CHAPTER XIV.
WHEN LOVE MEANS RUIN.

It bore neither address nor date, and, with perhaps the first tingle of curiosity he had felt for some years, he held it up to the light and read it. It ran thus:

"My Lord,—If your lordship should retain your partiality for the drama, which distinguished your early days, and can still enjoy a petite comedy, I would sincerely recommend your lordship to repair to the small garden attached to that part of the Abbey which is called the Cloisters. If I am not mistaken, your lordship will find a little drama performing there which may afford you both amusement and instruction. I would advise your lordship to go to the spot indicated on receipt of this friendly intimation, and go alone."

To say that my lord, the marquis was astonished would be superfluous, to add that he was enraged would be to insult the intelligence of the reader. Fury, amazement, indignation, struggled between them for the predominance.

That any person should dare to write to him anonymously—that any person should have the temerity to suggest that there was anything going on in the Abbey—maddened him.

He raised his hand to the bell in a fit of wrath that threatened to once to break down and scatter his icy impassiveness; then he let his jewelled hand fall to his side instead of on the bell, and stared at the letter again, his face deadly white, his thin lips set hard.

What did it mean? Was it a practical joke? a hoax such as he himself used to play when he was a young man? No, hoaxes were out of the fashion, the world had grown too grave and serious for them. Besides, who would dare to play a practical joke with him?

The longer he thought of it the more serious he grew, as the writer intended that he should. He examined the letter closely, and the envelope; the handwriting was quite strange to him, and in addition had doubtless been disguised. He could not decide whether it was a man's or a woman's. The envelope bore the London W. postmark, and was therefore no sort of a clue.

It must have been written by some one tolerably familiar with the Abbey; and who was familiar with it? No visitors had darkened the doors for years—there was only Edgar. But why should Edgar write such an epistle? and the handwriting was not his; Lord Farintosh was pretty well acquainted with his son's calligraphy; and then—and this seemed conclusive—he did not believe that Lord Edgar was clever enough to disguise his handwriting.

He looked at the clock, wistfully, wrathfully; he glanced at his bandaged leg. No, he would not demean himself by following the advice of an anonymous scribbler who deserved to be pitched into the fire with his abominable scrawl. What! he, the Marquis of Farintosh, obey the command of some wretch, and play the spy in his own Abbey? Impossible—impossible! And—then, with a muttered oath, he rang the bell so furiously that both the valet and Mr. Palmer came hurrying in.

"Thanks—I don't require the whole household!" he snarled. "Palmer, bring me the keys."

"The keys, my lord?"

"Yes, idiot, the keys of the"—he was almost ashamed to ask for them; he had not done so for years; but his shame brought him to his senses, and sent him back into his icy impassiveness again—"the keys to the cloister doors."

"Mr. Temple, sir, has the keys of all excepting the library."

"Bring that, then; and mark! let the whole of the keys belonging to the doors that divide my apartments from the rest of the Abbey be placed on that sideboard."

"Very good, my lord," answered Mr. Palmer, meekly.

He came in again in a few minutes with the key; he had tried to rub some of the rust off, but it still looked very much as Bluebeard's key must have looked when that pattern husband handed it to Fatimas.

The marquis dismissed him with a word, and then sat with the key in his hand. His gout was intense, so was his curiosity, but his iron will was most intense of all! Slowly and with pain that caused drops of perspiration to stand out like beads upon his forehead, he got up, and leaning on his thick stick of ebony, with its silver crutch-handle, made his way to the dressing-room, and got his hat and the fur cloak with which he was always enveloped when he courted the open air.

Then he came back into the room and locked the outer door with as much care as if he were going to commit murder or suicide; indeed, to his haughty soul the deed of which he was about to be guilty ranked quite on a par with either of these crimes.

There was another door in the room that led to a staircase communicating with the eastern part of the Abbey in which the library was situated, and when he had passed through this he locked it also.

Now he had set out upon his task he felt less pain and less shame. He had given his curiosity the rein and was going to let it carry him to the bitter end.

The staircase was not very well lighted, and he had to go very carefully, and once he nearly stumbled and fell to the bottom, but he gained the ground floor at last, and using his rusty key opened the door and found himself in the library. He looked around with an air of strangeness—he had not been in the room for years; then he paused and pondered. He remembered that there was a small square of waste garden, an old rosary which, when he saw it last, was run to seed, a home for the pigeons and cats of the Abbey. But he had quite forgotten how to reach it from the library, and he would have turned back in another moment with a sense of relief—he felt so much like a burglar—but at that instant there came floating through the door in the china-room the soft, sweet strains of a girl's voice.

It was Lela singing to Lord Edgar. The marquis started. The voice thrilled through him and moved him; it was years since he had heard a girl's pure voice. He almost forgot the anonymous letter and his task of spying; then it came back to him, and his eyes glinted. At any rate, there was the female actor in the little comedy which he had been assured he should witness.

With Voltaire's sneer in his mind, "If a woman be near, mischief is not far off!" he drew aside the curtain and looked out into the garden.

Amazement was his first emotion—it was a fairy scene instead of a waste wilderness of old trees and weeds—a veritable fairy scene! And that was the fairy and his face grew deathly white and his eyes glittered furiously—the fairy was lying on the breast of his son, Lord Edgar, looking up into his handsome face—for perhaps the first time the marquis recognized its beauty—with all her soul in her pure, lovely eyes.

I wish I could set down in a couple of lines all that passed through my lord the Marquis of Farintosh's mind in a couple of moments! The exquisite beauty and palpable innocence of the girl smote him as translucent water smites a hardened rock; then the thought that his son should play the traitor to such a young creature maddened him—he didn't remember his own young and most alarmingly wicked days, by any means—then the reflection that this wickedness was being carried on under his own roof enraged him; and lastly the fact of his being there, and the chance of his being found there playing the spy humiliated and tortured him. He stood, devoured by these conflicting passions, glaring and listening.

Who was the girl? He tried to remember, and at last recalled a little slip of a child who used to run about the lawn and whom he had heard calling the old librarian "grand-papa!" And she had grown into—this. He steadied himself on his stick and stood with knitted brows.

To-morrow—to-night, is possible, she should be sent away, and Lord Edgar—well, he would have a word with him. Somehow a bitter disappointment filled his heart. He knew himself to be wicked, but he had thought that his son, though a fool in his opinion, was an honest one! And now he had turned out to be a villain, like his father and the Fanes generally.

He saw Lord Edgar take out his cigarette-case; he saw Lela take the dainty created match-box and light the cigarette for him; he could hear their voices murmuring harmoniously; then, with a start, Lela looked up at the moon, just beginning to grow yellow.

"Oh, Edgar, see! How late it must be, and grandpapa not back yet! I—I don't think I must stay any longer."

"Why not, darling?" he answered.

H.P.

continues to arrive from England.

Has a new and delicious flavour, no sauce just like it.

Wouldn't it be worth your while to try a bottle now?

