Over 5000 Colored People Celebrated At Windsor Yesterday Afternoon

Windsor, August 2.—(Special).—Emancipation Day was once more observed with the time-honored celebration at Sandwich yesterday. The colored element of the city were out in full force early in the morning to welcome the crowds of excursionists from Ohio, Springfield, Va., Virginia, Chatham, Lansing, Amherstburg, Ypsilanti and Harrow. There were upwards of 5,000 people in Lagoon Park yesterday afternoon.

The procession in the morning was headed by the Eureka band, with A. W. Riley, formerly a star bill player here, as drum major. He wore full regimentals, and was probably the proudest man that walked in line. There was also a band from Ann Arbor to help out in the music line when the Detroit boys grew tired. Rev. A. W. Hackley was chairman, Stephen Haynes acted as overseer, David Howard looked after money affairs in his capacity as treasurer, while Joe Wright discharged the office of secretary.

There was a merry time at the park all afternoon. Crowds arrived on every car and joined in the general good time provided by the management. Chicken and watermelon abounded on every provision table. Addresses were made by Rev. Speaker Sutherland, Mayor Wigle, Mayor Massey, Mayor White, Delos Davis, Rev. A. W. Hackley and others.

The program of sports included foot races, baseball match and the usual event of climbing the greasy pole.

A sack of flour was offered for the largest family on the grounds.

Last evening there was a banquet and dance at the Curling Rink in Windsor. The "grand march" began at 9 o'clock. Prizes were offered for the best-dressed couple.

Col. Sam Holmes Argues Labor Question and Equine Runs Away

Clint Northwood and Col. Sam. Holmes met in Mounteer and Eaton's butcher shop on William street this morning, and before long got into an argument in which the labor problem figured.

Clint thought the working man should have shorter hours and more pay, while the Colonel believed that the working men had already too big a snap and were drawing too much pay.

The Colonel waxed warm, and said that he knew from personal experience how hard it was to get men to do a little overtime work. He said that farm hands quit their work at five or six o'clock, and that they refuse to do anything but spin yarns from that time on. Clint thought that they had a perfect right to do so, and this made the Colonel all the more demonstrative.

Just then a loud clatter of hoofs was heard outside, and on going to the door, the Colonel's horse was seen disappearing in the distance, wildly switching his tail and setting like a veritable second Maud, while above him hung a small cloud of very hungry flies.

"Gee darn it," said the Colonel. "If you'd get a net for that horse so he wouldn't have the flies bother himself, then you wouldn't have to work overtime tryin' to catch 'em," was the observation made by one of the Merrill corner philosophers, and he removed his inverted clay dab and chuckled in his scraggly beard as though he thought he really got off a good one.

TRIBUTE TO LOVED ONE

In the obituary notices in the current number of the Christian Guardian, under the heading "Our Dead," the following appears:

"Shambhau—From their summer home in Port Lambton, Claire, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Shambhau, passed to her heavenly home, August 16, 1905, in her nineteenth year. She first publicly confessed Christ in special services being conducted by Revs. Grosvenor and Hunter in her home church, Wallaceburg. When that church organized a mission circle she was eager to join, although unable to attend. Her young friends named their society 'The Claire Circle' in her honor. Her young life was marked by wisdom and sympathy much beyond those of her years. Being of an affectionate nature, her sole regret was leaving her loved ones here, but as the days passed she caught glimpses of the glory beyond, and sweetly resigned her will. During the year of her affliction, attended with much weakness, she maintained a patient, cheerful spirit. She passed peacefully to rest. M. A. B."

RAILWAY STRIKE
Ontario Railway Commissioners Are Investigating the Cause.
London, Aug. 2.—The Ontario railway commissioners met here yesterday at 2 p. m. to hear evidence regarding the cause of the Street Railway strike. The Street Railway Co. was represented by L. F. Hallmuth, K. C., Toronto, and the strikers by T. S. Ebery, London.

The evidence of many strikers was taken, all tending to show that the dismissal of the employees that precipitated the strike was due to the fact that they belonged to the union.

Some of the witnesses said they had no grievance against the company and had gone out on strike only in sympathy with their fellows. The impression was left by the witnesses that they had no love for Superintendent Whitaker, whose antipathy towards the union and spying upon the employees have made him an object of aversion to the unionists.

The enquiry was not finished yesterday, and will be resumed to-day at 10 a. m.

