CHAPTER IX. THE LAST OF GODFREY KNIGHTON.

The table was laid, the butler and footmen hovering about; and after arranging the flowers in a vase, Iris took her seat opposite the urn.

The signor softly hummed a little air and rubbed his hands.

"Mr. Knighton—did he not down?" he said, in a tone of surprise.

"My father is not up yet," said Iris. "He was very tired last night, and not well, I am afraid. I have told his valet not to disturb him," she sighed.

"So! I am sorry!" murmured the signor. "Yes, I do remember that he did not seem well. It is the weather; these cold winds and hot sun, they are trying and dangerous. I myself feel upset." And Iris, looking at him as he spoke, saw that the pallor which she had noticed was more marked than it had been in the garden. "The English climate," he went on, as he took his place, "is, with all its charming varieties, rather periodic. Tut, tut! I am sorry my friend, your father, is not well. Yes, I myself noticed that he seemed pale and—what shall I say—worried. Is it not so?"

Iris sighed.

"It is quite true; and yet, what could there be to worry her father into an illness?"

"Do you think it would be well to send for the doctor?" suggested the signor.

Iris started and turned pale at the idea.

"Oh, no, no! You don't think my father is really ill?" she said, with quick apprehension. "He is only tired, and—and has overdone himself."

"Yes, yes. No doubt that is it," assented the signor, hastily, as if he regretted having mentioned the doctor. "As you say, he is only tired; he will be down directly, no doubt, and will laugh at us for our fears." And the signor laughed himself, but in so smirchless a fashion that Iris looked at him with a vague feeling of awe and dread.

A strange heaviness weighed upon her; the house seemed unusually quiet; the servants appeared to move about with even less than their usual bounds. She could eat nothing, and made pretense with a piece of toast and her cup of coffee that the signor might not be embarrassed. But Signor Ricardo's appetite seemed anything but in its usual robust condition, and Iris noticed that his hand shook as he raised his coffee cup to his lips, so that the spoon rattled in the saucer.

"I think it is cold this morning," he said, as if in explanation. "Your pretty flowers must thank you for bringing them into this warm room, Miss Iris."

"But why should you go?" said Iris, opening her eyes.

"I—I—" stammered the signor. "Oh, it was merely to save you the trouble of ascending the stairs, my dear young lady."

Iris smiled half-sadly.

"That is not much trouble," she said, absently. "But I think, after all, I will not go—yet."

"Quite right—quite right!" said the signor, approvingly, and furtively wiping his forehead; "it is not wise to break a man's sleep when he has reached the age of my dear friend, father."

"But my father is not old!" said Iris, half-amused, half-annoyed, by the signor's soliloquy. "He is only middle-aged, Signor Ricardo."

"True, true," he admitted; "but still—"

He stopped abruptly, for the door opened and Felice entered.

She did not even glance at the signor, who started and turned away as she entered, but walked straight up to Iris.

"Will the signorina come up to her room with me?" she said.

Iris looked at her with faint surprise.

"Come upstairs? Why, Felice?" she asked.

"I have something to say to the signorina," said the woman.

Her face was very pale, and her eyes so completely covered by her lids that nothing of the pupil could be seen. Her manner, too, was marked by a deep, set constraint, which made her voice utterly expressionless and mechanical.

"Is anything the matter?" said Iris, her hand going to her heart.

"No, no!" said Felice quickly, but still in the same dull, mechanical manner. "Come with me, miss."

"I—I am sure something is the matter!" said Iris. "Of course I will come with you."

As she moved to the door, Felice drew back to let her pass, and then gave one direct, searching and threatening glance at the signor.

He met her eyes with a stolid stare, then shrugged his shoulders and turned to the window.

Five, ten minutes passed, then there came the sound of hurrying feet, and voices speaking in sharp accents of alarm and terror. The signor, standing alone by the window, shook like a leaf.

"Peste!" he hissed between his teeth. "They have found him!"

The next moment Lafont, the valet, burst into the room.

"For Heaven's sake, signor!" he exclaimed, "come at once!—my master—"

"He stopped, panting, and pointed to the ceiling.

"The signor struck an attitude of astonishment.

"What do you say?" he said. "What has happened?—your master?"

"Heaven help us!" said the terrified man. "My master, Mr. Knighton, is dead, sir!"

Signor Ricardo had been waiting for it all the morning, but when the word was uttered it struck him almost as if he had not known it already.

"Dead!" he exclaimed, and the terror that shone in his white face and staring eyes might well have been mistaken by the servant for surprise.

"Dead!"

"Yes, sir! For Heaven's sake, come upstairs! I—I was the first to find him! I—I went in to call him, not liking that he should lie so long; he was always up so early, signor, and—and not hearing him, I—I went in. The door was always unlocked, sir, and—and I saw him on the bed as he lay now—dead, stone dead! my poor master!" and the tears sprang into his eyes.

"Where is the doctor?" demanded Ricardo.

"I have sent for him, sir," said the man; "I sent for him as I came downstairs. Oh, my poor master! my poor young mistress!"

"Your young mistress! Ah, yes!" murmured the signor, "she is indeed your young mistress now! All this is hers—hers now of a surety!"

The man looked at him half-amazed and half-indignant.

"Who thinks of such things now?" he said. "Poor, dear young lady! It will kill her. Come upstairs, sir!"

Reluctantly, and with a very white face, the signor followed Lafont upstairs, and the two entered the still chamber.

There lay Godfrey Knighton of the Revels, last night lord of the manor of Beavertley, now lord only of six feet of mother earth!

Kneeling by the bed, with her cheek lying on the cold hand, was Iris, her eyes fixed with a dazed horror on the white, still face; beside her, her hand resting on the girl's head in an attitude of loving protection and devotion, stood Felice. All about the house there rose a dull, hushed murmur and stir, but in that chamber peace reigned triumphant.

The signor advanced on tiptoe, his eyes carefully avoiding the dead man's face; but Felice heard the step, and, raising her hand, stopped him with a gesture and pointed to the door.

The signor hesitated not a second, but, pressing his hands to his eyes, as if overwhelmed with grief, stole out, and the door closed upon the dead man, his daughter, and the woman watching over her.

But as he went down the stairs there rose a wild, heart-rending cry, and the words, "Father! Father!"

Admiral Beatty Welcomed by New York.

Victor of Jutland Receives Tremendous Ovation--L. G. May Have to Face Vote of Censure--A Rupture in Negotiations--Government Condemns De Valera's Message.

