ARRANGE FOR THE STORAGE OF POTATOES

Fairly Bountiful Crop of This Year Will Not be Left to Mercy of Speculators and Jobbers.

(Toronto Globe.) Present indications governing the potato situation point to a plentiful supply of tubers for the consumers of Ontario, though there are a few "buts" which may alter conditions to a certain extent.

There are at the present time plenty of potatoes in the Province to supply all the needs of the Ontario consumer in addition to a considerable quantity for export.

In former years, point out officials of the U. F. C. Company, potatoes from the United States were shipped to Ontario, but this year, due to the premium on American funds, there has been practically no trade of this description.

not permit of this trade developing to any great extent.

The West, also a factor in governing prices, here, while promising a good yield some weeks ago, has been hit by blight, labor shortage in harvesting and, to some extent, by frost.

In summing up the whole situation one is safe in saying that there will be no unusual developments already mentioned, plenty of tubers to go round among the consumers of Ontario at reasonable prices, both from the standpoint of the farmer and from that of the consumer.

LITTLE DOING IN HALIFAX ON THE WATERFRONT

The past week has been a particularly quiet one along the water-front. All summer there has been little work for the stevedores, and it is almost a miracle how some of them made a living.

From last Monday morning up to yesterday there was not a single arrival that was a benefit to some of the stevedores. The R. M. S. P. liner Caraque arrived on Sunday last from St. John and some men got work on her discharge.

side of these two steamers, the stevedores have had a workless week, and the north and south terminals have been deserted.

Halifax has quite an army of stevedores, it being estimated that over 1,500 men depend on the loading and unloading of ships for their living. A walk around the Deep Water terminals any morning last week would convince one that this vast army was without a job.

Not only have the stevedores been without work during the past week, but the pilots have also felt the quiet period.

Following the agitation for mixed education, the cutting short of hair by girl students found sway in Honan, the central province of China, which is usually more conservative than other provinces.

Warnings by the authorities against the practice of having no effect, the police are now arresting all offenders.

ARREST CHINESE GIRLS WHO WEAR SHORT HAIR

London, Nov. 10.—Girl students at Kaileng, China, are being arrested by the police for walking about the streets with their hair cut short.

MAKE PHYSICAL EXAMINATION COMPULSORY

Movement Expected to Culminate in Annual Physical Examination of Every Man, Woman and Child.

Washington, W. Va., Nov. 9.—As a result of alleged physical deterioration of the human race through preventable and curable diseases, a movement has been definitely started which it is believed may culminate in the annual compulsory physical examination of every man, woman and child in America.

Let there be a Federal law requiring the United States Department of Health to establish and maintain a system of Universal Compulsory Physical Examination and Education, says "Progress," a magazine of international circulation published here, in discussing the matter editorially.

While it is said that no definite system has been put forward as yet, pending a more mature public discussion and consideration of the general idea, Albert Nelson Dennis, writing in "Progress" suggests: "These details might provide for the compulsory physical examination, with necessary physical education of every man, woman and child in the United States and Territorial Possessions, for instance, annually. The examination should be conducted in absolute privacy and confidence by paid experts, preferably local boards of specialists. Men should be examined by men and women by women, with no question as to the qualifications of those in charge of the examination. There should be no direct charge for the examination. There should be a formal report, with or without recommendations or instructions, according to the findings in each individual case. These reports might be made out in triplicate, one copy being given to the person examined (or to the parents or guardian in case of a minor), one copy retained at the headquarters of the local health authorities and one copy filed with the United States Department of Health, Division of Public Physical Examination and Education. Where definite recommendations or instructions are given, the individual should be expected to comply so far as practicable with the recommendations or instructions, or be liable to prosecution for refusal or willful neglect to do so. Provision should be made for the utilization of local Department of Health and Health Bureau that now exist. There should be Public Health Bureaus of information maintained in local communities, where anyone may at any time seek and secure free information and advice concerning matters pertaining to health."

The real benefits likely to accrue from such a system (compulsory physical examination and education) are immeasurable, but would probably include: some relief from suffering; the gradual elimination of preventable diseases; a better, sturdier people, well qualified by healthier bodies and minds to reach and maintain a higher degree of civilization; and the prolongation of life for present and future generations.

HARLEM HOTEL POLICE STATION But Its New Tenants Find the Transition a Bit Baffling at Times. The 120 policemen of the Thirty-eighth precinct, New York, are having the unique experience of making their home in a hotel. On Oct. 1 last, while hundreds of families, encouraged by new rent laws, defied the landlords and refused to move, this big family of blue-coats, carrying on their backs their beds and belongings, departed from their old home and moved across the street to the Hotel Rose, in 183th street, near Eighth avenue. They did not move through choice. For several years they had been comfortably housed in two renovated flat houses. A month ago Captain William McGrath, in command of the precinct, was notified by the owner of the vacant, as he desired the houses for other purposes. Captain McGrath was in a quandary what to do with his big family. There was talk of abolishing the precinct altogether, which maintains law and order in Harlem's Little Africa. Across the street stood the Hotel Rose, which had been built at a good deal of expense as a high class negro hotel. It did not receive the patronage it merited from the negroes, and when the owner heard that the police were likely to be without a home he sold it to the city. The spacious dining room of the hotel has been transformed into the main room of the station. Disguised as it has been with police paraphernalia and furniture, it persists in looking in its new dress more like a big hotel room than a station house room. The hotel contains forty private bedrooms and six dormitories, on awakening are somewhat puzzled to know whether they are in a vacation hotel in the Catskills or a new-fangled kind of station house. More than one policeman when half awake has sleepily muttered something about a room with a bath, or breakfast in bed. They cannot somehow, even in their waking moments, associate the hotel with a station. An absent-minded policeman, mistaking a fellow officer for a bellhop, inquired the way to the writing room. Such mistakes are not uncommon. On first moving into the building policemen occasionally became lost in the hallways and corridors of its upper stories. One such policeman stood patiently for a long time beside an air shaft waiting for the elevator until a companion pointed out to him that the hotel was without an elevator. These mistakes, however, are not confined to the police. A few days ago a tall negro entered the place and with a sigh of relief deposited a large suitcase at the foot of the lieutenant's desk. "Ah want a room with a bath," he volunteered, mopping his brow with a bright-colored handkerchief, "and I'm so tired travelin' that ah jest want to go to bed and sleep myself off." "Sorry," replied the lieutenant, who had a sense of humor, "but there's a policeman's picnic going on in town, and the cops have grabbed every room in the place." At that moment half a dozen policemen filed out from the back room, and the negro was disillusioned. "Ah been workin' as a waiter in Havana," he explained, "for the las' two years and ah heard 'bout this here prohibition. Must have hit the hotels hard when they has to turn 'em into station houses." The policemen express different opinions on the hotel. One complained that the bedrooms were too small and narrow for 200-pound policemen; another that luxuries were all right in their place, but that he preferred his own little bathtub at home to any station house-tub; a third said that it was impossible to feel at home in a place which was neither a hotel nor a station house. The new headquarters, however, are not to remain long as they are. The bedrooms are to be turned into dormitories, and when carpenters have finished their work there will be little left of the old place to remind the present great and uninformed visitors that it was ever a hotel. THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

The first meeting of the Assembly of the League of Nations will be held at Geneva on Nov. 15. There will be gathered delegates from all the continents, and the meeting will be a test of the League.

The question of German reparations and also that of the admission of the late Central Powers into the League will be discussed, and there may be wide differences of opinion at the outset. The only countries which will not be represented will probably be the United States, Turkey, Mexico, Germany, Austria and Russia.

"We are inevitably entangled with Europe. We must talk with Europe if we wish to help her. We must talk with Europe if we wish to trade with her. We must talk with Europe if we wish to maintain the Treaty of Versailles."

THE BRIDGE QUESTION.

Why are some members of the city council still waiting for more information regarding the height of the new railway bridge and the question of navigation? There has been ample time to get it, and the council is the body which should have had the fullest information long ago, in order to guard the public interest.

If American Red Cross nurses have been unobtrusively butchering in South Russia the American government can hardly find solace in a policy of isolation.

PROBLEMS AND DUTIES.

Whatever our problems or our discontents may be, there will be few to dissent from the view expressed by Sir Henry Drayton before the Canadian Club last evening, after having toured the country, that we ought to be thankful we are Canadians and that we live in Canada. The minister and his colleague, Senator Robertson, both referred, however, to conditions which call for very serious consideration.

