In the popularity contest conducted by the Australian Medicine Company here last week, Miss Marie Rettinger, of this village, was awarded the first prize. The prize was a chest of silverware.

Mrs. Jos. Schickler is offering for sale her two residential properties on Stinson street, Mildmay, also the harness shop and residence on the corner of Adams and Mildmay streets. Mildmay. All are in good condition, and are priced very reasonably.

At the annual meeting of the Walkerton Christmas Fair Association, held in the Agricultural Office on Nov. 10th, it was decided to hold the annual Christmas Fair on Thursday, Dec. 16th. The Executive and various committees were appointed, and it is hoped that the Fair this year will be a successful one. A number of new features are being considered to increase the interest and value of the Fair.

Fine Village Residence for Sale. The residence of the late Mrs. Magdalena Eickmeier, and adjoining lot on Church street, Mildmay, are now offered for sale. There is a fine brick house and stable on the premises, and the property is very reasonably priced. Excellent location. G. H. Eickmeier.

Saw Silver Black Fox. The other day, a Carrick farmer who couldn't do any work on his farm on account of the wet weather, decided to spend a few hours shooting rabbits. As he was standing on an elevation in the swamp, he noticed a rabbit passing at a lightning speed, and, dropping his gun, he called his hound to put him on the hare's track. Just as he called his hound, he turned, and to his amazement, there, not twenty feet distant, stood a beautiful silver black fox, which, with its tail at half mast, looked to be nearly six feet in length. But the farmer didn't have his gun, and all the satisfaction he had was to see a black streak disappearing through the bushes. He is satisfied that he just lost $500 by that innocent act of laying down his gun.

Prices cut! Compare them with others. Goldenberg's.

Bazaar—In the town hall, Mildmay, on Thursday afternoon and evening, Nov. 25th, under the auspices of United Church. A full display of useful articles suitable for Christmas gifts will be placed on sale. Fine program in the evening.

Three Big Dollar Days. The Mildmay merchants are putting on big Dollar Day sales on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Get a bill, and see the list of the big money-saving bargains.

Drainage Court of Revision. The by-laws in connection with the Teeswater River Drainage scheme, have been distributed among all the Carrick land owners affected. The Court of Revision will be held in the town hall, Mildmay, on Tuesday, Nov. 30th, to hear and decide the appeals that may be entered.

Fleming Ballagh Elected Trustee. Following the plan suggested by Chief Public School Inspector Greer of Toronto, the Belmont School Section called a public meeting of the ratepayers last Thursday to elect a trustee to succeed Messrs. Stokes and Herd, who resigned. The meeting was fairly well attended, and Mr. Fleming Ballagh was elected as trustee for the balance of the year, without opposition. Public School Inspector Bald was present at the request of the Education Department but he made little or no comment on the proceedings or as to the manner in which the meeting was conducted.

Municipal Ramors. Municipal nominations will be held this year on Monday, Dec. 27th, with the elections a week later, Jan. 3rd. In Mildmay there are few new developments, except that considerable pressure is being brought to bear on Mr. Alex. Fedy to re-enter the municipal arena, and contest the reeve-ship. Dr. E. J. Weigel is being spoken of as a possible candidate for council. In Carrick there is little new to report, except that Mr. Anthony Strauss has almost definitely decided to retire at the end of this year. Unless the township council for 1927 is elected by acclamation, Councillor Jasper will be a candidate for the Reeveship in opposition to Reeve Weigel.

Armstrong—Holloway. A quiet but pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, October 20th, in the church of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, Toronto, when Madeline Marion (Molly) second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Holloway of Glen-lake Avenue, became the bride of Mr. James K. Armstrong, of Cleveland, Ohio, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. B. Armstrong, of Teeswater, Ont. The bride, who was given away by her father, entered the church in the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, looked charming in a simple French frock of pale pink georgette, beaded with silver beads and sequins with shoes and stockings to match and a large picture hat of black velvet. She carried a bouquet of ophelia roses and baby's breath and wore the groom's gift, a lovely gold and blue enamel wrist watch. She was attended by her sister, Mildred, who looked sweet in a quaint frock of pale mauve taffeta trimmed with georgette, shoes, stockings and hat to match and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of Columbia roses. Mr. Frederick Jones of Toronto acted as best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. E. Murrell-Wright and Mr. E. Wheeler presided at the organ. A small reception was held when only the immediate relatives were present, Mrs. Holloway and Mrs. Armstrong sr. received with the happy couple, the former wearing a dress of golden brown georgette, large black hat and a sprig of yellow tea roses and the latter in black satin with trimming of sand cut velvet, black hat and corsage of roses. The bride and groom left immediately after for a short trip. The bride travelled in a coat of dark brown needle point, trimmed with beaver, small brown hat to match. On their return they will reside at 1814 Clifton Boulevard, Cleveland, Ohio.

Extra! Extra! For Dollar Days! Keelan's Raisin Bread 10c per loaf for Dollar Days.

Auction Sale. Auction Sale of Farm Stock and Implements at Lot 41, Con. C, Carrick, on Tuesday, November 23rd, at 1 o'clock sharp. John Darroch, auctioneer; Henry Schnarr, proprietor.

Cattle Sale Was Draggy. D. E. McDonald of Wingham did not succeed in disposing of his shipment of cattle here last Saturday. A dozen head were sold, but the prices didn't suit Mr. McDonald, so he called the sale off and drove the balance of his cattle to Teeswater.

Justifies Anderson's Position. Mr. J. E. Tolton, of Walkerton, President of the South Bruce Branch of the Prohibition Union, has issued a statement in which he fully justifies the position taken by Mr. J. G. Bruce, in not accepting the decision of the Conference held at Paisley on Nov. 6th.

Coming Again! Prof. E. Katz, the well-known optical specialist, will come to relieve eye-sight trouble at Mildmay on Monday, Nov. 22nd, at the Commercial Hotel. Headache, dizziness, twitching eyelids, defective vision and cross eyes relieved by properly fitted glasses. Prof. Katz is well known all over Western Ontario for his great skill in relieving eye sight trouble. He can help; even though others failed. Remember the date.

Dogs Worrying Sheep. There has been a considerable amount of sheep worrying going on in the southern part of Carrick during the past week. Edward Gilmar had two lambs worried by dogs last Thursday night, William Wynn lost three a few nights previous, and George Detzler had four killed recently. The Sheep Protection Act now provides that the municipality must pay the value of the sheep to the owner, and the municipality must proceed against the owners of the dogs, where they can be ascertained, to recover the amount paid for the loss of the sheep.

Married at Kitchener. At the Kitchener R. C. Church on Tuesday morning of this week, Miss Margaret, second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Beninger, of Formosa, became the bride of Mr. Norman Keller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Keller, formerly of Carrick. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. M. Hinsperger. The bride was assisted by her cousin, Miss Hattie Beninger of Detroit, and Mr. Stanley Beninger supported the groom. After the ceremony the bridal couple motored to the home of the bride's parents at Formosa, where a reception was tendered the young couple. They purpose residing in Kitchener, where Mr. Keller has a good situation.

More Poultry Thieving. It's a mighty annoying experience to have a good part of your choicest poultry cleaned out at this season of the year. Considerable poultry stealing has been in progress in this section of the country this fall, and it is almost impossible to get the police to do anything to assist to locate the offenders. This week thieves broke into Geo. Haines' poultry house and carried away a dozen of his choicest fowls, and while some clues were left to give Mr. Haines a good strong suspicion, still he doesn't want to go any further in the matter than to warn the next person who makes a nocturnal visit to his chicken coop, that there will be a warm reception awaiting him.

Pigeons Wanted. 500 pair pigeons wanted during week Nov. 22 to 26. Liesemer & Kalbfleisch.

Rink Tenders. Tenders will be received by the undersigned up to Saturday, Nov. 20th, for the rent of the Mildmay Skating Rink for the coming winter. J. A. Johnston.

Wm. Errington Dies Suddenly. Mr. Wm. Errington, who has been living for some time near Wroxeter, dropped dead on Friday afternoon of last week. He is survived by his widow and a large family. Deceased was about 64 years of age, and was well known in this section.

Prizes at Royal Fair. Mr. W. W. Penschbacher, who has his fine Yorkshire swine on exhibition at the Royal Fair at Toronto, was successful in winning three first prizes, one fourth and one fifth prize. He also made a number of sales at very fancy prices. Messrs. Nich. Durrer, Alex. Fischer and Andrew Schmidt also exhibited grain and roots, but the results of these exhibits have not yet been announced.

HUNTINGFIELD. Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Vogan and Mr. J. J. Harris motored to Owen Sound last Saturday to see Mrs. Lucy Harris, who has been very ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. (Rev.) J. T. Strachan. Mrs. Harris is still quite ill, but is improving satisfactorily.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. D. Hartness and daughter are attending the Royal Fair at Toronto this week. Mr. Jas. S. Darling is also spending the week in the city, attending the Fair, and attending to other matters.

Rev. C. N. MacKenzie will next Sunday commence a series of sermons on the subject "The Seven Churches."

CARLSRUHE. We are very sorry to report that Mrs. Enoch Metzger is seriously ill. A trained nurse is in attendance, and everything possible is being done to restore her back to health again.

A large number of neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Goll to congratulate them on the 15th anniversary of their wedding and a most enjoyable time was spent in games and music.

Mr. and Mrs. Ph. Rehkopf, of Kitchener, spent a few days with relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Xavier Lobsinger of Ayton called on friends here on Sunday.

Mr. Halter put a new roof on his shed and it is now ready for any political meeting, either wet or dry. The farmers took advantage of the few days of nice weather. Some were cutting and hauling in speltz, while others took in their turnips. There are still quite a few turnips out in the fields.

Some patrolmen have been out grading the road. It is considered a very poor time of the year for this kind of work, as it piles a lot of loose stones and dirt on the road and with so much rain and snow makes a very dirty road.

Vote for J. G. Anderson, the Liberal candidate, in South Bruce.

HELPING MOTHER WITH THE CHILDREN

FOR A BABY GUEST.