BEATTY IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21. Admiral Earl Beatty arrived here today on the Aquitania to attend the American Legation Convention in Kansas City, and later to serve in an advisory capacity to the British Delegation at the Disarmament Conference in Washington. He was greeted by destroyers, airplanes, the roar of the fort guns and by thousands of people.

VOICE OF CENSURE THREATENED.

LONDON, Oct. 21. Unionist members of Parliament have given notice that they will move what is equivalent to a vote of censure of the Lloyd George Government when Irish affairs are discussed in the house. Owing to the attitude of the Extreme Unionists the fear is expressed that there will be a split in the party at the Annual Convention next month.

IRISH NEGOTIATIONS NEARLY SEVERED.

LONDON, Oct. 21. Negotiations between British officials and Sinn Fein leaders to-day barely escaped being definitely broken off. Sinn Fein delegates still were apprehensive this afternoon that the session on Monday might be the last. The Government delegates, according to Sinn Fein sources, took violent exception to Eamonn De Valera's message to the Pope, and this, with other subjects including that of Ulster, left negotiations hanging by a mere string.

IDEAL BUT--

LONDON, Oct. 21. In an article entitled "Lloyd George and Washington," the Spectator to-day says that if the British Empire and the United States can really get together they may accomplish far more for peace and justice than can be accomplished by any other method. "Mr. Lloyd George's prime duty," says the Periodical, "must be to make it clear to the President, Secretary of State, and to those who command power in the Senate, that he has come, not to watch, or criticize or bargain, but to support President Harding in the great task he has undertaken. If Great Britain and the United States unite, we may preserve our nationalism and also secure peace and disarmament."

CAIYPSO FOR LISBON.

LONDON, Oct. 21. The Admiralty is sending the warship Caiyso to Lisbon, owing to fears of British residents in the Portuguese Capital, where some reports indicate that the revolution was not accomplished without bloodshed. The new Foreign Secretary, however, says the Government has adequate forces to maintain order.

SUGAR FALLS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Oct. 21. Wholesale sugar prices were reduced 25 cents to-day, making quotations granulated $2.20 and yellow $7.70 per hundred.

Shipping Notes.

S.S. Manoa sailed for Montreal at daylight this morning. S.S. Mapledawn leaves Montreal tomorrow for this port with a general cargo to Harvey & Co. S.S. Astang Haaland goes into dry dock to-day to have repairs to her propeller effected.

Fashion Plates.

A SIMPLE ATTRACTIVE COSTUME.

For this design waist Pattern 3732, and Skirt Pattern 3695 were combined. Crepe de chine, Canton crepe, gabardine, gingham, linen, serge, tulle and satin are attractive for its development. It will require 6 1/2 yards of 36 inch material to make this dress for a 38 inch size. The width of the skirt at the foot with plait extended is 2 1/2 yards. ### German High Army Officers

IN STRAIGHTENED CIRCUMSTANCES. Berlin. (Associated Press).--The financial plight of some former high army officers, who, deprived of government pay which was their only income, have been reduced to straitened circumstances has caused a movement among former soldiers to help them by donations of sums ranging from five to 10 marks. Only a few of the needy officers, however, have consented to accept such charity. Former Field Marshal Conrad von Hotzendorf declining a donation of 4,000 marks wrote: "I am not complaining, and feel I have little cause to complain, when I think of the many wounded men who have even less than I. This money should go to help them." Von Hotzendorf and his wife are living at Innsbruck, occupying a small room in which their meals are prepared on an electric stove. The former Field Marshal's income amounts to less than 1,200 German marks monthly. Many former high officers have been compelled to leave Germany for Austria and Poland, where their German marks have a greater purchasing power. Others have taken low-salaried positions in the German provinces where the cost of living is low. Considerable sympathy for these men recently has been manifest even in liberal, socialist, radical, and anti-militaristic quarters, and the newspapers have been advertising the seriousness of their situation.

How Flowers Get Their Colour.

According to M. F. Hildebrandt, who has made a special study of the coloring matter in vegetables, flowers derive their characteristic colors from organic, and frequently complex, substances contained in the minute cells of which the petal tissues are composed. Blue, violet, rose and deep red are due to a cell fluid of corresponding colour. Yellow, orange and green are associated with solid, granular, or bladder-like substances in the cells. Brown, or grey, and, in many cases bright red and orange, are combinations of other colours. Black, with the exception of the bean, is due to a very deeply-coloured fluid. It is very rarely that all the cells are uniformly coloured--hence different shadings frequently appear on the same petal. The coloring matter is usually confined to the surface layers of cells, and does not permeate the whole tissue of the flower. Combinations of colours arise from the presence of different coloring matters from the same or in neighbouring cells, which, from their varying thickness, blend into one harmonious whole, and present the appearance of an angle shade.

A Distinction Without a Difference.

LONDON. (Associated Press).--Discovery that a dollar mark shares honors with a lover's knot over the "bridal entrance" to a New York Fifth Avenue church has been followed by the finding of this inscription on a window just restored in the church of St. Catherine Cree. The church was built more than a century ago.

COMMUNISTS AT LARGE.

PARIS, Oct. 21. According to the police 100 members of the Young Communists have shipped through the Immigration lines and entered the United States to make trouble, if, the two Italians, Sacco and Vanzetti, convicted of murder in Massachusetts last summer, are executed.

HOW THE RACE WAS WON.

The story of the great race for the Herald cup in which John Bell, Newfoundland representative took second place out of a field of over 80 runners, is graphically told in Monday's issue of the Halifax Herald. MacAulay had things all his own way throughout, and was fresh enough to make a splendid finishing sprint. His only dangerous rival was Bell. The race was started by Lieut. Governor Grant of Nova Scotia. Shortly after the start MacAulay and Bell were in the lead, the former running at a terrific speed, Bell hanging on to him like grim death. When Dutch Village was passed MacAulay had a lead of 100 yards on Bell, who seemed to have been troubled with gas smoke from the many motor cars on the road. MacAulay finished 400 yards ahead of Bell, and was quite fresh at the time. Bell received a great reception as he appeared on the Wanderers' grounds just as MacAulay breathed the tape.

WHAT MACAULAY SAID AFTER THE RACE.

"It was one of my best races. I was naturally confident of winning. Bell was the only man that I feared, and I decided to watch the Newfoundland runner from getting the jump on me at the start. Bell is a great runner and was my hardest man, but I felt fresh and was not fatigued at the finish. Over in Maine I started training in May, doing my work between 5 a.m. and 6 a.m. Bell's big mistake was the using of rubber sole shoes instead of leather. The former hurt the feet."

