GOVERNMENT'S BOND ISSUE CHEERS WALL ST.

Stock Market Opens With a Boom But Reaction Soon Sets In Adverse Comment to Issuing Such an Enormous Amount When the Treasury Has Such a Large Surplus—Seventy Million Gold Imports Has Little Effect—Currency Premium Drops—Industrial Situation Causes Much Concern.

(From Our Own Correspondent) New York, Nov. 18.—The announcement that the government is going to try to raise $150,000,000 of artificial means is not received with the tremendous enthusiasm that was expected at Washington. It is in itself a sad confession, and the action is really almost revolutionary.

Stupendous Hoarding. "No situation of the sort exists today, and if it did exist, the last expedient which prudence would suggest would be the issue of government short term notes. Nor does this new operation stand on a footing even with Mr. Cortes's use of the public surplus to relieve the recent panic through deposits with the banks. The treasury has been hoarding in stupendous quantities—bank reserves have been heavily cut down, and credit operations have been largely paralyzed. Taking into full account these formidable elements in the situation, we are still compelled to repeat our disapproval of the administration's move."

Unprecedented Action. "Nothing could better illustrate the topsy-turvy condition of the American currency system than the administration's decision to issue $50,000,000 in Panama canal bonds and, if necessary, $100,000,000 in interest-bearing certificates, as a basis for increasing currency.

Industrial Situation Serious. "The immediate effect of the announcement today was beneficial. The premium on currency dropped sharply, stocks became firmer, and the public generally began to talk more confidently. If one can accept President Roosevelt's view that there is absolutely no reason for panic, then an attempt at currency inflation may work good.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

When people are thinking of a murder or an execution as an event of the hour they are perhaps not in the attitude of mind best fitted for the consideration of capital punishment; but the rule is that the subject is more generally discussed at some such time, when the public is stirred by horror over a brutal crime, or by pity for a murderer who is to be executed for a deed already grown old.

MORE ABOUT PULPWOOD

The Ottawa Free Press (Lib.) says that "every patriotic argument favors the imposition of an export duty," and adds: "We hope that Canada's answer to Mr. Roosevelt's recommendation may be the imposition of an export duty upon pulpwood. It would give work to thousands more men in Quebec especially; it would ensure a steady home market for the farmer who has pulpwood for sale, and it would compel the United States to recognize that Canada is not prepared for all time to be merely a supplier of raw materials."

THE I. C. R. AND PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

The recently issued report on the operation of the Intercolonial provides ammunition for opponents of public ownership of railroads. There is an old and rough saying that while figures will not lie, liars will figure. The truth of the saying is well illustrated by the made of Deputy Minister Butler's figures by newspapers which desire to show that the government is making a great record, and by those who desire to prove that these same figures that public ownership is an unsound policy and a dangerous one.

mill industry in Ontario that were formerly located in Michigan and Wisconsin. The United States could not afford to have the prohibition of the exportation of pulpwood take effect because they have not enough wood and their industries would consequently die out in a few years, and they would have very expensive wood during those few years."

The Free Press is, perhaps, a somewhat extreme advocate of prohibition in that it is improbable that the industry would be transferred to Canada quite as quickly as it suggests. But in the main its arguments have much force. As it is supposed to know what the government is doing its article may be interpreted as meaning that this question will be the subject of legislation during the coming season.

NO TIME FOR PESSIMISTS

The solid foundations for good times in Canada are all still in evidence. There was need, perhaps, for some slowing down of the pace in some directions, but there is no good reason why timidity should be allowed to cause prolonged hesitation in the business world. The Export News, desiring to show that the pessimists have been overdoing it, has been printing a series of articles under the caption "Reasons to Cheer Up." In a recent issue this sensible subject is treated as follows:

A MATTER OF BUSINESS

As in former years there is confusion in regard to the harbor facilities just as the winter port season is opening. Dozens of excuses for the delay in wharf building and dredging will be put forward, but no one of them amounts to more than an attempt to shift responsibility. The first steamers will be due in a few days, and no one seems quite probable that makeshift methods will have to be resorted to if even the old boats are to be ready.

A PUBLIC QUESTION

The Toronto World has an Ottawa despatch to the effect that Sir Frederick Borden will not be seen in the House of Commons again. The Ottawa has no right to say anything unkind of any one, so it will only add that, unless he is greatly maligned, no set of Sir Frederick's political life would become him better than leaving it.—Victoria Colonist.