Our guest room is small and so arranged there never was a place for a bassinet even if I had had one. Many of our guests had small babies and I did not know how to solve the difficulty.

A friend, who travels with her husband and who is used to being tucked into kitchenette apartments, came to my rescue in such a unique manner I believe others will be interested.

When she and Ed and Junior came to stay three days at our ranch, I had that same sinking heart I usually felt when I had no bed for the baby. I led her to the guest room and she said, "I'll just fix Junior's drawer the first thing, so that will be ready."

From her suitcase she took a cotton pad that just fitted inside the dresser drawer. Over this she had drawn, pillowcase fashion, a rubberized sheet. Then she put a soft white blanket on the top. She used the middle drawer of my dresser and pulled it out about three-quarters of the way. Under the centre she shoved the straight-back chair, which was exactly the right height. The dresser stood by the head of the bed, and here she had Junior, right by her side, in a bed he couldn't possibly roll out of.

When she left I painted the inside of that drawer plain white. I made a pad from an old blanket and put the waterproof pillowcase on it. The other blankets I made from a worn woolen one I had, and every guest with a baby who has visited us since has wondered why she hadn't thought of that arrangement before.—F. E.

CALL FOR ME.

Youngsters have a sociable fashion of calling for each other on the way to school, but I have found it a habit to discourage. I now let my daughters depend for companionship on the schoolmates they chance to meet after they start off, instead of having a caddy stop regularly. Some of our callers, having very early breakfasts themselves, come when we were just about to sit down to the table, and my daughters got jumpy and impatient to be off and, consequently, unable to eat a proper meal.

Another girl, with a tendency to tardiness, kept my eldest daughter nervously waiting for her in the mornings and often within a few seconds of being late with her. Other times one of my girls would linger for a friend who did not happen to be going to school that day.

Altogether, it was an upsetting practice, a constant irritation, and I had to discontinue these morning calls.—M. P. D.

PRACTICAL HOME WORK.

My school daughters are being helped in writing, spelling and arithmetic by way of our grocery-store order. Before leaving home, the girl going with me takes the order down from dictation. While I shop elsewhere, she goes to the grocer's and buys these things, affixing the prices, adding them up and counting the change to complete the transaction. Their spelling particularly has been helped, as I have caught up words like "spinage, lettuce, soup erbs, cantelope, sugar, maches."—M. P. D.

GETTING READY FOR COMPANY.

A busy mother in my neighborhood has learned to handle the problem of entertaining her young daughter's week-end guests in the very easiest manner—especially the "getting ready" part of it. At breakfast each child is given a slip of paper, on which is written the few small tasks allotted to them. So, while the girls are making beds, dusting and preparing vegetables, the boys are cleaning the car and the verandah. In no time the work is all done and nobody gets fussed or worried or hurried.—W. A. C.

BABY'S SCRAPBOOK.

My baby first began to enjoy her scrapbook when she was a little over a year old and now at the age of two and a half it is still a prime favorite. Instead of the usual collection of strange animals and imaginative scenes that fill the books of older children I made it up of pictures of our common household articles, animals and doings.

There are pictures of an iron, a toothbrush, a stove, a comb and of some furniture and some utensils. The animals are the dog, cat, cow and horse that baby sees every day. Pictures show ordinary people about their ordinary business of sweeping, cooking, driving and eating. I included several things to eat which baby knows well.

The book has helped her to learn to talk and to recognize the things in the little world in which she lives. When she is older I shall make her a book of fairies and strange scenes and unfamiliar animals with which to broaden her knowledge and stimulate her imagination, but at present her need is to know the everyday things around her.—M. I. Q.

"PINNING IN" YOUNGSTERS.

It is impossible to get a really good night's rest when you have to get up several times to cover the children. Pinning them in was suggested, but I found that it had to be done properly or they couldn't move freely and torn blankets and uncovered babies would be the result. I have found the following method to be very successful:

Use the large safety pins and pin only through the heavy blanket and sheet next on top of the child, through the lower sheet and to a light pad which rests upon the heavier pad or mattress. Do not pin through the nightgown. Use a pin over each shoulder, close enough to the neck to keep them covered well; then another at each top corner of the cover and one on each side opposite the knees. The child can move or turn easily, the corner pins keep the back covered, always and the blankets are not torn.—F. L. T.

Storage of Vegetables on the Farm.

STORING CABBAGE.

Danish Ballhead is a good variety for winter storage, on account of its compact, hard heads. The cabbage to be stored should be sound and free from disease and injury. A good, uniformly cool place around 33 deg. F., where a fair degree of humidity may be maintained, is desired. When cabbage is kept inside it is best piled on slatted racks not more than two heads deep. Outside, the crop is stored in various forms of pits and trenches. Sometimes the heads are cut and stored in A-shaped pits as used for roots, or the plants, roots and all, may be pulled and stored roots down in the shallow trenches. Around the bed a frame is built and banked up with earth, while over the top straw or other material is piled. Ventilation should be provided in all pits, trenches and root cellars or store houses.

CAULIFLOWER STORAGE.

Cauliflower is not an easy crop to store. Good sound heads with the leaves left on may be kept under proper cold storage conditions for several weeks. Many market gardeners store quantities which are pulled late in the season and not fully matured. The plants are removed to a cool cellar or frame, where they are stood close together and the roots covered with moist sand or loam. When outdoor frames are used, too much covering early in the season with improper ventilation will cause heating and rotting of the heads.

STORING ONIONS.

Slatted crates are desirable, but any method which will allow free air circulation is good. The temperature of the storage room should be kept between 33 deg. F. and 40 deg. F. and a dry atmosphere maintained.

STORING POTATOES.

Potatoes may be successfully stored in cellars or pits. When cellars are used there should be provided plenty of air circulation around the potatoes. The temperature range should be between 33 deg. F. and 40 deg. F. and the atmosphere should be just medium moist. Bins should have a false, slatted bottom and, if possible, large air shafts through the pile of potatoes. Pits should be constructed in a well-drained location and made twelve to sixteen inches deep and four to five feet wide. Plenty of ventilation should be provided and yet sufficient covering as the weather grows colder to prevent freezing of the potatoes.

STORING PUMPKINS.

After becoming well-ripened, pumpkins may be carefully cut off at the stem and stored in a comparatively warm, dry room with plenty of ventilation. They should be carefully handled and not bruised.

The Tree People.

(Write in your own adjectives.)

Behind Anna Belle's house there were deep woods with a little path running through them that led to a big rock.

On — days Anna Belle loved to take a — book, walk along the — path, and then settle herself cozily with her back against the — rock. There she would read and read in the — shadows of the — trees.

One day as Anna Belle sat reading in that — place, she had a very — experience. First, all the words on the page of her book ran together before her — eyes, and when she looked up the trees were moving also. Anna Belle could scarcely believe it, but the trees all had faces. She could see their — eyes looking at her. Their — branches were waving about like — arms.

Anna Belle was not afraid. Even when one of the trees reached down, took hold of her firmly with its — branch and set her high up among its — leaves, she merely wondered what would happen next.

Waving their — branches, with every — leaf shaking, like drapery, the trees began to dance slowly and gracefully, and Anna Belle was carried about through the air as if she were on a slow kind of roller coaster. She liked it. She felt as if she were a — bird flying, or a — cloud floating in the — sky.

Round and about the trees danced, just as if they were real, — people having a — time. Anna Belle just held on tight and had a — time, too. Then, all at once, the trees stood stock still.

Anna Belle felt herself slipping, slipping, down from the — branch onto the ground. Then, she felt the — rock hard against her back. She saw the pages of her — book before her eyes and the words all coming straight so she could read them. She was more surprised now that the — trees were still than she had been when she had seen them dancing.

"I'm going right home to tell my mother about it," she said to herself. So she closed her — book and hurried along the — path toward her house.

Anna Belle's mother listened to her daughter's story. And all the time she listened her — eyes were smiling and the — dimples around her — mouth were smiling, too.

"And, mother, those — trees did really dance and dance, just the way we do in Miss Miller's class. Oh, how I wish you could have seen them!"

Anna Belle's mother laughed and gave the child a — kiss. "Do you feel rested, — child, after your nap?" was all she said.

A Chick's Appetite.

That the quantity of feed which chickens consume from day to day will often vary considerably is commonly recognized, but until recently there has been little actual evidence to show just how much variation occurs.

The results of one experiment show that although there is a rather steady increase in the quantity of feed or milk that 100 chickens consume per day as they grow from one to nine weeks of age, there are frequent changes from day to day that are decidedly out of line with the average for the week in which those days occur.

As an illustration, though the average daily feed consumed by 100 chicks in the fifth week was a little over 2,400 grams, they dropped from 2,540 grams on one day to 1,450 grams on the next. Similarly the milk consumed varied in that week all the way from about 5,800 grams to 8,500 grams for 100 chicks in one day.

Variations of 25 per cent. in total feed or milk consumption from day to day were not uncommon, showing that a chicken's appetite is a distinctly variable quantity, and suggesting that perhaps one of the reasons for differences between poultrymen in their ability to grow chickens well is to be found in keeping the chickens steadily at the business of consuming feed from day to day.

Fertilization of Tobacco.

A statement of considerable import is made by the officer in-charge of the Tobacco Division of the Dominion Experimental Farms (Mr. C. M. Slagg) when he says in his report for 1925 that the use of lime in tobacco fertilization has in all cases lowered the yield and quality of the resulting crop at Farnham, Que. The use of commercial fertilizers in conjunction with manure gave an average yield of two hundred pounds more per acre than manure alone as well as leaving a net profit of approximately twenty dollars per acre more. It is also stated that last year's comparison of various manures in tobacco fertilization gave highest yields with sheep manure, followed by cow, poultry, horse and hog manures. The statement, however, is added that since the soil used in this experiment was somewhat variable, the results secured are not considered reliable. The semi-hot bed has been found at the Farnham station well adapted to the production of vigorous, early seedlings.

Is this type of Tourist really an asset to Ontario?

