Remington UMC
Big Game Rifles

The food value of wild game is getting more and more pronounced these days—add to this the fact that most men are busy and want their limited shooting days to yield a big bag—and you've got two more good reasons why your rifle should be a Remington UMC. It gets results.

The last word in modern highest grade repeating rifles. Yet get it shot—so quick as you want to press the trigger. The need is used to operate the repeating mechanism, permitting the shooter to hold the rifle on the game without variation in his aim. Solid breech—slide action—baptism—made. One on sale it's a sign one expects heavy to be able to make it "fall down" in rigorous factory tests.

Our 100 year's experience in the rifle making has produced a repeating rifle that fully satisfies men who demand the utmost in a fire-arm.

Give you 6 smashing shots—with 25, 30, 32 or 35 caliber cartridges; slide action; quick take-down; harmonious and solid breech for safety and cleanliness; retained by a smooth slide action permitting continuous aim while firing—6 compact, graceful, strong, beautifully balanced weapons.

Made for every fire-arm—over 40 kinds. World famous for reliability and never cheapened. Factory methods—and masterfully balanced weapons.

See the Remington UMC dealer in your town.

"Is James in the hall?" he asked the footman who appeared. "Tell him to come here."

The man went out and returned with the other servant. Chalfont pointed to the paper, which he had double-checked, so that the writing was beyond error.

"I want you to see me sign my name," he said, in a casual, matter-of-fact way. "Write your names here, with the address, and put 'Domestic servant.'" He signed his own name, and stood over the two footmen while, slowly and laboriously, they witnessed his signature. "Thanks," he said. "By the way, this is my will. I shan't want anything more to-night."

It was not the first time some of the servants of the place had been required to witness his signature; but when these two men learned that it was the great Mr. Chalfont's will, they were duly impressed, and they went out with the air of persons who had been engaged in a highly official act. Chalfont waited for a minute or two; then he opened the window, and relocked it after Norton had entered. He was not afraid of being heard by the servants, for there was a second—hair—door to the room; and, again, no one would have dared to linger outside the door.

"There you are," he said, handing the paper to Norton. "Here, I'll put it in an envelope for you! I don't want to advise you—you'll do what you like, of course. I'm in your power—but I would advise you to keep quiet about that will until—I'm dead. I will see that you are provided with money. Don't come here again—there, again, I don't make terms with you, I only advise. See here, now, Norton! There's danger hanging over us—us, I say. The truth may come out without your blabbing; people would suspect, tongues would talk, inquiries might be made, if you and I were seen together too often." He paused a moment, then went on in a low voice: "If the truth came out, if all you know against me got wind, you'd not only hang me, but deprive your daughter of the money that paper gives her. You understand that?"

Norton nodded. He had taken the notes from his pocket again, placed them with the will in the envelope, which he fastened carefully, and had buttoned his worn coat over the hollow chest, against which the packet seemed to strike warmly. His success, his triumph, appeared to have confused him; he looked about him a trifle wildly.

"I see what you mean," he said. "Good! If you want to see me—and we shall need to arrange about the money and other things—come to my office in the City. Will you have some more whiskey?"

Norton shook his head and moved to the window. Mr. Chalfont unlocked it, and Norton, as he stepped on to the threshold, looked back over his shoulder at the stern, set face; his lips moved, but no words came, and he passed away.

Chalfont stood in the middle of the room, his head sunk on his breast, his body bent; he looked like a man who has received a death-blow. He went to the table, drew a sheet of paper to him, and wrote, slowly, his lips twitching, as if the task were a painful one performed under a terrible compulsion. When he had finished the letter, put it in an envelope and addressed it, he took the will—the will that gave everything to Jack—from the safe, and held it over the paraffin lamp which he always burned in his den; but, before the corner of the will had been more than scorched by the flame, he drew the paper back; his whole manner changed, the red rose to his face, his lips set with an expression of determination, and, seating himself in a chair, with the will before him, he rang the bell.

Instant Relief From Eczema

CHAPTER VI.
IT was the sudden rising of the full moon above a bank of clouds which had lured Jack out; he knew that Mr. Chalfont was busy and would not miss him for a while, at any rate. With Jim leaping down the wide steps in front of him, Jack crossed the drive and the great square of walkway lawn; then he stopped and looked back at the house.

He had admired it the first moment he had seen it, and, short as his acquaintance with it had been, he had grown fond of it; but now there was an absolute affection, the pride of future possession, in his eyes as they rested on the really noble building.

Again rang through him that warm thrill which he had felt when Chalfont had told him that he would be the heir. Even now he could not realize it, and as he turned and sauntered on he told himself that he owed so great a debt of gratitude to his patron that he must endeavour to repay it, in part, at any rate, by making Chalfont's life as easy and pleasant as possible; and Jack knew, with a sense of satisfaction, that he was in no hurry for his inheritance, that he certainly did not want Chalfont to die; indeed, he had got so fond of the man as he hid of the house.

Take it all in all, Jack was really particularly happy that night; so also was Jim, who had had the luck to find a rabbit-hole and was now yapping furiously and shovelling up the dry earth with his quivering nose; but he came away from the sport at Jack's call, and they got into the drive again and passed through the gate. Here Jack stopped to reload and light his pipe, and while he was doing it he saw a woman approaching him. At first she was in the shadow, but presently she moved into the moonlight, which fell full upon her face. It was so beautiful a one that it would have arrested attention at any time; but there, in the silence of the countryside, in that lonely spot, the presence of so beautiful and graceful a girl Jack found startling; there was, too, something in the manner of her approach, in the pallor and anxiety of her face, which increased Jack's interest and curiosity. She paused as she came near to him, seemed about to speak, then changed her mind and walked on, but with so evident an agitation that Jack felt constrained to raise his hat and inquire:

"Are you looking for any one?"

