces, on July 2. As a result of this uprising forty youths from the Budapest military academy and three officers were hanged. Bela Kun then issued a proclamation stating "blood shall flow henceforth, if necessary, to insure the protection of the proletariat."

Since Bela Kun's advent to power there has been much friction between the Hungarian government and the Allied representatives.

HALIFAX SOON TO HAVE ITS BOBBY BURNS' STATUE

Hope to Have All in Readiness for the Unveiling at the Time of the Visit of the Prince.

Special to The Standard.

Halifax, N. S., July 17.—Part of the peace celebration in Halifax will be a torchlight procession on Saturday night. The mayor got into communication with the military authorities this morning, and arrangements have been made for a torchlight procession in the evening. It was decided that the fire department would turn out and march through the different streets. Chairman Hoyt said the apparatus would not likely be decorated because of the short time available. The mayor requests that automobile owners place themselves at the disposal of the different hospitals to convey any patients who may wish to take part in the procession.

A cable from London conveys the news that the Robert Burns statue and panels, delayed because of the war, are now completely packed and awaiting shipment on the first steamer or for Halifax by the Furness line. The information also comes from London that the figure of Burns is a masterly piece of work, executed by the British bronze moulder, A. B. Burton of Thames Ditton. The Burns committee are in hopes that everything will be in readiness for the unveiling ceremony by the Prince of Wales on August 14th.

THE HOLIDAY

On Saturday, Peace Day, July 19th, The Standard will not be issued.

YOUNG BUTLER TO BE FREED FROM DORCHESTER

Governor-General Orders Release of Young Man Whom Many Believe Was Unjustly Imprisoned.

Limestone, Maine, July 17.—Word reached here yesterday that Pte. Ira M. Butler, now detained in the Dorchester Penitentiary in New Brunswick since January 1st, will immediately be released from close custody, and no doubt allowed to return to his home at an early date.

Young Butler was tried before a district Court-martial in the city of St. John, N. B., on a charge of desertion, having enlisted voluntarily in the early days of the war at Woodstock, N. B., and later, when visiting his parents in this state, he, along with several others, registered under the American Registry Act. While en route to comply with the provisions of the latter Act, he was intercepted at the border by immigration officials, and given over to the Canadian Military custody. He was found guilty and sentenced to two years with hard labor. Many were of the opinion that the young man, although technically violating the provisions of the Military Law of Canada, meant no offence, and did not know the grave circumstances under which he had placed himself.

Communications were directed to the Remission Branch of the Justice Department of Ottawa, Canada, interceding that the young man's case be given more consideration. The Remission Branch, under Chief Clarke, took the case up with higher authorities, and His Excellency the Governor-General, the Duke of Devonshire, on a report of the case and its facts, has been pleased to sanction the immediate release of Butler from close custody. It was pointed out that the young man was married and was in every way a most desirable citizen.

Mr. Butler, the lad's father, left yesterday for Grand Falls to confer with his attorney, William E. McMonagle, who was retained recently in the interests of young Butler.

Senate of U. N. B. Special Meeting

Two Graduates from United States Colleges Appointed to Positions Yesterday—New Professors Come Highly Recommended.

A special meeting of the Senate of the University of New Brunswick was held here yesterday afternoon, when East O. Turner, a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was appointed to the chair of Civil Engineering in succession to Professor Stiles, and C. E. Bohre, a graduate of Yale, was appointed to the chair of Forestry in succession to Professor Miller, who has obtained a position with the Illinois Forestry Department. The appointment to the chair of English was deferred for the present, as it was considered that none of the applicants was suitable. Chancellor Jones, Dr. W. S. Carter and Dr. W. C. Crockett were appointed a committee to take up the matter of further applications.

Those present at the meeting were Dr. W. S. Carter (chairman), Dr. C. C. Jones, Dr. White, Dr. W. C. Crockett, John Jennings, Inspector Hanson, Miss Hunter, Miss Grace Fleming, Sir Z. McLeod and Havelock Coy.

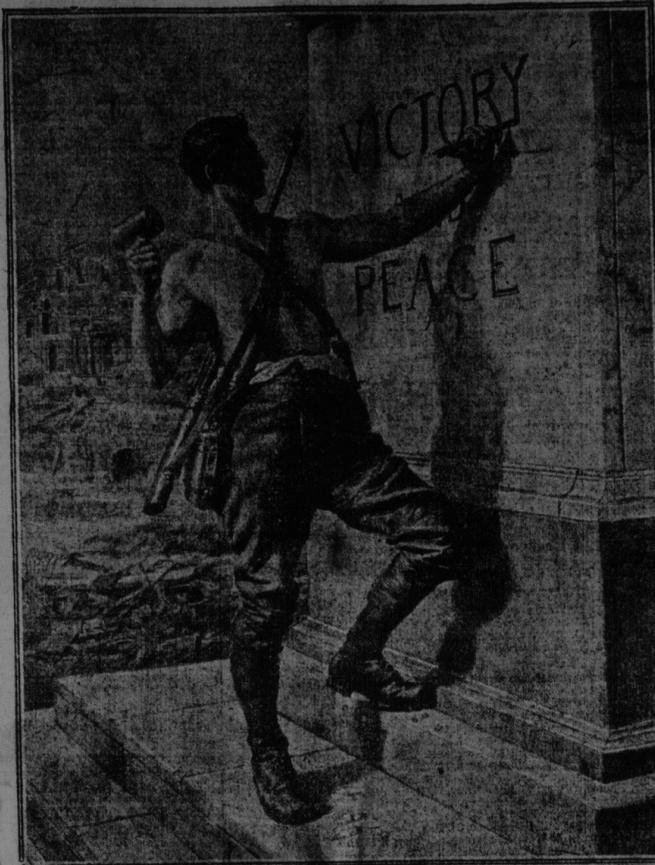

The new professors come to the University highly recommended. Each has had experience in teaching as well as practical experience with the American army.

A member of the senate said last night that men capable of filling these positions at the University are scarce. Those who have been overseas prefer to take up professions that will give them work in the open.

The war was greatly felt by the University. It was the cause of the attendance being only about half of what it was before the war. It is expected that many former students will return to college this fall and a prosperous year is anticipated.

WESTERN STATES BEING SWEEPED BY FOREST FIRES

Bulletin—Spokane, Wa., July 17.—Forest fires, fanned by heavy winds, are threatening timber and livestock in western Montana and Northern Idaho, according to reports received today by federal forest officials here. Several small towns are also reported in danger of destruction. The flames have caused the fire fighting crews to retreat.

DOMINION TRADES AND LABOR CONGRESS PUTS THE BRAKE ON THE ONE BIG UNION IDEA

Quickly Jumps Into the Gap at Winnipeg and Reads the "Riot Act" to Members of the Winnipeg Council Advocating Such a Move—Dominion Trades and Labor Council Believes in Negotiations Between Employer and Employee, and Has No Place for Mob Rule as Embodied in "One Big Union" Scheme.

Special to The Standard.

Ottawa, July 17.—The action of the majority of the members of the Winnipeg Trades and Labor Congress in voting for affiliation with the "one big union" has evoked a prompt reply from the executive of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress. Instructions have been issued to R. A. Rigg, the special representative at Winnipeg of the Dominion Congress, to proceed at once with the reorganization of the council on lines consistent with the policy of the central body and the principles of international trade unionism. In other words, the advocates of "one big unionism" are to be "organized" out of the Winnipeg council and replaced by delegates who favor more moderate methods.

GERMANS QUICKLY IN THE FIELD FOR RUSSIAN TRADE

Industrial Commission Now Reported on a Visit to Russia for the Purpose of Arranging Trade Agreements

London, July 17.—The German government is believed to be trying to establish trade relations with Soviet Russia and a German mission has visited Russia, or is about to do so, Cecil Harmsworth, under-secretary for state for foreign affairs, told the House of Commons today.

"Reputation by subsidiary bodies of their own constituted central authority will not be tolerated," asserted Tom Moore of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, discussing the Winnipeg episode today. "Such action destroys organized effort and we would sooner withdraw our charters entirely than attempt to carry on as a mob throughout the country and allow the trades councils chartered by us to be used by one big union members to destroy the bona fide trade unions."

CANDIDATES IN STANDARD'S $10,000.00 CONTEST PUBLISHED FOR THE FIRST TIME TODAY

Look Over the List of Candidates Below — If Your Name Does Not Appear, Send it to Contest Manager at Once — If Not Eligible to Enter Contest Yourself, Save Your Votes for Your Favorite—Sections Not Represented by a Candidate Offer Fine Opportunity for Someone to Enter and Win Big Prize.

Voting is Now in Order—Vote Standing of Candidates Published Soon.

Today, the list of candidates who have sent in their applications as candidates in The Standard's $10,000.00 Prize Contest is published for the first time. Today really marks the starting of the biggest contest ever conducted by a newspaper in this section, and it may be a long time before another offer, if ever, will be presented to the public to pick up in the next eight weeks, prizes of the same value as those presented at this time by The Standard. It surely is a remarkable offer when you consider the high grade prizes offered, together with the fact that everybody wins who enters the contest and remains until the end.

Look over the list of candidates as listed below and you will find that the list is composed of persons of high standing in their community. It is also composed of those who know a good thing when they see it and jump right in to capture their share of The Standard's generous offer. Those listed below are about to make the start for the friendly battle of ballots and during the remaining eight weeks will need the support of all of their many friends. Clip the daily ballot from the paper and save them for your favorite candidate; that will help wonderfully in the way of votes. There is another way to help your favorite which will give them hundreds and thousands of votes; this can be accomplished by either renewing your subscription to The Standard, or if you are not already a subscriber, take out a subscription for this will give you the voting power and will help your favorite so much. Remember that all candidates will try and see as many people as possible during the next eight weeks, perhaps they will not be able to call on you personally; you can help them save time by either sending your subscription direct to them or to The Standard with the request that the votes you are entitled to be credited to a certain candidate. The candidate will receive a receipt showing the full transaction and will know that you have been kind enough to help them without their being obliged to call on you for your support.

All districts show comparatively few entrants; this offers a fine opportunity for new candidates to send in their applications and get started while the contest is still in its early stages. There are many sections in which there are thousands of votes waiting to be picked up, which are not represented by a candidate. In these sections a local candidate should waste no time in sending in their name and getting after the votes which will surely make them the winner of a big prize. How would you feel at the end of the contest if you neglected to enter and found that the very votes which had won a big prize were secured by some outside candidate, right under your very nose? Surely you would say to yourself, "If I had entered the contest at the start, I might have had an automobile now with the votes that somebody else got right in my own section and from people who would have much rather supported me." Don't have this regret at the end of the contest, but get in yourself today and get those votes which someone else is sure to get if you do not claim them. Every day you put off entering the contest from now on is a day lost in vote getting and before you know it there will be a week lost. Why hesitate longer since everybody wins a prize, you have nothing to lose? It is unfortunate that your name did not appear in the list today, but see to it that it is sent in time to appear in the next list and that means that you should fill out an application blank now and send it to the contest manager.

Aerial Supremacy Swayed To and Fro

But Germany Officially Admitted Her Defeat in the Sky in August, 1918.

HUNS STRONGER AT START

Superior During First Two Years' Fighting, Says Capt. Fawcett of Army Air Service.

Whether the Allies or Germany held aerial supremacy during the war has been a debated topic in nearly all of the warring countries. Captain Roscoe Fawcett of the Air Service has written a "post mortem" article in the last issue of the United States Air Service, the official publication of the Army and Navy Air Service, in which he sets forth the varying conditions of aerial supremacy as based on official documents and charts.

The article states that it is definitely known that Germany "figuratively" was "officially" given up the aerial fight on Aug. 17, 1918, for the Hun swan song appeared in several official reports captured or discovered about armistice time.

The article follows in part: "Apparently the Germans found themselves unable to make good, during active conditions, the replacement of personnel and machines destroyed, and bad weather periods came as much welcomed respite as they were utilized to bring the air units back to fighting trim. Thus each tooth on the curve stands had a peak of its own, representing the tail-end of a replacement period."

"Documents captured by the French in July and August, 1918, gave first evidence of the approaching crisis in German aviation affairs. The Huns attributed this crisis to the heavy losses of the big offensive and also to the unsatisfactory performance of the Pfalz D-III machines and the Fokker triplanes and one or two other types that were aging, such as the Albatros D-III and the D-5, which necessitated the development of newer types."

"The situation rapidly grew worse as the allied pressure increased, and despite the frenzied arrangements of the German air officials that the Friedrichshafen and other factories were to be enlarged immediately and that new materials were to be acquired from Russia and Rumania, late in August, 1918, the German command apparently saw no reason to keep secret the fact that the inevitable had come."

"The writer says that nobody who has seen the 'Hun in his air' has come away with the love for him, but he says that it must be admitted that aerially the Germans were at no time in total eclipse, and that over a long stretch of the four and a third years of the war the Germans maintained an actual aerial supremacy over the combined flying forces of England, France and Belgium."