WHAT BELL SAID AFTER THE RACE.

"Motor cars bothered me a lot, but I congratulate MacAulay. He is a wonderful runner. Coming up Armadale, gas entered my lungs and I had a hard time breathing. It was at this point that I realized that MacAulay's lead would have to be cut down, but I could not get along. The people along the line were pulling for me to win, and offered all sorts of encouragement, and I wish to thank them from the bottom of my heart. I will be back next year and hope to win."

HARVEY SAYS:

"The best man won with Bell a very good second."

VETERANS MAY MEET IN MARATHON.

Alfred Rodgers and Jimmie Martin, who finished tie in the Herald marathon, may meet in a match race this week. Both veterans, who are still able to show their heels to runners 20 years their junior, are anxious to settle their dispute as to who is the best man. A six mile race has been suggested and this will most likely be held shortly. Rodgers said after the race, that his legs bothered him throughout the entire course, and that he was unable to get going. He would like to have another crack at MacAulay. Martin was in fine shape at the finish of the marathon and is ready to meet his old mate, Rodgers, any time the latter names.

MACAULAY IS TWENTY-NINE YEARS OF AGE.

Victor MacAulay, last Saturday's Marathon winner, is 29 years of age, according to a statement issued by the Winsorian before he left Halifax. He was born at Noel, Hants county, MacAulay is employed on a farm in Maine, and has a system all his own for training. He arrived at 4.30 a.m. and gets on the road at 5 a.m., and generally jogs five miles before returning to work. MacAulay intends to remain in Windsor for a few days before returning to Maine. He says that he hopes to return next year and turn in the

The Divine Sarah.

The world-famous actress Sarah Bernhardt, was born in Paris, on Oct. 23, 1845, of Jewish parents, but was baptised into the Christian faith and educated in the Grandchamp Convent at Versailles. She entered the Paris Conservatoire and gained prizes both in tragedy and comedy. In 1862 she made her debut as "Iphigene" at the Theatre Francaise, but did not attract much attention. In 1867 she became famous by her impersonation of the Queen of Spain in "Ray Blas" at the Odeon Theatre. She returned to the Theatre Francaise in 1873, and continued there till 1880, when she came to London and appeared at the Gaiety with great success, and subsequently undertook a series of triumphal tours in Europe and America. She next founded the Theatre Bernhardt in Paris, which she still controls. She is undoubtedly the greatest tragedienne living, and has been unrivalled in her own line for forty years. Joan of Arc, Hamlet, Lady Macbeth and La Tosca are some of her greatest impersonations. In 1915 she had a leg amputated, which did not prevent her acting before the French soldiers at the front. Like our own Ellen Terry, she seems to possess the secret of perpetual youth. In addition to being an actress she is also a capable sculptor and painter and has received prizes and medals for her work exhibited in the Paris Salon. In 1907 she published her memoirs. In 1882 she married M. Jacques Damala, a theatrical manager, and became a Greek, but was readmitted to French nationality in 1916. As a recognition of her genius, she was awarded the Cross of the Legion of Honor in 1913.

Old Moore Predicts a Stormy 1922.

London, Oct. 16.—Watch your step in 1922, for, according to Old Moore's Almanac, it will certainly be a stormy year. In May is to come the only bright spot, for in that month the Irish peace consummation is prophesied. This seems to be a great concession on the part of Old Moore, who has been on the job star-gazing and writing his almanac for 25 years, but in spite of his long experience, he must have forgotten the shudders when he envisaged the possibilities for December, for the final of the year, according to his calculations, is to be occupied with worldwide sedition, unrest, riots, strikes, accidents, crime and general lawlessness and cussedness. As preliminaries the February outlook includes outbreaks in Germany, France, Italy and the Transvaal. In March there is to be a crisis in Spain and Portugal and unrest throughout the universe. June will be marked with a plethora of accidents in America and from then till November the world is to run the whole gamut of economic and social convulsions. In November itself, there is to be an assorted lot of epidemics, and during the year it is predicted, many old persons will die.

Magic! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Doesn't hurt a bit. Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and calluses.

To Unmask Ku Klux Klan.

"Unmasking" of the Ku Klux Klan is under way in Congress, and by the Department of Justice of the United States. A resolution asking the appointment of a special committee to investigate alleged illegal activities of the Klan was introduced in the House by Representative Tague, Massachusetts, Democrat. Tague asserted that more than 100 acts of abduction, unlawful seizure, trial and punishment of free citizens have been charged against the Klan. He charged that the Klan had violated constitutional guarantees of free speech, trial by jury, unlawful seizure, protection of life, liberty and property, free religious worship and assembly, and the prohibition against involuntary servitude. ### Difficult Military Undertaking.

Greeks Encounter Hardships and Obstacles. In order to avoid Keman's powerful defensive positions along the Sakaria River, to the southwest of Angora, the Greeks undertook a great detour to the southeast of Eski-Shehir, intending to flank the Nationalist army and cut off its retreat. In this desolate southern area they encountered the wreathed roads which the army afforded all except the powerful motor trucks broke down. To overcome some of the serious difficulties, the Greeks employed thousands of camels and oxen. The progress of these patient animals was necessarily slow. It took weeks for supplies of munitions and food to reach the front. The path of the drivers was constantly menaced by roving bands of thieves, highwaymen of the East, who killed the men on sight and captured their caravans.

Cost of the British Coal Strike.

The great British coal strike is rapidly receding into history, but England is still paying for it. The National Alliance of Employers and Employed of England has made a close computation of the cost of the strike to taxpayers, strikers and employers. The total, comments the Denver Rocky Mountain News, is placed at the staggering sum of $1,350,000,000 at the present rate of exchange. In pounds sterling the cost is set down as follows:
Cost of defence force and Coal lost, 55,250,000 tons, valued at... £270,000,000
Miners' loss in wages... 65,000,000

The Portuguese Agreement.

Mr. Morine Exposes Its Fallacy.

Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—The "Boss" himself has been heard from. Up from his hiding place in Port Union has come a blast of other news but his could blow. The editorial yesterday contained an editorial easily identifiable as Mr. Coaker's own writing. It has his "ear-mark" all over it, and his ears are as long as to be easily visible. The majority of the many abusive personal references to me are about matters ancient that I do not need to notice. Their repetition at this time is rather gratifying to me as a defeated rather than a victor. It is evident that my arguments concerning the notorious Portuguese agreement have pierced the skin of its co-author. All of his abuse of me is because he fears me, and of that I am very proud. He says no harder things of me than has of Cashin, Crosbie and Squires, and yet he has afterwards eaten out of the hand of each of them.

