WHEN LOVE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER XXX.
"Quits."

He was so absorbed in his reflections that he entered the Grange avenue without noticing it, and, suddenly looking up, he found himself by the rail over which he had leaped when he went to meet Bella-Bella. He stopped for a moment, and glared fearfully toward the shadows of the wood, then, with a shudder and a shake, as if a chill had fallen on him, hurried on.

The squirrel was out, the butler said, and Miss Olivia—he begged pardon, Mrs. Bradstone—was lying down, and not well enough to see anyone. Would he come in and wait for the squirrel?"

Bartley Bradstone shook his head, and turned aside that the man might not see the evil look that crossed his face. At that moment Bessie crossed the hall, and he called her.

"Here," he said, "Just give this to Mrs. Bradstone, and tell her that I am so glad to hear she was able to go out to-day."

In taking out the letter, he also pulled out Faradeane's, which he thrust back hurriedly into his breast pocket. Then he went down the steps. At the bottom he paused and looked round, thinking he would go home by a road that avoided the awful spot; but he set his hat firmly on his head, and clinched his teeth, muttering:

"No, no; no use giving way like that. I shall have to pass the cursed place half-a-dozen times a day in the future."

He walked down the avenue, but, though he had nerved himself to the utmost, as he approached the particular railing his heart began to thud and his cheeks to whiten. And suddenly, as he neared in the direction of the glade, his heart seemed to stop beating and his brain to whirl, for there, there on the very spot, was something, something in the shape and hue of a woman's dress coming toward him. Was it a living woman or—

With a low cry of horror he staggered, and clutched at the railing with both hands to keep himself from falling, for his knees bent under him, still staring at the dimly-seen figure.

A second or two, that seemed like years, passed in that awful suspense; then the figure—living or dead—disappeared among the trees.

With a moan of terror he managed to stand upright, and, mopping his livid face with his handkerchief, struggled for courage to call out.

His voice came at last, and huskily and feebly he called:

"Who's there?"

No answer came. He waited for a minute, until the use of his legs came back to him, then set off, as fast as his trembling limbs would permit, down the avenue.

Almost before he had reached the lodge, the figure came out from among the trees, and gliding from the shelter of one trunk to another, made for the railing and looked after him.

Then, if Bartley Bradstone could have summoned up courage to look back, he would have seen that what he had taken for the wrath of the woman he had shot was Seth the gypsy, clad in an ordinary carter's frock and wearing a slouch hat that nearly concealed his face.

Seth got over the fence and, stood looking up and down the avenue warily. The smock was torn with brambles, Seth's face looked grimy and drink-worn, and there was a furtive, sinister gleam in his black, cunning eyes.

"Give you a fright, did I, Master Bradstone!" he muttered, huskily. "I'll give you one or two more afore I've done with you."

Then he was about to leap over the railing back into the wood again, when something white lying on the ground where Bartley Bradstone had been standing, caught his eye.

He pounced upon it as only a lurcher or a gypsy can, and turned it over with eager curiosity.

It was the letter containing Bartley Bradstone's confession, which he had pulled out from his pocket with his handkerchief.

Seth shrugged his shoulders. "Only a letter. 'Tain't no use to me; if it 'ud been his hankercher, now!" With a contemptuous grimace he tore it in half, and was about to fling it away, when he stopped his hand. "I dunno," he muttered, "perhaps I'd better keep it; he might give me something for it. I'll offer it him anyhow." And he thrust it carelessly into his trousers-pocket.

CHAPTER XXXI.
"We Shall Save Him Yet."

Bessie took the note up to Olivia's room, and found her still kneeling beside the bed, her arms stretched out upon the white coverlid in utter exhaustion; and yet the hands were moving to and fro restlessly, as if the brain were racked by anxious thought.

Bessie bent over her and softly drew the long hair from her face, which was burning hot.

"Ah, miss, you will be ill again!" she said, reproachfully. "And he said I was to take care of you."

"Yes! It is always of me or some one else he is thinking!" Olivia moaned, impatiently. "Always of some one else—never of himself. Oh, Bessie, what shall I do to save him? What shall I do? Every hour, every minute, that slips by so stealthily and so swiftly, adds to the danger. I can't think; I can't even pray. What shall I do?" and she wrung her hands.

"Hush, hush, miss!" murmured Bessie, soothingly. "Something will be done; the truth must come to light."

But though she tried to speak confidently, her voice trembled, and she had to turn her face away.

"Yes, the truth will come to light when it is too late and they have—killed him. Oh, if there was only some one I could go to, some one to help me! If I were only a man instead of a weak, feeble woman! What is that?" she broke off sharply, as she caught sight of the note in Bessie's hand.

Bessie held it out reluctantly. "From him!" panted Olivia.

"No, from—Mr. Bradstone, miss," replied Bessie, pronouncing the name as if with an effort.

Olivia drew the hand back as if the envelope had power to sting her; then she took it slowly and read it.

With a cry she let the letter fall from her hand, and flung them before her face as if to shut out some fearful sight. Bessie flew to her with an exclamation; but suddenly Olivia's emotion seemed to change, and, darting upon the letter, took it to the window and read it again with dilating eyes. Then she turned and grasped Bessie's arm.

"Bessie," she whispered, hoarsely, a strange thrill in her voice, a strange light seeming to shine upon her face, "did you ever doubt his innocence? Did you? Did you?" she demanded, feverishly.

Bessie looked at her indignantly. "No; nor I! But if I had, if even for a moment such a doubt had entered my heart, I should doubt no longer! Do you know why?" and her grasp tightened upon Bessie's arm and stiffened her. "I will tell you! Because Mr. Bradstone says that he saw him do it!"

Bessie shrank back with a low cry of horror.

"Says— Oh, no, no, miss!"

"Yes. Listen! No, I will not sully my lips with the lie—for it is a lie! If it had been true, he would not have waited until now! Ah, no!" She stopped and looked before her into vacancy, her dark brows drawn straight. "No, he would not have waited; he would have been only too glad to tell it. Then—her voice dropped still lower—"why does he say it now? Why? why? Help me, Bessie," and her hands worked convulsively. "There is some reason. Ah!" she started and shrank, and her face went white. "I see!"

Panting and trembling, Bessie clung to her.

"Oh, what is it, miss? What is it you think you have found out?"

"I have found out this: I am sure that Mr. Bradstone knows who committed the murder!" replied Olivia, almost inaudibly.

Bessie's brain reeled, and it was she who clung to Olivia for support—Olivia, who every moment seemed to be gaining greater physical and mental strength.

"He—he knows, and he says it was Mr. Para— Oh, Miss Olivia!" and she began to cry.

"Hush, hush! Let us think!" said Olivia, almost sternly. "Why does he accuse him? Why does Bartley Bradstone screen the real criminal? Is it some friend—some one he knows? Ah, I cannot see; it is all dark! If there were only some one to help me! But there is no one, no one, if Bertie—"

She stopped with a cry. "But I sent him away! I have brought trouble, nothing but trouble to all who— who loved me!" and she hung her head and sighed. "He will not speak, he will keep silent, but Bartley Bradstone will not be silent. He will tell this lie in open court, and—"

She stopped, and a shudder shook her from head to foot. Then she was silent for a moment, still thinking deeply. Suddenly she looked up. "Bertie may be in England; no one can tell. If he were—he loves him, I know. Bessie, you must go to London—"

"Me! To London!" said Bessie, with a start; then almost instantly she added, quietly, "Yes, miss, I can be ready in a quarter of an hour," and she drew herself up and stood with flashing eyes expectantly.