"Our Air Service Just Starting."

"When the war ended, France had something like 102 or 103 squadrons in the zone of operation; England, between 70 and 80; including four on the Italian front; Belgium, five; one of which was a crack squadron; and the United States, 40 or thereabout, with the prospects for an effective aerial force of four times that number of units in operation early in 1919. The armistice caught the American Air Service just at a moment when two years of uphill struggling against difficulties gave promise of a most gratifying realization. One point will suffice to illustrate:

"During the four months immediately preceding the armistice no fewer than 71 American service squadrons were dispatched across the English Channel to France, assigned to the Canadian trained squadrons already on the ground. Further, on Nov. 11 an additional 70 squadrons of enlisted mechanics were ready in the British Isles for immediate duty on the American front."

"A summation of the effective allied strength in the air on Nov. 11 probably would have shown a grand total of approximately 215 or 220 service squadrons. As against this the Germans were credited with 310 identified units, distributed on the various fronts. A great many of these 310 German units, of course, were flights operating as separate units—not squadrons. Probably the grand total of Hun machines in operation at the time did not exceed 3,000."

"The French had some wonderful individual pilots, and the higher-ups played to such men as Guynemer and Focke. When these officer stars desired to go to Paris they simply waved good-bye. There was not the discipline that existed in the British or American forces. The best French pursuit machines were the Squad and the Niépce, the effective bomber the two-seater Iroquois and the best coast machine the Salamander two-seater."

"Undoubtedly the British could have placed as many squadrons at the front as the French, but the British were in the war decided it would be impossible to maintain more than seventy or eighty squadrons at top efficiency, and thus the concentration of the fewer number. This policy, was much simpler for the British than it would have been for the French, because of the difference in the front line mileage held by the two armies. Once a British squadron flew across the Channel to an already prepared airbase it was ready for rough and tumble tactics, and usually was kept ready."

"Considering the condition of the development of the third army consisted of one of the outstanding feats of the war."

"France entered the war with between 500 and 600 fairly serviceable machines, the chief defect in the French corps being the diversity of types. She had a well trained and numerous personnel, however, and good motor cars between 1910 and 1912 there were more builders of successful airplane engines in France than in any other country."

Germany Not Idle.

"By no means had the Germans been idle. The late Kaiser's aerial armament, both in numbers and equipment exceeded the combined forces of England and France. Most of the 600 or 700 airplanes were standardized throughout each machine equipped with bomb-dropping devices, speed and altitude recorders, and cameras. The equipment also included automatic engine-starters, 100 per cent. more efficient than those of the Allies. The wireless equipment and the system of wireless stations along the coast and frontiers assisted materially in the Hun aerial supremacy in the early stages of the war."

was not much to choose between the rival powers, as a very little progress had been made in the development of this craft prior to the war. England and France had a few seaplanes, and Germany had bought the Spanish seaplane and also was developing the Wright seaplane. The French and British seaplanes did good work from the start, laying a heavy toll on Zepplins and doing good spotting for the battleship guns. It was a seaplane that gave Adl. Beatty of Jutland battle fame the first news that the German grand fleet was out.

"With all its fecklessness and intangibility, aerial supremacy undoubtedly lay with the Germans during the early stages of the war. During the first two years, up to the first battle of the Somme in 1916, the Germans harassed the over-laid Allies in the air. Fortunately for the British, and the world at large, the Hun had the Russian front to preoccupy, and many of Germany's finest Albatros and Rumpler biplanes were sent there, while Taube-type monoplanes were concentrated on the Western front in an attempt to overwhelm the French."

"With the debut of the combat patrol in 1917 and the appearance of new type English planes, the Allies began to make progress. But the Huns countered late in 1917 with the D-VII, Albatros and a new Rumpler and at no time were in total eclipse until past midsummer of 1918, when every resource had been staked on the great German attempt to break through the British lines to the Channel ports."

The article states that the Allies did not begin flying late in the war, and undoubtedly had the best pilot. Much credit is given the Germans for the wise manner in which they planned their attacks and handled their squadrons. The article ends by saying that the German air command gave the Allies a "jolt that should serve as a perpetual warning against future butterfly breadwork so far as the development of air service is concerned."

300,000 who drive Maxwells of this very model will tell you that reliability plus, ability to endure, ability to stand the gaff of any going, is built into the Maxwell.

Reduced to a single word its story is—reliability.

But now this great car becomes even greater by five important improvements:

1. Hot Spot and Ram's-horn, which make the car run smoother, steadier, and with less wear, and give greater mileage.
2. Improved electrical unit, which cuts down battery wear.
3. New type radiator, which makes the car more pleasing to the eye.
4. New upholstery and seat springs, which produce a better riding quality.
5. A new top fabric, making the top more durable (tops so often are the first things to go in a car).

An important sum of money has been expended to make it a greater Maxwell. Yet the price is only $1395, f.o.b. Windsor.

Thus if you were hunting for nothing more than a bargain in a car you would not go further; but consider how superior a car you're getting when you buy a Maxwell.

LITLESS, PEEVISH GIRLS

When a girl in her teens becomes peevish, listless and dull, when nothing seems to interest her and dainties do not tempt her appetite, you begin to wonder what she needs more good blood than her system is provided with. Before long her pallid cheeks, frequent headaches, and breathlessness and heart palpitation will confirm that she is anemic. Many mothers as the result of their own girlhood experience can promptly detect the early signs of anemia, and the wise mother does not wait for the trouble to develop further, but at once gives her daughter a course with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which renew the blood supply and banish anemia before it has obtained a hold upon the system.

Out of their experience thousands of mothers know that anemia is the sure road to worse ills. They know the difference that good red blood makes in the development of womanly health. Every headache, every gasp for breath that follows the slightest exertion by the anemic girl, every pain she suffers in her back and limbs are reproaches if you have not taken the best steps to give your weak girl new blood, and the only sure way to do so is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

New rich red blood is infused into the system by every dose of these pills. From this new rich blood springs good health, an increased appetite, new energy, high spirits and perfect womanly development. Give your daughter Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and take them yourself and note how promptly their influence is felt in better health.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail post-paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Oak Hall's Annual Mid-Summer Sale

The First Days of This Sale Have Proved It To Be
ST. JOHN'S GREATEST MERCANTILE EVENT

OUR CLAIMS have been substantiated—The usual practice has been followed of reducing prices on everything in our store—not because of but in spite of conditions.

LARGE VOLUME AT MINIMUM PROFIT is the motto adopted, and as we adhere strictly to this, it explains why there are so many real money-saving opportunities to be taken advantage of.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS worth of new merchandise has been purchased especially for this event. At prices which in many instances are actually less than it will cost the makers to replace them. We have been able to accomplish this only through our tremendous cash buying power.

YOU NOW HAVE every opportunity to benefit by this cash buying power—we have saved tremendously in our purchases—which are shown by the markings on the goods, so you—the purchasers—in the final analysis get the actual saving—we get ours through doing a bigger business.

Only a few items are mentioned below—There are hundreds of others just as good—and some better ones, too.

The St. John Standard

ST. JOHN, N. B., FRIDAY, JULY 18, 1919.

HARBOR COMMISSION.

Before committing ourselves to a final decision on the proposed harbor transfer our people should give careful thought to the respective advantages of civic control, commission and nationalization. Let us not forget for a moment that the proposal now under consideration involves merely placing St. John harbor under commission. This property is not being taken over by the federal government as a national institution. St. John is simply to be reimbursed for the amount of its outlay to date less bar gain counter reductions, and if the sale proceeds through this purchase price, all future expenditures, and all costs of operation, will be chargeable against the harbor itself. Under civic control as it has existed for the past twenty years St. John has been able to go to the federal department of public works with reasonable requests for the construction of necessary works or for aid in providing such works. And the public works department has on different occasions set apart generous amounts to be expended. These appropriations have not been charged against St. John harbor as such but have been included in the ordinary man-revenue producing expenditures. The result is that the capital outlay against St. John harbor as it will appear includes only those amounts paid out by the City of St. John. Under harbor commission the two million dollars purchase price is the first investment of capital and on this the board of commissioners must produce five per cent. payable to the government for the money loaned. If during the next few years a million dollars more is expended, that million must also produce five per cent. In fact, every penny of outlay on St. John harbor will be expected to return to the government the interest of that investment. In addition to this our harbor must meet the cost of management in every detail, including salaries of commissioners appointed by Ottawa at amounts fixed by Ottawa. It must provide insurance, upkeep, and all other incidentals out of current revenue. In short, every possible expenditure on capital and operating account will be charged against the harbor itself, which must produce a specified return. There will be no more assistance from the public works department in the way of contributions for necessary work. The purchase, therefore, is merely a loan from the federal government on which it intends collecting interest. It is thus easy to see that if this property is to pay a return on all the money hereafter invested in it that return will be a much greater amount than would be required were the harbor still in the enjoyment of occasional grants from the public works department. In order to produce this increased revenue, wharfage rates must eventually be advanced. Whether such advance will adversely affect business is a matter of opinion, in certain respects our rates are already high, in other respects the rates are low. The new scale about to be made effective must of necessity be further increased before very long if the existing wharves are to be renewed and additional equipment provided. Failure to produce this necessary revenue will not bring relief for the annual deficit, if such there be will merely be added to the amount of invested capital and interest charged on that deficit during future years.

A DISHONORED RULER.

If Ex-Emperor William were the sort of man he pretended for years to be, instead of a cowardly murderer, as he actually is, he would today be a voluntary occupant of an English prison cell. Instead of skulking behind the forced protection of Holland's government and attempting to avoid arrest. There would, no doubt, be a measure of sympathy for this creature if, in the closing hours of his career, he had displayed any evidence of bravery, his personal conduct had indicated the least trace of true royalty. But this man, who for years posed as the world's greatest military leader, who commanded obedience from millions of better men than himself and who, by accident of birth and from the shelter of a throne, managed to delude the world, is at last revealed in his true colours, as a pitiful weakling lacking in all those qualities which go to make a king, the object of scorn and contempt even of the meanest of his subjects. History records many instances of defeated rulers who, at the climax of their lives, have killed themselves rather than fall into the hands of their enemies, of others who have surrendered, admitted their defeat and heroically accepted the punishment imposed. But William of Germany is creating a new record in showing to the world a king who, in the hour of personal danger, preferred hiding behind the national honor of a helpless neighbor, skulking like the miserable wretch that he is in a frenzy of fear lest deserved punishment should overtake him.

HIGH SCHOOL ENTRANCE.

In connection with the High School entrance papers, it is stated that although twenty-eight of the pupils failed to pass the examinations, this was in no case due to raw marks on the nature study paper. This paper was wholly absurd for presentation to boys and girls living in the larger centres, and it might readily be expected that the marks earned on that examination fell below the average of the other subjects. Whether this was the case or not the statement is now made that although the standing of many pupils might have been different if a suitable nature study paper had been submitted, the success or otherwise of the twenty-eight who failed was not affected. On the whole the papers this year formed a very reasonable test of the year's work. The questions perhaps were not as difficult as are sometimes given, but allowance was made for the fact that a great deal of time was lost because of the closing of the schools during the epidemic of influenza and that the year's work was to some extent limited on that account.

PEACE DAY.

Tomorrow, St. John, in common with the rest of Canada, will observe the completion of peace. The programme for the local celebration is simplicity itself and includes merely a band concert, several addresses and a little fireworks celebration at night. Interest in the affair is not very intense and it is altogether probable that many of our people will take advantage of the declaration of a public holiday to spend that day elsewhere than in the city, leaving to those who are unable to go away the duty of participating in the public gathering. It is difficult to arouse popular enthusiasm in a condition which has become commonplace and although the official declaration of peace is an occasion of the utmost importance, yet we have had peace for the past eight months and has become quite accustomed to the idea.

WHAT THEY SAY

Abuse of Asylum. New York Herald: If William Hohenzollern has been directing any of the criminal or political activities of his adherents in Germany from his Dutch retreat what right has Holland to talk about her neutrality?

Movies and the Eyes. The Scientific American: Moving pictures, under favorable conditions, do not cause so much fatigue of the eyes as the same period of concentrated reading. When there is eye discomfort there is usually some ocular defect, which should receive the attention of an eye specialist. Under favorable conditions moving pictures causing fatigue, if continued, become unpleasant, and may, if persisted in, become harmful, a condition which is greatly aggravated by fixed staring at one spot on the picture, a practice which should never be indulged in.

The Issue Joined. New York Globe: The closer we come to the actual conflict in the Senate over ratification of the peace treaty and the league covenant the more apparent does it become that the issue must be fought out on the fundamental problem, with minor aspects pushed into the background. When President Wilson goes before the country to defend the covenant he has one real question, and one only, to ask: Will America undertake to do her share in maintaining peace and order throughout the world? If the answer is Yes, then the covenant should be accepted without amendment and without reservation. For if America enters the league with reservations, so can any other country; and an agreement amounting to a mere subscription to a different thing will not and cannot have any force or meaning.