There are, however, one or two references to personal matters which I cannot bear to pass wholly unnoticed. It is that I "advised Hickman to slash honor and break the laws of the land by sending fish into Italy last December, which action was the chief cause of the destruction of the Fishery Regulations." I gave no such advice. Mr. Hickman did not need to be told what to do with his fish, but I did advise that there was a law in the land to prevent him sending his fish where and when he would. I told him that Coaker's Regulations were an impudent fraud, which no court would uphold, and if his action resulted from that advice, I am the greatest benefactor this Colony has ever known for the Regulations were the curse of the loss incurred in our fish markets. If the exporters of the West Coast had consulted me, and acted upon my advice, they would be more solvent to-day.

Another personal reference to which I wish to reply is, that in 1898 I "gave the whole country," which, I suppose, is a characteristic Coaker way of referring to the Railway Contract. Well, Sir, as one of the authors of that measure, I am very proud of it, and I should be very glad to take the sole credit for a bargain so favorable for the Colony that the contractors have broken down under it, and Mr. Coaker's Government is this year giving them $1,500,000 for twelve months' operation, in addition to all "I" gave them. "I" gave them, too, much why does Coaker give them? How does the Chairman (3) of last year's Railway Commission, who involved the Colony in the loss of millions, dare to talk of what he says I gave the Reids in 1898?

Mr. Coaker challenges me to say he "grafted" by the Portuguese agreement, or that he intended to graft. As the agreement never came into force, it is obvious that he did not graft. It is obvious that he did not graft. It is obvious that he did not graft. It is obvious that he did not graft.

those who make it and repeat it are wilfully lying. And, secondly, Coaker's latest argument (?) that $5,000,000 were lost by the repeal of the Fishery Regulations is made in this way: (A) the shore catch this year is about 1,100,000 qts.; (b) the average prevailing price locally is $5 per quintal; (c) if the Regulations were in force, the prevailing price would be $11 per qt.; ergo, there is a loss of $5 per qt., or $5,000,000 in all. Granting for argument's sake only, that propositions (a) and (b) are true, the conclusion falls to the ground because proposition (c) is an impudent falsehood, a wilfully deceptive assertion by Coaker to save his credit with the fishermen. There was not a word in the Portuguese agreement fixing a price. In the conditional offer which Araujo made to buy the fish, the cargo on ship in the river Douro, 40¢ per qt. was the price fixed—or, say, $8 per qt.—for large and medium, and that price had to cover freight, expenses and profits, leaving very little indeed for the purchase price here. Even those prices had no application to future cargoes. "The price prevailing in Portugal," says Coaker himself, in the very article to which I am referring, "is the key-note to local prices." With the competition from foreign fish prevailing in Oporto this year, how could the price here be higher than it is? If the Regulation prices last year were never got, how could Regulations this year increase the price?

Speaking of the repeal of the Regulations, by the Government of which he was a member at the time, Mr. Coaker says he "could not save them if he gave his life for them." He might at least have given his office for them if they were worth it. He wielded a majority in the Government. He was at one time the Master of the Cabinet. He can break it when he likes. But he prefers, apparently, to keep an office the duties of which he does not perform, grab a salary he does not earn, hold a seat in a Government which ignores and despises him, rather than resign in support of his Regulations. If their repeal has done harm to this Colony, no man in it is so responsible and so despicable as his cowardly author and repealer.

With regard to Mr. Coaker's references to myself as coming from "the wigwagged slopes of Nova Scotia," might I be permitted to remind the President of the P.F.U. that his guide, philosopher and dear friend, Mr. E. Collishaw, hails from the fertile fields of Lunenburg County.

Yours truly,
ALFRED B. MORINE.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

GOVERNMENT INTERVENTION.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.

The United States Government today moved to prevent a railroad strike and to enforce obedience by both Unions and roads of the decrees of United States Railroad Labor Board, formally announcing that it had assumed full jurisdiction in the rail crisis and ordering workers not to strike, pending a Conference of Union heads and rail chiefs, which it called for Oct. 26. The decision, from this Conference, will not be announced until after Oct. 20, the scheduled strike date. Board members said, declaring that in this way a walkout would be averted, unless the Union defied the Board's orders not to strike, pending a ruling. While both cartels and unions promptly announced they would comply with the order citing them to appear before the Board next Wednesday, W. G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, in a statement given out in Cleveland, asked by what authority anyone could compel a man to work, and pointed out that the right to strike had been upheld by United States Supreme Court. At the same time trainmen of the International and Great Northern, a Texas Road, prepared to carry out their plans to strike, to-morrow and maintenance of way and Firemen's Union, representing 400,000 railworkers announced here that they would join the proposed walkout on Oct. 30. If unions choose to carry through strike plans, which the Board asked them to defer, members of the Board said that the next move would have to come from Washington.

LIGHTERMEN WILL STICK.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.

The Lighter Captain's Union of 2800 members have voted to remain at work in the event of a railway strike, and do railway lightering.

PROTEST COMES TOO LATE.

LISBON, Oct. 21.

Antonio Granjo, Premier and Minister of the Interior, Jos Carlos Maia, former Minister of Marine and Colonies, were assassinated during the military outbreak against the Government on Wednesday, which resulted in the establishment of a new Administration. The Junta, which placed the new Government in power, has issued a note vehemently protesting against the assassination of these officials and other Republicans.

SYLVIA ON THE JOB.

LONDON, Oct. 21.

A demonstration is being organized to take place on Sunday outside the United States Embassy in London, in a protest against the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti in United States, it developed to-day. The proposed demonstration for Sunday, it is understood, is being planned with the aid of communistic organ workers, dreadnought, with which Sylvia Pankhurst is identified.

CRUELS SURRENDERED.

MADRID, Oct. 21.

Twenty chiefs of Beni Sidel Tribes have surrendered to Spanish troops there.

PRESIDENT STUDYING STRIKE SITUATION.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.

The Railway Labor Board having failed to prevent a strike, labor chiefs were to-day pushing a plan for a general walkout on October 30. President Harding is studying the situation, and some hope is yet entertained that he may propose some means of allaying the crisis. Railway men were saying to-day that it looked as if only the Government could prevent a walkout.

ON HONEYMOON TOUR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.

Former Premier Venizelos of Greece arrived yesterday on the Aquitania for a honeymoon tour of the United States, with his young bride.

AS DISCUSSED IN ROME.

LONDON, Oct. 22.