Olivia drew her toward her and kissed her.

"Now listen to me," she said, in a low voice, that was firm and steady for the first time since the awful day of the wedding—and the murder. "First, Bessie, go to Lord Carfield's—I will give you a note." She darted to her desk and wrote rapidly. "It is asking him to tell me Lord Bertie's address. If he says he does not know it, go to London to the detective—Mr. McAndrew, of whom you have told me—and tell him to find out if Lord Bertie is in England or within reach. If he is, Mr. McAndrew is to give him this message: 'Olivia Vanley—'"

She stopped, and her face grew red and then white. "No, 'Olivia,' only Olivia, wants you to come to her on a matter of life or death. That is all. He will ask you for money, very likely." She flew to her jewel-case, which Bessie had arranged, and snatched the first thing that came to hand.

It was Faradeane's present. Her lips quivered and her eyes filled with tears as she looked at it, and she was putting it back in the case, when she stayed her hand and exclaimed, suddenly:

"Yes, this! How better could I use it than in his service? Take this and give it to Mr. McAndrew. You will find him at Scotland Yard; see, I have written down the address. Telegraph to me, or come back to me with the news; and, oh, Bessie, remember that you and I, two helpless women, are trying to save the life of the man who saved yours, and who is risking his life now to screen some one else!"

Bessie gave a great sob, then set her teeth hard, and hurried from the room.

In half an hour she had reached Carfield Towers and delivered the note. Lord Carfield came out to her, as she was waiting in the brougham.

"Tell your mistress, my girl," he said, sadly, "that I am as ignorant as she is of my son's whereabouts. Of course, it is on account of Mr. Faradeane and this terrible mystery that she wants him?"

Ladies' Coats,

FOR FALL AND WINTER NOW SHOWING AT

BLAIR'S

Our Values are Absolutely the Best Obtainable.

This year's style in Coats is distinctive. The Coat with the flare (or wide) skirt is the mode. Coats this year are either without belts or come with a half belt effect. This is quite different from last season's Military Coat, which had a belt all round and was much lighter in the skirt.

Despite increasing cost of Coats, through rising prices of materials, and the fashions demanding more cloth in each, we are enabled to offer you the NEWEST GOODS at the LOWEST PRICES. This we are enabled to do by our early contracts and also by our moderate margin of profit, which has built us up such a successful coat business, as it is well known our values are the best. Our prices are:—

$4.90, 5.90, 6.90, 7.90, 9.50 and upwards.

We are also busy opening a full selection of

Misses', Children's and Infants' COATS, which you can depend will be the best values procurable.

My Interview With Venizelos

WHAT WILL HE DO IF RETURNED TO POWER?

Mr. Crawford Price, who has an intimate acquaintance with Balkan Wars and Politics, is visiting England on a mission from M. Venizelos in connection with the forthcoming Greek Elections, the result of which may have far-reaching consequences.

Once, after I had introduced a British lady to M. Venizelos, she returned to me enchanted with her short interview. "So perfectly charming," she exclaimed, "so brilliant, and yet so kind and gentle."

"Yes," I replied, "and one of the finest revolvers shots in Europe." Venizelos appears to be gifted with a dual nature. The "Mr. Premier" you meet in society, the statesman who is an outstanding figure in European politics, is hardly compatible with the old revolutionary leader of the Cretan hills.

It is only when you get him with his back to the wall, or roused to anger against injustice, or combating interference with the freedom of men or nations, that you see sparks from the fires of enthusiasm for God and humanity that burn ever brightly within him.

Nature has well fitted him to be a chief among his fellows. Watch him handle a crowd. There is no wild waving of the arms, no theatrical trick of oratory; but he holds the audience unto him, as if were, tells them what he thinks (not necessarily what they want), focuses them to decision, and sends them away convinced that this man can point the road to the realization of their national aims and ambitions.

See him in private. He has a winning smile worth untold gold that pre-disarms his critics, and a gift of persuasion that generally seals his victory.

Regard him in diplomacy. He has a clear vision that looks far ahead, a memory that forgets nothing, and one of those keen, brilliant minds that make their decisions quickly and rarely regret them.

Mistakes? Well, he is human, and he is accused of being too impetuous. History alone can decide, and, meantime, it is working in his favour. He has a capacity for making staunch friends and vicious enemies, and perhaps his most noticeable fault lies in a too liberal distribution of his confidence.

Finally, he has "luck"—luck so persistent as to warrant a belief that even at this eleventh hour he will come back and save Greece from complete disaster.

It was my recent privilege to spend a short holiday with M. Venizelos at Loutraki, a little thermal station on the shores of the Gulf of Corinth and opposite the town of that name. He went to Loutraki to rest while in preparation for the stress and turmoil of a strenuous electoral campaign.

He has a clear vision that looks far ahead, a memory that forgets nothing, and one of these keen, brilliant minds that make their decisions quickly and rarely regret them.

Mistakes? Well, he is human, and he is accused of being too impetuous. History alone can decide, and, meantime, it is working in his favour. He has a capacity for making staunch friends and vicious enemies, and perhaps his most noticeable fault lies in his too liberal distribution of his confidence.

Finally, he has "luck"—luck so persistent as to warrant a belief that even at this eleventh hour he will come back and save Greece from complete disaster.

It was my recent privilege to spend a short holiday with M. Venizelos at Loutraki, a little thermal station on the shores of the Gulf of Corinth and opposite the town of that name. He went to Loutraki to rest awhile in preparation for the stress and turmoil of a strenuous electoral campaign.

Greece's Lost Opportunities.

We held most of our own conversations away down by the seashore, when the broiling sun had gone to rest and the hot breezes were toned down by their sweep across the placid waters of the gulf. He swayed to and fro across the Balkan history of the last two years. We talked of the proposals that led him to discord with the throne, of the growth of German influence in Greece and the cause thereof, and of my own efforts to win King Constantine from the policy which had led Greece to the very brink of national annihilation.

Even to-day he mourns the lost opportunities for territorial expansion, and feels that he can at best set out to safeguard that which was won in other wars, and pick up, maybe, some crumbs from the table of good things that appear before Hellas when the Entente really needed her help.

The suggestion that he is an enemy of the monarchy is false and dishonest. "Greece has not a monarchy," he told me, "but the King must be a constitutional ruler. The establishment of an absolutist regime is entirely out of keeping with the temperament of the Hellenic people."

M. Venizelos is indeed, a firm supporter of the throne, and he is, moreover, the only man to-day who can save King Constantine. But he finds his ideal of kingship in England, not in Germany.

Three weeks ago we discussed the future. In a voice dulled by remorse he turned towards me.

"Ah! what a glorious prospect opened up before us. If my policy had been adopted we could have created a second Greece in Asia Minor, secured Cyprus and broadened our frontiers in Europe. But we let slip the golden opportunity. We sold our birthright for a mess of German pottage."

"When the Skoufoudis Cabinet violated the treaty of alliance with Serbia they did more than dishonor the signature of Greece, for the destruction of King Peter's army was for us a national calamity which should never have been tolerated. Now our first task is one of self-preservation. The principles laid down by the Treaty of Bukarest are essential to the well-being of the Greek State."