The moment he had put the question he was almost sorry for having done so, and he expected her to colour up and start away from him with the nervous apprehension of the ordinary girl; but apparently this was not an ordinary girl, for her peller did not change, she did not shrink; but her eyes meeting his with the pre-occupation of anxiety, she replied in a low voice:

"Yes, I am looking for my father."

As Jack looked at her he tried to keep the curiosity out of his eyes. She was a stranger to him; he knew most of the people who lived in the little cluster of shops and cottages, which might have been called a village, just outside the park. She was poorly and plainly dressed, but Jack knew that her station was higher than her attire; there was a note of dignity not only in her bearing but in the low, clear, musical voice, in the calmness with which she waited for his reply, her eyes still searching the road.

"I have not seen any one," said Jack; "but I've only just come from that house there—have only just left the gate. Did he come this way? How did you miss him?"

She hesitated a moment, but, as if she were forced by the pressure of her anxiety, she replied:

"My father came by train a little while ago. He left the station and came in this direction. I saw him walking along this road; then I missed him."

Jack was puzzled by this statement. "You came by the same train?" he asked. "You were with him?"

"I came by the same train, but I was not with him," she said, a faint

Instant Relief From Eczema

You can stop that awful itch from eczema and other skin troubles in two seconds! Seems too good to be true—but it is true, and we vouch for it.

Just a few drops of the simple, cooling wash, the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema, a new remedy that is attracting widespread attention and the itch stops instantly. The first bottle will prove it.

Eczema, Bad Leg, Ring-worm, Salt Rheum, Barber's Itch, Psoriasis, Open Sores and Itching Rashes and other skin troubles are caused by myriads of germs at work in the skin. Unless these germs are promptly destroyed they multiply, gnawing their way deep into the sensitive tissue. This is what causes that awful itch, and what seemed a mere rash may grow and develop into a loathsome and torturing skin disease with its years and years of misery.

Don't take any chances! Destroy the germs at the beginning of the trouble with that soothing and cleansing wash, the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema.

If you have skin trouble of any kind, get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription to-day. Sold Everywhere. Recommended by T. McDonald & Co., A. W. Kennedy, M. Connor, Peter O'Mara.

colour staining her face, the dark grey eyes downcast for a moment. She raised them, and, as if obeying a sudden impulse, continued: "I was following my father. I was in the same train, but he did not know it." She hesitated, her white, even teeth catching at her under-lip; then she went on: "My father has been ill; he has been much—worried; has been strange—Oh, I can't explain; you wouldn't understand!"

"Oh, but I think I do," said Jack with that gentleness which came to his voice when he was speaking to a woman or a child in distress, and wanted to do something to help them. "Your father is in trouble; something is worrying him, and, like most of us, when things are up against us, he would get away from himself."

"Yes," she said, with shy gratitude for his comprehension, "he has been very much upset. Something has happened recently to—disturb him. He is not strong, and—I am very anxious. I want to find him."

"I see," said Jack. "Well, it shouldn't be difficult. You say you saw him come along this road; he was walking away from the village; there are no houses beyond this. Shall we go a little farther?"

"You mean—?"

"That I will go with you if you will allow me," said Jack, as gently as before. "Two heads are better than one; besides, there's Jim," he added, with a nod towards that individual, who had been carefully sniffing at Nora's skirt, and, evidently satisfied as to her friendliness, was now standing up against her and thrusting his nose into the hand which unconsciously caressed him. "He will find him sooner than we shall."

She did not look at him curiously; she was too absorbed in her concern for her father to notice whether Jack was young or old, plain or handsome; but perhaps with a woman's quickness, she had been assured by the sound of his voice, for, with a woman, "by their voice you shall know them" is an absolute creed. They walked together, Jim running on in front and nosing the ground, as if he were conscious that he was assisting in some kind of chase.

"You are a stranger here? You have never been here before?" asked Jack, impelled by the desire to say something, anything rather by curiosity.

"No," she said absently. "I have never been here before. We, my father and I, have only just come to England. It is a very beautiful place—this, I mean; it all looks as if it were private, as if we were in some one's grounds."

"It is pretty private," said Jack, looking round about him with that new and overwhelming sense of future proprietorship. "This road we are on runs through a park belonging to the house up there."

Fashion Plates

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Fashion Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

A VERY COMFORTABLE DRESS.

2525—This model will make an ideal play or school dress for warm weather. The bloomers are comfortable and may take the place of petticoats. The sleeve portions of the dress are cut in one with the back and front. Ging-ham, galatea, percale, chambray, seersucker, voile, rep and poplin could be used. The bloomers may be of the same material or of satin, linen, rep, or any other serviceable fabric.

The Pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Size 10 requires 3 yards of 36-inch material for the dress, and 1 1/2 yard for the bloomers. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

2574—This model is nice for gym-ham, linen, seersucker, percale, gas-hardine, serge and silk. The sleeve has a short seam at the back below the elbow, which may be finished for a closing with buttons and button-holes.

The Pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 6 1/2 yards of 36-inch material. The skirt measures about 2 1/4 yards at the foot.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

Turks Retreating Jordan. Allied Drawn Around Huns Fear Another Attack.

WAR REVIEW.

Both on the Macedonia and Palestine fronts the Entente Allied forces are giving the badly beaten Germans, Bulgarians and Turks no rest, while in France the British and French are continuing to draw their net more closely about St. Quentin and the remaining elements of the Hindenburg line in this immediate region. In Macedonia the situation of the Bulgarians and Germans is daily growing more critical as the Allied forces steadily maintain their pressure against them. In Turkey the latest operations of the British and Arab tribesmen friendly to the Allied cause, seemingly forecast the complete destruction or capture of the Ottoman troops in Palestine, on both sides of the River Jordan. St. Quentin, through the latest advances of the British and French is all but enveloped, and to the north the strong enemy line protecting Cambrai has been further encroached upon by Field Marshal Haig's men. All along the front in Macedonia from the region north of Monastir the important strategic positions at Prilep has been occupied, thus giving control of the numerous roads, radiating from it to the French cavalry in the centre. The Serbians have passed their wedge further-in between the enemy's west and east armies while on the extreme eastern flank the British and Greeks have advanced along both sides of the Yvardar to a depth averaging about 10 miles over a front of 20 miles. No where are the Entente commanders permitting the Bulgarians and Germans to lose contact with the advancing troops who are harassing vigorously. So badly has the hurried line been penetrated or battered, that immediate dire calamity seemingly faces the enemy, unless the retreat is greatly hastened. Foot the enemy is feet enough of foot to outdistance the Allies on the wings of the drive and reconstitute his front to the north with its centre resting possibly on Uskub or thereabouts. Even if such a manoeuvre is possible doubtless it will be necessary for the enemy to straighten his line westward through Albania to the Adriatic Sea. That the Allied armies are moving swiftly to prevent the separated armies from closing up is indicated in the capture of Prilep, and the advance of the British to the north of Lake Doiran. These manoeuvres point to an attempt at a rolling up movement of great proportions by the Allies. In Palestine the British on the coast have taken the important towns of Haifa and Acre, while east of the Jordan the Turks are everywhere in retreat, hard pressed by the British and the tribesmen of the King of the Hedjaz. Inside the big sack, the neck of which was sewn up by the British in their initial drive, many more prisoners have been taken, and the aggregate now greatly exceeds the 25,000 officially reported. To the west of St. Quentin over a front of four miles running south from the Omigier River, the British have materially advanced their front, notwithstanding the desperate resistance of the enemy, and taken about 800 prisoners. Hard fighting is in progress at Senley, a scant two miles from the western outskirts of St. Quentin. Around Epehy and further north in the Cambrai sector, the German positions in front of the Hindenburg line have been battered. In Flanders the British have recaptured a portion of their old trench systems south of Epehy. That the Germans, even though the weather conditions preclude activity, are fearful that the Americans anticipate a further attack, is indicated by their dan-men, said one officer. Patriotic exhortations are now lost on them. They think more of their stomachs than their country. On the other hand the soldiers say that the officers think only of their own safety when the line breaks under the pressure of the Allied forces, and that they leave behind for their safety rearwards who, during the early phases of the retreat, were sacrificed without knowing that they had been deliberately abandoned by the rest of the forces.

Important Gains. PARIS, Sept. 24. West of St. Quentin the French troops, in conjunction with the British, have captured Francilly-Selency and the village of Dalon, according to the French official communication issued this evening more than 500 prisoners and a large number of machine guns were taken in the position.

The Debt.

(Evelyn Simms, in the Spectator.) They have given their all for England! Never now will they have joy in meadows and groves.

Nor feel the restless tide of life that beats About her strenuous cities, droning far; Tread happily the once-familiar streets, Revisit haunts where old, sweet memories are.

Never sit, dreaming by a twilight fire, Clasp hands they love, take children on their knees, In the blissful comfort of fulfilled desire; They have given all these things for England—more than these!

They have given their youth that England's name may be By deed and faith and courage justified; Given their freedom that England may give freedom to the rest of the world.

And who will see that she more nobly goes Down the long years of time, because of these; Guards better her hidden treasures; better knows The meaning of her larger destinies?

We who are jointly, England! We must go More nobly now, less selfishly; Be braver, truer, and more generous; And only so can the great debt be paid.

German Spy is Landed Again.

New York, Sept. 17.—"Lieutenant" Robert Fay, convicted German agent, who escaped from Atlanta federal prison more than two years ago, and was caught in Spain recently, has been brought back to this country and is in the custody here of the department of justice.

Disposition of his case awaits instructions from Washington, it was announced by the department of justice officers here. Fay, who styled himself a lieutenant in the Prussian army, was sent to serve a three years' sentence after his conviction in the New York federal court on the charge of conspiring with others in a plot to blow up Entente ships leaving New York harbor.

The Pacifist and The Striker,

Pugilistic Encounter.

Germany has no stronger and more faithful allies to-day than the pacifists and the strikers. The pacifist is a dupe to the skillfully planned German peace propaganda; an offensive far more subtle and at this time more dangerous than any assault by Hindenburg or Ludendorff on the western front.

What About These Coal Shares?

The opportunity is a good one. $25,000.00 worth of stock has been placed on the market, and to the purchaser of each one of these shares three extra shares are given free of cost.