"It is just cool and pleasant now."

"Yes," with a sigh; "It is pleasant, and I am—ah, so happy! But—"

He arose at once; she was too innocent for her fear to have any significance, but he would not take advantage of her.

"Well, I will go, dearest. Perhaps Mr. Temple would not like me to be here so late. I'll go and meet him."

"No, not to-night," she said, then she blushed and hid her face. "Not to-night. Come in the morning. I'm very foolish, am I not? but I want all to-night to think of this hour of ours! To-morrow you shall tell him; but go now—ah, if the night had not come so soon!"

Juliet mourned the approach of day, Lela the approach of night, but on the same grounds—that awful parting from their lovers.

"To-morrow will soon be here, darling!" he said, "and to-morrow I shall have the right to call you my own, and spend—ah, hours, days with you; and then, when we are married, I shall always be by your side, never to part, Lela. Think of that! It is almost too much for my wooden head to realize!"

"It is too much for my heart," she said, fervently.

"I'll try and see my father to-night," he went on, holding her to him. "He will give his consent, I'm sure—I'm afraid for the reason that he doesn't care what becomes of me."

Pleasant for the marquis was this. "We must be married soon! But there, I won't talk about it. Good-night, my own darling!" She put up her face, and he kissed it, once, twice, thrice, and then slowly, reluctantly he let her go. "Will you not come in?" he said.

"No," she answered, with a little sigh, "I shall stay here and think—of you!"

And, as he paused to look back, she sunk down by the fountain, and kissed the spot where he had leaned.

It required all his resolution to enable him to resist the temptation to go back to her, but he conquered and hurried through the door, just giving the marquis time to draw back into the shadow.

And there he remained—puzzled, bewildered, and troubled. He heard Lord Edgar's firm footsteps gradually die away along the terrace, and still he stood.

His mind had received a thorough shock. His son was not a villain—there had been truth in his very voice. He intended marrying the girl, and was, therefore, still—what was worse in the marquis' opinion—a fool!

PEACE-MAKING DELAYED

By Sewing-Circle Methods

Americans do not Agree to Majority Report---
Italian Demonstration Against Wilson.

WILL DELAY PEACE.

PARIS, April 25. While the American delegates expressed regret over the temporary break with the Italians, they apparently were confident to-day that some settlement would be effected when Premier Orlando confers with the Italian Parliament. The general opinion in American circles is that the making of peace will be somewhat delayed by the Italian incident. Premier Clemenceau this morning received a message from Premier Orlando which the Italian statesman despatched while on his way to Rome.

CONDITIONS IN GERMANY IMPROVED.

BERLIN, April 23. Almost as suddenly as the strikes began, Germany appears to be quieting down again. The miners, generally, are returning to work. A big factor in the situation has been the distribution of food.

HUNGARIAN BORDERS CLOSED.

BERLIN, April 23. Hungary has hermetically closed all her borders in an effort to control the Roumanian invasion and prevent unfavorable news from escaping. Reports from Budapest are contradictory, but all indicate the situation is grave. It is officially reported that the Roumanians continue to advance towards the Tisza River.

AMERICANS NOT IN AGREEMENT.

PARIS, April 25. It became known to-day that the Americans are unable to agree to certain portions of the majority report of the Commission investigating responsibility for the war. They object to the principle that persons accused of offences against "laws of humanity" should be subjected to criminal prosecution, contending that laws of humanity constitute a standard too uncertain to be rightly applied in legal proceedings. The principle that heads of State should be liable to criminal prosecutions for breaches of positive law is also opposed. The delegates are unable, therefore, to concur in the recommendations for the establishment of a high tribunal.

ITALIAN PRESS COMMENTS.

ROME, April 25. The reply of Premier Orlando to President Wilson, apparently has made a deep impression on the Italian Press, and virtually every Italian newspaper devotes much editorial comment to the Premier's statement. The Popolo Romano says, "Italy replies as one man to her King and her Government, who demand with unswerving tenacity their sacred and impregnable national rights." After describing the Premier's reply as a proud and thrilling document, the Corriere d'Italia says, "The American people cannot be in agreement with a man who so haughtily arrogated to himself the right to decide the fate of Europe against the desires of its Governments and its peoples." The Idea Nazionale declares that not one Italian would dare to sign a peace as proposed by President Wilson. The Italian considers that President Wilson, perhaps irremediably jeopardized the peace of the world. The newspapers announce that patriotic societies are urging the Italian people to address an appeal to the American people and the American Senate and House of Representatives. "Long Live America, down with Wilson," was the watchword of various demonstrations in Rome last night. "Italy," says the Epoca, fought a desperate war and sustained heavy sacrifices for the purest ideals, the realization of which is jeopardized by the unreasonable obstinacy of President Wilson."

SCOTTISH HORSE.

LONDON, April 25. (Via Reuter's.)—The Duke of Atholl writes to the press that he has been asked to raise the Scottish Horse once more as an integral part of the new Territorial Army.

DIFFERENCE IN WEATHER REPORTS.

LONDON, April 25. (Via Reuter's.)—In a statement issued regarding the reported extraordinary divergence of views between England and Newfoundland regarding weather conditions on the Atlantic, the Air Ministry points out that its forecasts are framed from a conjunction of reports of meteorological stations in the United States, Canada, Newfoundland, the Azores and the Continent and of ships on the Atlantic route and at home stations. Weather reports sent by newspaper correspondents in Newfoundland are official and have not been in conformity with the information received by the Air Ministry. Its weather bulletin gives conditions for the whole route, and it may happen that if unfavorable local conditions can be overcome, the whole flight may be successfully accomplished. Ideal conditions throughout the whole route, including both starting and landing points are not considered likely to occur frequently. Regarding the St. John's message that consternation was caused in the airman's camp on Wednesday by the message from the Air Ministry, asking reasons for Hawker's and Raynham's failure to start the Atlantic flight, it must be stated emphatically that no such message was sent by the Air Ministry Meteorological staff. They merely prepare forecasts, it is not their province to say the machines should start. This is entirely for the navigators to decide.

ONLY SUSPENDED.

PARIS, April 24. Not a rupture but a suspension of Italy's collaboration in the Peace Conference. That is how the situation was defined in conference circles to-night (Thursday). The Italian delegates feeling that its representative character has been called in question in certain quarters, consider probable that Premier Orlando will be back in time for the opening of the negotiations with the German plenipotentiaries at Versailles, which will not occur before May 1st or 2nd.

OTTAWA WILL GET DRAFT OF TERMS.

OTTAWA, April 25. It was learned to-night that the Dominion Government expects to receive the detailed draft of the peace terms. If the draft is received here as anticipated, it will be released for publication at Ottawa the same time as at Washington. Just when that will be it is, of course, impossible to say at present.

Almost a Miracle But Very Simple.

