REQUESTED TO RESIGN

Scheme for the Council to Quit

Members Are Indignant at the Proposal and the Well Laid Plans Gang Aglee.

Some of those most vitally effected by the closing of the dance halls and the permanent cessation of gambling are real mad about something and at somebody. How to most offend the commissioner and the Yukon council and express their displeasure at the way things are going could not for some days be determined, but at last the happy idea suggested itself to have the members of the city council resign in a body. That's the stuff. Have 'em resign in a bunch, tell the gov. we won't play in his back yard any more and he can take his old law and go to blazes with it. If we can't run this shebang as we want to we'll do like a few others, we'll quit. That was the plan.

To think was but a prior necessity of action and yesterday a nicely prepared and carefully typewritten resignation, covering two pages and setting forth by means of many whys and wherefore the whyness and the whyness of the contemplated action, was passed around for the signatures of the aldermen. The tender missive by which six good men tried and true were presumed to tear themselves away from the municipal body with one fell swoop was addressed to his worship the mayor. Among the many reasons given for the action of the proposed signers was that as bosses of the city job they were dead failures, the N.W.M.P. being the power in front of the throne now as they always have been heretofore. The police, it went on to state, constantly interfered with the work of the council, the members of the latter were never consulted upon matters pertaining to the city's welfare, and the whole thing, in plain English, was a farce.

"Curley" Munroe was the envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to whom was assigned the duty of securing the signatures of the aldermen, and yesterday afternoon in the bright heyday of youth he sallied forth on his mission. The first person called upon was Alderman Adair. What the latter said when asked to sign his own death warrant could not well be printed by any self-respecting newspaper that hoped to continue its publication, but it might be remarked that he did not sign. The other members of the council visited made about the same remarks as Alderman Adair, though probably not quite so emphatic and demonstrative. And so a well-intended deed came to an end. The city council has not resigned; they will still do business at the same old stand and continue to play second fiddle to the gentlemen from Regina.

A WRONG DIAGNOSIS.

Is the direct cause of many a death, but simply because a doctor makes a mistake is no reason that you should do likewise. If you keep your system in proper order you will never need a doctor. A torpid liver is the direct cause of more complaints than any other part of the human anatomy. To keep this organ in a good, healthy condition you should always keep a good liver pill in the house to be taken when occasion requires. MR. I. URAN CAPTURED

By Police at Fortymile Post Today

Took Chances on Flight Rather Than Appear for Theft Sentence.

As fades the morning dew from pumpkin vine or from huckleberry bush, silently and unostentatiously, so did Inadore Uran, convicted of and awaiting sentence for stealing three ounces of gold dust from Reuben Marsh late from Dawson between the setting and rising of the sun of yesterday and today and when all nature is supposed to be wrapt in the long, white, untraced robes of night.

Uran was convicted early in the week before Mr. Justice Craig and, pending the hearing of an argument for a new trial, he was released in 1000 cash bail until Monday when he was to appear for sentence in case of a new trial being denied.

But Inadore decided to take no chances on joining the barrack's labor brigade, so getting into a small boat last night he slipped quietly down the river. It is barely possible that as Inadore drifted past Dog Island he called out to any smallpox germs that may have been making a night of it: "Keep away from me!"

It is also possible that he would occasionally burst into song and sing: "Larboard vatch, ahoy," or "Roll away Rover, der vater so blue. Like some ledles ve float in mine leeth canoe."

Aias for Inadore Uran! The police have been anticipating his flight and have kept an eye on him. His departure was soon discovered and a message was flashed to Fortymile. Disguise in Inadore's case would have been useless.

He had his night's and forenoon's ride for "noddings," for at one o'clock this afternoon a message by the police from the Fortymile post read:

"Uran captured." The mistake Inadore made was in not leaving the country in a balloon. "Good night!"

WATER FRONT NOTES.

The Columbian arrived yesterday afternoon with four sacks of way mail and passengers as follows: Mrs. M. Tonghill, A. Ritewalter, E. Masvick, R. Mauval, S. E. Malligan, E. Greene, J. T. Boyles, F. A. Stegert, F. Melton, G. Olson, J. Lind, Mrs. A. J. Hunt, F. C. Elliott, R. Morrison and C. J. Donly. She leaves again for Whitehorse Monday morning at 8 o'clock.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon no word had as yet been heard from any of the lower river steamers and the navigation department of the N. C. Company is at a loss to account for the extraordinary delay in the arrival of their boats this year. An excellent stage of water is said to be found at the Yukon flats which renders their non-appearance still more inexplicable.