VARICOCELE CURED

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT. Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on a double varicocele. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope, but I decided to try the New Method Treatment. I consulted all the doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Dr. Kennedy and Kergan, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were genuine and skillful. He wrote them and got the New Method Treatment for me. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."

"The Whyness of The Whenceness"

Hon. Antimony Johnson of Alabama Addresses the Limekiln Club and Makes a Favorable Impression.

[Copyright, 1906, by C. J. Hirt.]

At the last regular Saturday night meeting of the Limekiln club Brother Gardner announced that the Hon. Antimony Johnson of Alabama was in the afternoon and would deliver an address on "The Whyness of the Whenceness" and would afterward make application for membership.

The stranger, it was explained, was called the colored philosopher of the south, and many of his wise sayings had been given to the world in print. Two more kerosene lamps were ordered lighted, the dogs driven out from behind the stove, and Samuel Shih was informed that his bronchial cough must either be suppressed or turned out of doors. The reception committee then proceeded to the anteroom and escorted the orator in.

The Hon. Johnson appeared to be a man about forty years old. He was wide between the eyes, baldheaded, and his toes turned in. He was a one story man, built on the pattern of a cake of artificial ice—the same breadth all the way up and down—and his serious look showed that he had delved deep into the mysteries of life. As he made his bow to the audience he had a closed umbrella in his left hand, while his right was laid on his heart. The impression he made was rather favorable, though Giveadam Jones whispered to Shindig Watkins that his entire crop of cucumbers last year was stolen by just such a man.

"Outdoors tonight," suddenly began the philosopher, "dar am moonlight. Why? Why ain't it dark as a black dawg under de wood shed? What am de moon composed of? What was it hung in de heavens for? What does it do go to when it comes an' whar does it go to when it goes? If de moon am a good thing, why not have it all de time instead of only half? If it don't amount to shucks, why have it at all? Did you eber stop to ax yourselves dese questions, or have you stop around on de fence an' taken no interest in de mysteries around you?"

While most of the members of the club were confessing to themselves that they had not attended to the moon business with any great vigor, the speaker drew a long breath and continued:

"You wake up some night out of a sound sleep. All am quiet. You can't say what disturbed your slumbers. You git outer bed. You don't know why you do, but out you git. You go to de doah an' look up an' down. All am as still as de grave. De ole woman, de chillen an' de dawgs continue to sleep on, but you put on your clothes an' step out into de night."

"You don't know what for nor whither you am goin', but de fust thing you know you have walked a mile, climbed ober a fence, selected de biggest water-mill in de patch and am on your way home ag'in. How does de howness of de whicness come about? Why do you eat half dat million befo' wakine de family up? Why didn't you go de odder way an' sit on de church steps instead of toward de million patch?"

There were suppressed exclamations of "Yum! Yum!" among the old veterans in the audience, but they also shook their heads in a puzzled way and whispered to each other that Mr. Johnson was too deep for them.

"A few evenings ago, down in Alabama," said the orator, as he got a better hold on the platform with his toes, "I sot in my study thinkin' things over. Not a mouse stirred. De world slept. Of der de bed sighed. De world slept. I taken out of dis sphere an' transported into another. It was a slumberous, pleasant feelin', an' I gave up to it. "After an hour had passed I awoke. I was out in de kitchen takin' off my muddy shoes. A bag lay at my feet and I lifted it and emptied its contents out on de floor. Dar was four fat hens. I can't be suah jest whar took place when I was in de state spoken of, but it's my belief dat I went up de alley four blocks, climbed ober a fence and broke open a white man's hencoop. "Of co'se I had de old woman make pottle of de chickens, but will some of you tell me how de whyness of de whenceness came about? Had a policeman found me wid dat bag on my shoulder should I have been held legally responsible?"

The consensus of opinion seemed to be that he shouldn't, and when the orator was satisfied as to this he went on:

"What am lub? You pass 10,000 women and gib none of 'em a second look. You don't keer a copper whether dey am old or young, good lookin' or homely. All of a sudden you meet your fate. You come face to face wid a woman who gibs you a look and a smile, and a crowbar seems to jab you to de heart. You foller her. You find out who she am. You call and tell her dat you can't lib widout her. In a week or so you are married, and you find she has seven hundred dollars in de savings bank? What about de whenceness of de whattness? Why did you do it? Why didn't you git on a freight train and beat your way down to de New Orleans races instead?"