Was the Cure of John New by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

His Troubles All Came from Sick Kidneys and He Treated Them With the Old Reliable Canadian Remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Hillsdale, Battloford, Sask. April 25th. (Special.)—With a speed that was almost miraculous, Mr. John New, a well-known farmer here, has been cured of the kidney trouble from which he suffered for several years. "Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me," he says. "I wish to give them all the thanks."

Speaking further of his troubles and their sudden cure, Mr. New says: "I think I inherited my kidney disease from my parents, and I suffered off and on for several years. I had stiffness in the joints, cramps in the muscles, backache, and neuralgia. "I perspired freely on the slightest exertion and my perspiration had an unpleasant odor. I was irritable, often dizzy and was depressed and low spirited. My skin was dry and had a harsh feel and I was often nervous. "I took just one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills. They cured me."

If your troubles come from the kidneys you will have some of the symptoms that Dodd's Kidney Pills cured in Mr. New's case. Ask your neighbors about Dodd's Kidney Pills.

I. O. O. F. Centenary.

This month the One Hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows will be observed by members of the Order all over the North American Continent and in other countries where the Order has been established. Everywhere will its birth on the 26th of April, 1819, be celebrated in a manner suitable to the importance of the occasion, and from the hearts of over two million Odd Fellows and Rebekahs, prayers of thankfulness will be poured out for what the Order has accomplished during the past century, a period in which it has wielded a wonderful influence for good in the lives of millions of the human race; in which it has rendered aid in times of sickness and distress, and in which through the instrumentality of the Homes of the Order, it has cared for thousands of our aged and infirm brothers and sisters, and has protected, cared for and educated thousands of orphan children and fitted them for lives of usefulness.

On to-morrow (Sunday) morning, April 27th, all branches of the Order in this city will celebrate the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Order, by attending Divine Service at the Presbyterian Church. Service will be conducted by the Rev. Gordon Dickie, M.A. A strong committee, composed of representatives from the various Lodges, have just about completed necessary arrangements, and it is expected that the celebration will be the largest and best ever held in the city.

There is also to be a grand celebration on Tuesday, April 29th in the C.C.C. Hall which is advertised elsewhere in this issue. Odd Fellows residing or visiting in the city are cordially invited to attend.

Heart's Content Tragedy.

Inspector General Hutchings is in receipt of the following further particulars of the awful accident at Heart's Content, on Wednesday last:
 "At about 10.30 p.m. on the 23rd Mr. Z. Baker saw fire issuing from the house occupied by Mr. Smith and family, situated about 150 yards distant. Mr. Baker and wife hastened to the scene and were met at the kitchen door by Mrs. Smith who handed them two small children, and then re-entered the house for the third child. This was the last seen of her or the child, and although every effort was made to effect an entrance to try and rescue the mother and her little one, the flames had by this time become so fierce that Baker found it impossible. The two children saved were aged one year and two years, while the mother aged 25 and the other child aged 5 years were burnt to death. Mr. Smith, who is an employee of the Reid Mfd. Co., had only left home that day."

At the Majestic.
 Owing to the fact that a large number of people who did not have the opportunity of seeing that big nine-reel picture, "War Brides," the Majestic Theatre management has kindly consented to screen it again to-night, when it will be seen for the last time. This is the picture that caused such a stir in movie circles, both here and abroad, and featuring the great Madame Nazimova, "The greatest of them all," directed by Herbert Brenon, the giant of the film world, and will again evoke the praise and admiration that characterized its first appearance.

Legislative Council.
 Council met at 4 o'clock yesterday.
 Excellency the Governor, accompanied by Lieut. Edens, A.D.C., was in the Chamber shortly after 4 o'clock when Mr. Speaker and members of the House of Assembly had assembled to the Bar, gave his attention to the Bill to further extend the term of Parliament.
 The reading of the Bill in the present year, the committee stage of the Commission of Workmen's Bill were dealt with.

Mr. Anderson explained at length the motive of "The Ejection of Tenants Bill." The object of the Bill is to prevent the ejection of tenants by the law, providing the tenant complies with his contract; and if he is not in rent, he had better tender the amount due. It would also be unlawful to increase the rent during the period the Act was in force, though the landlord would be at liberty to demand a proper amount for repairs made. The Bill would remain in force until May, 1920, and the intention was to protect the tenant by paying up to $300.00 a year against having the houses sold behind their heads, or the rents increased.

Mr. Squires thought the passage of an Act of such scope would be a hardship. He cited a case of a soldier, who with his wife, was paying $48.00 a month board, and an earning capacity of $60.00. He had purchased a home, but the Bill became law, it would have meant the loss to the soldier of another case in which he owned a two-fat house, one of which he let out. Recently his son, a returned soldier, and his wife, were now trying to obtain this house for his son. With the proposed Bill in force, the son would have to leave the country. He thought the bill as it stood at present, was going too far.
 Mr. Meers thought that a Commission of 3 or 5 members should be appointed to deal with the matter, and the Bill needed to be modified. The Bill as being too far fetched.
 Mr. Anderson asked that the Bill be deferred until the next sitting, to live, and probably the Bill would be deferred until the next sitting.

The Laborer's Romance.

By RUTH CAMERON.

One of our visitors was holding forth the other day on a familiar topic. He was telling about the way laboring people were riding about in their own cars. "And not flivvers either," by George, but some of the expensive makes. Why, there was one car outside that mine that was about as smart a looking thing as I ever saw, chocolate color with bright green trimming, one of these low racy roadsters. I thought it must belong to the president and handed it over to one of these foreigners who had been working seven days a week and overtime, they told me, and making all sorts of money. And he's gone and blown it for that."

He passed to give us an opportunity to chorus "Outrageous" or "Isn't it terrible?" but before we had a chance Molly spoke up.

Instead of Thinking It Terrible She Thought It Romantic.

"Isn't it dramatic when you come to think of it," she said, "like a fairy tale almost. Weren't you delighted when you saw him come out? It wouldn't have been anything if it had been the president but to think of that man coming out of all the dirt and darkness of the mine and climbing into that!"

Our visitor gazed at Molly in apparent forgetfulness of one of the rules of correct conduct.

I wished it had been his ears or his heart that had been left open instead of his mouth.

For who can deny that there is romance in the miner or the factory hand and his luxurious car?

The Number Of These Cars Is Exaggerated.

I think the number and luxury of these cars is vastly exaggerated. I read of a president of a company who waved his hand towards the cars standing outside his works and said "Just look at all those cars. That's how they spend their money." There were perhaps fifty cars. When the men came pouring out there proved to be some five thousand of them. But in return, I don't see why we should not be able to see the romance in the laborer's sudden ability to make their castles in air come true.

Of course we don't like to see them taking unfair and mean advantage of their power any more than we like to see the capitalist doing the same.

Of course we don't like to see them manifest an indifference to the class of professional and office workers, teachers, etc., who are caught and ground to powder between the upper and nether millstone.

When They Don't Do Their Share.

Of course we are completely disgusted when they show a lack of patriotism.