LIQUOR advocates claim that Ontario will get thousands more tourists if it goes wet on December 1.

These are the facts:—

The Dominion Government Report for 1925 states:

Ontario under prohibition had 1,290,000 motor tourists.
New Brunswick under Prohibition had 476,555 motor tourists.
Quebec under Government Sale had 111,983 motor tourists.

Government Sale means increased liquor sold and consumed, with increased dangers.

Do you want our highways thronged with hilarious joyriders and campfollowers of the liquor traffic?

Do you want to encourage and promote reckless driving upon the highways on the part of our own citizens?

Don't be fooled. Make your vote count against these dangers.

The province of Chekiang sends us much of our white silk. It is also the celebrated poultry-egg centre of China.

There are families in that province which hatch, artificially, 50,000 or more eggs a year.

An ounce of tomato seed will produce 1,500 ounces of seed, or 3,000,000 tons of tomatoes.

Don't be Fooled!

Government "control" does not cure these evils:—

1. BOOTLEGGING:—"Bootlegging to extent of 5,000 cases a month. . . in and around Vancouver."—The Hook (an Anti-Prohibition paper).

"Bootleggers handle twice as much liquor as the Government stores."—Vancouver World.

2. FLASK DRINKING:—The Sherbrooke Daily Record, speaking about conditions in Quebec, says: "The hip-pocket flask is an institution to a greater extent here than in Ontario."

3. LAWLESSNESS OF YOUTH:—Andrew Blygh, J.P., of Vancouver, describing the state of affairs in British Columbia under Government "Control", says: "Any night, cabarets are operating with 50% of those present showing signs of intoxication. The dance halls are a public scandal with young girls slipping to the back alley to get a nip from the flasks of their escorts."

4. DRUNKENNESS:—There have been 851 names placed on the Indian List in Alberta during Government "Control", the majority of whom procured liquor without permits.

5. RECKLESS DRIVING:—Comparing Montreal and Toronto, Mayor Duquette of Montreal stated: "Montreal has registered twice the number of automobile accidents with half the number of automobiles."

Nervous Children.

There are some children, otherwise in apparent good health, who suffer from an over-excitable weakness of the nervous system that manifests itself in spasms of various muscles or in general convulsions. The larynx is very apt to be the seat of this trouble, which shows itself in attacks of spasmodic croup; again, sometimes associated with croup, sometimes occurring independently, there are cramp-like spasms of the hands and feet. In general all the muscles react instantly and strongly to any stimulus, such as a sharp tap with the finger. This muscular irritability has been found to be due to a fault of nutrition, namely an inability to absorb or assimilate lime, and the medical problem is to overcome this defect, and bring about a normal lime digestion. An ample supply of lime-containing food must be given and if there are other forms of digestive trouble they must be treated. It is well to start the treatment with a dose of castor oil, to ensure the removal of any toxins or poisonous material from the digestive tract. The diet should consist largely of milk, to which lime water may be added, and also of such foods as are rich

The trail that leads to HOME

The Cunard Anchor-Donaldson ocean highway will be the home trail for many Canadian citizens intent on spending Christmas with the home folks in the British Isles this Christmas.

Leaving Halifax December 12th and 13th respectively the two Christmas ships "Letitia" and "Antonia" are scheduled to arrive at the home ports three or four days before Christmas, the "Letitia" at Belfast, Liverpool and Glasgow, and the "Antonia" at Plymouth, Cherbourg and London.

Ask your Steamship Agent for information, or write—

Every Woman Deserves One

The SMP Roaster is a fine time saver. You put the roast or fowl in the oven. The roaster does the rest, bastes, roasts to perfection. It roasts with very little shrinkage, thus saving dollars every year. None of the tasty meat juices are lost; all the rich flavor is retained. Besides you can buy cheaper cuts, for it makes cheap cuts taste like choice ones.

The close fitting cover keeps all the cooking juices and the grease inside the roaster—the smell of cooking doesn't fill the house, and the oven is kept sweet and clean. Best of all, it cleans out in a jiffy after the roasting. These are splendid vessels. Price 75c. to $3.50 according to size and finish. Sold in all hardware stores.

SMP Enameled ROASTER

In lime: cabbage, turnips, oatmeal, and vegetables and fruits in general. Eggs contain a fair percentage of lime, and so do most nuts, but beef and other meats have very little. Nuts should be ground and made into a puree, and, even so, should be eaten sparingly, for they contain much fat and are not always readily digested. Cod-liver oil aids in the assimilation of lime, so also do extracts of certain glands; but here we are encroaching on the province of the medical attendant, who should of course be consulted not only about the drug treatment, but also about the diet.

The attack itself may be treated and sometimes arrested before the doctor comes, by putting the child in a hot bath and applying cold compresses to the head. The severity of the croup attacks may often be reduced by applying heat to the larynx by means of a sponge or soft cloth wrung out of hot water. If it can be given without disturbing the child too much, an enema is sometimes of service.

MOTHERS PRAISE BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. L. M. Brown, Walton, N.S., says:—"I cannot recommend Baby's Own Tablets too highly. I have found them invaluable for the ailments of 'little ones.'" Mrs. Brown's testimony is the same as that of thousands of other mothers who have used the Tablets. To use them once is a sure guarantee that they will always be kept in the home as long as there are babies or young children to be cared for. The Tablets are a laxative—mild but thorough in action—which never fails to regulate the stomach and bowels; relieve constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and make the dreaded teething period easy. In fact you banish all the minor ills from which little ones suffer. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Prayers for Oysters.
An unusual celebration is to be held shortly by a Japanese firm of artificial pearl dealers. They are to erect a monument in memory of oysters whose lives have been sacrificed for the sake of the pearls that have enabled the firm to become so prosperous. Pearls that even the leading experts are unable to distinguish from the natural product are manufactured by this firm. The monument is being laid out in front of the Imperial Shrine at Ise, and will take the form of a tower containing 10,000 pearls. A religious mass is to be said at the unveiling for the repose of the souls of the oysters.

Most visitors to Japan have remarked with delight on the wonderfully carved ivory statuettes that are offered for sale. A few months ago the leading Japanese ivory workers held a religious ceremony in memory of the thousands of elephants that had been killed to make these statuettes. Somewhat similar was the ceremony held by geisha for the souls of cats slain to provide the necessary material for the Japanese musical instrument, the samisen, played by the singing girls.

Now It Can Be Told.
"Oh, Daddy," said the young lady, "Mrs. Jones said you were the handsomest man on our street."
"What's that?" asked the father.
"There was a brief silence, then the daughter shook her head and said, 'Well, I guess it's true, all right.'"
"What's true?" asked the father.
"That every time you compliment a man he makes you repeat it."

Cloud Architecture.
You may take any single fragment of any cloud in the sky, and you will find it put together as if there had been a year's thought over the plan of it, arranged with the most studied inequality—with the most elaborate symmetry—with the most elaborate contrast, a picture in itself. You may try every other piece of cloud in the heaven, and you will find them every one as perfect, and yet not one in the least like another.

Stand upon the peak of some isolated mountain at daybreak, when the night-mists first rise from off the plains, and watch their white and lake-like fields as they float in level bays and winding gulches about the island summits of the lower hills, untouched yet by more than dawn, colder and more quiet than a windless sea under the moon of midnight. Watch when the first sunbeam is sent upon the silvery channels, how the foam of their undulating surface parts and passes away; and down under their depths the glittering city and green pasture like Atlantis, between the white paths of winding rivers; the flakes of light falling every moment faster and faster among the stary spires, as the wreathed surges break and vanish above them, and the confused crests and ridges of the dark hills shorten their gray shadows upon the plains.

Wait a little longer and you shall see those scattered mists rallying in the ravines and floating valleys, till they couch in quiet masses, iridescent with the morning light, upon the broad leagues of meadow and green pasture, and back into that robe of material light, until they fade away; lost in its lustre, to appear again above, in the serene heaven, like a wild, bright, impossible dream, foundationless and inaccessible, their very bases vanishing in the unsubstantial and mocking blue of the deep lake below.—John Ruskin.

Sonnet.
When it is done, that last long voyage, and we have come to where they tell us there is rest,
When it is done, that last long voyage, and we Whatever name you will, so let it be
I shall remember all the friends we met
Upon this dear old Earth, the haunting days
Of springtime's coming; all the browns and grays
Of English autumns? Or shall we forget
Will there be sunsets in the Western skies,
And great big silent seas for us to sail
Beneath a crescent moon, all silver-pale?
Will she be there with laughter in her eyes?
And shall we smell the heather wet with rain,
Or see the yellow daffodils again?
—A.R.U.

The Heritage.
James Russell Lowell wrote much serious verse, but his "Biglow Papers," written during the American Civil War, are perhaps his most distinctive work.

O, rich man's son! there is a toll
That with all others level stands;
Large charity doth never soil,
But only whitens soft white hands.
This is the best crop from thy lands;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Worth being rich to hold in fee.

O, poor man's son! scorn not thy state;
There is worse weariness than thine
In merely being rich and great:
Toil only gives the soul to shine,
And makes rest fragrant and benign;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Worth being poor to hold in fee.

Both, heirs to some six feet of sod,
Are equal in the earth at last;
Both, children of the same dear God,
Prove title to your heirship vast
By record of a well-filled past;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Well worth a life to hold in fee.

The Best Reward—
—For good work is the consciousness that we have done it.
—Our children can give us is to merit our sacrifices.
—Is not the bonus, but the appreciation the bonus implies.
—For a good sermon is in the improved living of the hearers.
—Of thrift is the mastery we establish over impetuous desires.
—Of hospitality is in witnessing the pleasure of our guests.
—Of industry is the sense of self-respect that follows.

November Cornfield.
The long, rattling whistles
Of scattered cornstalks
In November wind
Is like the hard breathing of old soldiers
Retreating through a strange country
The wind thrives them,
And they strain forward,
Tugging at hard, gnarled roots,
Swinging tattered leaves
Like rusted swords.
Beating weakly, vainly,
At a quick rush of sleet:
Bending, struggling on,
With their shifting, tottering banners
Of dusty yellow and torn gray.