"You am sittin' on de fence of a summer's mawin', jest as you have sot a thousand times befo'. You am wishin' your ticket in de lottery would strike a prize of a million dollars, jest as you have wishin' de million times befo'. De flour and de 'aters and bacon am out, and de ole woman needs shoes. You am wonderin' if it hurts much to eat 'nuff baked possum to kill you when a lightning rod man drives up and offers you a job at one hundred per month and pays fifty in advance."

"Who or what sent dat man dere? Why didn't he take another road? Why didn't his wagon break down befo' it got to you? Why wasn't you in de back yard jawin' wid de ole woman?"

We kin all see de whyness of de whenceness, but what subtle power bring it about? "Last year," continued the orator, after moistening his lips with two glasses of cider from the pitcher, "I was in jail in my native state. I was out in de woods studyin' de habits of de razorbacked hawg when a constable came along and gathered me in. I was sent to jail for thirty days. It was claimed dat I had run dat hawg so fur and so fast dat he had dropped dead. After I had spent ten days in jail, and one night when I was sittin' and thinkin' of de millions and millions of men who had returned to dust, a voice whispered in my ear, 'Try de windin'!"

"Dar was nobody but me in de jail. De voice could have come from no livin' person. Why should I try de windin' instead of de doah? Why should I try anything? I did, however. I walked ober and tried de bars of de windin' and found 'em loose, and ten minutes later I was free. In gwine down de street I picked up a wallet wid $200 in it, and I reached de depot jest as a train was leavin' fur Montgomery. How do you account for it? Why de whattness of de whyness? Why didn't de roof of de jail cave in and kill me instead?"

"My f'ren's," said Mr. Johnson as he tunked on the floor with his umbrella to emphasize his words, "I don't say dat you all should be philosophers, kase de real philosopher am bo'n to de business and can't be a success widout, but I am axin' you to pay mo' attention to de things of life. Study into de whyness of de whenceness."

"You have jest passed a mewl standin' hitched to a post. You have passed in safety. De person behind you am a fat woman. De mewl kicks out and lands her ten feet away. Why?"

"You go to a grocer to whom you are in debt and order half a pound of tea. He smiles and puts it up for you. De very next day you go back to de very same man and order half a pound of coffee, and he says he'll be hanged if you kin have it. Why?"

"What brings about de whicness of de whenceness?"

"Think, ponder and study and don't let these things git de best of you all de time. And now, thankin' you fur your metriculous and alluvial attentness and hopin' to be one of you ere long, I make my bow and respectfully wish you farewell."

Employee Lashed With Rawhide and Run Down by Bloodhounds.

Pensacola, Fla., Aug. 1.—The preliminary trial of Robt. Gallagher, book superintendent, and J. Porter, wood-keeper, for the Jackson Lumber Co., at Lockhart, Ala., on the charge of peonage, was begun Monday before U. S. Commissioner Marsh.

Harry Lyman, of New York, made oath that he had been given twenty lashes with a rawhide for attempting to get away after having been run down with bloodhounds, and an additional twenty because he would not plead for mercy.

WEARING AWAY YOUR LUNGS?

Yes, and your strength, too! If you coughing, and get rid of that cough. The one remedy is Catarrhoxone, which goes to the diseased tissues along with the air you breathe. It can't fail to reach the source of the trouble, it's bound to kill the germ, and as for healing up the sore places, nothing can surpass Catarrhoxone. If you don't get instant relief and a cure you will at least get back your money for Catarrhoxone. It is guaranteed to cure catarrh in any part of the system. You run no risk—therefore use Catarrhoxone—at our expense if not satisfied.

Found Dead In Bed.

Belleville, Aug. 1.—E. W. Meyers, aged 68 years, was found dead in bed yesterday morning at the residence of his sister, Mrs. John N. Lander. The deceased was a great-grandson of Capt. Meyers, who founded the city. He was county jailer for twenty-five years, and was a highly-respected resident.

The Northwest Harvest.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 1.—The oat harvest is pretty general throughout the three provinces. The yield is above the average. Some wheat cutting commenced in Manitoba yesterday. Next week it will be quite general. The most serious feature is absence of farm labor.

YOU MELANCHOLY WOMEN.

Can't even sleep—restless day and night—brooding over imaginary troubles all the time. The cause isn't in the brain, but in the blood, which is thin and inaurdious. Do the right thing now and you'll be cured quickly. Just take Ferrozone; it turns everything you eat into nourishment, consequently blood containing lots of iron and oxygen is formed. Ferrozone makes flesh, muscles, nerve-strengthens in a week, cures very quickly. You'll live longer, feel brighter, be free from melancholy if you use Ferrozone. Fifty cents buys a box of this good tonic—fifty chocolate coated tablets in every box—at all dealers.