And of course we shudder when we see them insanely pushing their demands to a point where factories will close, production be curtailed, and everyone, themselves included, go down in complete financial disaster.

We can't help thinking then of the old woman and her hut and how the fair founder, after granting her every possible luxury, on being finally asked for impossible ones said to her, "Go back and you will find your palace once more a hut."

That would surely be a sad end to the laborer's romance.

The Lady is Safe.

John Barleycorn having been laid out in the black clothes and white cravat and the mourners having been summoned for the funeral, the friends of Lady Nicotine are a little nervous. Rumors fly about that the Black Spot is about to be pressed into her brow palm—is to draw the fatal number 23. Nevertheless, if wagers are to be laid, it is well to back the Lady and her relatives—Father Pipe, Black Cigar, her brother, and the slim young princess, Finecut, the least regarded members of the family, if alone, might be in some danger, but they will escape on account of their kinship. King James, who wrote the "Counterblast to Tobacco," was the greatest fool, it will be recalled, Britain ever had on the throne, and although he chopped off the head of the gallant Raleigh, his victim's great contribution to the peaceful happiness of mankind will continue to live on. It was not fanaticism alone or a desire to sacrifice the normal for the protection of the abnormal that brought trouble to John Barleycorn. The old chap, it must be confessed, fell into bad company. He was too constantly seen in the company of the Saloon, a scurvy wastrel, a vice and crime inciter, whose carryings-on incensed decent persons. The trade in intoxicating beverages had become corrupting, even though the beverages in themselves did little harm. Lady Nicotine is more careful of her associates. A cigar store is not a gathering place for the disreputable, does not entice the bread-winner to neglect his family, and it is not necessary to keep it under surveillance. And when the rounding up of rum occurred, the public, its mind engrossed in other things, took little notice of the drive. It deemed it utterly impossible for the country to go bone dry. Had it not been long said that the Constitution was practically unamendable? No similar still hunting against tobacco is possible. Whether or not the use of tobacco is a good thing or a bad thing, it has its friends, who will not be indifferent. Legislators, it may be assumed, will take due notice of the fact. So the tobacco jar and the humidifier are not likely to become antiques along with the decanter and the corkscrew. The brunette beauty of Kentucky and the blonde of the Carolinas, and even the fuliginous product of Pennsylvania, scarcely need life assurance. As for the heavenly compound manufactured by the sun out of the essence of Cuba, the only thing asked of it is that it increases in volume.—New York Tribune.

It is no little thing to be Assigned to earth to play the man; To live and breathe and feel and see And share in God Almighty's plan. It is a privilege to live.

How many yet unborn have sought Advance to earth to play the man; Beyond the realms of human thought How many there have never seen The splendor of a growing tree, Gown'd in its summer robe of green, Nor heard the music of the sea!

I pity the dead that were, Nor grieve for them that soon shall die. For they have seen the blossoms stir With every breeze that traveled by And they the breath of life have drawn

And walked the fragrant ways of earth; My sighs are all for those unborn Who have not known the thrill of birth.

How many countless ones remain To prove their fitness for this life, Still lacking strength to bear its pain Or courage for its hours of strife? How many walk from day to day, As on and on the ages roll Seeking the word from God that they may be entrusted with a soul?

What matter earthly pomp and fame? What matter worldly gain or loss? Christ out of Heaven gladly came To suffer death upon the cross. And we what life's broad highways plod And claim the joys the mornings give Are honored by Almighty God In that we're privileged to live.

Household Notes

A teaspoonful of butter and a boiling pot of beans will keep the pot on.

Turpentine rubbed over the work of the piano occasionally keeps out the moths.

All dried fruits should be washed thoroughly before being used, and then soaked in water.

Equal parts of linned vinegar and water applied to the ink from wood.

Work done with a saw or swing means work done with a saw or swing.

Sugar sprinkled over the custard mixture.

Large white canned chestnuts in nests made of little paper are novel desserts.

A slice of lemon, dipped in vinegar and water, and washed with an hour will clean it.

To fill up cracks in the plaster, mix some putty with Paris with the paint.

Loaf of time is saved by the preparation of a meal.

Raisins will not go to the cake if they are rolled in flour instead of sugar.

An excellent one-dish dinner composed of a meat and vegetable pie with a biscuit crust.

Peel, core and steam apples and cover with meringue.

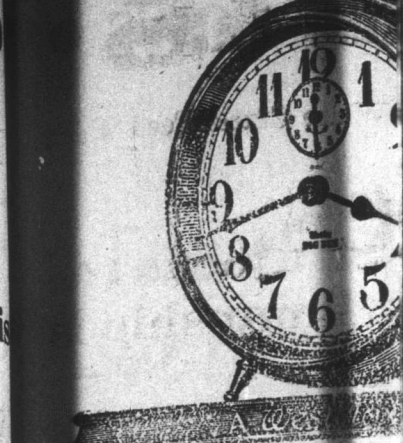

When salt is forgotten, dip a towel in salt water and spread it over the meat.

Add cooked and pitted spices to a cornstarch pudding and you have an agreeable change.

Lay carbon paper between layers of cloth when marking and both sides will be marked.

Place a funnel over a glass breaking eggs. The white will run to the bottom and the yolk stay out.

BUSINESS 100 YEARS AGO.

(H. F. SHORTIS.) Article XI. antiquity and achievements, is not at all surprising when we reflect that a very large proportion of them are inseparably interwoven with the great events which have made the history of their country memorable; and the valuable services rendered to the nation by many of these families, not only through their country seats and personal relics an indescribable charm, but give them a strong hold on the affections of the people. Historical Society's Opportunity. That the Newfoundland Historical Society will do a great amount of good goes without saying. It is pleasing to note that many young men have already become members, and many more purpose doing so during the current year. It is only natural to suppose that many of the older members will have to retire from active service before many years, and the good work commenced and carried out by them will be taken up by the young men of the Society, and successfully carried out, more especially as many of them are endowed with rare intellectual gifts, great research and a patriotic spirit to hand down to posterity the hardships, adventures, traditions and customs of our countrymen, which to a certain extent, can be obtained now, but will be utterly impossible to perform if we permit our work to lapse for any length of time. Amongst the members of the Historical Society are the Inspectors of Schools, gentlemen who can perform an everlasting service to their country by procuring the chief historical events in each town and village vary greatly by requesting the school teachers to procure any written documents, traditions, etc., of the particular locality in which they labour in their noble avocations. They could easily ascertain from the older people of the towns or villages in which they reside who was the first settler, the first clergyman, who built the first church and other buildings; procure an account of the ships built there—the adventures of the sea-faring people—the first business men—the word, everything having reference to the early days of the settlements. There is not a town or village in this country but could supply its quota to the making up of several large volumes, and with the graphic descriptions which would be given by the school teachers, it would be for the Historical Society to make a success of the work. There are thousands of people in Newfoundland who have records of the early days of our country, and their own towns in particular, who would confer an everlasting favor upon those who come after them, if they would send ahead of those records or write out the local traditions of the places, so that the Historical Society could compile a history of our country that would be worthy of being transmitted to posterity. I understand that some hundreds of teachers from all parts of the Colony will meet in St. John's during next summer, and the opportunity should be availed of by the Inspectors to request them to do all in their power to procure such reliable information as I have mentioned above, so as to enable the Historical Society to perform their part of the work, which has been carried out in every other country on the face of the Globe with a success that reflects honor on each country and its people. We have a glorious history, a noble race of heroes and a country second to none, and every year is adding to our glory; as witness the part our heroes took in the Great War both on sea and land. I feel certain that the Inspectors have only to bring the matter under the notice of the teachers, and they, one and all, will readily assist the Historical Society in their laudable undertaking of transmitting to those who come after us a history of our country and our people, worthy of the daring, hardships and achievements of our countrymen in every town and village in the Colony.