This makes the purchaser of each one dollar share the owner of four fully paid up shares in the company.

The company also guarantees that none of the above shares will be subject to any further call.

The opportunity to invest is open to everybody. Get busy before it is too late; no bonus shares will be given after the present allotment is disposed of.

Marshall Bros

Eight Dollars & Eighty-Five cts.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Which do you think is more valuable, eight dollars and eighty-five cents, or the habit of learning to keep a contract?

A queer little thing happened in our neighborhood recently. Two youngsters of about seven and ten years old had an argument about something one wanted the other to do. James wanted Roderick to help him make a rabbit warren for his new rabbits. Roderick didn't want to. "I'll give you ten cents if you'll help me," said James.

Roderick wouldn't. "Give you fifty cents."

"Nope."

"Give you a dollar."

Still obdurate.

Had To Get What He Went After.

"I'll give you all the money in my tin bank," finally offered James, not because he really wanted the rabbit warren that much, but simply because in the excitement and sport of the thing he had to get what he went after. (Just as someday he will go after a college letter, or a good job, or the girl.)

Roderick (who I do not really think had been pushing James up, but had merely held out with the same kind of sporting instinct that made James keep on) finally said he'd think it over and ultimately did help build the warren.

And The Contract Was Annulled.

Now, if there had only been eighty-seven cents, or some such childhood's sum of riches, in the bank, all would have been simple, but unfortunately there turned out to be eight dollars and eighty-five cents, which is a sum of which even grownups take cognizance. When James made ready to turn it over to Roderick there was a howl, communications were opened between the two families, Roderick was forbidden to receive the money and James to give it, and the contract was annulled.

Now, I can see where there would be a temptation to do that, but was it the right thing?

True, it must have looked to his par-

IMPROVING THE HANDS.

There are two methods of giving the hands enough sleep. One is to cause them to lie in the lap and rest. It may be difficult at first to control them to do this but it can be done.

Another way is to put them to sleep in a pair of leather gloves at least two sizes too large, like a pair of men's gloves. Before putting the gloves on, the hands should be coated with some good skin food. This sleep should be given the hands not only when you are sleeping, but at any time of the day when it is convenient to do so, put the gloves on and rest the hands.

This does not mean idleness for the hands, for to be healthy one must have exercise. There is a difference in moving in work or exercise from that of fidgeting. Hands may be exercised and improved by performing household work, so long as too great a strain is not given them and precautionary measures are adopted.

For instance there is dishwashing. The prevailing idea is that to wash dishes is to destroy the beauty of the hands. This is not necessarily so and if the hands are treated properly there will be no ill effect, and, in fact, they will be beautiful by such work.

Before beginning to wash dishes, the hands and nails should be thoroughly coated with cold cream, rubbing it well into the pores. They can then be put in the soapy water without fear of injury. As soon as the task is finished, the hands should be carefully washed with a mild toilet soap and warm water, carefully dried, and another coat of cream applied and rubbed well into the skin. Remove any cream which remains on the surface by wiping with a soft cloth, using considerable friction.

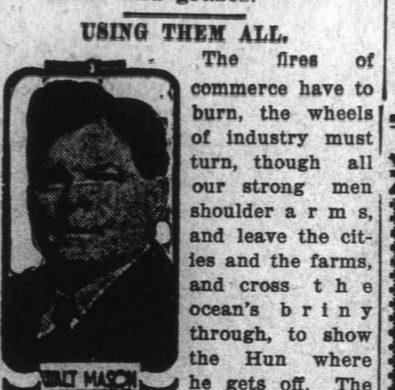

mitting him to do so."

A dyer's labourer (37) stated at Hobden Bridge Tribunal recently that he was first rejected, then classified C3, and afterwards put in Grade 1. He appealed against his latest grading, was sent up again, and placed in Grade 3. Possibly his work had varied so that although at one time he "looked blue," at another he appeared "in the pink."

In a rather belated report of the discussion on scientific glassware at the annual meetings of the Society of Chemical Industry a chemical trade contemporary states that one member "asked if Dr. Travers had had any experience in superimposing wine glasses!" We suppose this error is due to a similarity between the shorthand symbols for "wine" and "Jena"; but it looks like an ironical reference to the difficulty of "superimposing" glasses of wine or any other alcoholic stimulant at the meetings, which, in spite of the interesting nature of the proceedings and the unsettled state of the weather, will be remembered by many as the "Dry Congress."—Oil and Colour Trades Journal.