Commerce and Literature.

"Do you think that a commercial career is to be compared to a literary career?" asked the high browed and melancholy youth.

"My boy," said Mr. Cumrox, "in business you can write your name on a piece of paper no bigger than a postal card and make it worth thousands of dollars. In literature you can write up reams of paper without making it worth 50 cents."

WIRE WOUNDS.

My mare, very variable one, was badly bruised and cut by being caught in a wire fence. Some of the wounds would not heal, although I tried many different medicines. Dr. Bell advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT, diluted at first, then stronger as the sores began to look better, until after three weeks the sores have healed and best of all, the hair is growing well, and is NOT WHITE as is most always the case in horse wounds.

BLACKNESS.

"Chevreul's Black," Which is Blacker Than Black Velvet.

A simple experiment is one on blackness. You know that no paint or any other substance in the world is perfectly black, but there is a way to make a figure appear so that it will look blacker even than black velvet.

Paint the inside of a pasteboard box black or cover it with dead black cloth. In the lid of the box make a hole, being careful not to make it larger than one-tenth of the surface of the lid. If now you hold the box so that the light will not strike the hole directly and look through the hole into the box the hole will appear intensely black.

Make the hole in the form of a design or an imp or a brownie, and even if you paint the lid black, when you look through the hole you will see the figure darker than the dark background.

The black produced by this method is called "Chevreul's black" after the Frenchman who invented it.

BIRD CITIES.

Many Places That Have Feathered Inhabitants Only.

All along the coast of the Atlantic ocean are little cities inhabited by birds alone. Gardeners island, at the extremity of Long Island, is the place where the fish hawks come during their breeding time, and owing to the friendly attitude of the family on the island the ospreys have become very tame, and build their nests upon the ground instead of in the high trees.

In the Indian river, Florida, is a small island called Pelican island. It received its name through being one of the favorite settlements for the pelicans during their nesting season.

Away up in the mouth of the St. Lawrence river is the famous Bird rock. "The greatest bird tenement house in the world," as one naturalist expresses it. This rock rises abruptly from the water, and in its formidable cliffs thousands of northern sea birds dwell—the snowy feathered gannets.

On the crest of this rock rises a lighthouse, whose keeper is on the best of terms with his countless feathered neighbors.

These bird cities, or settlements, are under the protection of the American Ornithological union.

Apparent and Presumptive.

There is a good deal of misapprehension as to the difference in the meaning of the two terms, heir apparent and heir presumptive, as used in royal families. The heir apparent must succeed to the throne or the dignity, whatever it may be, if he survive the present holder, while the heir presumptive, although he is the heir at the moment, may have his right to the succession nullified by the birth of another heir. In England, for instance, the Prince of Wales is always the heir apparent to the throne. Should there not be a prince of Wales—that is, should the reigning monarch not have any sons—the nearest heir in the legitimate succession becomes the heir presumptive, or his or her right being always subject to nullification by the birth of a direct heir to the monarch.

An Amusing Experiment.

A simple kaleidoscope may be made by any boy or girl by taking a straight lamp chimney—an ordinary one is best—and painting the outside of it black. If you make a pinhole in a piece of paper and hold it at one end and look at it through the other it will appear as a number of circles of light. It is the cylindrical surface that reflects and causes this. If now you fasten two pieces of glass at one end of the chimney, placing between them beads and bright colored bits of glass so that they may move as you turn the chimney you will have as good a kaleidoscope as you would care to buy.

Generous.

A little three-year-old, whose mother was mixing a simple cough medicine for him, watched her curiously and asked if it was good. He was permitted to taste.

"Oh, mamma," he exclaimed, "it's awful good! Let's keep it all for papa."

The Persian Zoo.

Did you ever see a two headed cat? With five legs that are black and blue, and horns like a cow, and elephant's ears. And neck like a mutton stew?

Did you ever see a mouse with wings. Its tail like a kangaroo. Its nose like a couple of scrambled eggs? I often have. Haven't you?

Just lie on the floor near a Persian rug. And the figures that stare at you. Are the strangest animals ever seen. Either in or out of the zoo.

Star Rays.