REGAINED HEALTH IS NOW HAPPY

The Experience of a Quebec Woman With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. L. D. Bernier, 89 D'Arquillon Street, Quebec, is one of the thousands of women who, when she found her health failing, resorted to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and now finds herself in perfect health. Mrs. Bernier says:—"I was very weak, subject to headaches and was unable to sleep well. Testimonials in the newspapers persuaded me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and the result has been most satisfactory. I have regained my health, the headaches have left me; I sleep well at night, and I have gained in weight. Naturally I am feeling happy. I strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all weak people."

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness. Take them as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong. If you will send us your name and address a little book, "Building Up the Blood," will be mailed you prepaid. This little book contains many useful health hints.

You can get these pills through any dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Rolling Stones.
It is wise, it is well
That stones should roll
Nor smother in bracken and moss.
Does a stone grow more whole
Being striped across
With parasite lichens?
But it enters experience
And sees a new world
If it rolls—if it rolls—
After petard, or toss.

Let it roll—
Roll when it's scuffed out soundly
From cluttered-up rut, or hole.
Let it adventure
Beyond the straight fence.
Even let it go
Like a meteor, hurried—
'Even land in another world!

Moss is a parasite.
A parasite, rust.
Let a stone roll off its rough;
Let it chip.
Let it wear off old crust.
Even a rare thing might spring from its heart
If its strictures were broken wholly apart.

She Escaped it by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Windsor, Ont.—"After the birth of my first baby I was very much run-down in health and the doctor said I must have an operation as I was suffering from a displacement. A friend wanted me to try your medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and I took it steadily for a year. During this time I was carrying my second baby and I felt real well all the time and did not have a hard confinement. I feel sure the Vegetable Compound did me a lot of good, and all my people do, too. One sister in Learnington, Ontario, takes it, and both sisters praise it as a good medicine. I am more than pleased with the result."—Mrs. W. PENN, Windsor, Ontario.

"We guarantee this to be genuine skunk fur, and that it will wear for years and years."
"But suppose," said the lady, "I get it wet in the rain. What effect will water have on it? Will it spoil?"
"Ma'am, did you ever hear of a skunk carrying an umbrella?"

Lady of the House (interviewing a new maid)—And now, Nora, are you efficient?

DEAD-EYE DICKS MUST PAY FINES

One of the factors that contributes to the increase of motor accidents which is frequently overlooked by both motorists and traffic regulators is the prevalence of one-eyed cars. The next time you are motoring after dark just count the number of approaching cars that have but one lamp burning. The number will astonish you. Needless to assume there are as many such cars travelling in your direction that you cannot see.
This one-lamp practice is very confusing to drivers and frequently causes serious accidents and loss of life. Realizing this, Magistrate Douglas Davidson, presiding in an Ontario police court, recently fined six motorists $7.50 each for driving with just one headlight. Police authorities throughout the Dominion should follow the example of this judge and impose stiff fines on all "Dead-Eye Dicks."

COUNTY ASSESSMENT FINISHED

With the exception of the clerical work of preparing the respective reports for presentation in schedule form at the December session the rural and urban assessments of the County of Bruce have been completed. The assessment of the respective municipalities will not be made public until presented to the County Council. This much is known, however, that the rural valuers have decreased the building and land values and the urban valuers have made an increase. The report can not be amended by the County Council but any municipality may appeal to the County Judge just as an individual may in a local assessment. Perhaps, under the circumstances, the same procedure may follow as when a previous assessment was made in 1911. At that time every urban municipality appealed against the rural assessments being too low. The County Judge at that time, in view of the expense of calling evidence to get at the selling price of farm lands, suggested a get-together of the urban and rural representatives. This was done and an agreement was reached whereby the valuation of all urban municipalities was reduced 15 per cent. This was followed and has stood till the present with the exception of a recent reduction in Warton on account of a decrease in the selling price of lots and buildings in that town, and a reduction was also made in the assessment of Southampton when farm lands were detached from that corporation and added to Saugeen—Cheaseley Enterprise.

SAFETY MAN LISTS TEN UNFIT DRIVERS

There are 10 classes of people who aren't fit to drive cars, according to a list prepared by S. J. Williams, director of the public safety division of the National Safety Council of the United States.
These, he says, would be excluded from motoring if every state enacting the model motor vehicle operators' and chauffeurs' act recommended by the recent national conference on street and highway safety.
These are:
1. Children under 16.
2. Persons whose height does not permit easy reach of controlling pedals.
3. Persons who have not sufficient strength to operate control levers easily and positively.
4. Persons under the influence of liquor or drugs.
5. Epileptics or others subject to fits or fainting spells.
6. Persons who do not know and understand the traffic laws, ordinary rules of the road and other points concerned with safe and efficient automobile operation.
7. Persons with dangerously defective hearing or eyesight.
8. Cripples or persons minus arms or legs whose defects interfere with their safe control of an automobile.
9. Persons whose nervous structure is not sound or who do not react quickly.
10. The mentally incompetent.

CANNING PUMPKIN

The directions for canning pumpkin are the same as for any other vegetable. Prepare in the usual way by removing seeds and rind and cutting into small cubes. Then blanch pack in sterilized jars and process in the hot water bath. Blanching means that you immerse the product in boiling water. It is best to use a wire basket for this, though a cheesecloth square is quite efficient. Immerse in the boiling water, cover immediately and keep covered for the required time. Then lift out immediately. This is often followed by the cold dip, which means that the product is dipped into a vessel of cold water. This hardens pulp and helps to set the color. The cold dip is now omitted by many experienced canners, who pack the blanched vegetables immediately into the jars while hot. The jars are not sealed tightly until the process is complete. The hot water bath is usually a boiler with a tightly-fitting lid and a false bottom to keep jars from direct contact with the hot metal. Be sure the water is boiling when the jars go in and cover immediately to keep the water boiling. Pumpkin is blanched for five minutes and then sterilized for two hours in a homemade hot water bath. If one has a pressure cooker the time will be one hour under 5 lbs. pressure and 40 minutes under 10 to 15 lbs. pressure.

Most barns throughout Ontario would hold more hay, straw and other feed than is stored in them this year. It is good policy to work for full mows and bins, but, of course, the weather man has some say in the matter.

Surely modern science and inventions can be adapted in some degree to meet this growing menace of fire on the farm, and the Fire Marshal should be encouraged to devote his attention to this, one of the big problems of the countryside.

Cuts Feeding Costs 50%

The Sugar Jack System

is a perfected feeding process that has produced amazing results. It not only does away with the expense of a silo, but also increases the milk flow and weight of your live stock and cuts your feeding costs in half.

The Sugar Jack

converts roughage into an easily digestible state—making it actually more palatable and nourishing than the highest quality ensilage and hay. Thus, roughage, such as hay, straw, clover threshings, bean and pea vines, etc., can now be used in place of ensilage and will give better results.

Here's How It Works

The Sugar Jack press and converter compound pre-digest roughage into highly nourishing feed. This pre-digested roughage feed is relished by live stock, and the farmer using it enjoys greater profits and owns healthier, fatter live stock.

Come In and See Us

We will gladly explain how the Sugar Jack will increase your live stock profits and save you time, labor and money. It's a wonderful, new feeding system that no enterprising farmer should be without.

FATHER CADOT, JESUIT MISSIONARY PRIEST

By J. J. Hunter in Kincardine Review
The love of God and neighbor; An equal-handed labor; The richer life, where beauty Walks hand in hand with duty.
When I first met Father J. C. Cadot, nearly twenty years ago, it was in the winter time. I was on my way to Wiarton. The train was not what one would call comfortable, as the weather was very cold and disagreeable. I was drawn toward this man with the long gray beard, in priestly garb. It was then Whittier's lines, as given above, came to my mind. With all the discomforts around us, Father Cadot, with smiling countenance and cheerful mien, was a charming travelling companion. I learned he was a Jesuit missionary to the Indians at Cape Croker Reserve on the Bruce Peninsula. Up to that time I had never been north of Wiarton and I promised myself that I would get better acquainted with the north country, and also with the man who could leave Montreal, with all its attraction, and go to an outside point and give the best that was in him to the Indians. Father Cadot was born at Saint Felix de Valois, forty miles below Montreal in the year 1860. He received his early education in the parish school. Later he went to Montreal College and then to St. Mary's College. He entered the Order of the Jesuits in 1883, and for six years was a teacher in St. Mary's College. He took his theology course at the Jesuit Seminary, The Immaculate Conception, Montreal, being ordained in 1895. In 1901 he came to Ontario, his first post being at the Canadian Soo, where he labored among the Irish, French and Indians. Here he improved his knowledge of the English language and also studied the Italian language, in the use of which he became fairly proficient. In 1904 he decided that his life work was among the Indians and he went to Cape Croker. Added to this post are a number of others, among them being the Saugeen Reserve, Christian Island and Ramal Moore, all Indian Reserves. To these he carries the word of God from time to time, making Cape Croker his headquarters.

In the years I have known this wonderful Frenchman I have learned to love, respect and esteem him. His charges are not ones that yield a fat or lucrative living. His home at Cape Croker is very comfortable, but not pretentious, as the homes of some of the clergy. One thing that abounds is the welcome that is extended to you by Father Cadot, whose hospitality is known to his friends. It is with delight that he tells of his work among his flock. To him they are the all-absorbing thing. Since coming among them he has learned to speak the language, but he preaches to them in English. Cape Croker Reserve has about 400 inhabitants and is about evenly divided as to Catholics and Protestants, but here is found a state of affairs that seldom exists. The two religious bodies work in perfect harmony, the United Church, under the Rev. Mr. Strapp, serving the Protestants. The best of feeling prevails. Father Cadot has turned a portion of his home into a club room which is non-sectarian and always a centre of activity for members of both denominations. Here the men gather in the evening read the papers, reviews and magazines, and under the guidance of this Godly man their views on questions of the day are directed. Perhaps a few reserves can boast of as much intelligence as Cape Croker. This club might be termed a debating society, for discussions are carried on upon all kinds of subjects that would surprise the average white man. These red men are keen debaters and the interest they take is often evidenced when they lapse from English into their native tongue, thus being able to more adequately express themselves. In all these discussions the guiding hand of the happy little Jesuit priest is seen. Should discussion become warm, with that wisdom which is his, Father Cadot takes a hand in it and by his tact, judgment and example has taught "his boys" that the views of others are to be respected.