Literary Assistance Needed. With regard to the Library that the Historical Society purposes to procure, I may say that we permitted many opportunities to pass by where-in we could have secured many invaluable books bearing upon the history of Newfoundland. At intervals, for many years past, after the death of several of our prominent people, many of these books were put at public auction, whilst many others have been scattered about, and I am sorry to say no use has been made of them. The Historical Society can do much if they be assisted by the people of our Colony who have these books, documents, etc., and which have remained in neglect and disuse for many years. The authorities should assist the Society, because after all, it is for the benefit of the country and future generations that they have formed up to perpetuate the real history, traditions and landmarks of our Colony. It is true that Lord Morris was quite willing to do all in his power to forward the work of the Society, and so was Judge Kent when he was Attorney General, but the Great War coming on the Society broke down almost completely, and nothing was done until three months ago, when it was reorganized and is now more firmly established than ever. Canon Smith is right—we cannot take another "spell," but must work overtime to leave something reliable which will be of the greatest interest to those who come after us, and will give them the true history of our country and our people, which will forever perpetuate the memory of the grand old race, either English, Irish or Scotch, from which we sprung. I shall come back to this matter in a subsequent letter; at present I must continue with Mr. Kelson's interesting epistles, and at the same time make an explanation to the readers of the Telegram, viz. when I received the first instalment of letters which concluded with Article 9, I had not received the present instalment, which is dated 1914, (the former being 1913) and they do not follow in chronological order. However this does not matter much, and I am sure that the present instalment will be perused with even more interest than the previous one of 1913. And now for Mr. Kelson's letters.

Going Back a Year.

Trinity, Feb. 18th, 1914. Mr. Robert Slade. Sir—A young man of the House of Atwood & Haynes, of St. John's, being here on his way from the northward to St. John's overland, I avail myself of the opportunity (although it is not likely he will reach that place before the Spring) of just informing you that all is well with us here.

I have nearly the whole of the Swallow and Mary's crews engaged for the Ice, and as Seal Oil has lately been so much demanded I shall forego the advantage of the Cosmopolite's remaining at home to cruise and shall send her also if I can get her a master and crew.

The Swallow will be launched the first favourable opportunity of tide and clear water.

My last letter (copy of which I do not send by this opportunity it being so uncertain) was No. 22 per Amy, Capt. Bloomfield, which I hope you have received. As yet nothing has been done in the seal fishery in this neighbourhood. We heard the beginning of this month, overland from St. John's, of the great success of the Albatross in Germany, of Lord Wellington's being in Bordeaux, of the Dutch having risen and that the Scheidt Fleet had joined the British Flag. I hope it may be true. I fear all our fish went off too early to market, and I now wish I had sent the Gannet to Poole instead of Lisbon. I should have done so but was afraid of the insurance in case of accident. In hopes of seeing a vessel from you early and of being able to get out a third schooner to the Ice, I remain, sir,

Your humble servant, WM. KELSON.

P.S.—Messrs. Slat and Reid lost a schooner late last Fall on her return from St. John's, which is the 4TH they have lost since I have been in Trinity.

The Sealing Fleet.

Trinity, April 20th, 1914. Mr. Robert Slade. Sir,—In expectation of an opportunity for St. John's shortly I now prepare to inform you of what has occurred since the date of the enclosed copy of No. 1. The Swallow was safely launched on the 17th February, without the least accident, and a beautiful little craft she is. She sailed with 16 hands (Spencer master) for the ice on the 20th March. The Mary was the first out the Harbor. She left us on the morning of the 22nd March with 16 hands, Dwyer, master, and Mr. Garland's Active sailed not till late in the evening of the same day. Slat & Reid's schooner, the Sisters, did not get ready till the 17th March, and your Cosmopolite followed with 15 hands on the 19th, as did also Crocker's schooner, making in the whole out of Trinity six schooners, three of which are yours. I am extremely anxious to hear of the arrival home and (by way of our last three vessels and in hopes I shall receive shortly such an account of one of them and before our stock of provisions is exhausted remain, sir,

Your humble servant, WM. KELSON.

P.S.—A pedler's schooner from St. John's was into Bonaventure buying ice since our ice has been used which makes the Planters very saucy. Should you send a larger vessel than the Alpha to take the old fish, I do not think we could get sufficient to load her without going to an enormous price, perhaps more than 35s. per qt., and perhaps not even then. Mr. Durrell I know has offered 32s.

Too Much Entertainment.

Trinity, April 25th, 1914. Mr. Robert Slade. Sir—Having had no chance of forwarding the above since that date, I have now to add by way of our last schooner, which I understand is going off for St. John's immediately) that the Swallow and Mr. Garland's Active came in from the ice on the 22nd inst., the former without damage, and with only 419 seals, say 402 young, 13 bedlamers and 4 hoods; the latter with the loss of bowsprit and rudder, but seals 1,180 chiefly young. The Swallow sailed again on the 23rd, and I hope on a more successful trip. Mr. Garland's schooner is repaired and goes off again this day. The other schooners we have no account of as yet. We have had no other arrivals since. Mr. Fackett is this day selling provisions to the Planters by auction, and offers 33s. per qt. for merchantable fish and for inferior in proportion. It is the young lot for the stores I asked for in Nov. 3 and 19, last year, is not now on his passage, I would advise you to send him by the next opportunity, as I don't expect to be able to prevail on one or two of those I now have to remain with me longer than the close of the books or the expiration of their agreements. My neighbour, Mr. D., is so extremely polite and good-natured to our clerks, so frequently entertaining them with a dinner at his company and encouraging them to be with his own officers at every opportunity, that I strongly suspect he has a regular plan laid for procuring to undermine us in a vital part, well knowing that no business of the kind can be carried on to any extent without such persons, and I am really of opinion from subsequent circumstances that Colonel was influenced in his conduct last year by something of this kind. However, may be wrong. I think it best to be on our guard. In hopes of soon seeing a vessel from you with supplies and youngsters. I remain, sir,

Your humble servant, WM. KELSON.