Telegraph Wire Down

The telegraph line went down at some point south of Aikia last night and no through messages were received in Dawson today in consequence.

HAT THROWING DOG-KICKING

Whisky the Latest Brand on Tap in Dawson

Does Not Wholly Replace Fighting Brand—Colon's Narrow Escape.

Edmund Lacroix, a non-English-speaking gentleman who arrived from Stewart a few days ago with a raft of wood, was in court this morning on the charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct, the latter consisting of throwing his hat in the air and of kicking dogs that passed in pursuit of the even tenor of their ways. Just the reason for Edmund's antipathy to the canine race was not brought out, but it was doubtless due to the brand he had imbibed.

While the court was waiting for a party to come in to act as interpreter for Lacroix, a spectator in the court, presumably a friend of the accused, climbed into the prisoner's box with him but ere he could whisper in his ear something sweet for him to hear (apologies to Durling (Chloe) Constable Stewart grabbed the intruder by the back, yanked him out of the box and ordered him from the court room.

Through the interpreter Lacroix pleaded guilty. He was fined 25 and costs and the amount was duly produced by a friend.

The only other case of drunk and disorderly was that of John Sherman, a longshoreman who is probably no relation to the man whose bill in congress denominated silver many years ago, which act Populists to this day refer to as "the crime of '73." While drunk on First avenue yesterday evening John had managed to administer physical rebuke to one Eddie Dolan, the man who frequently alleges to entertain from the stage. In backing away from Sherman the footlight favorite fell over a precipice but it will be cheering news to his friends both in this country and Europe to learn that he was not injured by the fall.

Sherman pleaded guilty and was given an option or paying 25 and costs or of making himself generally useful around the barracks for a period of seven days. Up to the time court adjourned John was evidently considering the option as he had shown no symptoms of coming up with the ready John Davis.

Kerkowdrip—that may not be the correct spelling of the name but it is the phonetic pronunciation—a Jap, was up on the charge of allowing his premises to become a filthy condition. As he had gotten a shove on him and closed up after being warned for effort, the charge was dismissed.

Once upon a time there lived a very brave knight named Strongarm. He was the best wrestler in the whole country, for nobody could throw him.

coveries, has this caution against the ice-cream peddler who is now abroad in the city streets: "The ice-cream season is at hand, and the street vender is doing a thriving business among school children and street urchins. Few people realize what a menace to health is found in the sale of this delicacy. Medical authorities are beginning to realize that it is an important factor in the spread of disease. A number of cases have recently been observed in which symptoms of irritant poisoning and even death were the result of eating ice cream bought of street peddlers."

keep a sediment of dust if they be woolen, and will surely sift some of the deposit upon the garments nearest them. That is the reason why light silk or muslin gown is often mysteriously soiled while in a trunk. The dust comes, not from without, as is supposed, but from within.

Having "carpeted" your trunk well with your heaviest clothing and covered this with tissue paper, you should place the medium weight clothing next above. Your light woollens and heavier silks have their place here.

Happy is the woman who has a trunk long enough to admit of her placing her skirts full length in it, for a skirt can bear much folding from side to side, though but little from top to bottom, or vice versa.

In fact, the less folding done, the better. If your skirts are narrow enough and your trunk wide enough to lay them from side to side, so much is gained.

Between every separate fold of the skirt and daintily placed among the founces and lace there should be one or more layers of the tissue paper. Never turn a skirt wrong side out.

Cover the second or medium layer of clothes, this also arranged so that the surface is absolutely smooth, with the paper, and you are ready for your gossamer trifles of gowns if you have any.

My pink gown in "King Dodo" has been worn almost every night for seven months and it has traveled 80,000 miles. Yet in spite of the fact that it is made of embroidered crepe and chiffon, the most perishable of all dress materials, you can see that it is as fresh as though I had ordered it last week.

Portland Boy a Hero

Portland, July 2.—Bravery and presence of mind on the part of a year-old Michael Cohn saved his mother and four little brothers from being cremated this morning in a fire which destroyed the dwelling of the family, at Hall and Fifth streets. Young Cohn went into the room, which was filled with smoke and flames, and dragged out his unconscious mother and then returned carrying a lighted lamp. The mother immediately took fire and was destroyed. Young Cohn, who rushed to the assistance of his mother and the brothers, succeeded in rescuing them all.