A high official of the Vatican is quoted by the Daily Mail's Rome correspondent as saying that Pope Benedict "is much grieved over the evident mistrust between Great Britain and Ireland, of which Eamonn De Valera's letter is additional proof." The same official is also given as an authority for a statement that the Pope is convinced that if "both parties could forget the past, and approach the Irish question with unbiased minds, a solution would be forthcoming." Mr. De Valera's letter, says the correspondent, is being widely discussed in Rome, where it is generally felt that the Republican leader was guilty of an indecate act in referring to ambiguities in King George's message to the Pope.

PRESS COMMENT.

LONDON, Oct. 22.

A possible rupture of the Irish Conference, a general political crisis in Great Britain, and the cancellation of Premier Lloyd George's visit to Washington were featured by London newspapers this morning. It appeared that the telegram sent to Pope Benedict by Eamonn De Valera, in which there was adverse criticism of King George's recent message to the Pontiff, appeared to be considered as a phase of the situation threatening the disruption

LET US BE GLAD.

The philosophy of Pollyanna that we should be glad because things might be worse than they are, is very acceptable at the moment, and all would do well to follow along the lines laid down. Half the time matters are not quite so bad as they seem and a little cheerfulness radiated around goes a long distance toward dispelling gloom.

SCREAMING COMEDY BY GLADYS KLARK CO. "Laugh and the world laughs with you." All the world and his wife as represented by St. John's theatre goes to the time of their life at the Casino Theatre last night when Miss Gladys Klark and her associates presented that screaming comedy, "The Unkissed Bride."

C. C. C. Church Parade.

The Battalion and Band of the C.C.C. under Major O'Grady, O.C., will hold a Church Parade tomorrow (Sunday), attending Last Mass at the R. C. Cathedral. As this is the first battalion church parade to be held for some time, it is expected that a large number will turn out.

Personality.

"When I first came to St. John's," said a recently married friend of mine, "there was one thing in particular which I missed."

"Well," was the answer, "perhaps it was a feeling of loneliness more than anything. Before I was married, I lived at home—around the bay and I knew practically everybody in our little town—and, equally, everybody knew me. I would go to Smith's Dry Goods Store and I was welcomed by Mr. Smith himself."

A Salesman of High Degree.

While the purport of the Premier of Newfoundland in this country was to protest against the proposed tariff on fish, we have considerable reason to believe that his main object was to sell 400,000 quintals of Newfoundland codfish for use in the relief of Russia.

Charged With Larceny.

Three members of the crew of the schooner Romeo were charged before Judge Morris this morning with the larceny of a quantity of rubber goods to the value of $700, the property of Mr. F. House. The goods were being shipped to Bonavista by the Romeo. The accused entered a plea of not guilty and asked for Mr. G. W. B. Ayre to represent them.

Road Work Started.

We understand that the contract for the Colinet Road has been awarded to Mr. Geo. Lannon of Placentia, and work started last week, but through some delay in getting along the tools many men could not be employed. However, this has been remedied, and in short a large number of men will be at work. The Government will not this year place the bridge over Rocky River, but will finish the roads on either side—that is to Placentia and salmonier.

Wells Acquitted.

THE ACCUSED IN THE BOX.

After an all day trial, the jury in the case of Stephen Wells charged with manslaughter, returned to court at 10 p.m. yesterday, having been absent over half an hour, with a verdict "not guilty." The prisoner, who is 21 years of age, bore himself despite the strain of the trial, but showed slight nervousness as he left the dock a free man. During the afternoon, Mr. Mews for the Crown called witnesses, all members of the crew of the schooner on which Wells was lookout man. Mr. Higgins, K.C., opened the case for the defence, placing the accused in the witness chair. Wells told his story in a straightforward manner which could not help carry conviction to the minds of the jury. Before his examination, the jury visited the schooner "Fanny Freeman" and made themselves familiar with its layout. Wells explained all the circumstances leading to the accident and did not depart from the slightest degree from his original story, under a stiff cross examination. After recess, counsel for the defence addressed the jury for nearly an hour. He claimed that there was the slightest evidence of culpable negligence on the part of the prisoner which would convict him on the charges preferred against him. Counsel's address was an eloquent and effective one. After Mr. Higgins had finished, Mr. Mews addressed the jury on behalf of the Crown, drawing attention to those points which would show negligence on the part of the accused. Justice Kent made a significant charge to the jury, impressing upon them the law governing manslaughter, and clearing up any points of doubt which were to any extent raised. The jury returned at 9 and a half an hour later, turned in their verdict, as given above.

Just Folks

LESSONS OF THE GARDEN. Lessons of the garden—oh, I read them every day. I teach me not to mourn too much for the boys that pass away. I taught me to be patient and wait until the rose till it grows gaunt and thin and me of the path of man which are beset with sin.

I bloomed some lovely things for me to pay me for my toll. I carried every stone away and broke the stubborn soil. I handed them from heat and drought and learned this truth anew—that all rewards are measured out by what a man will do.

Now my garden's brown and bare and all my vines are dead. I have known the loveliness of roses white and red. I have known a Summer rich with fragrance and delight. In Winter, be it cold and drear, 'tis but the garden's night.

On the walls where I have dwelt sweet joys have come and flown they were glorious Summer years that once were mine to own. What is now the Winter-time of sorrow brings its pain, as day another Spring shall come and I shall smile again.

Will Address Bible Class

The programme committee of George Street Bible Class has secured Captain A. Keen to address the class on "A Trip Abroad" at to-morrow afternoon's session. Captain Keen has lately returned from a visit to Italy, where he visited many interesting points. His wide experience coupled with his accepted ability to impart to others the impressions that he himself has received, makes it safe to say that those who hear his address to-morrow will listen to something really worth while.

Impossible to Fly Backwards.

No bird can fly for any appreciable distance tail first. The nearest approach to such a movement is shown in the tumbling pigeon, when that bird stews his wings forward, and suddenly turning back his head, throws a somersault, but this is not true backward flight. When a bird wishes to reverse his motion, it tilts its body laterally, as a railway carriage would be tilted in taking a curve, or increases the number of beats given by one wing as compared with the other, or keeps one wing extended whilst the other is partially flexed. But a bird can no more fly backwards than a ship can sail astern. Some birds, however, and particularly the albatross, can fly half upside down—that is, with the wings pointed in a direction nearly perpendicular to the sea, and when turning quickly in this position the appearance is sometimes almost as though the bird was using its wings in a backward direction, though their structure is not really adapted to any such movement; and when poised, facing a strong wind, birds may seem to move astern.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—We should always remember that whose makes an assertion, upon him lies the burden of proof. When we are confronted with an assertion that appears to be false, or extravagant, our first and natural impulse is to deny and controvert it; and hence arise most of the endless controversies. When such an assertion is made, the proper course is not to deny it, nor to attempt to controvert it, but to call upon the asserter for proof. If, as sometimes happens, he can bring forward no evidence in support of his assertion, the matter is at an end. If he responds to the invitation, and brings forward evidence, or what he thinks is evidence, of his assertions, then our duty is to examine that evidence, and ascertain whether it does in fact bear out the assertion or not. In many cases it will be found that what is adduced as evidence has no bearing at all on the assertion; and when it has, it will usually be found that what is merely evidence is put forward as proof.

