Poetry.

GIVE.

BY MRS. L. H. SIGOURNEY.

" It is more blessed to give than to receive. "

five prayers: the evening hath begun; Be earlier than the rising sun : Remember those who feel the rod; Remember those who know not God. His hand can boundless bleesings give : Breathe prayers; through them the soul shall live.

Give alms: the needy sink with pain; The orphans mourn, the crushed complain. Give freely : hoarded gold is curst, A prey to robbers and to rust. Christ, through his poor, a claim doth make; Give giadly, for thy Savionr's sake.

Give books: they live when you are dead; Light on the darkened mind they shed: Good seed they sow, from age to age, Through all this mortal pilgrimage. They nurse the germs of holy trust; They wake untired when you are dust.

Give smiles, to cheer the little child. A stranger on this thorny wild; It bringeth love, its gnard to be-It, helploss, asketh love from thes. Howe'er by fortune's gifts unblest, Give smiles to childhood's guileless brenet.

Give words, kind words, to those who err; Remorse doth need a comforter. Though in temptation's wiles they fall, Condemn not-we are sinners all With the sweet charity of speech, Give words that heal, and words that teach.

Give thought, give energy, to themes That perish not like folly's dreams. Hark I from the islands of the sea, The missionary crics to thee: To aid him on a heathen soil, Give thought, give energy, give toil.

"We need a better acquaintance with the thoughts and reasonings of pure and lofty minds.-DR. SHART.

Patience is Eloquence.

Patience is eloquence! What though it be silent ? Hath not the eye its language ? cannot the wronged or the loving soul, tell its story there, though the voice be mute forever? The lips speak while they utter no sound, smiles arch their entrance or scorn curves them with a language that need not be measured in words. Is there not an eloquence in the life that schools itself to adversity, and patiently abides the will of its Heavenly Master, as calmly as the great angel, and as pure, it needs no crowning sun waits for the cloud to pass from before grace; and as the caressing fingers of the its brightness. Patience is eloquence ; and eloquence teaches, subdues, refines, ennobles and enriches both soul and intellect. Think you not there was eloquence that told upon the heart of the captive Bruce, as he languished in voluntary banishment in his own dear Scotland ? Indeed there was ; the humble spider that shared his solitary cove, by his untiring perseverance, awakened him to action ; roused once more the conqueror's spirit that had laid down to die in his bosom. And as that wonderful web floated from the rough walls above his head, he saw, glittering in mystic characters upon every silken fibre, the words, " never despair-wait-be patient." Look at yonder quarry ; rough and dark, it lines the cavity of some Italian bank ; it was imbedded there in the arms of the yielding earth by an Almighty hand; and piled in mighty masses, layer upon layer, it seems defiantly to resist the strength of man. Near by stands a hewer with his heavy chisel, and the implements of his labour. A huge block of marble, unshapely, and full of cavities, with ragged edges and projecting corners, rolls detached from its wall of adamant, and lies upon the soft sward where the grass and the little wild flowers, a continual presence of the great mind that pv, though bonds and imprisonment and a broider its unwieldy sides. Look again 1 it hallowed them.

is no longer shining with dew beneath the grey portals of the morning sky. In a room ever wrongs, cares or discouragements are narrow and high, where models from the antique, and casts of curious device are scatunsightly thing amid grace and loveliness.

Upon one side a child shakes from his white lillies; upon the other a maiden unbinds her flowing tresses before an unseen mirror ; here a youthful mother bends smilingly over a little babe, there an cagle spreads his glossy wings above the brows of warriors and statesmen, or a dove dips its you will see the mysterious workings of His beak into the crimson of an infant's lips,--and thus, encircled with these genis of patient art, stands the unpolished stranger. the sun from the high orient mellowly tinting its whiteness, yet imparting no warmth, no beauty.

Through the half-opened door, enters a man negligently attired; his eye, grown dark with concentration, lights up with a strange fire, as he stands with folded arms, before his new trophy. Why does he smile as his glance roves from point to point? why, with his forefinger does he mark lines, and curves and circles in the air? why walk round and round it with such exultant manner? Ilis soul, in some bright form, has entered the lifeless mass, and he has but to strike off the crusted-crystal to reveal the fair proportions of his inner thought-some perfect and beautiful embodiment, that shall fill every mind with a portion of the inspiration that created it.

And now commences his labour ; a day waxes and wanes, and as the evening sun sheds a glory on the inspired brow of the artist, and a living voice, sof. and musical, calls him to repast and repose, still stands the lifeless marble, with here and there a shining fragment strewing the floor at its base. What has been done? you would deem nothing ; on this side a little space of surface, smooth and bright,-- that is all. Another day, and yet another ; weeks, months, move laggingly along ; still is the artist at his labour, his check now pale with care, now flushed with anticipation. But behold ! the thought is bursting into being ; up from the chaos of deformity springs brightness and beauty; life glows along the marble, penetrating as the gleaming chise! flies, the very veins of the bloodless stone ; the very heart of the adamantine rock.

Features, face, and form ; how soft the grace that dwells in each sweet outlinepatience, God's gifted child-and deathless fame awaits thee.

At length it is finished; bright like an yours, be patient. If the rich and the great persecute you, rail not ; they will but mock tered lavishly around the walls, it stands an | and laugh, conscious that the random shots of your anger will glance back from their triple walls of gold. They have the power waxen fingers, clinging sprays of myrtle and now, but be patient --- wait ; the eloquence of such patience, if it reach not the wealthy tyrant, falls like the music of a heart attuned to heaven, upon the never failing ear of God. He will be pleader for your cause, and judge of your oppressors. Wait and providences. Calumniated, misrepresented, and misunderstood, you may be the subjects of sad opprobrium, even friends may look askance, and your good name become a by-word of reproach. Vainly you will stem the tide with the impetuous torient of contending words ; the more you stir the fountain of black slander, the more will its impure depths defile the surface; be patient; let your lips be sealed ; time is the arbiter of wrong, and God is the arbiter of time and wrong. As surely as the Almighty has said, " vengeance is mine " so surely, sooner or later, shall your fair fame appear in the eyes of all.

And thou, too, oh child of sorrow, what-

A good man bearing calmly and bravely the insults of an inferior foe, rendering no evil for evil given, looking to the Father which is in heaven for strength to stand amid all, patiently abiding till the right shall triumph, is a prouder monument to the power of true religion, than the costliest piles that for ages past have been consecrated to the Christian faith.

Many such have shown, while at the last admiring thousands have shouted their just praises, that patience is indeed eloquence.

The Face of an Angel.

It must have been a very strange and striking change that passed over the face of a prisoner at the bar, accused of blasphemy and treason, when, instead of turning pale with fear, his countenance shone with so much brightness, that "all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel."

I never saw an angel, and none of these Judges on the bench had ever seen one, but they saw something in Stephen's face that made them think of an angel; and it seems to me that if I should meet one in the street. as some have been met, I should recognise him as a visiter from a better world. Stephen's face answered to the idea of an angel as it dwelt in the mind of the Judges. We all have an image of angelic form and beauty that comes to us in our meditative hours.

All God's people ought to wear pleasant faces. There is no virtue in frowns, no piety in sour looks, no sin in a genial smile. If the heart is full of love to God and love to man, it ought to be a heart full of joy.

Single Copies Three Pence.

The face of a Christian ought to be as much like the face of an angel, as it is possible for the earthly to resemble the heaveny. Holiness and happiness should beam in the features, Then the world would take knowledge of Christians, that they live with God and are like him. Religion would be commended to those who have it not, as the source of highest joy, Angels would dwell with men; or at least we should often say of this or that saint, as we looked steadfastly on him, that his face is as "the face of an angel."

There is no poetry, no funcy, but practi-cal truth, in this. Of all men in the world, the godly have the best right to be happy, And if the heart is right, the face ought to show it. Angels look happy because they are happy; and they are happy because they are always good and doing good .---Christian Miscellany.

Ancedote of Latimer.