Freak Given a Name

New York, July 2.—It has been decided that the strange fish just received at the Battery park aquarium from Bermuda is a specimen of the channomuraena vitata, or striped channomuraena, first discovered in 1844, and part snake and yet fish. More than 10,000 persons viewed the marine freak during its first day of exhibition.

Art in Packing a Trunk

You can save hundreds of dollars a year on your wardrobe by knowing how to pack your trunk. There is nothing to which the proverb, "There are two ways of doing everything, the good and the bad," applies more than trunk packing. Delicate gowns can be ruined by a day's travel, if poorly packed, or they can be as fresh as new after six months of frequent packing and unpacking if the owner knows how to prepare them for travel.

My pink gown in "King Dodo" has been worn almost every night for seven months and it has traveled 80,000 miles. Yet in spite of the fact that it is made of embroidered crepe and chiffon, the most perishable of all dress materials, you can see that it is as fresh as though I had ordered it last week.

There is but one reason for that. I have always packed it with the consideration it deserved.

You have probably heard conscientious advisers say: "Put the heavy things on top." They explain that this should be done so that the light things underneath will "carry well." That is absurd.

The lighter and more dainty the article to be packed the less the pressure upon it should be. Commence with the heaviest things. Your golf suit and cap, your hammock rug, your "individual blanket" and your own bath rugs and bath towels, if you are taking them, should carpet the floor of your trunk, so to speak. Be careful that they form a smooth, even surface, for the little hills and hollows made by the hurried packing of the heavy garments are responsible for the wrinkles in the layer of lighter clothes just above.

Ellen Terry and Irving

Henry Irving and Ellen Terry have separated forever.

The greatest Shylock in the world has lost his Portia.

At the end of twenty-three years at a most inauspicious moment Ellen Terry has chosen to shake off the Irving yoke.

The revival of "Faust" has been a failure.

Clary Loftus, twenty-five years younger than the great Terry, could not replace her in the hearts of English theatre-goers.

Her Marguerite has not been a success.

Alone, superb in spite of his sixty-three years, Henry Irving as Mephistopheles could not carry the play. "Faust" has been withdrawn.

In honor of the coronation the great actor has announced a tremendous and sumptuous revival of "The Merchant of Venice" with Florence Power the young English actress, as Bassanio.

But the question is, who will play Portia? At the same moment in honor of the coronation Beerbohm Tree announces an unequalled performance of "The Merry Wives of Windsor."

At the head of the cast appears the name of Ellen Terry as Mistress Page.

Ellen Terry in a Shakespearean production at a rival theatre under a rival manager!

The theatrical world is amazed. It is the first time in twenty-three years that she has appeared in London under any management but that of Henry Irving.

Not even the fact that the Mistress Page is to be played by Madge Kendal to whom Ellen Terry has not spoken for many years, has deterred her. She will act opposite her enemy.

It is predicted that Beerbohm Tree will have his hands full, while poor Henry Irving's are stretched out helplessly empty.

Leading ladies meanwhile besiege the doors of the Lyceum. Mrs. Brown-Potter has been suggested as possible Portia. The name of Mrs. Langtry has been hinted. Olga Nethersole has been spoken of. But these are all rumors. In the circumstances the theatrical air is full of rumormongers.

Some years ago Ellen Terry first threatened to desert the actor manager, who by the most elaborate and artistic stage settings, by the most perfect craft, by the most tremendous study has helped her to fame.

The world that is interested in acting buzzed some four years ago with the gossip that Henry Irving, old, feeble in health and saddened by reverses, was about to lose the greatest drawing card.

Her sympathy was tremendously attracted to a storm of universal condemnation it was announced that the double had been patched up and that Ellen Terry would accompany the great actor to America.

A triumphal tour was the result. Gold poured into the coffers of the Irving combination. The great actress recovered health and spirits. Her act had never suffered.

An incident of that tour is worth recording. Ellen Terry was ill in Toronto and the company had come to New York. Irving played "Robespierre" without her to hundreds of empty seats. She rejoined the company and the house was crowded.

She has ever disputed the fact that the Irving company she is a drawing card.

She has ever disputed the fact that the great actor she owes the development of her art.

Henry Irving advances in years and Terry's presence has become necessary to his success.