There is a vast difference between evidence and proof. The difference is this: Anything germane to the issue and consistent with the assertion is evidence of the assertion. Proof is evidence that is consistent with any alternative assertion.

Thus, let me give an illustration: If a man is seen coming out of the Controller's with a bottle sticking out of his pocket, that is evidence that he has secured a bottle of "stuff" from the Controller. It is germane to the issue, and is consistent with the assertion. But it is not proof that he has secured a bottle of "stuff," because it is consistent with several alternatives. For instance, he may have gone in there to see a friend or to leave a script to be filled the next day, and the bottle seen sticking out of his pocket may contain tea for his lunch, which he was taking to his work. But if the Controller has been seen filling a bottle with rum out of a cask, and passing it to the man, that is proof that he has secured a bottle of "stuff," for it is evidence that is inconsistent with any alternative.

The difference between evidence and proof appears to be quite unknown to those who are asserting that the lifting of the Fishery Regulations is the cause of the low price of fish obtaining at this time. To assert that the lifting of the Fishery Regulations is the cause of the present price of fish, is quite a different thing from proving it to be the cause of the low price of fish. The evidence that is brought forward in support of the assertion that the lifting of the Regulations is responsible for the present price of fish is, that last year the Regulations were a force and fish fetched from $9 to $10 per quintal, while this year the regulations are lifted and the price of fish is down to $3 and $6. At first glance this appears to be strong evidence of the assertion that the lifting of fish is due to the lifting of the Regulations. But when this apparent evidence is examined, it is found to be not evidence at all, and has no bearing on the assertion. The reason it appears as evidence to some is because they have not taken into consideration all the factors in the issue, and because they mistake appearance for evidence. We said in foregoing that proof is evidence that is inconsistent with any alternative assertion. Now the assertion that the lifting of the Regulations is the cause of the low price being paid for fish to-day, and the "evidence" adduced in support of that assertion is no proof of the assertion, because the evidence is not inconsistent with any alternative assertion. If I am looking for strong evidence to support my contention that the lifting of the Regulations had nothing whatever to do with the price of fish, I would point to the drop in value of fish in those countries where we do not have our fish. For it must be clear to those who are familiar with the rudiments of economics, that if the money in those countries where we sell our fish falls in value as compared to our money—that country will not be able to buy a dollar's worth of our fish for one dollar of their money. This is why we are forced to drop the price of our fish below that of last year. This is the economic law that mainly controls the price of all commodities in the world to-day, and renders such artificial barriers as the Fishery Regulations impotent for good, but on the contrary interferes with the free play of economic laws to the detriment of the people in whatever country they are enforced.