A Clean Sweep.

Trinity, May 16th, 1914. Mr. Robert Slade. Sir,—I am sorry that I have now to inform you of the poor success of your schooners at the ice. The Swallow and Mary are knocked off and are now up the Sound for Roomstun, etc. The Cosmopolite and Crocker's schooner we have not yet any account of. For further particulars concerning them, I beg to refer you to the sketch at foot. Although I can accuse the masters with negligence or a want of exertion, still I do not altogether approve of their conduct. I think there must be a want of judgment, if not a deficiency of courage and resolution, and Spencer, I am sorry to say, I shall never think of sending out again.

Sample Box Brings Great Results

Chronic Sufferers Find Relief

Chronic sufferers from Backache, Gravel, Stone in the Bladder or any other form of Kidney trouble are generally willing to try any remedy once. The excruciating pain caused by Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Inflammation of the Bladder or some other form of Kidney trouble, is so great, that persons afflicted are often driven to expending large sums of money in an endeavor to find relief at any cost.

This is proven by the testimony of hundreds of people who have written us letters stating "that having failed to find relief after years of trying, they turned to GIN PILLS as a last resort—and a sample box of these pills soon convinced them that GIN PILLS was the remedy they needed."

That is all we ask you to do. Try a box of GIN PILLS at our expense, and if they fail to bring you the relief you have brought to hundreds of others with similar Kidney derangements, it costs you nothing.

Mrs. Dechene writes: "I tried a sample box of GIN PILLS, and they have done me a lot of good. I can congratulate myself on having them, and I will never be without them in my home."

This testimony from a woman who was skeptical about buying GIN PILLS should convince you that a sample box is well worth writing for. Do it today. In the Kitchen A great help in Cooking

One of the most remarkable features of OXO CUBES is the economy they effect in cooking. They are an excellent substitute for meat in soups and savouries. They prevent waste and ediments can be served in many appetizing ways by their use.

Then contrast the old-fashioned cumbersome way of cooking with the quick, convenient OXO CUBE way. Think of the time saved—the material saved—the fuel saved—and then reckon up that in dollars and cents. But that is not all, OXO increases nutrition—it makes every dish more palatable and digestible.

FROM MY SCRAP-BOOK.

BY THE CUB-EDITOR.

PAPER.

We do not realize what an inestimable boon paper has been to civilization. Many of our most-used conveniences would be, without paper, extremely difficult to possess, if not absolutely beyond attainment. Take the newspaper: without paper, try to imagine how it would be; imagine the newsboys with big slabs of stone on their backs, yelling: Evening Telegram; Saturday Special; weekly Telegram; From My Scrap-Book." Try to picture people handing out a cent for twelve thick slabs of rock. Think of the disadvantage of carrying them home in the street-car. And wouldn't it be humorous to strike one's elbow against the corner or edge of a man's newspaper, as he sat engrossed in the contents, or—who knows?—carefully digesting the gems of thought that fall from our typewriter? And what about the people who read the paper at tea time or in bed?

There is an even more serious aspect to this matter: How about love letters? Instead of whipping out a fountain pen and tearing a leaf from his note book, the swain would be forced to carry a chisel and hammer with him, and then would have to hunt around for a flat stone on which to "write" his words of "sweet nothing." And how would shorthand writers get along? What about bank notes; café serviettes; and German bandages? But all this is getting too strong for us, so we bring the hypothesis to an untimely end.

A SPECIAL CONSTABLE'S PRIVILEGE.

A slimy-built special constable on the top of a tramcar was requested by the conductor to come down to deal with a man who was inclined to be abusive. Reluctantly the special constable complied with the request, but found himself confronted by a huge navy. "There he is!" said the conductor. "He won't pay his fare." The special constable reflected, and then said, "Well, I suppose I must pay it for him!"

THE SUN'S HEAT.

The heat received from the sun would melt a shell of ice, forty-six feet in thickness, enveloping the whole globe, supposing this heat to be equally distributed over the earth's surface; and it is calculated that the heat which reaches the surface from the interior would melt a similar shell a quarter of an inch in thickness.

In fact, we always keep the words, written in our note book, on our person, so that, whenever some ignorant swine—beg your pardon, we almost got angry then—calls us a fool, we may scan the quotation for encouragement and inspiration. To this truism we owe our phenomenal success.—C.E.)

The Maid!

"Halloo, Tims!" said Jones. "I saw your wife this morning. By Jove! that new coat of hers must have cost a pot of money. You're doing specially well at present."

"No, not exactly," replied Tims, moodily. "Fact is, she got it by accident."

"By accident?" exclaimed Jones. "How was that?"

"Well, old fellow, it was this way. I got home rather late the other night. The hall was very dark, but I could just distinguish a figure standing by the chair. I slipped up to her, put my arm around her waist and

"Mary, give me a kiss."

"But—but," stammered Jones. "I thought your wife's name was Kate!"

"It is," murmured Tims; "that's how she got the coat."

Answers to Correspondents.

In kissing a girl last night, I inadvertently swallowed a beauty spot on her cheek. Do you think this will cause any physical disturbance?

Lover. Frankly, lover we think you are mistaken. Probably, under love's potent charm, it was "a spot on the crackle" you swallowed, not a beauty spot.

again. Indeed, if possible, I shall send next Spring all new masters, if you will still continue the ice fishery. I don't mean by new masters men who have not before taken charge of fish-hunters. I am already certain of one good one, the best of Mr. Garland's. I wish I could say a vessel is arrived. I had more reason to expect one early this year than ever I had before, but it is no use to grumble, and we are not worse off than our neighbors in that respect. We are short of many things besides provisions it is true, and Mr. Garland's House, I believe, is not overstocked with anything but bread and flour. They have lately been busily employed hawking it about like peddlers from cove to cove at from 45¢ to 46¢ per cwt, particularly forcing it on dealers and picking up all the fish they can at 36¢ per qt. I never was so long before without hearing from you, your last letter being dated the 25th Sept. 1913, but I am extremely glad to learn that all your vessels last Fall reached their intended ports. I shall soon be obliged to apply to John's provisions if the vessels still keep off. I can't think what may be the reason for their being so late, as the ice does not seem to be the cause; 49¢ per qt. for merchantable fish was the last price quoted from St. John's and servants' wages excessively high. In hopes of having it in my power ere long to write you something more pleasing, I remain, Sir,
Your humble servant,
WM. KELSON.

News of Bonaparte.

Trinity, May 17, 1814.
Sir.—I have this moment received a few lines hastily written from Messrs. Hart & Robinson, dated St. John's, 15th inst., stating that Bonaparte is driven from the Government of France, that the Bourbon family are reinstated, and that a free communication with that country is once more established. I hope it may be true. The Italian ports, I wish they all were in great demand. I fear the price of it in this country will be far beyond the bounds of reason. The Rolls, belonging to Bedford & Co. was seen on the 14th inst. not far from St. John's engaging an American privateer, which latter vessel is said to have destroyed several ice-hunters lately. I hear 38¢ has been offered here this day for fish. I wish the Cosmopolite was come in. Fine winds, but no sign of any vessel yet. I remain, Sir,
Your humble servant,
WM. KELSON.