It is related of Latimer, that when he ence preached before that tyrant, Henry VIII., he took a plain, straightforward text, and in his sermon assailed those very sins for which the monarch was notorious, and he was stung to the quick, for truth always finds a response in the worst man's conscience. He would not bend beneath the authority of his God ; but sent for Latimer, and said : "Your life is in jeopardy, if you do not recant all you said to-day when you preach next Sunday." The trimming courtiers were all anxious to know the consequences of this, and the chapel was crowded. The venerable man took his text, and after a pause, began with a soliloguy, thus

" Now, Hugh Latimer, bethink thee, they art in the presence of thy earthly monarch, thy life is in his hands, and if thou dost not suit his fancies he will bring down thy grey hairs to the grave ; but, Hugh Latimer, bethink thee, thou art in the presence of the King of Kings and Lord of Lords, who hath told thee 'fear not them that kill the body, and can do no more; but rather fear him who can kill both body and soul, and cast thee into hell forever !' Yea, I say, Hugh Latimer, fear him,"

He then went on, and not only repeated what he had before advanced, but, if possible, enforced it with greater emphasis. After he had finished, Henry sent for him, and said : " How durst thou insult thy monarch so ?" Latimer replied, " I thought if I were unfaithful to my God, I could not be loyal to my King." The King embraced the good old Bishop, exclaiming, "There is yet one man left who is bold enough to tell me the trutl."

sculptor wander lovingly over the ivory whiteness of neck and brow, he feels that his is indeed a reward not of earth.

Patience is eloquence ; what to the artist is the towering genius, the strong ability, the surrender of time and outlay of means, without its exercise ? An impatient stroke of the chisel, where harmony and delicacy were requisite, would have ruined all ; at times the finish of the minutest feature, demanded hours of patient attention and study ;

now, here stands patience rewarded ; here | mind by an angelic countenance ? Perfect shines forth the eloquence of patience. So be patient, oh, man, whatever height thou art striving to attain. Check the fierce strife of young ambition, lest you listen not to the eloquence of patience. Would you enter the halls of science ? would you be such a giant in knowledge that their very walls would tremble beneath your tread ?-Then be patient over the midnight lamp ; do not by your untimely haste deprive the world of a Franklin, a Johnson, a Beethoven, or a Michael Angelo. Do not strive with mere frescoing to adorn the chambers of the dread temple within you, but directed by the guiding hand of patience, strike out lasting monuments that shall stand for ages to come, forever blessing your memory with when thoughts of boliness and heaven, and high enjoyment in God's service, are in our minds. In early life such images have come to us in our dreams; and we have brought with us from the realms of sleep the memory of angels as they have stood around our pillows, or beckoned us to come up higher .---Jacob saw them in his sleep, and his dream was never forgotten. Still we do not know how "the face of an angel" looks. Must it not be a face of exceeding purity?

Is not that one thought suggested to the sinlessness is reflected. But more than this. With the expression of freedom from sin, must there not also be some indication of love to God and all that is good, glowing like the sun, and burning to glorify Him whom it longs to be like? These images of infinite purity and holy love are combined in the idea of an angel. The tame picture of beauty, such as the painters seem to be satisfied with, scarcely answers the type a good man forms of the face of an angel.

Happiness, perfect and supreme, must reign in the heart of angels, and shine in the face. And was it not thus with Stephen, with the secwls of a hostile council on him? Joy was beaming there, so that any one who looked at him would know that he was hapcruel death were before bim.

The proper object of thanks.

A lady applied once to the late benevolent Mr. Reynolds, of Bristol, on behalf of an orphan. After he had given liberally, she said,-

"When he is old enough I will teach him to name and thank his benefactor."

" Stop !" said the good man : " you are mistaken. We do not thank the clouds for the rain : teach him to look higher, and thank Him who giveth both the clouds and the rain."

The Infidel Reproved.

When the Rev. Mr .---- heard an infidel jestingly say once, " I always spend the Sunday in settling my accounts," that Venerable Minister turned round, and said, in an accent of deep solemnity, "You may find, Sir, that the day of judgment is to be spent in exactly the same manner."

In the United Kingdom, it is said, there are above two thousand Bible organizations.

Conference Address. [CONCLUDED.]

To the CONNEXIONALISM which binds us together, and especially by means of a common ministry, we owe more than we can readily express. Yet nothing is more ob-vious than that, for the great advantages thus secured, we must forego some liberty of individual action. Our churches must be, not in word only, but in deed, UNITED in doctrine and in discipline. Hence the necessity of ecclesiastical arrangements which Independent congregations cannot need.

It is an unspeakable calamity that many have allowed their care and attention to be withdrawn, by passing controversy, from life's great business. The influence of the church on the world has been impaired .-Christ's enemies have been encouraged to blaspheme. And all this, while sinners are dying around us, while Antichrist revives his impious claims, and the world heaves with tumults that portend supendous issues. Let it be inquired, as in the searching light of God's countenance, how the trifles which now assume such importance will be reviewed in a calmer day? How, seven years hence? How, when we stand on the banks of Jordan, in the near prospect of unchangeable realities ?

We reflect, with gratitude to God, that for more than a century our course toward other churches of Christ has been friendly and pacific. If seceders from our own community, dissenting from some Wesleyan views, yet retaining in the main the catholic faith, went away in peace, our kindly wishes and prayers would attend them .-And it is our fondly-cherished hope that our Societies will not even now be provoked into hostility, either by the acrimony of faction or by the intermeddling of parties who have shown themselves too ready to intrude into our denominational conflicts. Many of the wisest and best among other Christians see that our contest has been for the very existence of a pastoral ministry. In regard to others, whose conduct has not requited our candour and friendly feeling toward them,-let us cherish no revenge. "If it be possible," dear brethren,-yea, " as much as lieth in you,"-let the blessed cause of Christian union be uninjured. We entreat you, our beloved people, still to adorn your profession with "whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report." Let your charity, unconfined by prejudice or passion, show the world where the Christians live.

It is our very painful duty to report a considerable loss of members. The vast majority of the separatists are to be thought of with deep and affectionate solicitude. That they should have yielded to the arts of a few misleaders, and that a system of And the fruit of righteousness is sown in wicked agitation, unparalleled in the history of the modern church, should have been regarded with a moment's tolerance by any who have enjoyed the privileges of our church-communion, may well be regarded as no less humbling than painful. Yet, in behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, prospect of the day when we shall all meet the Judge of the quick and the dead, let us ponder our duties towards the erring and the fallen. Certain agitators have abused the measure of confidence they had been allowed to wield : their plans have been altogether alien from the temper of our holy Christianity. They have transgressed New Testament law, and involved themselves in the dishonour-hitherto unexampled among us-of attempting to force us into compli- lates to the daily reading of the Scriptures, ances which they know that our conscience condemns. These men have excluded themselves from our confidence, but not from our pitying charity and prayers. We b g you, dear brethren, to join us in interce ling that God may give them repentance, and that the fearful sin of destroying precious souls may not be laid to their charge is the great day. Whatever plans may yet be framed to oppose or irritate you, let your love be invincible. "Pray," says our be-nign and adorable Master, " for them which tespitefully use you, and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father wandering, " considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." Let the charity which pursues them be discriminating. "Of some have compassion, making a difference : and others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh." Think of the inestimable worth of immortal souls; and let every one of us pray and strive, if by any means he may gain some.