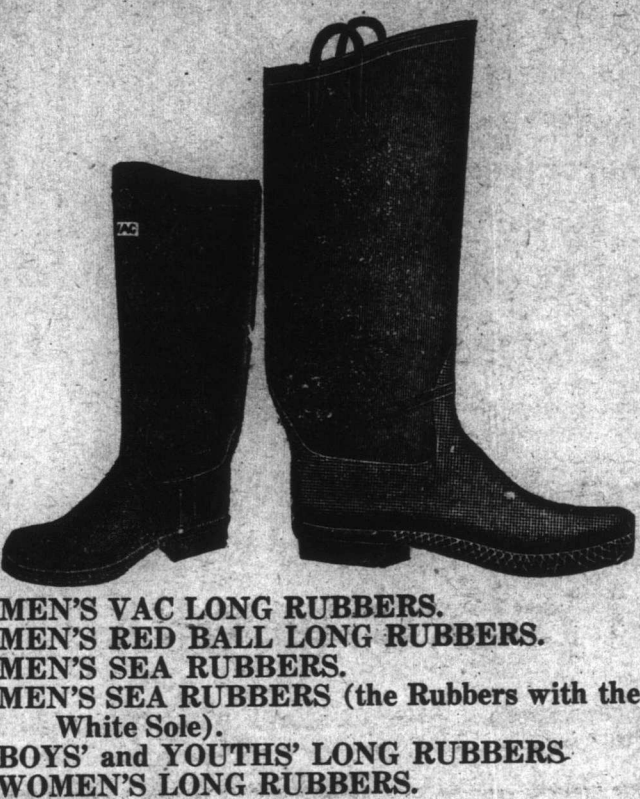

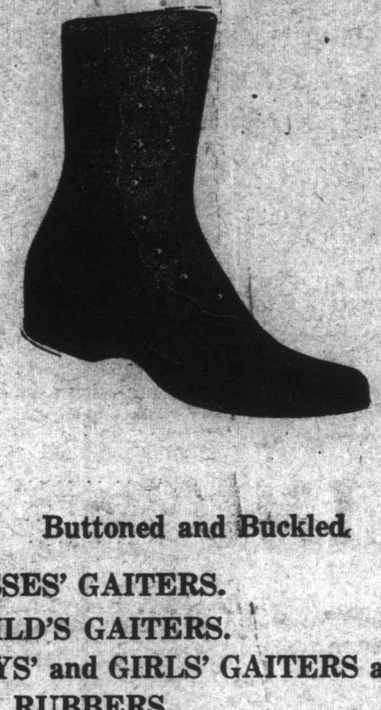

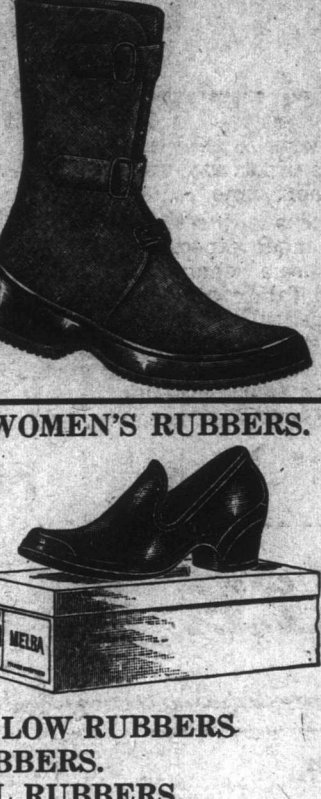

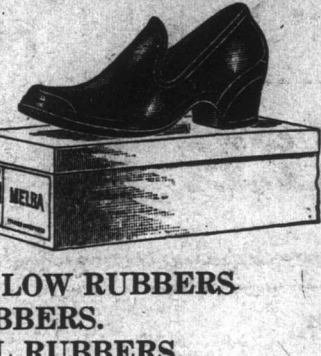

There was a time in the history of capitalism when the law of supply and demand was the leading factor in the control of prices. But the law of supply and demand has been superseded by a new law—which had its birth quite early in capitalism, but has only dominated the law of supply and demand since the ending of the war. Of course, the old law of supply and demand still plays a small part in price fluctuations. But in the main prices are controlled by the law briefly mentioned in the foregoing. The law of supply and demand is over-worked by us. We are giving it credit for what it could do at one time, but cannot do now.

If those who are asserting that the country lost $6,000,000 on account of the lifting of the Regulations expect us to believe it, they will have to bring forward better proof than mere assertions, otherwise their efforts will be considered an attempt to bolster up a great wrong in order to save the political skin of one who is the greatest enemy of the fishermen and wage workers of Newfoundland.

Yours truly,
W. L. BUTLER.

The World's Longest Tunnel.

One of the greatest tunnels in the world is nearing completion. The new Simplon Tunnel will shortly be ready for traffic, and its transformation from a mere gallery into an international high road, which was first started in December, 1912, will greatly stimulate business conducted between Channel ports and those of the Mediterranean.

Tremendous difficulties have been encountered and overcome in making the tunnel. Hot springs had to be drained away; and at one spot, about two and a half miles from the Italian opening, the rock pressure was so great that eighteen months was spent in boring fifty yards, at a cost of $160,000.

The whole tunnel is twelve and a quarter miles long, of which five and a half miles is on Swiss territory. Electric traction will be used, so that this will be the cleanest tunnel in Europe.

The longest tunnel in England is the Severn Tunnel. Its length is four and a half miles, and it was built in 1873-1886; and, during the recent railway strike, was in some danger of being flooded and irretrievably ruined.

d's! Fishermen! Here's the Boot for You-"Excel"!

"EXCEL"

The Fishermen's Friend

"EXCEL" Made 'All in One Piece'

All fishermen know from experience what happens to ordinary boots when used in fishing. You've seen how salt water seems to take the life out of rubber and how the uppers crack and the soles wear through in a surprisingly short time.

The "EXCEL" is a different and better kind of boot. It has been made especially to stand up under the unusually hard use a fisherman's boot gets.

The rubber and fabric in "EXCEL" boots are of the very highest quality. But it is the special method of curing, under tremendous pressure, that makes the "EXCEL" so wear-resisting. The pressure forces the layers of rubber and fabric together so that they are actually "one-piece", without losing the least bit of the life or resiliency of the rubber. Salt water has practically no effect on "EXCEL" boots. The UPPERS remain pliable and weatherproof, and resist the drying-out action of sun, heat and extreme cold far longer than other boots. Consequently they don't crack anywhere near so quickly. The SOLES are almost wear-proof, because they are made like an Auto Tire, with 8 plies of rubber and fabric welded by tremendous pressure into a "tire-tread" sole that rivals an automobile tire for toughness and durability.

strain. There is not a single feature but what has been proved necessary and desirable by tests of severest use. Your own experience will tell you that a boot with these features simply must be a better boot.

Study this picture. Learn these features. Remember them when you compare "EXCEL" boots with ordinary boots. And remember, too, that very important point which the picture cannot show, namely, that "EXCEL" boots are cured under tremendous pressure, which leaving the rubber pliable, weatherproof and wear-resisting. It is only by the use of this tremendous pressure combined with highest quality materials that the best results are obtained.

Pliable Uppers. Weatherproof and Wear Resisting. Tough Tire Tread Soles. Made "All in One Piece."

"EXCEL" Boots are sold by all reliable dealers from Coast to Coast.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

HOW AN INVALID CAN HELP.

"Oh, if I could only be of some use in the world again," I heard a woman who is now a semi-invalid, but who in her younger years was always a most active and useful member of society, say the other day.

Her constant plaint, her daughter said. Sometimes she goes to her strength and tries to make up for her grandchildren who were used to in the old days when she has a set-back and has to go to her bed for two or three days. And that makes her more unhappy than ever.

Must She Make Others Unhappy?

"Mother is so unhappy over not being strong as she used to be and so discontented in spite of all we try to do to make her happy that it is depressing to be with her. I hurry up my work so that I can get over there and be with her, and often I'm tired out when I get there, and then she talks about not being likely to live long and not wanting to live if she can't be of some use in the world, and by the time I've finished trying to cheer her up I'm all in myself. I don't think it is possible that she will ever be as strong and active as she used to be, but the doctors say with the care we are giving her there is no reason she shouldn't live for years.

Do you suppose she has got to be unhappy and depressed and make other people unhappy all the time?

"I can't tell her myself but I wish some one else would tell her when she keeps saying that she wishes she could be of some use in the world, that she can be. She can try to be cheerful and peaceful and resigned to use what strength she has and get as much happiness as she can from it."

SHE Wouldn't Find Semi-Invalidism Easy to Bear.

I don't suppose the daughter realizes how much she asks. I don't suppose she has any idea how hard it is to be patient when you'd rather be active. I don't imagine she would find it easy to be cheerful if she had to endure semi-invalidism.

And yet I think she is absolutely right in what she says.

Maybe you call those two statements contradictory. I don't think they are. Because a thing is hard doesn't prove it isn't the only thing that can be done.

That woman, like many semi-invalids, declares that she wants to be of some use in the world. The biggest use she—and most of the others—can be is to cultivate cheerfulness and resignation and make their sick rooms a place where the active workers about them may come and find peace and rest for their hearts, even while they serve with their bodies.

Don't Be Hard on Them if They Can't.

If being unhappy and resentful would make her any stronger or any happier, (a paradox, you perceive but a deliberate one) those about her would be willing to have her indulge in these moods. But since giving away to them only makes her, as well as them, miserable, what's the use?

