LIGHTING SYSTEM IMPROVED

Changes Are Being Made on Dundas, Richmond and Wharncliffe Road.

COVER WHOLE CITY

Complete Change Could Be Carried Out in Three or Four Years.

Co-operation between the council and the public utilities commission with regard to improved street lighting has already brought results.

Work has been begun improving the present system on Richmond street, Dundas street and Wharncliffe road.

The new system being installed consists of center-suspended lights in prismatic globes, similar to those which have been in use on Waterloo street for some months past.

It is the intention of the council and the commission to entirely replace the present system with the new prismatic globe system over a period of three or four years. The cost of the gradual installation of the new system is to be borne by the commission through money from its depreciation reserve funds.

At the request of the council the commission outlined a scheme for improving the street lighting system, and in turn requested the council to name the streets upon which the new system should be installed first.

The council named Richmond street, north of Dufferin avenue; Dundas street, east of Waterloo street, and Wharncliffe road, south of Stanley street.

The communication addressed to the council by the commission was as follows:

Meets With Approval.
"With reference to your letter requesting a report on the improvement of the street lighting system we beg to advise that we have made some experiments with a system of center-suspended lights in prismatic globes, which direct the light rays where they are most required. The samples of this lighting will be seen on Waterloo street, and it appears to have met with general approval.

"We recommend that this system be adopted and the old system be replaced gradually, over a period of three or four years.

"It is estimated that if the whole city were equipped with such a system, the increased annual cost would be in the neighborhood of $3,500, or about 10 per cent increase over the present system.

Absorb Cost.
"The cost of installing these lights will be absorbed by the commission from its depreciation reserve fund, and so that the council will not require to contribute anything but the increase in the annual cost.

"If a quarter of the lights are erected this year, the increase will be less than $1,000, with infinitely better illumination.

"For billing purposes it is proposed to charge $55 a lamp a year for the 600-candlepower lamps at the street intersections, and $25 a lamp a year for the 400-candlepower lamps in the center of blocks.

"If our suggestions meet with your approval, will you please instruct us on what streets you would like further extensions made."

FREE STATERS WIN 7 SEATS

Irish Government Candidates Triumph Over Republicans in By-Elections.

SEAN MILROY GOES DOWN

Associated Press Despatch.

Dublin, March 14.—The miniature general election for seats in the Dail Eireann, to fill the vacancies of seven constituencies caused by the resignations of Nationalist members, has proved a triumph for the government.

Owing to the complicated system of proportional voting the counting occupied a long time, but in the final result the government won seven seats and the Republicans got only two, which the ministerial party regards as eminently satisfactory.

The results, in the opinion of the political experts, sound the death knell of the Nationalist group, which resigned over the mutiny crisis and which for some time past, although elected on a government ticket, had really been in opposition to the government, while there has always been uncertainty as to its probable attitude in Dail divisions.

Sean Milroy, leader of this group, was badly beaten, and all his followers shared a similar fate.

The seven ministerialists returned are all trusted men who will give the government firm support.

St. Clair, Niagara River Projects Proposed to Offset Diversion.

Associated Press Despatch.

Washington, D.C., March 14.—The special senate committee in charge of the lakes-to-the-gulf waterway question conferred yesterday with senators from New York and the lakes region on a plan to settle difficulties over the lakes-to-the-gulf waterway and diversion of water from Lake Michigan. A plan was discussed under which 10,000 cubic feet of water would be diverted from Lake Michigan for the waterway and temporary use of Chicago sanitary district, but at the same time controlling or compensating works would be constructed in the St. Clair and Niagara rivers which would raise lake levels instead of lowering them.

Senator Brookhart, who proposed the compromise, said the harbors on the lakes, United States and Canadian, would be improved by the plan. He expressed confidence a compromise could be reached.

"DANGEROUS STRUCTURE" NOTICE IS SUSPENDED

Associated Press Despatch.

London, March 14.—The committee of the city corporation has agreed to suspend the "dangerous structure" notice which it served in connection with the safety of St. Paul's cathedral, but simultaneously it emphasizes the danger of excavations for buildings near the cathedral and suggests government action to safeguard the edifice from harm.

The committee's action is based upon a report from the experts' commission which has considered the cathedral's condition for months. It is conditional upon the closing of the parts of the cathedral affected by the restoration work being closed. The services will not be interrupted.

COMING TO ST. JOHNS

Crew of Stella Maris Rescued by Passing Ship Off Newfoundland.

Canadian Press Despatch.

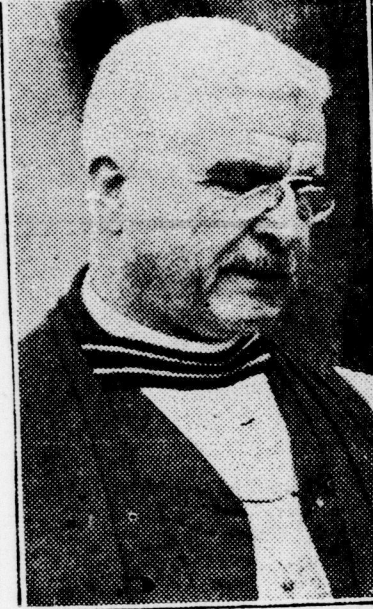

St. John's, Nfld., March 14.—True to the time-honored traditions of sealers when shipwrecked in northern waters, 83 men, the crew of the sealing steamer Stella Maris, escaped death from drowning last Wednesday when their vessel foundered between ice floes off the northeast coast of Newfoundland and food. This was disclosed yesterday in a brief message from Captain Whiteley, who was rescued with his crew by the sealer Prospero after passing a day on the ice floes. The Stella Maris was bound with a fleet of seven other steamers for the northern grand banks on the annual seal hunt.

The crew was barely able to escape, the message stated, for the steamer sank within twenty minutes of the time she sprang a leak.

Early at daylight, according to Captain Whiteley's message, the Stella Maris was making good progress through scattered ice masses when she sprang a serious leak.

Messages were picked up here and by the Prospero, a member of the sealing fleet, that the Stella Maris was crushed in ice floes and was sinking. No further word was heard and the Prospero started to the rescue. A rescue steamer was also despatched by the Newfoundland government.

The crew hurriedly took to the boats, narrowly escaping going down with the steamer, which foundered within 20 minutes. The men made their way to the ice floes with a small supply of food in their boots. They remained on the ice until nightfall, when the Prospero found and rescued them.

Paris Officials Claim German Security Proposals Backed by Baldwin Government.

CHAMBERLAIN CRITICIZED

Associated Press Despatch.

Paris, March 14.—The feeling was expressed in French official and political circles last night that the British are trying to force the German security proposals on France. The air was full of talk about the German plan for a security pact, after the publication in the early afternoon newspapers of the comment of the British press on the plan.

There has been some sharp criticism of the fact that Austen Chamberlain, the British secretary of state for foreign affairs, failed to make clear on his recent visit to Paris that he was going to take an uncompromising attitude against the league of nations peace protocol.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, March 14.—Lord Rothermere's "schoolboy" examination is off.

The publisher contends that the conditions of the challenge by W. G. Cove, which at the beginning were clear and precise, have been changed, and in a letter to his challenger he says: "It is now clear to me that you have no intention of standing by the terms of your challenge. Ever since I accepted it you have been

Mr. Cove, who is ill, is expected to reply as soon as he is able. His challenge arose out of criticism by Rothermere's Daily Mail of the London secondary schools, of which Mr. Cove, a Laborite M.P., is an ardent champion.

MILLIONS SPENT FOR PAVEMENT

Gasoline Tax Is Condemned When London Pays For Own Roads.

PROVINCE COLLECTS

Steps Being Taken to Have Proposed Provincial Levy Dropped.

Streets and bridges, paid for by citizens of London, are being used daily by motorists from outside the city. London has thoroughfares which are worth more than two and a half million dollars. Towards this sum the province of Ontario has not contributed a dollar. The streets and bridges have been provided solely by Londoners, and figures given at the city engineer's office show that Londoners have paid well for their streets.

On top of this expenditure, London has been ordered to pay to the province of Ontario for suburban paving, paving of provincial roads outside the city.

But, according to council attitude, and plans being pushed to prevent it, the whole problem becomes a bit too thick when a gasoline tax is imposed on motorists, so that the province of Ontario will benefit to the extent of three cents on every gallon of gasoline sold in Ontario. The province, according to present plans, will get all the gasoline tax and the cities nothing. This stand has aroused a group of Londoners to act.

Cut Charges.

London has protested against this proposal and has asked the provincial government to share the gasoline tax or cut the suburban road paving charges. Cities and towns all over the province have written supporting London's protests.

Through the gasoline tax, London would contribute probably $50,000 annually to the coffers of the province—to help pay for good roads outside the city. The tax is all for the use of outside roads. There is nothing to help paying in London.

London owns and maintains 145 miles of streets, including nearly 50 miles of paved streets and 129 miles of curbs and gutters. These streets have cost the city approximately $1,887,265.88 for improvements in the past 15 years. The engineers place the cost in that period to be a very conservative estimate of the value of the streets today, as costs were much lower when some of the pavements were first put in.

The city has met a curb and gutter bill in the last 15 years of over $300,000. Not a cent of this money has been provided by the province.

Fourteen Bridges.

In London 14 bridges are owned and maintained by the city. They have cost the city $1,500,000 and could not be replaced for twice that sum.

This year London has received a bill for construction of pavements outside the city.

London's street and highway values may conservatively be placed at $2,552,200. That is what they have cost the city in the last 15 years.

Annual charges on the city taxpayer for highway costs are becoming exorbitant. On top of the taxes he pays for city streets and bridges in the city every year, he is now asked to contribute a new tax that will go solely to the province.

Wingham, Picton, Sturgeon Falls, North Bay, Peterboro, Smiths Falls, Port Arthur, Kingston, Oakville, Matheson, Kitchener and other municipalities are supporting London.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 14.—The Los Angeles Times today quotes Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, as saying that he positively will not defend his heavyweight title before next fall.

"There is not a chance in the world of my fighting Renault or anyone else here in June," Dempsey said, according to the Times. "I won't be ready to defend my title then, and I don't intend to try. UNDERMINE CURRENCY Origin Is Traced to Persia by Recent Consignment to Bank of England.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent.

Toronto, March 14.—Is the hand of the Bolshevik behind the recently discovered forgery of $100 Imperial Bank of Canada notes?

This question, far-fetched though it may seem, is receiving serious consideration from the least hysterical circle of men in Toronto. At the same time they are speculating with some anxiety as to the extent of the forgery, and whether it includes bank notes of other denominations as well.

Bankers and bank note experts are unanimous in their opinion that the forgery was made in Persia. They were equally unanimous, however, in admitting the possibility that the forgery may be on an unprecedented scale, and that it may even be the attempt of Bolshevik interests to debase the currency of Canada as an act of economic aggression against this "capitalistic" country.

Bank Held Bogus Bills.

There are a number of circumstances that have earned this theory a considerable measure of credence among those directly concerned in tracing the bogus notes. Their origin in Persia, a country dominated by Bolshevik influence, the apparent magnitude of the crime and the consummate skill with which it has been carried out, are taken as indications pointing away from the ordinary gang of counterfeiters and in the direction of Russia. ELEVATOR FIRM WINS APPEAL IN GRAIN CASE

Shippers Lose Oats Released at Goderich To Company That Failed.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, March 14.—The appeal of the Goderich Elevator and Transit Company from the trial decision which held them liable to the Northern Grain Company of Winnipeg for the price of 70,000 bushels of oats, was allowed by the appellate division yesterday.

The oats were shipped to the elevator company from Fort William, Ont., and later instructions were given by the owners to deliver them to the Peerless Cereal Mills at Woodstock.

That company went into liquidation and the Northern Grain Company sought to recover from the Goderich Elevator Company the value of the grain, alleging that it should have been held until the bills of lading had been delivered. The appellate division held that when the shippers' instructions had been carried out the elevator company had done its duty.

STUDENTS DISCUSS CHANGES IN RULES

Western Undergraduates May Revise Governing Council—Action Delayed.

Whether the present method of government by the students' council of the university of Western Ontario will be continued or whether a parliamentary form of government will replace it was the question discussed by over fifty students at the university yesterday afternoon. No definite decision was reached. A committee was appointed to consider doubtful points.

The meeting opened at 1 o'clock and continued until 4:30. The proposed departure and the new constitution were thoroughly discussed. Opinion differed on some articles in the constitution. The differences were on: the matter of electing the prefect and sub-prefect; whether or not the junior years would be adequately represented if the number of representatives was less than that enjoyed by the senior years; the position of the graduates, and minor points.

No agreement was reached concerning the election of prefect and sub-prefect. Not all were agreed with the parliamentary manner of procedure as being the best suited to the case.
The place the graduate should occupy was taken up. At present no provision has been made for them in the constitution.
The relation of the clerk of the house and the secretary of the cabinet was talked on at length.
A committee composed of Cecil Snyder, Ken Crawford, Fred Barnum, Miss Eunice Moorehouse, Miss Louise Garbutt and George Bond was elected to consider the points raised. The committee will meet on Monday at 1 p.m.

Grant Wiley, prefect, and George Bond are going over the constitution today to take up the arguments for and against the constitution.
The agreements reached will be placed before the student body a week from Monday.
George Bond acted as secretary.

GOVERNMENT ASSURED OF HELP IN RATES FIGHT

Progressive Leader Backs Plan To Free Canada From Claws.

WARNS HIS PARTY

Graham Predicts Ship Companies Will Come Seeking Peace.

By E. C. BUCHANAN.
Special to The Advertiser.
Ottawa, March 13.—Hon. George P. Graham, veteran of the cabinet, made today the outstanding speech of the ocean freight rates debate so far. He answered every criticism that has been offered of the government's measure and emphatically justified the policy being pursued.
"I venture to make the prophecy," Mr. Graham declared, "that before this thing is through, the leading steamship companies will be prepared to make terms with the dominion of Canada."
Tentative support of the government proposal was given today by Robert Forke, Progressive leader.

The chief object of the measure, said Mr. Graham, was to establish the principle of government control of ocean freight rates, and this was worth paying for. The government's policy would establish that principle. He admitted that it was an experiment, but he added, "unless some government has the courage to make a great experiment, we won't get any further than we have got in the last 15 years."
The minister reviewed the consideration that had been given to excessive ocean freight rates during that period. He went back to the opinions given the Borden government by the chairman of the industrial railway commission, Mr. Mabee, and followed through the report of Mr. Mabee's successor, Sir Henry Thornton, showing that the last 15 years had recognized the problem of high ocean rates, but had failed to cope with it.
Conferences futile.
The experience of these years had conclusively proved, Mr. Graham maintained, that it was futile to try to deal with the question through commissions and conferences. Shipping was the principal industry of Great Britain, and the people of the old country were not disposed to interfere with it. The vast majority in Great Britain from the government's point of view were directly or indirectly, shareholders in shipping companies. Hence, no relief from high ocean rates was to be expected through further negotiations and in the future such as had taken place. But at the same time, Great Britain would not think the less of Canada because her sons were showing a disposition to look after themselves.
The Conservative opposition were asking through every speaker why the government didn't use its merchant marine. Mr. Graham answered by reciting that when the opposition was in power it had the merchant marine in its control in brand-new condition. The point was hardly dry on the subject. At that time Sir George Perley, whom the government of the day had instructed to go into the matter in London, was asking it why it didn't put its own merchant marine to work to secure control of Atlantic rates. But that government didn't do it. It made no attempt to use the government ships to control rates, although at that time no trade routes for these ships had been established. Instead the government merchant marine was put into the North Atlantic conference subsidizing its rates.

MAKING TRADE ROUTES.
The party that when in power had not used the brand new merchant marine in attempt to secure control of ocean rates, although its own representative overseas was asking why the present government was not doing so. The present government was not in the same position to do so, one reason being that the ships were employed in establishing trade routes in the interests of Canadian commerce.
Mr. Meighen and other members of the opposition, who have been constantly bobbing up to interrupt previous speakers, were subdued under Mr. Graham's rejoinders to their arguments.
Mr. Forke, Progressive leader, in commending the government for making a move for the reduction of ocean rates, delivered a significant warning to the members of his own would be disappointed if it were said, would be disappointed if it were shown that their representatives at Ottawa were aligning themselves against an attempt to deal with the problem. Mr. Forke could not see far enough into the future to know whether or not the government's measure would accomplish its purpose, but it was an attempt, and as such he favored it.

DEAF MUTES PAY FINAL TRIBUTE TO LOST FRIEND

The funeral of Gilbert Henderson, held last Tuesday, was attended by many deaf mutes of the city. Mr. Henderson, who was deaf, had a host of friends among the people of the city who suffered from the same affliction as himself. The service conducted by Rev. W. R. McIntosh of King Street Presbyterian church, was interpreted to these people by Mr. Fisher of the Deaf mission.
Mr. Henderson died suddenly on Sunday morning. He had lived in the city the greater part of his life and was a printer.
The funeral was held from the Harrison funeral parlors. Interment was made in Woodland cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. Fisher, Cowan, Wilson, Gould, Fishbein, and Paul.

FORKE PROMISES SUPPORT.
Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, March 13.—Tentative support of the government's proposal for reducing ocean rates was given by Robert Forke, Progressive leader.

"Let us make an attempt to deal with this matter anyway," said Mr. Forke, in announcing that he would support the government's plan to subsidize the Petersen line of steamers, at least until it was examined in committee. "Let us have an investigation and find out what we can. Having done this, I think most members will be able to give an intelligent vote when the proper time comes."
The Progressive leader admitted that he had his doubts as to the efficiency of the measure proposed by the government. "It does seem to me that it is almost too small to make any particular dent on the arrangements that now exist with respect to ocean shipments," he said, referring to the service of ten ships mentioned in the government's resolution. "However," he continued, "I am quite willing to investigate the matter; I am quite willing to give the government credit for at least making an attempt to do something to better the existing conditions."

Members of all parties in the house contributed to the debate in the course of the afternoon and evening.
Mr. Forke was followed by Donald Sutherland, Conservative, South Ontario, in opposition to the government's scheme. Why subsidize another line to enter into competition with the Canadian government merchant marine?" he queried. He advised the government, in view of its large railway obligations, to go very slowly before involving the country in more expenditure.

House Cleaning Imminent In City Labor Party :: King Sends $100 for N.S. Relief

DEPUTIES DRAW FIRE OF CITY LABOR

House-Cleaning Now Looms in London Party, Officials Declare.

Labor in London is going to do a little house cleaning next week. Members in the London Labor Party are not at all satisfied with the way certain of their representatives in the city council have acted and voted this year and will probably censure the offenders on Friday evening of next week, which is the monthly meeting of the party.

"What labor objects to," said a prominent member of the party, "is that, by the actions and speeches of certain of its public representatives, it is being put in an altogether false position. An election is due in June or July this year and we want the aims and the platform of the party to be unequivocally clear long before that. At the present time it is being clouded by some of our people. It is our intention at this meeting on Friday to deal with those whom we believe have not played the game with their own party and to make a public pronouncement of the stand of the party."

Quotes Railwaymen.

"Take the position of the street railwaymen," said another member. "If at any time in the future these men should be compelled to make concessions from the company they would be acting under a great handicap in view of things said and done by certain aldermen who are supposedly Labor men. What we want London to know is that Labor has a definite platform on all questions and that the views of certain of its members are not always the views of the party."

A third member of the party put it this way: "Labor in London has been fooled too often in the past by design or ignorance on the part of its alleged leaders and representatives. It is not going to occur again. If the men we select to represent Labor do not fulfill their duty as Labor men in the best and truest interests of Labor then we must in self-defense repudiate them publicly. You can see the false position in which we are placed."

Simmering For Weeks.

For some weeks this matter has been simmering in the party and at many labor meetings it was visible under the surface of the ordinary discussions. The developments of the last few weeks on the part of the council with the street railway have brought it to a head and the majority of the party is now determined on vigorous action.

"We had some difficulty two years ago in the Trades and Labor Council with officials who were as we now know, hostile to the party. We got rid of them and the council is all the better for the move," declared a well-known labor man in London. "If labor is to do its duty and take its rightful place in the administration of the affairs of a country or a city it must do two things—draw up a logical, worthwhile platform that is based on common sense and fair play, and elect men to office who will stand by that platform."

CITY HYDRO REBATE SAID SATISFACTORY

Amount Paid Back $7,934 in 1924—Midway in List.

London's rebate of $7,934 on its bill for hydro for 1924 from the hydro-electric power commission of Ontario lies about midway in the list of rebates allowed by the provincial commission.

While other cities received a much larger rebate, some going over $13,000, London's rate of $25 per horsepower per annum is considerably lower and thus the advantage spread over the actual bill for the whole year lies much in London's favor.

Galt, with a rate of $28 per h.p., received $13,500 as a rebate from the commission and as its pro rata share of a $1,000,000 surplus over the whole hydro system.

Woodstock, also with a rate of $28 per h.p., received $9,128; St. Thomas, with a rate of $30 per h.p., $12,061; and Chatham, with a rate of $21, $13,600; Sarnia, with a rate of $35 per h.p., and Brantford, with a rate of $25 per h.p., also were allowed rebates, the exact amount of which it not known.

WOMAN CLAIMS SIGHT AGAIN BY PRAYERS OF EVANGELIST

New Giza Tomb Has Been Closed

Associated Press Despatch.

Cambridge, Mass., March 14.—The new tomb discovered by the Boston-Harvard expedition at Giza has been closed to await the return to Egypt of Dr. Reisner, director of the Boston museum of fine arts and head of the expedition, who is now in Boston. Announcement of this decision was made yesterday by the secretary for information at Harvard university.

WOMAN RECOVERS FROM BAD BURNS

New Bath Treatment Proves Efficacious in Case of Mrs. Alex. McCoy.

The continued progress of Mrs. Alex. McCoy at Victoria hospital towards complete recovery from severe burns all over her body constitutes one of the most remarkable cases physicians at that institution have experienced.

Mrs. McCoy was brought to the hospital several months ago. She was horribly burned. Her clothing had caught fire following a gasoline explosion at her home, 19 Dean street. From the first physicians held little hope for her recovery. It was feared that septic poisoning would develop. For some time her condition showed little change. It was not until several weeks ago that she rapidly became better, and now she is able to sit up in a wheel chair.

Her recovery is due to a bath treatment, from which she has shown satisfactory response recently. It is expected she will be in a fit condition to leave the hospital in a few days.

TORIES IN DILEMMA TO FIND CANDIDATE

East Middlesex Conservatives Find Selves in Difficulty— Four Are Mentioned.

Now that E. R. Dennis has definitely declared that he will not accept nomination as the Conservative in East Middlesex, the Conservatives are having quite a difficult time in deciding on a nominee who would have a fair chance of bringing home the bacon. Four men are mentioned as likely candidates for nomination at the convention on March 28. They are King Hodgins of Lucan, Frank Boyce of Dorchester, Alderman Homer Neeley and Tom Scandrett of London.

With the labor party trying to get up with the U. F. O. in all constituencies where the city and country are divided in the electorate, the Tories are faced with a difficult problem. If as some of the provincial members have stated, the U. F. O. and the Progressives and the Liberals combined possibly will find shelter under one umbrella, then the Conservatives will be eliminated and at the next election will receive from the Liberals and the weary are at rest.