What will Greece do if Venizelos returns to power?

From the very commencement of the war he expressed unbounded confidence in the ultimate triumph of the Allies. He pierced the hollowness of German "Kultur" long before that vicious virtue had disclosed its Balkan ambitions by alliance with Turkey and Bulgaria, and he never doubted that the friendship of Britain and France was the manna upon which Greece would grow and wax strong.

He is no fair-weather friend of the Entente. Long before the Allied soldiers were marching with steady tread to a victory which now awaits but its liquidation, long before new armies could serve only to quicken triumph, and in the days when much was mere hazard, he willed to see his country battling in the cause of freedom and righteousness. Also he knew his Balkan Greeks and understood the danger for Greece of her determination to work for Balkan hegemony. He knew his Turkey, and longed to liberate the Hellenes still languishing under Ottoman rule. He recognized that Greece must either strike or be struck.

After many months the political vista of M. Venizelos remains unchanged. The entry of Rumania can serve only to confirm him in his policy. True, Greece is no longer essential to the Allies; but she can help to abridge the slaughter, materially assist us to wind up the Balkan campaign more speedily, and still gather in some part of her great, unredeemed heritage.

Now you must guess what Venizelos will do.

American View of Somme Offensive.—"Germans Will Break."

Mr. Wythe Williams sends to the New York Times the results of his observations on the French Somme front. He emphasizes that they are not official declarations made by military authorities but conclusions based on his observation as a neutral correspondent.

"Behind the French armies," he says, "there are method and science, greater science and greater method, than in all the much-advertised clock work attacks on Verdun. The Germans are trying to fight the war on lines already laid down by their General Staff. The French adapted themselves and their tactics to suit each change in military circumstances. Every Frenchman now knows that he is not cannon fodder, but a unit carefully selected to accomplish a particular piece of work, and for that reason not to be sacrificed uselessly lest the whole work should suffer because parts are undone."

"Let anyone who is tempted to ask if the French offensive has failed recall that since July 1 the French have advanced along a 15 mile front to a depth of from 5 to 10 miles. Everything they have won has been held against no matter what reaction, each day's objective has always been attained and at a minimum of loss, and finally the ground thus won defended by ample forces and strengthened with every device of modern warfare."

"It may be said by some that at Verdun also the Germans progressed regularly for a time, only to fall at the end, but there is this all-important difference. Their advance was compelled gradually to narrow almost to a point, with the result that the concentrated fire of the French artillery broke the wedge and as often as the Germans tried to thrust it forward."

"On the Somme the French front has steadily widened, first in the river bend, then north of the river, and now another thirteen miles farther south of the Somme almost to Lassigny and Roye. One must not imagine for a moment that the French are trying to break the German line with a sudden rupture as of a dyke through which the whole flood may flow."

"There is Grant's method—inexorable pressure steadily widening and steadily increasing—which is to be maintained until this whole sector of the German front can bear no more and gives way in a collapse that will overwhelm the invaders' whole system of fortifications from the sea to Switzerland."

I'm always buying costly shares in ginseng plants and Belgian hares, in silver mines and orange groves, and mills that turn our wooden clogs. The smiling fakirs of the town! simply can't turn them down. They charm me with their sunny smiles, they fascinate me with their wiles, and sell me, from their catalogues, the motor cars and hatless dogs, and remedies that grow new hair on domes of thought that long were bare, and lithographs of Statesman Hughes, and ships of sealing wax and shoes. To-morrow, if you look for me, my form in town you will not see, though you may rake it with a comb—goodbye, old town, I'm going home!

GREECE.

There are signs that the Greek situation is clearing and in the only manner in which it could clear: he must be well-informed and bold who will make any more definite statement than this. Out of the confused reports of confused events one gathers the impression that the Entente Powers have left her to make it a practical one if she so choose. It seems now plain that she is so choosing. Apart from all this dramatic presentation of King Constantine in a new light (to think he has all along been a friend in disguise!) the revolutionary movement at Crete and Salonika could not long continue to make way without bringing the Government down with a crash and imperiling the throne itself. Constantine sees the impending fate and finds it better to accept it voluntarily than have it thrust upon him, not by the Entente but by his own people.

For it must now be plain to the Greek people where their policy of neutrality will bring them. The Serbian victory near Monastir, the final blocking of Mackensen's drive in Dobruja and the recapture by the Roumanians of the Transylvanian passes they had lost are events which write clearly the ultimate fate of Bulgaria. But Bulgaria might see the writing as clearly as anyone, and show herself in a mood to bargain. Even at that late date, with all her treacherous history behind her, she might well buy her neutrality from the Allies, so great would the saving be to them of precious lives and money and precious time. Indeed, Serbia restored, indemnified and assured of territorial compensation, the Allies might even consent to allow Bulgaria to retain Kavala and its environs at the expense of contemptible Greece. It is not likely but it is possible, and

There is no word of the whereabouts of the schooner Annie, supposed to have left Ragged Islands, P.E., on Saturday last for St. John's with a cargo of dry fish and grave fears are entertained for the safety of the craft and her crew, numbering five. Concerning the loss of the schooner Bonnie Lass at Trepassey Bar, Mr. R. J. Devereaux received the following message yesterday afternoon from Trepassey:
"The schooner was owned by Michael McDonald, Newbridge, Salmonier. The crew consisted of John McRath, master, married; Peter McDonald, of St. Mary's, married; Richard McDonald, of Salmonier, married; Michael Grace, of Salmonier, married; Henry Lewis, married; Richard Grace, Edward Fagan, unmarried. The hull is partly submerged, with bow up; bowsprit and foremast intact; double-reefed foremast on foremast torn in pieces; mainmast unstepped; cannot tell condition of schooner aft of main hatch. Dories were driven ashore in pieces with name of Bonnie Lass painted on them. One anchor chain and cable hanging from bow. Motor boats are trying to tow hull to land but are making little progress, but however, are still trying. Schooner did not run down land; might have been swamped or capsized. No hope is held out for crew and there is no sign of bodies. No sign of other wreckage than that of Bonnie Lass."

SCARCITY OF RABBITS.—Rabbits are said to be unprecedentedly scarce this season and the price of them continues to rule high.

VESSELS DETAINED.—Owing to adverse conditions of late several schooners, fish laden for European market, have been detained.

THE STEPHANO.—The Red Cross Liner Stephano, Capt. Smith, did not get away from New York for Halifax until Tuesday evening and will leave the latter port here on Saturday, bringing the largest freight she has yet brought at one time.

WITH COAL.—The schr. General Laurie, Capt. R. Benson, which left here two months ago for the southern markets, arrived at North Sydney last week with a cargo of salt, discharging and replacing the same with coal for Tessier and Co. She is now on her way to this port.

RETURNS TO THE FRONT.—Sergeant Thos. Ashbourne, of the Canadian Field Artillery and son of Mr. Wm. Ashbourne, merchant at Twillingate, who was home on short furlough, left by Tuesday night's express on his way back to the front. Sergeant Ashbourne is a fine type of young man with a splendid robust physique typical of his forebears. Since enlisting he has won rapid promotion and, we understand, has been recommended for a commission now.