Yet communities, like individuals, are called to profit by the discipline of calamity. Whatever may be the permitted agency of second causes, all is wisdom, sweetness, and mercy in the Great First Cause. Before him we desire to bow with submission, and with deepest humility. For ourselves, we desire to improve the present occasion, and to cultivate an increasing familiarity with heavenly things, " that our hearts may surely there be fixed where true joys are to be found." We give ourselves anew to our proper work; anxious only to "feed the flock of God which is among" us, "taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly ; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock." Let us most affectionately beg you, the members of our associated churches, to maintain high views of Christian privilege. Seek to evercise, every moment, the faith which is of the operation of God Let none rest without the assurance, wrought by the Holy Spirit, of an interest in Christ's precious blood. Let all aspire after the present heaven of loving God with all the heart, and soul, and mind, and strength. The times call for fresh attention to those inspired texts which delineate practical religion. In their steady light let us daily examine ourselves. "Herein is" the adorable "Father glorified, that" the disciples of Jesus " bear much fruit ;"-not merely the leaves of profession, and the bloom of promise, but the "fruit" of holy, lovely, useful living. In the full-meaning expression of Scripture, we are to be "filled with the fruits of right-eousness." Whatever may be the fluctuating opinions of men, we know what authority has decided that "pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." "Be ye doers of the word," says the same venerable Apostle, " and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." And again : "My brethren, be not many masters, knowing that we shall receive the greater condemnation. For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." And again : "The wisdom that is from above is firs! pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy. peace of them that make peace." That which "never faileth," is the "charity" which " suffereth long, and is kind ;" which "envieth not;" which "vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up;" which "doth not is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.' All true spiritual enjoyment consists with deepening humility, as well as with the love of God's law, and a jealous regard for His glory. It leads to the throne of grace, endears a vital and searching ministry, stimuand brings the humbled believer to the feet of Jesus. "Thy word is very pure," says the renewed soul : " therefore Thy servant loveth it." It deserves special note, also, that the sacred Book gives prominence to the habit of reverential and godly fear .---Some who speak of high spiritual attainments, need to remember that "happy is the man that feareth alway." "If the righteous scarcely be saved," it behoves us to " work out our own salvation with fear and trembling." The crown of life is not yet awarded : it may be lost; and, even if mer- plentiful baptisms, all will be secured. This cy be extended to the unfaithful disciple, it is what we want, and what Jesus waits to which is in heaven." As to the masses of may be tarnished. That prize has been give. Then "the light of the moon shall Newcastle-upon-Tyne; August 15th, 1851.

> Cherish, dear brethren, the great objects of our spiritual union. These are always entitled to the first regard, inasmuch as they belong to "a kingdom which cannot be moved." "Our citizenship is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour." The lights of eternity must guide our course through the present tumultuous and agitated scene. When everything is done to the do to glorify my Saviour ? Dear to Him, glory of God, the common duties of life rise into a part of our religion. No longer hinderances of our spirituality, they become even its aliment. In regard to more public events,-to those especially which bear on the interests of Protestant Christendom .---the intelligent and serious cannot but be awake. Your voices have been heard, we rejoice to know, in the loud protest of this land against the assumptions of its ancient intention. Many have forsaken God through Papal enemy. Nor may you yet lay down the weapons of this warfare. Persevere in your course, but always under the sway of religious motives. Let everything bend to abounds, the love of many has waxed cold the sovereign claims of Jesus Christ; who is not only "the Faithful Witness, and the 'irst-begotten of the dead," but also "the Prince of the Kings of the earth." Be wakeful, and put on the complete " armour of light :" guard against passing and contingent dangers; but fear not as to the issue of these collisions. "With violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all." Happy, if we be kept undefiled while the strife of sin and error rages, and then be numbered with the glorious company of those who celebrate the victory, " arrayed in fine linen, clean and white," and " called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb."

The holiness of a community is but the holiness of its individual members. If we desire the beauty, vigour, and glory of the church, it is both monitory and animating to reflect that every one of us may contribute to these results. Let each examine himself, whether he be now-this very moment-" in the faith." "Who of us," asked our fathers in 1770, " is now accepted of God ?" And wisely they answered, "He that now believes in Christ, with a loving and obedient heart." The question umph; but it will be for a brief season only. is not, At what moment the Sun arose on us with healing in His wings ?- but, Do we now rejoice in His light and heat ?-Are we yielding the fruit of the Spirit, in its plentiful variety ? - governing our thoughts and tempers, taking heed to our ways that we sin not with our tongue? Are we impressed alike with the sacredness and the vanity of life ? Who among us, reviewing the last twelve months, can now set up the stone of help, a year's journey nearer of us have come to the margin of the grave: to heaven? Does our hope of that ever- all are hastening thither. Help us, dear lasting blessedness exert its due and sancti- brethren, in the effort to consecrate all our fying influence ? It would be ungrateful to forget that past struggles in the church of Christ, and in our own branch of it in particular, have been followed by abounding peace and prosperity. The lovers of Sion have been tried and their fidelity has been graciously rewarded. They have not wept and prayed in vain .-The Master has come suddenly, and at His pacific presence confusion and strife have been rebuked. He has made " Jerusalem a quiet habitation." " There the glorious LORD" has been " a place of broad rivers and streams; wherin" went "no galley with oars, neither" was "gallant ship" permitted to "pass thereby." And, as to the future of this cause, we are full of hope and confidence. Jesus is "the Head over all things to the Church." By that faith which brings distant things nigh, and sees things invisible, let us vividly realize His intercession and gracious reign. The exhaustless power and grace of the Holy Ghost are dispensed by the royal Mediator. Calamitous experience will yield priceless benefits, if we learn to magnify and invoke the blessed Spirit's influences. We need a thousand blessings; but, if He come in

But, whatever comfort and triumph the church may see, if we do not regard her cause with tender love, and earnestly strive to promote it, the brightness of the coming day will not be shed on us. They who have not carried the burden of Sion, may not hope to share ' the good of" her Lord's " chosen," or to " rejoice in the gladness of" His "nation," or to "glory with" His " inheritance," The point is, What can I can this cause be otherwise than dear to His true disciples ? "If I forget thee! O Jerusalem, let my right had forget her cunning." It is lamentable that wealth, fame, and worldly connexions have alienated some from the fellowship of saints ; and that, on the other hand, adversity, unsanctified, has sometimes overwhelmed the spirit, induced complainings, and thus defeated the benigu change of residence, or loss of Christian guides and friends. Others have fainted in the day of persecution. Because iniquity -The desolations of the holy city have repelled those who are attracted by external prosperity. Yet, through the grace of God. there are among us myriads of saints whose zeal none of these things can chill; who resolve to live for Jerusalem, and would rather die than survive her ruin. Still pray for her peace. The feeblest hand can move the skies. The infant in grace, and the hoary saint, can unite in this exercise. It is no conditional request that we have to urge ; it is one which may be sent up with confidence to heaven. We are asking according to our Father's will ; we are repeating the prayer of Jesus Himself, whose merit imparts prevalence to our intercessions. "O daughter of Babylon," said the ancient church in exile, " who art to be destroyed."..... Babyton was then flourishing: but where are the powers that once wasted the church of God ? or even those that were employed as a scourge to punish her unfaithfulness and sin ? With expectation as calm as that of the exiled psalmist we may say, " Let God arise, let His enemies be scattered : let them also that hate Him flee before Him." Opposers may seem to tri-The means of their defeat will be found in the matter of their boasting. Another Euphrates shall be exhausted, and one greater than Cyrus will turn back our cap-

During the past year many of our beloved fathers and brethren have been removed from us, to be for ever with the Lord. We are indeed admonished to do with our might whatsoever our hand findeth to do. Many emaining days to Christ. The heavenly " treasure" we bring to you " in earthen vessels," " that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us." "Sorrowful" are we, " yet always rejoicing ;" "poor, yet making many rich ;" " having nothing, and yet possessing all things." Euough is it for us to feel that "the LORD of hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge." "We have heard with our ears, and our fathers have told us, the noble works which" He wrought "in their days, and in the old time before them." But his arm is not shortened. Jesus is as mighty to save, as in the primitive days. "Ye that are the Lord's remembrancers, keep not silence:" in wondrous condescension He bids yougive Him no rest, till He establish, and till He make Jerusalem a praise in the earth." "Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion." "THY GOD REIGNETH," and He is coming to give joy to His people, and to revive His work. "He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. The English Language.

A deeply interesting lecture was read by M. H. RICHEY, Esq., in the room of the Athenæum, on the evening of the 6th ult., upon the development and destination of the English language, of which the following is an extract, which we copy from the "Mayflower " Magazine :

THE LANGUAGE OF ENGLAND BEFORE THE NORMAN CONQUEST.

The speech of the ancient Britons is represented as the same with that of the Gauls, from whom, it is probable, they derived their origin, and to whom they presented, in their manners, their government, and their superstition, a striking similarity.