Our Improved Conditions. Kansas City Star: Hours of work have been greatly shortened in the last fifty years. The work of women and children has been restricted. Education has become more general. Books, magazines and newspapers have become abundant and cheap. Music in one form or another is available for almost every home. Reproductions of the great art works of the world are to be had at a nominal cost. Capital has been accumulated for great numbers of things that could not have been undertaken. Schools and hospitals are built on a scale never known before. Every town has its public library, its theatre, its comfortable hotel. Transportation has been enormously developed. The steamship, the railroad, the trolley, the motor car are all available for a large proportion of the population. The home is full of labor-saving devices that were unknown to our grandfathers.

Cost Would Be Heavy. Victoria Times: W. F. Nickle, Unionist member for Kingston, declared that the maintenance of a permanent force of 10,000 men would involve an annual cost of $15,000,000. Mr. Nickle's estimate is too low. The cost is certain to run to $20,000,000 per annum. This, however, would not cover the whole expenditure required by the Department of Militia and Defence, for maintenance of a permanent force of 10,000 men would require, in the military budget, is not the only one. If Canada maintains a permanent force of 10,000 men Parliament probably will have to vote between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 per annum for the whole military service, or nearly three times as much as it is appropriated in 1913.

Little Benny's Note Book

BY LEE PAPE. Yesterday afternoon I was throwing a tennis ball up against Skinny Martin's house and catching it again trying to see how near I could come to the window without actually hitting it, and my arm slipped and the ball hit the window and made a long crack in it the shape of lightning, proving it properly wasn't extra good glass, and Mrs. Martin opened the window and stuck her head out, saying I would have to pay for a new pane and she would send Mr. Martin around to my house when he came home. And after supper I was sitting on the front steps and Mr. Martin came up, being even skinnier than Skinny on account of having more to do with the window, and he said, 'Tell your father I wish to see him.' Yes sir, I said. And I slow went up in the setting room where pop was, and I stood there a while watching him smoking and thinking, and pop said, 'Well, do you think you'll know me if you see me again?' Did you ever see Skinny Martin's father, pop? I said. I believe I have, a long gentleman, isn't he? said pop. Skinny as anything, I said, and pop said, 'Ah, yes, that's the impression I was trying to think of, skinny as anything.' And he kept on smoking and thinking and I kept on watching him, and pritty soon I said, 'Do you want to see him now, pop?' I do not, and if anybody asks me what was the silliest question I've heard this week, I'll know what to tell them, said pop. Yes sir, I said. And pritty soon I said, 'Well shall I tell him you don't want to see him, pop?' For the love of Peet, were is he, was the big idea? said pop, and I said, 'He's outside on the front steps he wants to see you.' Well, well in the name of all that's reasonable didn't you say so at first, was he wunt? said pop. He just said he wanted to see you, he didn't say 'w', I said. Not saying I knew you without him saying, and pop quick went down stairs and so did I, the man's different being that he went out the front way and I went out the back.

at the Zoo. Glancing at the clock a moment later, he said: "What are you laughing at, Harry?" "I was jus' laughin' to think of a stork carryin' a hippopotamus," returned Harry.—Boston Globe.

A BIT OF FUN

HE THAT ALONE WOULD BE. He that alone would be, let him arise and come From out the quiet, stagnant canyon, To find a dwelling in a city where the thousands dwell. And there abide. The hermit, weary of mankind's ignominious strife, Flies to the forest, or in dark retreat Secludes himself. O fool! There is one secret place— The city street. And there he some who take the convent cell and hope Thus to avoid earth's pleasures and false joys, While grim seclusion, bound with brass, awaits the seeker, 'midst A city's noise. The prairie dweller, lone, may see The change from dreary white, nor ever hear His neighbor's voice, but birds and beasts give him companionship Amidst the dream. In the city you can live and walk among The crowds as through a drifting, misty zone— Can hear strange voices, see the uncounted faces of mankind, And be alone! Or in your chamber note strange footsteps pass your door That evermore go past—with topside Can mark the cheery laugh, the scrag of talk, that put bounds to Your solitude. You that alone would be, arise today and come From cave and cell, from prison and prairie wide, And hide yourselves forevermore among the multitude, And there abide!

THE GOODS, ALL RIGHT.

First Gossip—"Don't tell a soul, but I saw a whole barrel of whiskey delivered for the Topoleys' attention in broad daylight." Second Gossip—"How'd you know it was whiskey?" First Gossip—"Why, Topoley himself helped the delivery man handle it with care.—Buffalo Express.

HIS OPINION.

They were talking about that terrible cry, "Man overboard!" "Only those who have been roused from midnight slumber on board ship can comprehend its meaning," said a seasoned traveller. "The sudden alarm, the fear and horror—" "Oh, yes, they can!" replied a lame little shoemaker, who had no repute as a traveller. "I heard it once when I was on a ship, and I realized the horror of it more than anyone else." "You couldn't!" said the great traveller contemptuously. And the assembled company sided with him so a man. "But I could," persisted the cobbler. "You see, I was the man who fell overboard."

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE.

A man from a bone-dry Arkansas community went to a wet Missouri town and was invited by an acquaintance to have a drink, says an exchange. In the saloon the friend asked: "What are you going to have?" "Have?" dreamily returned the visitor, blinking at the glorious array of bottled and bottled goods. "I ain't going to have nuthin'." "What do you mean, Gabe? You won't have a drink after coming all this distance?" "Nope!" answered the Arkansawyer. "There ain't no such place as this. I'll wake up in a minute." And Harry Laughed. The head of the family glanced up from the paper and remarked: "I see there's a new hippopotamus

Mrs. D. B. Pidgeon Well Remembered

Tendered Luncheon Yesterday Prior to Leaving for England and Received Presentations from I. O. D. E. and Red Triangle Committee.

Mrs. David B. Pidgeon, wife of Major Pidgeon, who has accepted an appointment in London, was yesterday presented with a handsome travelling bag and bouquet of American Beauty roses by the members of Royal Standard Chapter, I. O. D. E., of which she has been an active and useful member, and a beautiful bouquet of roses by the canteen committee of the Red Triangle.

Yesterday afternoon the members of Royal Standard Chapter I. O. D. E., gathered in the chapter room, Germania street, and Mrs. E. Atherton Smith, regent, in a few well chosen words presented to Mrs. Pidgeon a handsome travelling bag and large bouquet of American Beauty roses, expressing regret at the severing of the very pleasant ties which had existed between Mrs. Pidgeon and other members of the chapter.

Mrs. Daniel Mullin then read the following address:
To Mrs. David B. Pidgeon:
Our Dear Friend and Associate:
We have assembled here this afternoon with mingled feelings of joy and sadness in our hearts—joy that we are to honor you as our esteemed guest and offer this little tribute of our affectionate regard—sadness because it is the occasion of our farewell to you, who with your loved ones, are about to take up your abode in the Motherland.

With your charming personality and ever willing disposition to co-operate in the work of the chapter you have endeared yourself to us all and need us to say that your sunny skies are overcast at the thought of your departure. The silver lining appears, however, in the reflection that your husband's military work has been appreciated by the provision for Major Pidgeon of a permanent position in the world's great metropolis. But though the ocean shall divide us we shall always be with you in spirit, dear friend, linked by the loving ties of memory.

Wishing you bon voyage and all the choicest blessings of peace now so gloriously inaugurated, we lovingly bid you adieu, and ask you to accept this token of our abiding friendship.

From the Officers and Members of the Royal Standard Chapter, I. O. D. E.

After the reading of the address Mrs. Pidgeon thanked the members of the chapter for the kindly words and the tangible expression of their regard, which she assured them would be treasured by her as a remembrance of happy days spent in St. John and the comradeship which had existed among the members of the chapter in their patriotic work.

Later the gathering adjourned to the Green Lantern where Mrs. Pidgeon was the guest of the chapter at lunch time yesterday Mrs. Pidgeon was the guest of Mrs. Kühring, Mrs. Powell and members of the canteen committee of the Red Triangle and Mrs. Kühring on behalf of the committee presented to the guest a beautiful bouquet of roses.

Major and Mrs. Pidgeon and their two children leave tonight for Montreal, whence they will sail on the Tunisian for London, to take up their residence in the English capital.

GUM DECAY CAUSES TOOTH DECAY

Healthy teeth need healthy gums to hug them. Else they will loosen in Pyorrhoea. Tiny openings will come in the gums to act as the gateways of disease germs, which infect the joints or tonsils, or cause other ailments.

Forhan's prevents Pyorrhoea, if used in time and used consistently. No mere toothpaste does. Are your gums tender? Are they bleeding? If so, you are certain to have Pyorrhoea (Riggs' Disease). Four out of five people who are over forty have it.

To you we cordially recommend Forhan's. It preserves the gums which hold the teeth secure. Forhan's cleans the teeth scientifically—keeps them white and clean.

If gum-shrinkage has already set in, start using Forhan's and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment.

Forhan's FOR THE GUMS

To Keep Skin Fresh and Fine These Heated Days

It would be much better for the skin if little cream, powder or rouge were used during the heated term. Mixed with perspiration, dust and grime, these things are anything but beautifying. Ordinary mercurized wax will do more for the complexion, and without giving an oily, streaked, spotted or rusty appearance. It is the ideal application for the season, as it not only keeps the pores clean, but daily removes particles of sear skin which have been exfoliated by dirt or weather. By constantly keeping the complexion clear, white, satiny, it does more toward perpetuating a youthful countenance than any of the arts or artifices commonly employed. One ounce of mercurized wax, obtainable at any druggist, will completely renovate the worst complexion. It is applied at night in cold cream and washed off in the morning. There's nothing better for tanned, freckled or reddened skins.

"Has Done Me World of Good," She Says

Mrs. Eva Tebo of Saint John Relieved of Five Years' Trouble—Declares Tanlac is the Best Medicine on Earth.

Mrs. Eva Tebo, who lives at 20 Arcadia street, St. John, is an ardent champion of the merits of Tanlac since she began taking it several weeks ago.

While discussing Tanlac, which has been so beneficial to her, Mrs. Tebo became very enthusiastic, and in commenting on her improved condition, said:

"I have suffered terribly from indigestion for five years, and when I commenced taking Tanlac, I didn't believe I would ever be a well woman again for all the medicines and treatments I had taken up to that time, didn't do me a particle of good, and my condition was gradually getting worse all the time. Everything I ate soured on my stomach, and I would have had smothering spells, and often my heart would palpitate something awful on account of the gas that formed from this sour, undigested food. I would often suffer so much from shortness of breath after going to bed, that I would have to get up and walk the floor all night long. My nerves were in bad condition, too, and the least noise would upset me. I suffered a great deal from headaches and there were times when it just seemed that my head was going to burst. I finally became so weak and run-down that when I tried to do my housework I would become completely exhausted in a few moments, and would just have to stop and let the work go.

"Some of my friends kept insisting on my giving Tanlac a trial until I was finally persuaded to buy one bottle and see what it would do for me. Well, I must say that Tanlac has done me a world of good, and I feel like a different person altogether now. In fact, my troubles have been completely overcome, and I am enjoying as good health in every way as I ever did in my life. I have a fine appetite, and can eat just anything I want without suffering afterwards. My nerves seem to be in perfect condition, and I sleep like a child every night. Those splitting headaches have left me, too, and that alone would make me say that Tanlac is the best medicine on earth. I am completely rid of stomach troubles, and am never bothered with shortness of breath, and never have those smothering spells any more. I am as well and strong in every way as I ever was in my life, and can do all my housework without the least trouble, and when I finish all my work, I feel so fresh that I often dress and go to a picture show. Tanlac did all that for me, and as long as I live I will never lose an opportunity to say a good word for it."

Tanlac is sold in St. John by Ross Drug Co. and F. W. Munro under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative.—Adv.

How to Rid the Skin of Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

A simplified method is here given for the quick removal of hairy or fuzzy growths and rarely is more than one treatment required: Mix a stiff paste with some powdered talc and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every hair has vanished. This simple treatment cannot cause injury, but care should be exercised to get real delatone.

WOMEN CURED AT HOME

Women's disorders always yield from the very beginning of the treatment to the mild but effective action of Orange Lily. Within two or three days after commencing its use the improvement becomes noticeable, and this improvement continues until the patient is completely cured. Orange Lily is an applied or local treatment, and acts directly on the woman's organs, removing the congestion, toning and strengthening the nerves, and restoring perfect circulation in the diseased parts. In order to convince all suffering women of the value of this remedy, I will send a 49 cent box, enough for 10 days' treatment, absolutely free to each lady who will send me her address. Enclose three stamps and address Mrs. Lydia W. Ladd, Windsor, Ont.

The New Hospital Will be Used as a Home for Drug Addicts.

New York, July 17.—John D. Rockefeller has presented a hospital to the City of New York to be used on Warwick Farm, formerly a city home for inebriates, but which, now that the country has gone dry, is to be turned into a home for drug addicts. Mayor Hylan announced today the acceptance of the gift. The building, given by the head of the Standard Oil Company, was erected during the war at a cost of $300,000 as a war demonstration hospital.