A Hawk in the Coop.

Trinity, May 18, 1814.
Mr. Robert Slade,
Sir.—I with great pleasure read open my letter to inform you that the Cosmopolite is returned with the loss of her rudder only, and about 740 seals on board, and although the schooners have returned with the seals still consider ourselves very fortunate, as we have just received confirmation of the account before stated of many ice-hunters having been destroyed by Americans. Amongst the number is Crocker's schooner of this place, and which schooner was a great part of the Swift. The ship John's about the 14th inst. I fear I shall not be able to make our provisions hold out till the Alpha comes. I remain, Sir,
Your humble servant,
WM. KELSON.

One Bit of Luck.

Trinity, 25th May, 1814.
Mr. Robert Slade,
Sir.—Since my last I have received a copy of your letter, in which you appear to be word for word the same as No. 3, so that it was your mistake in numbering it that caused me to acknowledge the receipt of a wrong letter. The Triplicate, marked No. 3, came by the Hope, and the copy marked No. 1, by the Swift. Sir John's about a week ago, and sorry I am that the Alpha has not arrived with the original, but there is still some hope as the ship Brothers, which sailed with the same convoy as the Alpha, did not come in here till yesterday. The captain of the Brothers states that he had not seen anything of her for nearly a month past, and I learn from St. John's that two vessels (if not quite) had arrived there 3 days ago. We have had fine winds lately which makes the chances for her safe arrival here appear rather against her. However, I am happy in having it in my power to advise you of one lucky circumstance, which is the safe arrival of your ship George from Liverpool. It is a pity she had not a more general assortment. Nothing but coals, salt, butter, pork and bread. We shall find much the want of flour, cheese, iron pots, earthenware, pitch, tar and youngsters which latter Capt. Grossard says he could have obtained at 23¢ each for two summers and winter (moderate as time go here), but that your limit was £18. As you have written positively respecting the George's going home with the old fish, oil and skins without any proviso or reference as to the quantity of the latter, caught and collected, I shall of course ship it on her for Poole, as soon as it is ready, although owing to the ill-luck of the sealers, the whole will not be much more than sufficient to ballast her. We shall have to put on board her about 1,400 qts. merchantable fish, 20 tons seal oil (nearly all melt), and as there will be no time to make up of a ton of, 6 or 7 tons blubber, 1,500 seal skins, and perhaps 200 bundles hoops (staves there are none to be got), a few spars and longer. you observe it certainly will be desirable to have a vessel to bring out supplies at midsummer and particularly if the Alpha miscarries, otherwise I should think it much the best plan to send the fish by her (should she arrive) direct to market (the prospect of a good price being so flattering by the last accounts from Hart & Robinson, dated St. John's, England in time to bring out a mid-summer supply, but as you are of a different opinion I shall, of course, act vigorously to your instructions in No. 2. With best endeavours for your interests, and a sincere wish for the arrival of the Alpha, I remain, Sir,
Your humble servant,
WM. KELSON.

Note.—The Trinity fleet of six schooners that year (1814) only secured 5,033 seals in two trips each. Mr. Slade's three having brought in only 1,723. In looking over goods ordered I notice 20 mackerel nets. These valuable fish were very plentiful along our shores in 1814 and up to 1830 and later. The farmers used them for manure and they were not looked upon as an article of commerce. I have often heard it said the mackerel were cursed off our shores.—(H. F. S.)

Cleanses Your Hair Makes It Beautiful. Thick, Glossy, Wavy.

Try this! All dandruff disappears and Hair stays coming out.

Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will spend a few cents for a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

Died at Lynn, Mass.

Mr. Jeremiah Kidney, of this city, received a message from his sister, Mrs. M. Cole, of Lynn, Mass., on Thursday, acquainting him of the death of his brother Daniel, who had passed away on that date after a brief illness. Deceased, who had reached his 55th year, left here about 29 years ago for the United States, and since only made one brief visit to his native town, about 25 years ago. Mr. Kidney was very prominent in athletic circles before leaving here, and was an active member of the Boston-Newfoundlanders' Association for many years.

NURSERY HYGIENE.

The nursery is the most important room in the house; therefore its hygiene must be above suspicion. S. S. Eskason: (c) if the said S. S. Eskason is to-day the property of the Government, if not, who her present owners are and the price paid for her purchase into Newfoundland.

(8)—To ask the Hon. Minister of Shipping to lay on the table of the House a detailed statement of the receipts and expenditures of his Department from the commencement of that office to date.

The bill to prevent the introduction of Rabbits into Newfoundland passed its third reading, and was sent to the Legislative Council.

The House then went into Committee on Supply, Mr. Goodison in the Chair.

In opening the debate for the Opposition, Mr. J. S. Currie (Burrin), Leader, made some criticisms on the several votes they were asked to pass. The estimates for last year were $1,600,000 lower than those they were now asked to vote upon, and he could not help asking the question, where we, as a country, stood? Only eight years ago the budget was less than half of what it is to-day. We are now asked to vote about seven million dollars for supply, and he predicted that, before the year had ended, nearer eight millions would have been spent.

For the Auditor General reports that on the 28th of February this year all money voted last session had been expended, and in a few days the House would have to vote considerably over a million dollars to Supplemental Supply to cover the amount that had been expended on Executive responsibility. A policy of economy was needed. The Finance Minister last year had said so, and the Auditor General had pointed it out. The vote for Soldiers' Pensions would have his hearty support, and his only regret was that it would not be greater.

There were some items to which he could not give support. The Government had gone along the line of "to him that hath shall be given," and the greatest increases were to some of the largest salaried officials. The argument that, because Judges in other countries received more salary than those in Newfoundland, an increase should be granted them, was insufficient reason. This is a small country and cannot afford the salaries paid elsewhere.

The advances of $2,000 were out of all reason. Then there was the salary of the Judge of the Central Court. Last year it was increased from $2,400 to $3,600 and it was now increased another 15 per cent., or to $4,140 a year. The Government Engineer, who last year had a nice sum of $700 added to his salary, was to have another $600 added, making his salary $4,800 per year. The High Commissioner's Secretary at London also had the nice fat salary of $3,500 a year, or higher than that paid the Premier, and fifty per cent. higher than those of the Colonial Secretary or other departmental heads.

The Bay steamship service was then dealt with, and he showed where an increased subsidy would be paid the Reid Co. for the North Devon route, and it was not the Government's place to suggest it. He justified the increases to the Judges and the Government Engineer by explaining the superior work they were called upon to do. In speaking of economy he said the Auditor-General talked of it, but he himself was asking for an increase and got it, too. He was expecting the departments of Shipping and Militia to go out of existence soon, therefore the need of placing their votes in the estimates was not apparent.

