THE ATASKAN BOUNDARY.

The Alaskan boundary, which se ares British Columbia from the United States, must in the nature of things be the same as that laid down in the treaty of '25' between England and Russia, When the United States pur-chased Alaska from the latter power, she scepped into the shoes of the former owner, being entitled to just what that treaty defined and no more. Unfortuing parties appearing to set much value on the land in question, which had nev er been properly suggested. According-ly, in several instances, it is almost impossible to trace the dividing line from the treaty text. A range of from the treaty text. A range of mountain summits is referred to where no continuous range exists, but only mountain peaks. It is reasonable, however, to suppose that British statesmen, however indifferent to these distant prisessions 74 years ago, would at least have secured an outlet for British terries at the cream and that the treaty chory to the ocean, and that the treaty boundary was then regarded as giving this outlet.

An Angio-American commission has this boundary dispute, but has practically dissolved itself owing to what Si Charles Tupper, from his place in the House, justly stigmatized as the mon-strous and insulting proposition of the United States, that in the event of their consenting to the reference of the delimitation to the arbitration of an in ternational tribunal, no regard should be paid to the fair meaning and presumptive intention of the treaty of '25 but that if it were found that this treaty placed the Americans as usurpers of that portion of the disputed territory of which they have taken possession, this nation of usurpers should be nevertheless confirmed forever in the enjoyment of the land or which they have squatted. In the facof such a monstrous claim the British commissioners could proceed no fur-ther with the discussion, and it was impossible even to patch up a "modu vivendi," a device which, as in the seal fishery and French shore disputes, has mided to tide over a period of acute Newfoundland were to tresspass on the friction, and to give time for cool second thoughts and preparations for computers.

On one most important point we are wholly with him. The Alaskan boundary line should be defined conventionally by compass. In only one way can a true and perfect boundary line be delimited and that is astronomically by lines running from one point of such and such latitude and longitude to another. Thus absolute accuracy is obtained and future disputing impossible. The soldier gives place to the diplomatist and the diplomatist to the surveyor. PREPARING AN ALIBL

The Scheme Was Quite Ingentess, but it Didn't Work.

"One evening some years ago," said a New Orleans drugsist who had been reminded of a story. "I was standing behind the counter, just as I am now, when I saw a man slip in very quietly at the side door and stop in the rear of that tall case full of fancy goods. I walked over at once and asked him what I could do for him, and it was at least half a minute before he replied. "You don't seem very keen for trade, he said at fength, and he spoke in a curious gasping voice, like a man out of breath. "I've been waiting here,' he said, 'for a guarter of an hour.'

"Now, I was positive that he had just come in, but it is always unwise to contradict a customer, so I made no remark. I want you to put me up some quinine capsules,' he went on, 'and be quick about it, for I have an engagement at $30 o'clock.' I looked at my. watch and told him he had 20 minutes to spare. It was then exactly $3.0. 'All right,' he said, and I went for the quinine. I handed him the package a few moments later, and, as he reached for it, he upset a tall vase on the counter and broke it all to pieces. It was the clumsiest thing I ever saw, and had any possible motive been apparent I would have sworn he did it on purpose. But he cursed like a pirate and, after much grumbling, paid the bill, which was $3, and went away, and I never saw him again.

"Next morning I read in the paper that a murder had been committed in a house, as a clock the pravious arraing. I gara it no special thought, but something like smonth later I received a visit from a law-yer, whe told me that he represented a certain man who was under suspicion for this very murder and who expected daily to be placed under kirest. 'My client is not guilty, he continued, and at the time of the crime was nowhere near the house. As nearly as he remembers, he was in the store, making some trifling purchase. He recalls it, because he accidentally broke a vase. Do you remember the circunstance? I did instantly, and of a sud

How Four Poker Hands Were Held All Night In the Dark.

All Night In the Dark.

A soldier tells this poker story, which indidentally accentuates the distrust with which poker players regard one another "when friendship ceases" and the faith a map has in the hand he holds:

One night after taps four men gathered in a tent to do away with their pay. It was the night of pay day, and there was no convenient place in which to spend their money except over cards.

The game had gone on with varying fortune here and there. It was after midnight. The sentry was a chum and had been told not to see the light in the tent. At last a jackpot was on the board and had been "sweetened" until it was very tempting. Every one was in it, and it was worth before the open about $20. When one of the players opened it, every one staid and drew cards.