"I Need Hardly Say

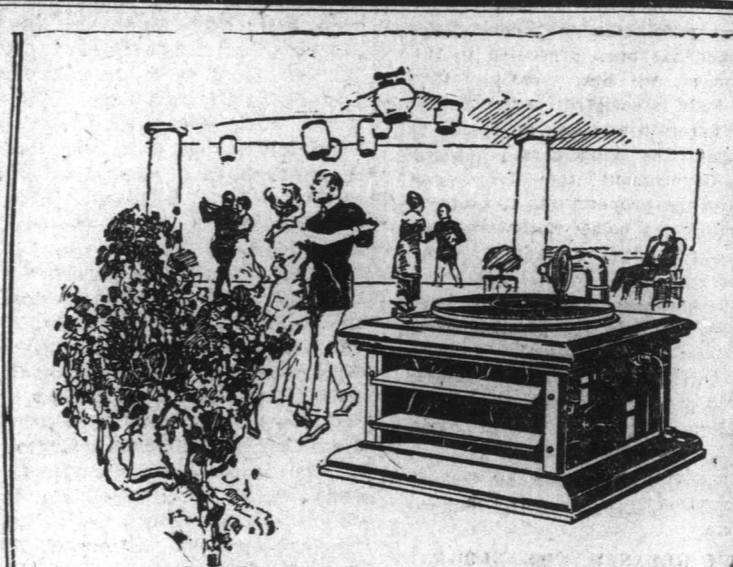

how thankful I was to get out alive, and fully made up my mind that I would write and tell you how useful Dr. Chase's Ointment was." writes a survivor of the Gallipoli Peninsula campaign. "We found that it afforded instant relief from poison from shrubs and bushes, and got to using it for all manner of minor wounds and grazes."

USING THEM ALL.

The fires of commerce have to burn, the wheels of industry must turn, though all our strong men should a r m s, and leave the cities and the farms, and cross the ocean's briny through, to show the Hun where he gets off. The mills must grind, the forges glow, to light all the young and stalwart go. So any man who has his head may find a place to earn his bread. The cripples who in peaceful days were jostled from our busy ways, have found a useful place at last, wherein they may forget the past. A man may earn his bread and meat though shy of sundry hands and feet. The halt, the spavined and the lame, once more get in life's busy game, and earn their share of useful work, and help to overwhelm the Hun. Old granddads, who's been sheltered for years, and who encountered heartless jeers, when he insisted, and repeat, that he was still as good as wheat, has left his chair and impenetrable spectacles and dog-eared book, and now he's showing all the town that Oster was a loosed clown. The world won't stand for wasted men; until Sweet Peace comes back again. That member of the human race who has the strength to do some helpful stunt and aid the armies at the front.

SCHOOL.

They shall teach him to read. How to write and how to spell. He shall follow where they lead. With the ringing of the bell. Once in school his little mind Shall belong to those who teach. But I mustn't say behind. Out of sight and out of reach. I must meet him at the door When his simple tasks are through. Chumming with him, as before; I must teach him to be true.

He shall learn in school of kings. And of hands across the sea; They shall teach him many things. That he couldn't learn from me. They can't better teach than I. Much his little mind should know. But we didn't say good-bye. When to school I let him go. Howsoever kind and wise. All his teachers there shall be. He will never higher rise. Then the things he learns from me.

It is not enough to know. How to write and how to spell. Some one also has to show. How to use those talents well. There are lessons all must learn. Supplementing those of school; Then it is a father's turn. To explain each puzzling rule. I must wait for him at night. Following his school days through. I must guide his feet aright. I must teach him to be true.

"Birch's Quarterly" vouches for the following being a literal copy of a letter received recently at the Wigan Oil Controller's Office: "I get my oil from Perry he send me to the food Controller I rote to him he refer me to oil and fat controller I wrote to him and he refer me to oil seed committee who refer me to you Crist Almighty who will you refer me to?"

A munition worker has been fined for using matches as hairpins. This looks like an act of revenge upon a tobacco-loving husband who had purloined the pins to clear out his pipe.

At Jarrow County Court a holder-up brought a claim against the Mercantile Dry Dock Co. for compensation. Applicant stated that he picked up what he thought was a piece of candle, and it began to burn and melt. His overalls took fire, and he was badly burnt. The Judge returned a verdict for the company, on the ground that the picking up of the substance was not incidental to applicant's employment. So we learn that a holder-up is not supposed to be a picker-up of phosphorus or any other unconsidered trifles.

I was standing at a street corner the other day (writes a correspondent of a Hull paper), when a man by my side pulled out a petrol-lighter and lighted a cigarette. A policeman immediately came over to him and said: "Excuse me, sir, have you a licence?" The man looked puzzled. "A licence for what?" he asked. "Licence to use petrol," the policeman answered. "No, it is said, and also acquires greater resistance to both heat and moisture.

Hardness of Leather.

A Norwegian engineer claims that he has discovered a process by which leather can be made two or three times as hard as it is normally, says the October Popular Mechanics Magazine. This is of very special interest in these days of high prices for footwear and other leather goods. While the leather can be made as hard as wood, it does not lose its elasticity, it is said, and also acquires greater resistance to both heat and moisture.

"CATCH THE THIRD."

Some little fuss seems to have arisen at Grand Falls, and at present there is a sort of block on the Magisterial road. Magistrate Fitzgerald does not want to go to Curling, and he seems to have obtained the sympathy of a good many folks in the paper town. A petition has been presented to the Government, we hear, saying that Grand Falls is satisfied with Magistrate Fitzgerald and has no desire to see him. The petitioners point out to the Government that if it has to vacate the position of the Magistrate, it should appoint the new comer to that vacancy and not to conduct a "general post" business.

Magistrate Roberts seems to be firmly settled down in the position here, and Magistrate Fitzgerald "stands out." Our late Magistrate, therefore, seems at present to occupy the rather uncomfortable position of the odd man out in "Catch the third."

So do Governments play tag with its officials. Great Governments? Well, sure.

THEY GREASED THE FLOOR.