THE KAISER AND THE FUTURE

Without those who give the Kaiser full credit for keeping Germany's sword in the scabbard for twenty years remember that he has been in the habit of dropping his hand to the hilt, rattling the steel in his case, and presenting so scowling a face to his neighbors at intervals as to give the world scant excuse for regarding him as the dove of Europe. His peace speech in London has been well received, though having crossed the water to sit at his uncle's table, he could scarcely have stamped him as mad indeed. The fact that he has made the visit must count for something. Generally it will be thought to add to Britain's prestige rather than to have settled anything for the future.

CANADIAN BEGGARS

From London there comes again a complaint about the Canadians making appeal to the people of the United Kingdom in behalf of missions in Canada. Objection is raised to this practice on several grounds, all of them worthy of attention. Canada is asked why she does not pay for her own good works if she has faith in them. She is told that crime and poverty and ignorance and misery are fearfully prevalent in England and Scotland, and it is pointed out with force that the first duty of people there who have money to give is to relieve the distress seen at their own doors. By some it is contended that the money subscribed in England for Canadian charities comes from people who can well afford it, and that so long as it is devoted to good causes it is well to ask for it and to take it. This, however, in no way alters the fact that while the funds are crossing the ocean people in London's slums are dying for lack of attention.

Canada is blantly told that we have less need for charity and more ability to meet its demands than have the people of the United Kingdom, and in a general sense the statement is sound. Again, the Dominion is advertised there as a Canaan for immigrants, a land of boundless resources, where the wicked cease from troubling, and at the same time well-meaning missionaries are appealing from funds to save inhabitants of this happy country from starvation and spiritual darkness. The two stories do not agree. All in all there is much to be said for the London view that we should minister to our own needy folk, and that we should not lessen the force of our immigration advertising campaign by painting the horror and the desolation of life as it is found on our outer marches.

the Kaiser's London speech in the light of the fact that Germany soon will have a population of 80,000,000 souls. "Instead of 45,000,000, as in 1880," he writes, "the aggregate is now nearly 90,000,000. While this is the natural outcome of industrial prosperity it also constitutes a serious problem. In fact, the point upon which German political thinkers are now concentrating their attention is that in 1925 the empire will contain some 90,000,000 inhabitants, whereas its natural resources will not suffice to feed more than half that number. Some means must therefore be found to pay for the foreign foodstuffs which are being imported in constantly increasing quantities. The difficulty is further enhanced by the fact that Germany is not rich in raw materials, and it consequently becomes all important for the German nation to find stable markets for its manufactures. Industry has increased the population, and industry must therefore find the means to feed it; and this can only be done if Germany becomes a world-power and partakes in colonial enterprises."

Of the grave problems raised by these conditions at home, the writer says: "Obviously these considerations must be given due weight in judging of the value of the pacific declarations of the Emperor William. More than this, the first step which Germany makes towards territorial expansion must disturb the peace of one continent, if not of two. The Teuton need not be much of a Jingo to exhibit some impatience over the fact that the greatest river in Germany, which represents more than a third of the internal navigation of the empire, and which supplies most of her industrial districts, has for ports two foreign towns. In order that the Rhine may have German towns as outlets, there is but one solution: the annexation of Holland crowned by that of Antwerp. Were Holland to be incorporated with the German Empire there would be gained a long stretch of free coast, an arrival for the fleet in case of war, and the possession of the Dutch Indies, with their huge area, their diversified products and their population of 38,000,000 inhabitants. But there are two great nations which cannot allow Germany to absorb Holland and Belgium, and these are England and France, while there is one which must veto the incorporation of the Dutch West Indies with the German Empire, and that is the United States. In short, the entente between France and England has for its political reason resistance to the declared or assumed views and ambitions of the Emperor William, while the slightest regard for the Monroe Doctrine must compel the United States to resist with all the force at its command the establishment of a German naval arsenal in the Caribbean Sea."