CITY BARRISTERS URGE DEED CASE IN TORONTO

Perrin and Gordon Tennent, president and secretary respectively of the Middlesex Bar Association, interviewed Attorney-General Nickle in Toronto yesterday asking that legislation be passed validating deeds to uses which have been in operation for many years, but which have been questioned lately by a recent decision of Mr. Justice Orie. Three Hamilton lawyers accompanied the local barristers to Toronto.

JUSTICE HEARS DIVORCE THREAT

Young Married Couple Urged To Try Again at Recon- ciliation.

Mr. Justice Mowat, presiding at the weekly high court this morning, declared his best hope for a young married couple from jumping on the rocks of divorce by advising them to try to get together to effect a reconciliation.

"The father wants the affection of the children and so does the mother," declared his worship, smiling benignly on the London couple, who with flushed faces were standing before him.

"I will adjourn this case until April 4, when I will be here again. I hope that something may be done in the matter before that time. In the meantime I do not think it will hurt the children to remain in the custody of their mother."

On the way out of court, the mother told one of her two daughters to "Kiss daddy." The younger ran across the corridor and twined both arms around her father's neck and gave him a "bear hug."

"You bet I do," replied the small youngster with a happy smile.

The husband is asking the court for the custody of the two children. He claims that the mother is not a fit person to have control of them.

After court husband wife stood on the corner in front of the court house discussing the matter and it would not be surprising if they decided to once more live together.

Enlarge Tech. School.

Increase in Technical school accommodation, in place of construction of a new college institute, is advocated by T. E. Smith, O.P., position in council circles to an extensive collegiate building program is growing, and Ald. Smith sets for his Technical school suggestion as a compromise.

They are clamoring for secondary school education in London," points out Ald. Smith. "Make that construction of the Technical school and half the cost of building it be borne by the government. That would cut the bill in half and would be highly acceptable to taxpayers."

The merits of technical versus academic education enter into the case, but the ward four alderman declares the academic education is overdone at present.

The professions are filled with graduates of the sort of schools we have been concentrating on," Ald. Smith declared. "Many of our young men and women graduated from our academic institutions have gone abroad the border to find positions."

He said that a million dollars a year for education is a way too much. We can't afford it. Anyway, the system just trains our children along such lines that they can't find jobs in London or in this country."

The collegiate question will come up at a special meeting of the council next Wednesday, when estimates will be thoroughly discussed in the presence of school trustees.

HUNDRED ARE MISSING AS JAP SHIP FOUNDERS

Purser and 15 Passengers Are Picked Up—Five Destroyers in Search.

Associated Press Despatch.

Nagasaki, Japan, March 14.—One hundred persons are missing from the Japanese steamer Uwajima Maru No. 6, which is believed to have foundered off Kabashima Island on Wednesday. The purser and fifteen passengers have been picked up thus far and five destroyers are searching for other possible survivors.

The Uwajima Maru No. 6 was a wooden vessel of 425 tons, built in 1901. Her home port was Kishiku. The island of Kabashima lies 50 miles to the west of Nagasaki.

Skating Club's Carnival Has Spectacular Events For Next Friday Evening

Mayor Wenige Ambitious To Perform on Skates—Praises Carnival Plan.

Program details of the London Skating club's big carnival in the arena next Friday night are now complete and the skaters are working hard to put the finishing touches on various spectacular exhibitions.

Incidentally London nearly had an opportunity of seeing Mayor Wenige perform on skates. The mayor was invited to act as a judge of costumes, and although the entire skating program is being presented by club members it is understood that his worship would have insisted on going to the job properly and being provided with skates so that he could inspect the performers from close-up range. Unfortunately Mayor Wenige is out of the city on Friday night at a London Old Boys conference and can not act.

"I'm very disappointed that I'll not see the carnival," he said to The Advertiser. "I believe it is going to be a wonderful exhibition of skating, and apart from that the Skating Club is a splendid thing for the city and should have public support. The Skating Club in Toronto has become famous all over the continent through its carnivals and is doing a great deal to give Toronto publicity. There is no reason why our own Skating Club shouldn't do the same if the public will back it, and it is a fine means of developing a great Canadian winter sport."

Next winter the mayor intends to take time for some figure skating himself.

A Spectacular Program.

The carnival program on Friday night combines beautiful skating, difficult and spectacular stunts by the club professional, striking costume effects, dancing on skates and various comedy features. It differs from the usual carnival in that the public does not take part in the skating, all the exhibitions being presented by members of the Skating Club.

The carnival will open with a grand march of all the club skaters in costume, both senior and junior, followed by waiting on skates by senior members.

A Children's Court comes next, giving the youngsters a chance to shine with Ian Coles, young son of Col. W. G. Coles, accompanied in a solo exhibition, accompanied by an escort. The skating ability of these children is surprising, and they will supply a unique feature of the program.

After the Children's Court there will be general straight skating by all members of the club, giving spectators an opportunity to miss Katherine White and Lieut.-Col. E. J. Ware, who give an exhibition of pair figure skating.

Difficult Figure Skating.

After another waltzing number comes a second Children's Court, featuring little Catherine Dickinson, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Harry T. Dickinson and then Mrs. Charles Ivey and J. G. Boucher will give an exhibition of dancing on skates, followed by Prof. K. R. Mallen, the way interrupted its activities, but reorganization last December has brought nearly two hundred senior members, and the club carnival Friday night will conclude a remarkably successful season.

The program will conclude with waltzing and general skating by club members. Throughout the program numerous comedy features are to be introduced as surprises. These will include the mysterious bull fight, about which there have been so many rumors.

The London Skating Club has a history of over seventeen years, being organized in 1907, with the late George B. Harris as first president. The war interrupted its activities, but reorganization last December has brought nearly two hundred senior members, and the club carnival Friday night will conclude a remarkably successful season.

WATER RATE INCREASE MAXIMUM 33 CENTS

Manager Buchanan Declares Raise Is Merely Readjust- ment of Charges.

Commenting upon the recent change in water rates, Manager E. V. Buchanan stated this morning that the maximum possible increase in the domestic consumers' bill is 33 cents per month.

Since water rates to consumers outside the city, and the commission serves 400 such consumers, are double the rates to consumers within the city limits, the maximum possible increase in rates would be 66 cents per month.

Mr. Buchanan reiterates, however, that the "increase" is not in any sense an actual increase, as it represents only a readjustment of rates under the meter system as compared with the old flat rate system.

The commission is serving 17,000 consumers in the city by means of its waterworks system.

DANCING ON SKATES

Exhibition of Difficult Figure Skating—Striking Costumes and Comedy Features.

London's East End town hall was officially opened last night with a dance in spite of the bad weather. Over a hundred East Enders dared the rain and snow to be present. Mayor Wenige was the sole representative of the city council there, none of the aldermen being able to attend.

The dance was arranged by the London Sunshine relief circle for the unemployed and the money received will be used in the relief work of the committee.

This was the first of a series of dances which it is hoped to hold in the hall. Since the opening of the hall and its inspection by the city building inspector, who vouches for its safety, the old hall looks quite smart. According to other numbers there last night, it has a good dancing floor.

DRIVER'S RECORD STAYS SPOTLESS

Traveller Dismissed When Haled to Court First Time in Ten Years.

C. H. Bendin, a traveller, of 37 Elmwood avenue, has been driving an automobile five and six days a week for the past ten years or so, and is justifiably proud of his spotless record as a motorist.

His only approach to a conviction, according to his story, came in court today when he was charged with driving recklessly on King street on Friday, March 6.

His car was reposing in the driveway at his home at 5:50 on the afternoon of the day in the case. Mr. Bendin told Magistrate Graydon, P. C. Thompson, however, that he took the number of Mr. Bendin's auto, front and rear, during a wild ramble east on King street, in which a silent policeman was struck. Mr. Bendin's brother testified in favor of the accused, and the court, decided that the action was hazy enough to warrant a dismissal.

The only other case on the court blotter today was laid over until next Friday. Pearl Gillar is suing her husband, Anthony Gillar, for non-support. Inability of one lawyer to attend brought the adjournment.

John Miller of South Bend, Ind., is extremely anxious to get in touch with W. J. Jones, who was last seen in Toronto. He has written Chief Birrell in his efforts to locate his friend. If found Mr. Miller asks that Mr. Jones write him at Lock Box 112, South Bend.

A. H. Burrows has reported to the police that his auto was stolen from Queen's avenue, between Richmond and Clarence streets, last night. The license number is 87-949, the serial number 536131, and the motor number 232272.

LOCH LOMOND CHAPTER PRESENTS SUNDAY CONCERT

By kind permission of Lieut.-Col. A. Seely-Smith, the band of the Royal Canadian regiment, under the direction of L. K. Harrison, L.R.A.M., will present a number of fine band selections at the sacred concert taking place tomorrow evening at the Majestic theatre. The concert is being arranged by the Loch Lomond chapter, I.O.D.E., as a benefit for the work of the chapter. Other numbers will be given by some of London's clever talent.

The band numbers will include the following: Grand march, "Florentine," by Fucik; overture, "Die Fledermaus" (The Bat), by Strauss; selection from Cavaleria Rusticana, Mascagni; "Bourree and Gigue," by Debussy; and a suite, "The Tempter," by Edward Grieg; prelude, "Berceuse" and "Bacchanale."

CALM PREVAILS IN STRIKE AREAS

Relief Operations in the Nova Scotia Coal Fields Have Relieved All Distress.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Sydney, N. S., March 14.—The strike of 12,000 members of the United Mine Workers of district 28, employed in the collieries of the British Empire Steel Corporation, entered its second week with honors even and no evidence that an early settlement is due. The enforced idleness of the miners and the consequent financial embarrassment has been accompanied by no disorders such as have marked previous strikes, and this morning the police again reported that quietness prevailed in all areas.

So far the maintenance men recruited from the offices and clerical staff of the mines have done their duty. Although the company heads stated that when the walkout occurred the clerical men, unused to the arduous labor of running boilers and manning pumps, would be unable to carry on longer than a week, there have been no official reports of any of the mines suffering from lack of proper maintenance.

Relief operations have proceeded with considerable success and it is not believed that many families have suffered since the relief committees started operations. A generous response has greeted the appeal for assistance, donations from many districts and points and including last night a personal check for $100 from the prime minister of Canada, and $500 from "an Ottawa philanthropist." It is reported that the number needing assistance is growing, as those who had savings have exhausted their hoard since the period of idleness set in.

Photography and Nature Study In Hobby Fair Develop Best In Boys

YOUTHFUL CAMERA FAN GETS FIRST BIG CHANCE AT 1925 HOBBY FAIR

Photography Comes Into Its Own at Exhibition Backed by Rotarians.

OPENS APRIL 13

Important Phase of Show Is Under Direction of A. R. Cairncross.

Not the largest but one of the most important and most colorful departments of the hobby fair, opening on April 13, is the photography department.

It is the desire and intention of those most interested in the photography department that this year it make strides of growth commensurate with its importance as the department representing what is said to be the greatest hobby in the world.

It was only last year that the photography department stood on its own legs since the previous year the first of the hobby fairs, photography was grouped with the art department.

Mr. Cairncross, director of the photography department for the second successive year, is most ambitious on behalf of the department this year, and as proof of that optimism and ambition he has arranged for 100 square feet of space in the arena, where the fair is to be held.

Mr. Cairncross, himself a photographer, is keenly interested in and genuinely enthusiastic about photography as well as of the Rotary club, in conducting the photography department that there be instilled into an increasing number of boys and girls an appreciation of the possibilities of the greatest of all hobbies.

World's Greatest Hobby.

"Photography is the greatest hobby in the world," declares Mr. Cairncross, "because there is no other hobby out of which a person can get so much satisfaction. A picture taken today has value, but think what the value of that picture will have grown to in twenty years' time."

"No hobby shows such results as does photography, and that is because of the human interest wrapped up in each picture, an interest which through whose efforts the photography department of the hobby fair has been developed into one of the most interesting sections of the annual exhibition sponsored by the Rotary club.

grows and deepens rather than pales with the passing of the years."

As with all other departments of the hobby fair, one of the prime motives of the photography is to develop in the boys and girls individuality and originality, to encourage and to stimulate in them not only an interest in the hobby itself, but in and through that hobby a keener, brighter, happier outlook on life.

Last year the photography department had four sections, embracing two sections in connection with enlargements, framed and colored.

This year Mr. Cairncross has done away with sections on prints and enlargements, leaving only two sections, those on enlargements.

Section 1 is for framed enlargements with an explanatory note in the Hobby Fair prize list, which is issued in booklet form, as follows: "The enlargement must be done from one of the exhibitor's own negatives, but the enlarging may be done either by the exhibitor or any dealer;

the exhibitor must do his or her own framing."

Colored Enlargements.

Section 2 is for colored enlargements with explanatory note as follows: "Exhibitors may have a black and white enlargement made from any negative they may choose. They must then mount the enlargement and color same with velox water color, or any other process they prefer; all coloring and mounting to be done by the exhibitor."

Mr. Cairncross comments upon the fact that last year a number of entries were thrown out because of being mounted photographs or plainly not the sole work of the exhibitor, and warns all intending exhibitors that the same rule is to be adhered to strictly this year and that all entries which do not comply with the requirements will be disqualified.

Originality and individuality will show itself in the selection of a subject, either to be photographed or to be colored. While there is no restriction as to subject the choice of subject and its treatment will form an important part in the judging of the entries.

The colored enlargement section will lead the boys and girls to an interest and enjoyment in the mastery of using water colors, in itself an art well worth developing.

The framed enlargement section will bring to light the adeptness and adaptability of the boys and girls to do a neat job of carpentering or picture framing.

In requiring in section one that the enlargement is to be made from the exhibitor's own negatives, a premium is placed upon the ability of boys and girls who are already photographers in the embryo, while for those who are not photographers but who hope to be photographers in the future, a goal is set for their ambitions.

Enlarges Field.

The fact that the colored enlargement may be made from any negative the exhibitor may choose greatly enlarges the field of competition and at the same time makes it possible for any boy or girl, whether he or she has a camera, to color some picture and thus win the coveted prize.

Incidentally no cash prizes are being given this year at the Hobby Fair; the Rotary club executive having decided that shields and ribbons would prove more satisfactory and more worth while, too, since of necessity cash prizes would only be a comparatively small sum.

As is the case with a number of directors of other departments of the Hobby Fair, Mr. Cairncross is donating the prizes for the department over which he has charge. For each section there are two shields and one ribbon, the shields being the standard Hobby Fair shield.

Of interest to all boys or girls contemplating placing entries in either the framed or colored enlargement sections the colored enlargements, now on display in the window of Mr. Cairncross' drug store, corner of Clarence and Dundas streets, of many of the picturesque performers in the numerous school pageants held recently.

Mr. Cairncross is anxious that exhibitors desiring information as to the photography department, communicate with him either in person, by telephone, or by letter. He states that full instructions will gladly be given and every fair assistance rendered. He can be seen at his store, 216 Dundas street, or reached by phone at 880 or 283.

GABY SAYS SIR ADAM IS IMPROVING SLOWLY

Medical Men So Far Unable To Completely Diagnose Trouble.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, March 13.—On his return today from Baltimore, where he visited Sir Adam Beck, who is resting in Johns Hopkins hospital, F. A. Gaby, chief engineer of the provincial hydro-electric commission, reported that the hydro chief was improving slowly, but that doctors had advised his remaining two weeks more at the hospital for observation.

The medical men have been unable so far, states Mr. Gaby, completely to diagnose Sir Adam's trouble, but are hopeful that two weeks of observation at the hospital will reveal his true condition.

In the meantime, they believe a thorough rest is Sir Adam's greatest need.

Will Assist Customs Department To Suppress Illegal Importation of Clothing.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, March 13.—The dominion government will endeavor to assist the customs department in every possible way in the suppression of smuggling along the Canadian-United States boundary.

Hon. J. A. Robb, acting minister of finance, told a deputation from the Canadian association of garment manufacturers which waited on him yesterday.

The deputation presented a resolution making requests respecting smuggling and the reduction of the sales tax from 5 to 2½ per cent. Mr. Robb, in replying to the requests, pointed out that the sales tax had been generally cut last year. He was, he said, anxious as to the reduction of the sales tax in the future.

At present every possible reduction was being made in public services with a view to economy and the future reduction of taxation.

City Boys and Girls Rival Country Cousins In Beauty Of Natural History Work

A. J. Morgan, Director of the Department, Pleased With the Unusual Interest of Children.

PRIZE CONTEST

Great Collection of Dr. Woolverton Will Be Exhibited at Fair.

It has long been a popular contention that children attending rural schools know more about birds and wild flowers than youngsters who imbibe the three "R's" from city schoolmasters. This may be true in some cases, but those who attend the hobby fair in the arena from April 13 to 18 will be surprised at the collections of wild flowers, leaves, seeds, shells, minerals, woods, butterflies, moths and insects that London children have collected during the summer months.

One won't have much trouble in finding this natural history department, of which A. J. Morgan is chairman. There will always be a large crowd around it.

There will be bird houses, built by the boys themselves. The entries in this class have already started to come in, and Mr. Morgan states that the work of the boys would put many carpenters to shame. Small, large and medium, these dwellings that will eventually house silver-voiced songsters, are all colors of the rainbow and are bound to attract a great deal of attention.

Want Every Boy.

"Don't be afraid to put your bird houses in the fair," advises Mr. Morgan. We want every boy in London and every girl, too, to put an exhibit in our department of natural history.

"Some boys and girls might think that their collection of leaves, for instance, might not be good enough to show. Put it in anyway. You may have varieties that other boys and girls haven't. They will be just as interested in seeing your collection as you will be in seeing theirs. You want to learn from them and they want to learn from you."

"Speaking of leaves, the boys and girls should know that one little branch with a single large leaf is sufficient. It should be pressed carefully and mounted on stiff paper or cardboard."

London school teachers state that it is surprising the number of children born and bred up in the city, who are interested in nature study. It is natural, of course, for the average boy to know just where the best fishing holes in the vicinity of the city are to be found. It is not expected that they will be particularly interested in wild flowers, but there are a number who are deeply interested. They have spent many happy hours picking specimens that will be shown at the hobby fair.

Their sisters have not been idle, either. From fields and woods in Middlesex county, from Muskoka to Lake Erie, the girls have wandered in the spring and summer months gathering buttercups and daisies, nodding columbines, May flowers, pure white trilliums, the stately Jack-in-the-pulch and many others. These will be on display at the hobby fair, and will act not only as an education but an incentive to other boys and girls during the coming spring and summer days to go out and gather a collection equally as good, if not better.

Shells Exhibit.

Youngsters who have spent their summer holidays at the beach last year had ample opportunity to collect both land and water shells. Possibly you think that it is possible to pick up only one kind of shell along the beaches of lakes Erie and Huron. Visit the hobby fair next month and you will find exhibits of shells that will surprise you and compare favorably with the more pretentious collections of their elders.

Mr. Morgan has arranged for a guessing contest in connection with the department which he heads. He has secured a large block of lignum vitae wood, which Mr. Morgan states is the heaviest wood per square inch that can be found on the face of the globe. Mr. Morgan has also secured a block of extremely light wood. They will occupy a prominent place in the natural history display and every child that attends the hobby fair is entitled to a guess as to just how much these two blocks weigh. He or she will mark the weight on a specially prepared slip of paper with the name and the school and after the fair is over, prizes will be given to the youngsters who guess closest to the exact weight.

A. J. MORGAN, director of the natural history department of the hobby fair, which opens in London on April 13.

Famous Collection.

"I think this guessing contest will be one of the features of the fair," declared Mr. Morgan in discussing his plans with The Advertiser. "I have also arranged to have part of the famous collection of minerals owned by Dr. Woolverton on display. This alone would be worth a trip to the fair. We are going to need a lot of space for the exhibit of our department, a whole lot more than the average Rotarian thinks we will need."

"I am delighted at the number of inquiries I am receiving from the children regarding all eight classes in our department. Children have asked about the names of seeds particularly. These will be exhibited in bottles or glass-covered boxes and of course must be properly named and labelled. Flower seeds, vegetable seeds and even weed seeds will be included. We want any and every kind of seed that grows in this district, provided they have been gathered by the boys and girls themselves."

"It is essential for the children to have their collections properly named as 25 per cent will be added to the judges' marks for correct names, both scientific and common. In the case of butterflies, moths, insects, etc., these should be mounted with wings spread out. Fifty per cent instead of 25 per cent will be added to the judges' marks for correct names, scientific and common."

ST. MARYS RECEIVES REBATE FROM ONTARIO COMMISSION

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Marys, March 13.—The St. Marys public utilities commission received a welcome rebate from the hydro-electric power commission in a check for $1,491.75, being the difference between the actual cost of power delivered to the trade during the fiscal year ending October 31st, 1924, and the amount paid over to the hydro as per the power accounts rendered monthly. This reduces the total amount paid to the hydro commission to $27,514.55.

REAL ESTATE BOARDS URGE LICENSING BILL

London Delegate To Ontario Convention Explains Purpose of Measure.

A bill urging that all real estate dealers in the province be licensed will be placed before the Ontario legislature at this session by the Ontario Association of Real Estate Boards. The approval of the London branch of the association was given to this movement at the monthly meeting held recently.

It is expected both realtors and property owners will benefit greatly if all dealers are licensed, thus giving the lawmakers an opportunity to pick out the bad from the good. Harry Simpson, president of the London realty board, and delegate to the convention of the Ontario association held in Hamilton last week, explained the matter to the board, and every member guaranteed his support.

MONTREAL POLICE PLAYED IN REPORT

Urges Pensioning of Chief Belanger—Attacks the Entire System.

SAUVE IS INVOLVED

Canadian Press Despatch.
Montreal, March 13.—Exposure of many glaring faults in the system of police administration in Montreal, of irregular influences exercised on the police, of the alleged inadequacy of the force and of a flourishing commercialized vice and drug traffic here, are contained in the report of Mr. Justice Coderre with which he has concluded the probe he conducted into conditions here.

Summarized, the judge finds incompetency in high places in the police, and recommends Chief Pierre Belanger be pensioned; strange actions by the police in regard to theatre and coal cases; aldermanic meddling in police affairs; strength of police force should be 50 to 100 per cent greater; records' convictions not in accordance with law; city of Montreal profited in vice to the extent of $60,000 a year, of which province takes part for general clinics; system of warning disorderly houses when raids were coming off; in part voluntary and in part deliberate inertia on the part of police in fighting commercialized vice; laxity with betting and gaming houses; the existence of a second-hand store and ransom system encouraging robberies; detectives hunting stolen goods, but not the robbers, and the error of the executive committee of the city council in not naming a director of public safety and in assuming his duties itself.

Initiative Dead.

The report says the police department was in the grip of a routine which killed initiative. He shows how the failure of the police to take advantage of holdup tips received in the Bank of Hochelaga $140,000 collection car robbery and how a respectable man named John Speak disappeared, and though this was reported the man died in jail as a vagrant and his body was given up for dissecting purposes.

His lordship finds that certain cabarets have been allowed to illegally remain open all night, and that illicit drinking took place and that "immorality flouted itself with insolence in them." The judge drew a horrifying picture of the system of commercialized vice existing.

The judge deals at some length especially with the question of information leaking to disorderly houses of coming raids. He exonerates all connected with the recorder's court of charges that they may have issued tips. He says only one man was in a position to do it, and that was the police officer in charge of the district where the raid took place.