* * Sharing the fate of their institutions, it was swept away by the overwhelming inundation of the Anglo Saxon race. Britain, alone of the European nations who fell beneath the German power, lost its language with its liberty. While in every vanquished portion of the Continent the ancient speech continued to be spoken, there it was almost extirpated. The name of the country itself was changed to Anglo-land or England.

It was in the fifth century that the Saxons subjugated Britain, and, settling in the lysshe. Wherin they have auantage one country, substituted their own language for that of the conquered people. For six hundred years it continued to be spoken with now they lerne no Frenssh ne con none, searcely any variation. The age of Alfred his been mentioned as the era of its highest development ; for, to that prince, "whose to teche theyr children to speke Frenssh." whole history is one panegyrie," must be assigned a place no less distinguished in arts and literature than in arms and legislation. "He was," says Burke, "indefatigable in his endeavours to bring into England men of learning in all branches from every part of Europe, and unbounded in his liberality to them." But not content with patronizing the labours of others, "he applied himself to the improvement of his native language : he translated several valuable works from the Latin, and wrote a vast cumber of poems in the Sixon tongue with a wonderful facility and happiness."

About A. D., 1260, has been spoken of as the time when the change in the language of England to its present form was nearly consummated. From the middle of the preceding century, when the Saxons and Normans began to lay aside their mutual antipathies, and to converse more familiarly together, the work of transition had been going on; but all writers upon this subject confess themselves unable to fix with accuracy, the period when the transformation from Saxon to English may be considered as complete.

MODERN ENGLISH.

If we consent to leave a fruitless speculation, and come down a century later than the epoch mentioned, we shall find satisfactory evidence of the ascendancy which the modern speech had gained. "An act of Par-liament was made A. D., 1362, that all pleadings in all courts both of the king and of inferior lords, should be in the English tongue, because French was now much unknown in the realm; and that the people might know something of the laws, and understand what was said for and against them ;"* and Trerisa says, " Sir John Cornwayl, a mayster of gramer, chaunged the techyng in gramer schole and construction of Frenssh into Englysshe, and other scool maysters use the same way in the year of our Lord Miij. Clxv. the ix. yere of Kyng Rychard the secund, and leve all Frenssh in scoles, and use all construction in Engway, that is that they lerne the sonner theyr gramer. And in another disauauntage. For whiche is harte for them that shal passe the see. And also gentelmen have moche lefte

The change of which we speak was occasioned rather by the introduction of the French idiom than by any very extensive infusion of French words. "It consisted," as an able writer remarks, "essentially in the grammar, and not in the vocabulary.' Saxon words were generally retained while the indections were lost. And the way in which this may be accounted for is, that where the exigencies of two races, speaking different languages, require them to communicate with each other, the race which finds itself compelled to learn the words of the other's speech, may not, with an equal fa-This language, which so long remained cility, acquire a knowledge of its construction, modern Italian," he says, " has been insentemporaries, their light waned when Chaucer appeared, as the morning star pales before the rising sun. It was well for the English language that so early in its history it had the genius of Chaucer to aid its development. He was a man of uncommon scholarship and judgment. "Whoever reads the works of Chaucer with attention," says variety and extent of his learning as well as charmed with the fertility of his invention, the sweetness of his numbers, (for the times in which he lived;) and all the other marks of a great and cultivated genius." Another intelligent critic† remarks, "In elevation and elegance, in harmony and perspicuity of versification, Chaucer surpasses his predecessors in an infinite proportion ; his genius was universal, and adapted to themes of unbounded variety. In a word, he appeared with all the lustre of a true poet, in an age which compelled him to struggle with a barbarous language and a national want of taste; and when to write verses at all was considered as a singular qualification."

Notwithstanding the eulogium of Spenser, t must be admitted that Chaucer introduced many French words with the language. He translated from the French; and Johnson tells us that "no book was ever turned from one language into another without imparting something of its native idiom." Frequency of translation he therefore considers "the great pest of speech." But how far, if at all, the accumulation in our language of foreign words by translation, has been detrimental to its vigour or beauty, is an open question. Had the Anglo Saxon continued uncorrupted and unchanged, a judicious development of its inborn strength and varied latent treasures might have presented us with a language consistent throughout, copious-flexible-harmonious; rivalling, perhaps surpassing in all these qualities, the ancient Greek. As it is, reflecting upon the great revolution to which, between the eleventh and fifteenth centuries, it was subjected, and the alteration of its grammatical structure, we cannot but think that the subsequent addition of foreign terms has tended rather to enrich than to deprave it.

THE EXISTENCE OF THE HUMAN MIND.

The intellectual powers of man may be livided into many branches, some or other which, from want of exèrcise, has, it is much management of declensions and conjugations of which almost every one possesses in a reduced them to the use of articles and aut- manner peculiar to himself; but very few It resembled more the moder. German than iliary verbs ; and many new ideas have been excel in all. A sound mode standing is howexpressed by Teutonic appellations. Yet ever, pericaps, the highest attribute of an inparts of speech, and in the inverted order of the principal stock of technical and familiar telligent being. A sound understanding, its construction—a mode of construction ap- words is found to be of Latin derivation ;— like a good eye, is of magence importance, plicable only to languages where many va- and if we were sufficiently conversant with and is correct and exact in its perceptions riations exist, but which has been pedanti- the obsolete, the rustic, and the municipal and judgment. Two particulars constitute a cally attempted with the modern English by dialect of ancient Italy, we should trace the good understanding : first, it has no natuorigin of many terms which might perhaps ral defect ; and secondly, it has no redundanbe rejected by the classic purity of Rome." | cy of imagination. If it be defective, nothing is discovered with clearness; and if mere imagination predominate, every object surveyed will be lost in the clouds of fanciful imagery. As one justly observes, "What we call common sense is, perhaps, the best characteristic of a sound understanding; for that, generally, perceives things as they are, without any material addition or diminution." Common sense signifies that power of the mind by which it setf-evidently perceives truth. It is not derived by progressive argumentation, neither from education or haoit; but from an instantaneous instinctive, and irresistible impulse ; acting independently of our will whenever its object is presented, according to an established law of nature. It is designated sense ; and acting in a similar manner upon all, or at least upon a great majority of mankind, it is called common sense. It is equally valuable and permanent when elicited, and forms the basis of all understanding. He who possesses this, even without any other particular trait of mind, can never fall into contempt; even of superior abilities; while all the shining talents that ever dazzled the Circus or Forum, with-

However illustrious in the eyes of their con- enables him to reason, which forms the grandest distinction man has above the brute creation.

In proof of the existence of the human mind, it may be requisite to notice that it wills or desires. These must not be confounded. Desiring and willing are two distinct acts of the mind. Desire is a strong or earnest wish to obtain or enjoy an object : an able judge,* " will be surprised at the the will is that faculty of the mind by which it embraces or rejects anything offered to it. Treating of the desires of the human mind. Dr. Watts says, "Those desires that arise without any express ideas of the goodness or agreeableness of their object to the mind beforehand, such as hunger, thirst, and so forth, are called appetites. Those which arise from our perception or opinion of an object, as good or agreeable, are most properly called passions. Sometimes both these are united. If our desire to do or receive good be not violent, it is called a simple inclination or propensity. When it rises high, it is termed longing ; when our desires set our active powers at work to obtain the very same good, or the same sort of good which another desires, it is called emulation. Desire of plensure of sense, is called sensuality ; of honour, is called ambition ; of riches, covetousness. The objects of a good man's desires are, that God may be glorified, his sins forgiven and subdued, his affections enlightened and placed on God as the supreme object of love, his affections sanctified, and his life devoted to the service of God.

> Desire may, therefore, be denominated a a state of uneasiness ; or an uneasiness of the mind for the want of some positive or supposed absent good. Desire, like hope, when deferred, makes the heart sick"; and this sickness is in proportion to the greatness of the desire ; which sometimes raises the uneasiness to such an extent, that those who are under its influence, are induced to exclaim, give us the thing desired, or we die. Life itself, with all its enjoyments and sorrows, often actually becomes a burthen, intolerable to be borne, under the lasting and unremoved pressure of such uneasiness.