EAGLE AT HALIFAX.—The s.s. Eagle, Capt. Couch, which left this port Saturday night for Halifax, passed safely through Sunday night's storm after experiencing one of the roughest trips in the memory of her captain and crew. She arrived at the port mentioned yesterday morning, making the run in 84 hours. Relatives and friends of the Eagle's crew were anxiously awaiting the news of her arrival as the ship was known to be only in light ballast through an excellent sea boat. Old and experienced sailors knowing her qualifications, felt confident of her safe arrival. She will load general cargo for here and is expected to get away to-morrow morning.

THE ELECTRIC STOVE.
The electric stove is a successful device which prevents the housewife from being overcome by the heat and baked to the dull, reddish brown aspect of the Arapahoe squaw. A woman can stand in front of an electric stove all day and run it with one hand, while heating up a sponge cake with the other, and still remain as cool and collected as a refrigerator car. In fact, the only person who is liable to become overheated when he looks at one of these stoves is a husband who has just figured the meter rate with a pencil stub and a sinking heart.

Man cannot realize what the introduction of the electric stove means to woman, because he has never posed in front of a soft-coal range for eight hours in succession, trying to prepare enough food to keep a family of eight children from eating the upholstery off of a hair sofa. The old-fashioned cook stove, with sloping legs and concave stomach, has caused thousands of women to regret having given up teaching country school and entering upon matrimony with one eye closed. Nobody has ever determined the number of heat units thrown off by one of these stoves, on a peaceful summer day, when the air is vibrant with the melody of birds and the thermometer is running around the track with its tongue out. We do know, however, that many a man has come home at noon, only to be greeted by a wife with straight hair and carmine complexion, like unto the over-ripe tomato, all due to a steel range which is not content with trying to cook what it carried inside.

LAUGHING IN DEATH'S FACE.
Manchester Guardian.—What is it in the race and age that makes the young Englishman bred in our modern cities, the most impudently and elaborately light-hearted and frivolous being in the whole civilized world? He has simply no equal, one might say, no competitor. Beside him the ordinary Frenchman or Italian is a highly organized compound of gravity and rhetoric, the Teuton a lump of heaviness, the Russian or Scandinavian an abyss of melancholy. The young American possibly comes nearest, but he by comparison is a person of enormous external seriousness. Every observer who has endeavored to describe the British army and its ways has dwelt upon the inconquerable frivolity of the private soldier, who, while complaining of every imaginable trifle of the day's round, confronts with a jest the worst horrors of field and trench. No one can tell how many of the bravest and finest youths in history have gone to their death singing a music-hall refrain!

BAD OATS.—Following our complaint yesterday of bad oats, we learn that there are several other horses in the outports as well as in the city laid off on account of using the stuff.

Age Only Improves STEWART'S Cake.

Some housewives demand Lightness in cakes. Some demand Fine Flavor or Appearance. Users of Stewart's Cake demand more—and they get it consistently, because its wholesome quality seldom varies.

Long after ordinary cake is dry and tasteless you can readily identify Stewart's Cake by its rare freshness of flavor and a texture still soft and moist.

Here again is the economy of Stewart's Cake. It prevents waste by keeping fresh. Buy your next cake at Stewart's and let your folks decide without prejudice.

The bright porous texture will win them—the well aerated crumb, the thin tender crust.

Its amazing lightness brings no regrets.

It is Not to Laugh.

By RUTH CAMERON.

A sense of humor is a trait of which few are fortunate possessors. It is justly proud and for which he should be grateful.

"The faculty for being diverted where less fortunate people are annoyed," says Stevenson, "is a rare birthright and worth many a mess of potatoes."

But there are times when even this best faculty is out of place.

A Time To Be Disgusted. There is a time to laugh and a time to be disgusted and it is a big mistake to confuse the two.

The American habit of being amused by corruption in politics and laughing at the rogues of the clever politician who gets away with things is an example of such confusion.

"If you think it is funny to be imposed upon," Agnes Repplier quotes Englishman as saying, "you will never lack for something to laugh at."

I thought of that the other day when I heard a discussion of the way men abuse certain privileges granted by department stores. One shop which had previously been very indulgent to its patrons has become much stricter in the past year. The reason is that its indulgence has been usefully imposed upon.

Had A Week-End Party On Them. For instance, one woman ordered several fine rugs out for inspection and returned them three days later without buying any. In the meantime she had a week-end party.

Another had $75 luncheon cloth sent to her home. She returned it the next day, saying that it was too small. It was stained with champagne. Again, a woman had a French model gown sent out on account, keeping it three days. A week or two after she appeared in a gown which she had had her dressmaker copy from that model. She had actually had her cut out a pattern from the gown to be sure to get it just right.

The Women Were Not Disgusted Or Indignant.

For the most part, the women who told of these things laughed at them. To my mind it was not a time to laugh but a time to be indignant. To be sure, it was the shop and not the customers who were being imposed upon, but when a store has to make up a loss of that sort it must make up the deficit in higher prices.

Besides, such practices are dishonorable and should be frowned on rather than laughed at.

The Appetite of Youth Quickly Restored.

Appetite is useless unless digestion is good. Dr. Hamilton's Pills make tremendous appetite and keep digestion up to the mark as well. The liver, bowels and kidneys are stimulated, the stomach strengthened, and robust health quickly follows. Dr. Hamilton's Pills instill vigor and snap into the system, make folks feel youthful and happy. You'll forget you have a stomach, forget your days of sickness if Dr. Hamilton's Pills are used. Insist on having Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, no other medicine so good.

Leatherized satins are the fashion for sports wear this fall. Taffeta is always a staple silk, as far as fashion is concerned. Pile fabrics are in immense favor for separate coats.

The Balkan Campaign

(By Frank H. Simmonds in New York Tribune.)

In the next few days and weeks two things are to be watched—the Sarrail army at Salonica, the Russo-Roumanian army in Dobruja. The advance of the latter will draw off troops from the front of the former and Sarrail's army is sure to move. It may move up the Vardar Valley toward Skopje and Nish; it may move east along the shore of the Aegean toward Salonica and Constantinople. If the Greeks enlist, they will surely be sent this way to conquer the seaboard regions which they hoped to keep in 1913, the regions between the Mesta and the Maritza, which are peopled by Greeks mainly, or were before the Balkan wars.

Meantime the Russo-Roumanian army, if it is able to progress at all, will either move south along the shore of the Black Sea, taking Varna and Burgas and turning the Balkan mountains, or it will move west along the Danube, aiming at Sofia. In either case its communications will be assured by sea or by the Danube. We may guess that this army will not get very far before there will be political disturbances in Bulgaria and possibly a very complete change in Bulgarian alignment. But we must assume also that in the very nature of the case Germany will make every effort to check the advance, for political rather than military reasons. If she can bring enough troops to this front and win a sufficiently complete success she will take the pressure off the Hungarians and compel the Roumanians to recall their troops from Transylvania to defend Bucharest and the Dobruja. The first German operations about Tauracan and Silistria forecast just such a strategy.

Between Two Millstones. The Bulgarians are now between two millstones, between the French, British, Italians, Russian and Serb troops operating from Salonica and the Russian and Roumanian troops operating in the Dobruja and along the Danube. Hitherto the whole Bulgarian army has been able to cover Salonica; henceforth it must be divided, unless Germany, Austria and Turkey can furnish troops to defend northern Bulgaria. In a word, the new situation in the Balkans has made a demand for a new Austro-German army of very considerable size at the precise moment when the invasion of Transylvania has produced a similar demand, this time from Budapest and not from Sofia. These demands coincide with other demands; they coincide with the need for fresh troops to defend Lemberg against the steadily advancing Russian armies and the claim on German reserves to replace the heavy losses that are being occasioned by the Anglo-French attack on the Somme. Finally, the Italian operations about Gorizia are calling for greater and greater attention from Austria.