The minister of labor in his very brief address was able to testify that there are at present practically no labor troubles in Canada, and to pay a tribute to the spirit in which labor is adapting itself to changing conditions. He anticipates, however, a period of less general employment, partly due to seasonal and partly to other causes; and he advocates part-time work for the whole staff of an industry rather than full-time for a reduced staff, until the situation clears.

At the historic Guildhall banquet Premier Lloyd George last night spoke hopefully of the situation in regard to Germany and the League, and also in regard to the industrial situation in England. He also expressed a feeling that Irish affairs are progressing toward a satisfactory solution. The most difficult situation he finds in Russia, whose present rulers have no regard whatever for pledges or obligations.

ROTHESAY RED CROSS.

The annual meeting of the Rothersey Red Cross Society was held yesterday with the president, Mrs. John H. Thompson, in the chair. A vote of $700 to the British Empire War Relief Fund was made and satisfactory reports were presented. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. H. H. Thompson; first vice-president, Miss Allison; second vice-president, Miss Mabel Gilbert; secretary, Miss A. M. Puddington; treasurer, Miss Mabel Robertson.

DAM TENDERS OPENED.

Tenders for the construction of a concrete dam on the Musquash river in the proposed hydro-electric development undertaken by the provincial government have been received by the Hydro-Electric Commission and it is expected that a contract will be awarded shortly. Hon. Dr. E. A. Smith, of St. John, chairman of the commission, met C. O. Foss, another member of the commission, here yesterday, and the latter went to Fredericton, where the government met last night.

THE JAPS.

I've met about ten thousand Japs, out here upon the western shore, and they're such courteous little chaps I'd gladly meet ten thousand more. Most white men view them with alarm, and say they are a grievous pest; they do our bulwarks deadly harm, and make our sacred boons a jest.

CANADA—EAST AND WEST

AMHERST CHECKED.

July 20, 1855, saw Amherst, the English officer, starting on an expedition that had for its aim the capture of Niagara. Two armies had been gathered at Albany for the attack upon the French post in the two forces there were more than 15,000 English soldiers. It was on July 20 that Amherst started with his gay army down Lake George.

UNPAID BILL STARTED

EDISON ON ELECTRICITY

Thomas A. Edison has just told me what started him on his quest for an electric light that would knock gas and the gas people into a cocked hat. "I was paying a check $5 a day to postpone a judgment on my small factory," says Mr. Edison, recalling the days of forty years ago. "Then came the gas four French boys and a new idea."

SONNET.

I long for understanding; day and night This awful loneliness I cannot bear; In all the earth there is not one to care, No one to penetrate, with love, aright. Men are too sensual, they have no sight, The inward piercing spirit, its too rare; Of clay compounded grossly, its ray faint; And, wrapped in silence still, I yearn for light.

LIGHTER VEIN.

Two charming sisters are engaged to two brothers, and their neighbors have been interested in this dual love affair. "The young girls live in the second flat of a house on the south side of the street, and the other day the elder sister was stopped in the street by the boy, 'my papa said that some one ought to tell you to pull down the blinds, 'cause if love is blind, the neighbors are not.'"

CHEERFUL AT WIFE'S FUNERAL.

Berlin, Oct. 21.—(Associated Press correspondence.)—Wide-eyed mourners listened in amazement to Oberdada, Bauer, Grand Exalted Ruler of the Order of Dadas, a literary society which believes the drama ought to be made more simple, when he recently preached a funeral sermon over the body of his wife.

A GOOD CROP.

The best crop any state or nation can raise is a crop of just plain wholesome boys and girls, says Thrift Magazine. What would be the use of working hard to develop a fine country unless there were some good dependables to work the soil? It takes time, trouble and money to raise a good 'crop of boys and girls, but it is worth it.

Nov. 6.

The first official German description of the signing of the Armistice is from the pen of Matthias Erzberger, head of the German Armistice Commission. Erzberger is at present in private life, but as he is only 45 years old and has already played a big part in German affairs, there is reason to believe that he plans a return and is likely to be influential in the years of German reconstruction.

No Hope Left.

He said that it was made known by Germany on November 6 that an armistice must be signed, whatever kind of armistice it was. For some time previous all thought of a German victory had been abandoned. Nobody who was in a position to survey the whole field of operations had any illusions remaining. Germany was beaten, and Erzberger with three associates was sent to meet the victors and get the best terms they could. Curiously enough, more than two dozen German officers wanted to go along, but Erzberger says that he felt that "such a large group of officers would create an illogical impression in France." Before the three plenipotentiaries left Hindenburg said: "It is the first time in the history of the world that politicians and not soldiers have signed a truce; but go in God's name, and do the best you can for the fatherland."

French Soldiers' Fears.

The party left in German automobiles and when they approached the front they were held up for some little time by a German general, who told them it was unsafe to proceed, but at 9.30 on the evening of November 7 they passed the German front, and a couple of hundred yards further on fell in with the first French troops. French officers were then attached to them, a Prince of Bourbon being Erzberger's guide. At one o'clock the next morning they reached St. Quentin, where they had the same kind of dinner that every French soldier and general had, as a general told them—soup, salted meat and peas. They were transferred to a train and supplied with cognac. At seven the next morning their train stopped in the Compeigne forest, and they observed another private train nearby. It was the train of Marshal Foch and the Allied representatives.

Foch Was Bound.

The first session took place the following morning, and lasted three-quarters of an hour. It consisted of the reading to the Germans of the terms the Allies had decided upon. Erzberger asked permission to send them to the high command by radio. Foch declined, but said the terms could be transmitted by cipher or courier. He explained that in all things he was bound by the Allied command and the Allied governments. Then the Germans asked that the time limit be extended from 78 hours to 96. This also was refused. On November 10, the day before the Allied ultimatum expired, the German counter-proposals were received, and that evening the Armistice Commission was informed by radio that the Kaiser had abdicated and that the crown prince had renounced his claim to the throne.

"Sign Anyhow."

Then the British delegates, Admiral Hope and Lord Weymss wished to know whether the next Government would be in a position to carry out the terms when agreed upon. Erzberger said that whatever Government had the power to have the armistice signed would have also the power to see it executed. On that same evening Erzberger received a telegram from Hindenburg asking him to beg for a few little changes in the terms, and adding, "but if you cannot get these, sign anyhow." The German counter-proposals having been rejected, the final session of the commission began at 2.15 a.m., November 11. The debate lasted until 5.12 a.m., that concerning the blockade taking up most of the time. Foch agreed to call it 5 a.m. in order that a full six hours should elapse between the signing and the cessation of hostilities. It required the full six hours to have it made known to all the forces that peace had come, which disposes of the assertion that the fighting was carried on needlessly on that memorable day.

CANADA AS GREAT

Important Strike in Northern Alberta Contributory Proof of Rich Fields Ready for Exploration.

(From data compiled by G. G. Ommanney, M. I. C. E., Investigating Engineer, C. P. R.)

In an article which the writer contributed to the Bulletin, March, 1920, entitled "Canadian Oil Exploitation and Prospects" occurs the following: "If we examine the geological map of this era (referring to Western and Northwestern Canada), we find that the great oil-bearing strata of the North America continent which have produced the richest and most prolific oil reservoirs of the world, constitute the principal geological formations of this vast Canadian territory. It requires, therefore, no more than an average share of optimism to predict that Canada's future as a world oil producer is certain and only awaits the assured result of capital expended on exploration by the drill."

Prediction Confirmed.
We can today point to confirmation in the news, just received and confirmed, of an important oil strike in the Canadian Northwest at the Imperial Oil Company's well, Fort Norman, Lat. 65 degrees, Long. 125 degrees, on the Mackenzie river. The oil at this latest discovery is reported as flowing through a six-inch casing and the yield (unconventional) as over one thousand barrels a day. The well has been capped.
What are the prospects of the oil in this region? They are almost removed from

For Frying
For Shortening
For Salads

"Crisp, fresh, tempting, even if you are not hungry, a salad dressed with mayonnaise or French dressing made with Mazola will be welcomed by the most exacting palate. Your guests will think you have used the most expensive olive oil. Mazola really makes a superb salad dressing. The money saving each week is considerable."

"If your aunt was a man she'd be your uncle." If butter or lard were melted you would call them oils, wouldn't you? So fish cooked in butter or other fat is, after all, really cooked in oil, isn't it? Cooking fish in olive oil is a favorite method with gourmets. The epicure who cooks her fish with Mazola instead of expensive olive oil or butter will never know the difference, except in her pocketbook.