No man can serve two masters to-day one whit more than he could 200 years ago. One William F. Coak rose once upon a time, cut some considerable dash and announced that he was the one and only Moses II, who was going to lead the people of Newfoundland out of the wilderness into the promised land of their dreams. He had many followers, for the doctrine he preached was a most popular one, and even those who did not agree with his extravagant claims, looked on him with a sort of mild admiration for the way he "squared off" at the Big House as exemplified by Reid's, Dowling's, etc. They thought that the man who was game to tackle these fellows with no cuffs on the post, was all the man to protect the poor people.

But, ah me, those days are past. The Big Interests know better than to meet blow with blow; they knew "grease" is much more dangerous to the fighter's feet than blows are to his chest; so they greased the floor, and if one may mix metaphors, they

Magistrate Roberts seems to be firmly settled down in the position here, and Magistrate Fitzgerald "stands out." Our late Magistrate, therefore, seems at present to occupy the rather uncomfortable position of the odd man out in "Catch the Third." Do our Governments play tag with its servants. Great Governments? THEY GREASED THE FLOOR.

No man can serve two masters to any one whit more than he could two years ago. One William F. He had many followers, for the doctrine he preached was a most popular one, and even those who did not agree with his extravagant claims, looked upon him in a sort of mild admiration for the way he "squared off" at the Big Indians as exemplified by Reid's, Bowler's, etc. They thought that the man who was game to tackle these fellows with no cuffs on must be, for all the man to protect the poor people.

But, ah me, those days are past. The Big Indians know better than most how to blow their own horns. Their "grass" is much more dangerous to the fighter's feet than blows are to his chest; so they grassed the floor. If one may mix metaphors, they robbed the great William of his sting. To-day William sits alone at Fort Union enjoying his bungalow and learning by heart the gem of poetry which says: "Oh, what a tangled web we weave when first we practice to deceive."

Reid, whom he attacked, has got him; "the buck that sold the spurs" never forgave the epithet and has him lashed to the mast, and "his people" who thought so highly of him have discovered the feet of clay to their idol.

So in the magnificent splendor of his bungalow he sits, left to the contemplation of his thoughts and his 1918 diary—"Observer" in the Twillingate Sun.

How the Publishers Camouflaged

OUR GREAT WAR ACTIVITIES. (By Thos. Wesley Horner in Newspaperdom.)

Wonderful has been the work of the American newspaper publishers in co-operation with the Government since war was declared. There have been exceptions—a few, of course, but these have been so weak in their influence that they should be swept from consideration. The American people have been given new ideas regarding the power of the press; new respect for its honesty and its sincerity of purpose; new faith in its independence and freedom from what has been referred to as corporation dominance, and new conceptions of the loyalty of the American press to the American Government, the people and their sacred privileges.

Newspaper publishers have known many facts right along which if published would have brought fright and discouragement to our people. They have never for a moment wavered in their loyalty, and the information that would have perhaps handicapped the Government in its work was kept secret. There was no necessity for the Government to ask the publishers to withhold the publication of the news the people must not know for military reasons. The publishers are their own censors. Their one purpose has been to safeguard the best interests of the people. True, some of the publishers have published criticisms of certain policies. And yet how few people have known that in much of the criticism printed there were pitfalls for the Central Powers.

We were told ever so much about bad motors and worse flying machines. Most of us believed much of the matter printed. So did the Germans. That was the end sought and it was secured, thanks to the shrewdness of propagandists in getting the criticisms over into Germany. Now we know that our air service is three years ahead of the standard set for us by our Allies. When the truth broke forth, our air equipment was all over the battlefronts—strong, efficient and demoralizing to the German command. From the stories of a few inefficient machines being sent abroad, we awake to learn that thoroughly efficient aircraft are over there in large numbers.

The newspapers told us of the quarrels over the kind of army rifle most suitable for heavy work. We were supposed to be using English and French guns and ammunition. The Germans believed it. When the eleventh hour came the Germans found that the American-made guns were in France two or three million strong and that these represented the latest type of death-dealing mechanism.

We were told so much about the inefficiency of our navy. The Germans believed it. Now we know that great transports are sailing daily and that our navy is so powerful and alert that the loss of ships and men going over and coming back is so small as hardly count when worked into percentages. Bulky was the information printed about the slowness with which our troops were being sent abroad. The publishers knew better, but they kept the cat tied tightly in the bag—so securely the Germans didn't get a glimpse. What have we read of late in the newspapers about the Allied drives? Great news, eh? When the Kaiser's advisers woke up our men were tramping to the music of American bands in every section of the battlefronts—fully trained, equipped and possessed of that leadership that saved this country from foreign interference generations ago. Weren't those great stories about the way we were not building ships?

Germany believed them. She swallowed hooks, slanders and lies. When the truth crawled from under cover in the newspaper offices, we learned that the Americans were breaking all shipbuilding records of the world, ships splicing overboard from 899 shipyards—and faster than Germany can sink them even if she confined the operations of her U-boats to the United States alone.

And the cartoons we saw of Daniels, Baker, etc. Daniels was pictured as an old lady knitting. Baker as a schoolboy reading "Germany and Her World Influence." Germany smiled—so did we. Did the newspapers know better? We get the answer in the amazing accomplishments of the past year and a half. Secretary Lansing got his. Germany smiled again. But she has learned that he is one of the greatest diplomats of all time. So have we.

We are all getting to understand each other better—and particularly the newspapers and their publishers. Truly powerful are they in work for the government and for the people—you and I.

Too Many Words.

