Passengers on the River Steamer Columbian and the Topoka.

Roach Victoria.

The Last Gold Shipment of the Season.

News from the Interior.

Contrary to expectations the City of Topoka, which docked at the outer wharf early on Saturday evening, did not bring any large amount of treasure, or else the passengers succeeded in disguising the fact that they had any, or were more truthful in regard to it than their predecessors.

The passenger list was a large one, including nearly two hundred returning prospectors, some of them from Dawson, but the larger number from other districts. The local arrivals on Saturday morning from the Klondike included Dr. John Duncan, who completed the trip on the Topoka, and Mr. James Macanally, who left the boat at Nanaimo and arrived in the city by the noon train. He was accompanied by the other passengers by about six hours' time.

The news gathered from the passengers was but little, the arrivals on previous steamers having fairly covered the ground. Of course there was the usual proportion of grumblers, and it was impossible to obtain from any of them more than a cursory description of the country on the part of the officials, and equally of course those who did grumble, asked when pressed for further information, to have their names kept carefully from the public.

A Cheerful "Oleop."

There was one exception, however, to the rule, a man who had spent a year in the Klondike district and met with little but the worst luck, returning to his home in Minnesota poorer than when he left there, but, as he said, all the richer by a varied and wonderful experience. This man whose name was not given, was a contented and uncomplaining man, and he said that he had spent several months prospecting on the Stewart river, meeting with little success, although firmly of the opinion that there is no metal in the district. He said, and had been both to leave the country without giving it a thorough trial, but he had returned with a permanent camp, and says the grumblers are mostly men who have failed, like himself, but under his own hand he has philosophically necessary to enable them to grin and bear it.

A Washington Lawyer.

John F. Miller, formerly a state official in Washington, was one of the richest of the few who had wealth from the gold fields. He has been estimated at $6,000, but the greater portion of that amount had been made in some fortunate speculation. Mr. Miller is interested in some claims on Stikine creek, which he is prospecting. He has been very successful in his speculations. Mr. Miller had some really wonderful tales to tell. He confirms the statement that the bench diggings are worthfully rich.

Canadian Development Steamers.

The river steamer Columbian, built by the Canadian Development Company and taken into Dawson via St. Michaels, is now running between that city and the White Horse rapids, where it carries the Yukon's passengers, among them Mr. J. Macaulay, who is on board of her on her first trip. The big steamer was grounded on several occasions owing to a want of knowledge of the spots where the stragglers of the sinuosities of the channel. Five days were spent on sand bars, six days actual travelling time taking the boat from Dawson to White Horse. The other steamer belonging to the Canadian Development Company has had an unfortunate experience, having three holes knocked into her hull when about halfway through the narrows of the Hoopling. She was abandoned at that point.

Burnett Was Known Here.

T. C. Burnett, formerly steward of the Xela, who killed James Cowie near Tagish a few weeks ago, was formerly proprietor of the Bee Hive saloon here and spent a few days in the city a little while ago. Cowie died and was buried at the White Horse rapids.

Two Deaths.

The passengers on the Topoka laughed at the suggestion of a possible shortage in Dawson this winter and say that the quantity taken in up and down the river will more than suffice for all the needs.

A Lucky Seattleite.

William Stanley was one of the passengers on the Topoka, and he is probably one of the most fortunate of the many who have left that city for the Klondike. He has been very successful in his speculations. Mr. Stanley has been very successful in his speculations.

A Dawson Robbery.

On August 25th a robbery occurred in Dawson, something from which the Klondike has never recovered. The robbery was very successful in its results.

A Valuable Contribution to the Information Possessed of the New Diggins.

The San Francisco Call's Correspondent Gives Some News of First Importance.

The San Francisco Call published on Sunday the following letter from its Juneau correspondent:

Juneau, Alaska, Sept. 7th, 1898.—The Call's special emissary to the new placer diggings near Atlin Lake has returned with a report of difficulties there, and a return of many of the original stamperers to the coast town, until the situation is straightened out, so as to give all an equal chance on the ground and enough of the surface to make it pay to stay there. The matter will be laid before the British Columbia parliament at Victoria next winter as a favorable action is expected. Any other kind of action, it is clear from the expressions of experienced and conservative miners who have returned, would result in depopulating the new settlements of all except a few who have rich claims, and checking, if not entirely stopping, explorations for gold in a new and promising region.

It is not a question of whether there is gold on the new creeks. Nuggets with a good amount of gold in them, worth ten dollar pieces have been taken out and are still being found in the sluice boxes. From this the size runs down to fine gold. The trouble is over the width of the claims. At first it was generally understood, after a review of the maps and before there was time for further investigation, that the lake, and particularly its eastern shore, up which the new diggings are located, were in British Northwest territory. But the Gold Commissioner for British Columbia, Major Rant, came along, asserted that the creek, and the river bottom, and the possession without much dispute, the new Northwest Mounted Police on the ground made way before him and re-asserted his position. He said that the region is in the same territory that the Klondike is situated in, and a demand for a further official survey to determine the boundary.