Worrying Germany. Now, it is interesting to note that this situation is emphasized in recent rumors that come from Berlin. Falkenhayn, says one report, recognized the Balkan situation, believed that the converging attack upon Bulgaria would succeed and advised the German emperor to abandon the Balkan campaign and shorten his lines east and west to meet the growing dangers incident to such a wide extension of front. For this, we are asked to believe that Falkenhayn was removed. This last is pretty far fetched; the failure of Verdun is enough to warrant the removal of the chief of staff who was responsible for it. But there is interesting material in the rumor itself. It serves to indicate how the Bulgarian problem weighs upon the German mind.

With two thrusts directed at the vital railroad, what numbers have the Bulgarians and their allies available to meet them? The Bulgarians themselves cannot have above 300,000, and this is a high figure, regard being had for their enormous losses in the two previous Balkan wars and their considerable losses in the contests of the present war. But the combined Allied army, extending from the Adriatic to the Aegean, from Valona to Salonica, is hardly less than 750,000 strong. Obviously the Bulgarian army would not be able to do more than attend to this department of the total task of the Central Powers in the Balkans.

Bulgaria the Pivot.

Once more, as a year ago at this time, Bulgaria holds the centre of the stage. It is safe to assume that she will not desert her allies as long as she feels that they have an even chance of victory, because she will have to give up most of her Serbian conquests. If Roumania were defeated she might count on taking all the Roumanian season, and she owes Roumania a lesson for the incidents of 1913. Finally, the Bulgarian dream of hegemony in the Balkans, realizable in a measure if the Central Powers retain their hold in the peninsula, will disappear if the Allies win and Bulgaria will be smaller than Roumania or Serbia. She may even be smaller than Greece, if Greece gets on the winning side in time.

But if Bulgaria deserts or is conquered, then the collapse of the Austro-German influence in the Balkans and in the Near East will be instant and the fall of Constantinople will not be long delayed. Incidentally the liberation of Serbia will be prompt and the gap in the circle of fire and steel about the Central Powers opened by Mackensen, a year ago will be closed. The war has seen few more dramatic moments than the present and few more interesting campaigns than that which is now opening in the Balkans.

BUY YOUR Floor COVERINGS

—FROM—
BLAIR'S
Because they will Save you Money.

They are offering a big variety of patterns in the New American Floor Coverings at # $1.10 yard.

You can buy these same Floor Cloths somewhere else for $1.20 and that is the usual price, but Blair's say September being a kind of a quiet month they can easily cut more Floor Cloths than, so the cut in the price cuts two ways.

They say according to the prices the manufacturers are now quoting, these coverings would cost them all this to land.

They show a big range of Block and Floral Patterns, as they have the manufacturers of three different makers, viz.: Congoleum, Felotoums and Neponsets, and show the best patterns of each make. These are much better than cheap Floor Coverings, of which the cheapest to-day is about $1.00 per yard.

This is mainly because the basic material for Cheap Floor Canvas is Burlap or Brin, and the immediate demand for that is tremendous. It is estimated that for the making of sand bags and the wrapping of foodstuffs, etc., for the Army, that the British Government calls for sixty million square yards per week. Therefore the price of brin has more than doubled. But Blair's are trying to help you all they can on prices, therefore remember—

Confessions of a Censor

(From a Member of the British Censoring Staff.)

A Certain Postal Station in an Allied Country, Aug. 15, 1916.—One of the oddest things about censoring is the easy way in which one takes to reading other people's private correspondence. Shades of the past, when one averted an honorable eye from the letter lying half open on a friend's (or even an enemy's) desk! And here I sit, because it is war time, before a large table covered with serried rows of letters, with instructions to open them all and search diligently therein for, first, information likely to be useful to the enemy; second, anything likely to discourage recruiting, and third, false information likely to alarm or depress a credulous public.

After one uneasy day I take to it as a duck to water, and the qualms of a lifetime vanish. My inquisitive nose goes impartially into business letters, family letters, love letters and letters written simply to pass away the time. There are more family letters and love letters than any other kind, though I suspect that they are also partly the result of idleness and the franking system.

The little room in which we sit is a cell in the large hive of a hospital in the war zone, and the writers of these letters are either sick or wounded, and their first thought is to write of their safety and welfare. This does not take the form of long descriptions of illness or wounds. The great majority of men linger long and lovingly over the hospital menu, with its four meals a day, and make a grateful reference to the kindness of doctors and nurses, but the cause of their being in hospital is dismissed as a "septic wound," or "that ferocious 'trouble,' the foe of the British soldier, called dysentery." Suffering is rarely mentioned, but most writers seem to prefer wounds to dysentery.

Among many Spartans one, however, stands out who writes that, having pneumonia, and a coming "operation" on his "thum," he feels well in himself. Very little comment is made on the country and surroundings, though the writers are probably out of England for the first time. For one reason the patients are carried from ship to bed in a closed ambulance, but even those allowed in the grounds are the "perpetual sun," "the same as we call in England hot," says one cautious writer, and the "antiques" of the night-gowned inhabitants, which in this sense does not mean antiquities. Only a budding Munchausen, with the willing assistance of idle friends in the ward, occasionally undertakes to comment on the customs of the country to some credulous friend in an English hailet.

ROBERT TEMPLETON,
333 WATER STREET.

On the other hand, the sight of electric trams is greeted with delight in scores of letters, and commented on with loving detail.

There are several things which make reading these letters easier than at first seems possible, when one is dismayed by the sight of hundreds of pencil-scrawled pages. To begin with few letters are very long, with the exception of a percentage of rambling love letters, and the formula of beginning and end takes up a certain amount of space. "I write these few lines, hoping to find you in the best of health. As I am glad to say I am in the Pink. (The fact of being in hospital is not allowed to interfere with purity of style.) Right back soon. From your loving soldier husband to my dearest loving wife and darling children," or "Fondlest love from your ever-loving" is the usual beginning and end, with a suitable arrangement of crosses for kisses. Crosses occur in all letters except business ones, and are bestowed on men friends and also on young ladies to whom the writer signs himself "Yours truly."

Between these formulas the censor's eye travels rapidly over a glancing reference to health, a description of the day's routine, with careful analysis of the food, a request for parcels, and a lament for those which have never arrived. Messages to friends and inquiries about the children and the letter is read. Welsh letters are flowery, and Irish letters illiterate, with references to the Holy Mother, and requests to tell innumerable Mikes and Pats and Kates that he was after asking for them. There is another type of letter that is infinitely more trouble. It is well written, in a small hand and very long. The writer does not feel in the Pink, nor are kisses included. He thinks and comments on what he sees and speculates, generally wrong, and gives names, and altogether the censor curses his power of skating on the thin ice of what may not be said.