Sauve Is Charged.

The report says Captain Roch Sauve was in charge of the section where most of the resorts abounded and was head of the morality squad. The report accuses Sauve of unconceivable benevolence towards commercialized prostitution and veritable complicity. The captain could not explain the enormous disproportion between the number of prostitutes arrested and those in the houses he raided. Neither, says the report, could the captain explain the origin of the little fortune he succeeded in gathering during four years, and which was out of all proportion to his salary. He had tried to explain, but it was a case of him who proves too much proves nothing. The judge casts suspicion on Sauve's claim he won large sums of money on the race track through the mediation of a Jack Curley, a race track employee nobody else knew. There was another explanation, the judge contends, and that was Sauve yielded to temptation and gathered in a share of the profits from the prostitution traffic and exploited the regime of "mitigated repression" which protected it in Montreal.

Among the recommendations of his lordship are appointment of an independent director of safety, the rigid repression of commercialized vice in all forms and the creation of a secret fund to be available to the chief of police in tracking down those guilty of crimes of violence.

Listowel, March 13.—Rev. Harry W. Jackson and Mrs. Jackson entertained the officers and teachers of the Baptist Sunday school at the parsonage. After a dainty repast, the following toast list was carried out: "Our King and Empire," Rev. Harry Jackson, Harry Bennett; "Our S. S.," L. A. Fleming, Albert Baker; "Our Church," Carl Ross, Brian Jackson; "Our Host and Hostess," Dr. G. W. Tupper, Mrs. Jackson. During the evening, musical numbers were given by Miss Mildred Greenslade, the Baptist Male quartet, Albert Baker, Brian Jackson, and a special number by Rev. H. Jackson, "Dominion From Sea to Sea," both the words and music of which were composed by Mrs. Jackson.

HIBBERT FARMER HURT.

Mitchell, March 13.—While starting up his traction engine, James Ballantyne of Hibbert township took hold of the flywheel to loosen it. The steam was turned on and the engine commenced to run. His arm was broken by being caught in the wheel, a finger was torn off, and his arm was badly lacerated from the wrist to the elbow.

GOOD NEWS FOR EVERY WOMAN!

You can have one extra year's time out of seven for enjoyment. Use it for pleasure—your mothers' club, instructional reading, extra time with the children or leisure—the time you used to labor over the wash.

Wash the Forest City Laundry Way

Give yourself one day extra in every seven. Our courteous drivers call for and deliver your parcel promptly, carefully. Every bundle is washed in a separate net. This eliminates objectionable markings and guards against loss.

The Forest City Laundry uses only soft water—it has the distinction of being the one laundry in Western Ontario with an up-to-date soft water plant. Soft water wash adds to the life of clothes—keeps the threads from hardening and breaking—clothes feel better.

Wet Wash Always Returned In 24 Hours

Exact care in the return of all articles has built a satisfied patronage, which in 1924 was the largest in our history, but which we are proud to say is growing today, and leaving behind every previous record for volume of trade. THERE IS A REASON—People who are pleased tell their friends.

Let us prove it to you. 'Phone us to call. "There is a white wagon passes your home every day."

WET WASH

Everything washed in mild suds, and rinsed in eight to ten changes of water. The excess water is removed and the bundle is returned damp, sweet and clean, ready to iron or hang up to dry. Returned in 24 hours.

That's the advantage of professional laundering. Our modern presses and improved methods of washing give your shirts a lasting body which resists soil and insures better wear. You'll feel ever so much better dressed in shirts washed and ironed our way.

Wouldn't You Like Those Old Curtains Made New?

Old curtains that persist in hanging crooked and awry, all wrinkled and listless, come back from our laundry young and fresh again.

and sometimes out of sight is out of mind. But of course you want the feathers in your pillows just as immaculate as the sheets and bed-spreads. Immaculate they will be if you let us clean them.

Soft Collars—Soft Water—Each Requires the Other

That smooth, fresh whiteness that you prize in your soft collars—the only way to keep it is to have your collars laundered professionally in mild, rain-soft water with pure soap. Hard water only makes the yellow stains of perspiration more noticeable.

Here repeated doublings in the softest of rain water brings back to soft collars all their snowy whiteness.

PRIM-PREST

A finer laundry service. Everything is washed in the purest of rain-soft water and mild suds; everything beautifully ironed, ready to use or put away—a dainty service, complete in every detail.

We wash anything that can be laundered with soap and water. Wash rugs, awnings, overalls, auto seat covers, auto robes, linen, dusters, heavy summer wash goods, etc.

The Changing Form of Politics.

An exchange remarks that the people of Canada have moved away from much of the bitter partisan politics of former days, and concludes that it is well that such should be the case. It even predicts that the movement is a permanent one, and that never again will there be a "slavish adherence" to party leaders or party politics.

That phrase "moved away" is significant, and calls for the question: In which direction have they moved? It is a fact that there is not the narrowness today that there was some years ago, but if the movement has set in, in what direction is it heading? The statement is often made in this same connection that politics is rotten, therefore we will have nothing to do with it. It is a frame of mind steeped in a holier than thou attitude that loses sight of the fact that such an attitude leaves the field wide open for those who will go in and take possession of government, regardless of their motives.

It is hardly too much to say that we have moved away from the point in the political compass that registered positive devotion to one side only; that recognized no good idea or no worthy motive in a political opponent. The movement today is in a stage of indifference, the curse of which is as great as the state from which we claim to have departed. If there is any one thing worse than another in national, civic or commercial life it is the spirit of indifference.

When we pass that, where are we going? We must have something in sight. It is too much to ask people to believe that party politics is all bad, and that no great policy was ever evolved by them that was beneficial to the country. Our next move should be toward a point where our representatives in legislatures or parliament will be reasonable enough to see that it is possible for a good idea to come from any section of the house. That would be the state of mind of the government in power, and on the part of the opposition it would cease to regard its whole function as fault-finding and a persistent desire to create political capital with which to turn the government out at the first opportunity.

The time may not be ripe yet for that state of mind, because it must be remembered that men in our governing bodies to a great extent represent the state of mind of the people who elect them, and that it is a dangerous thing to run too far in advance of public opinion. Parliament could best function were it to meet as a body of men who were anxious to face all the business coming before it with the primary idea of bringing out all the facts and then proceeding on the lines best suited to meet the conditions.

Such a state does not mean that men would have to cease participation in politics, as many show a tendency to do now, but that they should go into the business more seriously than ever, but from a different motive and with a broader vision. The problems that face the country now, and that will continue to be before us for years to come are, in the main, of such a nature that they would respond more readily to such treatment.

Wheable Earns Public Respect.

J. P. Hoag, B.A., of Toronto, has been appointed by the board of education as the new inspector-administrator of London's schools, and the public should be prepared to give him encouragement and sympathy in his undertaking. Mr. Hoag was chosen in preference to G. A. Wheable, B.A., M.C., the present junior inspector, but the friends of Mr. Wheable need feel no bitterness in their disappointment, because Mr. Wheable has come out of the affair with increased credit.

When he learned of Mr. Hoag's appointment, in place of exhibiting either resentment or disappointment, Mr. Wheable said: "It is a matter for the board to decide and it is up to me to do the best I can in the job I am given and to lend to Mr. Hoag my best support."

It is a fine attitude for the London man to take and it must compel the respect of the public as well as the gratitude of the new inspector-administrator.

He Went, Saw and Wrote.

An Ontario man who spent some time around Los Angeles and Hollywood wrote his impressions in the Essex Free Press. Judging from the tone of his farewell, he was glad when the time came for him to pack his grip and be certain that the train on which he was riding was actually headed in the direction of the international border. Part of his letter was as follows:

"Good-bye, Los Angeles. I'm going home. Good-bye, happy hearts with waiting tears. Good-bye, merry in a word's great playground. Good-bye, soft lights, o'er thoughtless dancers in a shrill-like room where hearts go mad."

"Good-bye, Los Angeles. I am going home. I am going away from heat and desert dust that they call 'climate' from blatant bores that they call boosters, from debauchery, called pleasure. I am sick of hearing stale romance called history, whining coon songs called music—of seeing strange, ill-dyed creations called art, and of feeling murder in my heart at the sight of a teen age girl drinking booze with a rogue."

"I want to go where Sunday is a holy day, not prostituted by amusement pirates. I want to live again where life is sane and kind and true, where 'Nature's heart beats strong among the hills'."

"I am leaving a land . . . of pitiful youth, goddess parents and old-looking children. A land of free divorce, unpunished crime and Hollywood. I am going to a land of quiet homes, respected laws and sacred vows—where children have manners and mothers soft voices. Where fruit has flavor, flowers have fragrance and women virtue."

Writers in Los Angeles papers have replied, but in the main they have not succeeded in destroying the idea the Ontario man conveyed. One writer suggests that he came to Los Angeles for a "fling of freedom, but brought his conscience along and it bothered him." That, no doubt, is intended to be a fine piece of sarcasm, but it is really a very sincere compliment.

Apart from what writers may say in defence of their southern playground, with its easy life and its standards that have furnished the soft courts of that land with some of the most disgusting cases on record, the Ontario man has drawn a parallel that should not be missed. He probably had a more correct picture of the comparatively quiet, normal life of his own country after being caught up—if he was—in the maelstrom of wild, unbridled pleasure of Hollywood and Los Angeles.

He probably did not realize before that the Canadian Sunday is in reality a great national asset, and there are some who have also failed to realize the same thing. They herd their ideas very often about such words as "slow," "lifeless," "nothing to do." The pace here may be measured to a slower rhythm, the quest for pleasure and excess may be less keen, but it is a great cornerstone on which to build a great nation for a great future.

The Meanest Thief.

Some miserable crook is always aiming to step into the place reserved for the meanest thief. The position today is held by a group of three bandits near Los Angeles who held up and robbed 100 track laborers of all the money they possessed.

These men do not know the meaning of easy money. A laborer on a track works hard for every dollar he receives. He has no other source of income, nor is he tied up with any bonding company that will reimburse him for such loss as robbery.

Three men poking guns at track laborers ought to wake up the pudgy-handed officials of the south.

Speculation vs. Development.

Traders who are playing the grain market are having a session that is likely to provide them with enough excitement for some time to come.

"Panic," the word used to describe yesterday's scenes on Winnipeg and Chicago markets, is perhaps as good a word as could have been selected. There was a shortage of buying orders from abroad; some of the speculators found they could not hope to hold on any longer. They gave orders to sell—the feeling became contagious, and there was a wild scramble to unload and get out from under.

Wheat closed at $1.74 in Winnipeg, and yet the visible world supply is just where it was when the price was soaring around $2.20 a few weeks ago. That price was built up on rumors of world shortage; if there were a world shortage then, the same condition exists now.

If people were half as keen to put their money into some enterprise that would develop Canadian resources as they are to speculate with the faint chance of making large returns, we would have a better chance of being on the road to sound national development.

Note and Comment.

Talk about Friday the thirteenth being unlucky falls flat. It was pay day.

Like the circus parade, several blocks of pavement still separate the senate from the reforming lions.

Bankers fail to arouse any general alarm by the report that $100 counterfeit bills are in circulation.

Vancouver store had so many bargain seekers that the doorway caved in. The store kept its word, though, and the shoppers got in on the ground floor.

The situation in Nova Scotia coal business today is poor recompense to the nation for the millions that have been poured out there in the way of bonuses.

Editor of the women's page advises the staff that the new ensemble suits are pronounced unsavable. The man with a wife and a couple of daughters has cause to trawl.

Bridgeburg woman found a burglar in the house and screamed so hard that he fled. Many others would no doubt do the same thing but their scream gets frozen in fright.

St. Catharines Standard finds comfort in the fact that the election investigations are at least keeping that city on the front page of the papers. Not for long, because some other scoundrels will be clamoring for preferred positions.

The Free Press is getting mixed in its geography again. On two occasions we have felt moved to protest against Ungava, north of Quebec, being handed over to South or Central Africa. Now the F. P. asserts that Germany is seeking to annex Australia. Its own heading is this:

GERMANY PREPARING TO ANNEX AUSTRALIA
IF ALLIES CONSENT

Of course it means Austria, but why can't the Free Press quit this business of shoving great sections of land around to their wrong moorings?

About Education

Wherein we say how peaceful hours be turned into a troubled sea, when Susan wants to know how come that
A be took away from D.

When I be through my work at night 'tis then I seek my humble roof, and take the hobnails from my feet, a-restin' for a spell my hoof. That's what hard-workin' men should do, at home just quietly settin' down, not galivantin' all the time nor lingerin' to look up the town.

I read the papers for a spell and note how some be sent to jail, while others dodge the village cop and keep on rakin' in the kale.

'Tis then we Angus comes to me to know why Alfred was called great, he wants to know of battles fought, who licked therein and what the date. When Christopher Columbus sailed, and how he quarrelled with all his crew, how be that Wellington was keen for Blucher out at Waterloo.

Such things I straighten out for him, he thinks my brain be keen and tall, and chucked with learnin' to the brim, like ello filling day in fall.

Comes Malcolm then to ask me how the sun be stickin' in the sky, how the moon don't bump the earth when they be passin' quite close by.

I tell him how the earth is flat, just settin' on a pile of stone, if teachers know what's best for them they'd be a-leavin' things alone. Young Malcolm doubts as what I say it be accordin' to the rule, quite different from the views he gets when learnin' of this stuff in school.

I'm readin' on the sportin' page about a prize fight in the south, how one what licked he took his fist and whacked it on Joe Broomstick's mouth.

Comes Hanna with her workin' book, requestin' me to take a hand, I lookin' like as though her task be simple to my nimble hand. She wants to know what's A plus B when added unto C plus D, and what is left when what that makes is pried away from F plus G.

I put the hobnails on my feet and throw the raiment on my frame, not carin' if the night be dark or if 't be a-sputtin' rain. Much chores about the place I hunt, I nail new planks upon the stoop, I'm anxious how the door she hangs that guards the speckled chickens' coop.

For A plus B is Greek to me, while D plus C is likewise Dutch, when I be at the gram-mar school we never made our figures such. Be blowed if I can see the use of A plus B, I never could, if I was runnin' on the schools they'd use old digits like they should.—ARK.

Tragedy Mixed With Romance

Old-Timer Reminds the Story of a Wife Who Skipped Out and Later On Sent For Her Rightful Husband.

By OLD-TIMER.

IT WAS remarked in a former article that a grist mill in the early days was a center around which houses clustered and a village with mechanics who supplied the wants of the farmers sprung up. Pond Mills was no exception to the rule and though now nothing but the mill and schoolhouse are left, yet as I remember it there were three shoemakers, a blacksmith, a wagon-maker, a tailor and a school teacher living there, as well as a storekeeper for a short time with his store where boys traded eggs for fish-hooks. In thinking about the old place, it seems to me that never were scholars favored with such a wonderful playground as those attending that school.

In addition to hills for sleighriding there were the ponds to swim in in summer and in winter such an open air rink as is scarcely to be equalled anywhere. As a consequence, all of the boys and many of the girls could skate, and with only one exception every boy that grew up there learned to swim. Deep water swimmers they were, not those used to touching the bottom in turning, for except at the edges, which were muddy, the water was deep—sixty feet in one part.

Where Romance Blossomed.

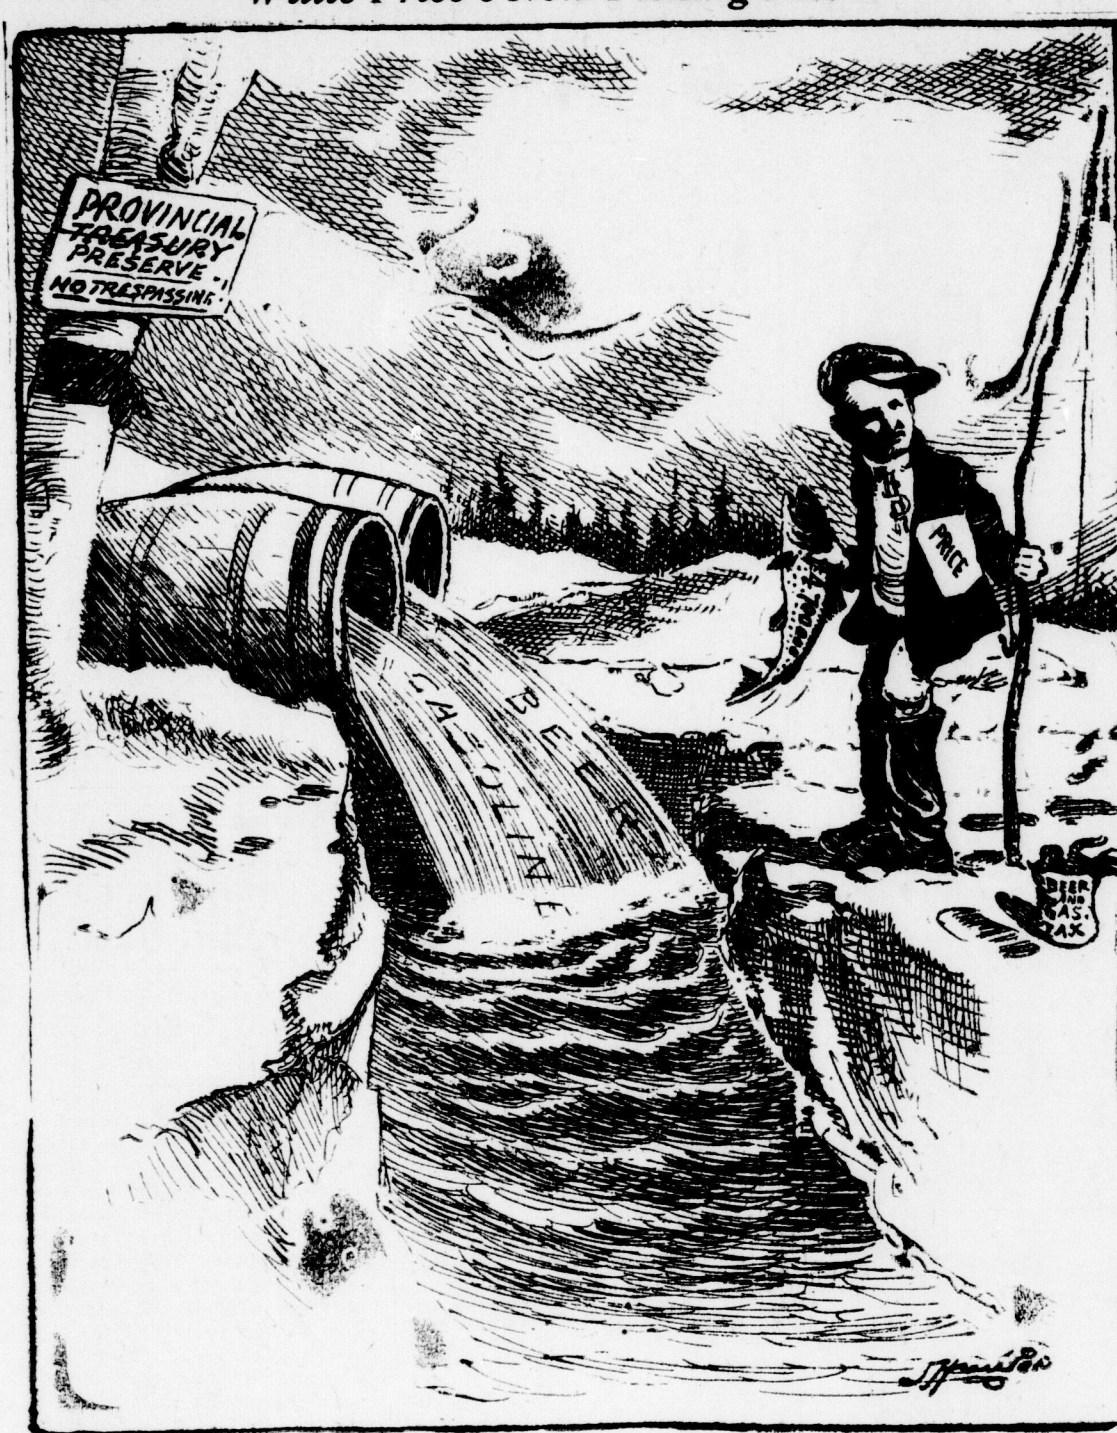

As time passed one after another of the tradesmen moved away or became farmers until at last but the tailor, good Robert Fleming, and one shoemaker, old Johnny Riddell, was left. In our Scotch dialect we called him "auld Jonie." Long before my time things had happened to him. I've been told that he had gone to the old country, Aberdeen, and brought back a buxom, beautiful wife named Eppie. Lively she was and inclined to be gay, while her husband was the reverse, being rather quiet. They must have been unsuited, for after a rather short time the tragic happened. Eppie ran away with another man. He was one of those clever men who can do anything they turn their hands to, and doubtless good-looking and lively. At any rate Eppie was captivated and away they went to the state of Illinois.

That left old Johnny, as I and other children knew him, a quiet man, saying little, and day after day sitting crouched over and pounding sole leather or driving pegs, etc. One thing that made him cross was when we would wear the good soles of our boots he had made by sliding on our feet down the hill behind the school. Many and many a one for miles around were brought to him to get measured for shoes or boots. Old Johnny was said to be the best judge of leather anywhere around. No paper soles or flimsy upper leather for him.

So year after year slipped by, old Johnny keeping pegging and sewing, a decent, kindly old man, strictly honest. He had sold a bit of ground, the price being his food as long as he lived. In spring he fished in the ponds, as we all did. He seemed a fixture for his lifetime. But not so. The unexpected happened. A letter came to him from Eppie.

It contained the information that the other man was dead, and made the rather astounding offer that if the old man would come to her she would care for him as long as he lived. She said they had done well and she had plenty. "Auld Jonie" was torn between dread of how he might be treated and a delicious feeling of being in the third heaven. He did the wise thing and went. So far as we know, the good old man was well looked after and happy until the end came. Human nature is seldom all bad. One thinks very differently about Eppie than if nothing had been heard from her. So far as possible, she made atonement.

FLAMES ARE BELCHING FORTH FROM SNOW-CAPPED VESUVIUS

Associated Press Despatch.

London, March 13.—While the European governments are concerning themselves over the date for the introduction of "summer time" there has not yet been the slightest prospect of summer temperature. On the contrary, winter is lingering over Europe unusually late, and a heavy snowfall has reached as far south as Naples, with a curious phenomenon of a snow-capped Vesuvius emitting fire.

Violent snowstorms have been experienced in the Rhineland, and holiday-seekers on the Riviera are finding extreme discomfort in the cold, easterly winds, while severe frosts have been registered in South Germany.

England, after a comparatively mild winter, remarkable more for the heavy rainfall than the cold, has had during the past week the severest cold of the whole winter, with snowstorms in the north and a general biting east wind. This is considered responsible for an epidemic of influenza.

Among the results of these weather conditions has been the delay in King George's convalescence, through his inability to venture out, even into the palace gardens. Today's cold was

TWINS TURNED A WHOLE FAMILY TORY AND MEN DIED FOR PARTY IN OLD DAYS

"You Don't Know Me, Dr. Tupper?" Asked Stranger — "Know You, Mac, Why I Saw You Before Your Father Did!" Answered Sir Charles — How Sir John Got a Cabinet Quorum With Two—Stories of Canadian Political "Giants"

By JOHN NELSON

THESE are few links now left with that period of Canadian history of which Confederation was the pivot. Macdonald, Brown, Cartier, Tupper, Mowat, Tilley—all the old worthies who have fought and wrought, have passed on. Some record has remained in history, biography, and printed reminiscences of the issues which concerned our forefathers. For several decades following Confederation fierce political passions persisted in Canada, and though much has been preserved in the regular chronicle, hundreds of interesting instances have been lost through the indifference with which the actors in the great drama dismissed the significant asides constantly heard in the wings.