The edge had a full house, the next man four jens, the third man four queens and the dealer four aces. The opener threw a dollar into the pot. The next man raised, and it was raised and reraised until it was beautiful to see.

At this point there was a scurry of footsteps outside. The sentry rushed in, grasped the lantern and dashed it out, jerking and extinguishing it as he did so. As he disappeared he whispered hoarsely:

"Officer!"

Instinctively four hands went out in

Instinctively four hands went out in

Instinctively four hands went out in the darkness and spread themselves over the pot, while four other hands closely clutched five cards each.
"Hold on, fellows," whispered the deal-er. "Every one take his hand off the table and keep it off until the light comes backs, We'll just sit here and surse our cards. My hand's good enough to wait for."

cards. My hand's good enough to wait for."
"So's mine," said the others.
Then they waited. Slowly the night passed, growing chillier and more chill in its going. The sentry was cursed, the officer was cursed, but still they sat. At tast the first glimpse of gray appeared in the sky, and as soon as it grew light enough the four played their hands and tumbled in for a few minutes' sleep before the bugle called them out again.—

Handsome Carpet is a Thing Beauty in Its Place But its Place is not in a Single Man's Bed-room in a Farm House

room in a Farm House

"If a new house is to be furnished, or an old one refurnished, and the house-mother is thinking of buying an ingrain carpet or making a carpet for the sleeping-room, here is a bit of advice—don't, writes Mrs. John B. Sims, in an article on "The Sleeping-Room on the Farm," in the Ladice' Home Journal. "A handsome carpet is a thing of beauty in its place, but its place is not in the farmhouse we are furnishing. The sleeping-room should be cool in summer, diry always and easy to keep so, as free from dust as possible, and restful to look at it can be all of these if a little thought be judiciously mixed with the planning of it. One very pleasant room I have in mind is in the home of a bachelor man. The floor is bare of covering with the exception of two home-made rugs; the hard pine narrow-board floor has been coiled until it has acquired a rich brown tint; the bod, dresser and smashstand are of walnut; a divan covered with cotten drapery of a harmonizing color, an arm-chair and an old-fashioned rocker complete the furnishing. A few good pictures are on the walls. It is always the picture of neatness, and is easily kept so, probably because of the simple arrangement of its furniture. The large wardrobe opening from it will bear constant inspection, and could give a lesson in neatness to anyone."

and Alcohol.

The unsightly white marks on tables caused by standing toe hot dishes upon them may be removed by the application of a little paraffin rubbed on them with a piece of fiannel. Afterward polish with alcohol.

To remove stains from linen rub them on either side with yellow soap, and then apply starch made into a paste with cold water. Rub this pasts well into the stains and then put the cloth to hang out in the open air—if possible in the sun—for some hours. After it has been washed in the erdinary way the stains will-have disappeared.

To clean enamelied saucepans: Dissolve half a teaspoonful of chloride of lime in a saucepan of water and boil till all the stain is removed.

OLONEL WILLOUGHBY-VERNER AFTER EGGS of Carmarthenshire and the eggs of guil-lemots, gulls and cormorants from the sides of apparently inaccessible cliffs and rocks in all parts of the world.

The collection of eggs in the possession of the gallant officer is the finest in the world. He has been collecting them since he was a boy, and the cliff does not exist that he will not descend, no matter how much the laws of gravitation must be defied, provided the effort promises the addition of some rare specimen to his fine collection. The accompanying picture will give some idea of how the colonel wash if they are first rubbed over with a little liquid ammonia.

Use soapy water for making starch. The linen will have a glossier appearance and the irea will not be so apt to stick. To grind old scissors at home saw the blade on the neck of a glass bottle, as if you were suying to saw that parts off. In a short time the scissors will be quite sharp.

To whiten the kitchen table: Spread it all over with a thin pasts of chloride of lime and hot water; leave on all night, and in the morning wash off.

To remove iren rust from marble: Use a solution of one quart of nitric acid in 155 parts of water. Apply to the spote anly, then rinse with water and ammonia.