Cape Croker is an interesting place and if you have never visited its annual fair you have missed one of the finest Indian fairs in this Dominion. The large council hall is filled with the finest displays of needlework, fancy work, baskets, beaded work and many things that do not find their way to other fairs. Also the roots, vegetables, grain and live stock are of the very best. The Indians are good farmers and they enjoy the comforts of life as few do. Cape Croker has one of the finest brass bands you would wish to listen to. I remember the first time I had the pleasure of addressing the Indians. It was in the autumn and out-doors it was sunshiny and bright, with just a little haze hanging over the scene. It was supposed to be a political address, but for the life of me I could not settle down to talk politics. I was carried back to the reserve of the Six Nations near Brantford. It was there I had learned to hunt, shoot, set rabbit snares and throw the snow-snares. I forgot politics and talked of these sports to my audience. It was a delightful experience to find them so responsive and full of understanding. Looking out through the windows of the council hall, with the sunlight playing on the turning leaves, the scenery was charming and gave one an instinct as if music was sounding on every hand. It makes one alive with lovely imagery and you can readily understand how a nature such as Father Cadot possesses, could come to love this quiet around him, and how it gives him inspiration to carry on his great life work. Some would call it sacrifice but in the long run it is service, and the reward is in having performed the task allotted with faithfulness.

The Indians are proud of their prowess and achievements. Besides their fine band they have a good baseball team, and they play the game with a snap and vigour that makes you envy their agility. Football is another sport they excel in. Sports are not the only thing they take a lead in. Every year they hold a plowing match on the reserve at the Cape. The winners then go to other plowing matches, and only recently at the match held near Port Elgin one of these Indians won first place. They are proud of their ability and they try hard to improve along all lines.

Are these men loyal to the British Crown? When the Great War was on all the Indians from Cape Croker and the Saugeen Reserve who were fit answered the call and made a name for themselves as the smartest of soldiers. Two from Cape Croker won the Military Cross. How little we know of these original owners of the land now held by the white men. Only one needs to know something of their life struggle to reach the goal of success to appreciate them.

Recently Father Cadot attended the banquet given the member for North Bruce in Kincardine. On that occasion many who did not know him were struck with his fine appearance and asked to meet him. Again he made more friends, and because of the many questions asked about him I decided to write this brief sketch of the man and his work. A few weeks ago coming up from Toronto, I had the pleasure of presenting him to the Hon. Dr. Jamieson. Before leaving the train Dr. Jamieson thanked me for having put him in touch with Father Cadot, stating that he had thoroughly enjoyed his talk with him, and also that he had learned something of Bruce Peninsula and its Indians.

Father Cadot prides himself on the friendships he enjoys. Protestants, Freemasons and Orangemen of the highest ranks, he laughingly tells you, have accepted of his hospitality, and they have been ever true friends. It's true, he has a beaming way, a radiant sociability that places you at ease. Optimism, cheerfulness and kindness are outstanding features of this remarkable man. He draws sunshine from no niggardly store, and in turn spreads it in the pathways of those who need it most.

Naturally one would wonder what his political leanings are. In the years I have known him he has voted for both political parties. He cannot be said to have any pronounced political views, voting in his judgment for the party that appeals to him most.

Thus we leave this man of God, shut in from the outside world, to act in peace and harmony with his brother of the United Church in making those under their care sober upright and industrious citizens of this great Dominion of ours. In their work they are assisted by Mr. Alex. Moore, Indian Agent, and a returned soldier, who takes deep interest in their welfare. The Chief at Cape Croker is Chas. Jones; Peter Nadiwan, lieutenant in the 9th Grey Horse; Alex. Johnston, Jonah Chegano and William Elliott are the Councillors.

LARGEST URBAN MUNICIPALITY

(Chesley Enterprise)

While valuating Southampton we realized the immense territory it covers. A few years ago several farms were detached from the town corporation and added to Saugeen Township. It seems to us that more farm property in the far outskirts might with advantage to both Saugeen and Southampton be added to the former. Farmers are never very anxious to have lands within an urban municipality on account of the much higher taxation than in the rural corporation. The town of Southampton was surveyed as a city. The original settlers had visions of its being one of Canada's great lake ports. It was named after the large seaport city in the South of England. But it was destined never to become a wonderful harbor though it is wonderfully protected by Chantry Island on which there is a lighthouse. As far as business is concerned Southampton has the handicap of the lake on the west, Port Elgin near by on the south, the Indian Reserve on the north and only a small territory to draw from on the East. But what the town loses in farmers' trade is more than compensated for by the summer visitors. For some 20 years it has been the leading summer resort of Bruce County and there are about 130 cottages along the beach, in fact they spread out into Saugeen reaching nearly half way to Port Elgin. One of these summer homes is a veritable palace and could not have been built for less than $10,000. The cottagers have the advantage of town water and electric lights and the taxes from the cottages help to keep down the town rate. The Ojibway or Chippawa Indians who live about three miles from the town spend nearly all their money in the town. In fact it is nearly all spent before the quarterly pay day and on the day when the agent hands out the filthy ulcer to the redmen there's a scurrying of business men to the reserve to collect their accounts and that isn't the easiest job in the world either. The first settlement at Southampton was made in 1848 by Captain John Spence and William Kennedy and Captain Spence's first vessel bore the appropriate name of the Seagull. The pioneer settlers underwent great privations and the winter of 1851-52 was particularly severe on them when they had to bring in supplies from Owen Sound, the Saucy Jack in command of Captain McDonald which started out late in the fall with provisions from Goderich having gone to the bottom with all on board. It was to Southampton the early settlers of Brant, Arran, Bruce, Saugeen and Elderslie went for their supplies and where they sold their produce. Alexander McNab was the Crown Lands Agent in that town and it was from him nearly all the pioneers in Elderslie Township got their lands. In 1857 the village was incorporated as a town. Southampton made a bold attempt to secure the seat of county town, but all its efforts came to naught. The town had a large tannery at one time, but it has become a defunct institution. However, with the large Bell Furniture Co. plant and the Knechtel plant the town is still holding its own industrially.

On the 4th of November, 1886, Southampton was visited by a disastrous fire. Over 50 buildings were burned and the property loss was estimated at $60,000 with but little insurance. Subscriptions amounting to $8000 were sent in and the County Council remitted the county rates. Southampton is one of the urban municipalities of Bruce that is holding its own fairly well and as Jiggs would put it: "That's saying a mouthful" these days.

BAD WEATHER FOR FARMERS

There are few experiences more heart-breaking than those many farmers in this country have been passing through in the last six weeks or so. With good grain crops standing in the shock many farmers have been mocked by the weather. After the long toil and considerable money cost necessary for tilling his land and planting and harvesting his grain what a blow it is to the farmer to have the saving of that grain prevented by rain after rain, with hardly an interval of sunshine or drying winds. In this province whole fields of oats and other late grains were soaked with rain on the very day fixed upon for drawing in. Very heavy losses in this way have been suffered in Ontario. Corn stands in flooded fields in which workers have virtually to wade in order to gather the crop by hand cutting. Hand cutting, a slow and costly mode of removing the corn, is said to be conducive to the destruction of the corn borer, because the shorter the stubble the less there is for the borer to subsist upon. The root crops are likewise suffering. In many regions the potatoes are rotting in the ground. In the Canadian West, the weather since harvest has been even more adverse, and crops that would have added greatly to the growers' wealth are past saving.

There is comfort in the thought that in Ontario the wheat and the earlier grains generally were under cover before the long spell of unfavorable weather set in. But it is hard to bear the loss of perhaps hundreds of bushels of grain that would have been safely mowed or stacked had the rain kept off a dozen hours. Truly it is by the sweat of his brow that the farmer earns his living, and by the practise of thrift that he succeeds in building up a competence. The farmers on whom the bad weather has brought heavy losses have the sympathy of their fellow-citizens of all callings. It may not be generally known to the tillers of the soil that every adversity they have sets many townspeople thinking about them and dwelling with regret upon their misfortunes. A very large percentage of people living in the towns and cities were brought up in the country and retain the sentiments that seem born of the soil. Between such people and the rural population there is a strong affinity and real fraternity. From their heart, such urban residents wish good luck to the farmer.

HOWICK

They can't beat Howick! Last week there was an item in the Listowel Banner, referring to two Alexander apples which had been left in the Listowel editor's sanctum by a farmer from Wallace. The largest of these measured 13 x 11½ inches. On reading this, Albert Patterson, of the second concession, Howick, selected two nice specimens from his supply of the same variety and brought them to the Fordwich editor's office. On measuring them one was 13½ x 12¼ inches, and the other 13¼ x 12 inches. Well, can someone show us any larger?

A little brown or maple sugar on the hot breakfast cereal offers a welcome change.

THE RADIO DETECTIVE

BY ARTHUR B. REEVE.

RADIO DETECTIVE . . . . . CHAPTER XXV.

Slowly the wind cleared the smoke away, the water quieted down and the echo of the explosion ceased to reverberate through the hills about Rockledge.

"That other thing, aback of them, is gone altogether!" I exclaimed.

"And the motor boat's awash and sinking!" added Easton.

"Yes—but where are the boys?" Kennedy was peering out anxiously over the waters of the harbor.

It was true. Not a sign of the boys could be seen. Had both perished in the terrific explosion? We could only stand, frozen with fear, wondering.

Suddenly Kennedy started down the side of the cliff toward the dock.

"There they are—watch that sinking motorboat."