Her tremendous popularity has suffered through active rivalry, a fickle audience and the inevitable encroachment of time.

Beerbohm Tree and Henry Alexander, London's favorite actor-manager, are Irving's acknowledged rivals.

Now when London is at its gayest, when the theatrical season is to be more than usually brilliant, when the office receipts should mount to the festivities, when every manager is putting forth his best attractions Beerbohm Tree announces "The Merry Wives of Windsor" with a sensational combination—Mrs. Kendal and Ellen Terry.

After twenty-three years Irving's name has joined the opposition, "trying sharp-toothed, unscrupulous here," like a vulture gnawing at his heart.

The great English tragedian, whom the late Queen capped as the greatest actor of his age, has aged ten years in one.

The dear friend and associate of the "The Merry Wives of Windsor" always called his leading lady ideal confederates in the theatrical world.

Ellen Terry's sanctum behind the scenes was hers as much as her home at Winchelsea among the honeysuckles. It was large, comfortable, luxurious, artistic. It was hers absolutely, never occupied by any one else unless she loaned it. It did not seem possible that she should ever desert it except for old age or illness. Certainly not for a rival manager in the London field.

Ellen Terry was bitterly censured three years ago just before the production of Robespierre, when it was rumored that she had quarreled with Sir Henry. At that time the name of a man crept into the gossip. He was an artist and amateur author, a man of great wealth called Bert Cooper. Ellen Terry toured in the provinces with him as her assistant manager. She did this in spite of the advice of friends theatrical and social. It aroused no end of gossip.

Finally she was persuaded to return to the Lyceum for her own sake as well as for Sir Henry's and art's.

She consented to take the small part of Clarissa in "Robespierre," but all through the rehearsals there were incessant rumors of squabbles undignified and unworthy.

Sir Henry had the sympathy of the whole professional world, to whom he has always been generous and most helpful.

Especially on the first night of "Robespierre" the feebleness of Terry's performance was commented upon.

For the first time it was reported that Irving had said bitter things of his associate. His friends declared that she had nearly ruined his career by inattention and carelessness.

On the other hand it was protested that she had come back to the Lyceum to play a thankless part in "Robespierre" because she knew that Irving needed the added strength of her name.

It had been whispered that jealousy that hideous monster that age cannot kill, is at the bottom of the separation—jealousy, though Irving is a grandfather and Terry a grandmother.

Whatever the cause the separation is declared to be final. And theatrical people are wondering how long Irving, for thirty years England's idol, can last without his mascot.

After "The Merry Wives of Windsor" it is said that Ellen Terry will be starred alone.

Meanwhile her separation from Irving has brought about a curious meeting.

THE DESERTED TRAGEDIAN.

Many years ago, when Ellen Terry and Madge Kendal were both young, they were in the same company at the Bristol theatre. They were friends then. They remained friends until "Madge," with her customary frankness, spoke her mind in public about an actress who, she said, was so indifferent to her art that she would actually feign sickness and disappoint an audience when she wanted to have a good time feasting and drinking with friends.

People said the shoe fitted the fair Ellen. Trouble brewed and bubbled over a little later when Madge delivered her famous speech on the morality of the stage. Ellen Terry took exception to Mrs. Kendal's assertion that she herself was the only pure woman on it, and since that day, though they have met occasionally, they have never spoken.

Now as Mistress Ford and Mistress Page in "The Merry Wives of Windsor," they will meet for the first time, and as they have several important scenes together they must speak.

Imprisoned in a Well

Paris, Ont., June 27.—After seventeen hours spent in a supreme effort to release Joseph Sanford from the awful position which he has occupied for three and one-half days, John Carnie was lifted to the surface of the shaft tonight, thoroughly exhausted. His work had resulted in the partial release of the entombed man and the opening of the way for air and food to be given him. Sanford was actually discovered by Carnie late in the afternoon, although communication with him had been carried on throughout the day. When the well was pierced by the tunnel Carnie thrust his arm through the opening and encountered the elbow of the man projecting above a piece of debris. The man was then in a half-sitting, half-reclining position on, with his knees drawn up, his head thrown back over a pile of bricks and his features almost entirely hidden by the heavy coating of fine sand. In this position Sanford had evidently lain since the cave-in on Thursday morning. In spite of the piles of

ELECTIONS THIS FALL

Governor Speaks of the Probable Dates

That for a Seat in the House Can Not be Held Till Order in Council is Passed.