ANOTHER DECLINE IN EXCHANGE RATE ON FOREIGN MONIES

British Sovereign Drops to a New Low Level—Italian and French Monies Drop—No Relief in Sight Say Bankers.

New York, July 17.—The exchange rate on the British sovereign, after falling today to a new level of 4.2 3/4 rallied vigorously before the close of the market when demand bills were noted at 4.32, a figure still more than fifty points below pre-war quotations. The depression in European money values was not confined to sterling. French francs falling to 7.20 on demand, and declines also being marked in Italian and North European monies. It was learned today that the situation was discussed last night at a meeting of the Foreign Exchange Bankers. According to members of the association no action was decided upon. North McLean, of the Mechanics and Metals Bank, one of the bankers who attended the meeting, said today that he knew of nothing that could be done by financiers on this side of the ocean to check the decline.

"England might ship gold here," said Mr. McLean, "and it might prove a stopgap, but it would not alter the basic fact that England is importing goods far in excess of her exports."

STOCKS FIRM AT OPENING OF THUR'S MARKET

The Gains Made on Early Trade Were Turned to Losses by a Violent Break at the Close.

New York, July 17.—Stocks were firm to strong at the opening of today's active trading, making further variable gains during the relatively dull inter-session, but broke with considerable violence towards the close, when numerous and substantial gains were negated by net losses.

The reversal lacked the explanation in authoritative quarters, but rumors were current during the day that the financial powers aided by the federal reserve board intended to issue another warning against excessive speculation.

Most of the day's news was decidedly favorable to long accounts, embracing further advice of expansion in the steel industry, higher prices for copper and allied metals and comparatively easy rates for call money.

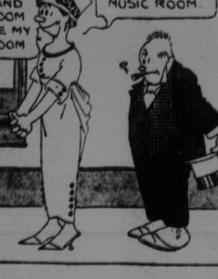

There was also pronounced adjustment of foreign exchange situation, but not until rates in London fell from new minimum with further weakness in remittances to Paris and additional depreciation of neutral exchange.

Speculative interest continued to revolve the old motors and the various commodity shares, which have made up the bulk of recent offerings. To these were added several of the minor re-organized railways, Missouri, Kansas and Texas common and preferred for instance, taking the place of other western and southwestern issues. Equipments also contributed appreciably to the broader dealings, their activity and strength being concurrent with reports that large domestic and foreign contracts were to be awarded.

Coppers made little headway, although heavy exports are said to be in process of negotiation. Sales amounted to 1,700,000 shares.

Most of today's call loans were made at six per cent, although this was shaded at times for the better class of collateral, but time funds held at six per cent for all dates. Liberty bonds were firm and foreign issues steady, but rails and industrials were slightly irregular. Total sales, par value, aggregated $11,350,000. Old United States bonds were unchanged on call.

Trompeloup Razed In Gunless Battle

Naval Records Contain Tale of How Bluejackets Razed An Air Station.

TOWN QUICKLY LEVELLED

Attack With Pick and Shovel Swept Site in France for the American Aviators.

In the navy they tell a story they call The Battle of Trompeloup, a battle that was fought by American bluejackets armed with picks and shovels. Overnight, so to speak, a French village practically disappeared and in its place there came into existence one of the finest air stations in France. An officer who was in the Battle of Trompeloup told the story in the Navy Department and he did it so well that they have taken it down in shorthand and made it a war record of the naval service.

Here is the story in part as it is officially recorded in the naval archives at Washington.

"Some of these days," it goes, "when all of our heroes, back from the war, have settled down under the vine tree to spin yarns of deeds of glory we shall hear some veteran bluejacket tell glowingly of the Battle of Trompeloup. And we who know our war history and stories of conquest will think and then wonder what new victory is this, then when the illusion is gone we will know that sometimes the pick and shovel are as mighty as the hand battery and that the digging of holes in the ground was not always done to make trenches.

Surely no point of vantage in France was ever attacked so viciously and so vigorously as was this little town of hats with the fancy name, and so surely was the victory and so complete the transition from a scattered settlement to the largest and most active air station of the United States navy, aviation in France. When the navy began to carry out its plans for aerial warfare overseas, a location was at once sought for a base, a suitable and accessible port for a source of supply, for the aerial branch of the sea service. Navy aviators were about the first Americans to arrive in France. Much important work awaited them. Eyes were needed for the navy as well as for the army. Long stretches of shore and sea had to be watched and patrolled from the air and seaplanes were a part of the incoming convoys, just as was most necessary the hovering above the sea of vigilant fliers who could look down and aid in locating the aversive periscope.

The southern part of France, near Bordeaux, was selected as a site for this base. When the scouting party came down along the Gironde river, below Bordeaux, they found this location on deep water, fine for handling and launching seaplanes and most accessible as a port for ships bringing equipment and stores from the States. It was a picturesque rolling country, with large estates and extensive vineyards, among them the richly covered grapeyards of the house of Rothschild. It was not hard to negotiate through the French government for the land concessions. Between Bordeaux and the river lay Pauillac, and still closer to the water was Trompeloup. Scouting found Trompeloup in the way and succeeding surveys proved it. There was but one thing to do, Trompeloup had to be moved. Over here we would have put the houses on wheels and rolled them back out. At the way, but Trompeloup wouldn't be rolled. It was built by a set of southern Frenchmen who perhaps through the influence and coarseness of Spain, had builded well, but not too high, their structures alike to those of our neighbors across the Rio Grande.

Just at this time the Pauillac neighborhood was swarming with sailors. Up along the coast bluejacket gunners were fighting U-boats, laying mines and taking the alternating monotony and thrill of patrol work on the North Sea. The Pauillac throng grew fearful. To be sure, there were the drills and all the routines, but these boys had enlisted for battle and they continued to fret. Finally the order came, the zero hour arrived and Trompeloup trembled in the balance. In what was once the laundry on the main street, the post of command was established and the onslaught began. Through the mud and there so other mud like Pauillac mud, the host advanced, pick and shovel, trucks and brick carts. The dangerous legions were at it. The non-combatants of Trompeloup had fled and fringing the docks of the Gironde watched with all the interest of the possessors of claims for future damages.

Soon the sailor shovellers and the pilots of the picks reached a building more formidable than the rest. One charge and they fell back for more picks while the shovellers stood in reserve. Again they went forward but not a dent. Then in came strategy. The rubble was placed about the structure, twisted at the ends and tractor attached. One mighty heave and down it came, a crumbling mass, a cloud of grayish dust. A yell went up from the attacking party. Then there was quiet. Suddenly there was a cry of terror. It came from the ruins. Sounds like a casualty and the hospital attendants moved closer and then dashed under the brick dust barrage. In a little while they emerged leading a Frenchman, chattering, expectorating, sputtering and choking. Was he hurt? No only surprised and shaken, and after being told what was being done he skated and joined the future claimants on the dock.

"Today the army occupies the former navy air supply station at Pauillac, for with the signing of the armistice all air activities ceased. As a monument to the victory over Trompeloup there still stands much of the great mass which these American sailor boys built over the ruins of Trompeloup. For in all France there was not more complete station or one better built. And it was built by the boyhood and brown of America, the sailors who had learned at many training stations to do things and do them right first as hundreds of other boys are now learning to carry on still bigger and still better the work upon which the navy has always lived up to its traditions.

When the station at Pauillac, Gironde

BRITISH PREMIER BIDS GOODBYE TO FRANCE

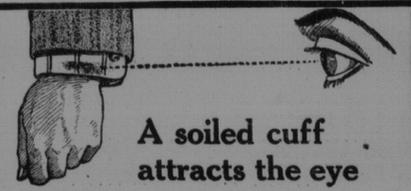

PREMIER LLOYD GEORGE BIDS FAREWELL TO FRANCE

David Lloyd George, British Premier, waves farewell to French as he departs for England after a long attendance at the Peace Council meetings.

Canada, France, was first occupied on Nov. 17, 1917, by two officers and 25 men. The officers were Ensign Ralph F. Nourse, U. S. N., and Assistant Paymaster Russel D. Thomas, U. S. N., who also made use of Trompeloup laundry converting it into quarters. By July 1, 1918, the station had expanded so rapidly that the complement numbered 109 officers and 4,600 men. They were housed in splendidly constructed knockdown houses which had been brought from the states and set up on streets which were lined with board walks. Great buildings were erected at the water's edge for the assembly and "spoke shops of the big seaplanes. These were in charge of an organization of former experts in civil life who were brought into the service and compensated. This assembly and repair was brought together and for part of the time directed by Lieut. Commander Benjamin Briscoe, U. S. N., R. F. In this time the air station had grown into a city, with the continual hum of its shops and the buzz of the Liberty motors in the planes being tried out over the station. A theatre which would set the entire complement was built and a company and band organized that was so good that Vice Admiral Wilson not only had them appear at Brest for the entertainment of the crews of the fleet, but also sent them to Paris. And in the midst of all this transformation and this work these men took out $6,581,000 in war risk insurance, and when it came to paying Liberty Loan bonds this Pauliac sent the wonderful response of a purchase of $250,000.

A soiled cuff attracts the eye

YOUR cuff is the most exposed portion of your shirt. It soils the quickest. And everyone knows how PROMINENT a soiled cuff is. It seems a magnet that draws all eyes.

A soiled cuff irritates a particular man. He keeps pushing or pulling up his shirt sleeve to hide it. It causes him to change his shirt when the body of it is still fresh and clean.

The Double Wear Cuff is a boon to the particular dresser. When the cuff gets soiled just turn it. It folds easily and lies perfectly flat whether turned in or turned out. And just think of the comfortable feeling it gives you to know that you can turn your cuff, if you should happen to get it soiled unexpectedly when down town, and it's inconvenient to go home and change your shirt.

The newest and smartest patterns are to be found in land and Wednesday night, starting a regu-

Cocoanut Oil Fine
For Washing Hair
If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.
Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful.
Just plain mulified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless)
is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this cannot possibly injure the hair.
Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoon-fuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dirt, starting and occa-sive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.
You can get mulified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

THE FRESH GUY

By CHARLES E.
VAN LOAN

His own mother could not have desired it. Vivian Potts was fresh. He was so fresh that he was almost raw.
Competent judges who knew him before he became famous admit that he was the freshest young thing that a big-league curricular ever hauled out of the baseball business.

From the very moment of his arrival at the spring training camp, a glance from rowdies without regard for standing in the world of baseball, J. Vivian Potts acted as if he believed he was doing the Panthers an honor by joining them. "Ball" Kennedy, one of the Big Chief's scouts, had seen Potts perform with a semi-professional team. Being an enthusiast, Ball had advanced the young man carriage out of his own pocket and instructed him to report at Asheville,
holding out no ropes.

Now the Panthers were, and still are, an exclusive lot. The world thinks well of them, and they think well of themselves. It is their habit to frown upon any stranger who acquaintance, and the beginner with that team must learn to show a proper and befitting reverence.

Even this cool and select circle,
young Potts introduced himself with the easy familiarity of a stray goat.
He arrived late at night, and the Panthers had their first glimpse of him
the next morning while at breakfast.
The players were all sitting around the long table when a robust torso burst upon their ears.

"Good morning, men!"
The Panthers looked up in amazement. A slender youth, neatly posed in the doorway, was regarding them with a cheerful grin. He wore the sort of clothes which the young man of Cherry Corners fondly imagines are worn at Harvard or Yale. A screaming red silk handkerchief bursting from a breast pocket out on an angle
and decorated with a dozen tiny bat-tons furnished a kind index; the bottoms of the young man's trousers
were turned up over the soiled gray
uppers of his patent-leather shoes,
and he twirled a light bamboo cane.

"Hi!" greeted the Big Chief. "The wind must be blowing some outside.
Look what blew in when the door
was open!"

Then, from the head of the table to the foot, the Panthers took a long,
comprehensive look at the entity who had just entered the clubhouse. They saw a withered and unattractive. This dove, they returned to their ham and eggs.

"J. Vivian Potts was not an ordinary individual. He strutted over to the head of the table.
"Shake the hand of a ballplayer," Chief," he said, extending his fingers.
"Knew you right away by the pictures, even if they do flatter you. My report to you. Said your outfield was a little weak this season and you needed some class. Where do I hit?"

Every outfielder at the table started savagely, but young Mr. Potts, wringing the limp and unattractive
of the Chief, did not allow the hostile sentiment to embarrass him. "Greetings, bunch!" said Potts, as he drew up a chair and planted himself between the Big Chief and "Smiling" Kelly, the star pitcher. "Greetings and salutations! Clarice, a little food here!"

For a half minute there was a long,
quivering silence.
Catten, center fielder, was first to recover his power of speech.
"Yes," said he, addressing the Big Chief in general, "I always did say Kelly was the greatest lemon picker in the country. Beats me where he gets 'em all!"