Mrs. Bradley's Defence for Killing Senator Brown Will Be Insanity

MRS. ANNA M. BRADLEY

Washington, Nov. 15.—That the defence of Mrs. Anna M. Bradley, on trial in the criminal court No. 1, on the charge of murdering former United States Senator Brown, would be insanity was made evident beyond question by the preliminary statement made to the court today by her attorney, Mr. Hoover. He stated that Mrs. Bradley was completely sane at the time she shot Senator Brown, but that she had become insane since that time. He stated that she had been insane for some time before she shot Senator Brown, and that she had been insane for some time after she shot Senator Brown. NEW BRUNSWICK'S HIGHEST WATERFALL

The following note on the height of the waterfall on Fall Brook, Miramichi, was written before a recent meeting of the Natural History Society. It is by Prof. W. F. Ganong and reads: It is commonly believed by those having interest in such matters that the waterfall on Fall Brook, Miramichi, is the highest in New Brunswick. But the evidence is conflicting. One James Alexander, who was the first to mention it, estimated its height as sixty to seventy feet (L'Ancadie, 1849, II., 225), and his opinion is of value, and is supported by the fact that it is directly by lowering a weighted line from the brink above to the pool below, but it ended in failure and disaster to the apparatus.

A WATCH IN A RING. London Overtaken by a New Fad. Tiny Timepieces Set in Ring and Worn Over Milady's Glove Now Very Fashionable—Hundred Dollars Lowest Price for These New Ornaments.

London, Nov. 15.—Tiny watches, that tell the time with surprising accuracy and which are worn on finger rings or milady's glove, are the very latest novelties in the form of practical ornaments to be seen now in the windows of a Bond street jeweller.

The jeweller in question received one of these ring watches recently from his Swiss watchmaker, who had his workman make the ornament as a result of an argument over the question into how many spaces the works of an accurate timepiece could be compressed.

James E. Harrigan Arrives After Twenty Years' Absence

HERE TO SEE MOTHER

Indian Home Made Joyful Friday Night By His Visit—Talks of Dawson and the Gold Country—He Has Prospered Well There.

There was joy in the home of Thomas Coll, Indian town, Friday night when James E. Harrigan, who has been absent for twenty years, returned to his home in the Klondike.

This is his first visit home in twenty years and he is very glad to see his mother. She is more than eighty years of age but retains her faculties well and has kept up a regular correspondence with her absent children.

Naturally in his twenty years' experience in the mining camps, Mr. Harrigan has passed through some remarkable experiences, and he talked interestingly to a Telegraph reporter for an hour yesterday afternoon soon after his arrival.

Talks of the Gold Land.

"I have never been sick since I went away," he observed. "Everybody is healthy in Dawson City. Yes, it is cold, but the temperature is about seventy below, but that would not be as cold as forty below here, as there is no wind."

Mr. Harrigan said that the idea that Dawson had once been a very lawless city was not correct. "There was never a murder," he said, "which was not cleared up and the guilty parties punished."

HORSE RAN AWAY;

WM. SECORD KILLED

Red Head Farmer Thrown from Load of Hay in Princess Street

SKULL FRACTURED

Horse Ran Down Steep Hill Towards Courtenay Bay—Boy Clung to Load Till Crown Street Was Reached, Then Thrown But Not Hurt.

William Secord, aged about sixty, a farmer belonging to Red Head, had his skull fractured in a runaway accident in Princess street Friday afternoon and died early Saturday morning in the General Hospital.

Mr. Secord and the lad drove into town with a single team load of hay for John A. Davidson. This was to be delivered at Mr. Davidson's barn at the foot of Princess street.

At about 4.30 o'clock the team reached the top of the steep Princess street hill, down which it was necessary to go to reach the barn.

When about one half the distance to Pitt street was reached the horse ran away and the sudden jolting caused Mr. Secord to lose his seat and he slid down the front part of the load.

It is thought he fell in front of the wheel and was run over, for one of his ears was almost torn from the head and it, transpired afterwards, his skull was fractured.

Meanwhile the horse continued down the hill, the boy clinging to the top of the load. The cart struck the fence along the dump at the foot of the hill and the horse brought the horse to a standstill but it also dislodged the boy from his place and he fell to the ground.

The injured man lingered unconscious through the evening and died about 12.30 Saturday morning.

Mr. Secord had been picked up by some workmen near by and Dr. Warwick telephoned for him. Dr. Warwick's examination brought the opinion that the man's skull was fractured and he ordered him taken to the hospital.