The question as to when the territorial and federal elections will be held on this fall is one that is agitating the minds of many of the Yukon electors at present.

I am having Mr. Chattaway, the director of surveys, look into this matter of the division of the territory and I find that it is going to be rather difficult to establish any tangible boundaries on account of the country being entirely unsurveyed.

The Dominion election, however, continued the commissioner, "is a different matter, one concerning the date of which I know nothing more than do you. That is arranged by an order in council at Ottawa and the first thing we will know of it will be the notification of such action.

Preparing for Change. July 2.—The civil governor of the Philippines, William H. Taft, was called to Washington on the subject of the vatican on the subject of the disposition of the island lands in the islands, which was compiled here yesterday at the conference held between Gov. Taft, Mr. Foster, of the office of the secretary of the interior, and James F. Smith, of the supreme court of the Philippines, and O'Gorman, of Sioux Falls.

Barred From South Africa. The Hague, July 2.—The foreign office here has received a notification from the British government to the effect that the prisoners of war of foreign nationality will not be liberated until all the Boers are repatriated, with the exception of those who defray their own passages. The latter can secure their release before then, but they must not go back to South Africa.

school for the native Filipino clergy, who are destined partially to replace the friars when the agreement between the vatican and Judge Taft concerning the withdrawal shall have been concluded.

Washington, July 2.—The news from Rome received at the war department, in the shape of daily telegrams from Gov. Taft, is generally encouraging. It is decided that while no details can be given out for publication, it is evident that they are proceeding with the greatest activity, principally in the shape of verbal exchanges, though, for the sake of the record, these are generally supplemented by written notes showing in condensed form the substance of what has been said.

SAYS HE WILL QUIT

Clarke to Withdraw His Attack

On Salary Bylaw Passed by the City Council Some Weeks Ago.

By the time these lines are read, the second right hand upper cut that was aimed at the city salary bylaw, the ordinance that provides a monthly stipend for the city aldermen, will have been parried and the steam behind the blow that was to have raised such merry havoc with the plethoric purses of the city dads will have passed off into the ephemeral ether as an effervescent and evanescent episode.

In speaking of the matter last night with some friends, Clarke said he was "going to quit," whatever interpretation may be placed on his words, and as City Attorney Donaghy was present at the time, as an evidence of good faith Clarke at once sat down at a table and wrote but a notice agreeing to withdraw his motion, serving it upon the city attorney immediately afterward.

The Boer Army.

London, June 18.—A despatch from Kimberley reports that Commandant Kemp, Delarey's lieutenant, in an interview today, gave some interesting figures regarding the war. The commandant said that about 50,000 Boers were in the field at the outset and that only 1,500 out of 6,000 men available fought at Colenso, where the Boer losses were not heavy.

Barred From South Africa. The Hague, July 2.—The foreign office here has received a notification from the British government to the effect that the prisoners of war of foreign nationality will not be liberated until all the Boers are repatriated, with the exception of those who defray their own passages.

First Rainfall. Helena, July 11.—North Montana has experienced the first rainfall since October. Ranchmen are now assured of plenty of water for grass for some time.

Try Old Crow. Seattle, July 10.—Schooner Pearl, from Sinaki, Alaska, reports that when 400 miles northeast of that point she sailed through a quantity of pumice stone for nearly 90 miles.

Firemen Killed. Toronto, July 10.—Three firemen were killed and several injured in the conflagration which destroyed McIntosh & McCann's flour mills at this place.

FAILS TO CONVICT

Prosecution Falls Down in Theft Cases

In Which a Girl Was Charged With Robbing Jos. Cadieux and Max Landerville.

The cases of Maggie Cookson, charged with having on the night of July 1st and morning of July 2nd stolen $13.50 from Joseph Cadieux, and about four hours later of having stolen $70 from Max Landerville, were both dismissed in Magistrate Wroughton's court this morning, the prosecution having made a miserable failure in the presentation of its evidence, due partly to the fact that its witnesses, with the exception of an unimportant one in the person of Roy Freeman, a messenger boy, were unwilling ones.

From the evidence all parties were more or less intoxicated at the time the stealings were alleged to have taken place. The woman herself returned the $13.50 to Cadieux when he complained about the theft and her "best man," whose name, not for his own sake but for that of his relatives, is withheld, had gone to a friend of Landerville's with $70 to square the charge with him.