Potts laughed loudly.
"All right, young feller," he said.
"I've got your number. All I hope is that you're an outfielder, because if you are, I'm going to get your job.
You'll be carrying my bat around
before the end of the season, boy."

"Is that so?" sneered Catten malevolently. It struck him afterward that at the time he could think of nothing better.
"And listen, Charlie!" said Potts.
"Regular cream with this coffee.
Give this skim milk to some of the lived men here. Me, cream. Understand!"

"Fresh thing!" sniffed the waitress,
as she whisked into the kitchen.
"Young man," said the Big Chief quietly, "whole families have been killed for less than you have done here this morning. A little silence from you, now!"

Potts was just as fresh on the ball field. Before noon, he had been in seventeen arguments, had offered to fight with Halsey, and had all the ordinary nervous and exasperated.
His crowning feat was the total rout
of Catten.

Just before the squad returned to the hotel for lunch, Potts remarked:
"I've got ten bucks in my poor old clothes which says I can run away and hide from any man here at one hundred yards. Anybody got nerve enough to bet?"

Then he looked straight at Catten, who, as the entire country knew, was
the fastest man on the team.
"I guess I might as well see the horse of this goat now as any time," remarked Catten to the tone of a man
willing to sacrifice personal inclination to the public good.
They ran the one hundred yards,
and Potts won by a clear six feet,
seemingly without effort.
"You ain't so awful bad for an old feller," said Potts, nastily applying the verbal vinegar to the raw surface.
"Of course you've been in the game
a long time and your all stove up.
You're awful slow getting off the mark.
You start like a horse car. I'll give you some lessons."

That evening, the players lounged

in front of the hotel and watched young Mr. Potts strolling up and down under the trees with the girl who worked in the candy store. She was a very pretty girl, and some of the unmarried men on the team had tried their big city manners on her without result.

"How 'bout him, Chief?" asked Kelly, jerking his thumb in the direction of the youthful Lothario. "Back to the woods, hey?"

Farmed Out.
"Not yet," said the Big Chief slowly. "He's an awful thing, and I don't like a bone in his head, but I will say for him that he's some ballplayer. Did you see him when I worked him out on that hitting and running to first stuff? He's got it on you, Catten, and you're the best in the big league."

"First chance he gives me, I'm going to tear his head off!" threatened the outfielder. "I like a fresh guy, but he suits me too well."

Contrary to the general expectation, Potts lasted through the spring training. He was a fighting firebrand, he set at naught the discipline of the club, he quarreled with men old enough to be his father, and he talked back to the Big Chief—he swelled an unpardonable offense—but there was no denying the fact that the boy was a marvelous ballplayer—and he stayed.

Catten had given him three sound
lickings. Halsey had broken his nose;
altogether, Potts had had a very busy month, and one of his eyes was still in mourning when he listened to the verdict.

"I'm going to farm you out this summer," said the Chief. "You're going to Minneapolis. You may bring you back if I need you. Don't get too gay with that fellow Lally out there.
He murders fellows like you."

The Panthers did not grieve when Potts went West. In their honest hearts they hoped they might never never see the young man again.

"In of a fortnight's notice," said Catten, "and I never hold a grudge, but I hope the train runs off the track and busts this guy right in two in the middle. Outside of that, I wouldn't want to see a thing happen
to him."

Inside of a month after the opening of the season, the Big Chief began to get reports from his friend Lally.

"What did I ever do to you," wrote
the Minneapolis manager, "that you should hand me wild one like Potts?"
But there was an unexpected postscript at the end of the letter:

"The boy is surely a great baseball player. He's a grand-slammer for fun, but he's so fast he makes the rest of these fellows look like they're standing still. You ought to see him pick one off your eye
and slam it a mile."

Young Mr. Potts was the sensation of the Minneapolis season and the thorn in the side of St. Paul.
The fans adored him, for he was always worth watching, but no amount of argument or entreaty could make him
"play 'em safe." He hoisted on his easy chances in order to make some big ones, and the best thing he would do was to fall ten feet short of a pop fly so that he might make a lightning plunge through the air, catch the ball
three somersaults, and come up posed
like the Statue of Liberty with the ball
held aloft in his gloved hand.

He was the idol of the bleacherites,
who loved him almost as much as his fellow players hated him, and where-ever he came to the bat he was hailed with tremendous acclamations of applause.

The Big Chief read the Minneapolis
papers and sighed.
It was a hard year for the Panthers.
It was a hard year for the Panthers.
One by one their star players limped into the hospital ward. Only the pitching staff remained intact. The field was shattered; the outfield was like an old soldier's home, but the left field limping veterans on the move, fighting nose and nose with the Grays for the leadership of the league.
One by one the Big Chief called in his men. Finally he sent for Potts.

"Well, good-by, you lunkhead," said that taciturn young man after he had read the telegram. "The Chief needs me to win that pennant, I guess."

Then he packed his small trunk.
The fans mourned him sincerely, but the men on the Minneapolis team offered prayers of thanksgiving. He had been about as popular as a bald head
on a beach.

The Panthers received him eagerly.
Catten, whose right knee was very bad, greeted his teeth and refused to quit the lineup, playing on his bare nerve. Powers and Hadden, the other regular outfielders, redoubled their efforts.

"Well," said Potts to the Chief,
"throw some of these old men into the hospital and make room for a real ballplayer. I suppose you know I've been hakin' three-forty out in the business."
"Keep your shirt on!" growled the Chief. "You won't go in until I have to put you in."
So Potts sat on the bench and poured vitriol into the open wounds. The Panthers, fighting desperately to hold a few points advantage over the Grays
were in no mood for Potts' pleasure. Out of the great wealth of a few months' experience in organized baseball, the young man offered counsel from his lips like water from an artesian well. When he began to compare the Panthers' star players unfavorably with the men of Western leagues there was almost a riot.

They Tried to Keep Him Down.
The last week of the season found

"And there in front of him was the Big Chief, jogging along and laughing over his shoulder."

heard the crack of the bat. The sphere was coming straight toward him, a hit nearly placed just over the infield.
Then he began to run as he never ran before. He had made just such a play against the St. Paul club.

"Safe! Play it safe!" howled Halsey, racing over from right field to get behind the flying center fielder.

Potts should have taken the ball on the first bounce and had Miller at second base. That would have been a home run. Instead of that, the boy ran to meet the ball, and when ten feet
from it, he launched himself like a catapult through the air and thrust out both hands. A catch would have retarded the slide, but to attempt such a play was taking one desperate chance or a thousand. The ball struck Potts hard and glanced to the right,
rolling slowly along the ground.

Miller was fairly tearing up the ground between second and third, and the Panther catcher did not have to the roar of indignation which fell from the stands reached Potts' ear as he staggered to his feet, bruised, shaking, and dizzy. The Gray coach took one look at Halsey's flying legs, and then signaled Miller to keep on to the plate.

"Out!" barked the umpire.
All the noise which had gone before was swallowed up in one terrific burst of cheering. Miller, leaping to his feet, cried that he had beaten the throw "by three feet," but the umpire, grimly, removed his harness and strode back to the bench.

Potts had done his best to toss the game away, but Halsey by a wonderful throw had saved it, and while there were some who remembered to shake their fists at the center fielder,
most of them were busy cheering Hallen, who trotted in, cursing Potts over his shoulder and signaling his cap
from his head in acknowledgment of the cheering.

The Chief met Potts as he walked in to the bench, rubbing the dirt from his clothes.
"I haven't got time to talk to you now," said the manager quietly, "but if I had another hitter left, I would let you go. This inning, I told you to cut out that grandstand business, and if it hadn't been for Halsey here you'd have tossed off this game."

The other players added their tributes of censure, and it was a crushed
young man who paced around among the bas looking for his feverish stick. For the first time in his young life, Potts was tamed; he had nothing to say. He was a yellow dog;
everybody had told him so. Worse than that, he realized it himself. Once he opened his mouth,
"I thought I could make that catch,"
he said weakly.
"You thought!" snarled Kelly vis-cerally. "Didn't you know James was the next man up? He hasn't had a hit off me all season!"

Potts is Redeemed.
Before Potts knew what was happening, the wave caught him, too. He was seized and swung up on the shoulders of two half-crazed fans, who bore him through a sea of shouting faces. Men leaped up and thrust money into his hands. Mechanically, he removed his cap, and held it in front of him. Through the swirl of hats and canes, he saw his team mates scudding for the clubhouse. He was beginning to enjoy the demonstration, some leather-lunged individual with the rim of a derby hat left in his hand, hoarsely suggested three cheers
for "Potsey," and ten thousand wild men chimed in, winding up with a tiger and a shower of hats which boomed
through the air like birds.

"Take me to the clubhouse, boys!"
gasped the hero.
They took him to the clubhouse at

The Fresh Guy Humbled.
Miller, the offending second baseman, refused to lift at anything, and drew a base on balls. Kelly struck out the next man on three pitched balls. Norris swung for a curve ball, popped up a weak foul, and the Panther third baseman got under it after he had a hole, and the crowd rose to cheer him. Then came Buckley, the most dangerous hitter on the Gray team. The decision dropped back for him. Powers and Hadden yelling at Potts to play deep.

Kelly wound up slowly and delivered the ball. Out of the corner of his eye Potts saw Miller flash down toward second.
"He's hit and run!" he thought.
Buckley swung at the ball, and Potts crowd seemed to change. Hisses and groans were mixed in with the applause for the Chief's hero. This was the signal, rushed after Potts and took him by the arm.

"You're ordered to sacrifice," he announced. "Just dump one down between the pitcher and third—anything to get the Chief down there. Hunt
the first ball pitched—remember now,
the first one!"

There was a deep silence as the youngster swung himself into position,
moving his bat up and down in short,
jerky circles.
"Come on, Frank!" roared the Gray catcher to Mulvey. Here's something pretty soft! Get the bushes!"

Potts took one look at the Big Chief who was slowly edging away from first base, balancing his body so that he might plunge in either direction.
Then he looked at Mulvey. For the first time he noticed that a big man
the pitcher really was. He was chewing tobacco, and there was a sardonic grin on his thin face.

From high up in the grand stand came a single yell, high-pitched as the howl of a wolf.
"Come on, swelled head!" it said.
"Make up for the rotten play!"

Potts sees his teeth and grunted savagely. He would show 'em what a real sacrifice hit was like. He would show the Big Chief that he knew how to obey orders. He would lay one down—and just then Mulvey took a step forward, his arm flashed over his shoulder, and Potts saw what was offered him.

Now, if there was any ball in the world which was made to order for Potts, it was one on the inside corner and across his shoulders. This was what the Minneapolis man had meant when he said that he picked them out of his ear. Mulvey thought well of some inside hits; he knew nothing but that ball, and he let it fly with two yards a busher had tried to punt that ball. If they were lucky they sometimes fouled it off.

Potts saw it coming, and he could have yelled for joy. Forgotten were the good intentions and the orders of the Big Chief. Something lay one step inside his head; he knew nothing, felt nothing but the impulse to swing the bat with every ounce of strength in his wily body. There was a crashing impact, then a tremendous yell from the stands. The next thing the boy knew he was rounding
first base, and the cheering had swelled
into a mighty roar like the note of a great pipe organ. He was conscious that men were leaping from the left-field bleachers into the field,
but the sight conveyed nothing to his brain. He flashed over second base, and turned toward third, and there in front of him, jogging along and laughing over his shoulder, was the Big Chief.

"Don't run over me, kid," yelled that great man. "She went into the bleachers for a home run!"
Mechanically Potts slackened speed,
and trotted along behind the Chief,
great waves of whooping, dancing, demented humanity.

The Chief At Bat.
The Big Chief was first at bat in the last of the ninth, and when he calmly removed his cap and stroked
the dust from the plate a hospital shout when up from the bleachers.
"Kill it, Chief!" they yelled. "Kill
it!"

"Pretty lucky! Pretty lucky!" countered the Gray rooters.
The Big Chief waited for the second strike, took it without a move, and then met the third one fairly. The ball flew on a line into right field, and the Big Chief galloped on first base, yelling insults at Mulvey at the top of his voice.

Potts was the next man at bat. As he left the circle mired for the waiting hitter, the temperature of the

the head of a great procession of leaping, howling, whirling dervishes.
They set him down on the steps with one last terrific cheer, and J. Vivian Potts, big leaguer and pennant winner, opened the door and stepped inside the dressing room.

For a few seconds he stood perfectly still, his chest thrust out in front of him, his assurance regained with heavy labor.

"Welcome to our city!" he said at last. "Am't anybody here going to tell me how good I am?"
Then for the first time he became aware that the place was very still.
He seemed to have interrupted a serious conference of some sort. Smiling Kelly, one stooping half off, was looking up at him from under heavily corrugated brows.

"The Big Chief stopped forward, and removed the overhanging cap from Potts' hands.
"I'll tell you how good you are,"

said he sternly. "You had orders to lay that ball down, didn't you? And you hit it out of the lot. It wouldn't make any difference if you won forty pennants! You disobeyed positive orders, and—now I'm going to give you what's coming to you!"