Sure enough, both Ken and Hank had been blown to the far side of the motorboat when the great crash came. They had come up and had struck out for the nearest floating thing, which was the motorboat. Although it was sinking it afforded them something to hang on. As for the duck boat, it had been completely wiped out by the terrific force of the wire-less bomb, set off by an apparatus tuned to a certain combination of wave-lengths by which a current was released through a sparking coil and the fuse ignited.

We lost no time dashing down the hill and out on the dock at Rockledge. There we jumped into a rowboat and lustily started to pull out to the boys marooned on the motorboat, nursing their bruises and, for the moment, too weakened to attempt the long swim to shore.

"Thank heaven, you're alive!" Easton reached over and dragged Ken into the boat.

It was none too gently that I helped Hank over the side. I felt that it would have made small difference to the world if some accident had actually happened to that incipient crook.

Both boys were considerably shaken up and we did not question them severely but started back to the shore with them.

"How did it happen, Ken?" asked Kennedy at length when we had them sprawled on the float drying out.

I was keeping a sharp eye on Hank. I had seen quite enough of that young gent in action and meant to be careful to see that he did not pull any Easton and he were installing all sorts of radio devices.

Aloft, this hydro-aeroplane, like a mother ship, carried a little radio-plant of Easton's design, a radio-air-telephone, so to speak.

Smeared and greasy, Craig and Easton were hard at work over the engine, looking over the propellers, the pontoons, everything on the "Sea Scout," as well as on the radio torpedo-boat.

Ken could scarcely restrain himself when he was alone with Hank and myself upstairs. He took a step over to Hank, who cringed.

"Why did you lie about my sister and the racing debts, Hank? She might have been at Be-more Park. But neither you nor your parents nor anybody else saw Ruth bet and lose. She has no gambling debts. The others have. But not Ruth. Now why did you say so when you knew it wasn't true?"

"I know it," sniveled Hank. "I lied. I wanted to throw you off. Ruth's all right."

"Yes," and Easton thinks so, too. You'd better look out, Hank, or Easton will give you another licking within an inch of your life."

Hank was a miserable, dejected object. Yet I could not feel sorry for the mucker. All I hoped was that the lesson might sink in and save him. There was just one thing to do for the present and that was to make sure that we were ourselves protected from him.

I thought it was a good time to extract more information from him about Dick. "Where are they taking Dick? You know?"

Hank sniveled again. "Oh, Mr. Jameson! . . . I s'pose up north somewhere—in Nova Scotia, where they take their stunts."

I nodded. Craig and Evans could not get that radiophone ready too fast. Every hour meant that it would be harder to locate the "Scooter" and head it off to save Dick.

Just then there was a noise at the door and the constable entered.

"There, sir," I said sternly. "I want you to take charge of this boy for safe keeping. Don't put him in the lock-up. But hold him somewhere where we can be sure of laying our hands on him. It will give him a chance to think things over. We'll need him."

Hank begged, but I was inexorable. His future could be taken care of later. Now, the question was for us to join in helping Easton and Craig down below.

There wasn't much that we could do. Both Kennedy and Easton were thoroughly familiar with the "Sea Scout." It had been the marvel of Rockledge all that summer. Nor had there been any more than the ordinary amount of precautionary exercises and tuning up necessary. Easton had always kept the radiophone fit.

"There's one thing you can do, Walter," called Kennedy from the cockpit.

"What's that?"

"You can examine that sideway thoroughly, then open those doors. We're ready! All right, Easton, spin that propeller!"

CHAPTER XXVI.

Rae Jarvis and Jack Curtis, when they had left Vira and Glenn, did not return to the Club. Even their cautious souls were not impervious to the idea that the game was up with them as far as any of us were concerned.

Accordingly, though they had nonchalantly climbed into their car with a familiar good-bye and promise to see you later to Glenn and Vira, too busy with the messages to care much about these young crooks, who had caused them so much trouble, Rae and Jack knew they were through. There was only one thing for them to do and that was to make a safe getaway as quickly as they could before Craig and the rest of us returned or they would be landed in the other cells next to Cauliflower Pete.

They had taken the chance to speed as far out on the end of the Island as they could, by means of the underground network of the "Scooter" gang, they had signalled the "Scooter" to put in and pick them up where they abandoned their car. Once aboard the "Scooter" they had figured they would be safe.

The fact of the matter was, however, that Rae and Jack Curtis were as safe with the mysterious skipper of the "Scooter" as a paraffin cat chased by his antibodies in Hades. He swore when he found that it was they whom he had been signalled to pick out on the tip of the east end of the Island. He might have been far out to sea if it had not been for this delay. His sole purpose in life at that moment was to make a safe getaway. He feared Craig Kennedy. And he was sore at Rae and Jack. He had no further use for them and did not hesitate to tell them so. It was a bitter pill for those smart young criminals to swallow, to realize that they were merely little cogs in a machine that the gears had been stripped and they were slated for the scrap heap.

new stunts to get away. The boy was tricky, no good.

Easton was regarding the Radio Shack back of us, and thoughtfully piecing together the sudden succession of events that had greeted our homecoming.

"You're a brick, Ken!" he exclaimed. "Yes, tell us what happened while we were away."

"Quickly Ken ran over, not boastfully but quite briefly and modestly, the events that had eliminated Ruth as well as Vira and Glenn Buckley as suspects, in his mind.

"And then," concluded Ken, "I made up my mind that whatever it was it was dangerous to the Radio Shack and I must get it away at any cost. The side of the cliff toward the dock. As much about that part of it as I do—perhaps more. Perhaps you know how it was done."

"I could make a shrewd guess," cut in Easton. "But why destroy this place? We were not in it. Nobody was in it. They could not get us by blowing it up—not at that time."

Kennedy smiled. He saw through it instantly. "No. But they must know of and fear your radiophone, Easton—the 'Sea Scout.' It happens to be the only thing that will catch them!"

"Yes," Easton was thoughtful. "I was thinking of that. Really until these crooks came along I had no idea how important some of these inventions we have in the Radio Shack might be!"

Our conversation was interrupted by the appearance of the very polite and obliging clerk from the cub who had watched out to see that all the messages that come from radio fans were delivered as soon as possible to Kennedy.

This time he had another large sheaf of messages, telegrams, letters and leaflets. "There's one, sir," he said, "that just came in and the operator told me the man who sent it insisted it was very urgent and that it had been telephoned first to Mrs. Gerard who wanted you to have it right away. The obliging clerk bowed his way out and Kennedy felt to looking over the messages.

"I should say it was important," Craig exclaimed as he read the message the clerk had mentioned. "It comes from a little cruiser on the Sound named the 'Sea Vamp.' Listen to this: 'It's supposed to be from Dick, broadcasting. Will be back the first chance I can get to swim ashore.'"

Ken was quite excited. "I believe he sent it! I've been expecting Dick to do it. That's what fooled me before. But this sounds right. Dick's a good swimmer. Oh, I hope he doesn't try it in the middle of the Sound!"

Kennedy was re-reading the message. "No harbors here—only low cliffs along the Sound. He must be pretty far east of us then, where the sand cliffs become lower—almost, I'd say, to the end of the Island."

"Yes; getting farther and farther away," commented Easton. "We ought to be doing something, or they'll slip out into the ocean and we won't know where to locate them. They'll be as elusive as Rum Row. Now, what are we going to do?"

Ken and I were looking over the speed boats in the harbor. But Craig never had any such simple idea of catching up with the "Scooter."

"Why," he smiled, "to catch Dick? Your radiophone—of course!"

"Why—yes—of course!"

As if moved by the same thought, we all rose. I took Hank's arm. I was not going to suffer that young man to get away this time.

Laddie was overjoyed at seeing us. He had no idea what a valuable service he had rendered. But a word from Ken was enough as he leaned over and patted his head. "Good dog, Laddie!"

As the others were making ready, I took the matter into my own hands, stepped to the telephone and called our friend the constable in the town. "I have a bit of business for you, constable."

By this time Easton had opened a trap door in the floor and started down a ladder below. Craig followed him.

It was down there in what once had been the main part of the former Evans estate boathouse that Easton had hoisted his hydro-aeroplane on which he had been working. He always referred to it now as his radiophone, and had given it the very appropriate name of the "Sea Scout."

This name had been painted on the tub which formed the floating boat part for passengers, between the two wing floats.

Ken and I remained upstairs to guard Hank while Craig and Easton below began working, coats off, and overalls, to tune up the "Sea Scout" on which, under Kennedy's advice,

Tree in a Hat!

The cedar of Lebanon is not common in England even to-day, and less than 200 years ago there was not a single tree of this species in Europe. A celebrated botanist, Bernard de Justeau, visited Palestine in 1737, and was struck by the stately appearance of the trees on Mount Lebanon. He selected a tiny sapling, and, for lack of a better "pot," filled his hat with the native soil, planted his young cedar, and brought it away.

Yourses were slow in those days, and the botanist's vessel was driven out of its course by gales. Even the drinking water became scarce, and there would have been none for the precious plant had not the botanist shared his ration with it. He was in danger of a serious breakdown in health when the ship arrived at Marseille, but the tree still lived.

The Excise authorities then made trouble, thinking that Justeau's jealous care of his hatful of soil meant that it concealed some dutiable article. He was ordered to empty it, but he pleaded so hard, and described so graphically the hardships he had endured for the sake of his botanical specimen, that at last he was allowed to go ashore.

The sapling was planted in the famous Jardin des Plantes in Paris, grew to gigantic proportions, and became one of the sights of the city. It grew to a height of 80ft., and continued to flourish for a century.

A Dream.

I dreamed a dream, a passing dream,
'Twas wondrous as Aurora's bush,
And radiant as shining sun,
Which tints the cheeks with rosy flush;
Its gentle music in the heart
Was sweeter than the breeze's song;
'Twas combination of all joys
For which the human heart doth long.

Its step was like the falling snow,
So quietly it won the heart,
And sat upon its throne within,
To be, of life, the higher part.
This sweetest dream which comes to me
Is constant as the stars above,
And fills the heart with sweet content;
It is the white winged angel love.