After reading some recently published official proclamations the editor of the Toronto Star offers these puzzled observations:

"Why cannot official proclamations be expressed in the plain, ordinary, twentieth century language that everybody speaks, reads, and writes? The proclamation to Americans in Canada sounds most impressive, but no American knows what it calls him to do. He is forced to go to the American Consul to find out."

This reminds us that when legislators prepare a bill for enactment, they usually find it necessary to give a "short title" for it, and a sort of summary of each section, which summary is supposed to save the public the trouble of wading through the verbiage of the complete text. This is good so far as it goes, but it seems not so far, for the average citizen does not read now legislation in detail, contenting himself with the assertion that the law-makers place so many acts on the statute books, and so many amendments to the old ones, that the mere layman is too busy to examine their activities in detail.

If the recent American proclamation fails in clarity and brevity, it would not be difficult to produce Canadian proclamations which will match it in that respect. When the authorities of this country find it necessary and legal to ask John Doe to step up, and to ask the captain's office to settle, or wish to warn him that his rights and privileges have been enlarged or curtailed—and in these days curtailment is the rule—it should be possible to express the facts in shorthand English so clear as to be readily understood. Brevity is difficult, but it pays. Public men who are the authors of long documents, or who make long and involved speeches, would probably be amazed if they could ascertain with accuracy how few of their fellow-citizens dutifully read extended reports of their utterances.—St. John Telegraph.

Enslaving French Girls.

A book appeared some months ago which treated of the deportation to the country districts in the Ardennes of young French girls, gently bred, who were torn from their families by the Germans and condemned to work in the fields. The intervention of the holy Father and the energetic protests of the Bishop of Lille, had some effect at the time, and, at Lille, these deportations are now more rare. They entailed upon the girls who were thus reduced to slavery great suffering and humiliation, and being untrained for manual labor, out of doors in all kinds of weather, these girls soon proved themselves absolutely incapable of performing their tasks. A venerable prolate, well known all over France, told me, only the other day, that although the Pope's action seemed to have had some effect at Lille, in other places the Germans continue to practice their system of making slaves of young French girls. One whom he knew well, for she was educated at a convent where he acted as chaplain, was transported, after the taking of Novon, in March, 1918, to the Ardennes, where she labored. She has lately died of hunger, misery and exposure. This case has come to my knowledge, but it is only one of many.

Germany desires a discussion of peace terms now, while she still possesses conquered territory in Europe with which to bargain. When her armies have been driven within her own frontier in the west the final stage of the war will have begun. But the struggle can never be ended until the breaking of German military power has caused the collapse of her grip upon the east. As for her African colonies they are gone for all time.—St. John Telegraph.

Cyclist in Spectacular Feat Saves Officer.

An army motorcyclist at one of the training camps recently averted the death of a young lieutenant by a most extraordinary feat—of heroism, says the October Popular Mechanics Magazine. Racing at high speed across rough ground, he drove his machine into a runaway parachute that was dragging the officer to his death. The latter had made a practice parachute jump of 2,000 feet from an observation balloon. A high wind had carried him a considerable distance, and in landing he became hopelessly entangled in the cords. The parachute was caught by a strong air current and blown at terrific speed across the field, pulling its helpless prisoner with it. At the same instant the cyclist, passing along a near-by motor road, saw the officer's plight. He averted his machine into the field, and raced at top speed squarely into the middle of the belied parachute. The ropes fouled the machine and the weight of the latter anchored the derelict against further movement.

Colonies After the War.

That Britain should retain all of the German colonies occupied by her troops and those of the Overseas Dominions, is stoutly advocated by Col. Roosevelt. "One item in making peace," he writes, "ought to be insistence that Britain keep every colony she has conquered from Germany, both in the South Seas and in Africa." The New York Times strongly supports that view, and says: "The notion that Germany should sit at a table and bargain for her lost colonies with Belgium and Northern France and Poland is not to be entertained." There are many reasons why it will not be entertained. In the first place, there will be no discussion of terms while Germany occupies Northern France and Belgium. So long as she does occupy them she will not be defeated, and until she is defeated it will be useless to talk about rearranging the affairs of the world, establishing justice, and making civilization safe.

German colonial policies and adventures have shown that she is unfit to govern subject peoples. Her colonial record is one of fustian cruelty and exploitation. From the standpoint of the tribes in Africa and the South Seas, German rule could only mean continued darkness and misery. The British system introduces justice and prepares subject peoples for self-government. The British do not need more territory, and they are not in this war for the purpose of enlarging their empire. But to restore the conquered colonies to Germany would mean that after all the sacrifices made in the present struggle the future condition of the subject peoples would be as bad as ever. Furthermore, the free nations will never consent to permit Germany to occupy territory which would provide her with coal stations and naval bases along the great trade routes, or which would give her control of great natural resources and millions of subjects from which she might draw revenue, man power and material to assist her in carrying out another assault upon civilization.

Fishing Made Easy.

