"The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Entering her boudoir a few minutes later, the sight of the pretty dainty room recalled to her so vividly the scene which had taken place there a few weeks previously that she was almost overpowered. It was the first time since that night that she had entered it, and she turned faint as the remembrance flashed across her mind. It seemed to her excited fancy that the room was suddenly peopled again as it had been then—that Frank, in his strange disguise, was standing by the fire, his sister lying back pale and trembling in her seat; she even fancied that she saw herself in her long velvet gown, clinging to the heavy portiere for support.

The impression was so vivid that she paused, trembling, and covering her eyes with her hands in absolute terror; then, as it passed away, she went forward slowly and sank down in a low chair by the fire. What a strange eventful time the last few weeks had been, she thought wearily, so full of trouble, of excitement and pain! One by one they came before her, all clear and distinct, save those few when she had been so unconscious of all suffering and trouble in her fever and delirium—that day when she had tried to run away, when she had met Stephen at Ling Station, and he had frustrated her design, and the journey to Brighton, and the weary existence there, so full of dread, so restless, so full of ceaseless anxiety; that fateful evening when Lloyd Milner had read the extract from "Our Mutual Friend," and she saw the pain on Stephen's face as he listened, and heard the tone of his voice when he said that the love which could survive the knowledge of guilt must be "love indeed." Ah, would he remember that now, she wondered wistfully—would he let that plead for her? Would he forgive her for doubting him? If he knew that, even while she deemed him guilty, she loved him with all her heart?

Ah, how could she ever have doubted him? She must have been mad indeed to think even for one brief moment of time that he could be guilty of such a crime and of such dastardly cowardice! Could he ever forgive it? Oh, it was impossible. Nothing could excuse her doubts. She had sinned beyond forgiveness against the husband who had been so good to her. For

"KEEPS YOU GOING"

"Mr. Daunt has not yet returned," she said, trying to speak calmly.

"No, ma'am."

"Have the evening papers come?"

"No, ma'am," the man said, stammering a little and looking rather confused.

"Bring them to me," Sidney ordered quietly, subduing all signs of agitation; and the man disappeared rather more quickly than usual, as if he were relieved to be let off without questioning.

Sidney waited with outward quietness now, but with inward anxiety and trembling. Something had happened, she had no doubt any longer—no doubt—only certainty—something which concerned her so palpably that even the household knew of it, had read it perhaps in the evening papers. While as death and motionless as a statue, she waited until the footman returned, and with a slight gesture she motioned to him to put the newspapers on the table, giving no sign of impatience as she did so; but hardly had he left the room when she had sprung forward, snatched up the newspaper with trembling hands, and was searching its columns with eager piercing eyes quickened by anxiety and fear.

There was no need of much searching. The eager feverish eyes had gone down one page and had just begun to peruse another, when they caught sight of what they wanted to see, and a deadly faintness crept over her, her knees trembled, and she staggered as she stood. The wax-lights burning softly in the Dresden china scones were suddenly multiplied indefinitely, the pretty painted ceiling was coming down upon her—was she going to faint, to fall down in a swoon, and let the household find her, and make their comments and guess and explain the cause of it? No, no, a hundred times no—she would not faint—and she tottered across the room, holding on to the furniture as she passed, until she reached the window; and then, with trembling, almost helpless hands, she tore aside the curtains and nervously groped at the fastener until she opened the window, letting in a rush of keen fresh air, and then she fell, her arms thrown out upon the sill, her white face turned toward the winter night, half unconscious, yet with no cessation of the keenness of her suffering; her bodily weakness had no narcotic to dull the dread sharpness of her pain.

"How she would hate me if she knew!" thought Sidney sorrowfully, folding up the letter with trembling fingers and looking into the fire with dry aching eyes, which seemed as if they had no more tears to shed.

Noon passed; Sidney made a faint effort to get up, and then went back to her boudoir, waiting with ever-increasing anxiety for Stephen's return.

The day wore on; the sun sunk to rest amid a glory of purple and crimson and gold; the short twilight came to an end, and evening set in; but Stephen had not yet returned. Sidney's anxiety had risen to fever-heat. She could not sit still; weak as she was, she paced up and down the room restlessly and incessantly, dreading, fearing, she knew not what.

Stephen did not come! What had happened? What terrible thing had come to him? Had he been arrested? Had they taken him to prison? Ah, surely, if nothing terrible had come to him, he would have been home ere now! He would have known how anxious she was, he would have spared her these long hours, he would have come home!

At last she could bear the solitude and suspense no longer. She rang the bell, and waited impatiently for the appearance of the servant who answered it.

TO DONALD BOSS.

(On receiving a picture of this famous golf architect studying a six-foot putt.)

Brave Donald, in your suit of brown,
I see you studying your putt
And well I know you'll run it down;
It is a splendid picture, but
For all the woes you've worked for me,
Deep in a bunker you should be.
I smile to see your kindly eye,
'Tis good to see your figure fair,
Six feet away, I'll say you lie,
And know your second putt you there;
They took your picture on the green—
A put had made a merrier scene.
I should have laughed to see you caught,
Your niblick tightly clutched in hand,
Standing where I so oft have fought,
To battle with the stubborn sand;
It would have pleased me more to see
Your ball where mine so oft must be.

Yet, Donald, if perchance the day
Shall come to me when I can brag,
That I, like you, have learned to play,
My second shots up to the flag;
If I reach any green in two,
I'll have my picture made for you.

Denmark's Trade

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 24. (C.P.)—The following statement on economic conditions in Denmark during September, 1925, is furnished by the Danish Consul-General for Canada:—

Following the sharp and sudden rise in the value of the Danish Krone during August and September, the rate of exchange has during October been rather steady and appears to have settled round 25. The Danish trade balance is continually good, the "lower" prices both on the markets of the world and in the Danish market being evident through the decline in the total value of imports as well as of exports.

Exports of agriculture products from Denmark during the month of September was slightly smaller than during August, and prices obtained were considerably lower than during August.

During September the weekly export from Denmark of agricultural products averaged as follows:—Butter, 2,283 tons; Eggs, 1,560,600 dozen; Bacon and live hogs, 3,387 tons (increase over August), and live cattle and meat, 658 tons.

"Steve" Donoghue

LIBEL SEQUEL TO PAPYRUS-ZEV MATCH

A settlement was announced in an action for damages for libel arising out of Steve Donoghue's riding of Papyrus in the race with Zev in America. The action was brought by the jockey against the New York Herald Company, and another.

Mr. H. M. Given, for Mr. Donoghue, explained that the issue of the New York Herald of February 16 last contained a suggestion that Donoghue did not do his best when riding Papyrus against Zev.

The company had now apologized, paid a substantial sum to Mr. Donoghue by way of damages, and a sufficient sum to cover his costs.

Mr. Wilfred Lewis, for the defence, said that his clients desired to let the whole world know that they did not intend to cast any reflection on the jockey.

Mr. Justice Avory said that the result would no doubt be as satisfactory to Mr. Donoghue as if the case had been tried by a jury and a verdict returned in his favour.

Queen's College Concert will prove a real treat for lovers of good music and singing, while those who enjoy wit and humour will laugh as they have never laughed before.—Nov. 21, 5.

VARIED READING.

When I wish for heavy learning, to inform my hollow dome, you may see me slowly turning pages of some heavy tome. Oft I read the mighty scholars who set down the pregnant facts; oft I blow in seven dollars for the Einstein brand of tracts. When I want no information I peruse the other kind; thus I get a balanced ration that improves my rusty mind. There are novels full of learning; these I neither wish nor read, when the evening lamp is burning and I sit me down to read. There are novels full of preaching, packed with lessons most sublime, but this sort I'm not beseeching when I'd have a pleasant time. I will seek the village parson when some precepts I desire; give me stories of disaster, action like a house afire. Give me tales of stirring knight, full of gunfire and of plot; discipline gained from high-brow fiction often turns out tummy-rot. People see me read romances which are full of bones and gore, and they say, "As age advances he should read some other lore. For it is a grievous blunder to abide in Inglenook, reading tales of blood and thunder, passing up the thoughtful books." But they do not know how often I peruse the heavy works, when my brain begins to soften, and my conscience goes by jerks. To the sages for instruction every now and then I run, and absorb, as though by suction, noble truths that weigh a ton. But I wish no information from the novels I peruse; yarns that furnish relaxation are the ones I gladly choose.

Household Notes.

Don't put soiled clothes in hot water. It sets the stains and makes them harder to get out. Good cooking will never be accomplished with inferior materials. Bathroom towels will last longer if bound around with strong straps. The metal top of an umbrella makes an excellent small funnel. Stockings will wear longer if they are washed after being on the feet twice.

