Abstract

1                          Teeckly detaings. The importance of erents is calculated entirety ppon the extent of out ox-       Leisure hourg. Tue altaborting guestion, " who is to be          some partisans has been a topic of rilicule aud mserrer, the subject of contention has furnishe matter of inex haustible gossip to the idle newsers aud louggers in coffe-houses. Nay, aged men have been seen in the public walks, gravely clublave been seen in the public walks, gravely club- biog their conjectures and their © wise-sass;" the siggling and loquacious hunse-maids the giggling and loquacious hwuse-maids have been observed debatitig the vasestion over their water-pitchers in the streets; and in the pur- lieus of the erreen-market, the thrifty matrou has forgotten for a while the necessities of the kitchlieus of the green-market, the thrimy natron has forogtten for a while the neesities of the kith- en, to hear or communicate some new discorery en, to hear or communicate some new discovery or some pungent artice in a f favourite weekly paper. Even the witty and inventive artist: may, paper. Lven he witty and inventive artist may, or uaght we know, have been playius of. his okes, and caricatures of the par notile fratrum or some of their leading derolees, may have been stuck in the primt shop wiodows, and lawked iti company with "FFarmers Almanacks," "Hor- rible Murders," "E True and Particular Ac- counts," &c. counts," &c. But, niew ing the whole matter in that serious ight in which it ought to be con templated, we hlare too much reason to fear that the lamene of discord which it has nof kindled, has spread into a wide aud wasteful  rages with unabated fury in spite of private re-. monstrance and public reprefiension, and which wonstrance and public reprenension, and which cannot fial, when it does subside, on teare be. hind it a foul residuum. It woald, howerer, hind it a foul residum. It would, howerer, be a most uppleasing task to enter here into "'the Angen stable of the a most unpleasing task to enter here into "the Augean stable" of this contest-it is our happy lot to be able to contemplate it at a dist lot to be able to contemplate it at a ditastance, with the feeliugs and views of calm observers. At the same time, no one who halm olakerervers. terest at all in the controversy, can shet hat inerest at all in the controversy, can shut his eyes o the fact, that the parties have manifested  troughout a relentlessness in their hostility, a prousion of low invective and unmaonerly re- proaches, not less unvorthy of a place in the