What causes the rays or pencils of light that seem to be thrown out by every star when seen by the naked eye? A German scientist finds that all stars show precisely the same rays, but that in the case of the brighter stars the rays are fainter and some-what longer. It is further remarked that the rays seen by the left and right eyes differ, and that if the head be turned the rays are rotated in a corresponding manner. It is thus concluded that the source of the rays is not in the stars, but in the eye itself, the middle of the retina being not perfectly homogeneous in its sensitiveness.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, it has a tendency to close, and hearing is lost. If left untreated, it may lead to permanent deafness.

By the use of the Eustachian Tube, which is a natural passage for the air, the inflammation can be removed, and hearing restored. This is the only way to cure deafness, and it is the only way to prevent it from becoming permanent.

BY THE "MONKEY" DRILL

Copyright, 1906, by Ruby Douglas

"But there isn't room for all seven of us in the wagon box," said Clement when Rex Burgess had invited the party to "pile in."

"Oh, Gormley can ride on the front seat with the driver," Burgess had replied lightly enough, though Gormley felt the undercurrent of malice in his voice, "up near the horses. These gallant cavalymen like to be about horses, you know."

A January thaw had left the clay roads liquid, but a hard freeze following had reduced them to smooth iron, and the rumble of the wagon on the hard surface echoed far through the breathless, glittering cold of the moonlight.

It was the night of the Grangers' party at Merrieth town hall, five miles from Slocum, and a week before Burgess had invited a half dozen young people of Slocum to attend, riding over in his sleigh. The thaw had necessitated the change from sleigh to wagon.

"I wish I hadn't come," I wish I hadn't come," beat incessantly in Gormley's brain to the steady clatter of the horses' feet. "I had no business to do it. Burgess is a boob. He never forgets his money nor remembers his manners. What got into me, I wonder?" and much more of the same sort of self deception, for Gormley knew perfectly well he was braving the nipping cold and Burgess' thrusts. Nothing but sudden death could have kept him away. Sylvia Gerrish was there.

But the joy of being near her was dashed by the thought that Burgess was nearer still—beside her, in fact. To secure that coveted place their host had boldly ordered his rival to the front seat.

Any man with red blood in his veins could scarcely blame Burgess for his maneuvering. The girl was a bewitching little figure, muffled in furs, a coquettish red tam-o'-shanter setting off her piquant face and mischievous eyes. Burgess had never seen her look prettier, and he glowed with satisfaction at his neat disposal. For the drive at least, of his rival.

Meanwhile the sweet tempered Gormley, by nature almost too submissive, was near by being routed. He was lavishing himself in bitterness of spirit. It had always been so. Fate had made him the football of Rex Burgess, even in school days. Burgess was big and brave and handsome, while he was slight and pale faced. The boys had nicknamed Gormley "Molly" because he had once fainted at the sight of blood. Burgess' father was the wealthiest man in Slocum, and every cent of the money would one day belong to Rex, for he was the only child.

Regardless of the merry chatter and the snatches of song from the others, Gormley plunged deeper into his melancholy reflections. He, puny clerk in a dry goods store, to aspire to Sylvia Gerrish's love against one so favored of gods and men as Burgess!

His cheeks burned, too, when he thought of the other's contemptuous reference to "cavalymen." Frankly, he admitted, it was ridiculous that he, "Molly" Gormley, should have martial aspirations. Yet when the state military band had offered Slocum the equipment for a troop of cavalry for the national guard Gormley had been unanimously chosen captain. And he was the man for the place. He could ride. It had always been the sport in which he excelled. He knew the "monkey" drill of the United States cavalry as he knew the alphabet.

They talk of Cossacks and Bedouin Arabs and Indians and the way these savages handle a horse, but the man who follows the yellow gaudin is a little the best horseman of them all. And Captain "Molly" Gormley, Troop A, First cavalry, state troops, rode like a regular warrior in the saddle, barebacked over the hurdles or standing, each foot planted firmly on the back of a galloping horse. Besides the first qualification of a cavalymen he had the other requisite for an officer, the gift of command, and even West Point can't touch that. So despite the fact that his body quailed at the sight of blood Gormley's spirit sang with the notes of the bugle when Troop A, two long straight lines of men and horses moving beautifully in unison, passed in review at camp.