The housewife whe wishes to buy eggs when they are cheap and preserve them for future uses will do well to follow these directions: Mix equal portions of unsiaked lime and sail. Put a good layer of this minture in a deep lox, then a layer of eggs far apart from each other, and standing on end (broad end up). Continue with alternate layers of eggs far part from each other, and the mixture until the box is filled, which is then fastened. Properly packed they will easily keep for a year.

that has been let down over the cliff, with my camers on my back, I go down the face of the rock in a walking attitude, the assistant letting out the rope as I want it. I have to pay particular attention to the condition of the rock with which the rope is liable to come in contract, as it would be fatal should the rope fray and break while I am walking backward down the face of a cliff with no other support than the friendly cord. "The taking of the photograph depends on the situation of the nest. If the nest is na and coughed it began to use and coughed it began to use ery for Consumpt." It even if it cost is an all rape projecting ledge, the work is easy. If it is in a fissure or a very small projecture it will take hours sometimes to arrange the camera so as to get a good photograph, and this work while swaying on the end of a rope is the reverse of pleasant. The life of the climb-ry cured me. It teven if it cost the name of a rope is the rope from above. I was descending a cliff at one time. Happening to look up. I saw that the attendant was conversing with a friend, while the rope was left to run out itself. It had gradually worked fits way to the top of the crowbar and in another instant would have slipped off altogether. I yelled to the man, and by a quick jump and lightninglike work he managed to save the rope from alipping off and leaving me to slide to death down the cliff wide."

The daring collector has had many narrow escapes. One of the narrowest he describes as follows: "I was looking for neets in one of the highest parts of the rock of Gibraltar and, by removing my shoes, had managed to scramble along the face of a rock that was not far from the perpendicular. I was cautiously approaching the nest of a vulture that I had seen in the crack of the rock, when just as I was about to seize the eggs a vulture of enormous size few out of the fisure in which they lay. She made no attempt to attack me, and I may say here that I have found very few birds anxious to make a fight for their news. The isk to Order Your New Suit and Overcoat

POCKETS IN JAPAN

The Advance of Civilization Mark ed the Adoption of Them.

The People of That Country Have Six Eight Pockets Cunningly Inserted in Their Wide Sleeves

Perhaps the best proof of the advance of the Japanese in civilization is to be found in shelr use of pockets, says The New York Evening Post. The people of that country have usually air or eight pookets cunningly inserted in the ouffs of their wide sleeves. These pockets are always filled with a curious miscellany. As common as the twine in the pockets of young Americans is the prayer amules, written on sheets of rice paper and composed by the bonzes. In accordance with their "sith, these amulets are swallewed like a pill in cases of mental er physical distress. Another essential seldom missing is a number of small squares of silky paper. These are put to unexpected uses, such as to hold the stem of a lily or lottus, to dry a teacup or to wipe away a toar. Among the Chinese and other nations a pouch is used, instead of a pocket. This was also the case in western Europe in the Middle Ages, and for some time afterward. The pouch was attached to the girdle, along with a dagger and rosary. It was called an aulmoniaer or gipoiers. It was often ornamented with curious patterns, gold and silk threads, coats of arms and religious sentences. A dramastis of the time of Henry VIII. wrote:

From my girdle he plucked my pouch;

By your leave he left ime never a penny. By your leave he left ime never a penny. Breeches, however, had pockets at an early date. In an old play, wristen about 1611, it is mentioned that a man had his breeches plaited as if they had 30 pockets. But pockets did not attain their proper position until the adoption of the inodern style of men's garments With waistoosts, a great opportunity for pockets presented itself. Later they were made very broad and deep, and were corred with embroidery and buttons. In the reign of George III, waistoost pockets reached such a size in England that they became objects of ridicule, so that they soon began to resume more moderate proportions.

Although the wayfarer may not perceive that there is any special natural demand to distinction in this village, nevertheless it requires but the mention of the wonderful word Morpeth to cry out, "Why I have heard of that place. It was there that Mr. So-and-so, one of the most prominent grocers in our city, was forn and lived out his boyhood." Or else the man says, "Why that is where Dr. Suchand-such, our most illustrious doctor, fived in childhood's days," or if the speaker is from a 'Varsity town he will say, "Oh, I know that place well, I have often heard the professor tell of the times he had as a boy in Morpeth." not perceive that there is any special

On Wednerday evening the village presented a very animated appearance and there were gathered there illustrious persons who are proud to call their home old Morpeth, that pretty little village on the Taibot road with its white walled church and memerable baildings. Canada, from the western plains to busy eastern cities, was represented and the distant lands of the United States either sent their regrets or else a representative. MENLO PARK WIZARD SAYS SCIENCE PROVES THERE IS A GOD.