Potts never had a chance to raise his guard, and the Big Chief was famous for his right swing.
When Potts opened his eyes some one was applying an ice towel to his neck. His head was in the Chief's lap. The manager's voice was stern, but there was a twinkle in his blue-gray eyes as he looked down at the youngster.

"You'll be all right in a minute,"
said he. "We're going to need you for the post-season series."
"Yes," gasped the newest of the Panthers, "and I'll about win it for you, too!"

Now, if there was any ball in the world which was made to order for Potts, it was one on the inside corner and across his shoulders. This was what the Minneapolis man had meant when he said that he picked them out of his ear. INHABITANTS OF POLISH CORRIDOR IN A QUANDARY

Badly Impressed by "Imperialism" of New Rulers, Asserts Correspondent of Manchester Guardian.

TEUTON MAJORITY IN THORN

Less Vehement Than in Posen and Are Inclined to Sing "Freedom" Hymns.

Popular sentiment and general conditions were investigated by the special correspondent of "The Manchester Guardian" in those regions of West Prussia which will form, according to the peace treaty, the Polish "corridor" to the Baltic. He writes from Thorn: "Here in this great fortress we have reached the southern limit of the predominantly German belt, or bridge, as it is called, that intervenes between genuine Poland and the sea. Here, too, we find the same excitement as in the German towns to the north, but it has a different character. The crowds are less inclined to sing 'Deutschland above all' than a hymn that is gradually taking the place as a national chant, beginning, 'We come to Thee, just God, in prayer, and ending, 'Lord make us free, Lord make us free.'"

Germans Claim Majority.

"It is significant that the crowds here are more inclined to burn singing than to nationalist demonstrations. There is still one of the great fortresses of the world, and, if speeches and protestations come for anything, it means to resist transfer to Polish hands. Thorn has, according to the census, a majority of Germans in the town in the proportion of three to two. Local Poles assert that census figures are misleading, and by private censuses of their own among people set down as Catholics the German census they attempt to show that the town's population is half Polish and half German. What value such private censuses have I leave to the judgment of those who know the statistical difficulties and requirements of the scientific enumeration of populations.

"The town is situated in the midst of an enclave of German small proprietors, one of those German land colonies set up and maintained by the Prussian government as a barrier to Polish land hunger and Polish fecundity. Beyond this enclave to the south one comes for the first time into regions where the Poles are numerically preponderant. What is most interesting about Thorn is that the Germans frankly admit what, of course, the Poles deny; that the working class is overwhelmingly Polish, while the German monopolize the bourgeoisie of all grades, officialdom of all ranks and the intellectual professions. The Poles, in short, is borned dog here and throughout the whole region.

Poles Full of Grievances.

"Everywhere we have been at pains to get in touch with Poles. No difficulties have been put in our way by the German authorities, and in each town that we have visited we have had long and earnest conferences with the local Poles. These conferences have been sought by us as well as by the Poles, and have taken place privately in our hotels.

"We have found the Poles everywhere burning with the sense of oppression, and too full of grievances to be able to discuss the future calmly. Oppression of the most drastic kind there certainly has been; it is an historic fact which cannot be and, indeed, is not denied, and of which the consequences are the inferior status of Polish minorities everywhere, and what is at the moment still worse—their present inflamed national sentiment.

"The Poles admit an improvement since the revolution, and are glad, for example, that the Polish language is now allowed in schools, but justly point out that the new German government has taken no steps toward repealing the oppressive laws and regulations. This negligence has certainly been a grave error of the Scheidemann government, and such errors carry their penalty.

Prosperity in Lower Wage.

"Wages would be lower still by far, and there would be food. Ships with food from America could be seen constantly passing down the Vistula toward Poland, but they never stopped at this hamlet, industrially paralyzed town. They might have added that German industry will be crushed by the necessity of paying the indemnity, while Polish industry will be free from such an incubus, and will certainly be quickened into life by the acquisition of the coal and iron resources of Silesia, and with the opportunity of exploiting the huge Russian market near by.

"Intellectual Poles admit the necessity of relying on German officials, technicians and business men, and maintaining German laws at least for a period of years, if the communists transferred are to continue to exist. The Socialists of the Extreme Left in Thorn and other threatened towns are mostly German, but include many Poles, who share their internationalist psychology. These men simply shrug their shoulders at the change of sovereignty. They are in touch with Poles on the other side of the line, and report that nationalist elation is diminishing among the Polish working classes, who are horrified at the calling up of men to fight for the cause of Polish imperialism in Lithuania and the Ukraine.

"Polish imperialism, they think, is overreaching itself to such a degree that nationalism is rapidly waning, and they are confident of the coming overthrow of the reactionary clique now in power in Warsaw and of the social and economic regime it represents. Polish reaction is too weak and in too exposed a position to stand the double strain of German imperialism on a grandiose scale, and Bolshevik penetration.

"On the other hand, these German internationalists accuse the Junkers and reactionaries of East and West Prussia and Silesia of exploiting popular excitement and of intending to prohibit an independent East German Republic the moment the treaty is signed, in order to conduct therefrom a campaign of arms and propaganda for the revival throughout Germany of the old nationalist spirit. What the Eastern provinces did against Napoleon over a century ago is to be repeated."

First Atlantic Steamship.
 The first ship to cross the Atlantic Ocean wholly propelled by steam was the Royal William, built by a joint stock company at the yard of Campbell and Black, in Quebec, in 1830. The designer of the ship was Mr. James Gosche, who was born in Quebec in 1809. The ship was launched in 1831, and made her first voyage to Halifax. For a time she traded between Quebec, Halifax and Boston. But on her way from Quebec to London she encountered a terrific gale on the Banks of Newfoundland which disabled one of her engines. In the following year she was sold to Spain and converted into a warship and named the Isabel Sigunda.

WOMAN'S REALM IN THE HOME AND OUTSIDE

MAKE SURE THAT YOUR NAME IS ON VOTERS' LIST!

When the referendum on prohibition is taken in the fall, women all over this province will vote on the same general qualifications as men. To compile the voting list, enumerators are about to make a house to house canvass of this entire province.

It is the duty of every qualified woman with the address at hand to see that she gets on that list when it is being compiled.

There are those who may object that the franchise is equal to both men and women, who must be British subjects, 21 years of age, and have resided twelve months in Canada prior to June 30th last, three months in the province (or where the constituency is outside of a city, three months in the county), and thirty days in the polling.

A person, who was not naturalized prior to April 15, 1917, before the same can be taken by the enumerator, must be naturalized under the provisions of the Naturalization Act, 1914, which is a federal statute. With regard to a woman of foreign birth, to be entitled to vote she must have been naturalized in her own right before April 12, 1917, or have become naturalized since under the provisions of the Naturalization Act of 1914.

Marriage of a foreign born woman with a British subject does not entitle her to be placed on the voters' list. With regard to a minor, whose parents became naturalized before the minor reached the age of 21 years, the procedure is slightly different, and it is required to secure a certificate from a Supreme Court judge that she has the proper qualifications as to residence and character, and takes the oath of allegiance to His Majesty.

All persons who have been engaged in military or naval service of Great Britain, Canada, any British dominion or of any of the allies, to a British subject and resident in Ontario at the time of enlistment, or having no permanent residence in Ontario enlisted from the province, are entitled to vote in the suffrage franchise from where they enlisted, whether or not of the age of 21 years. This applies to soldiers, sailors, nursing sisters and V. A. D's.

No person may be entered on the list for two places. Defaulters under the Military Service Act, or persons convicted of an offence under the War Measures Act, or who have been convicted of seditious or treasonable offences, are disqualified, and may not vote under a penalty of $500.

WARM WEATHER RECIPES.

A delicious salad for the hot weather is made of tomatoes and grapefruit, with French dressing. Have ready crisp, fresh lettuce leaves. Arrange on these alternate slices of tomato and grapefruit, spiced with pieces of olive; pour over the French dressing and serve very cold.

Spiced beef makes a welcome change and can be eaten either hot or cold. The following recipe was among those first year by the Canada Food Board, for which the cheaper cuts can be used:

Take a thick piece from the solid part of the flank, cover it with diluted vinegar and season it with pickle spices. Allow this to stand for several hours. Then bring it slowly to the boil and remove the spices. Add a teaspoon each of sugar and salt and simmer the meat until tender. Heat an hour before it is served.

to serve, make a savory tomato sauce or add Worcestershire sauce.

A dainty muddled beef salad is given by the current number of Good Housekeeping among other recipes, and it is as follows: 3 cups tiny beets, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 3-4 cups hot water, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 head lettuce, 2 tablespoons grated horseradish, 1-2 tablespoons granulated gelatin, 1-2 cups cold water, 3-4 cups mayonnaise.

Soak the beets thoroughly and boil until tender; rub off the skins. Add the vinegar, salt, sugar, horseradish, and hot water. Let get thoroughly heated through, and then add the gelatin which has been softened in the cold water. Pour into a shallow pan which has been previously wet with cold water. Set away to chill, cut in cubes, and serve on lettuce or coleslaw with mayonnaise. This recipe will serve at least eight. Large heads may be used and cut into cubes about an inch in diameter after cooking.

Another tested recipe from the same magazine is for pineapple cocktail, sent us by a lady from Victoria, B. C.: 1 pineapple, 1 cup sugar, 1-2 cups coconut, 1-2 cups orange juice, 1-2 cups grapefruit juice, 3-4 cups water. Boil the sugar and water together for five minutes, cool, and add the fruit juices. Cut fresh pineapple cylinders, using an apple-corer, put in glasses with coconut, and cover with the syrup.

Cold salmon dressed in vinegar is a particularly appetizing dish for the hot weather, and is a good way of using up cold salmon that is left over. Simply place the cooked salmon in a deep pie-dish, with pepper-corns, whole maize, olives, and a very little mixed white sauce, and pour over a cup of hot vinegar. Let cool and keep on ice till required. Served mashed to the same way as very good.

A few bay leaves, if procurable, add to the flavor. Serve with thin-sliced cucumber.

AGUTE NERVOUS EXHAUSTION

All Treatments Proved Useless Until He Tried "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. JAS. S. DELGATY.

R.R. No. 4, Gilbert Plains, Man. "In the year 1910 I had Nervous Prostration in its worst form; was reduced in weight from 170 pounds to 115 pounds.

The doctors had no hope of my recovery, and every medicine I tried proved useless until a friend induced me to take "Fruit-a-tives."

I began to mend almost at once; and after using this fruit medicine for 3 or 4 months, I was back to my normal state of health.

"FOURTEEN POINTS" FOR HOME CANNERS

Inspect your cans now. Be sure that the glass inside and outside is smooth.

Test the edge and the rim where the rubber meets it. If not smooth, correct the roughness by filing.

Put with covers. Test for leaks. To do this, adjust a rubber jar with hot water, put the cover on and clamp, invert. Leaks are caused by poor rubbers, slipping covers and imperfect clamps.

Discard for canning all jars that cannot be made "non-leakable."

Order new jars now. Consider carefully the size, durability, and quality of new jars.

The best jars are the simplest. They have few parts, are easily sealed, easily washed and easily stored.

The best type of jars have straight sides, wide mouths, covers easily adjusted.

Mason jar covers must be inspected. If the porcelain is cracked, or the screw leaks, replace with a perfect one.

Metal covers of the vacuum seal type must be renewed every year.

Inspect the rubber-like rim in the vacuum seal covers. If it is broken or chipped, it is imperfect. If it is crummy or cheese like it is spoiled.

THE ONE-DISH MEAL.

One of the first things we heard on food economy during the early days of the war was that people were getting fewer courses. Now we can have several courses combined in the one-dish meal.

These dishes are made up of such combinations as cheese, rice and tomato, cheese and macaroni, meat stew with vegetables and rice, baked rice with cheese, pork and beans, bean soup with milk, corn and beans, chopped meat and potatoes, rice and Hamburg steak, chopped meat and cornmeal porridge.

Bean Soup—1 cup beans, 3 small onions, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 1 cup dry crumble, 1 tablespoon fat, 1-2 teaspoon pepper, 1 cup tomatoes. Soak the beans overnight. Cook until tender.

Add crumble, 3 onions which have been browned in the fat, minced parsley, salt and pepper, egg and tomatoes. Simmer all down in a little water. Dried split peas may be used instead of beans, but in this case the tomatoes should be omitted.

Try to work out a standard of supplies. Keep account of the amounts you buy and find out how much you need for one week. Then order the staples a week in advance. It takes no more money than ordering daily and saves time and energy.

It is much easier for the average housewife to keep one bill than a dozen, and it certainly pays to keep correct accounts of the house supplies.

WAR-TIME HUSBANDS AT SIXTEEN AND NINETY.

Some curious facts are revealed in the Registrar-General's report of births, marriages and deaths in 1917.