The quality of this rich, creamy cake made with Mazola is nothing less than delicious. Everyone says so. Do you think one slice will be enough for each child once they have tasted it? Watch their bright eyes and radiant faces! Like Oliver Twist, they will surely call for "more." Of course it's much cheaper than butter or lard.

How many times do you hear people say: "I like pie, but it doesn't like me." What wouldn't they give to have a really digestible pie? Using less butter and part Mazola for pie crust is not only a fine economy in these days of high prices, but it will enable you to make a pie that digests unconsciously.

"Open your mouth and shut your eyes. I'll give you something to make you wise"—a crisp, appetizing doughnut, cooked with Mazola. Doughnuts fried in Mazola are never heavy, greasy, or soggy. The whole family will be delighted with them. Mazola can be used over and over again; goes twice as far as lard.

from the Heart of the Golden Corn comes MAZOLA

EVERY time you eat corn, "on the ear," stewed, as a cereal, in corn bread, or in Indian meal pudding, you eat Mazola without knowing it. For Mazola is the pure, delicious oil of corn that gives to these dishes their rich, satisfying flavor. Right from the heart of the choicest corn the oil is pressed out and refined.

This pure oil of corn (MAZOLA) is actually better for cooking than animal fats (which are also oils in solid form). The chefs in leading hotels, clubs and on steamship lines, and housewives in thousands of families have proved that statement to their entire satisfaction—and profit.

MAZOLA for cooking will cost you very much less than butter, lard, butter substitutes and other cooking compounds—yet the flavor of your favorite dishes will be all and more than you have ever known before.

MAZOLA, being a vegetable fat, is more digestible than butter, lard or other animal fats. It is the ideal product for shortening, deep frying and sauteing. It is superb for salad dressing.

MAZOLA will not smoke up the house with the odor of fried fat. It reaches the right temperature for cooking without smoking—thus making cooking a pleasure.

MAZOLA can be used over and over again, because it is not easily absorbed by foods. Neither does it transmit the flavor or odor from one food to another.

Make a generous trial. Buy a large tin. You will feel well repaid! Your grocer has MAZOLA in pints and larger tins.

the sphere of prediction to that of certainty. Geologists and oilmen have long recognized and agreed upon the similarity of the Wyoming and Montana formations with those of Alberta. With the bringing in of the Montana gushers immediately south of the Alberta boundary, oil has now been proved from Wyoming almost up to the international boundary. The oil in two great producing Montana wells (the Frazz and the Decker-Collins) undoubtedly originated from the Devonian formations which extend throughout the whole of the vast Canadian territory to the north up to the newly proven field in the far Northwest.

Evidence of Gas Field.
The problem resolves itself into locating the structures favorable for trapping the oil and much work has and is being done to this end. Every producing gas field is in itself a potential oil field, and, as further evidence, the discovery of the great Alberta gas yielding fields (such as the Medicine Hat) have been followed by similar discoveries within thirty miles of the international boundary at Havre, Montana, producing from precisely the same sandstones as at Medicine Hat. The small producing oil field at Dingman, south-west of Calgary—where the contour of strata by the mountain uplift has greatly limited the area of producing fields—the vast bituminous sands known as the Athabaska tar sands further north at Fort Murray, the numerous gas wells developed throughout the country extending 300 miles east of the Rockies and 700 miles north from the international boundary, are all contributory evidence. This evidence in recent years has attracted the attention of the biggest oil interests in the world. As a result, we have at September of this year, a list of twenty-four locations where drilling is actually in progress throughout Western Canada, not including eight in the coastal district. That Canada will, in the comparatively near future, become an important contributor to the world's oil supply is, we therefore contend, a foregone conclusion.

AUSTRIA WILL ELECTRIFY HALF ITS RAILROADS
Assembly Approves Project to Cost 5,000,000,000 Crowns and to Use 120,000,000 Kilowatts.

The National Assembly of Austria has approved plans for the electrification of about half the railroads of the country, thus completing technical preparations which have been proceeding for nearly two decades and which involve an expenditure of 5,000,000,000 crowns and include 400 miles of track, says the New York Times. The lines to be electrified under the plans run mostly through the mountainous sections where the operation of steam locomotives has proved very costly. It is hoped that the first electric trains will be in operation by June, 1922.

SEWING ROOMS AND SCHOOL KITCHENS
(Toronto Globe.) "Extension" would seem to be the slogan of the household arts department of the Toronto public schools. There are now twenty-four sewing rooms where girls from the junior III to senior IV grades are taught to make garments. Six of these have been opened since September, and during that period also sewing classes have been opened in all the second book grades throughout the city. That the children love the work is shown by the fact that teachers have great difficulty in inducing them to take recess on sewing days. "They love to sew," said Miss Davidson, the director of the household arts department. "There are now twenty-four sewing centres, and I have yet to hear of one child who is not interested. They simply avoid creating be increased to nine per cent. or more. The breaking up of the old empire, it is pointed out, has made the electrification of the roads a necessity, as present Austria finds herself practically stripped of all her coal mines.

things, and cutting out is a joy to many of them." Knitting and crocheting are also taught. No tawdry trimming is allowed to decorate the neatly-made garments and since the goods is so very expensive crocheted laces and insertions are used. Incidentally an effort is being made to teach the children to have respect for the implements used in sewing, and to be saving of needles, pins, etc. It is expected that from seven to nine new school kitchens will be opened this term. This branch of the work is quite as fascinating as sewing, and affords a splendid opportunity for teaching thrift. While the household arts department is extending, the goal toward which it is pressing is a housewifery department in every school. In such a department all the activities of the home could be taught—cooking, sewing, laundry work, home nursing, household mechanics, everything, in fact, that an efficient housekeeper should know. A girl requires two kinds of education, Miss Davidson contends—one to fit her to earn her living, and the other to prepare her for homemaking.

LLOYD GEORGE ON PROBLEMS OF THE DAY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)
 London, Nov. 9.—David Lloyd George in his address at the Lord Mayor's banquet at the Guildhall tonight discussed briefly and pointedly various problems with which the government is dealing. With regard to Germany he declared himself personally pleased with the proposals of that country for the liquidation of her obligations. Coincidentally the chancellor of the exchequer, Austen Chamberlain, announced in the house of commons that Germany had placed a large amount of bonds in the hands of the reparations commission.
 "I wish I could speak as hopefully as to the Russian problem where we have to do with men professing the ridiculous creed of Bolshevism who unfortunately fail to realize how important it is they should respect their obligations."
 He referred briefly to the industrial situation and the recent strike, expressing the belief that there is better temper now all around.
 Speaking of the Irish situation, the premier said:
 "Unless I am mistaken, by the steps we have taken we have murder by the throat. Do not pay too much attention to detailed accounts of disturbances and what they call the horrors of reprisals given out by partisans who stir over the horrors of murder. There will be no real peace, no conciliation until murder conspiracy is scattered."
 "We are getting the right sort of men and are dispersing the terrorists. The government will seek further powers, if necessary, to deal with the situation. If it is war, as the terrorists say, then they cannot complain if the government employs some of the rules of war against them."
 He referred to his offer to discuss any proposals with anyone able to speak in behalf of Ireland, saying:
 "If I had given that invitation to Germany in the middle of the war, I would have had a response. But giving it to Ireland, no man dare respond because they are intimidated. You must break the terror before you can get peace.

 "What the government is offering Ireland is partnership in the greatest empire the world has ever known at the height of its power."

A PUZZLE OVER PROHIBITION IN FOUR PROVINCES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)
 Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 9.—Legal officers of the Canadian government are now puzzling over the point whether government liquor vendors in Nova Scotia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—the four provinces which recently voted to go bone dry—can or cannot be classed as licensed vendors. The decision is important as it will make a difference of at least thirty days in the length of the period within which liquor may still be imported for personal use into the four provinces. If the government vendors are not classed as holding licenses, the dominion government may prohibit importation at any time once the official returns of the recent referendum are in. But the prohibition will not come into effect for thirty days. If the vendors are classed as holding licenses importations cannot be prohibited for at least sixty days.

Insist on Windmill Barbados Super-Fancy Molasses

WHY insist? Because that is the only SURE way to get the best Barbados in all its goodness! The market is flooded with stuff in cans and other worthless substitutes for Barbados. You must have wondered what had become of the old-time Barbados. The trouble was simply this. The refineries took the high-priced sugar out of the cane syrup and the refuse was sold you as Molasses,—or blended with glucose and chemicals. No wonder it was little use as a "sweetener", and lacked flavor! But in "Windmill" Brand you can get

The Real Genuine Barbados
 And it Costs no More than Common Molasses, Blends and compounds.