When the question of this question, involving the ownership of heaps of gold for those who were on the ground among the first and were fortunate enough to find it, was brought up, a claim in the Northwest Territory is 250 feet long and running from rim to rim, three feet above the water level. Under British claims, a creek claim is 100 feet long and running from rim to rim. It is not apparent why it is hoped that the claim on the new diggings, around the camp fire of the small army of prospectors, shall be dictated at Ottawa and not at Victoria. At the present cost of working a claim it is estimated that 100 feet is not sufficient to make it pay. These are the facts and the situation which have prevented development work on hundreds of prospects on the surface of the claims. They have not been found, but have not stopped the maintenance of work on claims which are already panning out well. The number of such claims does not extend to the thousands.

Though many are leaving the diggings and the rush has abated, still a large number of men are in the territory. They are organized and action will be taken to lay the matter before the Ottawa as well as the British Columbia Parliament. An experienced miner of Juneau, also says: "I do not think the ground, as a rule, is rich enough to work under the British claim system. The country there are now some claims that are paying considerably more than wages. The day I left Miller and McKeen's camp I met a man who was working $1800, which is the largest yet found. They employ the men and clean up from 26 to 30 ounces every three days, which is pretty good for a summer. This is one of the first claims which I looked over two of the best creeks. The action of the railroad which stampered in from Skagway was outrageous. They overrun the country like a wild mob, knocking down stakes that had already been located by those who had staked the claims, and putting up their own. They were on top for a while, but were pretty soon called down for this, in some instances very forcibly. When we came out the largest camp is still going in, but the starch is pretty well knocked out of the general outlook by the mining laws and a disposition to order the surface prospect. About 1,000 men are in there now. There will be a winter camp all right, but I do not think it will compare with Dawson. At the end of the month of the largest camp is located. A few stoves are selling provisions, and there are some tents and liquor is sold.

THE TAKU INLET ROUTE

Profoundly to Be an Accessible and Satisfactory Entrance to the Interior.

The following report has been submitted to the Juneau Chamber of Commerce by a party of three experts sent out for the purpose of exploring and reporting upon the feasibility of a route via Taku Inlet and river to the new gold fields of Pine Creek and Atlin Lake, and will be of interest as throwing some light upon a question which has been more or less discussed several times in the past. The excitement led to discussion upon the various possible routes to the interior.

The Chamber of Commerce, Juneau, Alaska:

Gentlemen:—In accordance with instructions furnished by your honorable body, we, the parties sent out to probe to Lake Atlin, by the Taku river route, have the honor to submit the following report:

After making a reconnaissance of the Taku river and its feasibility for steam navigation, we agree with Lieutenant Schwabe and Chief Business W. A. Pratt, who have reported that river steamers could safely ascend to the confluence of the Inkin and Nakana, an approximate distance of 43 miles from the mouth of the river to the Taku Inlet. With the exception of three points where the river forks and is divided with gravel bars, the channel of the Taku river is well defined. From the river terminus of navigation the mouth of the Clochee river is six miles and a good trail can be constructed at a small outlay along the river bottom, the principal expense consisting of cutting and clearing the way through the bush and timber. The most practical manner of crossing the Clochee would be by means of a bridge, 70 feet long, and of abundance of suitable timber for that purpose is available in the immediate vicinity. The Clochee village we proceeded up the Clochee as far as possible, in the hope of finding a practical trail in that direction, but ascending to the junction of the Clochee we discovered that the trail was not practicable. The reason that above this point the river descends through a narrow, rugged canyon and would require a large outlay for construction.

Starting again from the Nakana village we directed our course to the Atlin via the Nakana and the Silver Salmon creeks. The distance from the mouth of the Silver Salmon to the mouth of the Nakana is 26 miles. The distance from the mouth of the Silver Salmon to the mouth of the Nakana is 26 miles. ### PROHIBITION.

Let Canada be free, we cry,
Free from the soul-destroying
In which thousands yearly sink,
Why will you act indifferent,
And say you do not care?
You have perhaps your moral strength,
But, for your children's sake, beware.

Ye fathers with an only son,
Who is your hope and joy,
Will you allow the cursed stuff
To get your only boy?

Ye mothers with a daughter sweet,
On whom you look with pride,
Can you not see 'tis possible
"She may become a drunkard's bride?"

Oh, then, what will you hesitate?
You must not let this be:
Your noble ancestors must demonstrate
That Canada shall be free.

PROHIBITION.

Let Canada be free, we cry,
Free from the soul-destroying
In which thousands yearly sink,
Why will you act indifferent,
And say you do not care?
You have perhaps your moral strength,
But, for your children's sake, beware.

Ye fathers with an only son,
Who is your hope and joy,
Will you allow the cursed stuff
To get your only boy?

Ye mothers with a daughter sweet,
On whom you look with pride,
Can you not see 'tis possible
"She may become a drunkard's bride?"

Oh, then, what will you hesitate?
You must not let this be:
Your noble ancestors must demonstrate
That Canada shall be free.
—Frank Angel, Victoria, B.C.