Mr. Moulton thought that as all Civil Servants had been given an increase, that the Pensioners should be given the same consideration, and asked the Government to give these poor men some favorable consideration, as they were a deserving class of retired civil servants.

Mr. Currie replying to the Minister of Finance said that he had been somewhat misrepresented by the Minister. He was advising the Minister to be cautious in expenditure of money, and quoted the report of the Marine and Fisheries Minister to the effect that our prosperity was exceptional, and that a year of bad fisheries and bad prices would have a bad effect on the country. He pointed out to the Minister the absurdity of some of the votes, and quoting that for legislation predicted a large overdraft, because it was absolutely inadequate. He asked the Minister how he could justify the payment of seasonal pay last year to the Hon. S. D. Blandford, which he replied they would have taken it if it had been necessary to carry on the war. In regard to the Civil Servants, he said he heard no complaints from them about the increase being insufficient. He justified the increase in the Reid subsidies by contrasting the increased cost of running steamers.

Mr. Currie—if the cost of running steamers had gone down, would the Reid Company be satisfied for the Government to reduce their subsidy accordingly?

Mr. Cashin—That is another matter.

Mr. Currie—The principle is just the same. Bowings had not received any increased subsidy.

The Minister replied that they had made no application for any increase, and it was not the Government's place to suggest it. He justified the increases to the Judges and the Government Engineer by explaining the superior work they were called upon to do.

In speaking of economy he said the Auditor-General talked of it, but he himself was asking for an increase and got it, too. He was expecting the departments of Shipping and Militia to go out of existence soon, therefore the need of placing their votes in the estimates was not apparent.

He was advising the Minister to be cautious in expenditure of money, and quoted the report of the Marine and Fisheries Minister to the effect that our prosperity was exceptional, and that a year of bad fisheries and bad prices would have a bad effect on the country. He pointed out to the Minister the absurdity of some of the votes, and quoting that for legislation predicted a large overdraft, because it was absolutely inadequate. He asked the Minister how he could justify the payment of seasonal pay last year to the Hon. S. D. Blandford, too great. The Pension Board salaries, amounting to $14,710.00, he thought somewhat high, especially when the chairman pulled down $3,400.00 of this—and asked if there were no Cartys or Marchs or any others of the men who went across to fight, capable of filling this position.

An officer of the Regiment should have been given the position and not the present holder. Men who were thought worthy to fight, and who brought distinction and honour to our country, should be good enough to fill the position. As for Capt. Parsons, he had offered his all to his country and was the right man, and nothing was too much for him. He deplored the increases to the four Judges, amounting to $6,540.00 per year, and until some 251 old worn-out fishermen who were applicants from all over the country for the old age pension, were given the consideration they deserved, he for one would utter a strong protest, and would vote against the above increase for only four men, as he thought it was very unjust dealing. If the Government cannot see their way clear to give to the 251 fishermen the sum of $50.00 per year, then he would like to know how they could justify the voting of $6,540.00 to four people.

Mr. Cashin—We know all about that. Some of these men have bank accounts.

Mr. Walsh—They are not in my district, but I know some people also who have very large bank accounts and who did not earn it like the 251 fishermen who are asking for the pension, and some of the big men who are getting their salaries increased also have bank accounts. He thought that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries should be a member of the Executive and be able to fight for the rights of the fishermen on the Executive Board. He noticed that ten new lighthouses were to be built, and asked that his district be given consideration, and instanced Point Le Haye in St. Mary's Bay. Mr. Walsh then made a particularly strong plea for the consideration of his district by the Government, and told of the needs of roads and bridges, ferries, etc. The grants were altogether inadequate for the needs. Western Rd. had only $50.00 allotted to it, although it was 300 miles long. He had made strong recommendations to the Government during the past two years, but they were all turned down cold. It was all to no purpose for him to talk about his district to the Public Works Department, as his requests were completely ignored. He read a letter to the House that he had received from Rev. Mr. Brett and others of Sound Island, telling of conditions there, and asked that the needs of these people be given some consideration. He also pleaded for coastal boat service between Trepassay and Placentia, and gave notice that as long as he had a seat in the House he would fight for the needs of his constituents whether it was displeasing to the Government or not. He supported the votes for soldiers' pensions and asked that full justice be done the boys who had fought and suffered for us, and that no such thing as discrimination be practised by anyone who had anything to do with pensions, but that every part of the country and every man's son be given the same consideration.

Votes for Civil Government, Pensions, Administration of Justice, and Legislation were then passed, after which the Committee rose, and will sit again on Monday.

On a motion to adjourn, Mr. Jennings gave some explanation re a question asked by Mr. Walsh earlier in the day about his (Mr. Jennings) salary as herring inspector, and appeared quite offended over the matter, but was told by Mr. Walsh that he had nothing personal against the hon. member, and that the information sought after was legitimate information for the country, and also reminded him that when on the Opposition side of the House no one objected to Mr. Jennings or the other members asking questions, and he did not see why he should object now that he was enjoying the luxuries of the Government.

Mr. Piccott dealt with a personal matter, after which the House adjourned until 3 o'clock on Monday.

When you want Sausages, why—get ELLIS'; they're the best.

IMPROVEMENT—Messrs. Bowring Bros. are now establishing a telephone exchange between their Water Street and coastal offices.

Make your Motoring season an enjoyable one by owning the Car that all other motorists look upon with envy—the Buick Six is the most envied car in St. John's.

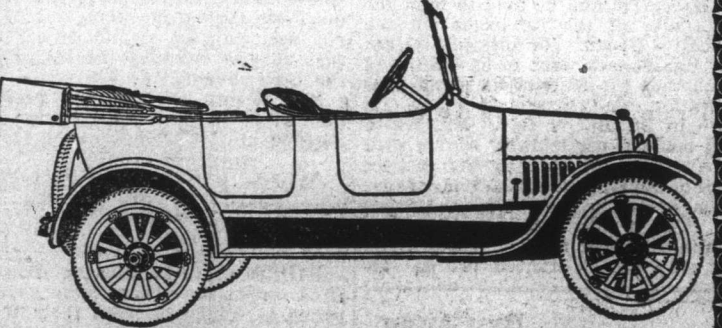

The Buick is always ready to take you anywhere you desire to go—it never falters.

When you press the starting pedal of the Buick, you are assured immediate response—the Delco starter is always on the job to turn over your engine every time you require it.

Buick Cars are luxuriously equipped, and upholstered in genuine black leather—no imitation. Strength of construction is an inherent quality of all Buicks. With the new Sixty Horsepower Valve in Head engine sixty miles an hour is easily accomplished, besides hills are made short work of.

A new and valuable feature is the entirely enclosed valves and engine, thus keeping out all grit and dust and giving longer life to the car, consequently the Engine is noiseless.

We shall be happy to let you look over our 1919 Buick Six which recently arrived—you will be convinced why it is the most envied car once you have examined it.