Plans for Warships. Washington, July 2.—The navy department has its plans practically complete for the big warships just authorized by the new naval law, and to bear the names of Louisiana, Connecticut, Tennessee and Washington.

The armored cruisers are to have a displacement of 14,500 tons, and a speed of twenty-two knots. Their batteries will consist of four twelve-inch guns, eight eight-inch guns, twelve seven-inch and twenty three-inch guns and a large number of smaller weapons scattered over the ship.

William R. Brandon, practically a physical and mental wreck from the excessive use of whisky, was arraigned before Magistrate Wroughton this morning on the charge of uttering worthless paper, an extended account of which appeared in yesterday's issue of this paper.

Caught on a Trestle. Youngstown, O., July 2.—Luke Brothers, Mike, Simon and Luke Shaokiv, were caught on the trestle of the Mahoning valley electric line near Struths, four miles east of here last night, and in an endeavor to escape injury lay down on the edge of the rails.

What's the matter? "Oh! I'm sick!" "Well, it shows that he was sick transiently and went to glory Monday."

Won the Toss. London, July 11.—Eton won the toss in the annual cricket match of Lords with Harrow. Their first innings was signally short, all out for 72.

Good Crops. Toronto, July 10.—Ontario crop reports indicate that there will be a good harvest except of corn, which is backward with the wet.

A VATICAN SENSATION

Papal Authorities Refuse to Recognize Marriage

Between the Clerical Prince and a Divorced American Woman.

Rome, July 12.—A sensation has been caused at Rome by the action of the vatican authorities towards Prince Joseph Rospiigliosi, an American. Her husband is the head of an ancient family of the clerical nobility and his brother is commandant of the Papal Guard. On August 28th, 1901, Prince Rospiigliosi married Mrs. Marie Jennings Reid Parkhurst, of Washington, the divorced wife of Col. Frederick Parkhurst, of Bangor, Maine. The civil ceremony was not recognized by the vatican. Prince Rospiigliosi later engaged an English Blue Sister as nurse and the latter took up her duties, but Cardinal Macchi, secretary of the apostolic briefs, forbade the sister to fulfill her duties on the ground that the marriage is non-existent.

William R. Brandon, practically a physical and mental wreck from the excessive use of whisky, was arraigned before Magistrate Wroughton this morning on the charge of uttering worthless paper, an extended account of which appeared in yesterday's issue of this paper.

At the request of Sergeant Smith for the prosecution, hearing of the case was adjourned until Tuesday morning. Brandon raised no objection to the continuance as he probably thinks that in jail is the only place he can refrain from issuing checks.

Caught on a Trestle.

Youngstown, O., July 2.—Luke Brothers, Mike, Simon and Luke Shaokiv, were caught on the trestle of the Mahoning valley electric line near Struths, four miles east of here last night, and in an endeavor to escape injury lay down on the edge of the rails. Mike had his leg and arm torn off, hip fractured and nose broken, and is in a critical condition. Luke was struck by the car and died from a fractured skull. Simon was knocked off into a gully, thirty feet below and escaped with slight injuries.

PHILLIPINE GOVERNMENT

New Laws Go Into Effect at Once

Civil Administration Will Soon be in Full Progress—Chairman Cooper Talks.

Washington, July 2.—Chairman Cooper, of the house committee on insular affairs, says steps will be taken at once to put the Philippine government act in operation. "The first step," said Mr. Cooper today, "will be the complete transfer of authority from the military to the civil officials, except in the Moro country, where there is some lingering disorder. The transfer will be accomplished by a proclamation from the president which it is understood will be issued on the fourth of July.

"Beside turning over the authority to the civil officials, the change will permit a considerable reduction of the military force in the islands, although orders already given contemplate a reduction to 18,000 men. In 1900 we had 70,000 men in the Philippines, so that we soon will have reduced the force by 52,000 officers and men, and the transfer of authority and the act doubtless will lead to a further reduction before long.

"The next step will be to take the census as provided by the act. Gov. Taft told me this work would begin as soon as he reached Manila. His plan is to have the work done as far as possible by Filipinos, and the commission will get up their own census system, instead of having it done by the census office at Washington, although they are empowered to get census experts from here by making application to the president. The purpose, however, is to make the work thoroughly a local one, so that it will serve the Filipinos as an object lesson. The census will take about a year.