Soft towels for face works best when from bird-eye cloth hemmed around.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save hundreds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap and is equal for prompt relief, takes right hold of a cough and immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours of use. Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from a druggist, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and add 12 grains granulated sugar to make 16 ounces. If you prefer, use 12 grains honey instead of sugar. It tastes good, keeps perfectly, lasts a family a long time. It's truly astonishing how penetrating it is, penetrating through every passage of the throat and loosens and soothes the phlegm, and helps the membranes, and kills but surely the annoying tickle and stings enough to drive out. Nothing better for children's spasmodic cough, hoarseness, and bronchitis.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of certain why pine extract, known as "Pine" over the healing effect of the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by getting your Pinex from a reliable source. Pinex with full directions and name of the dealer who has it promptly refunded.

You can fill a ponderous dictionary with the different combinations that can be made out of the 26 letters. You can fill a world out of the different combinations thus made.

Do You Recognize This Type?

Today's is the sketch of The Dominant—Kindly, Self-righteous Type. Do you know her?

She has a very high opinion of herself—and for the most part deserves it.

She is overflowing with the desire to help and does all sorts of things for those she loves.

She is very fond of gratitude, and a clever unscrupulous person who will hand out the gratitude can get a great deal out of her.

Unfortunately she has a correspondingly low opinion of most other people.

When She Is Selfish.

She is generous in everything except acknowledgment of anyone else's ability in her line.

She is usually a marvellous house-keeper.

The people who like her, like her very much and the people who dislike her dislike her accordingly.

She is exceedingly unselfish with most things but not with love. She is greedy for her share and more than her share of that.

She can never bear to admit that she's wrong, a common human quality, of course, but more pronounced in her.

She is very fond of her own way of doing things and very keen to make other people do things the same way. If you want to please her let her show you how to do something.

A Chance To Look Down.

You sometimes think she takes pleasure in having other people selfish because, if given a chance, to be selfish and to look down on others for being selfish.

She is so fond of giving that sometimes gives away things that do not belong to her—strength and energy. I mean that she really owes you daily duties.

She has no patience at all for the kind of sins and faults that all tempt her.

She will justify all sorts of things people she likes and find nothing reprehensible in those who have offended her.

Did you ever meet her?

Household Notes.

Don't put soiled clothes in hot water. It sets the stains and makes them harder to get out. Good cooking will never be accomplished with inferior materials. Bathroom towels will last longer if bound around with strong straps. The metal top of an umbrella makes an excellent small funnel. Stockings will wear longer if they are washed after being on the feet twice.

Soft towels for face works best when from bird-eye cloth hemmed around.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save hundreds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap and is equal for prompt relief, takes right hold of a cough and immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours of use. Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from a druggist, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and add 12 grains granulated sugar to make 16 ounces. If you prefer, use 12 grains honey instead of sugar. It tastes good, keeps perfectly, lasts a family a long time. It's truly astonishing how penetrating it is, penetrating through every passage of the throat and loosens and soothes the phlegm, and helps the membranes, and kills but surely the annoying tickle and stings enough to drive out. Nothing better for children's spasmodic cough, hoarseness, and bronchitis.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of certain why pine extract, known as "Pine" over the healing effect of the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by getting your Pinex from a reliable source. Pinex with full directions and name of the dealer who has it promptly refunded.

Last Performance Of "The Unwanted Child"

SEASON'S GREATEST BILL BY BALFOUR STOCK COMPANY. Acclaimed by all as the best play of the season is the Balfour Stock Co's production of "The Unwanted Child", which enjoyed such a phenomenal run at the Casino since Monday night. This bill is without doubt the strongest and most popular of the company's repertoire so far. Brimful of laughs and beautifully interspersed with thrills and heart-touching situations, this piece easily takes first place in stage productions. There is a beautiful plot and a most interesting story which is worked up brilliantly by a capable cast. Everybody plays well and the interpretation is all that an audience could wish for. Loreta Nicholson is most charming in the character of Justin Ditson, and her acting is a commendable piece of work. She does not merely act her part—she lives in every moment she is on the stage. Charles Hiser plays the popular role with much emphasis. J. E. Balfour gives a masterful performance of the aristocratic father. Billy Phillips again accepts the responsibility for the laugh situation and has very little trouble in putting them over in good style. He is assisted in this work by W. W. Hankins, who is in his usual form. Lillian Hampton and Marie Fischer play their respective roles brilliantly.

The vaudeville specialties between the acts by Messrs. Hankins, Phillips and McKenna were attractions in themselves. To-night is positively the last opportunity to witness this play. To-morrow's bill will be the funniest of all comedies, "Baby Mine." This is a play worth going miles to see, so you are advised to book early. Next Monday "Cappy Ricks" will be played. You know what to expect from a play of this sort taken from the most popular of the works of Peter B. Kyns. Kyns.

Ponzi to Carry Out Land Deals BOSTON, Nov. 19.—(U.P.)—Charles Ponzi to-day had the permission of Judge Sisk of Superior Court to continue the Florida land enterprises from which he hopes to make millions to reimburse those who lost in his "get-rich-quick" scheme of 1920.

Despite protestations of Assistant District Maurice Caro, who sought to have Ponzi's stay of sentence revoked, the court refused late yesterday to take the action which would send the "manacled" to prison to begin a seven to nine-year sentence as a notorious thief.

Judge Sisk decided that the matter was one of utmost importance to Ponzi and that Ponzi should be given ample time for filing his bill of exceptions.

Recovery of French Cotton Industry France's industrial consumption of raw cotton in 1924, according to figures compiled by the Exportateur Français and transmitted to the Bankers Trust Company of New York by its French Information Service, totaled 284,000,000 kilograms, the total importation aggregated 392,000,000 kilograms but of that 18,000,000 kilograms were exported. (The kilograms—2.204 lbs.).

The above figures show the recovery made by the French cotton industry after the heavy damage sustained during the war when factories were systematically damaged and destroyed by the invading armies. It has been estimated that from 1914 to 1918 more than 3,880,000 spindles and nearly 27,000 looms were destroyed. At the present time most of the damage has been repaired and the French cotton industry, Alsatian factories included, now numbers 16,840,000 spindles as well as 190,000 looms of which 8,000 only are hand-looms.

During the year 1924 the French cotton industry showed great activity, purchases of cotton thread being 4,223,000 kilograms and exports 16,029,000 kilograms. Purchases of cotton woven goods amounted to 2,871,000 kilograms and exports to 67,108,000 kilograms.

Star Movie To-Day

Peter Minuit, a wealthy young idler, longs for romance and adventure. He is bored by the dull routine of society life, the aimless amusements of his set. What he needs, he decides, is a definite purpose in life—something to live for, work for and be worthy of.

A newspaper headline, telling of a gang fight outside of Bud McGinnis' pool-room in Hell's Kitchen, arouses Peter's interest. In another column he finds details of the flight of notorious Gentleman George, a safe-blower, sought by the police of four states. It dawns on Peter that the island of Manhattan is fairly teeming with adventure and danger. He arrays himself in an old suit of clothes and starts cheerfully for Hell's Kitchen, determined to take a hand in anything that promises excitement. But everything is strangely still and orderly, and Peter, sadly disappointed, returns home.

Back in his own library Peter is about to open his well-saved when he hears the sharp command "hands up." He turns to face an automatic in the hands of a cool young gunman who answers to the name of Spike and belongs to Bud McGinnis' gang. Minuit gets a bright idea; he convinces Spike that he is none other than Gentleman George and suggests that they team up. Spike agrees and takes him back to Hell's Kitchen.

Peter persuades Mary and Spike to leave the old life in Hell's Kitchen and go with him. He takes Mary to his palatial Fifth Avenue house, but Spike is caught by McGinnis' gang and forced to reveal his sister's whereabouts. Bud orders his gunmen to shoot the young millionaire on sight.

Leaving off this, Harry slips away from the Minuit mansion and returns to Hell's Kitchen to sacrifice herself to McGinnis. Peter follows as quickly as he can, and takes Mary home to his Fifth Avenue mansion to begin life all over again.

London's Street Pageant

The first Lord Mayor's Show was held in 1215, and for more than 700 years Londoners have been treated to this remarkable street parade.

True there have been occasional breaks in the continuity of the pageant. During the Commonwealth, when the Puritans abolished even the May Day and Christmas festivities, there was, of course, no Lord Mayor's Show. Nor was it held in 1665 and 1666, the years of the Great Plague and Great Fire respectively.

Like most of our ancient institutions, this one has developed along quite informal lines. It originated in the custom which sprang up amongst the principal citizens and burgesses of escorting their new chief magistrate from the City to Whitehall, to be sworn in by the King and his judges.