Canada from Coast to Coast

Halifax, N.S.—The commercial apple crop of Nova Scotia is estimated to be 622,800 barrels, or 70 per cent. of the crop of 1925. As these figures represent the quantities of apples that will move to market, approximately 3,114 cars are expected as compared with 4,449 cars last year.

Saint John, N.B.—The convention of the Canadian Boards of Trade here, with delegates from all the provinces, opened under happy auspices with greetings and addresses from the Governor-General, the Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick, the Premier of the province, the Mayor of Saint John and others. The conference was hailed as another factor in bridging west and east, in unifying national sentiment and maintaining a friendly trade basis with the United States. Lieut.-Governor Todd, presiding, remarked that trade was a great civilizer and that the present meeting of delegates from all Canada should help towards solving national problems, including those of the younger citizens.

Montreal, Que.—An annual grant equivalent to the grant given by the Dominion Government has been given to the British Immigration and Colonization Association by the Overseas Settlement Committee, a recent cable advice. This is expected to considerably expand the Association's work of settling British boys between the ages of 14 and 18 on Canadian farms. Since the society received its charter four years ago about 500 boys per year have been so moved and settled.

Kingston, Ont.—Ontario cheddar cheese again won the Imperial trophy in London, the entrant in this case being W. C. Taylor of Burridge. Word to the effect comes from Mr. Rublow, Chief Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario. This is the third year Mr. Taylor has carried off this particular prize.

Winnipeg, Man.—Paper making will commence next month at Fort Alexander at the plant of the Manitoba Pulp and Paper Co. There will be two trains weekly from the plant to Winnipeg, transporting the finished product, much of which is expected to be sent across the line. The plant is modern in every way and will employ a staff of 300, while 400 men will be working in getting out logs.

Saskatoon, Sask.—Saskatoon Clay Products, Limited, has been incorporated with an authorized capital stock of $50,000, to operate a brick-making plant in this city.

Victoria, B.C.—British Columbia's apple crop is 750,000 boxes ahead of last year's production, according to W. E. Robertson, provincial horticulturist. The total yield is placed at 3,625,000 boxes as compared with 2,359,000 last year. This year's total is the largest in the history of the province.

Natural Resources Bulletin.

The recent formation of the Anticosti Corporation to exploit the pulpwood resources of the island of the same name in one of the first incidents in many years to draw attention to this interesting, valuable but neglected bit of Quebec province.

The fisheries around the island, which have been hitherto comparatively neglected, are valuable and important.

Anticosti is a large island lying off the Gaspé coast, at the inner end of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and at the mouth of the great river. It is situated between the 49th and 50th degrees of latitude (nearly the same as that of the north of France). It contains an area of 2,460,000 acres of land of the best quality, similar, said the late Sir William Logan, the eminent Canadian geologist, to the fine arable soil of Ontario, and the Genesee county, New York State. It possesses over 800 miles of sea coast, is about 140 miles long, and 35 miles broad in the widest part, with an average breadth of 27½ miles. Anticosti slopes gradually from its elevated northern coast to the grassy savannas which skirt the southern shore, and thus, in a great measure, the fertile portions of the country are protected from severe winter winds. Its climate is very healthy. The winter's cold is considerably tempered by the waters of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and the heat of the summer is, to a certain extent, moderated by the same influence. Vegetation progresses very rapidly, and crops come to perfection in good season. The soil is of good quality, being rich loam intermixed with limestone; valuable forests are to be found on the greater part of the island, and although the timber generally is not of the largest size, it is of a superior quality, and well adapted for shipbuilding and pulpwood.

The seal fishery, which could be carried on here as well in winter as in summer, might be turned to profitable account, large numbers of these animals being visible during the former season, and thousands of them being observed in the summer and autumn at the entrance of almost all the bays and rivers, where they remain comparatively unmolested.

Hunting on the island is of considerable value, though of far less importance than its fisheries. The animals found on the island, whose skins are of marketable value, are black bears, which are very abundant, otters, martens, and the silver grey, red, black, and, sometimes the white fox. Great quantities of ducks, geese, and other wild fowl resort to the lakes and bays of the island. There is also understood to be a few reindeer on the island, placed there for purposes of acclimatizing.

A company was once formed for the purpose of colonizing the island of Anticosti, and for working and developing its resources. They laid out town sites at K.H.S. Bay, Fox Bay, and at the South West Point, and divided the island into twenty counties, of about 120,000 acres, each subdivided into five townships. The scheme was not a success. In 1880 the Government of Canada laid a submarine telegraph cable connecting the island with the mainland, an inestimable boon to shipping trade.

Sir William E. Logan, in his Geographical Report of Canada, after referring to deposits of peat, or peat bogs, in different parts of Canada, says: "The most extensive peat deposits of Canada are found in Anticosti, along the bay land on the coast of the island from Heath Point to within eight or nine miles of South West Point. The thickness of the peat, as observed on the coast, was from three to ten feet, and it appears to be of an excellent quality. The height of this plain may be, on an average, fifteen feet above high water mark, and it can be easily drained and worked. Between South West Point and the west end of the island there are many peat bogs, varying in superficial area from 100 to 1,000 acres."

Near South West Point there are several large salt ponds, which, if labor was abundant, might be turned to a profitable account in the manufacture of salt. Streams of excellent water reach the sea on every part of the coast of Anticosti. They are for the most part too small to admit boats, becoming rapid immediately within their entrances, and even the largest of them are barred with sand excepting for short intervals of time, after the spring floods, or after continued heavy rains. There are a number of good natural harbors.

Lt. Frank H. Conant, U.S.N. Who broke a world's seaplane record twice in 24 hours. He piloted the Curtiss seaplane of 700 h.p. at a speed of 251.5 miles per hour, which is 1½ miles faster than his earlier record. The previous record was 245.7 miles.

"The Hills of Rest."

Beyond the last horizon's rim,
Beyond adventure's farthest quest,
Somewhere they rise, serene and dim,
The happy, happy Hills of Rest.
Upon their sunlit slopes uplift
The castles we have built in Spain—
White fair amid the summer drift,
Our faded gardens flower again.
They all are there: The days of dream
That build the inner lives of men;
The silent, sacred years we deem
The might be, and the might have been.
Some evening when the sky is gold
I'll follow day into the west;
Nor pause, nor heed, till I behold
The happy, happy Hills of Rest.

The Port of London can store one million tons of goods in its warehouses; there is usually on hand there sufficient meat to supply England's population for three weeks, as well as a supply of tobacco large enough to provide Britons with a year's smoking.

On!fow.

To-day they took the Old Elm down—
That stately glory of light and shade
That sheltered the ancient house, and made
Homes for the sparrows in its crown,
And, low in the branches stout and brown.
Refuge for robins, who unafraid
Built their nests with homely art
Close to the great three's kindly heart!

"Its long beneficence is done!"
Not so! Full many a winter night
Shall be made welcoming and bright
With warmth the great tree gained from the sun—
A golden treasure, fairly won—
Raying outward its genial light
From the old fireplace, deep and wide,
With children clustered on each side!
Gray ash! The end! It shall be spread
(When Spring alights on the snow-streaked hills,
And good brown Earth to her coming thrille)
Over each dreaming flower-bed,
And there, with sunshine and rain be sped—
Lo, Hyacinths, Crocuses, Daffodils!
And the Old Elm's might shall be flowing there
In glory of color and fragrance rare!

The Women's Poet.

Coventry Patmore was the laureate of women. He was married three times, and died—a widower—in 1896. He had a varied career, being, in turn, artist, scientist, librarian and critic.

Boon Nature to the woman bows;
She walks in earth's whole glory clad
And, chiefest far herself of shows,
All others help her, and are glad:
No splendor 'neath the sky's proud dome
But serves for her familiar wear;
The far-fetched diamond finds its home
Flashing and smouldering in her hair;
For her the seas their pearls reveal:
Art and strange lands her pomp supply
With purple, chrome, and cochineal,
Ochre, and lapis lazuli;
The worn its golden wool presents;
Whatever runs flies, dives, or delves,
All doff for her their ornaments,
Which suit her better than themselves;
And all, by this their power to give,
Proving her right to take, proclaim
Her beauty's clear prerogative
To profit so by Eden's blame.

Cows are rather oddities in Palestine, where goats and condensed milk cans produce most of the milk that is used. A Californian who is interested in the Near East Relief work has recently sent a milk cow to the farm school of the Relief at Nazareth, and the youngsters, lost in admiration of the useful animal, have christened her "Lady Cow."

Characters Told by the Tongue.

Some of us are so occupied in judging others that we go through life without ever really knowing ourselves! That is a great disadvantage, for if we are unaware of our weak points we cannot strengthen them. If, however, we call to our aid the study of glossomancy, which deals with the tongue and what that organ reveals, we can get to know what we really are. So stand in front of a mirror and put your tongue right out.

If it is short and narrow—there is an astonishing variety in tongues—inherent styness and ill-temper is indicated. The owner of such a tongue would never be loyal to a friend.

The short and broad tongue, with a wide tip, is a good tongue. Its owner will be honest, affectionate, sympathetic, and could be trusted in all circumstances. Ambition, however, does not go with such a tongue.

If the tip is narrow—well, that is the tongue of an untruthful person. If the tongue is abnormally long, its owner will be gifted mentally, but will be deceitful.

A narrow tongue, with a round tip, is the tongue of the artist, sculptor, or musician—with the odds on the latter. Temperamentally, the owner would be generous but short-tempered.

A furrowed tongue is quite good. Its owner would have most of the virtues and no vices. But it is not a "business" tongue. The latter has distinct points on the right and left and no defined tip. The owner of such a tongue has the business instinct and will get on in the world.

A thin tongue, with rather a pointed tip, is that of the born orator. And a tongue which thickens towards the tip and has "mounts" or pronounced swellings on each side is the tongue of the happy-go-lucky optimist, liked by everyone, but of unstable character.

Home Truths.