To Blow Up a Fort

Brest, July 2.—Two men attempted to enter the magazine lying just outside the fort yesterday evening, and wounded the sentinel with a revolver. The latter fired upon them with his rifle, raising an alarm, and his assailants escaped. A similar attempt was made Saturday evening, and it is believed anarchists intended to blow up the magazine, which contains powder sufficient for 5,000,000 cartridges.

A countryman wandering about a churchyard came upon a stone having the inscription, "Sic transit gloria mundi." "What does it mean?" he asked of the sexton, who had been explaining the inscriptions to him. DAUGHTER OF A PEASANT EXECUTES A $12,000,000 SWINDLE.

HUMBERT
WHO HAS LIVED LIKE A PRINCE
HUSBAND OF MADAM HUMBERT

MADAM HUMBERT
WHO STOLE
$12,000,000.

THE CONSPIRATORS
FATHER, EX-MINISTER OF JUSTICE

A huge safe, locked and sealed, containing half a dozen newspapers, a few worthless gold mine shares and a bogus diamond brooch.

On this meagre stock in trade a Paris family has lived in princely luxury for the last twenty years and perpetrated a swindle of incredible magnitude.

The sensational expose, just precipitated by the flight of the principals, shows that M. Fred Humbert and Madame Humbert were successful in defrauding the largest financial institutions of Paris, even including the Bank of France itself, out of a sum exceeding $12,000,000.

And the marvel of it is that the scheme was managed with such skill and effrontery that the operators lived in perfect security and entirely unsuspected, and held high position in the social, financial, artistic and philanthropic interests of the French capital.

Although a man had a share in the position it was in the fertile brain of a woman that the extraordinary scheme originated.

This woman, Madame Humbert, nee Therese d'Aurignac, is the daughter of a cook, a southern peasant of the simplest type.

She is not pretty. She is practically without education, and yet she has managed to overreach lawyers, financiers and detectives, and to concoct and execute a conspiracy exceeding anything recorded in history.

The story begins twenty-five years ago, when there died at Nice, an American, Henry Robert Crawford, who was said to be a New Yorker.

His will had been the result of a fall through a plate glass window at all through a plate glass window at all.

Therese d'Aurignac, a member of the family through whose window Crawford plunged, nursed the injured Crawford. Erysipelas ensued, and Crawford was soon beyond hope of recovery.

When Crawford died it became known around that he had left all his fortune to his kind nurse, Mlle. d'Aurignac; and, sure enough, after a few days she produced a will which confirmed the statement and fixed the inheritance at $20,000,000.

Among the suitors who were attracted by the news of Mlle. d'Aurignac's good fortune was Frederic Humbert, an ex-deputy of the department of the Seine, the son of M. Humbert, a minister of justice in M. Freycinet's cabinet of 1882, keeper of the seals and vice president of the senate.

Humbert pressed his suit, and won the heiress, though among his aristocratic friends the match was regarded as almost a mesalliance, for the bride had absolutely nothing but her money to recommend her.

But M. Humbert was ambitious for a political career, and a union with millions seemed a great step forward.

Unfortunately it developed immediately after the wedding that the Humberts were not to be left in undisturbed possession of their alleged fortune.

According to the veracious tale spread broadcast by the wife it appeared that two Americans, Henry and Robert Crawford, also had possession of a will, signed by the Crawford of the plate glass accident. This will was of the same date as the Humberts'.

It bequeathed the $20,000,000 to Henry and Robert Crawford, "nephews, and to Mme. Marie d'Aurignac, on condition that the three paid Mme. Frederic Humbert an annuity of $72,000.

As a matter of fact, the two nephews were as mythical as the fortune. They were the creation of the Humberts, together with the second will.

To bear out the pretense of their great wealth the Humberts had found it necessary to invent rival claimants for the Crawford millions, so that while the litigation was pending they could borrow on the prospect of the money they were soon to control.

It was necessary to bring the Crawfords into court. Very well. The resourceful Therese had them represented by their counsel. Then no one doubted for an instant that the claimants were genuine.

Madame Humbert brought suit to obtain a first judgment. The case was admitted to court and argued. The bogus advocate pleaded strenuously for the Crawfords, but lost his case. The judge never had a suspicion of the real facts, and supposed that the trial was entirely bona fide.

Fortified by her victory, and having gained official verification at the hands of the French judiciary, the wily schemer pushed her plans still further.