Richly dressed and gorgeously mounted, they made up a most imposing cavalcade.

Later on, when the London trade guilds began to take part in it, they furnished cars emblematic of their callings. The Armourers, for instance, would send along one manned by "knights," steel-clad, and bearing swords and "maces."

Improvement in Trade The weather the past week was, on the whole, suitable for business, and as a consequence the store hands on Water Street had a very busy week, which was in direct contrast with the weather in October. Active trade in the fall months is largely a question of the weather. The better the weather the greater will be the volume of business done on Water Street. One business man informed the Trade Review that his store had had the best week since last May and most of the business done was city trade.

He says that the outport fishermen do not spend their fish money as freely as formerly. They are much more cautious, and, as a rule, will not buy on Saturday night. They wait the daylight to examine the goods. In the old days they spent the bulk of their money, but now most of them make an effort to put some in the Savings Bank. Besides they know that they can get certain things they may want at home, if they are stuck, and it was not like this in the old days when, if they failed to buy what they wanted in the fall, they would not get a chance again till the spring.

Now there is, moreover, the mail order service, daily and weekly, train and steamer service. The whole system has changed from a spring and fall trade only to a fair volume of trade all the year round.—Trade Review.

The Prevention of Pneumonia

A MATTER WORTHY OF CONSIDERATION IN "THE MORE DEADLY HALF OF THE YEAR."

"Pneumonia is the most deadly of all acute diseases; it is the type of those diseases of the respiratory organs which are the great cause of this country now that improved primary sanitation has brought the water-borne disease under control. It kills in England and Wales, between thirty and forty thousand persons every year—much the same number as that for which pulmonary tuberculosis is responsible," writes "Lens" in the New Statesman.

"That takes years to kill; pneumonia ten days or so. It kills at all ages, but is the enemy of the very young and the old; unless, indeed, we take the view of Sir William Osler that it is the old man's friend. When a man is really tired of life, he may indeed do worse than make an end, swiftly and with little pain, by means of this disease.

"As the colder, darker, dirtier and more deadly half of the year returns, we may properly consider this 'acute lobar pneumonia,' about which we know so much and so little, and which lies in wait, with its high case mortality, for so many of us.

"Forty years ago the bacteriology of the disease was worked out in the main respects. Today it is the easiest matter to find, in the 'rusty sputum' of pneumonia, the pneumococcus of Fraenkel, described by him and others during the years 1882-6. So much leaves for diagnosis.

"But forty years have brought us absolutely nothing, towards the cure or the prevention of pneumonia, from these bacteriological discoveries. When the crisis occurs, and, in favorable cases, the temperature drops, perhaps eight degrees or more in a few hours, we must believe that some process of immunity has succeeded; and we must hope that a chemical product should be obtainable, like the antitoxin which works such natural miracles in diphtheria. But we have none such.

"Of course, we have our orthodox armamentarium—antipyretics to bring down the high temperature by means evidently as different as can be from those which Nature employs at all the hypotics for sleep, cardiac stimulants to whip the sore-pressed heart; and also hot poultices and ice-bags to relieve the pain in the side, due to the associated pleurisy.

"And we have a fine system of examination, with percussion and auscultation, whereby we can ascertain how far the dullness extends, and which lobe of which lung is still unaffected. The verdict on all this may be taken from the greatest doctor of the age, a lifelong student of pneumonia, who knew more about it than anyone else. Osler wrote from the death-bed, where his old enemy, this very disease, was beating him at last, that 'all our bronchial therapy is futile.'

"In these days we are at least learning not to raise the death-rate by closing the windows, and doing all we can to reduce the supply of oxygen to the respiratory surfaces, already dangerously reduced by the solidification of so much of the lung. The antipyretics and sedatives, antifebrile and alcohol and so forth, are used with far less freedom. Windows are opened. Nature is given a chance. Fewer patients are killed by treatment; and that is all we can say.

"Such being the meagre record, surely a hearing should be gained for any suggestion towards the prevention of pneumonia—a phrase which, except from my own pen, I have nowhere seen. Do I, then, suggest that pneumonia is a preventable disease, as many of us have long asserted tuberculosis to be? Yes, indeed I do. I have no doubt that, if we chose, we could reduce the death rate from this disease almost out of recognition.

"Urban smoke is unquestionably a causal factor of pneumonia and of bronchitis. The relation has been known for many years. The Medical Officer of Health for Salford, in his latest report, published diagrams showing how the death-rate rises after fogs in that borough. The same has been repeatedly shown in London. Citizens who regard me as a fanatic may reflect, when next we have two or three days of fog, that many of themselves, just a fortnight later, will consequently breathe their last.

"In Pittsburg, four years ago, I was told that the pneumonia death-rate had been the highest in the world, the worst figures being recorded not in the coldest sections on the hillsides, but in the smokiest. In our country Middleborough claims pre-eminence in respect of pneumonia, as all who live or visit there may well believe.

"When we cease to burn our coal, we shall do more to lower the pneumonia death-rate than forty doctors put together. The elderly and affluent, of course, have long ago practised the prevention of pneumonia by repairing to the Riviera every winter. Give them a villa in Garavan from November to April and they are an unconscious time-servers, as many an expatriate heir can attest.

"Americans will make much further progress in the prevention of this

Miss Eleanor Mews in Song Recital in Costume

A large and appreciative audience attended the song recital in costume given last night by Miss Eleanor Mews L.T.C.M. at the Synod Hall.

For the opening Miss Mews gave six selections in German, these were songs of fifty years ago by Schumann, Wolf and Brahms. The next item—a "cello selection," "Romance Song Paroles," one of Mendelssohn's well known songs, was pleasing given by Mr. Alex W. Mews, accompanied by Mrs. Alex Mews at the piano. A spontaneous outburst of appreciation greeted the recitalist in her rendition of a group of children's songs which followed.

The selections were: (a), "The Second Minuet"; (b), "The Mocking Fairy"; (c), "The Chrysanthemum"; (d), "Ambition"; (e), "Three Little Fairy Songs"; "The Mocking Fairy," was enthusiastically received and the singer was compelled to respond to an encore. Mr. A. Mews gave two cello numbers, succeeded by three Sicilian selections which were sung by Miss Mews in the costume of Pietro a peasant boy who is imitated in his rendition of a Serenade to his lady, (b), "A Cradle Song which he often hears his mother sing; (c), A song sung by fishermen on the shores of the Adriatic as they engage in mending their nets.

A cello selection by Mr. Mews from Cavalleria Rusticana, was followed by an overture and Inter-mezzo after which was rendered a scene "Vol lo Sapete," in which by voice and dramatic action Miss Mews made intelligible to her audience a story in an unfamiliar tongue. The last part of the programme was a group of songs in English.

The selections were:— (a), "Silent Noon"—(Words by Dante Gabriel Rossetti); (b), "The Crying of Water"—(Words by Arthur Symonds); (c), "The Traction Engine"—(From "Nonsense Songs"); (d), "O Men from the Fields"—(Old Irish Cradle Song by Padraic Colum); (e), "The Letter"—(Words by Alfred Lord Tennyson).

During the evening, Miss Mews was the recipient of several handsome bouquets.
Mr. H. Gordon Christian, L.R.A.M., acted as accompanist for the soloist, and Mrs. Alex W. Mews as pianist accompanied her husband.

Pola Negri at Her Best in "Men"

HER LATEST SUCCESS NOW AT THE NICKEL.

Here's that different picture you've been waiting for. The new Paramount production, "Men," starring Pola Negri, at the Nickel Theatre, fulfils a long felt want and a promise about which we were beginning to feel just the least bit skeptical. For the longest time the producers have been promising us a picture in which Pola Negri would absolutely return to that kind of part for which her earlier productions made her famous—a role like that in "Passion." Well, they have made good! Pola comes into her own again in "Men."

"Men" is a great women's picture. They all want to see how she handles them, and judging from the turnout at the Nickel yesterday, everybody in the city must have taken the same notion at once. We don't have to add that they carried their hubbies along too. That's understood.

Here's a picture that has absolutely everything that could possibly be packed into the seven reels. From title to climax of lagging and without a scene forced for the sake of spectacle. But there is spectacle, and romance, and thrills and all the rest. If there has been a more entertaining picture shown at this theatre this season, we haven't seen it.

And the cast—it's typical of all Negri pictures—all-star from A to Z.