> This uncasiness, when properly regulated by the mind, is a great blessing. It deter-mines the will, and excites to, or becomes the spring of action. That which immediately determines the will, from time to time, to every voluntary action, is the uneasiness of desire, fixed on some absent good. The greater part of our lives is made up of this uncasiness which determines the will to successive voluntary actions, by which we are conducted through different courses to different ends. Every man knows that he is content with his state, when he is perfectly without any uneasiness. So long as he thus continues he has no motive, no spring, to action; but uneasiness stimulates to action.

The will, as already defined, is that faculty of the soul by which it chooses or refuses anything offered to it. The will itself is indisputably free. The will, simply as the will, must be so, or there is no such faculty. Its existence is unquestionable, and its freeness to act, equally certain. The hu-some who rank among the most illustrious of its writers.

Though it has been positively affirmed that the ancient Anglo-Saxon tongue consisted chiefly of words of one syllable, such an assertion is altogether incapable of proof: for the most ancient specimens of that language now extant, consist of a very fair proportion of words of more than one syllable.

The Anglo Saxon was rich in synonyms. In illustration we may remark that it has been ascertained to have ten words for man, and as many for woman; nine simple terms and ten compounds to designate persons invested with authority. It applied eighteen to mind, and was remarkably prolific in words expressive of the nature and attributes of the Supreme Being. "Great verily," says an old writer, " was the glory of our tongue before the Norman conquest in this, that the old English could express most aptly all the conceits of the mind in their own tongue without borrowing from any."

This noble language, though greatly modified, and deprived of many of its characteristics, continues to be the ground-work of our present speech. It is affirmed, that "five-eighths at least of the language spoken by Alfred still circulates in the veins of the modern English."

From a similar mixture of nations did the English language result; and when the Normans began to speak in Saxon, they modified the language to a greater accordance with their former modes of expression.

We may now consider the English language as formed; a compound of Latin, French, and Saxon, but with the last greatly predominating. How little was given up by the Saxon, and how little was received from the other languages, may be inferred from the fact, that even at this distance of time, after the lapse of five centuries, during which we have been industrious in crowding it with exotic expressions, it is estimated that out of thirty-eight thousand words, of which the English language is supposed to consist, twenty-three thousand are Saxon.

At the period of which we now discourse, viz: the close of the fourteenth century, our Literature may be said to begin. Then arose Chaucer, "great in song," who has been called the first finder of our language, and whose works Spencer pronounced " the well of English undefilde." Authors indeed had written in English before the time of Chaucer; but of them we need not speak.

· Henry, Hist Eng

man will, however, being finite, has necessary limits, which so far may be said to confine it. because it cannot act beyond those limits ; yet, within the extent of its capacity, it necessarily is, and ever will be, spontaneous. The limits of the will, therefore, do not destroy its inherent liberty.

The will, according to Locke, is "nothing but a power in the mind to direct the operative faculties of a man to motion or rest, as far as they depend on such direction." If the question should be asked, What is it which determines the will? We answer, The mind. The agent itself is the directive power. But what moves the mind, so as to determine the will, in regard to our actions? Some uneasiness which we are under at the time. This is that which successively determines the will, and induces us to do those actions which we perform. This aneasiness may be called, as it really is, desire; for what is desire, but an uneasiness of the mind for the want of some absent good? Without this uncasiness, the will never is determined to any action ; but the most pressing uneasiness naturally determines the will.

But this desire or uneasiness, which determines the will, should, in accountable beings, ever be regulated by reason and the Word of out common sense, cannot secure him from the God. It must, however, be admitted, that since ridicule, even of inferiors. Common sense the fall of man, his understanding has been 138

Obituary Notice.

For the Wesleyan.

Died at Economy, Colchester, on the 6th day of July last, MARY AMELIA, eldest daughter of Thomas and Margaret DONKIN in the 23rd year of her age.

About four years ago Miss Donkin was afflicted with a cutaneous disease in the form of measles from which she never wholly recovered. Here a foundation was laid for that fatal malady consumption, which ultimately carried her to the tomb-the House appointed for all living.

Like too many others, Miss D. in her routhful days was thoughtless and apparently unconcerned about her everlasting well being. But during the revival of religion at River Philip, two years ago, last spring, she became convinced that she was a sinner and needed the pardoning mercy of God. Being of a reserved turn of mind she did not so freely and fully make her state known as some others would have done, but it was evident to all, that she was deeply penitent, thoughtful and serious. In conversation with a young friend who had lately experienced religion, she intimated that she intended to join the Society. The reply was, " If you think you are fit, you may"; this injudicious remark discouraged her and she made no further attempt while she remained at River Philip. Shortly after her father removed to Economy, here she would have united herself to the Church of God but she had no opportunity of doing so.

Our departed sister continued generally to decline until about six months before her death, when she was wholly confined to her bed, from which she never rose, only as she was lifted. As eternity drew near with its solemn realities, her affections were more and more weaned from the world. She appeared as one about to take a long journey. A week before she died, she divided her clothes among the members of her family, and gave directions about her funeral. She wished her remains to be taken to River Philip, there to be deposited in the Wesleyan burying ground ; and that there might be no unnecessary delay she had her grave clothes in readiness, and the necessary preparations made for her friends to follow her remains to the grave, their last resting place. Though she was of a retired disposition, and seldom said much during her illness, yet for sometime before her death she conversed and make its enjoyments truly blessings. freely and cheerfully upon the all-important subject, Christ and the atonement. All that visited her were satisfied that her peace was made with God, and that she was prepared to dwell with him in His Kingdom. The morning before she departed this life she called her brothers and sisters to her bed side, and taking each by the hand, gave them her last-her dying charge to meet her in heaven. Her last moments were tranquil. She had no fear of death-the sting of death which is sin was taken away--she felt her interest in the Saviour's blood and therefore desired to depart and be with Christ, which is far better. The last words she was distinctly heard to utter were, " Lord Jesus receive my spirit." These she repeated three times, and fell asleep in Jesus, to wake no more until the morning of the resurrection. Thus lived and died one who was called early in life, to exchange time for eternity, and mortality for immortality.

BENEFITS AND CLAIMS OF CHRISTIANITY.

Our only hope for the real and permanent benefit of our world is in the extension of the Gospel of Christ and the experience of its soul transforming and soul-elevating influence. Without this agency, ever present and ever operating, all other appliances to secure the permanent advancement and prosperity of our guilty race, on a solid foundation, will prove ineffectual. The Gospel is at once the patron and the promoter of all that is good and great in human character, and useful in human enterprises. It exalts the mind, sharpens the intellect, purifies the understanding, extends the views, gives solidity to the social fabric, and introduces and fosters the various amenities of life. It is not antagonistic, but friendly, to the arts and sciences, and encourages and sanctifies the efforts of every rank to advance the general good on the largest possible scale. Religious men, cæteris paribus, are the greatest benefactors of the world, not only by reason of their pecuniary ability, but by their moral worth, their faith and prayers, their gracious example, and because religion supplies them with a principle of endurance and perseverance unfelt by men of the world. The actual condition of the world at the present time affords a luminous proof of the correctness of these views. Wherever the Gospel most extensively prevails, and its claims and obligations are acknowledged, and its benign and hallowing influences are felt-precisely there, the human mind has attained its highest culture, arts and sciences have won their greatest triumphs, and the social interests of the people have received their strongest impetus. We are anxious, in these days of excitement on worldly topics, that these considerations should not be overlooked, and the glorious Gospel of the ever blessed God fail not to command that supreme attention, and receive that ample support, which its paramount claims so earnestly demand .--Amid all other undertakings, let us not neglect to push out vigorously, and in all directions, the appointed instrumentality of human regeneration; and to seek to bring into operation those religious influences, which alone can transform the wilderness of the human heart into a fruitful field, establish peace on earth and good will among men, render life valuable, sanctify its ills, the minister in question "may continue to exert as powerful an influence" among the Baptists as he did among the Methodists. If will gain nothing by this " convert to the truth," and for any increased beneficial effects, the Reverend gentleman might as well have remained as he was. "The advocate of a pure gospel" is expected not to exercise a greater influence than he did, " when the truth he preached was mingled with those shades of error which he has renounced !" The religion or philosophy of this we do not understand; yet it may perfectly harmonize with the theological and philosophical views of the man who can pompously herald a change from pedobaptism to anti-pedobaptism, from sprinkling or pouring to exclusive immersion, as a conversion to "the truth."