Those in whose memories still reside the epochal events of those long-ago days are becoming few in number. Perhaps the best available link with the Canada which immediately followed Confederation is Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper. Unlike the sons of most of the chief actors mentioned his own memory goes back to the events themselves, as he was in active politics himself almost from his college graduation. He was associated, not only as a supporter, but as a minister, with Sir John Macdonald, and with other older statesmen of that day. He was the close friend and confidant of his distinguished father, whose real part in the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the consummation of Confederation is only now coming to be fully appreciated. And his zeal and interest in public affairs as he approaches the Psalmist's threescore years and ten—mere middle life in a family of such longevity as the Tupper—is keen and unabated. A few months ago he bore his full share in a provincial political fight, ably supported on the platform by his promising son, Major Reginald Tupper, and had the satisfaction of seeing this young son of an old house poll a large vote in the nominations in the greatest city of his adopted province. It makes for political unity that old political families long identified with public affairs in the east should continue their political interest and activities through their sons in the far west.

Battles at Polls

SIR CHARLES was engaged recently in going through the papers of his late father, Sir Charles Tupper. The constant reference to fights long since over started the streams of memory and recalled some instances not hitherto published. Some of these may be of interest to all who love to explore the by-paths of Canadian politics.

In Nova Scotia in early days politics was a serious, indeed almost a solemn, matter. Men did not readily change their allegiance, and were not sparing of their physical comfort when the "party" called.

In the old days of open voting, qualities of high courage and endurance, as well as of party zeal, were required, for the piquets of each side were aggressive, and there was much scuffling, and often serious physical encounters.

In one of his campaigns Sir Charles went to see Sutherland, "the Piper," who was then ninety years of age. Sutherland was totally blind, and when called upon was properly and resignedly reading his Braille Bible. He had been a Tory in the open voting days, and a great bulwark to the Conservative machine. The party managers knew when Sutherland was on the job, that those who were not of the politically elect would have considerable difficulty in registering their votes.

When Sir Charles called the old man told him solemnly that he was not going to the poll; he was preparing for another world, and the candidate thereupon tried to beguile him into reminiscences of "the good old days."

"They tell me you were a great fighter in the old days," he began. "And they were after telling you that, were they?" rejoined the old piper. "And what did they say?"

The smashup that forced postponement of the big race in Los Angeles this week, when Stewart Wilkinson's car ripped up the side of the big board sander as he was warming up before the flag. Wilkinson is seen seated on edge of track, unhurt and directing the work of extricating his machine after he had been helped from its seat to safety.

His visitor, avoiding the question, pressed the old man for his own chronicle, and with some difficulty secured the story of "how we held the poll" in a notorious election in more strenuous days.

Removing his skull cap, he disclosed a great scar on his bald pate, which told of ancient combat.

"Oh, ay," he said, "that was a blow I got, but praise be to God, the giver of all good, I gave far better than that."

Horatius could not have been prouder of "being spent with changing blows." Macdonald of Pictou Island actually paid for his principles with his life. He had to cross the gulf in the winter to be on the island in time to vote, and the hardships of the trip entailed an illness that proved fatal.

Sir Charles was not able to visit him until after the election, and he rather feared to enter the islander's room, for in the meantime his wife had arrived, and the candidate felt she might resent the visit of the man for whose success her husband had paid such a price.

Twins Won Votes

"Do you know the result yet?" the dying man whispered, propping himself on his elbow as Sir Charles came over to the bed. "Yes, Donald," was the reply, "I have carried the seat by eight hundred of a majority."

"Then, thank God, I die happy," came the reply, as the sick man sank back on his bed. Wolfe on the Plains of Abraham was probably no more sincere when he used the same expression. Donald died the next day.

A candidate who kisses babies has a proverbial advantage over one not so disposed. But Sir Charles Tupper, when merely Dr. Tupper, from his skill and knowledge as a family physician, had an additional advantage, for he had the favor not only of happy mothers, but of their offspring.

Occasionally he made his science double duty, and in no case more effectively than on Westchester mountain on a winter night. He had to make the arduous and not altogether safe journey by sleigh and team. In the town of Amherst, from which he was to start, was a strong opponent, but at one time a supporter who knew the road and was a good driver. During the afternoon of the day preceding the journey, he was found in distress.

"It's this way," he explained to his friends, "Dr. Tupper has to cross Westchester mountain to-night, and he says he will trust his life to no one but me. I have to drive him, and I know that that man will wheedle me over to voting for him before I get back."

However, in spite of this menace, the trip was made. The next day the driver returned with a tooth gone and his upper lip cut. These rueful marks indicated that he had been in a fight, and an explanation was forthcoming.

"Well, it's just as I said," he explained. "When that man got me out alone in the sleigh he started talking and before we had got Jones' place he had me nearly won over. But when we got there, Jones met us with a lantern, saying he heard the doctor was coming across, that during the evening his wife was desperately ill, and that if Dr. Tupper didn't break his journey and come to her aid, she would die."

"And what do you think happened?" He got out of the sleigh, went to the cabin, and before we left, the husband, delighted by the arrival of a pair of twins, had promised not only to vote for him himself, but to make both boys do so as soon as they came of age. And when a fellow down in the village said something against the doctor, I just naturally knocked him down."

Tupper "Knew" Everybody

WHEN Dr. Tupper was nearly ninety, he was crossing the continent to Vancouver, and at a mountain station in the Rockies stepped out to stretch his legs. The grimy engineer got down from his cab as the old knight came along the platform and held out his hand.

"You don't remember me, do you, Dr. Tupper?" he said.

In a flash the old gentleman replied: "Know you, Mac, why I saw you before your father did."

The flush of pleasure which spread over the engineer's honest face might not have been quite so marked, had he been privileged to follow the mental processes of the other. They were as follows:

"This man must be from Cumberland, N.S., because he calls me Dr. Tupper. He looks like the Macdonalds. He is of about the age to have been born when I was practising. I was physician to the Macdonalds, I recommended a Mac as a brakeman to Van Horne. I'll take a chance."

It proved a lucky chance. One of the most vigorous opponents of Sir Charles, senior, in the early days was a man who was usually called "Honest Bob." Meeting Sir Charles on the street one day, after a particularly virulent attack had been made upon "the doctor" in a local paper, this man stopped, and referring to the article in question demanded:

"How do you stand it, Tupper, how can you bear to have such things said about you?"

"Oh that is quite easy," was the reply. "No one believes what the papers say of politicians. For instance, they call you 'Honest Bob'."

When Sir Charles, the younger, and Sir John Thompson were representing the neighboring ridings of Pictou and Antigonish, Sir John was comparatively unknown personally, in Pictou, the former's riding, and on account of his political faith was not unduly popular there.

Often this exposed Sir Charles to the indignation of an outraged Protestant. Going through his riding after the death of Sir John Thompson, he stopped to talk to an old Highlander who lifted up his voice and praised high Heaven that Thompson was dead.

"Sent It to the Pope"

"WHY, you shock me," said Sir Charles. "Thompson was a fine man and besides you voted for me when I ran as one of his ministers here at the last election."

"Yes, I did, and it was very hard, whatever, knowing what that man was doing."

"Why, what was he doing that annoyed you?"

"Well, don't you know," continued the outraged supporter, "that after every meeting of the cabinet council the premier sits down and writes out for his majesty a full account of everything that was done there. Salisbury does it for the queen, Sir John Macdonald did it for the governor-general, but Thompson—"

Here speech almost failed him, and he looked his horror into the eyes of his interrogator.

"Thompson sent it to the Pope of Rome."

When Thompson and Tupper returned from England, where they both received the order of K.C.M.G., their constituents in the two ridings prepared fitting receptions. As became the occasion, and unlike the usual practice at political meetings in those parts, much that was complimentary passed between the two. Yet even this did not quite disarm some of the Pictou stalwarts who could conceive of vigor in their member only when he was flaying an opponent.

On the train, returning from the Pictou celebration, the two ministers occupied a seat just behind a couple of Pictou men. One of them had been to the meeting and was in the midst of giving his companion a word picture of the event, just as Sir John Thompson, who had been having a sleep, awoke.

"You should have been at Pictou," "Man, it was great."

The other enquired the cause of his friend's enthusiasm. "Well, there was a fellow there—now let's see what was his name. Johnson, or, no, it was Thompson, a fat fellow. Say, you just should have seen that young Tupper give him blazes!"

Sir John's only comment to his companion was one of profound respect for the intelligence of the Pictou electorate.

How far a candidate whose habits and associations have been different from those of his prospective constituents should cater to their peculiarities has long been a moot point among parliamentary candidates. Sir Charles faced it when, as a lawyer of twenty-seven years, he offered himself for the first time as a candidate for a rural riding, Pictou.

Naturally he went for advice to his father.

The latter, speaking from his own experience, told him that he could give no better advice than he had received from Bishop Inglis of Fredericton when himself entering public life. And the political philosophy of this wise old ecclesiastic was as follows:

"It is a mistake for a city man, seeking election, for instance, among farmers, to affect rural clothing, and manners, on the supposition that if he dress well, he will be regarded as a fop. On the contrary, electors like to see their candidate well dressed, and if he cultivates the bucolic in garment or manner, they resent it. They say that he would not so dress if meeting a gathering of his own associates."

Gave Enemy a Job

SIR CHARLES the younger adopted the suggestion, donned topper and frock coat, and although ridiculed sometimes by his opponents, carried the sympathy of his electors, and vindicated the wisdom of the bishop's advice, which was: "When you make your bow to the electorate as a candidate, sport all the cloth you can."

The same bishop imparted other maxims to the old Cumberland warhorse, which were to be heard about in later years.

It so happened that a man who had been a virulent enemy of the elder Tupper and had offended beyond pardon by the vindictiveness of some of his slanders, against Tupper senior, thirty years later found his way as an applicant for employment to the department of Tupper junior.

That night son and father were dining together.

"Who do you think called to see me to-day, father?" queried the younger man.

"I am sure I can't guess," was the reply.

"Why, so and so."

"Do you mean So and So that lived in Halifax county thirty years ago?"

"The same man."

"Well, well, and what did he want?"

A job, I suppose."

"That's exactly what he did want."

"Did you give it to him?" replied the son.

"Give it to him? Is it possible you have forgotten that he earned his living by abuse of you?"

"Oh, come, come," replied Tupper senior, "that's a long time ago. If he is hard up, give him a job if you can. In his better days his pen did confederation great service. Charlie, the trouble with you is that you don't forget things. I'll never forget the advice of Bishop Inglis when I first entered public life. 'Never fail to keep on speaking terms with even your bitterest opponents,' he said. 'You never know when it will be necessary in the public interest to co-operate with them.' That is sound advice, and I have always followed it. I have given and taken as hard blows as any man, I suppose. In this country, but when a fight was over, it was over. As a result, and as you know, men like Howe, and others, who were my most bitter opponents, afterwards sat with me as colleagues. I never kept my animosities. The trouble with you, Charlie, is that you carry resentments."

McGee's Exuberant Wit

AT Amherst, when on his way back to England, just prior to his last illness, and when ninety-three years of age, Sir Charles Tupper, Bart., told the members of the Canadian Club a remarkable instance of the readiness of tongue and brain of Darcy McGee.

McGee in his earlier years was far from an abstemious man and although later in life he discontinued the use of liquor altogether, at the period in question he enjoyed red wine. When in a certain stage of intoxication, he usually became very hilarious and his exuberance was often extremely embarrassing to the sober members of his company.

On one such occasion he had dined and was proceeding homeward with Sir Charles, the elder. They were urging confederation. One of their strongest opponents was Mr. afterwards Hon. A. G. Jones. Much to the chagrin of Sir Charles, just as they came opposite the house of Archbishop Connolly, McGee spoke loudly and incoherently.

"For heaven's sake, McGee, speak lower," Sir Charles urged. "We are passing the archbishop's house."

Quick as a flash, McGee came back: "Don't call me McGee; call me Jones!"

Between Sir Charles Tupper, the elder, and Sir Richard Cartwright, there existed a political feud which rarely relaxed in the long years in which they faced each other across the floor of the Commons chamber. In course of time, Sir Richard found himself confronting the son of his former antagonist and the same complications began to be exchanged between the member for Pictou and his father's old antagonist, as had passed between the older men.

Sir Richard used to delight in rallying Sir Hibbert, as he was called, with enjoying a seat in both Commons and council because of his paternal relationship. The younger man gave back as good as he got, and on one occasion, when taunted with being "the son of his father," admitted the impeachment, adding that he never knew before that legitimacy was a disgrace.

On another occasion, when the forbears of Sir Hibbert had been attacked with more than usual fierceness, the member for Pictou decided that he would, if possible, reply in the same currency. By a reference to "Who's Who," he found that at the time of the revolutionary war the loyalty of the Cartwrights to the royalist cause had been the subject of some doubt, notwithstanding which they had received land patents in the Bay of Quinte district as U. E. Loyalists. Taking up this material, Sir Charles reminded the speaker that as the record of the Tupper family was evidently a proper subject of discussion in the house, that of the Cartwrights must fairly be considered of equal interest and pertinence, and thereupon treated the Commons to a humorous disquisition upon the facts which he had discovered in the records. The house was in the humor to enjoy the matter and rocked merrily, even Sir Richard himself joining in the hilarity.

After Tupper had resumed his seat, Sir Richard beckoned him to a neutral point on the floor and behind the clerk's table, and whispered:

"I say, Tupper, it is well you did not go a little further back. You would have found one of my ancestors narrowly escaped hanging."

To which Sir Charles replied that the oversight of one generation might well be corrected by a later one.

Sir John Got Quorum

DURING the hot summer months, Sir Hibbert as junior minister, often remained on duty at the capital, and at intervals the premier, Sir John Macdonald, would run up from Riviere du Loup to put through necessary orders in council, and other business.

To do so legally required the presence of four members of the council, who were not always easy to assemble. However, in this as in other matters, Sir John's ready resource stood him in good stead.

"Let's go over and put through the pending business, Charlie," he would say, and they would walk across to the privy council chamber, over whose door, white-bearded and white-haired, Michel stood faithful guard. He was an old servant, and a valuable one as the sequel shows.

Knowing that there were not other members of the cabinet in town, Sir John would adopt the simple fiction of having the presence of the necessary number vouched for by the doorkeeper. The latter readily co-operated.

"I suppose you saw Sir Hector Langevin pass in, Michael?" he would ask the guard.

"O yes, Sir John," would reply the dutiful Michael.

"And Sir Mackenzie Bowell, I suppose he has already arrived, Michael," the premier would continue.

"Oh yes, some time ago, Sir John," would come the complaisant answer of the loyal Michael.

"Well, then, Charlie, there being a quorum present, we had better go in and dispose of the business," he would continue, and arm in arm the two ministers would pass in while Michael, with impassive face, never betrayed his deep complicity in the little comedy.

In his earlier career as a minister, Sir Charles, junior, had not acquired the experience which dictated that he must not unload his patronage problems on a brother minister.

Shortly after he took the department of marine and fisheries, a man sought a job in his department. He was unable to place him, but sent him on with a note to Sir John Macdonald, asking if the premier could find the man a place.

In due course, the man returned with a note. It was the memorandum of Sir Charles with the corner turned down, and scribbled across it in the well known hand of the premier, these words:

"Dear Charlie: You have a department of your own. Why don't you skin your own skunks?"

The advent of Sir John Thompson to the cabinet of Sir John Macdonald has long been regarded as the corner of the happiest political strokes of John A's later days. The idea grew out of the debates of a session, when the government side was hopelessly outclassed on all legal questions by the brilliance and authority of Edward Blake. Dalton McCarthy occasionally crossed swords with the opposition leader, but although his standing at the bar was high, he had not attained the eminence of Blake, and outside of him there was none to challenge the ability of the government's chief critic.

"Feeling Out" Thompson

DURING the session in question, this fact became so painfully apparent to the rank and file that Sir Charles Tupper, junior, who was not then a cabinet minister, took advantage of a vacancy in the government—a vacancy which Nova Scotia was entitled to fill—to press the point upon the old chief. During a lull in the debate he slipped into a vacant chair beside the premier and acquainted Sir John Macdonald with the feeling among the members.

Sir John turned an enquiring look on his young supporter.

"I have just the man for the place," the latter suggested.

"Who? Yourself?"

"No. We must import a man, that man is Thompson of Halifax."

"But Thompson is on the bench."

Sir Charles replied that notwithstanding that fact there were circumstances which led him to believe that the dignity of minister of Justice and the problems he would there be required to solve would appeal to Thompson, and he outlined these to Sir John.

"Very good. Sound him, but off your own bat." This from the premier. And then:

"But how are you going to seat him?"

"At that time the riding of Antigonish was represented in the house by Mr. McIsaac, who in common with many of the Liberal members from the maritime provinces were on terms of social intimacy with Sir Charles. The latter explained that McIsaac was tired of the house, and he felt sure would welcome a county court judgeship which was then vacant. Moreover, Antigonish having a large Catholic electorate, the problem of electing Thompson there was comparatively simple.

Again came the terse directions: "Sound him, but remember, absolutely off your own bat."

In due course came back a letter from Sir John Thompson, thanking Sir Charles for his good opinion, expressing a wish that he were able to accept a post which had so much to attract him, but concluding by stating that under the circumstances he felt he must decline.

Crestfallen Sir Charles walked up the house and again slipped into a chair beside the premier.

"I have heard from Thompson," he reported.

"Yes, what does he say?"

"He won't take it."

"Let me see the letter."

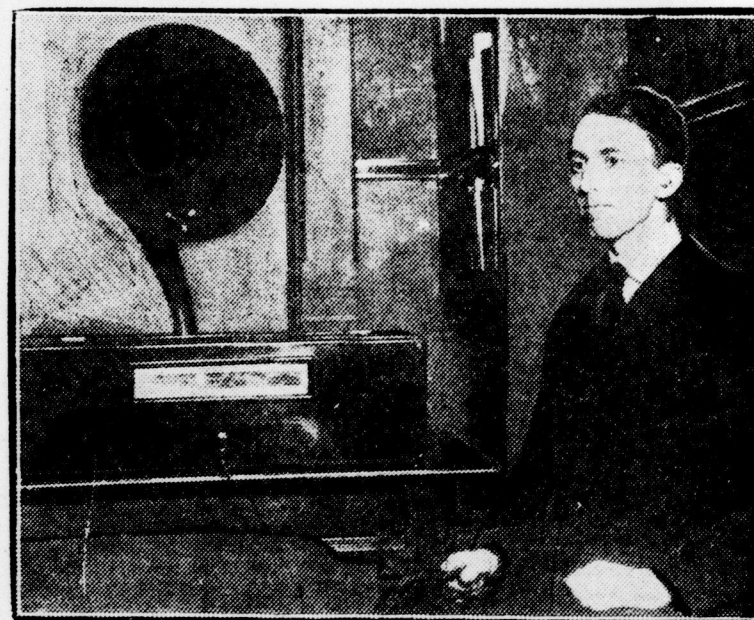

The sage old leader ran his eye rapidly over the document, handed it back to his lieutenant, placed his finger on the side of his nose (he had all his old friends well recall) and with sparkling eyes turned to Sir Charles and said:

"And whispering she would never consent."

"Consented—"

"His own man as soon as we want him. Act at once."

Thompson resigned from the bench and after a bitter fight in Antigonish was elected, and entered the cabinet to fill the vacancy which he occupied until his untimely death at Windsor Castle in 1894.

Happiest Woman in the World—Five Famous Recent Arrivals—Are All Actors Insane?

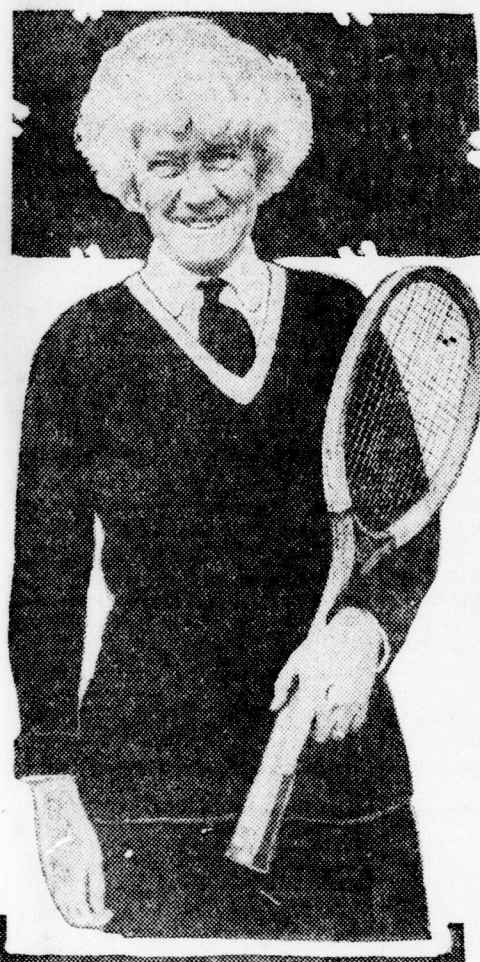

CHIEF among the outstanding events of the last few short weeks have been the duly noted arrivals of many famous babies. First, there was Neysa McMein, the famous painter of pretty girls and officially Mrs. John Baragwanath, who described her new infant daughter Joan as her real idea of beauty. Neysa McMein is more or less known in the dominion because of her visits to Ottawa whenever time and art will allow them.

Then James Montgomery Flagg, the famous illustrator, joyfully proclaimed the arrival of a little Flagg who upset all his preconceived standards of juvenile perfection.

Americans, meanwhile, were celebrating the fact that Mrs. Alice Longworth, a daughter of the late President Roosevelt and the wife of the present speaker of the U.S. Congress, had just announced the first appearance of her daughter, Paulina, who is to be a speaker herself in a few months.

And now an heir has been born to inherit a noted British name and a noted American fortune. George Henry Vanderbilt Cecil, weight eight and one-half pounds, a grandson of the Baroness of Amherst and also of the third Marquis of Exeter, not to mention the fact that the tiny mite is also a great grandson of the late W. H. Vanderbilt and cannot help being heir to many millions.

Finally, there was the daughter born to the Princess Xenia of Russia. The child is a grand daughter of the late Princess Anastasia of Greece, who before her marriage to Prince Christopher was Mrs. William B. Leeds, wife of "the steel plate king" whose fortune was estimated at $40,000,000.

All in all, they form a quintet of noted infants.

CANADIANS know E. V. Lucas, the British author, through his writings in Punch and his discussions of art in popular magazines as well as his own essays. His latest contribution to the knowledge of nations, which he cheerfully passes on after declaring that the idea is not original with him, is the thousandth definition of an optimist. "An optimist," says Mr. Lucas, "is a man who does his crossword puzzles in ink."

AS Bernard Shaw grows older he seems to wax more and more sarcastic. He is very keen on health and a short time ago went to Madeira to take some sun baths in the hope of improving his own physical condition. While there someone asked what effect a constant playing of hysterical roles would have on an actor's health. "Would it make him insane finally?" asked the questioner.