Edith Cavell Memorial

(Toronto, Nov. (By Canadian Press))
The corner-stone of the Edith Cavell Memorial Nurses' Residence, in connection with Western Hospital, was laid recently by Premier Ferguson. Separate rooms for 175 nurses are planned, each room with running water. A large gymnasium and a tiled roof garden are other features which take into account the fact attention must be paid nowadays to the needs of the nurse when on duty.

A tablet to commemorate the heroic nurse, Edith Cavell, will be placed in a prominent place in the residence and the one to Nursing Sister Davis, Western Hospital graduate, who died on war service.

"He Killed My Child"

Mother's Accusation in Daudet Case.

There was a dramatic scene in the Paris Assize Court during the case in which M. Leon Daudet, the Royalist leader, is sued for libel by a taxi-driver, who he accused of complicity in the death of his young son.

M. Daudet alleged that his son was done to death by a police inspector named M. Colombo in the back room of an Anarchist bookseller's shop. M. Colombo, in the witness-box, denied that he had anything to do with the death.

In leaving the box M. Colombo had to pass in front of Mrs. Daudet, who was sitting in the well of the court. As he passed her, Mme. Daudet jumped to her feet and screamed, "He killed my child!" A moment later she collapsed in a faint. Guards carried her to the judge's room amid a tumult, above which the powerful voice of M. Daudet could be heard shouting, "They killed the child; now they want to kill the mother!"

BRITAIN AT HEAD OF THE NATIONS.

Statisticians throughout the world are co-ordinating and preparing national records to obtain reliable comparisons of mortality at various ages. The material so far available shows definitely that persons born in Britain are living longer than the people of practically every other country, the difference being between two and three years for both men and women.

In 40 years, the death-rate in Britain has declined from 20.4 per 1,000 to 12.3 per 1,000, while the average for the 34 other principal countries is 16.6 per thousand.

Canada, South Africa, Australia, and New Zealand have shown lower figures than this country, but this is explained by the fact that the influx of young, new settlers is included. Denmark, along with Great Britain is its death-rate since 1919, but the margin is only two-fifths.

The average middle-aged person today has the prospect of five or six years more of life than his grandparents had.

The main test of international longevity is the figures of the expectation of life founded on a 10 years' survey in different countries, and here Britain has a distinct lead.

Life assurance companies in this country have found that, since 1893, they have been under-estimating the expectation of life of men by about three years and of women by four years.

Brain Work That Overtires

"The brain work that overtires and exhausts is that which accompanies care for the morrow, worry caused by the care to attain, or fear of failure, whether the matter at issue be one of industrial or commercial affairs in which the fortune is engaged, or one of an examination or competition on which the future depends," says Dr. Bernard Hollander, interviewed by the Morning Post, who goes on to assert:—

"By worrying we raise the blood pressure, and this hinders still further the proper working of the intellect, which is largely dependent on the maintenance of a well-balanced circulation through the brain.

"The care-free and the joyous are able to do a vast amount of brain work, experiencing but little mental fatigue, whereas the victims of worry and grief, and similar unhealthy mental states, find themselves on the verge of brain tag after engaging in the most ordinary of mental activities. Most of our worries are due to a lack of confidence in our own ability, to a sense of past failure, and future impotency. The best thing to do is to get up and do something, or get out and see something. A hobby is invaluable in securing a diversity of interests."

A Slight Blaze

The Central and West End Fire Companies were called out at 4.45 p.m. yesterday, to an alarm of fire on Monroe Street, where a blaze was in progress in the tenement house of Edward Manning and Albert Ryall. The fire was caused by soot igniting in the chimney, catching fire to some of the woodwork. The firemen brought the chemical into operation and extinguished the blaze before much damage had been done.

Just then a tap, tippy tap came at the front door. "Who's knocking, I wonder," thought dear Uncle Lucky. But before he could slip on his shoes, Little Miss Mousie had opened the door.

Right there on the doorstep stood Squirrel Nutcracker, a sack full of beechnuts over his shoulder. "I thought Mr. Lucky Lefthandfoot might like some nuts," said the little squirrel, politely, lifting his fur cap. "Come in. He's in the sitting room," answered Little Miss Mousie. So in trotted Squirrel Nutcracker to say howdy to the old gentleman rabbit.

"Ha, ha!" laughed Uncle Lucky, for he signed the poor Old Gentleman; "I thought for two or three long minutes that something had happened to Little Miss Mousie, and down in his big easy chair sank tired Uncle Lucky to fall asleep. He forgot all about his pinkie toe. Yes, he was ready to find his tiny housekeeper's that he just fell asleep. But, Oh me! He should have taken off those and slipped his tired feet into the old carpet slippers. But he didn't, and when he woke up, goodness how his sprained pinkie ached, his dearest me!" he sighed and "I wish Little Miss Mousie were here. She'd know what to do in less than one minute or maybe two."

"Here I am," cried a sweet voice, would you believe it? there she was in the doorway, her blue sunbonnet on the back of her bobbed hair, her blue eyes smiling like violets.

Another minute she had taken off those and slipped the aching foot into the comfortable carpet slipper, drawing up a low chair, she placed the dear old gentleman's upon it. "There, you'll feel better, sit there while I bring you a slice of Angel Cake and a cup of Turnip and off she scampered to the kitchen."

"Come in. He's in the sitting room," answered Little Miss Mousie, getting all about his aching toe. "So you brought me some nuts. That's very kind of you. I remember the last time I passed under your Chestnut Tree a dozen or more fell on my precious old wedding stovepipe hat."

"You were so nice about that," smiled Squirrel Nutcracker. "I've brought you a bagful to eat." Yes, Uncle Lucky was so kind and good that everybody loved him. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Prohibition turned St. Pierre and Miquelon to gold mines. They became the "popping off" places for French champagne, wines and liquors which eventually found their way into America.

The young Breton and Basque fisher boys no longer dream of owning a ten-foot boat or joining the sardine fleet or the whalers bound for Iceland. They now picture themselves owners of a whisky warehouse on St. Pierre or of a rum fleet out of Miquelon.

Statistics show that the islands last year imported nearly 6,000,000 bottles of champagne, fine wines and liquors from France, or about 1,000 bottles per head—if it stayed home. The French customs department's figures for 1924 for St. Pierre show the port received 34,828 cases of whiskey, 42,800 cases of champagne, 31,724 cases of vermouth and port, and 38,000 cases of rum.

Loan Embargo Removed

Statement by Mr. Churchill—Too Costly Coal Production.

Mr. Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, at Leeds, announced the immediate removal of the embargo on the issue of Dominion, Colonial, and foreign loans in the London Money market.

He defended the return to the gold standard. If this new Parliament, with its unexampled opportunity, with its render worthy service to the nation it must not be aiming at effects and headlines in the newspapers next day but at the results that would be effective two, three, or four years hence. Even if they looked at the result of the last few months they had much upon which to congratulate themselves.

Regarding criticism of the embargo on foreign and Dominion loans, he said they had to bear in mind not only the desirability of removing the embargo but also the possible effects on home industries of over-lending abroad and the consequent stringency of credit for domestic purposes which would ensue. Continuing, he said:

The time has now come when we can take a further step towards the establishment of complete freedom and normal conditions in the Money market. From this time forward no objections will be raised on general grounds by the responsible financial authorities to the issue of Dominion, Colonial, and foreign loans on the London Money market.

What has been known as the embargo will now be removed. The old and full freedom of the market will be restored.

The City of London must be responsible for using that freedom wisely and soberly. Over-lending—that is to say, lending beyond our strength, straining our future credit, lending beyond our savings or our earnings—such over-lending will bring its own corrective.

I hope, so far as possible, without impairing the freedom of the market, that preference will be given in the matter of credit to those issues which bring a high proportion of orders for goods immediately to the trade of this country. (Cheers.)

Coal Subsidy Useless.

Referring to the coal subsidy, Mr. Churchill said that nothing it had done would secure to the coal trade immunity from economic facts and forces. There were too many miners, the cost of production was still too high, apart from the subsidy, which could not be continued, for the permanent maintenance of a successful export trade. Profits, royalties, and other matters were being considered by the Coal Commission. Many mines could never be worked again on the basis of the present hours, wages, and other conditions. Nationalisation would not make the foreigner buy our coal if he could buy cheaper elsewhere.

Two Views on Exercise and Games

"The statement by Chauncey Depew on his ninety-first birthday that he had never in his long and happy life played baseball, football, tennis, golf, or any other game will not give comfort to those who maintain that modern life is unpalatable without the sauce of exercise," says the New York Nation.