Nova Scotia Sabbath Alliance.

We direct attention to a Notice which apears on our last page of the Annual Meeting of the Nova Scotia Sabbath Alliance to be held on Tuesday evening at Temperance Hall. We bespeak for this useful Association the liberal encouragement and support of our citizens generally, and especially of all who are interested in the observance of the sanctity of the holy Sabbath. As a people we cannot expect to prosper, unless in connexion with obedience to the commands of God; and although we are not prepared to assert that this City or Province is characterised by a greater desceration of the Lord's day, than other cities or countries of the same population, yet we hesitate not to state, that there is sufficient violation of the fourth commandment among us to require the most strenuous efforts of all lovers of the Sabbath not only to suppress the iniquitous and God-dishonouring infringement, but to raise the tone of Sabbath observance and foster a higher regard for the duties and privileges of that holy day. On these accounts we hope that the Annual Meeting of the above Alliance will be largely attended, and a liberal collection taken up in aid of its funds.

A correspondent of the London Watchman. writing from Turin, says-The Scriptures are now easily introduced into the Sardinian States: five years ago, a single copy of the Word of God became, at the Custom House, a subject of suspicion and offence; now they pass freely and as a matter of course. Even controversial tracts can be, and are, printed at Turin without let or hindrance. Nor is this the case in Piedmont alone : but in Savoy also. The Agent of the British and Foreign Bible Society lately informed me that he had obtained, without difficulty, permission to introduce into the capital of that Province, three thousand New Testaments. Indeed, so eager are the people to obtain copies of the Scriptures, that a bookseller at Chambery has actually obtained some from Paris, which he is rapidly selling at enormous profits.

NOVEMBER 8.

The practice of making big books is cartainly on the decline ; writers do not spread their thoughts through numerous and bulky he exert no more, the cause of Christianity folios as in the days of Prynne. The substitution of fact for theory, of the experimental for imaginative philosophy, has been fatal to voluminous authorship. Thoughts or short essays, will contain all that is new which even powerful minds can communicate on most subjects. Great books can only be compilations ; Smith might have compressed all that is original in the Wealth of Nations into fifty pages, and Malthus, all the original matter of his work on population, into much less.

> In a paper read before the Evangelical AL liance, the Rev. Dr. Urwick stated, that the number of Roman Catholic Clergy in Ireland might be estimated as follows :- Prelates, 28; parish priests, 989; curates, 1.439; other clergy, 322. Supposing this statement to be correct, it appears there is a proportion of one clergyman to every 1,765 persons in that communion. The Episcopalians have 12 prelates ; 1,518 incumbents, and 791 cm rates ; making an aggregate of 2,261 miniters. The Presbyterians are divided into several bodies, the number of ministers in all being 662. The total number of Methodist ministers, including all the divisions of the Methodistic family, amount to 248.----Congregational ministers, 25; Baptists, 16; United Brethren, 11. Exclusive of Unitarians, the number of Protestant Ministern amounts to 3,124, outnumbering the Roman Catholic clergy by 455, and being in the proportion of one Protestant minister to 2,021 persons of the whole population, and to each, 500 Protestant.

A new Befinition.

" Converts to the TRUTH"-thus in effect defined by the Christian Visitor-the immersion of a Methodist minister at Baltimore, and his union with the Baptist Church ! After this, we need no more urge the enquiry-" What is Iruth ?" Immersion in water, we may suppose then, is "the truth. the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." Pity St. Paul had not been thoroughly instructed into this new system of truth. Had he been, in all probability, this significant passage would not have appeared in the first chapter of his first epistle to the Corinthians :-- " I thank God that I baptized none of you, but Crispus and Gaius; lest any should say that I baptized in my own name. And I baptized also the household of Stephanas: besides, I know not whether I baptized any other." Compared with the judgment and conduct of St. Paul, our Baptist brethren make altogether too much of immersion generally, and especially of gaining a proselyte from a Christian Church .--The utmost wish of the writer, whom the Ohristian Visitor quotes, appears to be, that

The negotiations, which I deemed it my duty to open last year, with the Right Honorable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, resulted in a generous offer from Her Majesty's Government to recommend to Parliament to guarantee, or advance the funds required to construct both these Lines, upon certain conditions, the adjustment of which, during the past summer, rendered communications with the Governments of the neighbouring Provinces indispensable.

The Legislature of Canada has made provision for their portion of the Line from Halifax to Quebec, and for its extension, through the territory of that Province, to the western frontier. The Government of New Brunswick waits your ratification of the terms proposed at the Conference held at Toronto in June last, to assemble the Legislature, with a view to secure its friendly co operation.

As the Imperial Parliament will probably meet early in the new year, and as it is of great consequence that the Laws, passed by the Colonial Legislatures, should be transmitted without delay, A poor woman, named Mary Calinac, in to secure the appropriations contemplated in time to warrant the commencement of operations in the spring, I have called you together at this unusual period, confident that you would, at whatever personal sacrifice, cheerfully aid me by a prompt and calm consideration of a question of the greatest magnitude and importance.

The correspondence that has taken place, and the measures which I have directed to be prepared, shall be laid before you as soon as the orms of Parliament permit.

I confidently commend the subjects which they embrace to your diligent and enlightened review; and believing, as I do, that the destinies of these noble Provinces are, to a great extent, involved in the result of your consideration of this question, I shall anxiously await your decision, and trust that the Author of all wisdom and goodness may guide your deliberations.

. WEDNESDAY, Nov. 5th, 1851. The House met at 12 o'clock.

REVISED LAWS.

The Speaker announced that the Revised Laws were completed and ready for circulation. Several copies having been sent to the House by the publisher.

ANSWER TO THE ADDRESS.

Adam Archibald, Esq., moved the first clause of the Answer to the Address-which passed unanimously. The second and third clause also passed unanimously.

The Speaker then announced that the House would carry up the Address at three o'clock.

BILL.

Mr. Fraser said that he had a small Bill which he wished to introduce-but would not do so if the session was to be confined strictly to the Question of the Railway. He thought there as one Committee which should be appointed. That on the Post Office-as there were many hings which required investigation.

Hon. Provincial Secretary said the Governuent were prepared to enter into any business the House chose. It was for them to decide.

Mr. Whitman was not anxious to force the consideration of any other question on the House. but the Railway. There were, however, circumstances connected with the Post Office which required rectification-but he would not press their consideration except it met the wishes of all parties

Mr. Hall thought, that although the Session had been expressly called to consider the Railway question-yet the Constituencies had a right to demand the attention of the Legislature on any subject of importance to them. It was ge-nerally understood that certain elections were to be contested. This business the House could not refuse.

The hon. Speaker referred to the Postal Bill, and then said that he deemed it right to inform the House that the rule in operation in England. rendering it necessary that all petitions should be presented in fourteen days after the returned member had taken his seat, had been adopted in the Revised Laws. He supposed it would be necessary that such petitions should be presented within 14 days, dating from the period at which members took their seats during the present session

Hon. Provincial Secretary .- Had previously informed the House that the Government were prepared to act as the Assembly might decide .--it was likely that the Railway Bills would be submitted in the afternoon-the House might then decide whether they would take them up immediately or allow them to lay over for a few days and take up other business in the interim.

Mr. Creelman said. The Mails now returned on the same day they started. Mr. Henry expressed dissatisfaction at the resent postal arrangements and declared his intention of bringing the subject to the notice of the House as soon as he conveniently could. Mr. Fraser said the very question before the Committee was-whether the mails were to start at 6 o'clock, or not.

The galleries were then cleared.

After sitting with closed doors until 3 o'clock, the members of the House attended His Excellency with the address-the House resumed.

COMMITTEE.

A Committee of Privileges composed of the Hon. Attorney General, Hon. J. W. Johnston, and Messrs. Doyle, Hall, Freeman and Archibald was appointed.