The thought of his creation—he had made Troop A the pride of the national guard in the two years it had been organized—gradually lightened the gloom which had overspread Gormley's spirits. He reflected with considerable comfort that Burgess could not ride well. The big fellow did not understand horses and feared them. The bully in him crept out, too, on horseback. He thought it merely discipline to jerk the head of his mount cruelly and without reason. Burgess was not a member of Troop A. Maybe this fling at "cavalymen" had been due to envy.

Even the possibility that Burgess envied him was blim to Gormley's sore heart. And if he could only plan it so as to sit by Sylvia on the homeward journey now his cup of joy would be full. It was a mighty bound from the depths of despair almost to the pinnacle of bliss in one short half hour, but Gormley was young, and youth has hope for a heritage.

Insensibly the young man was attracted by the beauty of the night. The burnished moon glistened on millions of tiny floating frost crystals until they sparkled like diamond dust. To the westward the black roadway unrolled before them like a velvet ribbon. Beaver creek crossed beneath it a hundred yards away. From the lowland bordering the creek the road had been graded to a height of fifty feet, and the embankment was narrow, steep and dangerous. A railing on each side hedged in the roadway.

Tonight nothing was visible below that railing. A mist, white and soft as cotton wool, rose from the swampy low ground and rolled in noiseless billows to the height of the road. The advance of the clattering wagon and its occupants into this heaving white silence seemed almost uncanny. It was as a sea which might rise and engulf them.

The others were similarly impressed. It would seem, for the talk was somewhat quieter. The team after three miles of brisk movement was getting warmed up and danced spiritedly. The driver took a fresh grip of the reins, for careful work was needed, especially at night, in crossing Beaver creek flats. He pulled strongly to bring the horses to a walk, then lunged backward suddenly. The right rein had broken near his hand.

What followed for the first paralyzed moment was like a scene from a horror dream to Gormley. There was a confusion of shouts and shrieks from the wagon box behind

THE REVOLT IS SPREADING

Rumor That Baltic Fleet Is In Mutiny and Is Running at Large

NEWS IS SUPPRESSED

St. Petersburg, Aug. 2.—(12.15 a.m.)—St. Petersburg is anxiously awaiting news of the outcome of yesterday's battle between the mutineers and the Government forces at Sveaborg. No definite information has been received here, owing to the damage done to the land telegraph wires.

The utmost importance is attached to the conduct of the fleet. According to semi-official intimations, the crews of these vessels still are under the control of their officers, but private advice says that a portion of the crews have been confined below decks for fear of mutiny.

There was a rumor here tonight that four of the ships of the Baltic squadron were in complete mutiny and roaming at large in the Gulf of Finland, and that the commandant at Cronstadt had been notified to be prepared for an attack by these vessels.

It is worthy of note that a despatch to an official agency from Helsinki, announcing the arrival of the fleet of Sveaborg and the fact that it opened fire, does not mention what it opened fire against.

Vice-Admiral Birleff presumably has gone to Helsinki to assume personal command of the fleet.

Spread of Revolt.

The most intense anxiety still prevails with regard to a possible uprising at Cronstadt, and the general spread of the revolt through the entire naval establishment. A visit by the Associated Press to Cronstadt, however, shows that the authorities there received timely warning of the events at Sveaborg, and slipped a possible revolt in the bud. They had the situation well in hand Tuesday night, and quietly placed detachments of infantry at the doors of the marine barracks and removed the carbines from the racks in the buildings.

Yesterday morning the 1,500 sailors, composing the 7th Squadron, quartered at Cronstadt, whose loyalty had been questioned, found themselves prisoners. The correspondent saw them looking out of the windows of their barracks. The streets of Cronstadt are swarming with troops of the loyal guard regiments, and the newly-arrived men of the 24th Division, who serve to overawe the disaffected elements.

Suppress Newspapers.

The commandant at Cronstadt ordered the confiscation of newspapers from St. Petersburg in order to prevent the news of the outbreak at Sveaborg from reaching the islanders.

A group of agitators who went over the Cronstadt in the same boat with the correspondent of the Associated Press attempted to hold meetings and communicate the news of the Sveaborg happenings. They fled before the leveled rifles of the soldiers.

Steam Up On Polestar.

As the correspondent was crossing from Cronstadt to Oranienbaum he saw the imperial yacht, Polestar, lying in the stream with steam up at the pier below the imperial residence at Peterhof.

Is Cronstadt Involved?