As for love letters, you may think that knowing they are to be read by the censor reduces them to letters unworthy of the name, missives of an early Victorian propriety. The married man writing a devoted, affectionate letter to his wife upon family matters is far more disturbed at the idea of the censoring to follow than the ardent lover, who lavishes kisses and endearments brazenly throughout the letter. He even writes S. W. A. K., (sealed with a kiss), across the open flap of the envelope, cheerfully unconscious that the censor, who does not include kisses in his war work, performs the office with some mechanical device, or simpler still, a damp rag. He occasionally shakes one's faith by writing identical letters to two or more girls. Love, not being a normal condition, incites him to bashfulness, sometimes he is even untruthful, and quite often fatuous. Certain lovers become literary under the influence of the hospital library, but even this does not excuse the romantic and untruthful soul, who, after the opening formula, "I write these few lines, hoping to find you in the best of health. As I am glad to say I feel in the Pink," included a poem, which he said he had dashed off in an idle moment. It began:—

With purple softness on the gray
My amethystine blossoms on the grass.

Let us hope that the divergence in style makes less impression on the young lady than it does on us. Another young gentleman whom we only knew as Albert wrote to his sister that he could not break off with with Bella, as it would break her heart. After reviewing the situation critically he decides that there is nothing to be done, and that they must remain engaged. "God! how she loves me!" he concludes quite simply. We turn with relief from him to a Maori writing to a fellow-warrior, "God be with us 'til we meet again," he says, "but look out for them dam Turkeys." An excellent sentiment whether the foe be Turk or Hun.

But, whether they treat of love or other matters, these letters leave us in the end with a stronger belief in man's inherent righteousness. This hospital is as other hospitals. The men lying in their cots or shuffling about are recruited from all sorts and kinds. Some of them are good to look upon, some coarse, and some weak-looking; but an overwhelming number seem to be endowed with courage, belief in their cause, and love of home and family. These letters reveal men's minds very much "en deshabille," and if it is an ungrateful task thus to pry into them, what censor in any hospital will ever forget such revelations of patience and courage? Can it fall to touch any one that thousands of men—and rough men, too—still write pitifully affectionate letters to their mothers? There are more letters written to mothers than to wives, sweethearts, or friends. I only echo the hope of the gallant soul who writes back across the seas that "there is happy days in store for us all." Such men have earned victory, and with it happy days.

Helping the Bomb Droppers.

In France they are testing a naval bomb-dropping mechanism which makes it virtually impossible for the aviator to miss the object at which he launches a bomb. The invention is intended for use in conjunction with battle-planes, the aerial bombs being dropped through a cone of light.

This powerful illuminant is composed of a ring of high candle-power electric lights. Each lamp is supported in a separate reflector under the hood of the bomb-dropper. The light beams from each lamp across the other beams, and in this manner a concentrated cone of light is produced.

There are several powerful electric lamps available for this purpose, and by means of a switch on the aeroplane the illumination can be cut off as desired.

The bomb-dropper, with its ring of lamps, is suspended at the lower end of a flexible steel cable, and the wires controlling the whole outfit follow this cable also. When necessary the suspension cable is wound up by a power-driven winch, and the bomb-dropper can thus be raised right up into the plane.

This scheme has several distinctive features. For one thing the dropping of the bomb through a circle of light is found to increase the accuracy of the marksman. Once the target lies in the centre of the circle of light, a missed shot becomes a rarity indeed.

Your Boys and Girls.

As a rule, indigestion in the nursing mother is caused by such foods as heavy puddings, or underdone pastry, doughnuts, fried foods soaked in fats, made dishes such as croquettes or fritters, pickles and poorly cooked foods. But people differ greatly in their power of digestion, and what will suit one person may upset the next. Overeating may also be a cause of indigestion.

A mixed diet of such digestible and nutritious foods as are readily available, is desirable for the nursing mother. All foods are milk making foods. The foods selected will differ widely according to circumstances, but will usually include vegetables, ripe fruits, meats, acorns foods of all kinds, breads, especially graham, whole wheat, corn meal, bran, and simple desserts.

Everyday Etiquette.

THE CAPTURE OF COMBLES.

LONDON, Sept. 27. The capture of Combles was the most picturesque incident in the whole course of the great Somme offensive and marked the opening to-day of the forward surge of the British and French forces, which reached its climax in the capture of Gueducourt and Thiepval. All night long bitter fighting had been in progress at various points on the front, and with dawn the battles broadened to include the whole of British left. Combles fell as the sun rose on a perfect summer day. Sitting in the midst of high hills the town was isolated yesterday by the seizing of the high ground on either side by the French and British. They took an orchard in the northern outskirts, and then, after a heavy preliminary shelling, they charged the trenches on the edge of the village. The trenches were empty when they reached them. At the same time the French dashed forward on the other side of the village pushed victoriously forward into the heart of the village. In the main street the soldiers of the two nations met and joyously shook hands, calling out to each other, "Parlez-vous," and "how do you do?" Combles had a labyrinth of dugouts and well fortified cellars, but at the last practically no defence was made. Those Germans who had not managed to escape when the town was hopelessly surrounded were taken prisoners. The cellars and dugouts of the village were full of wounded who found security there from the furious fighting on the slopes and ridges. Having cleared Combles of any stray Germans, the British and French moved on side by side to further attacks. One of the most striking features of the fighting last night and to-day was the surprisingly slight resistance offered at Morval and Combles by the Germans, according to all reports made by the British officers.

GREEK TORPEDO BOAT JOINS REVOLUTIONISTS.

LONDON, Sept. 27. The Greek torpedo boat destroyer Louchi managed to leave the fleets and reach the open sea, where it headed for either Canva or Saloniki, to join the national defence movement, says the Daily Chronicle's Athens correspondent.

MORE REVOLUTIONISTS.

PARIS, Sept. 27. Greek troops in Canva to the number of 4,000 have joined the revolutionists, according to a despatch from Athens. Only a Colonel, a few other officers and 23 of the men remained loyal to the Government.

FRENCH SUCCESS SOUTH OF THE SOMME.

PARIS, Sept. 27. A brilliant attack east of Verdun-ovillers has succeeded in capturing a strongly fortified wood, according to an official statement issued to-day.

BRITISH TAKE MANY PRISONERS.

LONDON, Sept. 27. Between three and four thousand prisoners were taken by the British in Monday's and Tuesday's fighting on the Somme front, according to General Haig's report of Tuesday night. The report says: The battle continued violently during the day over the whole front between the Somme and the Ancre. Our troops were successful everywhere, carrying out their attacks more brilliantly. During the last 48 hours between 3,000 and 4,000 prisoners were taken.

THINK CONSTANTINE HAS BEEN MISJUDGED.

ATHENS, Sept. 27. The French press of Athens, which for the past month has been sharply assailing King Constantine and flouting every suggestion that he could honestly be desirous of Greece giving in to the Entente Allies, was silent this morning. The entire Greek press

SOLDIERS WANT

Capt. Brooks, of No. 4 Company, 7th Battalion, writing from the front, says: "My men would be very grateful to someone who would send them Zam-Buk."

It is in great demand for cuts, blistered heels, etc.

Parcels should be addressed to Co. Sergt-Major No. 4 Co., 7th Batt., B.E.F.