"Probably no life ever was, though the Greeks are said to have been wise in spending their best hours in the gymnasium. May not the Greeks, however, have got on so well because they set a high value upon the 'moderation' which Mr. Depew adds is the only thing approaching a rule that he has followed? Or is it at all possible to say that one thing and one thing only contributes to the success of living? 'Athletics can kill as well as cure. Games which are tranquillizing to some persons are tiresome to others; and behind the well-developed chest of a two-mile runner there may be the sorriest rubbish of a heart. The moral would seem to be that games should be saved for those who are made happy by them, and that they should not be forced upon those whom they bore.'

Author and Artist Expresses Views on Housework

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 15.—(By Canadian Press)—Mrs. Alice Tweedle, author and artist, interviewed here on her way home to England, proved an interesting personality. She is a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, of the Royal Asiatic Society and of the Royal Colonial Institute. It was directly through her efforts that the first forty Y.M.C.A. huts were erected in France early in the war, and the task of sending the first half million books to the trenches and hospitals of the Allies was undertaken and accomplished by her. "I realize very keenly the fact that we should not encourage our women to come to the Dominion without special training along some useful line," she is reported as saying.

"The dignity of housework is something that should be instilled into every girl, in fact, I tell English girls the only chance they have of ever getting married in Canada is to be good housekeepers. After all, house-making is the woman's field, and we must realize that it can be made a very dignified profession. Personally, I am far more proud of trimming a hat well or of making it out of nothing at all than I am of writing a book. Both jobs take brains, and in my opinion it is more important to be a successful home-maker than to be a successful story writer or picture painter."

How to Appoint Governor-Generals

"As is usual when the Governor-General's term is expiring there are a series of paragraphs in the papers about a possible successor. One hears first a semi-royalty mentioned, then a peer, then possibly another. One learns with some astonishment that the name of such and such a distinguished personage has been well received in Canadian circles," says the Queen's Quarterly of Canada.

"Whether these rumours are published on the authority of the newspapers it is hard to say. They have the appearance of being given in the air. But surely it would be more becoming and more dignified if the responsibility for the selection lay purely with the Crown, in whatever sense it be regarded, and the Canadian Government or Parliament of the day. No plebiscite is taken after the newspaper paragraphs referred to; there is not even correspondence on the subject in the Press.

"We may at times 'over-do our democratic spirit, but this surely is not the way of democracy. As to the kind of personage Canada desires for a Governor-General, certain qualifications are fairly obvious.

"We like to see a man who has made good on his own merits, whatever his sphere may be. It could be a gross inaptitude to name anybody, but an inflexible college one might say, from whose ranks alone our Governor-Generals were drawn. It might even include 'Elder Statesmen' and other Dominion premiers."

An End to Secret Diplomacy

In the despatch to-day it is stated that the thousandth treaty has been registered with the League of Nations with the filing by Sweden and Norway of documents relating to certain arbitration questions.

Under Article XVIII of the Covenant of the League every treaty or international engagement entered into by any member of the League must be at once registered with the Secretary, and as soon as possible, published by it.

One of the most fruitful sources of mistrust and even of open quarrels in the past has been secret diplomacy, and at the conferences held to draft the Treaty of Versailles the late President Wilson was most emphatic in his condemnation of such methods.

At present the membership consists of fifty-five nations including the dominions of the British Empire.

Referring to this matter recently in an article in the New York Times, Dr. Nicholas Butler, President of Columbia University, remarked:

"So important is this single and authoritative depository of all treaties that it would be an act of decent courtesy for the Department of State, of its own motion, to register with the League every treaty to which the Government of the United States may be a party.

"It is deplorable that the people of the United States do not hear more of this patient, constructive and always humanitarian work, and less of the technical political discussions that are carried on from time to time.

"The functions of the League are international in character, and as such may not attract much local interest excepting in specific instances, but the methods that are being followed and the spirit which inspires the work have a deep significance, and they might well be noted and applied by individual parliaments however small.

If we take our politics, for example, it can hardly be said that the atmosphere created by an election contest is best suited to the calm consideration on the part of the electorate of the public questions at issue. If a matter of particular moment to the country is under consideration, considerable of the criticism is aimed to obstruct the administrators or to reveal them in a false light, rather than to bring out the real points of the case.

If the bills that have been passed through our Legislature are considered, it will be admitted that many of the evils arising therefrom have been due to the secrecy that has been preserved with regard to their contents, so far as the public are concerned. They are often unheard of until the session opens, and frequently not until the session is well advanced or on the eve of closing. Consequently there is no opportunity for intelligent discussion in the House, or for the general public to be made aware of their import.

Sometimes they are introduced as private measures without due observance having been given to the rules of the House, and at other times, the country is so far committed to the stipulations of the Bills under Orders in Council, that the powers of the Legislature are made of secondary consideration. In fact, so carefully guarded are some of these secrets, that it has occurred on more than one occasion that the public has only learnt the particulars years after the bills have been ratified.

Tombs and Mummies of Unknown Epoch Disclosed.—Bandits Hold Up and Rob a Bank in Indiana.—Intense Fighting Between the Soviets and the Druses.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND PERISH IN FLOODS IN GREECE. LONDON, Nov. 25. More than one hundred thousand persons are believed to have perished in floods following the torrential rain of an hour and twenty minutes on Tuesday, says a despatch to the Daily Express from Athens. Many houses in the refugees' settlements collapsed. The inmates were buried in the ruins and many were swept away and drowned. Flood waters from Mount Lykabettos washed up thirty-eight tombs in Anagnostopoul Street here. Five mummies and numerous gold ornaments and vases were uncovered. It is not known to what epoch the tombs and mummies belonged.

Wedding Bells

BOWDEN—SOPER. Gover Street United Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding this afternoon when, at 3.30 o'clock, the marriage of Miss Agnes Moore Soper, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Soper, to Mr. Herbert George Bowden, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bowden, both of this city, was solemnized by Rev. Hammond Johnson.

The bride's dress of Chinese Canton crepe, being handsomely hand-embroidered with pearls and crystal beads, was very effective. A bridal veil and coronet of orange blossoms with a delightful bouquet of chrysanthemums, carnations and fern completed her costume. Her attendant was her sister Isabel, who wore an apricot colored georgette dress ornamented with mauve flowers, and a black-French hat. She carried a bouquet of mauve chrysanthemums and sweet peas. Little Joss Gear, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Gear, train-bearer, looked daintily in a mauve crepe de chine dress and hat. The costume of the bride's mother was of gray with a black hat and a sable fur.

The groom was supported by Mr. J. M. Barbour. Mrs. Bowden, mother of the groom, wore a dress of black silk, trimmed with gold lace, and a black hat. The guests were ushered by Messrs. S. G. Soper, R. H. Vaisey, E. G. Ewing and E. Hancock. During the ceremony Miss Effie Tait presided at the organ and Mr. S. R. Steele was the soloist.

At four o'clock the guests gathered at the home of the bride's parents, 34 Cook Street, where the reception was held and the customary toasts honored. Many beautiful and useful gifts were displayed.

After the reception the bride and groom motored to Upper Gullies where their honeymoon will be spent.

Record Attendance at the Circus

If Monday night's audience at the Circus broke all records for attendances at the Prince's Ring, then last night's attendance was fully twenty-five per cent. greater. Long before the vaudeville commenced the galleries were crowded while the main floor was thronged. The artistes were in better form than on the opening night, but unfortunately Mr. Keller, who on Monday afternoon fell from the ceiling in doing his star cloud act, was forbidden to perform by Dr. Knight as it was found that one of the ligaments in his right foot had been torn. Mrs. Keller had therefore to sustain their whole act, which she did with brilliancy. The Pattersons, Fausta and the Ringlins evoked great applause in their acts. Mademoiselle Marie, the singing girl on the web, and Margaret New on the swing ladder won new laurels and are at once great favourites. Professor Wilson's comedy circus and clowns were very good indeed, but "Blighty", who is billed as the world's worst tempered and most stubborn mule, was successfully ridden by two city teamsters after a hard struggle and amidst much applause. Alfreno on the tight wire changed his act slightly and it was thrilling in the extreme. His walk while blindfolded held the vast audience breathless and when completed was the signal for an outburst of loud and prolonged applause.

The various booths and merry-go-round did good business, especially Joe McKinlay's "bucket of groceries for only 10 cents." The G. W. V. A. canteen in charge of Comrades Jack Dooley and Jim Taylor had a busy evening and their introduction of "hot dogs" gave not only a real "circus" touch to the show but furnished a delicious and "satisfying" lunch as well.

Undoubtedly the G. W. V. A. are presenting a splendid performance and deserve every support.