Intelligence," His Later Conclusion to Questions Asked Draws From Rev. P. S. Henson, Who Interviewed Him, Legical Retort.

After, 19 and more

there is a oig engineer which in inverse.

Why, after years of watching the processes of nature. I no more doubt the existence of an intelligence that is running things than I do the existence of myself!

Take, for example, the substance water that forms the crystal known as ice.

Now, there are hundreds of combinations that form crystals and everyone of them, save that of ice, sinks in water. Ice, I say, doesn't. And it is rather lucky for us mortals, for if it had done so we would all be dead. Why? Simply because if ice sank to the bottom of the rivers, lakes and oceans as fast as it froze these places would soon be frozen up and there would be no water left. That its only one example out of thousands that to me prove beyond the possibility of a doubt that some vast Intelligence is governing this and the other planets."

"What else does nature tell you about the Supreme Intelligence;"

"Nothing more," said Edison, shaking his head. "That's all I can seed. Some other person may come along by and by and discover other—attributes nature teaches about this Beings But intelligence is all my research has revealed. Indeed, the scientist of the future may make nature tell us as much about this intelligence as the Bible professes to reveal."

"Would you not call this intelligence the Creator?" was asked.
"No," said he quizzically; "now you are leaving science and getting into the meshes of logic. Nature doesn't spell creator for me, though it does spell mind."

graduating as thirty-fifth wrangler and third class in classics. Yet he won the mile and two-mile races for his varsity. In 1868 he was called to the bar of Lincoln's Inn, and ten years later he became Q.C. Although Sir Richard's forte in practice is patent law, he is an eloquent barrister. His great scientific knowledge, which has made most of his income, does not interfere with his profound information concerning international law or his real value as a member of polite society. Sir Richard is an old hand in the Behring Sea dispute and, withal, one of the most devoted students of constitutional law in Great Britain. He is 57 years old, and was created a knight in 1893.

mesnes of logic. Nature doesn't spell creator for me, though it does spell mind."

"Do you believe this Supreme Intelligence hears and answers prayer."

"No, sir!" said the inventor with emphasis. "It's an insult to the wisdom of the engineer to ask him to do this or that as though you know better how to run things than he does. He is big enough to need no advice from us little bables.
"Besides," continued be, warmly, "law, absolute law, holds everything in its grip like a vise. Just as certain combinations of chemicals harmonize, and others when brought into contact result in an explosion, so if we obey the laws that rule the world we will be happy, and if we don't we are liable to get hurt," said Edison, smiling grimly.

"The world is run just like a great railroad—only better. Here the system of rules is so porfect that the president can go off on a vacation whenever he feels like it and all trains will run along as smoothly as ever. Do you suppose the Intelligence in charge of the universe, with its billions of flying planets, has time or inclination to be at the beck and call of every Tom, Dick and Harry that happens to stub his toe against one of the eternal laws and wants the law altered to suit his selfish convenience? No, sir!"

"Do you believe in a future life?" was

No, sir!"
"Do you believe in a future life?" was "Do you believe in a future life was asked.
"I don't know anything about this life, to say nothing of the life hereafter. What are we here for? Who knows? I don't," said the inventor, turning suddenly around and peering into my face with a look of sympathy and sadness. "Are you happy? Well, most people are not. Many are sick; nearly all are miserable from some trouble or other. If I could solve the riddle of this life I might have some ideas about the next. Oh, Idon't know!" he said meditatively, half closing his eyes and leaning on a bench in the laboratory. "I know something about science—about steam and iron and dectricity—but this matter of destiny; why we came here and where we are going to is beyond my ken."

my ken. It is a pity for so hopeful a beginning as Mr. Edison makes in his interview to hand in so "lame and impotent a conclusion."

as Mr. Edison makes in his interview to hand in so "lame and impotent a conclusion."

He says: "It is an insult to the wisdom of the engineer to ask him to de this or that, as though you knew better how to run things than he does. He is big enough not to need advice froif us little babus." I answer, it is not an insult to ask him for things if he has specially directed us as his children to do it. It is mot for us to "advise" him, but to request him, and it is not a vain thing to pray to him if he has conditioned his giving upon our asking. The real trouble with Mr. Edison crops out in his next uterance when he says: "Law—absolute law—holds everything in its grip like a vise."