Halifax, September 19.—Rapid transit of fish from ocean storage at the rate of 4,000,000 pounds in twenty-four hours is the accomplishment of the deep sea harvester, the invention of a Scandinavian mariner. Enticed by an electric fish for bait the fish are caught in a rapidly moving scoop raised to the deck of the fishing boat and distributed in cold storage before they have time to die. It is expected the fishing industry will be revolutionized by the device and that new eligible products made from fish meat will come into general use. The harvester resembles a large house boat. It is about 300 feet long and 150 feet beam. On the forward upper works are four giant reflectors, from which rays are flashed across the water for a distance of two miles, over a radius ten miles wide. Penetrating to a depth of 100 feet these rays attract the fish in great schools and then the scoop starts harvesting. This scoop, 100 feet long and 50 feet wide, is connected with the deck by means of a conveyor which forges ahead of the craft. The fish are caught on the conveyor and carried to the deck at a speed which makes it impossible for them to escape. By this means, the inventor says more than 4,000,000 pounds of fish can be caught in 24 hours. Upon reaching the deck the fish are sorted automatically and carried to the refrigeration room, where they are frozen in solid blocks of ice fish unit for human consumption are carried to another part of the vessel, where they are reduced to fertilizer.

Fish Eggs.

The cod is estimated to yield 45,000,000 eggs each season. As many as 3,000,000, 9,000,000 and even 9,500,000 eggs have been found in the roe of a single cod. An eel was caught in Scotland some years ago which contained upward of 10,000,000 eggs. This, however, would appear to have been an exceptional find, and it is generally admitted that the cod is more prolific than any other fish. Though not equalling the cod, many kinds of fish are exceedingly prolific. More than 38,000 eggs have been counted in a herring, 38,000 in a smelt, 1,000,000 in a sole, 1,120,000 in a roach, 3,000,000 in a sturgeon, 342,000 in a carp, 883,000 in a tench, 546,000 in a mackerel, 992,000 in a perch, and 1,357,000 in a flounder. The oyster is also very prolific.

It has been ascertained by recent observation that in the liquor of their shells small oysters can be seen by aid of the microscope—120 in the space of an inch, covered with shells, and swimming actively about. A herring weighing six or seven ounces is provided with about 30,000 eggs. It has been estimated that in three years a single pair of herrings would produce 150,000,000. Buffon calculated that if a pair of herrings could be left to breed and multiply undisturbed for a period of 20 years they would yield an amount of fish equal in bulk to the globe.—London Tit-Bits.

Another Unielectric System!

We have recently finished installing one of our Unielectric Plants for Fred Ayre, Esquire, in his country residence at Murray's Pond.

Owing to the fact that the Unielectric machine produces a standard 110 volt current (the same that is used here in St. John's), Mr. Ayre is able to light 4 buildings, a considerable distance apart, without loss of power and without the use of extra large wires. They are also able to use standard electric iron and electric vibrator; also any lamps or fixtures handled in St. John's.

The grounds are also lighted with powerful lights on poles. The interior of the bungalow has been lighted according to Mrs. Ayre's direction with drop lights, wall brackets and table lamps with coloured shades to harmonize with the walls and furniture. Mr. Ayre has now the most beautifully lighted country residence in Newfoundland.

We have now 4 Unielectric Plants in successful operation in Newfoundland. Any one interested in country lighting has abundant opportunity to satisfy themselves that the Unielectric has no rival.

Perhaps the strongest feature about these machines is the fact that they do not have to depend on storage batteries, but a small cheap battery can be connected at any time to be used in case of emergency. However none of our customers have found it necessary to do so.

We are also agents for 3 different makes of battery lighting systems and can furnish anything required in this line, but we do not claim that they could compare with the Unielectric.

Is It Your Boy?

IS IT YOUR BOY THAT IS ALWAYS HARD ON HIS CLOTHES?

Is it your boy that will climb trees and fences and leave part of his clothes there?

Is it your boy that slides for third base and will do considerable of the sliding on the seat of his pants?

ANYHOW HE IS A REAL BOY, BLESS HIM.

But he'll be wanting a new Suit, or at least a new pair of Pants. Still he is worth it these times. But a lot of money is being asked for Boys' Clothes to-day, and the boy may be blessed when prices are mentioned.

We have thought of that, so we say,—
We can give you

BOYS' SUITS

At Most Reasonable Prices.

But in many cases it will not be necessary to buy a whole Suit, as the boy has only worn out his pants (it will be extraordinary if he hasn't).

WE OFFER THREE GRADES OF BOYS' PANTS.

These are our Prices:—
Sizes 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
Grade 1: 1.30, 1.35, 1.40, 1.45, 1.50, 1.55, 1.60, 1.65, 1.70
Grade 2: none, none, 1.65, 1.70, 1.75, 1.80, 1.85, 1.90, 1.95
Grade 3: none, none, 2.00, 2.10, 2.20, 2.30, 2.40, 2.50, 2.60

We advise you to see the best quality ones early, as we cannot repeat them owing to the impossibility of getting materials.

The proper care of wet shoes

The high cost of shoes makes it imperative to use every means to make them last as long as possible. Moisture is their worst enemy. It dries and cracks the leather, ruins their shape and shortens their life of wear.

You can save yourself many a dollar by using "Fital" Shoe Trees in your shoes. They not only immediately restore them to their original shape, but make your shoes wear longer and give you infinitely greater comfort.

MINARD'S LINIMENT RELIEVES NEURALGIA.

Day by Day Warner's Rustproof Corsets are winning friends for our Corset department. Are you one of them, or have you got to wear one of these famous Corsets to realize the comfort, style and service that they give?

What a satisfaction to know when you purchase your Corset that it will wear out only with time—not because it is faulty in fabric or bone, or off in cut. Of this you are confident when you buy a Warner's.

The shaping and comfortable fitting are assured through your selection of the right style for you,—and there is one.

$2.00 per pair up.