Hasty Desertion of an Old Friend Regretted. A lady whose umbrella was turned inside out by a squall as she was crossing Water Street this morning, flung it away in disgust. Another squall, however, caught the discarded gamp as it remained leaning crumpled and forlorn against a wall, straightened its crooked ribs, and sent it skidding along the pavement after its mistress. Regretting her hasty action and touched, no doubt, by the apparent desire of an old friend to make up for its moment of weakness, the lady restored it to its place of honour and passed on with every indication that she was glad to make up and once more be under its sheltering wing.

Why Babies Cry

LONDON, Nov. 19.—"Crying is one of the sensations of bodily activity. The crying and stretching—which are naturally pleasurable to a baby, and it is the business of mother and nurse to see that nature's plans are not interfered with."

"The baby who handles a child should from the first teach him to face reality. Parents should allow a child to take risks, for the safety-first policy is apt to kill the spirit of adventure and weaken the desire for achievement."

"No infant should be called 'naughty' or even be blamed for his mistakes, while too young to know the difference between right and wrong. I believe that the tortures suffered by many grown-up people over what they regard as their 'wickedness' are due to the confusion between wrongdoing and mistakes created in their minds during babyhood."

Everybody's Friend

TO THE FRONT ONCE MORE.
TO THE CIVIC ELECTORS OF ST. JOHN'S.
LADIES & GENTLEMEN—As you were kind enough to give me your valued support on the many previous occasions I sought election at your hands, I have decided to again solicit your esteem and confidence for four years more as one of your civic representatives.

During the several terms I have had the great honor of being a member of the Municipal Council Board I have consistently practised the policy of conforming to your desires in so far as the civic revenue permitted.

I shall be very pleased indeed to again do my utmost towards bringing about many more essential improvements that are still necessary, and, therefore, feel that as you have so highly approved of my civic record in the past you will be pleased to again remember me on polling day.

A SPECIAL WORD TO THE LADY VOTERS.

You may have many friends to choose from ladies, but as a special favor will each one of you please be kind enough to record a vote for me.

3rd TIME.

THIS IS MY THIRD TIME OF ASKING.

That my actions at the Council Board the first time, were appreciated, over eleven hundred people testified at the last election, and now at the request of a majority of those electors, I have again decided to comply with their request, and to ask you Ladies and Gentlemen voters, for a continuation of that confidence at the coming election. Should I again be elected, I will pledge myself to help carry out to the best of my ability, any sane scheme that will tend to the making this my native town a brighter, better and cleaner city, having due regard to the cost to those who will have to pay for it.

A word in season, however. Should those contemplated improvements be carried out, I am convinced that extra taxation will have to be put on an already overtaxed people, for I am one with Mayor Cook who, a short time ago told the people that they cannot make bricks without straw.

Thanking you in anticipation, yours truly,

JOHNNT BROWN LOSES.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—(C.P.)—Harry Mason, British lightweight champion, defeated Johnny Brown, the clever Scottish welterweight, in a twenty-round bout at Albert Hall here last night. The men fought here some weeks ago when Brown was given a very unpopular decision, but there was no question about the winner last evening, as Mason was by far the most clever, and won easily.

Elky Clark, the British flyweight champion, who intends visiting the United States soon to obtain a match for the world's flyweight championship, won by a technical knockout from Antoine Mercey of France, who retired in the 17th round.

TWO KNOCKOUTS.

NEWARK, Nov. 20.—George Ward, of Elizabeth, N.J., welterweight, last night knocked out Alex. Hart, of Cleveland, with a right uppercut to the chin in the 7th round of a 12-round match.

AKRON, O., Nov. 20.—Eddie Shea,

Chicago, won a technical knockout over Willie Ames, veteran Akron featherweight, last night, when Ames was unable to answer the bell for the third round because of two broken ribs.

BILIARDS.

The Stance.
The Stance—or how to stand properly—is perhaps the hardest point for the beginner to acquire. Indeed, the reason that quite fair players miss absurdly easy strokes is a defect in standing. It is quite easy to place one's ball at the right angle for any stroke and then miss it through standing wrongly. One would naturally think that if he can get a half-ball angle right he will make the stroke. But as a matter of fact strokes are made with the feet almost as much as by the arm. The body must be fairly behind each, and one can get fairly behind a stroke only by placing the feet in the proper position. If you are playing for strokes at the left hand side of the table the body should be swung slightly and very slightly to the right. If strokes are on the right hand side the body should be swung ever so slightly to the left.

In taking a position at the table care should be exercised not to have the feet set too far apart and they should always be turned towards the table. When making a stroke the left foot should always be pointing as nearly as possible in the direction in which you wish your ball to travel. The body must be behind the stroke and too much stress cannot be laid on this particular point. After a while your body will automatically take the proper position but the beginner at first must always think about it. Every alteration of the position of the arm in aiming must be accompanied by a corresponding alteration for the position of the feet and body. The next point in standing is to have your left foot well forward and your left leg slightly bent to ensure ease of position. The right foot should be at a fair distance off—say a foot and a half—with the right leg bending a little, according to course to the stroke you are playing. The best billiard pose is something like a boxer's crouch, but there is no strict rule excepting the feeling of being comfortable and at ease when striking. Positions, of course, alter according to the stroke played, but the main thing is to feel comfortable and to get down low as possible. Don't stand stiff and straight and never mind the chat about doing the correct thing. Begin right, otherwise it will take an enormous amount of time and practice trying to get right afterwards, but it's never too late to begin right. Begin right—“How to handle the Cue.”

OTTAWA DEFEATS VICS.

OTTAWA, November 20.—The world champion Victoria Cougars, fresh from or perhaps tired from two victories in Montreal, went down to defeat last night before the Ottawa Senators, 6 to 2. The Senators got goals clean cut and left no room for dispute, leading the Senatorial offensive came veteran Cy Denney, who banged four goals. Hooley Smith and Nighbor got the other two.

In centre the great Nighbor again showed that he is in a class by himself. He outplayed whoever was opposed to him. Hooley Smith came next on the honor list with a magnificent game both ways. Clancy and Boucher were both good.

Louella and Frederickson stood out for the losers, with “Old Fox” Jack Walker and Hart both turning in useful games.

BANQUETTED BY CRESCENTS.

J. E. Aher, sporting editor of the Herald, well-known hockey and baseball player, of the Crescents A.A.A. who is leaving New York to spend the winter, was tendered a banquet by members of the Crescents at the Green Lantern recently.

His clubmates also presented him with a gold fountain pen and pencil. President G. F. Greig, Vice-President J. G. Quigley, P. C. Neville, T. F. MacDonell, M. P. Martin, Cyril Hannahan and Jas. MacDonald, all spoke in eulogistic terms of Mr. Aher, not only for his good work as a writer and athlete, but the good assistance he had been in encouraging school athletics and his managing of sporting events. Mr. Aher thanked them for their good words and said that he regretted his departure from Halifax, but hoped it would be only temporary.

TUNNEY GETS DECISION.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 19.—Gene Tunney (188), N.Y., was given the decision over John Risko (192), Cleveland heavyweight, in a 12-round bout here last night. Tunney decisively outboxed the local man, taking six rounds and Risko two. Four were even. Tunney staggered Risko with blows to the stomach and jaw in three rounds, but was unable to floor him.

In the 11th he pounded Risko repeatedly without receiving a return.

Cure of Our Fish and Standardization

The facts that have appeared from time to time during the present season that there has been a great improvement in the cure of fish exported from the Labrador coast is now being borne out by the buyers on the foreign markets.

Mr. Jose Marsal, who is still residing in St. John's, approved of the quality of the fish when it left here, and his firm in Valencia were so pleased with the quality arriving that they intimated at once that their efforts would be given wholly for the sale of our fish in preference to any other country this year.

The announcement in our last issue that Mr. Gherardi of Genoa, one of the principal firms in that important centre, endorse these facts in so unceremonious a way and praise the quality of the Labrador fish now reaching that market notwithstanding the pessimistic utterance of our northern contemporary.

Similar news also reaches us from Greece, where the consumption of fish is extra good this year, and it is looked upon as the very cheapest food obtainable for the large influx of their population from Syria and Turkish territory.

Our announcement last week that an important group were now organizing efforts for a still greater improvement in our cure for next year, and their determination to make plans for a better standardization of our fishery products has met with general approval from all quarters.

The last attempt was merely on paper and being under Government control it was seen at once to be a whim of the moment.

To improve the cure of our fish and standardize its export cannot be a private organization conducted for the benefit of a few, but it must be done for the greatest benefit of the majority and on a solid foundation for the good of the whole country.

The Government were led into such guttural measures for the control of shipments and prices and met with such defiance that it is useless to ever expect politicians to take part in this again.

The movement must come from the fishermen themselves, backed up by the exporters and the organization through the Board of Trade and supported by the Government.