"The particular form of insanity which makes a man an actor makes him proof against all other forms of it," was the Shaw retort.

PAVO NURMI'S recent Canadian appearances created considerable stir in all parts of that country. He was hailed generally as the athletic hero of many moons. During his stay on this continent he could, no doubt, have lived in marble halls surrounded by head waiters, bellboys, private baths and other indications of luxury. But while he was in New York he took pot luck in a Bronx basement apartment, where he stayed with a family of Finnish second cousins, passing by all the high-priced surroundings.

MISS VERA PRAGNELL, twenty-eight-year-old daughter of Sir George Pragnell of London, England, claims to be the happiest woman in the world. She has given away every penny of her capital and gone to live in a hut in Sussex where she runs a rest room and free lunch for passing tramps, earning the money to do this by writing and handicraft work.

OWEN D. YOUNG, on whose youthful shoulders falls a large part of the burden of unsmiling the reparations tangle under the Dawes scheme, seems to be greatly interested in a by-product of English literature. He collects autographs. A few days ago he paid $1,025 at an auction sale for a parcel of letters written by Charles Dickens, Charlotte Bronte, Thackeray and other authors.

Seven Marks Brothers Retailed Melodrama In Days of Bad Men, Coal Oil Footlights

Robert W. Marks Was Fore-runner of Present Day Go-Getter—Played Ten-Twenty-Thirty in Winnipeg When "You Could Have Vaulted Across the Town on a Clothespole."

LISTEN! Folks! Listen! So went the ballyhoo of King Kennedy, magician, "Mysterious Hindu from the Bay of Bengal."

That was in the little Ontario town of Maberly about 50 years ago. In the crowd that listened to the harangue was Robert W. Marks, an organ and sewing-machine agent. In this day he would be known as a "go-getter." After the show, which he attended, Marks came to the conclusion that King Kennedy, properly managed, was a money-making proposition. So after the East Indian spirits had all been properly stowed away Marks sought out the magician and said: "I own a team of horses and a wagon; you have a tent and a lot of clever bunco. Let's hitch and take fifty-fifty of the profits."

Then and there started the Marks Brothers' enterprises. There were seven of these Marks brothers, whose home was not far from Perth, Ontario. They are famous on this continent as entrepreneurs of traveling repertoire melodrama companies. Ask any of the old timers from the small towns. They will be sure to tell you that one of the events of the season was the appearance of the Marks Brothers.

The type of the drama in those days, to be sure, was not exactly synonymous with current productions, but thrills were provided in plenty, and there was no need of play censors, as cleanliness was the keynote of the art. But take a passing glance at the titles of some of the hits of which R. W. Marks owns the sole rights: "Stolen for Revenge," "The Marriage at Midnight," "A Bird in a Gilded Cage," "At the Point of the Sword," and "For His Sake." These are but a few of those which were offered. Mrs. May A. Bell Marks, the wife of Robert, is said to be letter-perfect in the parts of more than two hundred pieces.

Melodrama is by no means dead, and it is doubtful if it is even ailing. "What Price Glory!" today is one of New York's greatest successes. It certainly is melodrama, albeit of the new, rough genre. People like thrills in the theatre today just as they have always liked them. And in the days of frontiers the Marks Brothers saw that they got them.

It has been estimated that the one parent company started by R. W. Marks—and there have been several others under the direction of the other brothers—has entertained 6,576,300 people. And laid end to end—well, this is a long queue for any box office manager to contemplate.

Winnipeg As It Was

IN 1879 R. W. Marks was on his way to Winnipeg. No railroads went into Manitoba at that time. Marks says, "I could have vaulted across Winnipeg on a clothespole. The town was just a muddy, fresh-rigged town that easterners thought was a thousand miles northwest of the North Pole, and did not care if it moved another thousand. The show I gave in 1879 was the first amusement to come to Winnipeg. An issue of one of the two weekly papers stated that Winnipeg is no longer in the back woods; a show has struck town."

In trouping through newly settled districts Robert W. Marks met with many troublesome adventures. Only the ingenuity of an itinerant showman permitted him to continue. In the great open spaces he found that the "bad men" took delight in attending his performances to pot away at the coal oil footlights. This, of course, was costly to Marks and disconcerting to the performers, but local custom decreed that traveling troupes should be the natural target of the boisterous element. Marks saw that he must nip such horseplay in the bud or lose his profits, to say nothing of his supporting artists.

He decided on this plan. Before reaching a town, he'd secure the names of the five wildest characters known to local annals, and these men he'd seek out, coax into good humor with drinks, and then request them as a special honor to act as policemen at the evening entertainment. No guardians of the peace could have performed their duties more conscientiously. There was no undue levity at these performances. Even comedies were often flops owing to the too strict vigilance. Up one aisle and down another they stalked to the annoyance of the audience and cast alike.

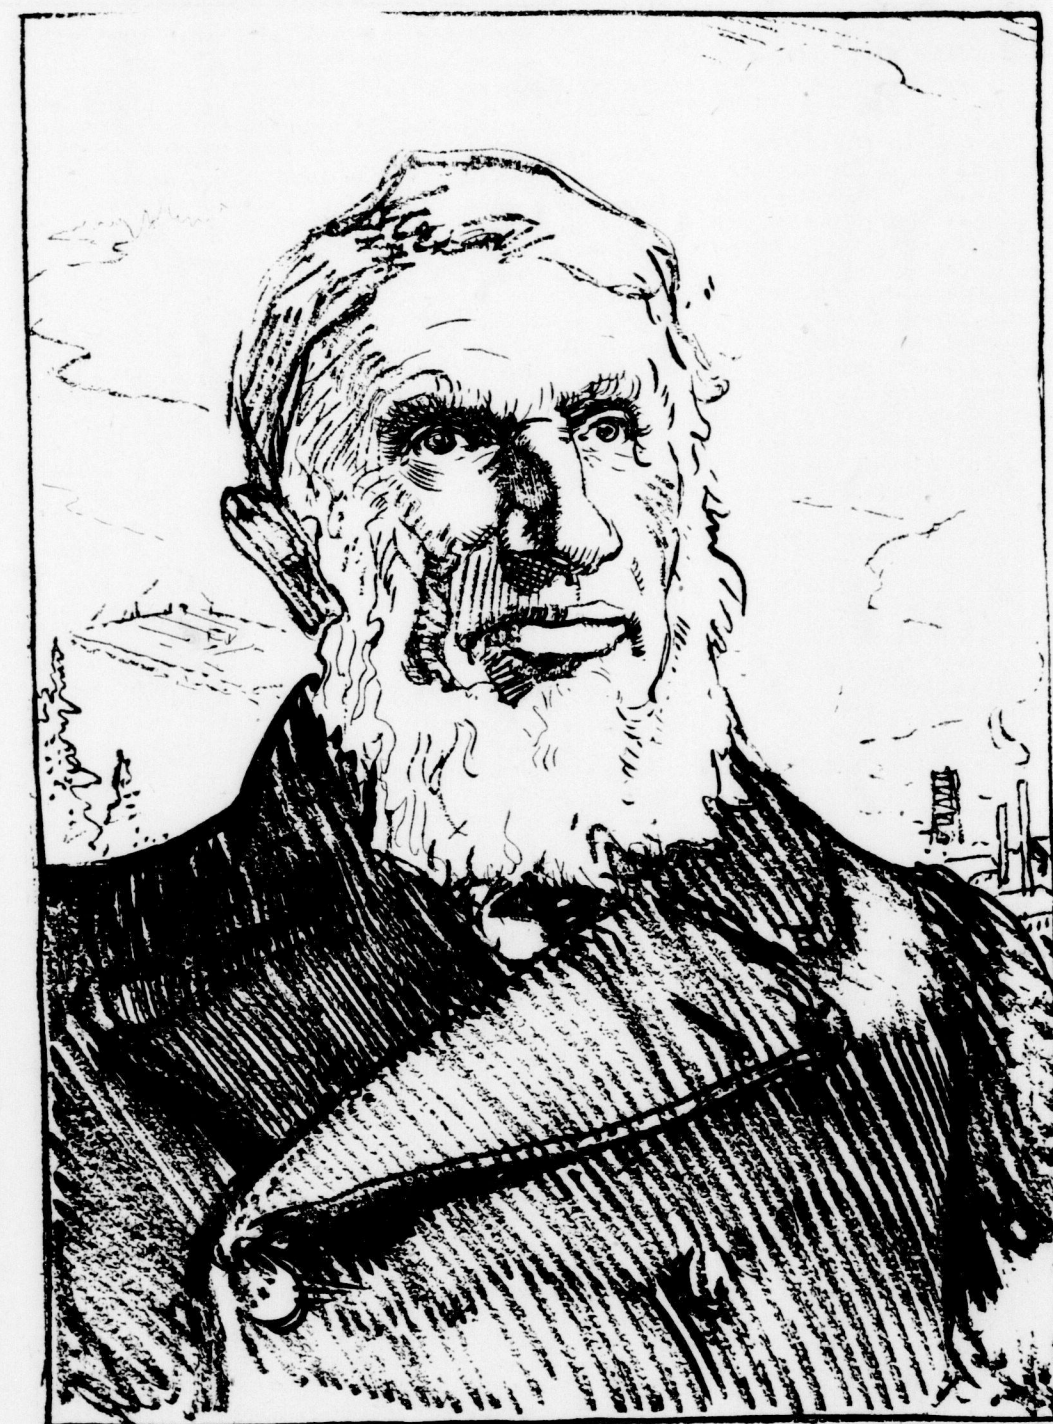

It is only natural that such a traveled showman as Mr. Marks should have formed some very definite ideas concerning the commercial side of the amusement business. His philosophy is interesting.

"There are two kinds of people we try to draw and keep drawn. The young man and his girl who want to see every show end with a marriage, and the middle-aged unromantic team of housekeepers who look on marriage as a chestnut and want to see some of the tragedy and clash of fiction. Then, of course, everybody, young and old, or middle-aged, loves a comedy. Above everything else the world wants to laugh, and the man who can sell tickets to a laugh is on his way to a fortune."

Mr. Marks says that children with road shows are great business-getters. He believes that they should be used sparingly, however, and makes the following observations. "Trot out the little actor once or twice with a note or a bouquet of flowers or a speech of five or six lines, and all the women and children will clap and cheer. But give the youngster a long part, fetch him on the stage six or eight times, and you will hear the same women flare up with indignation and exclaim: 'The idea of submitting the little darlings to such long hours and all that excitement. Where are the police when these outrages are going on?'"

The seven Marks Brothers, with their four shows and their forty-three years experience are unique in Canadian theatrical history. They have played melodrama for more than thirty years, and in that time they have become nationally famous. R. W. Marks, one of the septet, is still hale and hearty at the age of seventy, and lives at Christie's Lake, Ontario.

Announcing a Challenge To All Town Councils

Also Township Councils, City Councils
County Councils, Water Commissions
Power Commissions, Etc.

M. R. WALTER RIMER has been mayor of a small Quebec town for a matter of nearly half a century. A township councillor in North Dumfries boasts that he has never missed a meeting of the august body to which he belongs in 44 years.

Though both of these gentlemen deserve some variety of medal, prize shield, illuminated address or suitably engraved loving cup, it is hard to believe that they are solitary examples of long-time public service in so far as the dominion of Canada is concerned.

There must be tens of others. Yes, there must be scores. Perhaps hundreds. Shall we make it hundreds? Yes, there may be hundreds. To bring some of the famous figures of smaller political circles into the limelight, the water commission of St. Catharines, Ontario, offers to enter a long distance public service marathon with a team composed of the following:

Andrew Riddell, served 28 years.
H. K. Woodruff, served 24 years.
George Peterson, served 22 years.
J. C. Notman and C. G. McGhie, 20 years each.
Frank S. Greenlaw, ex-M.P.P., the baby member, has only served on the commission for a mere matter of ten years.

For the six members of this municipal board, this makes an aggregate term of service of 124 years, topped off by the fact that George Peterson has now commenced his nineteenth year as chairman.

Some additional bits of information about this group of seasoned members are supplied by a St. Catharines newspaperman who says that the individual members of the sextet "are described in Who's Who as so many years young and not one claims to be eligible for the Canadian Senate. They are disputing the famous Osler chloroform theory for older men by launching a half-million dollar filtration plant this year to look after the needs of their city and the surrounding district."

St. Catharines hangs up this record for other municipal bodies to shoot at. Fire away.

Pick New All-American Team of Intellectuals

Mr. Lewis, a University President, Selects a High-Brain-Power Group in U.S.A.

WILLIAM MATTHEW LEWIS, an American who earns his living as a university president, has just gained his share of the spotlight by picking an all-American long distance, high brain power team of intellectuals which he claims should go down in history with all-American football, baseball and other athletic teams.

He says that the group he has picked are the ten Americans now living who have had the greatest effect on the social and business life of that part of the world.

Here is the list with the age of each member: Charles W. Eliot, 90; Chauncey M. Depew, 90; John D. Rockefeller, 86; Oliver Wendell Holmes, 83; Russel H. Conwell, 82; Robert Lincoln, 81; Dr. David J. Burrell, 80; Elihu Root, 80; Francis E. Warren, 80; Harvey W. Wiley, 80.

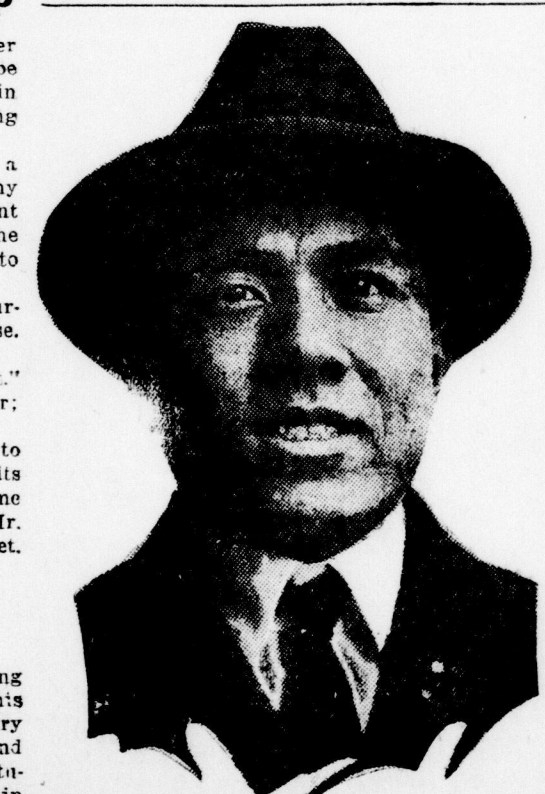

To Canadians, a number of these names are entirely unfamiliar. Dr. Russel H. Conwell's claim to fame as far as can be gathered from old newspaper files rests on the fact that he has delivered a lecture called "Acres of Diamonds" on 6,127 different occasions. Dr. David J. Burrell is the pastor of a church on Fifth avenue, New York, and an ardent worker in the New York Anti-Saloon League. Francis Warren is a United States senator.

No one has yet undertaken the task of compiling a Canadian or British list.

ANOTHER ALGER HERO

ALGER heroes still crop up in real life, from time to time. The month of February witnessed the final arrival of a new one, David U. Page, who has just become president of the New York curb market and an outstanding power in the financial world.

He began his career as a stock runner at the age of 16 over forty years ago at a salary of $6 a week.

Though his name is I, he pronounces it Ee. Introducing Dr. I, of a Baltimore medical school, who has the shortest name in the world.

WROTE TWENTY NOVELS BEFORE HE MADE A HIT

Rafael Sabatini, British Author Whose Work Has Taken America by Storm, Had a Hard Pull

OF all the popular authors of the moment, Rafael Sabatini is sitting prettiest. It must require a great deal of his spare time to count up the steady flood of royalties now flowing into his coffers in mob formation, as a mixed metaphor in one article so beautifully described it. These royalties come from a dozen different sources, book rights in a number of countries, serial rights, magazine rights, movie rights, dramatic rights and all the other rights that are left.

Usually, this pre-success period in an author's life is described as a long, hard climb. In Sabatini's case it was long, beyond the shadow of a doubt, and it was also hard, but it could scarcely be called a climb.

Ten years ago Sabatini peddled his novel, "The Sea Hawk," all over the American continent. It was offered to practically every publisher, and with one solitary exception it was turned down flat.

This is typical of the early days of his literary career. His work failed to catch on. His books were published in England, which is his adopted country, but their sale was almost negligible. The first appeared in 1902, and he has been plugging along ever since that time.

Success arrived seemingly with all the speed of a transcontinental flyer, and Sabatini was suddenly boosted out of near-obscurety to fame of the first degree.

"Scaramouche" was the cause of it all. Seven publishers in America were offered this book. Six of them refused to have anything to do with it on any terms. Only one firm on this continent would consider it, and this last made the author an offer of $250 for the rights on this side of the Atlantic. Sabatini refused to let the novel go at that figure. He asked for more but could not get it.

So Ended the Struggle

FINALLY the much-traveled manuscript bobbed up in the offices of a well-known firm with headquarters in Boston. Contrary to the verdicts of other publishers, they hailed it with enthusiasm. What happened immediately after its publication is now a matter of common knowledge.

What happened when a moving picture concern decided to film the book that had jumped so suddenly into the best seller class is a matter of still more common knowledge. The fact that the picture "Scaramouche" was awarded a $10,000 prize as the best story filmed during the year is also no secret.

As far as Sabatini himself is concerned, he became a writer merely by a fluke, and an author using the English language as the means of conveying his ideas by still another fluke. Until a few years ago his greatest public achievement was the filling of an obscure position in the British war department which he held because of the fact that he spoke six languages fluently.

He was born in Italy, the son of an Italian father and an English mother, but Italian was the only language he learned in his extreme youth. His mother had become so accustomed to the language of her husband's people that she lost her native tongue completely and even to this day her son communicates with her in Italian.

The author-to-be was sent to school in Switzerland, where French, German and Italian were commonly spoken. This increased his linguistic knowledge by 200 per cent, and he showed a decided flair for conversation according to the fashions of other countries.

While he was attending school, he was made one of the editors of the undergraduate magazine. There he developed such an appetite for writing that he determined to make it his life work.

Headed for Business Career

BUT Mr. Sabatini, sr., thought differently and determined to make his boy a business man. London, said Mr. Sabatini, sr., to Mrs. Sabatini, is the centre of the commercial world, and to London young Rafael must go. He went, and for several years applied himself to business exclusively.

Trying his hand at a short story for some reason or other, he was surprised to find that he could sell it. His interest in business waned and his interest in literature increased. He slugged away without any widespread success until he was hoisted into prominence as suddenly as if he had been shot from a gun. How hard he worked for his success may be judged by the fact that he has already written twenty novels and he himself only knows how many short stories.

Incidentally, he is now thoroughly British. His wife is British. His two children are British. His royalties are being transformed into pounds, shillings and pence as rapidly as they pour in—but principally pounds.

Ex-Premier Qualifies For a Professorship

RIGHT HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN, leader of the federal opposition, is reputed to be one of the most absent-minded men in Canadian public life. Apropos, the following story is told:

A friend who was going to New York for a day or two asked the ex-premier to accompany him. The latter agreed, and immediately went home to prepare. Shortly before train time the friend, knowing Mr. Meighen's habits, phoned to ask if he were ready.

"Ready for what?" asked Mr. Meighen in surprise. "Why to go to New York, of course. Don't you remember?"

"Oh, yes. I had forgotten all about it." "Meet me at the depot in a quarter of an hour; I am leaving now," replied the friend.

Two minutes before the train was due to pull out, a human figure with a straw hat on its head and a fur overcoat over one arm came dashing along the concourse. It was Mr. Meighen—without a cent of money in his pocket. The faithful friend saw him through.

PLEDGED 16,369 KISSES

THERE is one British M.P. who is facing the very serious charge of not keeping his pre-election promises. He is Sir Henry Curtis-Bennett of the Mid-Essex division, and there are 16,269 women electors in his constituency who are reported as greatly interested in the probable outcome of a very rash promise.

During his campaign the candidate declared amidst much applause that if elected he would kiss every woman in his constituency.

HISTORIANS NOW SEEK TO WHITWASH BLUEBEARD

Frenchmen Claim Story of Arch-Criminal of Fairy Tales Is All a Frame-Up

DEMANDING NEW TRIAL TO CLEAR NOBLE'S NAME

Bluebeard Actually Lived and Was Condemned and Executed Centuries Ago—Was a Wealthy Aristocrat

"ANNE, Sister Anne, do you see no one coming?" A young wife in the terror of death makes her tragic plea, and from the tower above comes faintly her sister's answer: "No, I see only the green fields and a cloud of dust."

But perhaps it isn't true. Of all the legends of childhood one that is never forgotten is this story of Blue Beard, of his seventh wife and her fatal discovery, of the bloody key and of Sister Anne on the tower waiting, waiting for the approach of her brothers. And now to-day French historians are trying to prove that Blue Beard was a loving and loyal husband and a much maligned character.

It is a serious question, for Blue Beard was an authentic character. He was condemned to death by a French court for his murders, which, according to old chroniclers, did not merely consist of a half dozen or so wives, but of about eight hundred women and children. Blue Beard—"Barbe-bleue"—lived in the fifteenth century, a soldier of France and a companion at arms of Jeanne d'Arc. His name was Sire Gilles de Laval, Baron de Retz.

He was born, this original Blue Beard, in 1396, and was a man of great wealth and great personal bravery. After serving in all the wars of the reign of Charles VII, he passed in 1425 into the service of the king of France, and three years later, at the side of the peasant girl of Domremy, took part in the relief of Orleans. At the coronation of the king he was one of the four great seigneurs who carried the holy phial of the Abbey of St. Remi to the cathedral. In 1433 he was with the Marshal de Rieux in command of the advance guard of the French army.

Children Lured to Death

BUT it was not for this that the Sire de Retz is remembered by the peasants of Brittany, nor was it for bravery in the wars of France that he was made immortal in the "Barbe-bleue" of the "Contes de Perrault" and sung in fable and story ever since. A strange accusation was brought against him. It was said that an old woman, perhaps with magic pipings, lured the children of the neighborhood to the chateau of the Sire de Retz and they were never seen again. As the children were those of the peasants no one dared complain against their feudal lord until the daughter of a rich family in Nantes disappeared. Then an accusation was brought before the Duke of Brittany, and the intrigue and rivalry of that day made a charge against the Sire de Retz particularly acceptable to his sovereign duke. There was jealousy and a family feud involved.

A tribunal was set up and the Sire de Retz, too proud to flee, too confident in his power, appeared and confounded his judges. But he could not confound the crowd of witnesses—"poor people, afflicted fathers and mothers, weeping and sobbing"—who told of the seizure of their children. The accused could no longer deny his crimes and made a confession in comparison with which, according to the ancient chroniclers, all the Neros of the Roman empire could offer nothing. His chateau was searched and there were found the bones of one hundred and forty children, without counting a limitless number of women of whom seven, it is said, were his wives.

The sentence passed by the court was burning at the stake, but in view of his services to France on the field of battle the duke allowed him to be strangled before being delivered to the flames. The execution took place at Nantes on October 25, 1440.