Be sure to include some Zam-Buk in your next parcel to the front. It costs only for $1.25, all druggists, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

ente situation has changed overnight, and it is reported that the entry of Greece into the war has suddenly become a mere question of days on the terms King Constantine indicated to the Associated Press on August 31st, namely the guarantee of the integrity of Greece and a loan sufficient to equip the army and cover the cost of mobilization. The Associated Press learns that the diplomats' indifference and that of their Governments and the bitterness of the press of the Entente Powers was due to their suspicion of the sincerity of King Constantine's desire to enter the war, and which the Entente Governments are said to have insisted on regarding as revealing the true attitude of the monarch, despite repeated official and unofficial assurances to the contrary. The publication of the King's declaration to the Associated Press first opened the eyes of the Entente representatives to the possibility that they might be misjudging King Constantine and finally led to a franker explanation which cleared up the whole situation. The offer of the present Cabinet to reorganise itself to meet the desires of the Entente by dropping any unacceptable members who might be indicated, to which the Entente merely failed to reply, is said at last to be considered as an earnest of the sincerity of the Greek monarch's intentions, and that the silence which had been inflicted on Greece since the fall of the Zaimis Ministry is to end immediately. An editorial says that war should be declared on Bulgaria without waiting mobilization, unless the matter of the return of the Greek soldiers made prisoners by the Bulgarians and sent to Germany is settled within a period of hours.

SERBIANS REPULSE BULGARIANS.

PARIS, Sept. 27. The Serbians have repulsed three Bulgarian attacks on Katmaklan Hechna, according to an official statement dealing with Salonika.

REFUSES APPOINTMENT.

PEKING, Sept. 27. Former Premier Tang Shao Yi, recently appointed Chinese Foreign Minister, has refused to accept the portfolio. The reason for his declination, he declares, is that the opposition of the military party to him would make harmony impossible in the Cabinet.

AUSTRIANS AT TRIESTE TIRED OF THE WAR.

MILAN, Sept. 27. Austrian officers and soldiers who have arrived in Trieste from the Carso plateau are reported from Trieste to have said that they are tired of the war. They say they can stand no longer. News of the fall of Gorizia was received with general gloom by officers and men. They ask what is the use of continuing the war, considering the soldiers want to know what object is to be gained by continuing the conflict. Communication with Austria has been practically severed. Pola has been evacuated by the civilian population, and the people of the entire peninsula are practically without war news. Dysentery and other ailments are rampant in Trieste and other towns.

BERLIN OFFICIAL.

BERLIN, Sept. 27. After unusually severe fighting on the Somme front, in which the Allies suffered heavy losses, they captured Thiepval, and gained ground on both sides of Conrolette, the war office announced to-day. Attacks further east were repulsed by the Germans.

PRISONERS TAKEN.

British Front in France, Sept. 27.—The total number of prisoners for what is regarded in all quarters as the best two days the British army has had in France, approaches 8,000. More than 1,000 prisoners were taken in Thiepval and the Hohenzollern work. In a military sense this work lying between Thiepval and Conrolette is regarded as more important than the crushed ruins of the village. Here at the hinge of the battlefront, at the old first line fortifications, all the power the guns could command has fought against every art of modern defence. The German dugouts, which were so deep that 12 inch high explosive shells could not penetrate them, had their doors closed in by debris from explosions, indeed, the British shells fired from the front trench eventually locked the Germans in their refuges under cover of its curtain, appeared, at the remaining opening discovered on the night, which were all connected with underground galleries, and marched out the occupants as prisoners. The tanks, or new armoured motor cars, assisted the attack, overwhelming the machine gun positions, taking Thiepval and the

ZOLLERN WORK MEANS THAT THE GERMAN GUN POSITIONS AROUND GRANDCOURT AND IN THE VALLEY OF THE ANCRE HAVE BEEN REVEALED.

BRILLIANT AIR FEAT.

PARIS, Sept. 27. Sub-Lieut. Nungesser, of the aviation service, whose exploits have made him the best known of French aerial fighters, outdid his previous achievements yesterday by bringing down two German aeroplanes and a captive balloon. This brings up to 17 the number of aircraft destroyed by this aviator, the official announcement says.

ANOTHER WINTER CAMPAIGN.

PARIS, Sept. 27. It does not seem probable that another winter campaign is avertable, says La Liberté. Joseph Thierry, Under Secretary for subsistence in the War Department, the newspaper adds, has made all necessary arrangements for supplying the troops with garments, blankets and other essentials for winter warfare. These have been going to the front at the rate of eight cars a day since September 15th.

THE GREEK MINISTRY.

LONDON, Sept. 27. The Greek Ministerial Council held at Athens yesterday evening, says a wireless from the Greek capital, will be followed by the resignation of the Kalogeropoulos Cabinet, and by the issue of a proclamation from King Constantine to the Greek nation.

NEW WAR LOAN ISSUED.

LONDON, Sept. 27. The British Treasury announces a prospectus for the issue of three-year Exchequer bonds, paying 6 per cent, to be issued soon.

BRITAIN'S REPLY ON THE WALL.

LONDON, Sept. 27. The Foreign Office stated to-day that the British reply to the American note regarding censorship of mails, is on the way to Washington.

BRITISH STEAMER SUNK.

LONDON, Sept. 27. The British steamer Bronwen is sunk, Lloyds announced to-day.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Sept. 27. An official issued to-day by the British War Department regarding military operations in the Balkans, says: Beyond the usual artillery and patrol activity, there were no developments on the Doiran front.

CARPATHIA RETURNS FOR REPAIRS.

LIVERPOOL, To-Day. The Cunard liner Carpathia, which sailed for New York yesterday, returned to dock to-day. Her sailing has been cancelled. It is announced that her return was for examination and repairs. The passengers go forward on another steamer.

MORE GREEK SHIPS GO OVER.

LONDON, To-Day. The Greek battleship Hydra has joined the Allied fleet, according to a Reuter despatch from Athens. There is an unconfirmed report, the despatch adds, that the Greek battleships Spoltza and Phars and four Greek destroyers have also joined the combined Anglo-French naval forces under Vice-Admiral Dufourneuf in the Mediterranean.

BRITISH AIRPLANES SHELL AIRSHIP SHEDS.

LONDON, To-Day. A British officer issued this evening tells of the bombing of German positions by aircraft as follows: The attacks were carried out this morning on enemy airship sheds at Evers Berchen and at Eiterbeck, near Brussels, by naval aeroplanes. The bombs were observed to straddle the sheds, which were apparently hit. The bombs dropped struck every building, presumably munition stores, in close proximity to the sheds. Explosions were heard and large volumes of smoke evolved. All the machines returned safely.

FUNERAL OF PIRATES.

LONDON, To-Day. The crew of the Zeppelin airship destroyed in Essex during the air raid of Sunday morning last were buried in a village churchyard to-day. The funeral was semi-military in character. Officers of the Royal Flying Corps, including Lieut. Robison, who brought down a Zeppelin during the raid early this month, acted as pall bearers. On the coffin of the commander was an inscription "Killed on service, Sept. 24th, 1916."

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT IN MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, To-Day. The Duke of Connaught who with the Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia, is making a week's afternoon visit to Montreal, this afternoon unveiled a bronze tablet on the new Victoria Pier. The tablet commemorated the reign of Queen Victoria and the Duke's regime as Governor General of Canada. In the Art Gallery this morning, Princess Patricia unveiled an oil portrait of her father, the painting being the gift of the local chapter of the Empire of St. Elizabeth to the Art Association, Montreal. It was painted by a Montreal artist, Miss Gertrude Des Claves.

GREEK MINISTERS AND KING.

LONDON, To-Day. The council of Greek Ministers has decided upon an agreement with King Constantine upon military co-operation with the Entente Powers, says a Reuter despatch from Athens dated Wednesday.