The Chicago Board of Trade has made a wonderful success with their system of inspection of wheat and food products, so that the world today practically follows their lead both for standards and daily price values.

Difficulties will occur and schemes will be tried to outwit the officials, but such treachery in our midst should be stamped out in no uncertain way. The Trade Review is here to back up this group now being formed, to take up this good measure, and we can assure them that they will have the whole-hearted support of the country.

The value of their accomplishments will be increasingly apparent, as no person can expect a revolution in such an old established trade in a day, but we all recognize that we are now at a standstill, and this country must proceed with the times.

Let the Board of Trade be a mechanism to serve the whole country, and they will gain in dignity and public confidence.—Trade Review.

An EASTERN CAP

Liner Fights 80ft. Waves

90 INJURED IN THE BERENGARIA
—TOSSED ABOUT LIKE A
COCKLE-SHELL.

By A PASSENGER.

The great Cunard liner Berengaria (formerly the German Emperor), the third largest in the world, with a tonnage of nearly 55,000, a length over all of 910ft., and a beam of 98ft., arrived at Southampton in the early hours of Nov. 4th, after experiencing a storm of so wild a nature that her commander, Captain W. R. D. Irvine, was on the bridge for two days in mid-Atlantic.

Several of the ship's officers and crew stated that, in 20 years' voyaging in the North Atlantic they had not known such mountainous seas as flung themselves upon the ship on Saturday morning, especially between the hours of 9 and 11.

The Berengaria leapt and rolled as though she had been no bigger than a cockle-shell, and the 80ft. waves that surrounded her made a magnificent and terrifying spectacle.

$2,000 Crochery Damage.

Several tables in the dining-saloon were torn bodily out of their fixings, and the crash of breaking crockery—the bill for renewals will be about $2,000—made an ominous chorus to the noise of the storm.

Captain Irvine's fine seamanship, coupled with the calm efficiency of the entire crew, prevented anything in the nature of a panic, and, though some women remained up all night, most of the passengers seemed rather to enjoy their novel experience.

Considering the difficulty of moving about and the violent manner in which such things as chairs slid here and there, the number of accidents was remarkably few. About 30 passengers and members of the crew received injuries of one kind or another. Dr. E. Johnson, with a broken arm and various other injuries, was probably the most seriously hurt. Cuts and bruises of a minor description accounted for most of the casualties. Dr. Doherty and his assistant were untrusting in their ministrations, and, indeed, the whole ship's company, including the cooks, "carried on" as though nothing out of the common was happening.

Woke Up Under Bed.

Almost every passenger had some curious experience to relate. I saw one man's bed completely overturned, and he woke up suddenly to find himself under it. Another was hit violently on the head by a flying orange out of a basket of fruit. A third owed the preservation of his life to the fact that he had altered the position of his bed from beneath a heavy ventilator that crashed down in the middle of the night.

Although the ship was flung about so fiercely, nevertheless relatively few people complained of sea-sickness. The sea was a following one, and the huge waves that broke over the stern caused a motion which, to me at any rate, was not really unpleasant.

The storm showed that the sea qualities of the Berengaria are of the most splendid description. She kept her course and her speed with wonderful ease, and the passengers were loud in praise of the way in which she was handled.

One Friend Tells Another

The fame of a successful remedy is often spread far and wide by women telling one another of its merits, as is evidenced by a letter written by Mrs. Wm. Ridsdale of Mt. Forest, Ont. She writes: "I was weak, miserable and in pain. A friend told me what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for her. I tried it and am now well and strong. There is nothing equal to it for women's troubles." There are women everywhere who have been benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and gladly tell their friends and neighbors about it.

Wins With One Jockey

BUT IS LAST JUST AS OFTEN WITH ANOTHER.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—"The Statesman," a thoroughbred horse belonging to A. K. Macomber, American oil magnate, has an eye for a jockey, and expresses himself in such a way as to gain his preference. Six times this season the colt went to the post. Three times he crossed the tape a winner. Three times he finished last. "The Statesman," earned his brackets with Jockey Winder up. His losing races were ridden by Jockey Clout. Stable hands make no secret of the horse's dislike for Clout and love for Winder.

On the three occasions Jockey Clout rode the colt, "Statesman" did all he could to throw the lad, and then refused to start or sulked throughout the race. In training, he will not work if Clout is about. But let little Winder come along and immediately the colt becomes good natured, buries his nose in the lad's arm, and runs like a streak of lightning when he takes the track. Clout is rated as a very good jockey, with more experience than Winder, but this matters not with "The Statesman," who, like a human, has his likes and dislikes.

Speculation as to the Next Derby Favorite

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 20.—(C.P.)—A dramatic upset in the Middle Park Stakes—one of the greatest surprises in many years on the turf—has its part in making the 1925 English flat-racing season curious in one respect. It has failed to produce a two-year-old to capture the public fancy as a candidate for next year's Derby.

Generally some youngster with a brilliant record, topped with a victory in the two-year-old races that cluster at the end of the season, is settled upon by the public as next year's Derby winner, and his—or—her—condition throughout the winter, and campaign the following spring, is followed with intense interest. Such a one was Mamuz Mahal, known to the British public, from message boy to financier, as "Mumty," who, however, failed to win the Blue Riband, as did two others that in their turn held the public's imagination, Saucy Sue and Tetra-tema.

Saucy Sue, however, justified the faith placed in her by winning two Allies' classics, the Oaks and one Thousand Guineas. Champion filly, she was never defeated until last month, when at Newmarket and Doncaster she finished behind the high class colts, whom she had never run against before.

Lord Woolavington's Coronach, by Harry On—Vet Kiss, in the autumn emerged from the summer's racing as the outstanding two-year-old. He had never been defeated, and among his victories were the long-established Hous Memorial Stakes at Goodwood and the Champagne Two-year-old Stakes at Doncaster. In the latter race, which brought out the best two-year-olds of the season, Sir Abe Bailey's Lex, by Lemberg-Excellita, was fourth.

Lex throughout the season had run well up in the company of two-year-olds that will form the "classic fields" and hold the limelight on the English turf. He had already won the Gimcrack Stakes at York. Then in the Middle Park Stakes last month, at turf headquarters, a race that for years has established a winner favorite or prominent candidate for the Derby, the surprise was sprung, the surprise, the greatest since Galtee More in 1898. He scored the odds of five to one laid by Lord Rosebury's Velasquez. Galtee More the year after won the "Triple Crown" (the two thousand Guineas, the Derby and the St. Leger), an honor that goes to few thoroughbreds.

As Coronach's running in the Middle Park Stakes became a certainty, the opposition, (150 were nominated 2 months ago for the race) faded away, and when Lord Astor's good colt Swift and Sure, by Swynford-ood and Gay, was withdrawn at the last minute, only three runners were left in the race: Coronach, Lex and Genacitt, the latter a colt by Genader—Decagon, owned by Lord Hanley. Coronach started at odds of seven to one.

Nugget of Gold is Valued at $57,000

John B. Graves, who recently died, is believed to have turned up the largest nugget of gold ever found in this country. It occurred near Carrville, Calif. Graves found his valuable chunk of yellow metal in 1896 while he was prospecting with his brother Robert along California's Coffee Creek, in Trinity County. Shortly afterward he discovered the gold deposits in the same region that became the Blue Jay mine, led to the revival of gold mining in northern California and brought out of the historic gold rushes of the later part of the Nineteenth Century.

The world record nugget has been generally accepted as the "Welcome," found at Baker's Hill, Ballarat, Australia, in 1858. It weighed almost 2,029 ounces and was valued at about $45,000, according to the price of gold at that time. Following closely on the "Welcome" were two other Australian nuggets, the "Victoria," a magnificent mass of virgin gold weighing 240 ounces, taken from the Bendigo mines in 1851, and another piece of pure gold weighing 72 ounces, from the same diggings. One of the largest nuggets reported in the early days of California prospecting weighed 280 ounces. It was found in the central part of the State. Another was the nugget discovered in 1872 on Flat Creek in Shasta County by Louis Buchon. This weighed 198 ounces and was valued at $2,600. The value placed on the Graves nugget when it was found was reported to be $57,000.

C. L. B. Cadets

It is wonderful how business keeps up at the C.L.B. Armoury. With circus attractions, meetings and socials elsewhere the Old Guard are carrying on steadily. Lieut. Col. Rendell is still on leave and the second in command, Major H. Outerbridge, M.B.E., was in charge last night, and Captain Len Stick, Adjutant, was on duty with Lieut. Perlin.

Bugle Band was going strong on their practice learning new music. We hope they will soon be proficient to go on the air when the Radio Officer, Capt. Stick, broadcasts his first winter programme.

