In the general elections of that year the Whiteway Government was sustained by a two-thirds majority. But went to the Governor and asked for a dissolution; but this was refused, and on appeal to the Imperial authorities, the Governor was sustained. Meantime the court continued its fatal work.

Nothing then remained for Sir William and his Government but to resign; this they accordingly did, and Mr. Goodridge, of the opposition, formed a ministry. As Mr. Goodridge's friends were in a minority in the House his Government could not work; consequently no business could be done until the members of the opposition were reduced from twenty.

According to announcement, Father

Hopper, of the Paulists, delivered a sermon on the evils of intemperance in St. Dun stan's Cathedral on Thursday evening last. There was a large congregation present The Rev. preacher pointed out the numer ous great evils consequent on drunkenness. These evils and miseries were not confined to this life; but most of all, it was to be foared, were everlasting in the life hereafter. He dwelt upon the evil and misery drunkenness brought on man, on woman and on the family. The treating habit he looked upon as one of the sources of drunkenness. The saloons were dangerous institutions, where these who used liquor at all were likely to become drunkards. He advised those in the business to abandon it as soon as possible. The Rev. preacher gave many vivid illustrations of the ruin $7.50 and misery caused by over indulgence in intoxicating drinks. He advised total abtinence to all who were liable to drink to excess, and to all who drank in moderation as an example and for the advance the virtue of temperance.

THE AUTUMN OF LIFE. BY FREDERICK GEORGE LEE, D.D.

When knees are weak and palsied, When brains can toil no more. When hearts dream o'er the glories Of a bright untrodden shore: When long from nest of spring The summer birds have fled: Rich tints of autumn faded, And blooming flowers all dead;

When rooms are lone and silent When for eve's welcome shadows Come sighs at break of day; Or when gold sunlight smiteth... Damp vales and gloomy caves, Fresh plaint for stars to sparkle Above the mournful waves;

When Age grows chill and weary, When sight is weak and dim, Comes back the prayer of childle The old familiar hymn : Desire grows strong to wander Where Youth's brief sunshine fell First home-love unforgotten, Old garden, well-known dell:

Comes back in summer noontide The scent of hay new-mown, Or herb crushed in the Autumn To make its virtues known: Come back lost joys and longings Missed voices, morning skies, As flares the flame of taper Refore it falls and dies

When years have soothed old sorrows When Time hath dried the tear Through loss and separation, By hearth or home er bier, Grows strong an old affection, Desire, with sigh long-drawn, To rest where those gone forward Lie waiting for the dawn Beneath the Church's shelter.

Beneath her sacred walls, Where white snows cloths the grav Or warmest sunshine falls Where passes daily shadow

From tower or spire or dome-A resting place at evening An antetype of Home.

"I suffered untold misery for overy three months from neuralgia of the stomach. Physicians did their best to help me, but all attempts were baffled. I saw South American Nervine advertised and resolved to try it. The first bottle gave me great relief, and after I had gaed six bottles I was completely cured of the dreadful disease. CHAPTER I-(Continued.)

The young Elizabeth, who knew no other country than the desolate one which she had inhabited from the age of four years, discovered Leauties which nature bestows even upon these inhospitable climes; and, desert where she lived? to whom plain. Some of the monuments with innocence finding pleasure everywhere, she amused herself with climbing the rocks which bordered the lake, in search of the eggs of hawks and white vultures, that build their nests there during summer. Sometimes she caught wood pigeons to fill a little aviary, and at others angled for corassins, which move in shoasl, whose purple shells, lying against one another, appear through the water like a piece of fire covered the move that the prace solution of the providence cannot hear the prayers faculties when the report of a gun revived her hopes. She had never heard this sound but from the hand angled for corassins, which move in with liquid silver. It never occurred to the happy days of her childhood that there could be a lot more fortunate than her own.