MORE FRENCH SUCCESS.

PARIS, To-Day. A strong German counter attack on the new French positions from Bouchavesnes to the south of Bois

Labelz farm was repulsed with heavy losses, according to an official issued by the War Office to-day. The French extended their positions E. S. E. of Rancourt and penetrated St. Pierre Vaast Wood.

HOLLWEG'S SPEECH.

BERLIN, To-Day. The address of the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann Hollweg, upon the assembling of the Reichstag to-morrow, according to a press report, contains no sensational variations from previous utterances. Concerning the peace question, it probably will be touched upon without more explicit language than was used in previous discussions. The Polish question may be extended. It is intended to have no discussion of the Chancellor's speech at the public session but only at committee.

THE BREMEN ARRIVED!

BERLIN, To-Day. Berlin newspapers to-day are acclaiming enthusiastically the arrival of the German submarine Bremen at New London, Connecticut. The town has jumped to the point of prime interest. The papers have found it necessary to describe it by the aid of a map. They are also dilating on the history of the town. This looks like a case of premature jubilation in view of the fact that the Bremen has not yet arrived at any American port so far as the United States authorities are aware, although her arrival has been anxiously awaited for some time by the German agents. The despatch apparently is confirmatory of the reports that the Bremen had sailed for the United States and that she is now due or overdue there.

LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, To-Day. The twenty mile battle area running from the Ancre to the Somme is rapidly being transformed by the great offensive of the Entente Allies into an irregular triangular wedge in the German line, with its bases respectively on the front of Thiepval and west of Perrone, and the point projecting across to Betuene road into St. Pierre Vaast Wood. On the British end of the line in the region of Thiepval and eastward to north of Fiers, the British in Wednesday's fighting gained further successes over the Germans. Likewise the French east and south-east of Rancourt, drove their troops forward and entered St. Pierre Vaast Wood. To the south of this region from Bouchavesnes to the southern edge of Bois Labba farm the French were compelled to face a violent attack by the Germans, which was beaten off, the Germans being thrown back in disorder, according to Paris. The British gains included German trenches on a front of 2,000 yards north of Fiers and a strong redoubt on a hill 2,000 yards northeast of Thiepval. To the northwest across the Ancre successful raids were carried out by the British opposite Beaumont Hamel; 10,000 prisoners have fallen into the hands of the British in the last fortnight, and the German front, according to London. There is still little news coming from the Russian and Austro-German officers concerning the fighting on the eastern front. Petrograd asserts that aside from skirmishes at various points there is nothing to report. Berlin, however, records the repulse of Russian attacks in Galacia near Ludova, with heavy casualties to the Russians. On the Roumanian front battles are taking place at various points near the Transylvanian border. Berlin reports progress for the Teutonic Allies near Giernastadt, while Bucharest chronicles the defeat of Austro-Germans in the J.I.A. Valley and their hasty retreat north and northwest. Quiet prevails in the Dobruja region. According to the Bulgarian War Office the Bulgarians have forced back the troops of the Entente Allies over the whole front in Macedonia. Paris, however, says three violent Bulgarian attacks at Kaimakelani Hill, were repulsed with heavy losses. Artillery duels continue along rest of the Austrian front. What is to be the final attitude of Greece in the war is still uncertain. Latest unofficial reports from Athens, however, is that the Greek Government in agreement with King Constantine has decided on military co-operation with the Entente Powers.

Bay Roberts Mystery.

Numerous are the reports being circulated as a possible solution to the Bay Roberts mystery. A gentleman who arrived in the city yesterday from that place informs us that a strange motor car was seen outside of Bay Roberts on the night Perino disappeared; while others are of the opinion that the missing man crossed in open boat to Bell Island, there connecting with one of the two ore boats which arrived Monday morning. If such is the case, the letter received by Constable Wells would be the nearest to the truth, for no open boat could have survived a violent storm such as was experienced in Conception Bay.

Lieut. Robinson, V.C.

Story of His Fight With the Raider. (From Harold Ashton.)

An "observer's" tale of the great fight in the air should rank as an epic among the thrilling tales of the war.

Before Lieut. Robinson ran into the airship he destroyed he had already been up in the air two hours hawking for victims. Though he was hampered by a dense drift of earth-fog when he started, he rose undaunted. He was drenched by fog, but he kept on until he got clear of the bank and found calm, cold air above.

A little before two o'clock, after coming down for a few hundred feet, he rose again in wide and ever-widening circles, taking as a centre of his spirals the flickering ribbon of light which cut into the sullen patches of grey cloud through which an occasional star shone. The first glimpse of the raider was obtained at a height variously estimated as from 10,000 to 12,000 feet. She came nosing out of a smudge of cloud like an Ouse chub from the shadows of a mud bank, prowling for food.

Instantly she was spotted—and the grand aerial entertainment began. At this moment the airman was 8,000 feet up, climbing so rapidly that his machine was "almost standing on her tail." Apparently the airship had not yet seen him. She was manoeuvring swiftly and changing her altitude to dodge the pyrotechnic doses that were peppering her from below. Our airman himself was in very much the same predicament. He was in almost a direct line of the fire from the friendly guns below. He could only trust to his own speed and the beneficent grace of the little cherub who sits up aloft. Presently, at 2:10 a.m., within a few seconds, according to the "observers" timing, the Zeppelin sighted the aeroplane, and swerved suddenly to starboard as she was attacked.

Hornet vs. Hippopotamus.

The hornet worried the hippopotamus. Already the great beast was burning astern and there was trouble in her aft gondola. Shrapnel from the anti-aircraft guns below was still bursting around. The airman's planes were "holed" and straining as he toiled and danced into his seemingly erratic but actually well considered evolutions. With friend and foe to deal with, you would think he had his hands full. So he had; but he kept a cool head through it all.

All these things happened in a whirl of seconds—far speedier than the time it takes to describe them. Having now his quarry well in hand the airman thought it time to signal to earth. His signals were seen and interpreted by those below to read:

"I have now got her set; kindly leave the rest of this little game to me."

At this message, instantly read and understood, all firing ceased. Those who were watching the battle from below will remember the lull—the breathless pause of complete silence that followed a sudden dazzle of lights high up. That was the meaning of it—"Leave it to me!"

Azrael was well tuned to the swift tragedy which followed. The baffled airship was riding drunkenly now, her less wieldy bulk no match for the wings of her remorseless little enemy. It was a grim fight to a finish.

Singed by the Blaze.

In the ray of one of our own lights the airship once more spotted our airman and peeped him so hotly from the little stern tracer gun she was carrying that he had to vanish once more in the shadows.

But he was speedily back again. The airship was now alight in her own conflagration. Some of her petrol was blazing and her woodwork was afire. The German pilot was still crouching over his steering pillar. In his last attack the airman came up so close to the raider that his leather jacket was singed. To use the official words of the London Fire Brigade report, she was now "well alight," and the avenger was satisfied that he need hurry her no more.

So he left her to her fate, and as she crashed to earth in an incandescent glory of falling fire, he sought for a spell a cooler strata higher up, and, picking up his bearings, spiralled gracefully to earth. Half an hour later he was in bed and asleep, and when he was called to motor out and see for himself the smoking wreck of his own creation he complained that a fellow really should be allowed to lie an hour or so longer—on a Sunday morning!—Daily Mail.