Congratulations are in order to Old Comrade Sidney Skeffington, on his joining the merry band of benefactors. All ranks wish him and his bride many years of life and happiness.

Headquarters, St. John's, are glad to note the enterprise of H. Co., Bay Roberts, in broadcasting their news through the columns of the Bay Roberts Guardian. Congratulations friend "J". Carry on. All ranks are glad to read your reports.

Last week the Brigade celebrated their anniversary services by the 8 a.m. parade to Holy Communion, 3 o'clock C.L.B. services, the lady's tea and concert in the Synod Hall and the annual meeting of the Old Comrades' Association. We congratulate President A. Wight, Treasurer A. Thomas, Secretary H. Hookey and others on their election. We understand that they are going to formulate a winter programme of debates, card games and lectures. We hope this will result in monthly social gatherings and meet much pleasure.

Six recruits joined up last night and we have room for more. Recruit classes are now forming. All lads wishing to join will please apply to Serjt. Major Hammond. Recruits must be 13 years old and 4 ft. 8 in. in height. The fee is 25c, and all lads must have their parents' consent. So come along now while you have a chance.

No Brigade next week—the Nfld. Poultry Association are hiring the Armoury for the week to hold their annual Poultry Show and exhibit of Newfoundland Dogs and Foxes.

Late mails from England brought from the War Office the official copy of "The Cadet List," which is a list of Cadet Units which have received official recognition from the War Office up to May 1st. The 1st Nfld. Regt. C.L.B. has the proud distinction of being the only Overseas C.L.B. Regiment thus honored and recognized.

Ancient History.

The C.L.B. was founded by Lieut. Col. Gee, in London, on St. Martin's Day, Nov. 11, 1381. The 1st Nfld. Regt. was organized in St. John's, Nfld., by Harold Blacker, who afterwards became Sergeant of his Company and bore as Regimental Number No. 1. The late Rt. Rev. Bishop Jones was the Nuncio's third made the Brigade go.

The first Chaplain was Rev. J. S. Thompson, an Englishman attached to the Cathedral. The first officers were Capt. Melville, A.D.C. to His Excellency the Governor, Sir T. O'Brien, Captain Melville was an ex-officer of the 17th Leicester Regiment. Captain C. Waring Hayward, was Captain of A. Co., No. 119. The latter was in British Columbia when the Great War broke out and was one of the first volunteers there and saw service with the Canadian troops. His brother, the late Lieut. Hayward and Alan C. Goodridge, also were a Company officers. The late Mr. Joseph Shea and Messrs. Will, Harry and Arthur Donnelly also helped Captain Melville very materially in the early organization. Headquarters, London, assisted financially by raising a subscription.

The first entertainment in aid of the C.L.B. funds was given in the Mission Room, Springdale Street. It was organized by Lady Bowring. The farce "Who's Who or All in a Fog," was excellent. Amongst the performers were:—Mrs. James Smith, Organ-

T. A. Ladies Entertain

The Card Party, Supper and Dance held last night by the T.A. Ladies' Auxiliary was their most successful affair for the season. The card tournament began at 8.30 in the Reading Room and was much enjoyed. Then came the dance and during an interval the Ladies Auxiliary served supper in their usual capable manner and by it added much to the evening's pleasure. Never has the Gem Orchestra been in better form than they were on this occasion and that their splendid music was appreciated was shown by the splendid manner in which each dance number was received. The winners of the card tournament were announced as Mr. F. J. Hickey and Mrs. Clinton. The affair concluded at an early hour this morning.

Pays Tribute to Submarine Dead

BRITAIN SAYS FUNERAL FARE-WELL TO 69 M-I VICTIMS.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Britain to-day said funeral farewells to the 69 dead of the lost submarine monitor M-1 and bade them sleep the mariners' sleep in the sea graveyard beyond old Plymouth. Their funeral cortege was a line of gray craft, steaming out at dawn to the channel cemetery where slumber other seafaring men.

For the 69 peace time sacrifices of the undersea weapon, a chaplain spoke words in praise of their devotion to duty and in sorrow for their loss. Sailors, many of them "buddies" of the dead, stood at salute as volleying guns boomed out the au revoir of the seas.

And then they cast to the waves as a marker for the tomb of the 69, great wreaths sent from every corner of the British Isles.

Twelve ships put out of Plymouth, Portsmouth and Devonport while night still wrapped the channel. They converged to a spot 30 miles out of Plymouth where the M-1 was last seen to plunge last week. In the cortege were eight submarine craft which had served as sister ships of the ugly monitor.

Ship As Pallid.

The mother ship, Maidstone, served as a pulpit for the funeral services said by Rev. Dr. F. S. Burckett, chaplain of the submarine depot ship Dolphin, while his audience was the line of 12 strung out in a circle around the death scene. Ship lights twinkled out of the rendezvous in the dawn, while streamers of black smoke from the larger craft stretched across the sky like lines of penance.

Dr. Burckett's words finished, containing the 69 forever to their watery couch and their casket of steel, three volleys sounded out over the waves lashed by a northeaster as lads of the submarine stood at salute choking back their sorrow at the fate of luckless companions.

Then from the stern of the Maidstone, which bore the rear admiral of the submarine service, A. B. S. Haggard, the wreaths were floated out to sea. One of them was a mammoth piece from the Navy. Then there were also little wreaths and mere wisps of flowers from humble donors to tell of a maritime nation's grief.

This done, the funeral line fled back to Plymouth, to Portland and to Devonport, passing over the spot where the M-1 was supposed to lie. As they reached this place—at the same hour at which she disappeared—they halted and their engines stopped in tribute.

Germans Mourn.

It was not alone the British who mourned. For during the services, there was picked up a message from the German divers who were brought on to hunt, in special diving bells, for the submarine.

It touched the men of the ships, for it seemed that the countrymen of

"The Painted Lady"

WONDERFUL PICTURE AT THE MAJESTIC TO-NIGHT.

LAST DAYS OF MEM-O-REA.

Majestic patrons and thousands of them who have watched and heard Mem-O-REA, the mystery marvel, and hoped to have had a personal interview with him, will regret to learn that this week will complete his engagement at the Majestic Theatre. This extraordinary man, whose revelations created a sensation, continued his engagement this week at the request of a large number of people. To-night, he will appear at the usual hour.

The feature to-night is "The Painted Lady," starring Dorothy MacKall and George O'Brien. This is a rapid fire Fox melodrama of love and vengeance—thrills in every line, with a very pleasant climax. The cast is as follows:—

- Luther Smith.....George O'Brien
- Violet.....Dorothy MacKall
- Captain Sutton.....Harry T. Morey
- Pearl Thompson.....Lucille Hutton
- Roger Lewis.....Frank Elliott
- Matt Logan.....Lucien Littlefield
- Rita Johnson will also appear to-night in conjunction with her husband. This classy dancer is an accepted favorite with the crowd by reason of her excellent work and costumes.

The Pony Contest seems to be increasing in popularity more and more, and every day in every way is growing stronger and stronger.

Don't forget the greatest of all pleasures ever shown in this country, when next week the Majestic will submit a 100% super special "North of 36."

Ask The War Office!

Tales from the War Office Librarian. In the library at the War Office there are over one hundred thousand books and pamphlets. The Librarian, Mr. F. J. Huddleston, must have an extensive and peculiar knowledge of the contents of his charges, for he gets asked the oldest of queries.

Here are a few of the questions he has had to answer, mentioned by him in his book, "Warriors in Undress":—"What was the population of London in 1500? Who, where, what and how many are the Sarts? What are Dells? Why has the baton of a British Field-Marshal eighteen lions on it?"

To help him cope with such queries Mr. Huddleston has a card-index of items of out-of-the-way information. It is curious to find under Napoleon, for instance, that he was struck off the Army List no fewer than five times; that his handwriting was so shocking and his spelling indifferent; that he was a bad horseman, and that at Waterloo he had with him a travelling library of four hundred volumes.

Writing of "red tape," the author quotes the story of a certain General who had a short way with that kind of officialdom. A road had had to be made in a hurry, and the General's report on the operation ran: "Road built, 20,000 furlms received, 20,000 furlms spent, nothing remains."

Shocked by so terse a statement, the military audit official demanded a detailed account of furlm and kreutzer, with vouchers. This demand was ignored and had to be repeated in peremptory tone.

The General then wrote back: "20,000 furlms received, 20,000 spent, whatever doubts it is an ass."

Another story concerns some troops—nationality not stated—on their first visit to the firing line. They had never been under fire before, and presently there came back three messages from their headquarters.

The first was "Bombardo, the second was "Bombardo furioso, and the third was "Packoportanto! E.A.H.