The old reliable planters of Barbados have united for the purpose of delivering for sale in Canada the PUREST whole-sugar Barbados. We call it "Windmill" Brand, because in the Islands, the ripest cane was originally crushed by the old windmill process, securing just the finest of the juice for concentrating in the old-fashioned open copper kettles.

All that is good in 100 pounds of cane goes into the making of one gallon of "Windmill" Barbados. Nothing is added—nothing is taken away but water!

Insist on "Windmill" Barbados at your dealers. It tastes as different from the substitutes as cream does from skim milk! Use it liberally. Give the children plenty. Its 9 pounds of sugar to the gallon, and the natural fruit salts it contains produce health, heat, and energy.

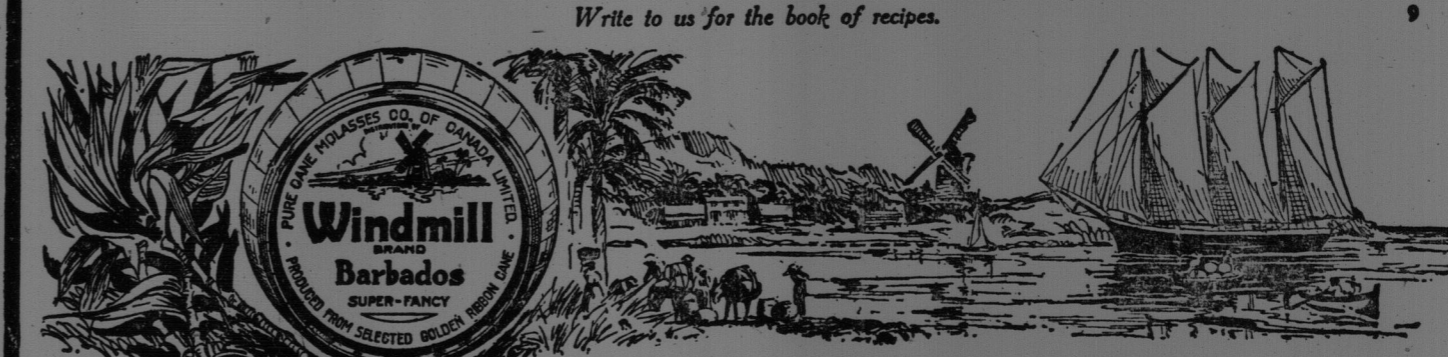

"Windmill" Brand is best for baking and all the old-time uses of Molasses. Try it once and you will never be without it in the house.

We guarantee Windmill to be absolutely pure and highest grade Barbados Molasses.

Never sold in sealed containers. It is too full of life for that. Buy any quantity you wish, but be sure it is Windmill Brand, drawn from the barrel shown below.

Strong Protest Against Present Methods Of Collecting Luxury Tax

RETAIL MERCHANTS ADVOCATE TAXING GOODS AT SOURCE

Closing Session of Tariff Commission Hearing Yesterday — Farmers' President on Farm Machinery and Fertilizer.

Representatives of the Retail Merchants' Association appeared before the tariff commission yesterday afternoon to protest against the luxury tax in its present form and to urge that the tax be collected at the source of manufacture.

The stores were taken for a trip on the harbor after lunch, resuming the hearing on the board of trade rooms afterwards. At the second session which opened at 4:30, continuing until 6:30, the first speaker was W. G. DeWolfe, of St. Stephen, representing the provincial branch of the Retail Merchants' Association, who proceeded to read a statement of resolutions advocating the abolition of the luxury tax. The resolutions stated that the retail merchants were not going to avoid just taxation and were willing to bear their share. Their idea of taxation was that it should bring the greatest return at a minimum cost with the least inconvenience. The merchants advised that it was impossible to apply the tax with justice either to the public or themselves. As it was the experience of the merchants that the public resented this form of taxation, the merchants favored doing away with the tax at the earliest possible moment, and that the manufacturers pay the point of manufacture. The merchants were willing to stand an increase in the goods, if necessary, and advised that such a change would result in greater revenue.

Mr. DeWolfe told of the loss of time of the part of clerks in explaining the tax to customers and to errors made by clerks. There was trouble also in making out bills of articles, some of which were taxable and the rest not taxable. Then there was the difficulty of discriminating among some classes of goods such as lace and trimmings. Some were one and not the other. Then there were artificial silks and mercerized goods which were difficult to distinguish from a law china, silverware, umbrellas, etc. sold by jewelers at less than the retailers are permitted to sell, to the detriment of the latter. Mr. DeWolfe said that there were ways of evading the tax by persons who did not do business near an excise office. Several cases of business were crippled by the tax, which the merchants believed that the tax continued, would force some of them to business. Mr. DeWolfe thought any handicaps could be overcome by acting at the point of production.

Sir Henry Drayton's Opinion.

The next speaker was Robert Macaulay, who said that the merchants of St. John were very much in earnest and had discovered in every way to obtain a uniform working of the act, having met frequently. The act affected every line of their business and the stamp duty was very difficult to control. Sir Henry Drayton here remarked that the merchants who asked for the stamp duty were not the merchants who had done so, but that they did not know then the conditions the stamp would create. It was not a well considered plan, and they now asked that stamp duty be removed. He examined the various cash systems in the stores. Extra help had been necessary to handle the tax problem and in cash department help had been doubled and trebled. The employees were unable to understand the various agencies. It was impossible to administer the system so as to get uniformity. He did not like to be called on by public officials and fined $50 for a technical violation of the act. The employees were not experts and had been trained only for their particular work.

The merchants had trouble with mufflers and scarfs. Mufflers were not taxed and scarfs were. Unscrupulous men could sell a muffler for a scarf and get around the tax. Mr. Macaulay also took up the question of artificial silk fabrics which were taxed $2 a yard, and mercerized silk, which was not silk. Country merchants did not know how to classify these fabrics.

Mr. Macaulay said that the merchants were desirous in earnest and that the trouble was in dealing with the public rather than reading the tax list. The merchants did not come to the hearing to criticize or embarrass the government. They were present to help it out.

To Sir Henry Drayton's questions, Mr. Macaulay said that he thought the public resented a direct tax like a luxury tax, but if it was sugar coated he admitted the government probably could make it larger and get away with it. (Laughter.) He thought the jewellers' situation better than that of the other merchants and he believed the jewellers conceded that. He did not think that the merchants would object to paying an extra amount for goods because of the tax. Repeating to Sir Henry Drayton, Mr. Macaulay gave it as his opinion that the tax at first hand would not add materially to the cost of living. He told of employing an expert accountant two months to handle the tax problem, one of the items in the extra expense. His idea was to have the tax placed on the manufacturer and importer and get rid of the extra costs to the retailers. The merchants had not attempted to increase costs to cover the administration of the tax, but they were certainly bound to do it.

Anticipate Falling Market.

Mr. Macaulay said the merchants anticipated a falling market and they anticipated that within the next two years they had pretty heavy weather ahead of them. It was difficult to define what was luxury and what was not. He believed it economical to spend $70 or $80 for a suit of clothes, which would outlast three cheap ones.

Sir Henry Drayton suggested that workmen and small salaried clerks and many farmers could not afford to pay that much for a suit. If in the cities a man could afford to do this was it not a good plan to raise a little revenue, he asked.

Mr. Macaulay said it was the method not the severity of the tax that was objected to. He asked why could not the finer fabrics be taxed more at the source, such as chevrons and worsteds. They were anxious to aid the government and help it out of difficulties. The merchants knew that the public was resentful and no class was in closer touch with the public than were the merchants. In the event of a change of tax he would recommend that the manufacturers be given a little exemption in order to get their money back.

J. G. Harrison's Views.

J. G. Harrison, of W. H. Thorne & Co., Ltd., said that what the merchants desired to impress upon the commission was the necessity of changing the methods of collection. The merchants believed that the taxing of goods at the source of supply the fairest method and believed that everyone then would pay their fair share. It would then be as the tariff. They wanted to impress upon the commission the hardships undergone to collect the tax. It interfered with business and, with a busy season coming, he did not know how they were going to do business. He favored paying by check instead of by stamps. The retailers objected to being tax collectors. The great objection to the stamp tax was that it had to be imposed with a rush when the store was full of customers.