Whereas most of the marriages used to take place in July, August and September, the favorite months now are October, November and December. Although young war-widows affected the figures, it is clear that the war was not wholly responsible for the total began to increase in 1912. Widowers, too, show an increasing tendency to take second wives.

The youngest bachelor to marry was fifteen, and the youngest spinster fourteen. No fewer than seventy-nine males died at the age of sixteen, and 89 at the age of seventeen, two of the latter marrying widows. Twenty-six spinsters married at the age of fifteen, one of them to a widower; 157 women were sixteen when they married, and of 1,200 marrying at seventeen years, fifteen married widowers.

The earliest second marriage of males was at the age of nineteen, and three widows remarried at the age of eighteen. Of thirty-one men marrying when they were turned eighty only one, aged eighty-one had never tasted the joys of matrimonial bliss previously, the rest being widowers; but out of nine women marrying before that age two were spinsters. The oldest man to be married was a widower of ninety-two, and the two oldest women were aged eighty-five, one a widow and one a spinster.—(14-15.)

THE ENGLISHMAN'S MANNERS

"The London Daily News" on the question of the average Englishman's manners—see they good or bad? George Bernard Shaw has contributed to the discussion.

"All nations have their particular code of good manners and bad manners," writes Mr. Shaw. "They depend a good deal on the speed and pressure of life; for instance, it is very polite of an Oriental shopkeeper to serve tea to his customers and discuss the news of the day before coming to business, but not even Englishmen could afford to do that in London, where many foreign ceremonies would be an intolerable and uncivil waste of time.

"I have seen a white ox purchased at an Indian market, and the peace conference is a trifle in comparison; the agitation was greater than it is at the sale of a Kerry cow, in which the whole population takes part. The sale of a horse at Tattersalls is a very different matter, and when a picture is sold at Christie's it is a point of pride with the purchaser to make his bid as if his dearest wish was that nobody would notice it. The difference is not in good feeling, but in the value of time in the community.

"Undoubtedly a man calling himself a gentleman should take off his hat when entering a lift on the Underground and handing his ticket to the young lady who works it; but at the risk of being considered a pig by Mrs. Carolyn Whipple, I bravely confess that I never do it. When a too grasping theatre proprietor places his rows of stalls so close together that persons passing along the row can only save themselves from falling into the laps of the already seated ladies by clinging to the backs of the chairs in front, at the risk of pulling them over the poorest man must use the instincts of those he passes as a precautionous person.

"Politeness in hearing a bus depends on the number of buses available, the value of your time and the urgency of your desire to reach the bus destination. It is dangerous to offer the poorest man most use the instincts of those he passes as a precautionous person.

"Manners do not differ from nation to nation, but from city to city, and even village to village. Paris is easily the worst-mannered city in the world as far as my experience goes, but Manchester runs it hard, except among the working classes. But there are plenty of well-mannered people and ill-mannered people everywhere."

Dainty Dye—For Dainty Women

Health and Happiness

Women of today seem to listen to every call of duty except the supreme one that tells them to guard their health. Home duties, church duties, war activities, and the hundred-and-one calls for charitable enterprises soon lead women to overdo. Nervousness, headaches, backaches and female troubles are the inevitable result.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which, added to my weak condition, kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness. Health and happiness. Yes, I have both now."—Mrs. J. WOODRUFF, 2843 North Taylor Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The majority of women nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. Avoid them by taking in time

NATIONAL MOTOR TRUCKS

Ask the Driver—He Knows

When it comes to the time for you to make a final choice, get into the driver's seat and say to yourself:

What is there about this Truck that will get into the heart of my driver and inspire in him a pride in its mechanical condition—a desire to always keep it fit.

There is no more exacting critic of a truck than the driver and it is for this reason that our slogan "Ask the Driver—He Knows" was created.

The driver that handles the wheel of a "National" is a satisfied driver. Beneath him he has a chassis assembly whose sturdiness and thrift has been proven through years of exacting service under all Canadian conditions.

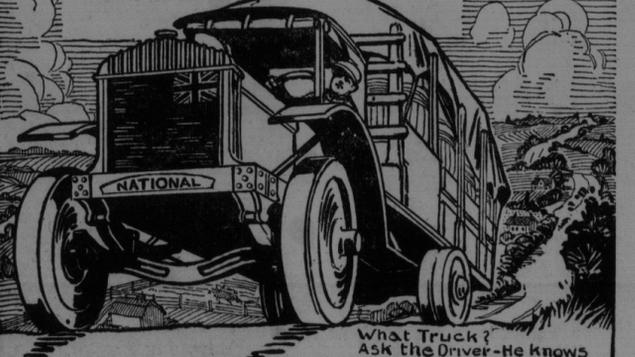

He is always proud to handle such a Truck, and pride tends toward proper maintenance, fuel economy, cleanliness, lots of oil—in general, towards truck efficiency.

Send for a copy of the National Catalogue and when it comes to a question of "What Truck?—Ask the Driver—He Knows."

The following clipping from the Inter Lake Tribune, Brown's Valley, Minn. (July 16th) will be of interest to many Sackville friends of Mrs. W. B. Milton, formerly Miss Mina Roade Palmer, of Dorchester, N. B.: W. B. Milton, county attorney of Traverse County, has been absent from the county for the past two or three weeks and not exactly on legal business either. Part of the time he put in reading up on the Canadian matrimonial laws, and after mastering them to a sufficient degree, he utilized them by taking unto himself a wife in the person of one of Canada's fair daughters. The following announcement explains his presence in Canada very nicely:

Mrs. Althea Palmer announces the marriage of her daughter, Mina Roade, to Mr. William Jackson Milton, Tuesday, July 16th, 1919, Dorchester, N. B. At home, Brown's Valley, Minn.

The marriage was duly consummated as heretofore stated and another link was added to the chain which binds Canada and the United States. After stopping at different points of interest along the route, Mr. and Mrs. Milton arrived here on Tuesday morning, where they will make their home.

Tuesday evening the Brown's Valley Band marched to the Central Hotel and played several selections, and were rewarded for their efforts by a generous check. Cigars were also distributed.

To Mrs. Milton, who comes here a stranger, the Tribune, on behalf of the people of Brown's Valley, extend a cordial welcome, and we wish also to congratulate the groom upon having the courage to his convictions and for having so successfully pleaded his case in the realm of Canadian jurisprudence. The state rests.

Says Editor of "Physicians' Who's Who."

Take plain bitro-phosphate is the advice of these physicians to thin, delicate, nervous people who lack vim, energy and nerve force, and there seems to be ample proof of the efficacy of its preparation to warrant the recommendation. Moreover, it we judge from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by the Ross Drug Co., in St. John, and most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly, and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing. Clinical tests made in St. Catherine's Hospital, N. Y. C., showed that two patients gained in weight 23 and 27 pounds, respectively, through the administration of organic phosphate; both patients claim they have not felt as strong and well for the past twelve years.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes ought to brighten and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

Physicians and hospitals everywhere are now recognizing its merits by its use in ever increasing quantities. Frederick Kohn, M.D., editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who" says: "Bitro-Phosphate should be prescribed by every doctor and used in every hospital to increase strength and nerve force and to enrich the blood." Joseph D. Harrigan, Former Visiting Specialist to North Eastern Dispensary, says: "Let those who are weak, thin, nervous, anemic, or run-down, take a natural, unadulterated substance such as bitro-phosphate and you will soon see some astonishing results in the increase of nerve energy, strength of body and mind and power of endurance."

Bitro-Phosphate is made entirely of the organic phosphate compound referred to in the National Standard Dispensary as being an excellent tonic and nerve and a preparation which has recently acquired considerable reputation in the treatment of neurasthenia. The standard of excellence, strength and purity of its substance is beyond question, for every Bitro-Phosphate tablet is manufactured in strict accordance with the U. S. Pharmacopoeia test requirements. Bitro-Phosphate is therefore not a patent medicine and should not be confused with any of the secret nostrums, so-called tonics or widely advertised "cure-alls."

Caution.—Although Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, owing to its tendency to increase weight it should not be used by any one who does not desire to put on flesh.

The People's Verdict On President Wilson's Plea

Out and out opponents of the League of Nations Covenant are not converted by President Wilson's plea that it is a "practical necessity," "the only hope for mankind," and that to reject it would be to "break the heart of the world." The leading article in THE LITERARY DIGEST for this week—July 19th—gives a country-wide survey of the press and interviews with United States Senators, enabling readers to gain a very definite idea of what the United States thinks of the President's Senate speech for a League of Nations.

While the Minneapolis Journal (Rep.) urges us "to be very sure that the Covenant does not permit the European camel to get its head inside our tent," the New York Times sounds the dominant note in public opinion when it declares that "the President's address compels ratification; it is an irresistible force which the Senate can not withstand."

But this difficulty is merely apparent. You will find a solution for it on every news-stand in the shape of THE LITERARY DIGEST, the world's greatest news-magazine, which gives you all sides of all the vital questions of the day from week to week in a compact and readily assimilable form. No Motor is Better Than its Spark Plugs

You may have the best motor in the world, but it cannot produce maximum power without efficient spark plugs.

On the same principle a spark plug is no better than its insulator which although a seemingly insignificant part of your motor or engine, must withstand the same hammering blows of gas explosions and the same rapid expansion as the steel cylinder in which it is placed. That is where 3450 insulators in

Champion

Dependable Spark Plugs demonstrate their Superiority.

3450 separate experiments have produced in Champion insulators a material so much like steel in its ability to take the hardest kind of punishment that it is practically indestructible.

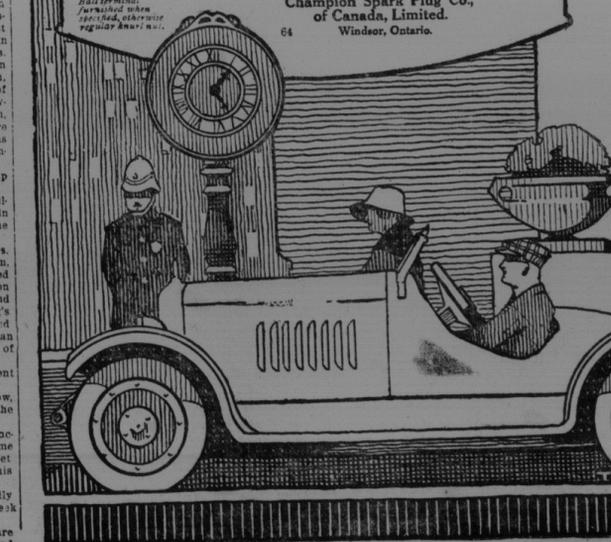

Do you wonder that four out of five gasoline motors and engines have Champion Plugs as standard equipment?

There is a type of Champion Plug that will enable your motor or engine to produce its highest efficiency no matter what its make or what it is used for.

Any spark plug with "Champion" on the insulator is guaranteed to give you satisfactory service.

Weekly Chat

My Dear Boys and Girls:— I don't believe many of you had a really jolly celebration of any kind on the last public holiday, at least none of you have reported such to me, and I was so sure you would have fishing trips, picnics and all sorts of rackets to write about.

Have you noticed many of the bird's houses empty? I have. Those little morsels seem to shift for themselves very early and evidently learn the art of walking and flying quickly.

We might learn lots of lessons from the little birds. If they can't fly, they try to hop about. So let us think every time their mothers tried to instruct them it would take them many months—instead of days—to learn to fly and hop about.

How about it chums? Will we just sit back and enjoy the Children's Corner during the summer or will we have a contest? It is for you all to decide, so let me have many opinions. Of course I need not remind you that all contributions are welcome at any season.

Let us talk matters over during the holiday time and then we can have things well thought out by the time when we should settle down to work again.

I surely hope that many of you are enjoying the beautiful country with its fields and trees, its hills and dales all covered with the beautiful shades of green and dotted here and there with a touch of color made by the many blossoms so much in evidence.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

DICK DUBBIN'S DESPERATION

(Continued from last week.) "Or play with him!" said Mollison. "Or sit on his head till his heart softens!" suggested Trimm.

Eventually Dubbin's proposal was agreed to. They would visit Farmer Bulltop and reason with him—gently, politely, but firmly.

They had little difficulty in finding Mr. Bulltop, who was bulging some of his men in the stackyard. He regarded his visitors with an eye of suspicion.

Mr. Bulltop's suspicion was in no way lessened when Mollison—who had won the toss for "first go at the brute!"—removed his cap, pressed it over his heart, and made a bow which might have satisfied a savage potentate.

"Well!" demanded Bulltop. "We have no desire to trespass on your valuable time, Mr. Bulltop," began Mollison, very politely, "but the fact is we've come about our parition."

"My parition?" grunted Bulltop. "Oh!" unanimously from the self-appointed deputations. Then Trimm had a try.

"Really, Mr. Bulltop," he said, still politely, "we built it, y' know!" "An' I'm very much obliged to y', grunted Bulltop.

A momentary silence, then Dubbin, more firmly than politely proceeded to take up the attack. "That's absurd, y' know!" he said. "All the same, to save time we'll split the difference and call it the parition. We've come about the parition."