This is the story of Blue Beard as it comes to us in the pages of history. But to-day French historians are demanding that it be reviewed by the French courts and that the sentence of death passed almost five hundred years ago be reversed and that Sire de Retz—Blue Beard—be taken back into the good graces of society and the breath of scandal erased from his memory.

New evidence has come to light, and on the basis of the law of 1895 a new trial for the companion of Jeanne d'Arc is insisted upon.—New York Tribune.

A Franco-American Beauty War Is On

THE Paris dressmaker, Jean Patou, who brought six American beauties, including a Canadian girl from St. Thomas, over here to be models in his shop, is being subjected to considerable chaffing and a little good-humored criticism for his initiative. Though he explains that there is a scarcity of French models, and moreover that he wanted American girls exclusively for the display of gowns intended for American exportation, he has been compelled to answer the charge that he is unpatriotic.

Patou was bold—or indiscreet—enough to compare the American woman with the classical conception of Diana, whereupon the defenders of French feminine prestige were incited to remark that "our poor Latin sisters must content themselves with being likened to Venus—a type of woman who is completely out of date."

Half jokingly, but half in earnest, Patou is warned he will incur the blame of the economists for disturbing the commercial balance of the country.

"Hitherto French feminine grace was an article of exportation. What will become of us if France begins importing foreign grace?"

The dressmaker's model also was a particularly Parisian article, they say; so how dare Patou introduce foreign manufactured imitations. As for his colleagues in the dressmaking business, they are angry with him because they believe that within a year the six American models will return to New York in order to create half a dozen dressmaking establishments in the world famous Parisian style.

He Earned the Title of the Greatest Cad in Europe Young Count Herbert Bismarck Was a Thorough Boor frock coats and tall hats entered, one of them wearing the sash of a government official. He announced gravely: "I am the prefect of Calvados." He regretted his stern duty, but he had orders to secure a list of the names of those present so that the matter might be investigated by the police magistrate. Mme. de Courval nearly fainted, and, making her way to the man with the sash, she said:

"But, monsieur le prefect, you don't understand. It's impossible; one gentleman present cannot be named. He is above the law." "There is no man above the law in France," he replied coldly. Other expostulations were made. A lady whispered in the ear of the prefect. The latter then said, bowing very low to a gentleman seated with head bent over at the table: "Believe me, Monseigneur, I shall do all in my power to keep the name of your royal highness out of this very awkward matter, but—" Then the Prince burst out laughing and said in English to Mme. de Courval, who was shuddering in terror: "Don't be frightened. It's a joke! Melissano's non-sense!" The prefect and his acolytes were all frozen. Prince Melissano's tomfooleries in conjunction with his royal highness were innumerable.

Most English diplomats who have been stationed in Berlin and have written memoirs quite agree that the greatest cad in Europe was Count Herbert Bismarck, the eldest son of the Iron Chancellor. The author makes two contributions to the subject. The chancellor sent Count Herbert over to inspect Oxford with the idea of his possible matriculation. There he knocked about for a week and then remarked to Seaham, who was showing him around: "I don't think I shall come here after all. My father and I understood Oxford was the educational headquarters for your aristocracy, but I've seen nothing but very common people since I've been here!" Seaham, later Lord Londonderry, came from a family not noted for its moderation of language, but even the candid author does not repeat his reply.

Explained—Didn't Excuse

THEN there is the episode of Count Herbert at the Vatican. The door leading to his holiness' presence was opened. Kaiser Wilhelm was admitted. Then the door was closed. Herbert rushed to it and, battering at it with his fist, cried: "Open! Open at once! I am Count Herbert Bismarck!" shouted the Prussian. "That" was the smiling reply, "of course explains, but it does not excuse your conduct!"

The side-show atmosphere of the new book is further maintained by the actual facts performed by some of the actors: "That extraordinary person, Stuart Cumberland, lifts up a chair on which are seated Prince George of Greece and Czar Alexander III. of Russia, and the showman declaims:

He took both these abnormally big and heavy men, chair and all, from the floor and held them up as an ordinary man would lift a box of cigars. Many Russians still alive will remember the marvelous feat, which was rendered all the more difficult owing to the fact that the prince, seated on the arm of the fauteuil, made the whole thing lopsided, and that both he and the czar were rocking with laughter.

The writer tells of a mystic named Home and also the mysterious Jacobs of Simla. "He was a magician if ever there was one." What he says later is apparently said seriously:

"That this man possessed wonderful powers is beyond all question. He did things that no other man could do and in circumstances which precluded all possibility of any kind of trickery.

For example, at his place in India, he would often walk on water before his guests when he gave a garden party. All the leaders and members of Indian society, from the viceroy down, saw him do this, and do it repeatedly. Of this there can be no possible doubt, and most likely many who read these pages will remember having seen him do not only this strange thing, but many others—such as having quick communication, without any kind of physical apparatus, with people far away."

A Mysterious Mystic

DANIEL DUNGLAS HOME was the son of the eleventh Lord Home, and about him Lord Crawford, the father of the present peer, used to impart the most extraordinary things:

One day Crawford was seated in his room in his town house when suddenly all the bookcases went up to the ceiling and then dropped down again with such a thud that the footmen rushed up to see what was the matter. Lindsay ran round to South Audley street, where his friend Lord Adare (now Dunraven) lived, and found Home there levitated—that is, in midair!

And of course there is plenty of music in the side show, erotic as well as otherwise. The musical duet between Liszt and Chopin, in which the former declined to fire, is a delightful episode. Both were at Nohant, the guests of George Sand, and a discussion began between the two as to who was the greater genius:

Chopin, with the naivete of conscious genius, alleged that he was a far greater man than Liszt, a thing the great pianist would not admit. At length Chopin said: "Well, I'll tell you how I can prove that I'm a greater man than you. I can imitate you, but I defy you to imitate me!" "You can't imitate me—I defy you to!" exclaimed the abbe.

That evening in the dark after dinner, Liszt began playing. He was at his very best, never more brilliant, and surpassed himself in virtuosity. Everyone was enthusiastic and applauded heartily; but when the candles were brought, lo and behold it was Chopin! "Now imitate me like that if you can," he said to Liszt. The abbe had to admit that he could not; it was quite out of his power.

BLACK AND GOLD SARI WILL BE BROUGHT HERE

Ruth St. Denis Will Use Valuable Shawl in Hindu Dance.

Ruth St. Denis is giving a number on her program this season entitled, "The Dance of the Black and Gold Sari." A "sari" is the chief garment of a Hindu woman. It is uncut—being one long piece of goods, especially woven for the purpose, which is draped and folded in such a manner that the woman is beautifully clothed thereby.

A retired English army colonel, formerly 20 years in the British forces in India, came to this country with a collection of rare, beautiful and valuable mementos of his years in that most intriguing country of the Orient. Among his collection was the sari of a Hindu queen (queen or princess) given him while he governed the province of which her lord and master was the hereditary but only nominal ruler. There was a little touch of romance in the story of how it came to be given to the retired army officer. After seeing Ruth St. Denis dance her East Indian dances, even the past romance did not deter the colonel from presenting it to her.

Miss St. Denis brings in the sari, which is of sheer black embroidered in an allover pattern with gold bullion thread, and with side border and end of gold, all folded across her arms. She then proceeds, rhythmically, and in perfect time with the music to put on the sari in the traditional manner of Hindu women from time immemorial. And in the dance she does such a variety of things with the drapery that one is led to believe that there is intelligence in the silk itself and it wishes to show its joy at being near so heavenly a being by dancing also.

Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, famous exponents of the dance, will appear with the Denishawn dancers when that troupe comes to the Grand next Friday for one night's performance only.

'THE FLIRTING FLAPPER' IS FINEST OF FARCES

Noted Female Impersonator to Appear in Majestic Players' Offering.

If there is anyone who cannot laugh at the rousing Broadway farce comedy success, "The Flirting Flapper," at the Majestic next week, there must be something radically wrong with him. It's an entertainment that changes the blues and glooms so far into the discard that the happy effect remains for weeks. It is designed for laughing purposes and is said to transform the most confirmed grouch into a grinning optimist.

The play is most notable, however, for presenting as guest star with the Majestic Players, the youthful and talented Howard Blair, female impersonator of luxe. This young man has created a sensation everywhere, with his gorgeous gowns, his skilful impersonations, his specialties, which include baritone and soprano song hits, all sorts of difficult dances and a piano solo. There is no doubt that Howard Blair and his starring vehicle, "The Flirting Flapper," will prove the best drawing card that the Majestic has offered this season. "The Flirting Flapper" concerns the ludicrous adventures of a young society man who has to be married before a certain hour on a certain evening or lose a sizable fortune. His dance finds out at the eleventh hour that he has been philandering, and accuses him of it, which furnishes the most amusing scenes that was ever written. The unhappy bridegroom has but half an hour to find a bride, and the way out of the difficulty provided one of the most amusing plots that has ever been conceived for a farce comedy.

Mr. Blair has been hailed far and wide as the only successor to Julian Eltinge, his sensational genius as impersonator of luxe, singer, dancer and actor having earned the favorable comment of the most critical audiences in Europe and America.

DENISHAWN DANCERS COMING FOR ONE NIGHT

Noted Troupe Will Appear at Grand Next Friday Evening.

Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn will appear with the Denishawn dancers in a colorful Spanish gypsy cafe scene at the Grand opera house next Friday night only, March 20.

Last season Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shawn and the Denishawn dancers produced a ballet called "Cuadro Flamenco." The words "Cuadro Flamenco" are used in Spanish to designate a band of gipsy (Flamenco) singers, dancers and guitar players. They are the fast vanishing exponents of the most picturesque and fascinating type of Spanish dancing. Night after night Ted Shawn hunted cafe concert halls from Barcelona, in the north of Spain, to Seville in the south, and daily he studied from the Flamenco dancers, their steps, their shawls, combs, mantillas, castanets, fans, full-length suits and Flamenco dancers' costumes. This material Ruth St. Denis and he made into a dance drama, which was the most popular number on their tour last season. For that reason it is being retained in an otherwise all new repertoire this season.

The story goes as follows: It is evening of the day of a great bull fight. The cafe life is just beginning to become gay. The gitanas are mingling among the men of the concert hall, and the flower girls are plying their trade. Lalanda enters in full regalia and is persuaded to recount his afternoon's triumphs in the Plaza de Toros. Then the Cuadro Flamenco starts the night's entertainment of singing and dancing. La Marcenena comes on for her number. At the end Lalanda, who has been her ardent suitor, demands an answer. She tells him that in return for the most beautiful shawl in Seville, she will marry him. He goes to the shawl merchant next door and returns with a bundle. He offers them, one by one—the fifth and last wins her. The entire assemblage celebrates the betrothal in typical gypsy manner.

Mail orders now accepted if accompanied by check or express order and filled.

The seat sale opens Tuesday morning at 9 a.m. This is the last opportunity to see this company for two years.

WHOLE VILLAGE BUILT FOR BIG LOVE FILM

"Idle Tongues" Will Open Engagement at Loew's on Monday.

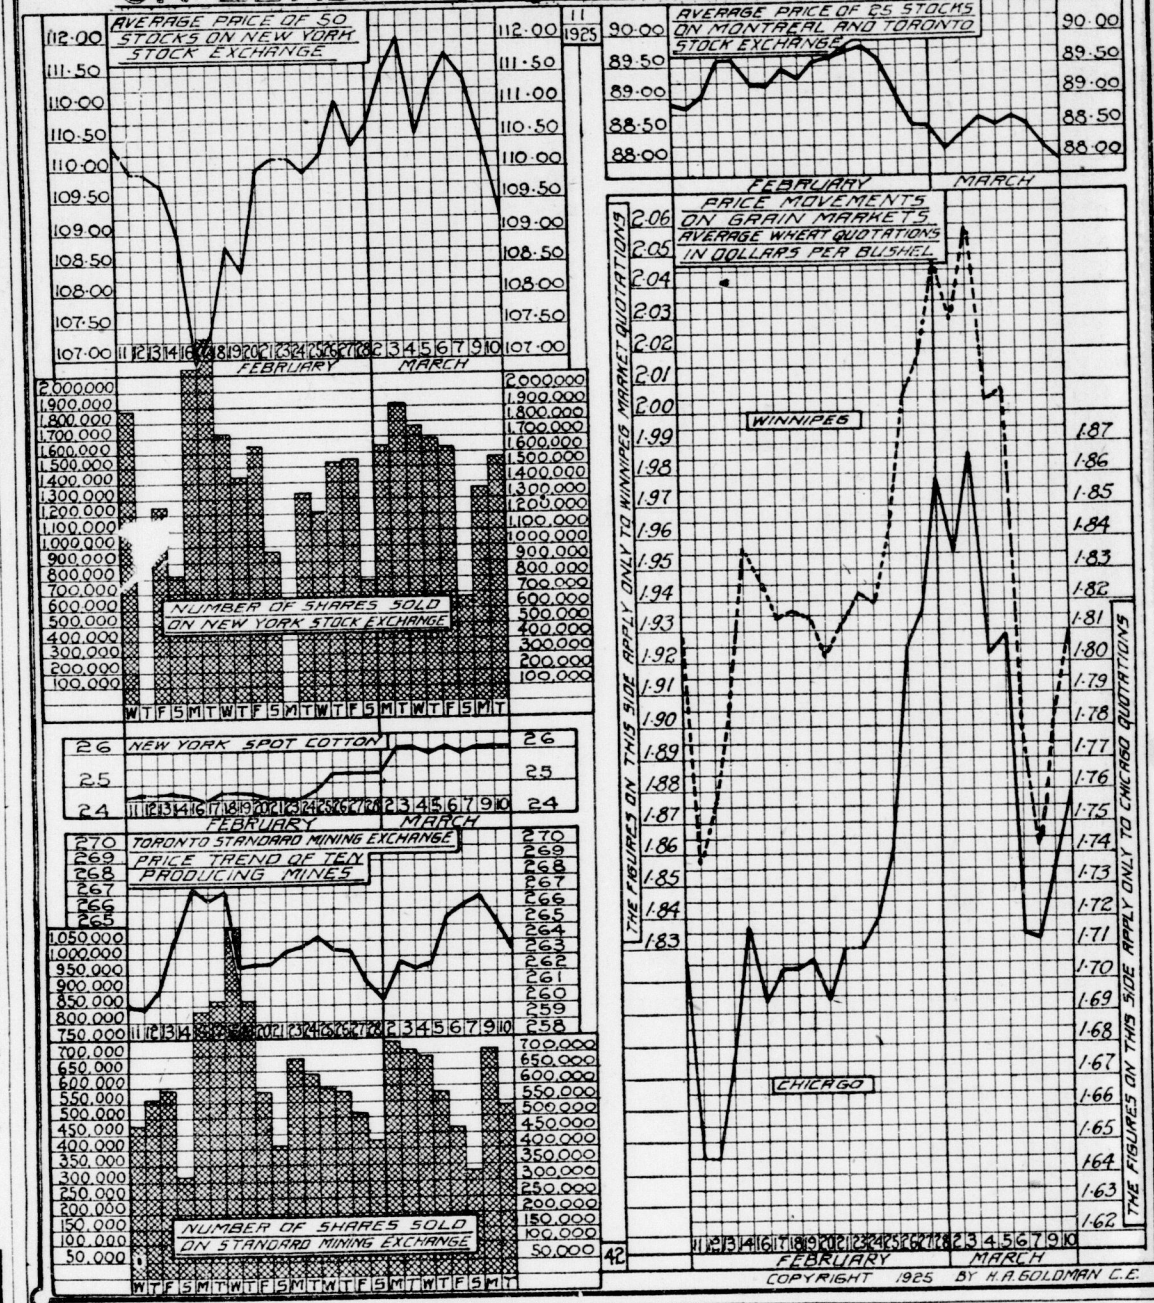

Some idea of the enormous work entailed in the production of a modern photoplay may be conceived from the number of built sets required for "Idle Tongues." First National's vivid dramatization of Joseph C. Lincoln's novel, "Dr. Nye," which comes to Loew's on Monday. The picture was filmed in California and, since the scenes were laid in a typical Cape Cod village, it was necessary to virtually erect a Massachusetts town on the Pacific coast. Included in the structures were a town hall, a courtroom, a residential street showing a dozen homes and other buildings.

Aside from the rehearsing of Percy Marmont, Doris Kenyon, and other leading players, hundreds of extras had to be drilled for the riot scenes and other thrilling action of the film.

FLORENCE VIDOR IS REALLY "CAMERA SHY" Will Be Seen at Loew's on Thursday in "Christine of the Hungry Heart."

Florence Vidor, who plays the title role in "Christine of the Hungry Heart," Thomas H. Ince's new First National production, is a star who never keeps an appointment with a photographer. Miss Vidor is about the hardest star in filmdom to get before a "still" camera for some reason or another. She is the babe of the Thomas H. Ince publicity department's life when it comes to pictures—so if you have one of Florence treasure it. However, her portrayal of "Christine," which comes to Loew's theatre on Thursday more than makes up for her reluctance to pose for individual pictures and the role will add to her already universal popularity.

NATIONAL BREWERIES MAKES 2-POINT GAIN

Most Active Stock On Montreal Exchange Power Down 1.

Canadian Press Despatch. Montreal, March 12.—Trading on the Montreal stock exchange today was not very active, and an easier feeling prevailed in a narrow range of stocks. National Breweries was the most prominent in regard to activity, with a turnover of 1,119 shares, and closed at 52 1/2, for a net gain of 2 points. Second in activity came Montreal Power, with 946 shares dealt in. This issue suffered a loss of 1 point at 17 1/2. DEMAND IS WIDENED FOR RAIL OBLIGATIONS

Bonds Make Irregular Recovery Under Warner Leadership.

Associated Press Despatch. New York, March 12.—Bond prices today continued to score irregular recovery, under the leadership of the railroad issues, for which there was a widening demand. Quotations failed to hold at the top achieved on early sales, but were reactionary and higher during the day. Heavy buying of Serbian 5's, which moved up almost 2 points to a new peak price for the year, was linked with reports that banks were preparing to float a new loan for Jugoslavia. The government is required to meet a $2,000,000 maturing note issue at the end of this month, and the new loan, it is reported, will provide several million dollars additional for railroad construction. The usual Saturday dullness in the investment field will be broken tomorrow by an offering of $8,874,000 Philadelphia, Trust Company 25-year bonds. This issue will be marketed by Dillon, Read & Co. at 90. A few important price changes in the rail group, although fractional gains were general throughout the list. The only outstanding exception to the upward trend was the maturing 4 per cent bonds, which fell in fairly heavy volume, forcing a recession of 2 points. Some of the other issues, however, were slightly higher. Railroad obligations were irregular, with Pan-American and Skelly Oil and Warner and Manatt Sugars very heavy, to 2 points. Liberty bonds were heavy.

FLOUR Canadian Press Despatch. Montreal, March 12.—On account of pronounced weakness in Canadian cash wheat, the local market for spring grades of flour was easier, and prices were reduced 40c per barrel, which makes a net reduction of $1.20 per barrel to date this month. Prices for winter wheat flour scored a decline of 25c per barrel. Owing to a general reduction in flour prices, the millfeed market displayed weakness and prices dropped 10c. Standard grades of rolled oats suffered another loss of 15c per bushel. Flour—Man. spring wheat patents, firsts, $10.20; seconds, $9.70; strong bakers, $9.50; winter patents, choice, $9.50; rolled oats—Man. 30 lbs., $5.50. Bran—Per ton, $28.25. CITY DAIRY STOCK UP THREE POINTS

Is Outstanding Strong Spot of Dull Toronto Session.

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, March 12.—City Dairy common gave a most impressive demonstration of strength in a quiet market on the Toronto Exchange today that was generally marked by the recession. There was a distinct tendency towards heaviness with few exceptions throughout the trading session. Recent factors showed recessions. The total volume of trading was light, and business was fairly well distributed. No special significance is attached to the upward movement in City Dairy common other than that the recent annual report for 1924 showed exceptional earnings, which leads shareholders to expect more generous treatment. Dairy common reached a high point of $7 1/2 and closed at $5 for a net gain of three points of the day. P. N. Burt common was comparatively inactive and traded 2 1/2 from Thursday's close to 1 1/2 and closed at that price bid. Cement common was turned over in today's listless trading. A single transaction in Cement shares was made at 10 1/4. B. C. Fishing sold at 27 1/2 during the trading session, strengthened toward the close to 28. The sagging tendency in Steel of Canada common was again shown today when the market receded 1 1/2 points to 3 1/2. Davies "A" shares reached a low point of 25 and finished at 25 1/2 for a net loss of two points. Recessions were more numerous than advances in the traction group. Total sales of the day 2,538 listed shares, 12,146 unlisted, and $5,000 government bonds.

EGG MARKET REVIEW Canadian Press Despatch. Ottawa, March 12.—Opinions seem to differ with regard to the Canadian situation and the imports of United States eggs and some dealers in Toronto and Montreal claim that local receipts are not yet sufficient to take care of the demand. Latest arrivals of United States eggs are costing about 22c delivered Ontario shipper's yesterday were quoting extras 32c, firsts 29c, seconds 26c to 27c. Rifle Bullet From War Trophy In Boy's Hands Ends Pal's Life

Associated Press Despatch.

Ottawa, March 13.—A bullet, accidentally fired from a loaded German rifle, a war trophy, ended the life of Georges Letourneau, 16-year-old orphan, in the remote Kasabanza district in the Gatineau Valley. Ernest Wright, 16, an orphan and adopted brother of the dead youth, pressed the trigger.

The tragedy occurred at Chaussee's Farm, near the home of the two boys. In the absence of Chaussee they had gone to feed his stock, and finding the door of the farm dwelling unlocked, had entered. Two rusty rifles, hanging on the wall, attracted their attention. Wright, in toying with the German rifle, pressed the trigger. The coroner rendered a verdict of accidental death.

FEW MORE HINTS ABOUT FASHIONS

Popladrapp Sounds Queer, But Is Really the Name of a New Material.

By AILEEN LAMONT.

Special to The Advertiser.

New York, March 13.—A hat for madame? But certainly, consider this one—a toque of black satin with a diminutive visor and with the back brim extended to the neck. It is trimmed with a crest of black alpacas from ear to ear, the delicate points of which are pure white. The writer is not trying to say anyone but the When she saw the one mentioned she bought it.

We have with us the eternal triangle. But this one no play jury should sit on. Only the wearer should do that, for the triangle now forms the most popular decoration for lingerie. It is displayed at both top and hem of the camisole, at the bottom of the step-in, and forms the motif for many brassieres.

For the woman who goes out to conquer single-handed, one coat label is enough. One spring coat just brought out in Paris is of black kasha buttoned at the left side, with the right lapel faced with crepe courtoid, opening over a white crepe waistcoat.

Popladrapp is the latest. French fabric to be combined with crepe in the new morning dress. It is a variation of poplin, and combines beautifully with the softer material. One dress has a black popladrapp bodice above a skirt of bright crepe.

Dog owners may have shed their winter undies, but the dogs now being escorted up and down Park avenue still have to be appropriately clothed. This is hard on the dog, but adds a harmonizing touch to the costume of the walker. The dog's blanket must match the costume of his mistress, and both should harmonize with the upholstery of the motor which picks them up exhausted after a strenuous stroll.

When the vogue for scarfs was sponsored by Paris, one could obtain a delightful crepe scarf for 50 francs. Then some ambitious dressmaker carried the scarf idea to Japan. The Japanese took beautiful lengths of Chinese crepe and black-printed them with designs from old Samurai ceremonial robes. Now scarfs cost $20.