H. W. Rising asked what the real object of the luxury tax was and why shoe men were discriminated against. The finance minister said he thought that the shoe men had much the better end of it. Mr. Rising said that high-class footwear manufacturers were practically closed down. Sir Henry asked if that were due to the luxury tax. Mr. Rising said that he believed if the tax had been placed on the manufacturer it would have helped to move the stock now piled up on merchants' shelves. As it was, some dealers might be forced out of business, added Mr. Rising. The manufacturers were getting no orders from the retailers on account of the large stocks held by the retailers.

Sir Henry Drayton thought the trouble was due to the instability of leather prices. There was no market for hides, was there?

Hon. Mr. Robertson offered some information concerning shoe costs. He said the increase in labor cost in shoe factories in Canada had been thirty cents per pair and that shoe labor averaged $1.85 per pair.

Mr. Rising thought that staple shoe factories would be in motion soon. The Hart Boot & Shoe Company factory was now practically closed. The retail men would not buy high class footwear, but only staple shoes. They could not sell large stocks because of the luxury tax quoted to inquirers. If manufacturers paid the tax little trouble would be experienced.

HORLICK'S THE ORIGINAL MALTED MILK
Avoid Imitations & Substitutes

Mr. Macaulay, speaking again, told of the difficulties his goods had in following the various realignments of the tax list. It was very cumbersome and led to misunderstandings.

William Hawker wished to emphasize the necessity of some other method of collecting the tax. He also called attention to the short hours of the revenue collectors.

F. A. Dykeman objected to Sir Henry Drayton's suggestion that if goods were taxed at their source the merchants might slice some additional profits. Competition was so keen, Mr. Dykeman thought, that if any merchant added anything unduly he would find some other merchant not doing the same and would lose business. One feature of the tax-list bothersome to clerks was "silk apparel, unless otherwise specified." There were hundreds of cases where the list was not clear. Lack of uniformity in application was one of the defects. There were cases where the act was evaded by some of the installment peddlers. These men had no places of business, but went around from door to door, making their purchases from the wholesale retailers. He favored taxing goods at their source.

T. W. Caldwell, M.P.

T. W. Caldwell, M.P. of Carleton county, president of the United Farmers of New Brunswick, introduced the subject of farm machinery and fertilizer and submitted a price list of both as delivered in Aroostook and Carleton counties. This list indicated that the duties here made the fertilizer and machinery higher on the New Brunswick side of the border. He favored duties still lower, particularly on fertilizer, which now paid ten per cent duty. The Farmers' platform favored a land tax if everything used on the farm were free. The organization was willing to have a land tax as perhaps $3 of every $4 collected did not go into the revenue of the country. Mr. Caldwell agreed with Sir Henry that the farmers were not wearing $80 or $70 suits. The farmers were willing to make any contribution to government revenues that was fair and equitable. A statement Sir Henry characterized as too general and indefinite.

The finance minister remarked on the big profits some farmers had been making whereupon Mr. Caldwell said that he would be pleased to pay an income tax if he had an income. He said he had not sufficient income on which to pay taxes. He said he did not figure his house as rental as the city man did because he did not have an interest in the money it cost him to build amount to more than the city man's rental. The man who paid rent was no worse off than the farmer who owned his house.

The list of speakers having been exhausted, Sir Henry Drayton told of the necessity for the new taxes, saying that the people should now look at public business in a frame of mind different from what they did before. He knew they were all feeling a heavy burden, but he was sure, as Canadian citizens, they must see that Canada properly carried on and discharged her obligations. If the luxury tax worked against the country it should be stopped. He knew it was a confounded nuisance and the commission had come here to get the views of the people directly interested. They had been much impressed and would take the matter up at the earliest possible moment, although nothing could be done before the next session of parliament.

The commission will hold a session in Moncton today.

CALIFORNIA CHALLENGES JAPAN.

(Toronto Globe.)

Incomplete returns indicate that California has ratified by referendum, against the advice and warning of the Federal Administration, the Act prohibiting Orientals from owning or leasing agricultural lands in the state. The legislation is aimed principally at the Japanese, who have made a great success of intensive farming on the Pacific slope. Feeling has been running high in Japan over the California proposals, and the result of the referendum will embarrass the Washington and Tokio Governments in their attempts to negotiate a new treaty. On the day before the voting the State Department at Washington announced that it had given close and attention to the situation in California, adding:

"In the meantime the Department has had numerous discussions of the most friendly and candid nature with the Ambassador of Japan and it is believed he thoroughly realizes, as we have sought to make clear, that no outcome of the California movement will be acceptable to the country at large that does not accord with existing and applicable provisions of law, and, what is equally important, with the nation's instinct of justice."

It might be inferred from this that a conflict between the Federal Government and the California State authorities would ensue if California tried to enforce literally the provisions of the new law. The problem is one which the Wilson Administration will probably pass on to its Republican successor. Both Senator Harding and Governor Cox during the campaign expressed sympathy with the anti-Oriental movement. Mr. Harding may find the question more difficult to handle as President of the United States than as a Presidential candidate appealing for California votes.

The alien land law of California, passed in 1913, prohibits ownership or lease beyond three years of agricultural lands by aliens ineligible to citizenship. Proponents of the measure ratified at the polls on Tuesday say that it aims only at closing loopholes in the Act of 1913. They allege that the law is circumvented by means of dummy corporations and by vesting titles or leases in the minor native-born children of Orientals. Short leases become long leases through repeated renewals, because the whites move out of a district

TWO MINUTES OF QUIET AT NOON
ARMISTICE DAY

Other Features of Observance Here Tomorrow

The Memorable Time at the Fighting Front at Mons Recalled—London Mail on "The Unknown Soldier."

A two minute silence will be observed tomorrow at noon, as a mark of respect for those who sacrificed their lives in the cause of freedom in the great war which was halted two short years ago. A proclamation to this effect was issued by His Worship Mayor Schofield last evening.

Other Features of Observance Here Tomorrow
A public memorial service will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3.30 o'clock in Trinity church, at which the mayor and city commissioners will attend. The public has been invited and especially the patriotic societies.

Through the action of the school board the school children will have only one session. It is the intention of the city council to move the captured German guns from the exhibition grounds to King square.
To commemorate the signing of the armistice in 1918 the C. P. R. have decided on a cessation of all work for two minutes tomorrow at twelve o'clock eastern standard time. All trains will be brought to a stop and work in offices, shops, stations and maintenance of way discontinued for that period of time.
Howard Kelly, president of the Grand Trunk Railway system, issued instructions yesterday to heads of departments that on Armistice Day a two minute cessation of all activities shall take place at noon.

November 11 will always remain an outstanding date in the memory of Canadian citizens, for on that day in 1918 came the word that the great world war, which had taken from the dominion the very flower of her manhood, some of them never to return, had been suddenly brought to a close by the signing of the armistice between the combatant nations. It was a momentous day for both the boys in the firing line and their loved ones at home.

At The Front.
In the clear moonlight of the night of November 10, the Canadian troops had been moved forward to positions just outside the town of Mons with orders to continue in the morning the offensive operations which they had been conducting with outstanding success for the preceding three months. The Hun was particularly nasty and that afternoon and evening he fired a number of shells into the city which had been sniping all who dared into the open. One machine gun mounted in the spire of the cathedral was especially offensive and it was only after the whole spire was sprayed with a generous shower of bursting shrapnel that the machine gunner ceased his work.
A little after midnight the artillery units were ordered to cancel a barrage which had been ordered for daylight and await further orders. About 8.15 a. m. came the glad message which was delivered to every unit in the field, stating that at 11 o'clock the hostilities would cease, but that in the meantime all arms were to move forward and remain in the positions reached at the hour when the armistice was due to receive the signatures of the envoys.
Peculiarly there was no marked jubilation in the ranks, rather was there a sort of thankful thoughtful silence. The news was too great to be taken hilariously by these men whose last one, two, three or in some cases four years had been spent in the tragic work of warfare. They gathered together in small knots and discussed the news and only occasionally would one hear a strained, subdued song issue from one group or another. There was still work to do—three whole hours of it—and then every one of the thousands which had belched forth death and destruction would be silent.
A few miles to the eastward of Mons ran a small canal; it was on its banks in 1914 that the first British soldier—a cavalryman—fell victim to a bullet from a German rifle. Within a few hundred yards of the identical spot where the first British sacrifice had been made, a German officer was killed a few seconds before the stroke of eleven; thus the peculiar coincidence of British troops bring their last shot from the same line from which the first had been fired by them more than four years before.
In the midst of civilization however, the news of the signing of the armistice was received in a somewhat different way. Receipt of the glad tidings was the cue for a spasmodic outburst of jubilation which lasted well on into the night. Work was everywhere suspended and it was a care-free exultant crowd which paraded the highways and byways of the cities and towns, shouting itself hoarse with sheer joy. It was the day of days—the realization that the gigantic struggle which had for so long rocked the world had at last ceased.