This is sad indication of that materialistic tendency, which is only too common among scientists to deity law and outlaw the disty. The supposition seems to be that law does everything and from it there is ne escape. Fire will burn and water will flow and poison will kill. Like seases under like circumstances will produce like results, and against this inevitable and, incrorable sequence it is of ne use to play. Now, I have only te say that a law never did anything since the world began and never will till the world shall end. What we call the laws of sature are only God's uniform ways of and desirable end would be subserved by such departure. Mr. Edison concedes that it has been done in the matter of the formation of ice, and why might it not be in any other matter if the Lord so picased? Mr. Edison declares that "the world is run just as a great railroad, only better. Here the system of rules is so per-fect that the president can go off on a vacation whenever be feels like, and all trains will run along as smoothly as over." The Young Woman was a Super latively Feminine Creature trains will run along as smoothly as ever.

Here Mr. Edison changes the figure and rejectents the Almighty not as an engineer, but as a president. We insist that he sticks to his first representation and following it. I wish to say that it would be a very bad thing for the train and for the passengers if the engineer should suddenly go off on a vacation and leave the rules to run things. Nobody but the Lord can run this world, not even Mr. Edison declares that "the intelligence" (he seems to be very careful not to call him God) "in charge of the universe has neither time not, inclination to be at the book and call of every Tom. Dick and Harry."

We believe that the famous electrician who has given us this interview has children, whether many or few we do not know. We may call them Tom, Dick and Harry, if you please. Now, Mr. Edison is a very famous man and very much occupied with great affairs, but we venture the assertion that in the case of his Tom, Dick and Harry, no matter how busy he might be with startling experiments in his laboratory, he would not be lacking in time or inclination to beat them in case of their uttering any cry of distress. And is not God a father? And we solemily protest that he does not know him who thus denies his ability to help or his disposition to hear when his children cry unto him.—P. S. Henson.

SIR RICHARD WEBSTER. Here Mr. Edison changes the figure and respectats the Almighty not as an engineer, but as a president. We insist that he sticks to his first representation and, following it. I wish to say that it would be a very bad thing for the train and for the passengers if the engineer should suddenly go off on a vacation and leave the rules to run things. Nobody but the Lord can run this world, not even Mr. Edison, with all the rules to help-him.

"She does not live here. She is my neighbor."

"Why is she in this room and in your bed?"

"Well, lady, you see I have a window and a bit of carpet, and I invited her to come because I thought it would be a decenter place to be born in than her house is and it was for the sake of the baby I did it."

The reformer apologized for her call and hurried out of the presence of a greatness of soul which was a revelation she is not likely to forget.

Miss Sarah Burks has grown brown and rugged in her service as Uncle Sam's mail carrier in one of his most unfavorable regions in Arizona, says the San Francisco Call.

"The most memorable experience I ever had," says she, "was last August—one day when the mercury must have been at about 115 in the shade, if, indeed, any shade could have been found in the region. I was jogging slowly over the spur of the Red mountains and was passing through a shallow gulch among bowlders of lava and other forbidding, things in this dreadful desert waste, when I heard a groan. Even my horse was startled at the sound, and he stood stark still. One goes for a whole day there time and again without seeing a living creature except an occasional bird or without hearing a sound of any kind except by himself. hot sunshine was kept out of his eyes. It may seem very little to do for a person in that horrible condition, but it was all I-could do. It even seemed to me then a pitifully small service. I sopped a corner of a rag in a tin cup of water and washed as beat I, could the wounds about the man's face. That gave him some relief and kept the flies away.

"He managed to tell me that he and his dead comrade had had a war of words on their trail across the mountains. They were evidently abandoned, half civilized beings. I did not hear what they had a row about. The dead man attacked his comrade with a pistol when the other could not reach for his own pistol quick enough to shoot back.

"Instead the attacked Mexican drew his bowie knife, and the two men clitched in a mortal embrace. Each man held to the other with a powerful grip and neither gave nor asked quarter until one of them was killed. While the attacking man pressed his pistol against his antagonist's body and discharged every cartridge in it into the man the latter drove his bowie-knife again and again into his antagonist. The knife did its mortal work quickest, but the seven pistol balls in the other man brought death a half hour after I reached there, and the shoot ing had probably occurred even five hours before I came riding along that way.

"When the Mexican died, I mounted my horse and, hot as it was, went galloping over toward Jimtown, where I teld that evening of the bloody scene I had come upon that day. A constable started back at once over the trail."