MERCHANTS WILL PRESENT FASHION SHOW AT LOEW'S

Members of Princess Patricia Chapter, I. O. D. E., To Act As Models.

FOR "Y" BUILDING

Special interest attaches itself to next week's program at Loew's theatre, in that the members of the Princess Patricia chapter, I. O. D. E., will act as models in a fashion show, to be given by city merchants. The members of the chapter, following the example of ladies in other large centers, are appearing as models in aid of a building site for a new Y. W. C. A. administration building for London. The need for such a building has long been apparent, but it is only now that a united effort is being made throughout the city to raise funds for such a building.

The fashion show will have as its setting a fashionable drawing-room, in which a musicale will be found in progress.

Gowns from the Hudson Fashion Shoppe will be worn by the guests appearing at the musicale, who will be recognized as the following members of the Princess Patricia chapter, I. O. D. E.: Miss Eula White, regent; Mrs. Eric Reid; Mrs. Richard Cronyn; Mrs. George Wainwright; Miss Shirley Johnston; Miss Helen Boughner; Miss Farleigh Hungerford and Miss Constance Givens.

Musical Program.
During the course of the musicale violin numbers will be given by Miss Cora Brennan, while Miss Lenore Coughlin will render instrumental numbers on a grand piano loaned by Heintzman & Company.

The stage itself will be furnished beautifully with rugs, chestfield suites and floor lamps supplied by the Ontario Furniture Company, while Gammage & Sons is supplying the flowers, as well as corsage bouquets for the models. A handsome Studebaker car is being placed at the disposal of those taking part in the fashion show by the Frank McLaughlin Company.

The models will appear wearing

200 Armed Men Fooled by Five

Associated Press Despatch.

Sofia, Bulgaria, March 13.—Outwitting an armed guard of more than 200 men, five masked robbers the other evening walked into the custom house adjoining the main railroad station and made off with the entire day's receipts, estimated at 2,000,000 leva.

The ease with which the robbery was accomplished has caused newspaper comment concerning the facility with which the government could be overturned by bold adventurers.

modish gowns from the Hudson Fashion Shoppe. Special hats to match these gowns have been made by the Royal Millinery Company, and will be worn by the models, who will also appear wearing the latest fashion in jewelry, smart bead bags and walking sticks, provided by John A. Nash. Their shoes, of fashionable cut, will be supplied by Ashplant's.

Stunning Gowns.

Among the stunning gowns which will be shown will be an ensemble costume of satin, so woven as to represent leopard skin. Black satin trimmings adorn the coat, while the leopard-skin material trims the gown, which is of black satin.

A sports coat and skirt of oakwood flannel is attractively trimmed with a plaid material in the same tones. A beautiful Ottoman coat of black and gold silk is trimmed with bands of squirrel. A smart French gown is headed in coral and bronze. A handsome coat in Morocco tone has headed ribbon for trimming, and is worn with a gown of the same shade, fashioned in canton crepe.

These are but a few of the beautiful costumes which will appear in the fashion show. The hats, which the Royal Millinery Company has been busy fashioning this week, will match the gowns, and are of the latest design.

MELODY MASTERS DELIGHT AUDIENCE

Orchestra From Mooseheart, Illinois, Appears in London.

Mooseheart Melody Masters captured a London audience at the Patricia Theatre last night in a program of merry melody given by them under the auspices of the London Lodge, No. 1205, Loyal Order of Moose.

The orchestra rendered more than two hours of pleasing entertainment to a crowded house. From Mooseheart, Illinois, a few miles from Chicago, six members of the Mooseheart home came to London to stage the concert. They sang and played all varieties of music with all types of instruments, and left London with the impression that they are truly accomplished.

Preparatory to the Mooseheart Melody Masters' program, three reels of motion pictures, descriptive of Mooseheart and the surrounding country, were shown, illustrating the splendid work which is being done in the United States by the Loyal Moose Order.

The numbers of popular and classical airs were exceptionally well-rendered. The popular music proving to be most entertaining. Fun was suitably mixed with the music. Many pleasing comedy skits, chuck full of humor, were given between numbers. The combined orchestra of six players, piano, trombones, saxophones and drums, ended the evening's entertainment in a whirlwind of popular airs.

QUEBEC AWAITING LEAD OF ONTARIO

Church Union Ratification To Follow Example of Sister Province.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Quebec, March 13.—That the province of Quebec would be ready to ratify the union of the Methodist church, the Congregational church and the Presbyterian church when Ontario had given the example in that sense, was the unanimous stand adopted by the legislative assembly last evening when the church union bill came before that body for third reading.

It was explained by Premier Taschereau and Arthur Sauve, leader of the opposition, that the bill was one which was outside the political atmosphere of the house, and the province was anxious not to intervene until the Protestant majority of the sister province, which was better placed to deal with the question, had stated its opinion one way or the other.

Even the sponsor of the bill, W. S. Bullock, M. L. A. for Sherbrooke, stated openly that he thought the course suggested was a wise one, and Hon. Jacob Nicol, provincial treasurer, the official spokesman of the Protestants in the cabinet, also supported the same view.

PREMIER DENIES PLAN TO BAN PRESCRIPTIONS

"Government Has Never Even Thought of It," Says
Ferguson.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, March 13.—"The Ontario government has never even thought of it," declared Premier Ferguson this morning in regard to the rumor that the government was considering the elimination of the system of doctors' prescriptions for hard liquor. The premier made absolute denial of the suggestion that this change had been considered by the cabinet.

It provides that summer time begin with the first Sunday in April and continue until the first Sunday in October, with the provision that the period begin a week earlier if Easter intervenes. Similar measures are being taken in France and Belgium.

MILADY OF FASHION WEARS COYLY, BUT ONE EAR-RING

Flounce and Pleat Are Outstanding Features of Spring Styles.

MUST WEAR SCARF

By AILEEN LAMONT.
Special to The Advertiser.
Copyright.
New York, March 13.—It is getting so that a demand for a pair of earrings is almost as unexpected as twins. One is enough, according to the present fashion. This style has grown out of the fact that one ear is now allowed to peek shyly from concealment. It is adorned with a long, dangling ear-ring dropping almost to the shoulder. The coiffure is carefully arranged to cover the other ear, and the hat is pulled down over it for further concealment.

The flounce and the pleat have been the outstanding features of the spring styles. Why not both? That is the question the French designers have asked, and they have answered it by designing a frock of black crepe capote, the bodice of which is trimmed with silver lace. The skirt is composed of two deep flounces of crepe, accordion pleated. Similar pleated flounces appear at shoulder, elbow and waist.

Scarfs Everywhere.
Wear a scarf and you can't go wrong, no matter where you wear it.
The latest position for these costume adjuncts is shoulder, but up from the hem. The loop of the scarf is caught at the hem by a cluster of artificial flowers and the ends draped upward to tie at the opposite hip in a big bow.
A charming hat just imported here of his wife's attempted suicide in a

Dame hospital, where she lay dying from a self-inflicted bullet wound. Each forgot the quarrel combination of materials. The small round, high-crowned shape is of Bengal braid, with a short visor of black satin. It is trimmed with a wide satin ribbon, plain in front, but decorated with a close row of pink satin roses around the back. A scarf of satin about two inches wide is worn with it. On the ends of this row of roses is duplicated.

TARIFF IS DISCUSSED BY WOODSTOCK BOARD

No Decision Reached Regarding Resolution—Publicity Considered.

Special to The Advertiser.
Woodstock, March 13.—A number of questions of national importance were discussed at a largely-attended meeting of the Woodstock board of trade, held this evening. Major Wood, secretary of the Brantford chamber of commerce, discussed an active campaign of publicity to attract tourists along the main provincial highways from Windsor and Sarnia through Woodstock to Brantford and Toronto. There was a keen discussion of a resolution asking for the repeal of preferential tariffs on all articles similar to those manufactured in Canada, but no action was taken by the board.

AGED AYLMER RESIDENT WILL BE INTERRED TODAY

Special to The Advertiser.
Aylmer, March 13.—Elizabeth Allen, widow of the late James W.
Allen, died at her home on Cedar street on Thursday in her 85th year.
She had been seriously ill for about ten days. She was the eldest daughter of the late George Dexter of Springfield, and lived in that village until she married and came with her husband to Aylmer, where she has since resided. She was a consistent member of the Methodist church, one of the oldest members of the ladies' aid, and always took an active interest in church work until the weight of years prevented her doing so.

Surviving are two sons and one daughter, John W. and George A. both of Aylmer, and Mrs. Edward Robertson, Dingle street, Malahide;
two brothers, George W. Dexter, Michigan, and John W. Dexter of Dayton, Ohio.

The funeral will be held from her late residence on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. H. T. Ferguson of St. Paul's church will officiate. Interment will take place in the Aylmer cemetery.

RECLAMATION PLANT IS BUSY ALL THE TIME

W. Leff & Co. Has Excellent Outlets For All Kinds of Scrap.

The firm and staff of W. Leff & Co., Bathurst and William streets, invites anyone interested to inspect their plant and learn the many processes through which accumulations of scrap go in being made ready for use by various foundries, mills and factories throughout the country.

At present the Leff concern has excellent outlets for auto tires, old plates from storage batteries, rubbers, inner tubes of all descriptions, old newspapers and all types of old metals.

Although business conditions have not been brisk at all times of late, this firm has turned out hundreds of cars of scrap within the past year, and has kept all its employees on the job with practically no loss time.

The company is equipped to handle any quantity of any grade of scrap, whether it is an awful or a carload, either by contracts to cover a certain period or by single collections. An up-to-date warehouse, yards and office facilities guarantee prompt attention to all transactions.

A few of many grades that are being handled daily are: Waste and scrap papers, old newspapers, old magazines, and old books, rags of every description in new or old cotton or woolen, rubbers, auto tires, metals, both in ferrous and non-ferrous, bags, and many others.

Whether you live in the city or in any part of Western Ontario this broken work can be of service to you.

Outside of the trade enjoyed by W. Leff & Co. from the factories and homes in London and elsewhere, many schools, churches and societies in Western Ontario have made money through the collection of old papers, magazines, rags and auto tires and rubbers, and in disposing of them to W. Leff & Co.

ALL EYE TROUBLES CAN BE REMEDIED

A. M. Dambra Submits Valuable Advice Regarding Organs of Vision.

Seventy-five per cent of the human eye is made up of a watery-like fluid. Were your eye to be punctured, as with a pin, the interior of this organ of sight would flow down your cheek something like tears. Science has made such progress today that when a piece of steel or similar substance gets in the eye, the foreign substance can be extracted and the hole closed so that the eye fluid is retained. Were all this fluid to escape, blindness in the eye affected would result.

One of the most interesting studies is that pertaining to the human eye. A. M. Dambra, manager of the London Optical Company, Richmond street, this city, an expert in this profession, gave some interesting facts regarding this extraordinary organ.

For instance, there are six muscles which control the movement of the eyeball. These are more important, it is pointed out, than the many nerves which are centered there. These muscles turn the eye, according to demand, in and out, up and down, and in and out. The effect produced by crossed eyes is that one of these muscles is stronger than its mates and so draws the eye from its normal position. This defect may be remedied by a surgical operation or by the aid of prismatic lenses, which straighten the line of vision.

Because of his long experience, Mr. Dambra can give the right advice and supply the proper lenses needed to correct this condition, as well as astigmatism—an unevenness of the cornea of the eye—and all other defects of the organs of vision.

PURDOM HARDWARE GOODS ARE RELIABLE

Handles Celebrated Brandram-Henderson Paints and Chl-Namel Varishes.

Every requirement in all classes of hardware, as well as paints, varishes and enamels, is supplied by the Purdom hardware, 124 Dundas street.

Its paint leaders are the celebrated Brandram-Henderson paints and Chl-Namel varishes, enamels and stains. To these has been added a new B.H. product in the form of Freestone, a high-class finish for all surfaces, which is mixed with water instead of oil, and may be applied in all cases where paint is required—on plaster or oil painted surfaces as well as on wood, brick, stone or any other surface.

Since the year it was first opened the Purdom hardware shop has always maintained a standard of selling nothing but thoroughly reliable goods and of seeing that every customer is satisfied whether his purchase has been ten cents worth of nails or a kitchen range.

The result of this motto has been that this establishment has become known throughout London and its environs as a store where the ultimate in satisfaction is always assured people who trade there.

Milk Puts Color On Cheeks And Not Noses On Citizens

"I'm the Best Little Body-Builder in the World and Everybody's Friend as Long as I Stay Sweet," Soliloquizes a Pint.

Every day thousands of pints of milk find their way into the plant of the Ontario Creamery at 129 King street to be made into delectable products—not as single pints, of course, but in hundreds of gallons. This is probably what one of these pints of milk thinks about in general:

"I am just about the best little health builder in the world. I put vitality in the blood, strengthen bones and teeth, and make the kidneys grow like weeds on a warm spring day. I admit that I am more beautiful than any other liquid even if I do test over 2 per cent, and I put color on the cheeks instead of the nose, either in my natural form or when I appear before the world as ice cream or butter made by the Ontario Creamery."

"I am cordially received by the best families in town, enjoyed by the rich and poor alike. I am a friend of the businessman, and as-

All Auto Parts Available In London Wreckers' Shop

Motorists Derive Real Economy
From Purchasing Thoroughly
Reliable Replacements Secured From Used Cars.

There is a wide space of time and tradition and progress between the automobile wrecking business of today and the primitive salting yards of yesteryear. The business-like Anglo-Saxon countries and the East—sleepy-eyed but wise with the wisdom of ten thousand years—but the men in the auto-wrecking business of today have much in common with the hardy-spirited seafarers of ages past.

Just as the latter brought deserted and sunken vessels from the sea to reclaim their cargoes and restore the ship themselves, giving them a new lease of life to continue serving man as burden-bearers of the seven seas, so the auto-wrecking business takes over machines that have passed the usefulness as units and repairs the parts which are still good. These are sold to motorists at prices which are greatly below those asked for new parts of the same type, and in most cases will last as long as new parts would.

The auto-wrecking trade, which was a natural outgrowth of the automobile industry, came into concrete existence early in this century, and since then has made constant progress, until today it is recognized as a vital and necessary business.

The London Auto Wreckers' shop, at 264 Horton street, is one of the leading concerns of this kind in the district.

In every machine which apparently has given its owner the maximum of service there are always parts which are worn but little, if any. These are removed by the London Auto Wreckers to be cleaned and placed on their shelves for re-use. The big advantage motorists derive from using this service is that parts of all descriptions are always available, even for machines that have passed off the market and for which it may be almost impossible to secure replacements.

The lighting arrangements are to be made so that there will be no glare at any time. The interior will appear as though lighted by daylight.

New departments are to be added, including one for candy, another for cigars, etc., and in addition particular attention will be paid to high-class imported toilet articles. Kodak supplies will be carried in large quantities.

Expert graduate druggists will be in attendance to pay special attention to filling prescriptions. In all, when the new store is opened, within the course of a few weeks, London will have another Taylor Drug Store which will be a distinct asset to the municipality.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN WALK WRONG, SAYS DOCTOR

Foot Specialist Advises Parents To Teach Children To "Toe In."

Dr. LeRoy V. Hiles, foot specialist, 202 Dundas street, submits the following article on the care of children's feet for Advertiser readers:

"It is a common mistake to think that children are not always to blame for their restlessness. In nearly every case this is caused by improperly fitted clothing, and especially by improperly fitted shoes. We often hear about the so-called growing pains of children, but these are really no such pain, these conditions being caused by restricted circulation, due to improperly fitted clothes."

"Normal children usually begin to creep during the seventh and eighth months. This creeping should be encouraged, and by no means should a child be forced to walk by using mechanical appliances. If left alone, the child will begin to walk of its own accord by hanging on to objects which are about the room. Forcing the child to walk too early causes the muscles and bones, which are unfit for this unnatural strain, to give way, and as a result the child acquires weak feet and bow legs."

"Often parents believe that children are lazy because they desire to be carried constantly during the commencement of their walking age, but in the majority of these cases this is an erroneous idea. Such children either have weak feet, which pain them when they walk, or are unhealthy. Any normal child would much rather romp and play about than be carried."

"For generations children have been taught to toe out. Does your child walk like Charlie Chaplin with his toes out? If he does, he is forcing his body weight on the inner border of the foot, resulting in an undue strain upon the main arch of the foot and impairing the shock-absorbing capacity of the same. Toeing out causes a mechanical disturbance in the foot, therefore, it is advisable to toe in slightly like the Indian, who does it, the feet alone, in this way conserves his foot power."

"Many children are permitted to go through childhood handicapped by weak feet, which in the majority of cases would respond to very simple corrective measures. The teeth, eyes and other organs of the body are carefully examined for pathological conditions, but the feet, which are as vitally important in the development of children as any of the aforementioned organs, are passed over superficially or entirely overlooked."

"Weak feet occur more frequently in females than in males, and are quite a common condition before the thirteenth year of age. In a great many cases this condition is found where either one or both parents have the same trouble."

"Suppose you inquire, 'What should children do to prevent such foot disabilities and what can we, as parents and teachers, do to help prevent them?'"

"As I have told you the various causes of such foot ailments, you can at least make an effort to follow the suggestions indicated herein:

"First—You can buy shoes that fit—round, broad toe, inner border straight, heels low and broad and of rubber."

"Second—Do not allow your child to wear tennis shoes, except for games where they are indicated."

"Third—See that your child is very important. White or gray cashmere or light wool are best and must be large enough so as not to crowd the toes."

"Fourth—Avoid tight garters, as they restrict blood circulation."

"Fifth—Have the child cultivate the habit of toeing in very slightly."

"Sixth—Daily foot exercises are beneficial."

"Seventh—Bathe the feet daily, using cold water. This stimulates muscular activity."

DOCTOR ADVISED AN OPERATION

Read Alberta Woman's Experience With Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Provost, Alberta.—"Perhaps you will remember sending me one of your books a year ago. I was in a bad condition and would suffer awful pains at times and could not do anything. The doctor said I could not have children unless I went under an operation. I read testimonials of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the papers and a friend recommended me to take it. After taking three bottles I became much better and now I have a bonny baby girl four months old. I do my housework and help a little with the chores. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and am willing for you to use this testimonial letter." Mrs. A. A. ADAMS, Box 54, Provost, Alberta.

Pains in Left Side. Lachine, Quebec.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I suffered with pains in my left side and back and with weakness and other troubles women so often have. I was in this way about six months. I saw the Vegetable Compound advertised in the 'Montreal Standard' and I have taken four bottles of it. I was a very sick woman and I feel so much better I would not be without it. I also use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I recommend the medicines to my friends and am willing for you to use my letter as a testimonial." Mrs. M. W. ROSS, 580 Notre Dame St., Lachine, Quebec.

Radio Answers

By C. H. LANGFORD.

This department is conducted every Saturday in this column. Questions on any radio trouble you may have or information required may be sent in. As many of these questions as possible will be answered in the Saturday edition. Address all communications to the Radio Department, London Advertiser, London, Ont.
V. R. of London, Ont., writes: Would you advise the build-up of a three-circuit regenerative tuner or a three-circuit regenerative tuner? There are several radio sets very close to our house and when the tuner of building a single-circuit set they asked me to build something else, but to leave the single-circuit set alone, as it would interfere to a great extent with their concert.
Ans.—By all means do not build a single-circuit receiver. This type of receiver is one of the worst types of interference that the listener has to put up with. Its only advantage is that it can be sold at a very low cost. Ninety-five per cent of the radio sets on the market today are of this type. If you want enjoyment from your radio after the novelty has worn off, stay away from this type of receiver. Not alone is it an interference-maker, but when the new super-power stations start using higher power such receivers will be unable to tune them out or separate them. As your second choice, build or buy a three-circuit tuner that embodies the use of modern low loss parts. Have the primary loose coupled if you are near local station and you will have no difficulty. A. A. of Ashter, Ont., writes: Can a vario coupler be used in place of a loose coupler?

March Weather Dangerous to Baby

Our Canadian March weather—one day bright, the next blustery and cold—is extremely hard on children. Colds and coughs are necessary for the mother to keep the little ones indoors. They are often confined to overheated, badly ventilated rooms and catch colds which rack their whole system. To guard against these colds and to keep the baby well till the better, brighter days come along, a box of Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house and an occasional dose given the baby to keep his stomach and bowels working regularly. The Tablets are mild but thorough laxative which never fail to regulate the stomach and bowels and thus they relieve colds and simple fevers and keep the baby fit. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.—Advt.

Answer—It would depend entirely on the vario coupler you have. If the primary or stationary coil has the same number of turns of wire as the loose coupler, and the rotor coil the same number of turns as the movable coil, it would do the work satisfactorily. However, in your case, the rotor coil has more turns of wire than the primary for your purpose, the only thing you will have to do is wind on some extra turns on the rotor. If a 12-plate variable condenser is placed across this rotor or secondary coil, your tuning will be much sharper.

J. W. of Chatham, Ont., writes: What does the light do in my set? When I turn it brighter the music is louder. My neighbor, however, using a larger set turns the light very dim and his music is much louder than mine. This is puzzling to me. What is the reason?

Answer—The light in your tube is necessary because of the high temperature that the filament must be brought to, so that it will throw off a stream of negative electrons. This must happen before the tube begins to function in your set. It is probable that the tube you are using is the 200 type. This tube employs a filament that requires a very high temperature in order to emit the electrons. Newer tubes have been developed that have a different filament structure and do not require as high a current and have a coating inside the tube. This coating is a by-product of tube manufacture and in no way shows any difference between any two tubes. Some of these tubes are fully coated inside. Others have little of this silvery coating. These new tubes only consume one-quarter the current that the 200-type consumes. It is possible that your neighbor is using a modern receiver with the new tubes and this will account for the extra volume from his set.

L. G. of St. Thomas, Ont., writes: Is it all right to make a sub panel out of wood? This panel will be in rear of front bakelite panel. It will be used only for mounting sockets and transformers.
Ans.—If you use a piece of well-seasoned wood that has been immersed in paraffin it will be no drawback. Do not use ordinary wood that has not been treated in this way, as it will contain a certain percentage of moisture and will collect more in damp weather. This may cause leakage and will lower the efficiency of the entire receiver. Hard rubber is recommended as the best of insulating material for such purpose.
P. W. of Stratford, Ont., writes: The other night I happened to let my ear phones fall off a table. They do not look to be damaged on the outside, and they work a little, but not anywhere as good as before. What is the cause of this and what can I do to fix them?
Ans.—Either the connections inside the case are partially broken or the magnets are demagnetized by the reason for your trouble. When the permanent magnet is given a hard blow it tends to demagnetize it. When the magnets are demagnetized the original strength of music is lost. Determine by the use of a dry cell if the electrical connections are O. K. If not, the only thing is to return the 'phones to the manufacturer for re-magnetizing.

R. G. no address, Ont.: What would be the safe potential to use on a 100-watt transmitting tube? What voltage and rating of generator is best?
Ans.—You may use a 150-watt 500-700-volt generator. This will be 0.8, up to 20-watt set. It is advisable to have a field rheostat in the shunt field of the generator, so that you can control the voltage to the tubes. This will enable you to reduce power when doing local work and will cause less interference to your immediate neighbors. It is necessary to have a transmitting license before any work can be carried on.