The Unknown Soldier.
The London Daily Mail says of the burial of an unknown soldier in Westminster Abbey tomorrow:—"In doing honor to this unknown hero the nation honors and commemorates its millions who made the last sacrifice in the war. What stands forth from all that four years of bitter fighting is the faith, devotion, and courage of the common soldier. That one at least of that great army of dead should sleep in the Abbey, which has been from time immemorial our national shrine, will comfort many aching hearts. There is no mother of those whose names figured in the sad and terrible lists of the missing but will feel that here may rest her son. And there is no mother of those who 'died, and whose place of burial is known, but will realize that her child also is honored by

FOR CITY BONDS
OF $623,419.58

Issue Authorized at Meeting of the Common Council This Morning.

Bond issues amounting to $623,419.58 were authorized by the city council this morning. Most of the issue is to cover expenditures already made. The bonds are to bear interest at six per cent and cover periods from five to thirty years. The following are the issues in detail:—
Five Year Issue.
$475, for Champion horse sweeper.
Ten Year Issue.
$8,100, sand dryer; $600, motor lawn mower; $8,000, piling on outer-end of ferry slip, West St. John.
Fifteen Year Issue.
$1,186.25, sheathing on east side ferry slip; $1,735.25, paving in Lansdowne avenue; $80,116.55, paving in Prince William street; $19,720, aerial ladder truck; $15,000, combination motor engine; $10,000, motor flusher and sprayer.

The original authority for the paving of Prince William street covered an issue of $51,877.50, but this was reduced on Commissioner Frink's motion. Regarding the aerial truck Commissioner Thornton said that the contract price was $18,000, but the rate of exchange at the time of delivery. As the rate when delivery was made was uncertain, the city controller said that a further issue could be made when this was ascertained. Commissioner Thornton said he thought the truck would be delivered in a week or two.

Twenty Year Issue.
$1,200, restoration of shed 5, Rodney wharf; $700, gear shed; $2,400, concrete sidewalk, Millidge avenue; $8,600, tandem roller.
The following were authorized for a ten year issue: the option of a thirty year renewal—$1,000, sewer main Pleasant court; $1,000, water main Mount Pleasant court; $2,800, water extension Lancaster street; $1,800, water and sewerage extension, Mount Pleasant avenue; $128,400.20, paving City road; $225, retaining wall, St. Patrick street; $145, retaining wall, City road; $865, retaining wall, Celebration street; $857,400, Spruce Lake water extension; $7,000, purchase of Shamrock grounds; $10,000, purchase of land for playgrounds in North End; $1,058, retaining wall, Wright street; $450, retaining wall, City road; $10,000, playground development, Rockwood Park.
In connection with the City road paving, the original estimate was $187,992.50, but on motion of Commissioner Frink this was amended to $128,400.20. He explained that this reduction was due to the fact that no allowance was made in the estimate for the amount to be paid by the N. B. Power Company for the pavement of the track sections. The mayor and city chamberlain were empowered to make arrangements for the sale of the bonds.

REPORTED IN TROUBLE
NEAR ST. MARTINS
A report reached the city last night that the schooner Mildred K., bound from Parrsboro to this port with a cargo of lumber, was in trouble off Martin Head near St. Martins. It was said that her deckload was gone and that it was thought she was filling with water. Captain A. J. Muleahy, general representative of insurance underwriters and owners of the ship and cargo, went to the scene this morning to make a survey of the situation. The Mildred K. was registered in Digby in 1901 with a tonnage of 85. She is owned by Frederick Ogilvie of Parrsboro. For this present voyage she was loaded at Parrsboro by Hatfield Bros. She has been engaged in the coasting trade for some years and was a familiar sight in Market Slip.

This great ceremony. To our people as a whole it may serve as a reminder of the tremendous hours when they stood united as one man, sinking all differences of class and rank, in common service to an heroic cause, with a spirit which will return if new dangers should arise.

TURKS LOOTED
ABBAS TOUMAN

Valuables Taken from the Churches and Convents—Investigation in Constantinople.

(Associated Press Correspondence)
Constantinople, Oct. 18.—Pillage by the Turks of the Imperial Russian watering place of Abbas Touman in the Caucasus mountains, is being investigated here. A large quantity of the furnishings and paintings belonging to the luxurious villas of this little city, where many of the aristocracy of Russia used to pass their vacations, has been discovered in Constantinople. Some of these furnishings are in the palace of Zaver Pasin, formerly Turkish war minister on the Bosphorus, now occupied by the French general staff.

The pillage of Abbas Touman is one of the untold stories of the rapacious Turkish pashas and generals. Abbas Touman is unknown outside of Russia. Yet it was one of the little paradises with which countries lying near the Black Sea are blessed. Nestling in the mountains of Georgia, it possessed one of the beautiful and lengthy drive-ways for which the Caucasus is famous. During the hot summer months the Imperial Russian family used to pass a few weeks among the pines of this rich centre of museums, villas and churches.

Up the beautiful roads from Batum to Tiflis, came in the spring of 1917 the Turkish army, following on the retreat of the Russian army, which had gone bolshevik. The Turks were amazed at the riches of Abbas Touman. The commandant of the 31st brigade sealed up all the valuables he could find. Then came the signing of the treaty by which Abbas Touman was left to Georgia.

Convents and Churches Looted.

No sooner had the Turkish commandant learned of this treaty than he gathered up, before leaving, all valuables and hurried them to Batum. He notified Essel Pasin at Constantinople that his booty should be offered to the Sultan. Meanwhile, as his army withdrew, it is charged that he systematically robbed churches and convents and sent these treasures also to Batum. Two other Turkish commanders are alleged to have shared in the loot.

Finally the three men sent their relatives shares to Constantinople, when Enver Pasin demanded to have a look at the three lots. As minister of war he took his choice and sent some of the furniture and pictures to Kouroutschesme, his marble faced palace on the Bosphorus, where they still remain.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.

Niagara Falls, Nov. 10.—John Tooley, an Irishman, ran amuck in Niagara Falls, N. Y., and it took three patrolmen with a straight-jacket and leg irons to subdue him and bring him to the police station here. He has been in Canada only two months, and suffers from a species of religious mania. The death of MacSwiney is said to have broken the slender thread of his reason. Dr. Logan, who examined him here, could not get within six feet of Tooley. He had no difficulty in diagnosing the trouble. Steps will be taken to deport him to Ireland.

"LAST SUPPER" ROOM CAUSE OF DISPUTE

Sultan of Turkey Said to Have Presented It to the Italian King.

Athens, Nov. 10.—The disposal of the supper room at Jerusalem which was the scene of the Last Supper of Christ and His Disciples has recently been the subject of considerable dispute. It has been stated that the Sultan of Turkey has presented it as a personal gift to the King of Italy.

The view of the Greek Orthodox Church is that, since the room is a sacred one and is, in fact, the most ancient sanctuary in Christendom, its disposal should be left, not to a Mohammedan power, but to the British High Commissioner for Palestine, Sir Herbert Samuel; and it is urged that, as a Hebrew, and therefore strictly neutral in religion, Sir Herbert is best able to consider the rival claims of the Greek, Roman and English churches.

MEALS SENT IN STEAMING HOT

Community Kitchen in Toronto Will Soon Perform This Service.

While England has for 40 or 50 years had the community kitchen for poor people, where they could take their own food, have it cooked and call for it, it was only during the war that another type of community kitchen sprang up, a type that could be adapted to the needs of all classes of people. These kitchens, and those in France, Belgium and the United States, have all been considered by Miss Beatrice Symons in her plans for a Community Catering Service for Toronto; but she has drawn an even larger portion of her inspiration from Holland, and where for 20 years they have had community kitchens. There they were run largely by the chefs from the big summer hotels, and the name and fame of the chef chiefly determined the prices of the meals.

Arrangement of Food.

White enamelled dishes, of suitable size and shape, and properly covered, fit well in the interior of the container, and it was found quite easy, Miss Symons discovered in Holland, to insulate salads and other cold things, so that they remain perfectly cool and crisp in the top layer. A hook on the outside holds a pall attachment for soup.