"Well!" again from Bulltop. "You don't really intend to insist on your claim?" We built it, y' know!" "On my land!" interrupted Bulltop. "And, being a building within the meaning of the law, it's mine. See?"

The boys did not seem at least, as Mr. Bulltop wished them to see. "Come, come, Mr. Bulltop," put in Mollison again, still striving to be polite. "You are acting—er—some what harshly."

Bulltop smiled. "Like a—Grand Duke, y' know!" said Trimm. Bulltop grinned.

"Like a bully and a thief!" said Dubbin, slowly and distinctly. Bulltop neither smiled nor grimaced now. This he considered, was passing the bounds of fair argument, and, swaging his stout stick, he made a wild dash at the fully-prepared Dubbin.

Running his hands as far up this thigh as possible, he suddenly backed almost under the descending stick of the pursuing farmer.

A short, sharp run, and Dubbin, aided by the pull of the bounding bough swung himself clear, and shot forward like a stone from a catapult.

In mid-stream he reftessed his hold, and, much to the mortification of the astounded Bulltop, Dubbin landed safely in a clump of nettle on the further bank.

"Done!" gasped the peremptory Bulltop. "Brown as a toast, and on both sides!" chuckled Dubbin, even while the nettles stung.

Little Children of Mother Goose Village

Little Polly Flinders was feeling very badly for she had lost her dearest dolly. Polly Flinders could see quite nicely for a little girl and Mother Flinders had just given her a scrap of beautiful pink silk for a new frock for her doll.

She looked in every corner of the house, upstairs and downstairs and in the playhouse and at last decided to give it up.

Daddy Flinders had gone to market with a great load of apples and warm white woollen nightgowns for the little Hush-a-Bye-Baby and she had been so busy that she had not had time to look for her doll.

Such a surprise for little Polly Flinders! There was her own dearest doll, sitting right up at her with her big brown eyes, and her hair was tied with a big pink ribbon bow!

Polly Flinders remembered now that her mother had given dolly a new hair ribbon and she had forgotten to take her out of the sewing basket.

That was Polly Flinders' surprise and a happy surprise may be waiting for you in a kind, loving deed that your loving hands do.

Then, secure in the knowledge that there was no bridge within a mile, Master Dubbin proceeded to lecture Bulltop on the folly of supposing that, at his time of life and in his plump condition, he could catch anything speedier than a garden snail!

"You really ought to know better, Mr. Bulltop!" he chuckled. "You think you're the fustiest fellow in the county. You think you're the fustiest fellow in the county. You think you're the fustiest fellow in the county."

CHAPTER III Now, Master Dubbin was a boy who having once set his mind on a thing, was not to be easily discouraged.

Before morning school on the following day, without a word to his chums, he set out once more for Bulltop's farm!

He had no particular desire to see Farmer Bulltop this time. Oh, dear no! On the contrary, he had decided, if possible, to keep out of that worthy's way.

But Dubbin had heard, as indeed all Mappleton village had heard, that there was one individual capable of putting a great and deadly foe into the heart of Farmer Bulltop.

That individual was Farmer Bulltop's wife, and her name was Veronica. Once, when driving alone to market, Mrs. Bulltop had had some trouble with her pony. Dubbin had gallantly stepped forward, had seized the pony's head, and had led him through the gate, for which service he had been thanked by the fair Veronica.

Entitled to An Extra Flower. "Mother," says the younger sister, "I think it is too bad, I am sixteen, yet you make me wear such shabby dresses that it mortifies me terribly."

"My dear," said her mother, "you cannot wear longer dresses till your elder sister is married."

"Well," answered the younger sister, "she is so good as engaged to Mr. Doolittle, and I think I am entitled to an extra flower."

Happy Though Rejected. "What a wonderful way you must have of rebuking a man! You seem to send them away supremely happy."

"In Training. The humblest occupation has in it materials of discipline for the highest heavens."

A Japanese Umbrella. A Japanese umbrella is not at all like one of ours. It is about three feet across the top, and has a straight handle of wood. The top is made of thick colored paper with little wooden slats to hold it in position. The Japanese are very proud of the color and style.

A Clever Mouse. Great praise of mind is reported to have been shown by an American mouse which fell into a dish of cream. He simply swam round and round victoriously until he was able to crawl up on the butter.

A Whimsical Singer. John Abbot, the celebrated alto singer, who lived in the close of the seventeenth and beginning of the eighteenth century, was always whimsical, and sometimes would sing and sometimes would not, just as he took it into his head. When he was at Warsaw he refused to sing before the court, but his objections were overcome by the somewhat summary method of suspending him in a chair in the middle of a large hall, while some of his admirers were singing below him.

When Aristotle was asked "What a man could gain by calling a falsehood" he answered, "Not to be believed when he speaks the truth."

Grandma's Trunk

Mary's grandmother had, at length arrived for a much anticipated visit. For days, Mary and her mother had been making preparations. One morning, they had said, "Today Grandma is taking the train," and then, the next morning, when Mary was eating her breakfast, she suggested how Grandma was ordering her outfit in the dining car. (Mary had once been on a long journey herself, and she knew how the white-coated waiter comes through the grain calling, "Pine call 'o' dinah. Dining car 'o'ward Pine call.")

Then came the day when Mary's father telephoned from his office, in the last morning car, and ordered her to get ready for the train. How surprised she was, when Grandma laid it in her lap, saying "I thought the dress didn't mean anything now this summer, so I've brought my little granddaughter something for herself, something to wear, which Grandma wore when she was a little girl."

With excited fingers, Mary untied the wrappings and discovered a little carried box, one that Mary had often seen on Grandma's table at home. Mary's time Grandma had told her about Sorrento, over in sunny Italy, and all about the wood-carving and painting there. Mary's cry of delight at having the dainty box for her own brought her mother to see, and together they turned the string key in its lock; inside they found a tiny key to a beautiful amber-colored trunk. Mary lifted the beads from the cotton and laid them against her white pinafore.

"Why, Mary, what a treasure!" said her mother, almost as delighted as Mary herself. "They seem like heaps of sunshine. Don't they, Grandma?" said Mary softly, as she turned them round and round, fondling them.

"Years ago these beads were just little drops of amber, and tonight I'll tell you about those amber-pines of Sorrento that were buried in the sea. Grandma loved on the lower shelf. There were delightful whiffs of lavender, as Grandma shook out the gown, just such delicious whiffs as came from Grandma's linen chests at home."

Mary was so absorbed in smoothing the sheets of tissue paper that came tumbling out of the folds of the folds of the dress, that she didn't see Grandma take from the lower tray a mysterious looking little package. How surprised she was, when Grandma laid it in her lap, saying "I thought the dress didn't mean anything now this summer, so I've brought my little granddaughter something for herself, something to wear, which Grandma wore when she was a little girl."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By William T. Ellis.

The International Sunday School Lesson for July 20 is "The Lord's Supper."—Matt. 26:26-29; 1 Cor. 11:23-26.

Great Britain has adopted a uniform design for all the cemeteries in France into which her fallen heroes are to be gathered. In addition to the small individual headstones, each grave with a cross, there are to be two large monuments in every burial plot—a great stone cross, bearing a sword upon its face, and an altar, or as it will be called, a "Stone of Remembrance," containing the words, "Their name liveth forevermore."

What that altar is meant to be, personally and nationally, so the Lord's Supper is destined to be to Christians. It is a feast of Remembrance: in every act and phase it says, Remember Jesus Christ.

There is a very human side to this universal sacrament. Jesus, about to go forth to die, was hungry for love. He wanted to live in the hearts of his intimates. So he established this memorial rite. Wise parents do the same, that the home life may forever be vivid in the memories of their children. Family customs and distinctive observances are made a part of the mental and spiritual heritage of the sons and daughters who go out from the home roof-trees. Blessed is the person who has a rich store of these priceless recollections. They make the departed loved ones live again. That was a first purpose of the Master in creating the Lord's Supper, to be kept by his friends everywhere in remembrance of him, as a love token.

A Million Million Dead Forgotten.

More than a million million persons have lived and died and been forgotten since the lonely, homeless Saviour set up this memorial in a borrowed room in old Jerusalem; but his memory is as green and precious as ever; and the Sacrament is kept by an increasing number of his friends every year. In every land and language the Lord's Supper is celebrated.

Recollections flood a traveller's mind of strange times and places where the communion has been shared—kneeling on bare boards with soldiers; clinging to the rail of a tossing ship at sea; in a dingy little chapel in interior China, with every other person present wearing Chinese clothes; in myrtle country churches and in great religious assemblies in the homeland. Only a few days ago, before six o'clock in the morning, I was present with the monks at mass and communion in the most ancient Christian church in the world that has been in continuous use—the one in the Great Monastery of St. Catherine, on Mt. Sinai.

The universality of this observance is a visible evidence of the triumph of the cross. The Christ who died lives still in the hearts of countless men and women and children who love him best of all. This goodly fellowship is the world's hope in a troubled time. They are lovers of Christ and therefore lovers of their fellows; they have found him to be satisfaction for the deepest needs of their spirits; they offer him to the restless souls all about them.

An Egyptian Memory.

A few weeks ago, in the midst of fave times in Cairo, I heard unusual sounds proceeding from the windows of the top floor of a house across the street from my room. Childish voices carried strange music. I went out on my balcony and looked and listened and it was a Jewish family keeping the Passover! And in Egypt, the place of the Passover's beginning, the incident stirred me strangely. This was the memorial of the great deliverance, quite after the fashion of its keeping by Jesus and his little band of Jewish friends.

All that Passover means to the Jew, the Lord's Supper signifies to the Christian. "Christ, our Passover, was sacrificed for us," says the apostle Paul. "Ones, in the far-off Caucasus, a fine Cossack soldier said to me, "I am thinking all the time of the cross." He was a man of bettle, but his memory of his slain Commander was ever with him by this observance. "Ye do show the Lord's death until he come."

What the Cross Says.

Over here on the far side of the world, in the very lands where the Bible story was enacted, we hear welcome rumors that America is awakening religiously; that thoughtful persons have come to understand that society can be saved from the snare only by the divine Lord who saves the sinner's soul. They are seeing through the hollowness and mockery of a "new" social programme that is born of hate and led by selfishness. Collective ill-will and personal license will never make the world better. We need to go back to the cross of humiliation, of self-denial of crucifixion, to find redemption for our wandering times. To all who have ears to hear, this is the day of the cross. Says Alfred Noyes:

"Then once again we saw the Cross go by. The Cross that fell with all those ghastly towers, burnt black in France or mocked on Calvary. Till in one night the crosses rose like flowers.

"Legions of small white crosses, mile on mile, benched with names that had out-fought all pain, where every shell-torn acre seemed to smile.

Who shall destroy the Cross that rose again?"

"Out of the world's Wadsworth, where hope perished, Where all the forms of faith in ruin fell.

Where every sign of heaven that earth had cherished, Melted among the lava-floods of hell.

The eternal Cross that conquers might with right, Rose like a star to lead us through the night."

This old earth is going to be saved

show in our time only by Christ and those of his friends who can say, "We have been crucified with Christ."

This Hungry World.

There is more to this sacrament than a memory and a reminder. It is a feast. In emblematic mystery, and in a way passing all mortal understanding, the Lord's Supper feeds the spirits of those who partake. They share the very life of Him who gave himself as bread. His divine nature flows through their spiritual being. The weak become strong, the fearful become brave, the sad become joyful. Power and a holy peace are imparted at the table spread by Christ. His friends are nurtured by his life. "For his flesh is meat indeed."

In a time that is madly seeking satisfaction and finding it not, having its latest fruit turn into apples of Sodom, a man sure of attention when he talks of real satisfaction for the spirit. Like Athanasius of old, many persons nowadays spend their time in nothing else than to see or hear some new thing. They fly from pleasure to pleasure, from sad to sad, from pursuit to pursuit, only to grow more jaded and weary with each new experience. In order to stimulate tired appetites, they fling away conventions and moralities, and hunt the codes of man and the laws of God. Still the look of exhaustion in their eyes grows deeper, and the lines of mental multiplicity etch on their faces. Disappointment is the experience of these adventures among the husks of the far country. All the while, within reach of every weary spirit, abide the deep satisfactions of the life of the spirit. They who feast at the table of Christ know that he fully satisfies. All the hunger of the heart is gratified in him. He not only imparts his own peculiar satisfactions to those who seek peace in him, but he also satisfies all the other joys of life. Home and dear ones and work and play and friendships are all greater when they are "in him." The rewards of the Christian religion are as many-sided as life itself.

Therefore we find the Saviour of Jesus himself to his church through out the ages in the form of a feast. He feeds and he satisfies. The Lord's table is a board of replenish. When he first established it, in that Jerusalem upper room, he began with a prayer of thanksgiving and ended with a hymn, which is symbolic of the attitude of the soul which sets down to the Lord's Supper with the Master and with his friends.