Both telegraph and telephone communication with Cronstadt was cut during the night, but no sound of firing has yet been heard. Although it is learned that a summons to revolt was issued there, the chief point now in doubt is whether the main part of the Baltic fleet, consisting of a battleship and three cruisers, which were hurriedly sent from Reval to Helsinki upon receipt of the news of the mutiny at Sveaborg, has joined in the rebellion. The question is understood to be under the personal command of Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch, brother-in-law of Emperor Nicholas.

Mutiny of Sailors.

A telegram claiming to be from the commander of the fortress has been received here, but its meaning is not clear.

The despatch says: "The entire crews of four battleships have mutined."

Other despatches mention the crews of the torpedo boat destroyers and other ships on the spot as revolting, while still another despatch says:

"For a time, with a portion of the crews locked below decks, the loyal members of the crews fired upon the mutineers."

Dismay.

There is no exaggeration in saying that the blow coming thus suddenly from an unexpected quarter has caused dismay in Government circles and the feeling of alarm is increased by the bad news from the interior. The strikes are spreading rapidly. The whole of the Donets basin the centre of the mining and smelting industry, is in the grip of the strikers, 20,000 walking out at Usovka last night, while from the vicerey of the Caucasus comes news that the garrison of Dzhigalar, commanding the famous iron gate at Dorbet, rebelled the news of the dissolution of Parliament by rising, killing their commanding officer, installing themselves and placing their sentinels before the post, telegraph and other Government buildings.

Revolutionists Jubilant.

The revolutionists are widely jubilant. Although the mutiny of Sveaborg occurred unexpectedly, they instantly decided that they must take advantage of it and try immediately to precipitate the general engagement between the Government and the people, for which they have been preparing.

They express the most supreme confidence that the military supports of the Government will break where they are least expected and that the Government will find, when the test comes the army divided against itself, and that units supposed to be loyal will fight on the side of the people.

The workmen's councils here and at Moscow have already issued warnings to the workmen's organizations throughout the country to hold themselves in readiness to strike and the revolutionary military committee is acting with energy. They declare that the crews of the warships at St. Petersburg are ready, and that if the Cronstadt squadron mutinies all the ships in the Baltic will soon be in their hands.

Under Cronstadt's Guns.

The imperial palace at Peterhof is under the guns of the Cronstadt fortresses.

At the Ministry of Marine the report that Admiral Birleff had gone to Helsinki was confirmed.

The Admiralty officials declined to make public the nature of the advice they had received from the scene of the mutiny.

The Rech, in an editorial yesterday does not conceal its gratification at the quick march of events.

Mr. JUSTICE STREET

Passed Away at Health Resort in Thamesville, New Jersey—Interment at London.

Toronto, Aug. 2.—Hon. William Purvis Rochford Street, judge of the Bench Division of the High Court of Justice, died at Thamesville, N. J., yesterday morning. The funeral services will be held in Toronto at 45 Walmer road on Friday next, at 2 o'clock p. m., and the interment will occur at London on Saturday morning.

Sketch of His Life.

The late Justice Street was born in London, on Nov. 13, 1841. He was a son of Wm. Warren Street, who came from Devonshire, England, in 1832. His mother was Frances Mary Leonard, a daughter of Major Leonard, at one time sheriff of the Niagara district.

He was educated at the London Grammar School and graduated from the University of Toronto with the degree of LL.B., receiving the gold medal in law. He was called to the bar in 1864, gazetted a Q. C. in 1883, and elevated to the bench in 1890.

As a judge he was especially distinguished as a chancellor, having devoted the greater part of his life to the equity practice. He was exceedingly courteous to the younger members of the bar, and was popular with all the lawyers who appeared before him.

Long Journey in Open Boat.

In 1885 he was appointed by the Dominion Government as chairman of the commission sent to ascertain and settle the claims of the half-breeds in the Northwest Territory, and during the spring and summer of that year traversed the entire length of the North Saskatchewan from Edmonton to Grand Rapids, much of the journey being performed in an open boat.

He was a member of the Church of England, and before going on the Bench had been identified with the Conservative party. He married in 1867 Elizabeth, daughter of Thos. S. Smyth of Hazelwood. His widow survives, and four children, Mrs. Hugh Langdon, Dunbar road; Miss Evelyn and Miss Amy at home, and Capt. G. R. Street.

Judge Sedgwick's Condition.

Quebec, Aug. 2.—Mr. Justice Sedgwick's condition remains unchanged. At 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon a telephone message from Chester stated that he was refusing to take any stimulants, and that he might live for 24 hours or for two weeks.