The funeral took place Friday.

The scheme will be submitted to them for ratification and it is likely that a deputation will be named to wait on the government at the opening of the session, probably in February.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

NOT ENTIRELY BROKE

Throng Attend Horse Show and Opera, With Caruso as the Attraction.

New York, Nov. 18.—The full New York social season was opened in tonight with the opening of the opera at the Metropolitan Opera House and the horse show at Madison Square Garden and society lent its best effort to attend the double event.

The budding season might be heralded a success. With the opera and Caruso singing for the evening's honors against the horse show, society was much distraught to choose between them and then in good-natured despair elected to divide the evening and attend both attractions.

Workers of the horse to the number of several hundred gathered today in the garden for the opening of the twenty-third annual horse show and as usual, the hunters were the feature of the first day's class. Society, too, came in not a few numbers during the afternoon and from the boxes which fringe the tan banking and the promenade observed Count Szechenyi and his fiancée, Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, who are shortly to be married.

The future countess was delighted over the success of her brother, Reginald Vanderbilt, who secured three blue ribbons and several lower prizes with his entries.

An extensive cave area exists beyond that which has been explored. What is known today of the cave region is told in an article by A. O. Wheeler in the annual report of the surveyor-general of Canada.

This cave region is to be opened to tourists. It is only about six miles from Glacier, the nearest station on the Canadian Pacific railway.

A good trail has been cut and a road is to be built between Glacier and the caves. In the caves ladders have been placed and paths roped in; plank walks are to be built across rough places and in other ways the visit to the caves is to be made comfortable and convenient.

It is still rough work, for steep climbing is required to reach the region, and none but seasoned pedestrians can explore the caves and make their way round the circuit in a day. A camp has been established at the caves in which visitors may comfortably spend the night.

The caves were discovered by Charles H. Deutschan in May, 1904, while he was hunting big game and prospecting for minerals. It was a year before anything was done to ascertain their extent and character.

Deutschan has done most of the exploring. Mr. Wheeler calls him a remarkable man, and what he says about the work Deutschan has done without assistance shows that he is devoid of fear.

Time and again he has descended into these caves alone. He has penetrated depths of blackest darkness, illuminated only by the ray of a tallow dip. Added to the darkness in the caves is a mist of acetylene lamps, which have proved very serviceable.

The caverns occur at this place only because here is a limestone deposit, though this rock is rare in the Selkirk. As one walks along in the valley of Cougar creek he will discover that the roaring mountain torrent suddenly disappears in the earth and away below he will find the place where it comes to the surface again.

One will find other streams where similar phenomena occur. He will see in the distance a beautiful waterfall, sixty feet high, and as he approaches will be surprised to find that its waters do not flow away, but sink where they fall into a great hole and disappear into the subterranean regions.

These underground waterways are the extension and not the rule in the Selkirk and the main range of the Rockies. Only two streams of the kind have been found in the main range of the Rocky Mountains.

Another curious phenomenon is observed. No matter how warm the day may be, one wanders among these mountains he may come to more than one place where a cold draft of wind strikes him.

If he looks for the cause he will find a crack in the rock through which comes a current of air like that produced by an electric fan, but much stronger. The air comes from somewhere in the interior of the mountain. These air currents gave the first intimation of the existence of the caves.

The streams of water for ages dug into the limestone and wore it away. The floors of some of the caves are now 250 feet below the surface.

Here and there the faters, hanging from side to side for centuries, were away broad surfaces, so that the caves are wide; then something caused them to flow again, and the water, which had been in the beds for themselves, and today they roar scores of feet below the general level of the floor.

Scattered here and there over the floor are enormous blocks of rock which in the opinion of a mining engineer fell from the roof. Mr. Wheeler is of the opinion that something as potent as an earthquake must have been necessary to detach them from the rock walls.

In places the water have excavated side channels, making connections with other underground passages. Some of these lateral openings are so low that they can be traversed only by crawling.

Nature did not have the comfort of the tourist in mind when she dug these caverns, and a great deal must yet be done before they can be comfortable traversed.

These caverns are very different from the great show caves of the United States. The decorations that make the glory of Luray are wanting. A few stalactites are fastened to the walls, but the work is not as fine as that of the great show caves. The largest is only eighteen inches long.