Young Mother Regains Health

And Now Recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills to All Similar Sufferers.

Mrs. Wm. Maddix suffered from a weak back.
St. Gilbert, P. E. I.—(Special)—"I am the mother of three children and after the birth of the eldest my back was very weak," states Mrs. Maddix, a well-known resident of this place. "Later it became very painful, until last winter it got so bad that I could hardly stand. I then took four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills which completely relieved me. I have great confidence in them and recommend them to all my friends."
Mrs. Maddix's trouble came from the kidneys as is evidenced by the relief she got from Dodd's Kidney Pills. When the kidneys become clogged or out of order, the circulation becomes sluggish, the impurities are not strained out of the blood and the result is weariness and lack of energy all over the body. This condition is not only disagreeable but dangerous as well. The impurities in the blood are the seeds of disease.—Advt.

Associated Press Despatch.
New York, March 13.—The marital troubles of Richard Bennett, actor, and his wife, known on the stage as Adrienne Morrison, which first attracted attention several months ago when they agreed to separate for a year and established homes six blocks distant from one another, has again come into prominence.
Mrs. Bennett, unsatisfied with her "six blocks divorce," has made application for a real divorce suit. Attorneys for the defendant announce that an alimony agreement has already been reached. Bennett says that his troubles are because of his temperamental character.
"I still love my wife and will never marry again," he declared.

PROHIBITION BIBLE BASED ON OLDEST TEXT

New Translation Replaces the Phrase "Flagon of Wine" With "Cake of Raisins."

Associated Press Despatch.
New York, March 13.—A "prohibition Bible," based on the oldest Hebrew text available, and from which are eliminated references to wine familiar in the King James version, has been published by Charles Scribner's Sons. Issued in two volumes, the new version is known as the shorter Bible.

The quotation in other versions of the Bible about David dealing out "a cake of bread and a good piece of flesh and a flagon of wine" appears in the shorter Bible as "a roll of bread, a portion of meat and a cake of raisins." The prophet Isaiah's reference to the children of Israel looking to other gods and loving flagons of wine appears in the new Bible as "although they turn to other gods and love to eat raisin cakes at their feasts."

The shorter Bible, however, contains the phrases, "Wine is a mocker." "Strong drink is turbulent." "So look not on wine when it is red," and "Be careful not to drink any wine or intoxicating drink."

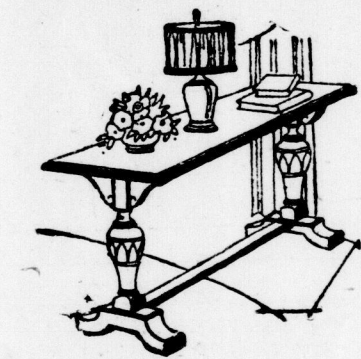

The translators included a number of Y. M. C. A. officials. They declare they did not consider the prohibition question in making their translation.

G.W.V.A. APPROVES TRANSFER OF $15,000

Satisfied Assistance Given Adjustment Bureau Was Within Trust Terms.
Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, March 13.—The conference of the Great War Veterans Association's representatives from all parts of Canada, meeting in Ottawa yesterday, placed its mark of approval on the utilization of $15,000 from the disbursement fund last year to assist in the maintenance of the adjustment bureau conducted by the dominion command of the association.
During a recent discussion in the house of commons some criticism arose as to the appropriation of this money. After careful examination the conference today expressed satisfaction that the purposes for which it was used were fully within the terms of the trust.

TAKE ANOTHER LOOK!

The Spring sunshine is beginning to show up—other things beside itself! Now is the time to begin housecleaning your personal appearance. If you are tired after the winter gaieties, what in the world is so resting as to stretch out in a long, comfortable chair and have the lines smoothed out of your skin and your soul at the same time? Take the treatment that suits you best—a face pack, massage of various sorts, cold creams, tonics or astringents; or a clever combination prescribed by the Beauty Specialist. There is nothing at once so restful, so invigorating, and so well worth the money as the new, fresh look it gives you. Try it!

THE COLD SHOULDER

That has turned away its fur, must be carefully considered in these days when Line is the most important thing in Life. The new coats with very small, close collars need to be related to the shingled head in some definite manner. The little hat (which should be fitted as carefully as a shoe) does this delightfully when it extends what optimists might call its brim, down the back of the neck. Reboux's bright thought of course! Sometimes she has two bright thoughts at the back of the head—crossed and pointing upwards. When summer comes it is bringing some large picturesque hats with it.

FASHION TAKES THE VEIL

In several situations. Sometimes it forms a transparent extension of the hat over the eyes, giving an Alluring Look even to the Innocent and Elderly. Or it may be drawn up from the scarf, and hooked over the nose, a la Harem. Or—if it is of lace—it may be tossed lightly over the crown of the hat, and tied or twisted to suit the wearer's individuality. It may be no bigger than a man's hand—but it appears very definitely on the horizon.

IT'S AT HER THROAT!

The Cravat Collar—though it cannot be said to tie itself up in knots. It takes its place (again shielding that important back-of-the-neck-line) as a little upstanding finish to a frock softly twisting together in front. Perhaps it beautifies a Sports Suit, in a soft, loose bow with wide ends that hang to the waist; or is crossed in front and thrown carelessly backwards. Billie Burke wears it both ways to crowded houses. But whatever way it ends, it has made a good beginning with the Spring mode.

IF YOUR EASTER WEEK

Ends in this direction, take the T. B. M. to "Ariadne." A sugar-coated pill for husbands, combining genuine A. A. Milne dialogue with a touch of pathos, a dash of human nature, and a genuine dose of pleasant laughter.

FIRST ULSTER PARLIAMENT CONCLUDES ITS SESSIONS

Belfast, March 14.—The first parliament of Northern Ireland concluded its work yesterday afternoon. A dissolution proclamation has been issued.

HEART TROUBLE SHORTNESS OF BREATH

Mrs. Geo. E. Bowman, Morrisburg, Ont., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to let you know of my experience with Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. Two years ago I became very poorly with my heart and nerves and whenever I took the least little bit of exercise my heart would start to jump and flutter. I could not walk upstairs without having to sit down and rest before I was half way up, on account of my breath becoming so short."

Boy Scout Troop Builds Own Home In East London

Showing real boy scout initiative in what is claimed to be a singular instance of integrity, the boys of the "Fighting Third" troop of this city have immortalized their watchword "Be prepared."

The boys, who are members of the St. David's Anglican church, are erecting on the corner of East and Trafalgar streets, a club house, where they will eventually hold their weekly meetings and entertainments. After school is out each day many of them can be seen leaving their homes with saws, hammers and all other tools that are needed for the building of the new troop home. The scouts are very proud of their headquarters and according to their scoutmaster, Rev. R. D. Mess, M.M., take a personal pride in finishing the work. They will decorate the rooms with the colors of the troop and also do all the exterior and interior painting.

This is one of the few cases, not only in the city, but in the province, where a scout troop has built its own club house, even to the most minute details, without any outside assistance.

They were at work today as usual on their club house from early morning. The unique idea is having a strong tendency to bring more boys to the fold of the troop, and it is expected that other troops will follow the example in the near future.

Consumers Complain Of Coal Oil In Water. Complaints from one or two consumers on St. George street of coal oil in the water have been death warrants for the public utilities commission.

The only possible reason for the presence of the oil, in the opinion of officials of the commission, is that a new hydrant was installed in the vicinity of the houses concerned. New hydrants are, of course, somewhat oily and occasionally oil does get out into the mains.

However, the mains on St. George street was flushed yesterday by the commission and no further trouble is anticipated.

RELIGIOUS PSYCHOLOGY TALK. Rev. Archdeacon G. B. Sage, rector of St. George's Anglican church, west London, will deliver the address at the regular monthly meeting of the London ministerial alliance Monday morning in room 5, Y. M. C. PLEASING RECITAL GIVEN BY PUPILS. Splendid Evening's Entertainment Provided by Pupils at Central Collegiate.

An orchestra that has always been of a first-class nature excelled itself last night, when, together with the Glee club, it presented a delightful program at the central collegiate. It is the central collegiate orchestra, and it was the Glee club of the same school that put on its second annual recital in the auditorium of the school. In spite of the weather there was nearly a capacity attendance, while the students filled the gallery to the last row.

The opening number, "God Save the King," given in an unusual solo and chorus setting, the Glee Club had a surprise for the audience, and the novel rendition of the National Anthem was received with a spontaneous burst of applause. Mrs. E. A. Miller took the solo part, and for those who had not had the pleasure of hearing her sing, it was a most appreciated surprise.

Splendid Work. The choristers showed what really fine work they could do in three numbers in particular. The first was the "Barcarole" of Offenbach, a familiar selection, which never fails to be enjoyed when it is as capably handled as it was last night. "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise" was the popular number sung by the Glee club, which received the greatest amount of appreciation from the students. However, the apex of the Glee club's contributions was the final number, the "Triumphal March," from the Costa dramatic oratorio, "Naaman." There was an orchestra accompaniment to this selection, and it was enthusiastically received as no other number on the evening's program, and the reception was certainly warranted.

Other numbers given by the singers were the Coleridge-Taylor "Viking Song," the "Boating Song" by E. N. Ely, Henley's "Invitus," in the Bruno Huhn setting, and two lyric poems by the girls' chorus, "Where the Bee Sucks" and Brahms' lullaby.

Harmony Selections. Selections of true harmony were rendered by the orchestra, and they scored in a series of pieces of the best quality. Their numbers showed a sense of the theme of music such as is not often found in purely amateur orchestras. Douglas Fetherston is the leader of this orchestra, and throughout their part in the program he had them playing in a splendid manner. The young musicians left little to be desired in their rendition of "Moonlight Memories," "In a Monastery Garden," and in their support of the singing numbers. George Storey, who played a saxophone solo of much merit, was heard in a Herd melody in B flat, and Will Hasset was heard in attractive flute solos, which brought out his remarkable ability in handling this instrument. The instrumental quintet, including Will Hasset, George Storey, Ted Hart, Herman Cooke and Jack McKay, was technically the most proficient number of the evening.

Perhaps the most pleasing number of the evening was the truly graceful 17th century costume minuet, when, accompanied by the girls' chorus, singing, "When Twilight Smiles," a number of the other girls of the school presented an easy, studied and daintily poised appearance in their dancing. Though the dance was a difficult one, owing to the slow melody of the song, it gave to the audience a charm not to be excelled. The pretty and colorful costumes of many years ago was an added charm, and lent quaintness to the number.

Miss Audrey McEneaney contributed an enjoyable reading to the evening's program, giving "Wynken, Blynken and Nod," while Miss Isabel Mortimer delighted her auditors with "The Seamstress," another meritorious reading. An Irish dance given by the girls brought the date of St. Patrick's close to hand, and this number was greatly enjoyed.

THE FISH THAT REMAINS.

One good cook always advises getting more fish than you think you will need, rather than less, and then planning to use the extra in another dish the next day. There are so many excellent dishes that call for cooked fish of one sort or another.

Creamed fish can be prepared in several ways. To make it, the cold fish should be looked over carefully, getting rid of all skin and bone and breaking it up into small pieces. The fish should then be combined with a good white sauce, well seasoned and served on neat pieces of buttered toast, or on a bed of rice. To make this dish, bake the potatoes, cut open in half and scoop out some of the potato, saving it for another use. The fish, sauce and leftover potato dishes. Have ready the creamed fish and place it in the cavities in the potatoes.

Hash is very good, and does serve a more tempting name. To make it you will need to allow for every two pounds of fish, one pound of butter, one pound of onion, and Johnny Chuck was obstinate. Polly Chuck was obstinate. Johnny had said that he was going down on the Green Meadows over the Old Orchard. Polly Chuck had said she was going up to the Old Orchard, and she went. They had had a most unpleasant falling out over the matter. Yes, sir; they had so.

"If Polly Chuck thinks I care because she wouldn't come along with me she is greatly mistaken," muttered Johnny to himself. "I don't care a fig for the Green Meadows. I don't care a fig of my tail. And if she thinks that I will follow her up to the Old Orchard, she is just as mistaken. If she wants to live up in the Old Orchard she can live there alone." My, but Johnny was cross.

Polly Chuck wasn't cross. She chuckled to herself as she headed for the Old Orchard. "Johnny thinks he is going to stay down on the Green Meadows," she thought. "He'll stay down. Polly to himself. 'He'll stay down there a while, and then when he finds that I really meant what I said and am going to stay in the Old Orchard he'll come up here. It will do him good to be away from a while. It will do me good not to see him around all the time. There is such a thing as being a little separated from each other.'"

For a week Johnny Chuck wandered about on the Green Meadow. He went way over to the Big River. But somehow he was discontented. Nothing was as he had thought it would be. There wasn't much sweet clover over there, and what there was somehow didn't taste as sweet.

But despite all he could do he did think about the Old Orchard. He wondered if Polly Chuck had gone back to that old home under an apple tree in the far corner of the Old Orchard, or if she had dug a new home in some other part of the Old Orchard.

“I don't care what she's done,” grumbled Johnny. But he did care. If he hadn't cared he wouldn't have kept thinking about it.

Then one morning, just as he was poking his nose out of an old hole where he had spent the night, he heard voices in the trees over his head. One was the voice of Sammie Jay. The other was the voice of his cousin, Blacky the Crow.

"I hear Johnny Chuck and Polly Chick have separated," said Blacky the Crow. "I saw them in the Green Meadows yesterday, but I didn't see anything of Polly."

"She's up there in the Old Orchard," replied Sammy. "I see her every day. She seems very well satisfied up there. Yesterday I discovered another Chuck up there. I don't know where he came from, but he certainly is a very nice fellow. He seemed to be very much interested in Polly Chuck. They are exactly friends yet, but I guess they won't be long before they will be. I noticed that Polly watched him whenever she thought he was looking. He certainly is a handsome Chuck, and certainly looking as good as the one I have seen."

"I don't know," said Blacky. "If Chuck as he listened to this. If I will he could do to keep from running right out and saying that he would have a good deal to say for the world would he have to say that Blacky the Crow and Sammy I know that he cared. So he kept quiet and he went home."

M O H REPORT

Special to The Advertiser.
Stratford, March 13.—The report of the public health nurse for the month, presented to the board of health, indicates that a total of 195 homes were visited, also that 300 visits to children six years and under were made, and eight prenatal visits. Dr. H. B. Kenner, M.O.H., reports that the health of the city is fairly good with only a small number of cases of contagious disease, none of which is regarded as serious.

Word of the death of Joseph Campbell of Detroit, husband of Lena Campbell, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Harris, Cambria street, has been received here. He died in St. Mary's hospital, Detroit.

A check in the morning's mail is a welcome visitor to any person, but when the check is in five figures the pleasure is greater. Mr. Treasurer of the Hamilton County Board of Health this morning, found a check from the provincial treasurer for $28,729.30, Perth's share of the provincial grant for county roads for 1924. This amount is slightly in excess of the $28,000 when the sum received was $28,022.71.

The Glade, Recently Organized in London, Holds Gala Night.

A gala night was held among the Worthy Buffs and Sisters of the Glade in this city, when the Glade entertained the brethren of the Prince of Wales lodge, R. O. A. E. at 110 Dundas street. The Glade is composed entirely of the wives, sisters and daughters of the others of the R. O. A. E. and is believed to be the oldest women's secret society loyal to the British empire. That old saying that women cannot keep a secret is not right in this case, as the Glade has kept its secret for nearly 400 years.

The visiting brethren were welcomed by Prima Elect I. Carter, assisted by Worthy Falcon G. Allen and were congratulated by the Glade lodge since its inauguration in November last. Prima G. Keats suitably replied on behalf of the Glade lodge and expressed her wish for the future prosperity of the Glade. The entertainment committee, Sisters Sims, Garnett, Bullock and the Glade lodge, were assisted by Wards, Keats and Steedman for the lodge, presented a very successful program. The artists included, Messrs. S. S. St. John, Hunt and Glider and Brothers Keats, Baron Hartley and Mitchell. A ceremonial dance was given by the Glade and Mann, Brother St. John, Carter presided at the piano.

During the evening a dainty supper was served by the Glade. Messrs. La Mair and Brown, under the direction of the worthy waitress, C. Mann. A feature of the evening was the presentation of some home-made pastry by Prima G. Keats, who, as auctioneer, brought down the house in a grand display of the repertoire and contents of the pastry.

Storm Breaks at Home and Europe Following Protocol Attack.

By HAL O'FLAHERTY.
Special Cable to The Advertiser and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright.

London, March 13.—Europe finds herself today in almost the same state of confused opinion regarding world peace as existed in the United States after the Senate rejected a treaty of Versailles and the covenant of the League of Nations.

Great Britain, whose place in Europe resembles that of the United States in world affairs, has killed the Geneva protocol. Foreign Minister Chamberlain's speech Thursday before the league council in Geneva aroused the same fires of indignation that burned so brightly in Washington after Senator Lodge's attack on the treaty of Versailles.

"Flay That Man."

League adherents, not only on the continent, but also here in England, turn upon Chamberlain today as religious fanatics would turn upon a blasphemer, shouting, "Flay that man." He is accused of relinquishing Great Britain's moral leadership in Europe. He is labelled "the butcher of great, generous ideas." His arguments, so lucidly set forth, characterized by his opponents as dishonest and merely "departmental criticisms evolved by the admiralty and the war office."

Viscount Cecil of Chelmsford, in addressing a meeting Thursday night declared that Great Britain stands for the parting of the ways. One leads back into the old system of alliance and counter-alliances and competition in armament, which must end in certain disaster, engulfing Christendom. The other leads to a new system of international co-operation in which all nations will take their share of safeguarding world peace. He declared that any attempt such as was proposed by Mr. Chamberlain to impose peace by a partial coalition would be bound to end in war.

Backed By Conservatives.
This sums up briefly the attitude of the league adherents, as outlined by Mr. Chamberlain. His supporters, including the whole Conservative press, staunchly applaud his theses, which, in substance, places

It's surprising what you can do with an hitherto neglected attic or store-room, once you start. Cleaned and tidied, with freshly tinted walls and curtained windows and a floor covered with cheery Dominion Linoleum, it becomes a real room — a room that compares favorably with any in the house. And the best and brightest feature is the floor.

Dominion Linoleum has a firm, smooth, waterproof surface that takes all the hard work out of cleaning day. All the dirt is on top and is easily and quickly brushed away. Dominion Linoleum wears for years. You could not wish for a finer floor or one that gives you less trouble. There are patterns and colorings suitable for every room and the cost is surprisingly moderate.

WEIR RECAPTURED AFTER DAY'S HUNT,

Jail Breaker Taken As He Is About To Enter House.

ESCAPED THURSDAY

Special to The Advertiser.
St. Thomas, March 13.—Norman Weir, who escaped from the Elgin county jail last night, was apprehended tonight by Sergeant Ketchabaw of the local force on Kains street, when the police received information that Weir was seeking protection in a house on that street. It is reported that the would-be protector was the informant.

Since the sudden disappearance of the prisoner early last evening, the authorities have had very little clue upon which to work. The prison clothing was found at the edge of the ravine, about two blocks from the jail, and this led to the impression that the prisoner had outside aid. It was also believed that he had escaped from the city on an M. C. R. freight.

Watched Girl's House.
Sergeant Ketchabaw found trace of a London girl whom Weir had expressed a desire to wed, and who has been in and out of the city since Weir was sentenced to the reformatory. The house where she was stopping was watched, but the wanted man did not put in an appearance. Several other possible clues were followed until tonight the officer met with success, and Weir is again behind prison bars.

Norman Weir and his brother Gordon were charged with the theft of chickens. Norman was found guilty and sentenced by Magistrate Maxwell to a term of nine months to two years less a day in the reformatory. Gordon was freed on suspended sentence. Norman was held in the county jail awaiting the arrival of Provincial Bailiff Ryan, and while attending to a furnace in the jail building he managed to evade Turnkey Cline and make his escape.

One Brother Married.
The Weir brothers came into special prominence when they asked permission of the jail authorities to be married to London girls, who were held in jail on vagrancy charges. The request was not granted, but Gordon was married on Wednesday last in London to one of the girls, Violet Bowditch. The other girl, Helen Govier, is still in St. Thomas.

MRS. T. KERR, 69, DIES.

Dutton, March 13.—The death occurred this afternoon of Mrs. Thomas Kerr, one of Dunwich township's best-known residents, after a brief illness.

She was born in Orford township, Kent county, 69 years ago, but had been a resident of Dunwich for many years. She was a member of Fergie Presbyterian church. Survivors are the husband, one daughter, Jennie, and one son, Thomas, both at home; one brother, Peter C. Gillis; four sisters, Mrs. G. McGugan, Mrs. George P. Molloy, Mrs. Daniel Blue, and Miss Annie Gillis, all of Dunwich. The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon. Interment will be made at Fairview cemetery.

MOTOR "MUSHING" IN BANFF SNOW DRIFTS.

Bucking immense drifts hurling the snow thirty-five feet into the air and dashing right on to its destination, one of the new Studebaker Standard Six Duplex Phaetons gave Banff a new idea of the power, the stamina and the road worthiness of these cars.

While moving picture men recorded the feat, unbelievable accomplishments were reeled off by the powerful car which, as a dramatic illustration, was purposely rammed into the side of a great hill of snow, turned over onto its top and, when righted, ran off as though nothing had happened, unharmed, save for a bent visor and one rear quarter window broken.

The Studebaker Duplex, in its unflinching smash through great banks of snow demonstrated more clearly than any words could have told the year-round usefulness of the motor car that is built right.

At times the car itself was entirely hidden from view by flying clouds and hummocks where drifts had been ripped apart by its onrush and a road was broken through where only a few years ago traffic with an automobile would have been thought out of the question.

SAFE AND EFFICIENT HOME TREATMENT

Thousands of Ailing People Have Been Made Well and Strong by

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

They Give New Vitality—and more.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do one thing—and do it well. They build up the blood, increasing the number of red corpuscles. As this is done the blood becomes a richer red and is able to carry more oxygen, the great supporter of human life. As the blood improves in quality the tissues of the body are better nourished and the functions of the body are better performed. This is the reason Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been so successful in the treatment of all diseases due to poor, thin blood, why the pills are so successful in building up strength after fevers and acute diseases, and in all cases of anemia and general weakness.

Mrs. S. J. Pitts, Queen street, St. John, N.B., says: "Some years ago, following an attack of typhoid fever, I was left almost a physical wreck. I could not sleep, had no appetite and my nerves were so bad that my limbs shook as though I had palsy. As I was not improving under the use of the doctor's medicine, I decided upon the advice of a friend to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Almost from the first box I could feel an improvement. I continued taking the pills until I had used twelve boxes, when I was again enjoying perfect health. As a precaution I always take one or two boxes every spring to tone up the system, and can truly say they are a wonderful tonic."

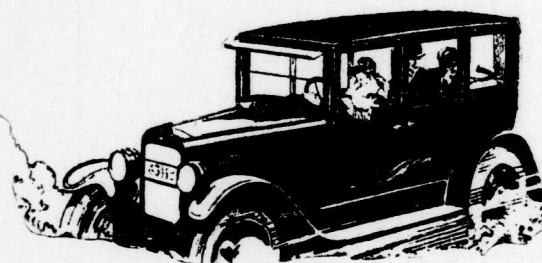

You can get the pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co.