How some men treat other men is very seldom.
Get on by all means, but mind they are fair means.
Nothing is worse for the memory than to borrow money.
Put your heart in your work, but don't forget your head.
The odd number that many have faith in is—Number One.
"Try, try again" is all right, unless the object is all wrong.
A little knowledge is a dangerous thing. So is a little widow.
Saints may be made from sinners, but that's no excuse for sinning.
If you're proud of your ancestors, put your descendants in the same position.
Strange, but it's the man who can't meet his creditors who meets most of them.

Do Flowers Dislike Jazz?

Flowers that develop a tendency to turn away from music, and are to all appearances considerably affected by the sound of it, have been observed recently.

In experiments, cyclamens, carnations, and the lily were among those most affected. Some of these plants were used as a decoration close to a jazz band, and it was soon discovered that all the blossoms had deliberately turned their backs on the music. They were dejected, but before long the flowers had repeated their performance.

Tea and Tongues in Throat.

In Tibet it is the custom of natives when meeting, to stick out their tongues as a mark of respect. A peasant who would accost a person of higher rank without doing this would be regarded as grossly discourteous. Tea drinking is also necessary at social visits, the tea being emulsified with butter flavored with soda.

Experienced.

"Were you ever in a position where you had to talk about something of which you were ignorant?"
"Sure. I've been through college!"

MAN IS CLIMAX OF EVOLUTION

Descending From Trees, He Made His Hands Organs of Mind.

The two sketches illustrate the progress of man. At the left is shown prehistoric man. At the right, perfect manhood as exemplified by the Greek's conception of Apollo.

Secrets of Science.

By David Dietz.

While modern biology teaches that man is related directly to other forms of life upon the earth and that he is the descendant of a mammal that was also the common ancestor of the man-like apes, it is a mistake to think of biology as degrading the state of man.

Rather, it ennobles him, pointing out that he is the climax of millions of years of evolution. Biologists point out that man represents a new departure in the evolutionary process and that he represents an ascent in the evolutionary scale.

The fact that most of the man-like apes travel from tree branch to tree branch swinging by their arms after the fashion of acrobats, is believed to have been a significant fact which led to the evolution of man.

Such a mode of locomotion requires the utmost precision and judgment, for a false leap would mean a fall with possible death.

Mental acuteness must have developed as a result of this. Jack London, in his "Before Adam," points out that men frequently dream of falling but wake up before they seem to strike ground. He thought that this dream was an inheritance from our earliest ancestors who had sometimes slipped in making a leap and fallen, but who had caught another branch before striking the ground.

But while tree-life had much to do with the evolution of man, it is the fact that certain of the primates descended from the trees to live on the ground, which accounts for the development of man.

As a result of the descent to the ground, man developed the erect-standing posture. No longer needing his hands as a means of locomotion, he developed them as the organs of the mind.

Life on the ground cut him off from the easily obtained tree fruit and he became a hunter and took to living in caves.

That freed him from climatic restrictions and led to the development of communal life.

Man, as we have said, represents an ascent in the evolutionary scale. The important advances in man include: Great increase in brain capacity. Development of articulate speech. Development of erect posture. Development of prominent chin. Shorter arms. Smaller teeth. Development of thumbs set in opposition to the other fingers.

Changing Time.

"Why does not the curtain rise?" asked the King at the theatre.
"Because, Your Majesty," replied the Lord Chancellor, "because the Queen has not finished shaving." And forthwith the Lord Chancellor was right, because in that day all of the female parts upon the stage were taken by young men—female impersonators.

When real women went upon the Boards in London in 1639 society was shocked by the terrible immorality of the thing. A change in the attitude of the public occurs with almost every minute. The music that was considered insufferable twenty-five years ago is hailed to-day as the basis of a new art.

Any Fool Can—

—Talk loudly, but only a wise man can listen quietly.
—See a failure, but it takes brains to discover the cause.
—Drive fast, but good driving is safe driving.
—Tell the boss where to hear in, but it seldom pays big dividends.
—Get his name printed in big type if he is foolish enough.
—Give advice if he does not have to take any responsibility for it.
—Strut up trouble but it takes wise men to settle it.

Now is the Time.

"When the clock strikes ten," he whispered.
To the girl he loved the best,
"I'm going to ask you something—
Put my fortune to the test."
In her cheek appeared a dimple,
Laughter filled her eyes of blue,
"Do you know," she murmured, smiling,
"That the clock is slow—like you?"

"Magnetic" Sense Discovered.

A French group has come to the conclusion that homing pigeons have what they call a "magnetic" sense. The birds use the earth as a sort of compass and high power radio or other electrical stations in their path frequently give them trouble. It is explained that the pigeon's sense of direction lies in the response of their sensitive ear canals to terrestrial magnetic fields and that with each change of direction the bird feels an electrical response in its brain.

To the Electors of South Bruce

Ladies and Gentlemen:
 On account of the extent of the riding and the state of the weather it will be a physical impossibility for me to see nearly all the electors and it is necessary for me to appeal for your vote and influence through the medium of the press.
 The vital issue this election is the maintenance of the Ontario Temperance Act. As the electors of this province have on two occasions voted in favor of the O.T.A. continuing in force, I believe it is the duty of any government to see that the will of the people as expressed at the polls shall remain the law of the land until the electorate by a plebiscite pronouncement against it.
 At the last session of the Legislature there was a gentleman's agreement among the leaders of those opposed to any tampering with the O.T.A. that the sitting member for the riding, if a Progressive, would not be opposed by a Liberal and vice versa. In nearly every riding of Ontario this arrangement has been mutually respected.
 I was nominated at Teeswater early in June and had the endorsement of the Prohibition Union of South Bruce and Mr. Anderson about a week later. No suggestion of a joint convention was offered by the Liberals at that time when it would have been much easier to have arranged for a joint candidate. When the offer was made a general election was near and there was no time to make satisfactory arrangements. The idea of a convention with an equal number of delegates from both parties would only have resulted in a deadlock and thus widen the breach between the two parties.
 In regard to any other suggestions made to me by Mr. Anderson as to a joint convention they were not made until we had been notified of a meeting in Chesley on November 4th at which accredited representatives of Messrs. Sinclair, Raney and the Prohibition Union were to be present to try avoid three-cornered contests in both North and South Bruce. The four candidates and their representatives met in Paisley on November 6th and mutually agreed to abide by the decision of the arbitrator, and I was officially endorsed as the anti-Ferguson Candidate in South Bruce.

 I am in honor bound to stand after having received official endorsement and if this results in a three-cornered contest, Mr. Anderson must shoulder the responsibility so far as South Bruce is concerned. He came to the Paisley meeting after having arrangements made whereby he and his executive met with Mr. Sam Carter in Walkerton, when he was on his way to Paisley on Saturday morning and he had ample opportunity to present his case. At Paisley Mr. Anderson agreed to abide by the decision of the delegates and Mr. Carter, the representative of Messrs. Sinclair, Raney and the Prohibition Union and when the decision went against him, he declared that he had been deceived and that he had been led to believe that he was to be the choice in South Bruce or that he would not have come to the meeting. His position is unwarrantable in that he agreed to abide by the decision of Mr. Carter, believing he was the choice, and falling in this he now declares that he will not agree to withdraw but is in the field to stay.
 I am quite willing to let the electors decide between us.
 I confidently appeal to the fair-minded electors of all parties in the riding who wish the defeat of a Premier who alone is responsible for a policy that is not in accord with the traditions of his party and who has broken his pledged word to the electorate of this province.
 Your humble servant,

 Mr. Reuben Kuhl was in bed several days, a victim of la grippe.
 The Moltke Beef Ring had its meeting last Wednesday evening at Hy. Ortman's. Nearly all shareholders were present and seemed well satisfied to continue another year. Mr. Peter Diemort entered the heaviest beast, and the average weight on the whole was about 435 lbs.

 Dear Editor:
 I have been thinking of writing you for some time, as I have seen a number of reports of the West published in your paper this fall concerning weather conditions. We certainly have had a very peculiar year. The season opened up too cold, then it turned too hot, but we lived through it all. We were lucky in this section, as we had no snow during harvest to hurt, although we had bad weather at the beginning of threshing, snow and rain, but after two weeks of bad weather, it cleared up, and we had four weeks of the finest weather. Threshing was all done by the end of October. The crops around here were medium, averaging about 15 bushels to the acre. We had splendid weather until Nov. 6th, when it snowed and turned colder.
 I know in some parts, west and North from here, the crops had been snowed under and flattened to the ground. The farmers sure had some time to get it cut, but the last four weeks of good weather was greatly in their favor.
 I see by your paper that you have another election on in Ontario, and your Premier boasts Government control on the liquor question. We have Government control in Alberta, and it is the worst thing that ever happened or can happen to any country. It is far worse than the open bars. Now they go into the parlor and sit down, as they cannot get served standing up, and there they sit, and when the time comes to go home they are not able to get up. These are facts. I saw women and children in these beer parlors drunk, where you wouldn't see a woman stand at the bar and drink, so they passed a by-law that women won't be allowed to enter these parlors at Edmonton and Calgary, just before the elections, as the hotelkeepers were afraid that the temperance people would turn them out. Just an election dodge. I saw young women staggering on the sidewalk in a town not far from here.

 Vote it down, because it is a curse for any country, this Government control business.
 Yours truly,

UPHELD REPUTATION
 Once more Bruce County upheld her splendid reputation in live stock judging when the team of Junior Farmers, composed of Harold Garner, Chesley; George Goodfellow, Teeswater; Alvi Thacker, Teeswater; and spares, Irvin Vance, Teeswater; and R. A. Patterson, Ripley, took eighth place in the annual Inter-county Stock Judging Competition held at the Royal Show, Toronto, Nov. 11th, when 32 teams competed for the Jeffrey Bull Memorial Trophy.
 The standing of the team is particularly gratifying to the coaches when the keenness of the competition is considered and the fact that several of the top teams had two-year O.A.C. men on their team. This, coupled with the fact that in Bruce County we have splendid commercial live stock but lack the high class show stock which the boys in some counties have to practice on, placed the boys at a slight disadvantage. The three boys judging did very uniform work and out of a possible 1000 points Garner secured 740, Goodfellow 728 and Thacker 726