REVISED LAWS.

Canada and New Brunswick, this embraced three propositions, the acceptance of either of which by New Brunswick would bind the others; Mr. Howe's Final Report, dated at Amherst, with other papers. He did not deem it necessary to make any further remarks at present-but would be happy to answer any questions put to him. Hon. Provincial Secretary asked leave to inroduce a Bill entitled an act to make provision or building a Trunk Line of Railway through British North America. After the preamble, he aid, came a clause, very similar to one in the Bill passed by the Canadian Legislature, giving the Governor in Council general power-assaming that one-third of the expense was borne by this province to make the necessary arrangements for the completion of the work. The third clause authorised the Governor in Council, as soon as the necessary arrangements were perfected, to appoint five Commissioners to superintend the construction of the work. The fourth provided that it should be a provincial public work. The fifth left it open for any person in Nova Scotta or elsewhere, who might wish to invest his morey in it-to do so, in sums of £25-the effect of which would be that, if any man having a thonsand pounds or twenty five pounds at his dis-posal, wished to invest it in this work, he could do so taking the same risk as the Government. The sixth guaranteed the interest to any person so disposed to loan money. The seventh provided that it should be worked as one continuous line; the eighth that the liability of the Province should not exceed £1,000,000-and the last, that before this law could go into operation, New Brunswick should make provision not only for this line, but for the European line in addition. Leave was granted, and the Bill read a first time

Hon. Provincial Secretary asked leave to introduce a Bill entitled an Act for Raising by way of loan, a sum not exceeding £1,000,000 Stg., for the Construction of a Trunk Railway through British North America. Canada has passed two Bills, the one authorising the construction of the Line-the other providing for the requisite loan. The Bill authorized the Governor in Council to obtain this loan on the terms prescribed in Mr. Hawe's letter to Mr. Howe, and authorises the Receiver General to draw the sum in the event of its being borrowed. The Commissioners were to draw from the general fund, one-third of the whole, and the Receiver General was to transmit to the Home Government, for the information of Parliament, a correct and detailed account of the monies spent. The fifth clause provides that the money shall be duly applied; the sixth, that until the monies advanced by the Imperial Government shall have been repaid or until the Roads built with the same shall yield a nett income of 61 per cent., the Tariff of 1851 should form the basis the Revenue Laws of this Province, and should not be varied or changed, so as to diminish the nett income of the Province, as it is this year. He would remark that if this Bill received the sanction of the House, it would be followed by one other, at least-the operation of which would be to remodel the whole of the Crown Land system, and make its machinery for constructing this Railway to harmonise with the sale of the Crown Lands. It was for the House to decide when the question should be taken up-if might be better to allow it to lie over until the day after to-morrow, in order that members might have an opportunity of making themselves acquainted with the Bills and correspondence just submitted. He was not quite ready-but would, rather than lose time, open the question to-morrow.

Hon J. W. Johnston would like to ask the Hon. Provincial Secretary whether any correspondence had taken place with the Imperial Go-

(From City Papers.)

TUESDAY, Nov. 4th, 1851.

The Legislative Session, specially convened, to consider the Government Railway propositions, was opened on Tuesday with the usual ecremonies. His Excellency came down to the Council Chamber at 2 o'clock, and took his seat upon the throne, and having summoned the 'dutiful Commons,' instructed them to return to their Chamber and elect a speaker; when it appeared (the ballot being taken with closed doors) the choice had fallen on Wm. Young, Esquire, Speaker of the late House. On the Commons row

The ballot was then taken, when there appeared-for Mr. Twining 27; for Mr. James

Hon. Provincial Secretary nominated Peter Spearwater, the late Serjeant at arms, for the office, anew, which was seconded by Mr. Martel.

Mr. Marshall moved Mr. George Grassieseconded by Mr Benjamin Smith (Hants).

Two applications from Mr. Lovett and Mr. Wier were withdrawn. On the ballot being taken, there appeared for Mr. Spearwater 23. For Mr. Grassie 25.

Messrs. Philip Brown, and Thomas Donovan. were then severally moved for the office of Assistant Serjeant at Arms, for which Mr. Brown was elected-the numbers being Brown 25; Donovan 21; and two votes for John Fitzgerald.

On motion of Mr. Henry, Dr. Twining was elected Chaplain.

Mr. Henry nominated Mr. John Fitzgerald. as Messenger to the House-seconded by the Hon. Mr. Johnston and unanimously agreed to. Mr. Archibald moved the answer to the Speech of his Excellency, and S. Chipman, Esq. seconded it; the consideration of which was laid over until Wednesday.

After conversation, it was decided that the general business of the country should not be taken up the present session.

A Franking Committee composed of Messrs Henry, Smith and Creighton were appointed .-The House then adjourned till 12 o'clock to-mor-

Mr. Freeman moved the appointment of a Committee to ascertain whether the contract for printing the Revised Statutes, had been fulfilled.

Messrs. Fraser, Fulton, Freeman, Holmes and Stewart Campbell, were appointed a Committee for such purpose.

Hon. Provincial Secretary, by command of His Excellency, laid on the table copies of correspondence between the Colonial Office and the Provincial Government-conveying her Majesty's assent to various Bills passed during the last session-and her dissent to others-among which was that relating to School Lands-to with the right of the Society for the Propogation of the Gospel-they having established an equi-table claim to these lands. Also, that refusing assent to the King's College Bill, on the ground that some of the Professors had been induced to live other situations by a permanent grant-and others. These papers were read.

Hon. Provincial Secretary laid on the table by command of his Excellency, certain papers in connection with Colonial Railways. The papers up to the period at which the House had risen last year-had already been submitted. Those which he had now to submit were : Mr. Howe's Final Report to Mr. Keating,dated Sloane-street,4th April; a despatch from the Governor General A Minute of the Canadian Council; a Despatch from Sir John Harvey to Sir Edmund Head, and a reply, informing Sir John Harvey of the appointment of a Delegate; a Memorandum of vernment, with a view to obtain a modification of the terms set forth in Mr. Hawes' letter of March last?

Hon. Provincial Secretary .-- No. There has been no correspondence, because of the uncertainty which prevailed as to the conclusions which would be adopted by the different Provinces. I may say frankly, that we place these Bills on the table as referring to a great public measure, and we invite and ask the criticism and assistance of every member of the Honse to make them as perfect as possible. After the Bills pass, as 1 rust they will do, with the united action of the which assent was refused because it interfered House, it is our intention to propose an address, to the Crown, praying the confirmation of those facts, and also that something more may be done by the Imperial Government than has yet been offered.

Hon. Mr. Johnston .--- I would also like to know whether there are any plans of the survey of Major Robinson, as referred to in his report?

Hon. Provincial Secretary only knew of one slan. That was hanging in the Provincial Secretary's office, and could be brought up for the inspection of the House.

Mr. Henry handed in to the Provincial Secretary his question as to whether any despatches had gone from the Provincial Government on the King's College Bill; and also included in it the same question as related to the Bill for altering the trust of the School Lands.

The second reading of the Railway Bills was made the order of the day for Friday next, and the terms proposed by the two Governments of the House adjourned till two o'clock on Thursday.

THE LATE GALE .- The accounts of the effects of the late Gale on P. E. Island are most distressing. One incident we have heard related, of a most touching character. An old man living at Cape Cod, had four sons on board one of the fishing schooners in the Gulf, and having heard of her loss he left his home and travelled to the Island in the hopes of finding the remains of his boys. Arrived at the scene of the wreck, he as-certained the spot where the bodies of the unfortunate seamen had been interred, and immediately had them exhumed. The remains of only one of his sons were discovered, but while engaged in the sad task several other bodies were washed up on the spot by the sea, and among them he found the bodies of two more of his children, and one of his near neighbours .- 1b.

