COLD FROM THE OCEAN'S BED. A Nugget Brought Up While Sounding

Off Newfoundland Banks.

[Baltimore American.] Second Officer G. Nath, of the North German Lloyd steamer Roland, which arrived at Locust Point yesterday from Bremen, has a small nugget of gold that came from the depths of the At-Ocean. The nugget was drawn up from the ocean with the lead of the unding apparatus while Officer Nath was ascertaining the depth of the water off the Banks of Newfoundland, when the Roland was steaming along through a thick fog. When the sounding lead was lifted on the steamer's deck the nugget fell out, and it was probably brought up in the piece of leather that is used to fasten the lead to the sounding line Officer Nath had no idea that he had found a piece of gold, but he put the little stone in his pocket, intending to keep it as a curiosity that had been mother, Mrs. Frances J.