About thirty courses, comprising, approximately, 100 people, are all that is feasible to serve from one centre, Miss Symons says, and a clever mechanism has already devised a side car for his motorcycle which will carry cans and get them to their destinations in record time.

Three-course Dinners.

The dinner, which will be served either at noon or night, will consist of three courses; soup, meat and sweets, will cost $1, and the list from which the week's menu will be made up will be mailed to patrons in advance, and their preferences consulted in compiling the actual menus. Soup, roasts, steaks, fish, potatoes in various forms, vegetables in season, pies, puddings and stewed fruits will be provided, and salad will be 25 cents extra, though there will be a good deal of elasticity to the arrangement, and a patron may substitute the salad, if preferred, for some unwanted item on the regular dollar menu, or an extra quarter will secure an extra serving of meat if desired.

Others Will Come.

One day in the week will be a rather special day, and patrons will be asked if possible to arrange their entertaining for that day. Plain food, of good quality, and cooked as mother used to do it, is Miss Symons' ideal, and she thinks the idea is so feasible a one that once one kitchen has succeeded others will spring up all over the city. With the menu of her clientele already in view, with a tried and tested cook to depend upon, and with an experience, during the summer, of catering at the Island for fifty guests in her own house and twenty outside, she feels that the success of her venture is pretty well assured.

CANADA SHOULD STAND THE STRAIN

Banker Sees Good Conditions on Farms and in Factories.

Cautious but encouraging comments on the present financial situation in Canada were made by President William Molson Macpherson, at the annual meeting of Molson's Bank, Montreal. Mr. Macpherson prophesied a continuance of abnormal exchange rates, until imports and exports more nearly balanced, and advocated the encouragement of immigration, but urged that it be select. He pointed out that there had been disappointment from the fact that the readjustment necessary after the war had not been completed before this. "We in Canada, of course," he added, "suffered a very little destruction in property, and in consequence seem to be regaining more systematic and stable conditions with less disturbance than most countries." The meagre increase of $70,000,000 in deposits, compared with $36,000,000 in bank loans during the year, he considered, justified the banks in their present policy in restricting loans. There had been little, if any, increase in discount rates, which were lower than in Great Britain or the United States. Mr. Macpherson continued: "The period of falling prices has been run, and, provided the drop is gradual and not violent, our people should be able to meet the changing conditions without difficulty. Most of our manufacturing and trading firms have prospered so well during the past few years that they are in a good financial condition to meet a period of readjustment without embarrassment. "While the farmer may have to be content with a smaller price for his produce this year, the very bountiful crops all over the country should give him as a return in money as last year. An extraordinary advance in the market of the world in the price of pulp and paper is altogether to the advantage of Canada."

Furs Worth Fortune. (New York Times)

A woman paid $120,000 the other day for a sable coat and stole. There were finely matched skins in these garments, and it was a good price, though even a quarter of a century ago a single fine sable skin made into a small collar was priced at $1,000.

Prices of furs have been going up in recent years not only because of a great increase in demand, but because of the constantly diminishing numbers of the fur-bearing animals in Siberia, the land of the finest furs, according to a report on the fur industry in Siberia prepared by the Russian Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. There are large areas in Siberia admirably fitted for the development of fur-bearing animals, and an effort should be made, the report says, to propagate them.

In the Primur region there is what is called a natural zoological park which would be favorable for this purpose, containing immeasurable forests, inaccessible mountains and sparse population. Despite war conditions there has been a larger exportation of furs from Siberia within the last few years than might have been expected. In 1918 the declared value of the exports of furs to the United States from Vladivostok was $379,829 and in 1919 $420,292. In January, 1920, the steamer West Henshaw arrived at Seattle bringing a cargo of Siberian furs of 6,700 pounds valued at $676,470.

Formerly the sable was very common in the forests of Siberia from the Ural Mountains to Behring Sea and from the southern boundaries to 68 degrees of north latitude. Nowadays the sable is found only in the most remote and untraveled districts.

Animals of Eastern Siberia produce as a rule, the finest skins. This is from the reports.

The average price of a sable from Barguzin was $200, from Zelsk $150, from Kamchatka $50, and from Amur $12. Some species may cost as high as $750 per skin. Only the most experienced

NOTABLE REVIVAL OF OPERA ERMINE

Francis Wilson, DeWolf Hopper and Jennie Weathersby in Cast.

Baltimore, Nov. 9.—Unique, sentimental interest was attached to a revival of the famous old comic opera "Ermine" at the Academy of Music here last night with Francis Wilson and DeWolf Hopper as Edeux and Ravens. The occasion marked the return of Mr. Wilson to the operatic stage after seventeen years in the field of light comedy and his first artistic association with his old rival, Mr. Hopper.

When "Ermine" was first played in the New York Casino, on May 10, 1886, Mr. Wilson created the role in which he appeared last night and up to 1905, when the opera was last revived, he played the part more than 3,000 times.

Present in the cast with him last night was Jennie Weathersby, in the eccentric comedy role, which she created on the occasion of the first appearance of the opera.

The Family Plate for Seventy Years

Benefits of Plenty

The cry for more production is one that is persistently heard from economic authorities, but it is often bitter medicine to those who feel their employment is in jeopardy, when stocks accumulate and buyers fail to respond. An instructive comment on the relation of production to prices was recently made in England by E. F. Stockton, president of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce.

In dealing with the advantages of an increase in production it was hardly necessary to point out, he said, that it would be the great mass of consumers who would chiefly benefit by a larger supply of commodities. It was therefore the vast millions of workers who by their own increased production would be able to obtain the greatest advantage to the greatest number of consumers, and, of course, the latter were constituted largely from the workers themselves. Therefore increased production did bring the greatest benefit to the workers, because they were by far the greatest in number. It did not tend to swell the profits of the employer, but it did help him to meet the outside competition by providing a more economical basis of working. This enabled him to secure an increase in trade which would either directly or indirectly bring about an increase of employment.

Indeed, increased production all round was the very surest method not only of reducing unemployment, but also of bringing about a reduction of the prices of essential commodities. It was almost impossible to contract the constant upward tendency of prices unless we obtained a higher return from the country's productive capacity. We were at present passing through a period of industrial depression and this had been mainly brought about by the fact that both producers and customers were afraid of taking risks on account of the following reasons—

- (1) The abnormally high rate of values.
- (2) The continued demands for increased wages and shorter hours.
- (3) The general uncertainty of the industrial position caused by the stoppage of production.

RESTORE GEMS OF ART TO ITALY
Priceless Manuscripts and Historical Relics

Secret Agreement With Austria for Restoration—Particulars of Some of the Treasures.

Vienna, Oct. 18.—(Associated Press Correspondence)—The government thus far has refused to make public the secret agreement which Dr. Karl Renner, then chancellor, agreed to give to Italy many valuable works of art, manuscripts and historical relics not provided for surrender in the treaty of St. Germain, despite demands by art associations in influential persons for that information.

The history of the matter is interesting and The Associated Press has been able to learn from authoritative sources some of its details. While the guarded admissions of the government generally are phrased in the future tense as to the delivery of these articles, as a matter of fact they are all understood to be now in Italian possession.

Their seizure began when the Italian armistice commission, under General Segre, first arrived in Vienna in February of last year, the contention of the commissioners being that under the treaty of the war of 1866 these treasures should long since have been delivered. Among the articles taken by General Segre were the famous tapestries of Montua and as regards them the Austrians conceded title and assisted in their delivery.

Then began the removal of pictures from the Hofmuseum and Academy of Fine Arts which had been brought to Vienna in 1816 and 1858. These had been stored in a church in Venice, having been collected from many churches in the Venetian territory. It was done by order of Francis I, then sovereign of Venice which was at that time a part of the Austrian Empire. The Austrians bring forward a supplementary treaty to that of 1866 regarding these objects, intended to clear title. They render this clause as follows: "Austria will keep (guard) the pictures exported in 1866 which his majesty the emperor sometime ago gave to the Academy of Fine Arts in Vienna and to other galleries in the empire."

It is around the word "guard" the Italians centre their argument for possession, contending it means "take in custody" or "for safe keeping" not possession or gift. The Austrians say they have documents in the state archives to show that in return the emperor gave of value to those in controversy, among them being the priceless collections of Manfrin and Bossi.

The Italians also took from the National Library or other places additional treasures such as autographs, musical books, and three manuscripts worth several millions of dollars, one of which, "The Genesis of Vienna," is said to be the most valuable late Roman manuscript in existence.