PRIZES AT THE EXHIBITION .--- By the last arrival from England, we learn that the Commissioners of the Great Exhibition have awarded prizes to C. D. Archibald Esq., for specimens, of ateel; and John Robinson, Esq., for the furs ex-hibited there. We have not heard of any others from Nova Scotia to whom this honour has been extended, but as the amount of goods exhibited from this Province was very small, this distinc-tion is a matter of pride, proving as it does, the general excellence of what we did send .- Record-

NEW DISCOVERIES IN AFRICA .- It may be remembered by some of our readers, that early in 1650, Mr. Richardson, an agent of the British Government, together with two German savang and a select escort, started from Tripoli on an expedition to explore the interior of Africa; The tained in a letter from one of them, Dr. Barth to the British Consul General at Tripoli, dated the 29th of February last. The expedition had reashed Kano, on the road to the kingdom of Bornou, where they expected to arrive in the month of April. The expedition had passed through many dangers and difficulties, with no greater misfortune than the loss of a lusle propersy, of which it was robbed by the Touriss. This by, of which it was roosed by the rearise. This is a powerful tribe who inhubit the cases in the Sahara, or Great Desert, who are noted for their inhospitality to travellers. It is a singular and interesting fact that these Toariks, whose only lood is camel's milk and a few dates, are the most powerful, athletic, and warlike race of the centre of Africa.

Dr. Barsh mentions a vast tract of fertile land through which he passed in the region of the Great Sahara, and which has remained entirely unknown to travellers and geographers. He describes it as being of considerable extent, being tifully wooded, with a number of small rivers passing through it, and susceptible of the highest degree of cultivation. ORDINATION AT FREDERICTON.—On Thurs day last, the Presbytery of St. John, in connex ion with the Church of Scotland, n:et at Frede ricton for the purpose of ordaining the Rev. Francis Nicol, of Halifax, N. S., to the sacred office of the Ministry. The Presbytery were en gaged in the early part of the day in hearing the urses, and examining Mr. Nicol on the various subjects prescribed by the laws of the Church, in all which he acquitted himself most eseditably, and to the entire satisfaction of the Preabytery. The public services commenced at Jo'clock, when the Rev. Wm. Donald, A. M. of St. John, preached and presided. After an ex-cellent and appropriate discourse, from John xii 46, "I am come a light unto the world, that whoseever believeth on me should not abide in darkness," the usual questions were put, and Mr. Nicol was set apart to the sacred office, by prayer and imposition of hands. Earnest and fitting addresses were then delivered by Mr Donald to the young Minister on the nature of the duties he had undertaken, and to the congregation on their responsibilities as members of the Church and hearers of the Word. The attendance on the occasion was large and respectable, and the solemn services of the day seemed to make a deep impression.

CARLETON'S Condtion Powders for Horses and Cattle.

The changes of weather and senson, with the change of use and feed, have a very great effect upon the blood and sinuous fluids of horses. It is at these times they require an assistant to, gature to throw off any disorder of the fluids of the body that may have been imbibed, and which, if not attended to, will result in the Yellow Water, Heaves, Worms, Bots, &c. All of which will be prevent-ed by giving one of these powders, and will cure when disease appears, if used in time. They purify the blood, remove all influmation and fever, lossen the skin, cleause the water, and invigorate the whole body, emabling them to do more work with the same feed. The action of these p wders is direct upon all the secretive glands, and therefore has the same effect upon the House, OX, and all and all Herbiverous animals—all diseases arising from or producing a bad state of the blood, are speedily cured by them. The changes of weather and season, with the change

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

CURE OF RHEUMATISM AND RHEUMATIC GOUT Extract of a Letter from Mr. Thomas Brunton, Landlord of the Waterloo Tavern, Coatham, Yorkshire, late of the Life Guards, dated September 28th, 1848

To Professor Houoway,

To Professor Homosy, after bepender bein, 1969 To Professor Homosy, Siz.—I or a long time I was a martyr to Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout, and for ten weeks previous to using your medicines, I was so bad as not to be able to walk. I had tried doctoring and medicines of every kind, but all to no avail, indeed I daily got worse, and felt that I must shortly die. From seeing your remedies advertised in the paper I take in, I thought I would give them a trial. I did so. I rubbed the Ointment in as directed, and kept cabbage leaves to the parts thickly spread with it, and took the l'ills night and morning. In three weeks I was enabled to walk about for an hour or two 'w 'we day with a stick, and in seven weeks I could go any ware with-out one. I am now, by the blessing of God and your me-dicines, quite well, and have been attending to any busin ness more than seven months, without any symptoms of the return of my old complaint. Besides my case of Rheumatic Gout, I have lately had proof that your l'ills and Ointment will heal any old wound or ulcer, as a married woman, living near me, had had a bad leg for four years, which no one could cure, and I gave her some of your Pills and Ointment, which soundly healed it when nothing else would do it. For your information I had the bouour to serve my country for twenty-five years in the first regiment of Life (inards, and was eighteen years a corporal. I was two years in the l'eninsular War, and was at the Battle of Waterloo. I was discharged with a pension on the find September, less. The Commanding Other at that time, was Coloned

CURE OF A BAD LEG OF TWENTY-ONE TEARS' STANDING Extract of a Letter from Mr AndrewBruck, Blacksmith, Evemouth, near Berwick, dated the 10th of August, 1848

To Professor Holloway.

To Professor Holloway. Sin,—With pleasure and gratitude I have to inform you that after suffering for 21 years with a bad leg, which yielded to no kind of treatment, although I consulted, at different times, every medical man of eminence in this part of the country, but all to no purpose. I was fre-quently unable to work; and the ain and agony I often endured no one can tell. My leg is now as sound as ever it was in my life by means of your Pills and Ointment, which I purchased from Mr. I. Davidson, Druggist, Ber wick-upon-Tweed, who knows my case well, and will, I am sure, be happy to certify with me, if necessary, as to the truth of this wonderful cure. (Signed) ANDREW BRACK.

AMPUTATION OF TWO TOES PREVENTED Extract of a Letter from Mr Oliver Smith Jenkins, dated Falkirk, August 13th, 1848.

Falkirk, August 18th, 1848. To Professor Holloway, Sta,—I was supermeending, about six months ago, the ercetion of one of our lialway Bridges, and by the fall of a large stone my right foot was scriously bruised, which ultimately got so bad, that I was advised to go to Edin-burgh to consult some of the eminent Surgeons, which I did, and was told that in order to save my foot, two of my toes must be taken off In despair, I returned home to impart the melancholy news to my wife, intending to submit to the operation, it was then a thought struck me to try your valuable Ointment and Pills, which I did, and was by their means in three weeks enabled to resume my usual occupation, and at this time my toes are perfectly cured. (Signed) OLIVER SMITH JENK INS.

AN EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF A DESPERATE SKIN DISEASE On the 21st July, 1848, the Editor of the "Mofussilite" Newspaper, published in India, inserted the following Editorial article in his paper. "We know for a fact, that Holloway's Pills and Ontment act in a most wonderful Holoway's Fills and Ontment act in a most wonderful manner upon the constitution, as an eccentric Coole, called Eliza, employed in our Establishment, was affected with myriads of Ringworms, which defied all the Meerkt Doctors, and promised to devour the poor man before he was under ground; we tried 'Holloway' upon him, and in a month he was perfectly restored to his former condi-tion and cleanliness of skin. The effect was miraculous."

The Wretched Father.

Not long since, a wealthy merchant of Boston poured into the ear of a valued friend his bitter complaints of the conduct of his two and only " My life is rendered perfectly miserable sons. by their reckless dissipation and shameless profligacy," said he. The friend inquired of the merchant if he could bear plain dealing. "Yes" was the reply. "After what I have been made to suffer by those of my own household, I feel that I can bear anything from others." The friend laid his hand kindly upon the merchant's shoulder, and inquired, Where did your children learn to drink intoxicating stimulants ?". In the most impassioned manner conceivable, the wretched man exclaimed, "At my own table and O, sir," said he, " that reflection is the most bitter drop in the draught I am compelled to drain." Where on earth, with all his wealth, can that wretched father now find happiness ?-He has thoughtlessly made his sons pass through the fire to our American Moloch, and the scorch ed and blasted victims will, in all probability, torment his vision, and wring his heart with anguish while he lives, to go before him to dishonored graves, dragging him with his load of sorrows after them.