She produced a signed agreement with the Crawfords which stipulated that pending the final settlement of the estate she should be permitted to remain custodian of all the jewels and securities comprising the Crawford fortune, on condition that she should lock them in a safe at her home, and never under any circumstances open the safe or use any of the contents. In case she violated the conditions she bound herself to forfeit all claim whatsoever to the estate.

The suit pursued its interminable course through the courts for a score of years. No one ever saw the Crawfords. Glib-tongued counsel represented those mysterious litigants.

The vast fortune, it was taken for granted for everyone, reposed snugly in the great safe that the Humberts had purchased especially for its reception and set up in their palace at No. 65 Avenue de la Grande Armee, near the Arc de Triomphe.

Incredible as it may seem, this explanation was always sufficient to satisfy the creditors, who grew gray waiting for the lawsuits to come to an end.

But a final decision was just what the Humberts did not wish. The Crawford nephews and the Humberts won and lost by turns, and the case traveled from the civil tribunals to the court of appeals and from the court of appeals to the court of cassation. Unconsciously the learned judges helped the swindlers by taking it for granted, in the long legal decisions rendered, that the $20,000,000 really existed. Who could imagine that the contents of the sealed safe consisted of a $2 brooch and a few worthless papers when again and again the best judges in the land had set forth that the Humberts were entitled to the entire fortune of $20,000,000 or that the Crawfords should get the estate and the Humberts only the annuity?

Meanwhile, the Humberts explained that they needed ready money. Paris bankers vied with each other for the privilege of placing their idle millions in the Humbert lap. The swindlers soon owned several fine country seats, a swift steam yacht, Le Levrier, and an art gallery containing priceless paintings, among them Corot's, Meissoniers and Ziem's, while on the grand staircase of the town house a $100,000 Raphael, "The Archangel," gazed sorrowfully at the fashionable guests who thronged the Humbert salon.

Mme. Humbert was always ablaze with jewels and magnificently dressed. At the opera she never failed to attract general attention. No extravagance was beyond the Humberts' means. The financial resources of Paris were at their disposal.

The Humberts, on the strength of their family name and the lawsuits, founded a life insurance company, La Societe la Rente Viviere, at Nos. 13 and 17 Rue Auber, and sold annuities the money obtained from which went into their private exchequer. The creditor cornered them with a demand for a paltry $500,000. They soon found the money to pay this, and so funded off a lawsuit which threatened to break into the carefully-guarded safe.

In the rooms where the Humberts gave their lavish entertainments, with leading actors and actresses to amuse the guests, the big safe was the star attraction. Sentries paced in front of it day and night. Privileged guests were permitted to look at the outside of the safe, admire the seal from a distance, pierce, in imagination, the massive steel doors, and reveal mentally in the twenty millions of money concealed there.

The lawsuits dragged on and might be undecided still, but for a certain matter of $20,000 which a certain Mr. Morel insisted on the Humberts paying him.

This man's claim induced M. Pitte, president of the Seine civil tribunal, to order the safe at the Humbert residence to be opened.

A great crowd assembled to witness the long-looked-for event. The servants permitted the locksmiths to enter. The Humberts were nowhere visible. After three hours' work the safe was opened and the gaping crowd saw:

A large brooch, the stones in which proved to be paste; value $2.
Some useless gold mine shares.
And a few newspapers.

Twenty or thirty others bring the amount up to over 20,000,000 francs, or $12,000,000.

Was ever such a splendid game played in the entire history of criminology?

Mass Gambler Worsted.
"I have all seen how the smart gamblers get the crimp put into him until he looks like a young man until he looks like a young man until he looks like a young man," observed the dealer, as he deftly swept the table and shuffled the cards.

"Some of you gentlemen may have gambled in Clark street in the old days. There I saw a sample of the wise man getting his fingers burned."

"Nineteen blue chips, one less than a stack, was Peter's stake. The blues were $500 a stack, so he had $475. He took a tip from the number of checks he had and called it ace nine."

"The dealer turned. When the first card showed an ace he was so nervous he could hardly shove out the next. It was the nine spot. Peter had won $1,900 on the turn, leaving him $175 to the good."

chance have I got to get even?" "Call yourself even," said the dealer. "It pays four for one, never dreaming that Peter would take the percentage against himself that goes with a call of the turn."

"Peter studied the layout and counted the checks. There remained in the box an ace, tray and a nine spot. The ace had won three times, but the nine had won three times. The deal had been going against double out."

"The dealer literally fell out of his chair."—Ex.