With all the objects safe in Italy, when the peace conference began in Paris the Italians advanced further claims for works of art from Austria, demanding the pick of pictures from the National Gallery in Vienna and virtually all the bronzes and statues made in Italy or that ever were in Italy. The objects thus covered were estimated to be worth about 4,000,000,000 gold francs.

Their claims were rejected, however, by the conference and they began the Italian effort to effect a special treaty with Austria to obtain her end. The negotiations proceeded until this Spring when Dr. Renner finally signed on the occasion of his Italian visit. Under its terms General Segre's seizures are legalized and a large number of valuable objects are ceded, in addition.

The most important are the Reliquary of Cardinal Bessarione and the Cross of St. Theodore. The first named is a remarkable specimen of the Venetian gothic goldsmith's art of the 15th century and the other a unique piece of Byzantine goldsmithy. In terms of dollars they are said to be beyond price. The agreement also gives to Italy a quantity of bronzes, historical relics, manuscripts and other objects, and bronzes of the Renaissance, including Donatello's "Angel Playing the Tambourine" and two bronzes by Antico. The whole of the famous Duke de Este collection is included.

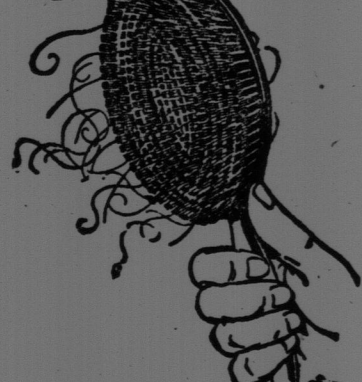

In return Italy renounces her claims to certain objects of more or less value, among them the coronation garments of the old German emperors. Finally Italy promises her help to save the Austrian collections from the claims of other powers under Article 196 of the treaty of St. Germain.

According to report there was a verbal promise on the part of Italy to assist Austria wherever possible in the boundary delimitations now in progress and certain other political assurances.

It is understood the Austrian section of the reparations commission is making inquiries into the whole transaction as it may affect the assets of the country to which the treaty of St. Germain gives title.

GOVERNMENT AID FOR UNIVERSITIES IN OLD COUNTRY

London, Nov. 8.—(By Canadian Press)—The government proposes next year to increase by half a million sterling the grant in aid of university education. This was announced recently by Austen Chamberlain, when speaking at a luncheon given in the University of Birmingham. He said the grant this year was 1,000,000 sterling, with an additional half a million to assist the universities and colleges in wiping out debts that were due to circumstances arising out of the war. Mr. Chamberlain said he had undertaken to grant 1,500,000 for a term of years unless he was prevented by overwhelming financial reasons. He also hoped to be able to do something in the way of a special non-recurring grant to enable the federated universities' scheme of pensions to be adapted to the cases of older professors and teachers who had served before this pension

THE SEEING EYE

Principal Reynolds of the Ontario Agriculture College thus delivers himself in the Agricultural Gazette of Canada: The teacher who hopes to take a right place in the life of the country school district must cultivate the seeing eye and the understanding heart of persons and things rural. The usual, popular, melodrama, comic supplement, moving picture conception of the farmer and of country people must be forgotten. It is essentially and perniciously false. The farmer is something of a humorist, and takes delight in deceiving the simple-minded by a somewhat unfinished exterior. The city-bred person makes the fatal mistake of judging by outside appearances. To the city-trained eye there are two classes of persons, one wearing overalls and the other wearing white collars. The former class work with their hands. The latter class work with their brains. That is the superficial judgment, which ignores the fact that there is a very great deal of clear, hard-thinking done today by the men wear-

BUYING OF MEN'S INCENTIVE IS PROFITABLE

Thirteen Years Without Strikes or Curtailments Result of Silk Mill's Scientific Study.

(New York Evening Post)
"Scientific management"—so broad as to measure the workman's incentive and buy it along with his time and his skill, shortening his hour, raising his wages, gaining his co-operation, and at the same time making profits for the company which keep its mills running long after other manufacturers in the same industry have had to shut down because of a slump in the market—is the basis upon which Cheney Brothers of South Manchester, Conn., have been able to run their silk mills without a break for thirteen years. This week the first curtailment since 1907 takes place, when the mills go on a four-day basis. In connection with the unprecedented condition in New England's textile industry, where mills have been shutting down entirely, reducing wages, and struggling with difficult labor problems, the record of the South Manchester company as to working conditions, wages, cost of living, and the policy and conclusions of the management is significant.

This plant reveals a stability of relations between the 5,000 employees and the management, and a steady parallel between production costs, sales prices, and wages. The mill has the advantages and disadvantages of being isolated. South Manchester has no other industry, is near no big railroad, and is ten miles from its nearest industrial rivals, the machine industries of Hartford. On the other hand, it can handle no boom demands because it cannot house extra workers, and in slump times it can hardly afford to lay off workers and have them leave town.

Comparatively unhampered, therefore, by outside influences other than the cost of raw materials, sales prices, and the cost of living, the "efficiency schedule" of hours and wages was worked out by the company without reference to direct union demands, for there have been no labor unions at Cheney's since a big strike was lost there in 1907.

From 72 to 48 Hour Week.

From a seventy-two-hour work week in 1848 with eighteen workmen at an average hourly wage of about 7 cents, the plant had advanced to a sixty-hour week in 1907, with 8,500 employees averaging 20 cents an hour for men and 18 cents for women. When America entered the war in 1917 a fifty-hour week was in force. The number of employees began to drop from 4,500 to 4,000, which marked its lowest ebb, in 1918, and earnings averaged 84 to 94 cents for men and women respectively. There are now nearly 5,000 working forty-eight hours a week (except for the present curtailment) at average earnings of 66 cents for men and 48 cents for women.

A cost of living chart shows a steady climb of 100 per cent. from 1914 to October, 1920, as reported by the National Industrial Conference Board; the Cheney wage chart shows a climb over the same period of 170 per cent. in men's earnings and 140 per cent. in women's earnings. A sales price chart shows a rise of 185 per cent. to April, 1920, then a drop to 160 per cent. in July, where it stands now after an upward surge in September.

Cost of raw materials, on the other hand, went as high as 80 per cent. in January, 1920, and has dropped now to about 75 per cent.

The System.

The piece-work system has been used exclusively. A time-study is made of every operation and the basic "task" assigned each worker for his day. If he completes this "task" at standard quality, he receives in addition to the piece-work rate a 20 per cent. bonus; some "tasks" of higher grade, requiring more skill and effort, have been given a higher rating bonus by the foreman. There are also extra pieces of work to be assigned as "bonus work." It has been found by observation that while a 5 per cent. bonus could be offered instead of the 20 per cent. which is usual, the worker will not exert himself to better his production for the few cents extra that the 5 per cent. bonus will give him. In other words, the 20 per cent. bonus on that grade of work is scientifically exact. The treasurer of Cheney Brothers reports that it costs the company a good deal of money paid to specialists to work out all these rates, but that they gain, in dollars and cents, on the whole, with the further advantage that the employee is working on his own incentive, takes an individual pride in his work, and is pretty well satisfied. Strict economy of this very broad sort, the treasurer believes, is what has carried the firm so steadily through these unprecedented trade conditions under which so many other firms have curtailed production and, in many cases, lowered the quality of their output.

Pressed For Money.

"Oh, Henry," exclaimed his wife, as she threw her arms rapturously about his neck, "I do love you so! Don't forget to leave me a couple of pounds when you go to town this morning, will you, dear?"

"And this," muttered Henry, softly disengaging himself from her fond embrace, "this is what you might call being pressed for money."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Cosmetics Not Needed—Peel the Skin Instead

One reason mercerized wax is so strongly recommended is that it really takes the place of several different cosmetics, saving time, patience and expense. It is better than any cleansing cream, better than any massage cream, and better than any rouge, for accomplishing the results for which such articles are used. As the wax actually absorbs an old, faded or discolored cuticle, a little each day, the underlying skin which gradually appears, is clearer, softer, healthier-hued and more youthful than any cosmetic-made complexion. Spreading on a thin coat of this wax at night, washing it off mornings, in a week or so produces a marvelous transformation. Just one ounce of mercerized wax, obtainable at any drug store, will do the work. There's nothing better to remove freckles, moth patches, liver spots, sallowness, blotches, pimples, or blackheads.

For wrinkles and loose, saggy skin, a face bath made by dissolving one ounce of pure powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel, is the best thing that can be recommended. This has remarkable astringent and tonic properties.