I know it's terribly hard. It means character building and character building is always hard, and doubly harder when you are weak and sick, and perhaps old. No one who is well and strong ought to blame anyone who could not accomplish this without withdrawing any tenderness from them because they couldn't. Only that's the answer to the invalid's plaint. And its worth while as an ideal even if one cannot strain to its complete fulfilment.

Good Spirits.

There are three sorts of spirits—alcoholic, ghostly, and those that are part of yourself. They are a health barometer, and indicate your state, physically and mentally.

Any medical man would corroborate the statement that it is unwise, if not dangerous, to get in low spirits, and as various causes produce that effect, it is as well to know what those causes are, and counter them. Forget not that what we call "spirits" is really our vitality, the life principle.

We feel depressed in spirits on a wet day because the air is laden with vapour, and has proportionately less oxygen in it. The air, too, is lighter than usual, and does not balance the air in our bodies. Hence the depression. The result is that we work with difficulty and less efficiently.

The remedy is to get out of doors and double the normal rate of breathing. That, as is evident, will pump more oxygen into the system, and the benefit is immediate. The "lift" of the depression can be felt.

And laugh! Laughter stirs up the whole system and releases stored nervous power or vitality. It may be urged that one cannot laugh if there is nothing to laugh at; but, as a matter of fact, a forced laugh will soon progress to a natural one. Try. You will get amused at yourself, and up will bound your spirits.

Finally, add to the quicker breathing and the laughter, a loosening of your clothing. Undo neck and wristbands and the like. That's the last little touch. As the by-product of this threefold remedy the next time you are depressed from any cause, and you will find it a sure cure.

Miss Vanity is Very, Very Old.

The Egyptian bells of 5000 B.C. was no less extravagant in the matter of toilet requisites than is the beauty of to-day. She required among other things, a long stone palette with a hollow in the centre, in which to mix her green eye-paint. This palette also held a very delicate sea-shell, wherein she mixed the paint with the necessary grease for stiffening her eyelashes; ivory hair-pins which rivaled in length the hair-pins of the present day, and quaint ivory combs. All these articles were shown at an exhibition in London of the trophies dug up by the members of the Egypt Exploration Fund. There was also a small red clay cast of a face, with the green paint bringing the eyes into extraordinary prominence.

The housewife of seven thousand years ago had household goods similar to those of the housewife of to-day. She had copper pans and strainers, and stone blades, wooden bowls and copper mirrors, and to decorate her home she acquired alabaster vases and painted pottery vases.

THE MOVIES.

A million children, every night behold the movie actors; in education, wrong or right, the films are mighty factors. And so the famous movie folk have influence unmeasured; their every move, their every joke, in youthful hearts are treasured. So they should make their lives so clean they'll sparkle in their beauty, and not beam angels on the screen, and demons when off duty. As artists true they should appear, and not as blooming smarties; they should cut out the booze and bear and all the frenzied parties. My little Willie goes to-night to see a movie story; the heroine is blithe and bright, all smiling in her glory; but someone whispers to the lad, "She goes her gaudy courses as though she hadn't whipped her dad, and gained fourteen divorces." And Willie, in admiring mood regards the hero's capers till Whisper says, "He's often stewed—I read it in the papers." Then little Willie toddles home, his sentiments unspoken, but mournful thoughts are in his dome—his idols have been broken. The Bluebeard door has been unlocked, one glance therein suffices; and little kids should not be shocked by tales of tawdry vices.

An Address on Prohibition.

REV. GARLAND TO DEAL WITH QUESTION.

It will be a matter of much gratification to all upholders of the law, especially in relation to the liquor traffic, to learn that Mr. Garland has consented to make a short address before his sermon on Sunday morning in Gower Street Church, on the workings of Prohibition in America since this new amendment was added to the constitution of that Country. Mr. Garland has travelled all over the States, and has had abundant opportunities to know whereof he speaks, covering as much as sixty thousand miles in a single year. He knows the great cities of America almost as well as the streets of his own town, and for years has worked with State and National Committees in matters of reform. Thus, his observations are those of a man not only qualified, but with abundant opportunities to know as to its success and failure. In view of conditions prevailing in our country, and the desire of our people to be informed from reliable sources, Mr. Garland's remarks will be heard with keen interest. His allusions to this subject in his Lecture in the College Hall, Monday evening, is a suggestion of the contempt in which he holds all who would attempt to nullify what he regards as the most beneficent single moral reform of all the preceding centuries. As this will be the last opportunity of hearing Mr. Garland during his present visit, all "to the capacity of the building" are invited to come and hear him. Mr. Garland has honored himself by his stand on the question of moral reform. He has honored the country of his birth. Honor him with your presence.—COM.

(I.C.M.)

ARTICLE IX.

OUR FISHING FLEET.
In travelling around our country one cannot close one's eyes to the decrease that has taken place, and is still taking place in the number of our fishing vessels. Harbours that once boasted of scores of schooners, and dozens of Cape St. Mary's boats, have not to-day any fleets whatever; and the bustling preparations which marked the outfitting for the voyage has ceased to be—they have died out. This causes us to enquire and ask the question "Will our fishing fleet become a thing of the past?" Such a question may appear preposterous, and even alarming; and at first sight be cursorily dismissed as out of place and impossible. However, there is much room for thought and it will not injure us to consider the situation.

Within the writer's memory there was a large fleet of vessels which prosecuted the seal fishery. That fleet numbered into the hundreds; and was mostly owned by an independent class of men known as planters. These planters did business at the principal outports, and they were identified with the fisheries in all their branches. Like some spectre those ships have disappeared, and like a passing fog their owners have vanished. For anyone to have predicted such a thing fifty years ago would have been deemed folly, or worse; but the record since tells its own tale, and the facts of the record cannot be gainsaid. The sealing fleet, we say is gone; and the fishing fleet seems to be going. The merest observer can see this, and the annual clearances at the Custom's department testify to it; nor can it be otherwise; for the conditions of life are rapidly changing, and just as steam supplanted the old-time sealer, so is the motor boat supplanting the fishing fleet. The introduction of the motor engine has so lessened the toll, and so reduced the drudgery of fishing, that men would not now be satisfied to revert to the customs of their fathers. There were various causes for the diminishing of our fishing fleets, but the appliance of the motor engine has been the most effective. This is seen everywhere that one may turn. Not only along our own coastline, but also on the coast of Labrador, and into the confines of Hudson Bay. The motor boat has come to stay. It is now a part and parcel of our fishing outfit, and instead of oars and sails, the account shows gasoline and engines.

THE ERA OF THE MOTOR BOAT.
The banking schooners of our west coast stood out in bold contrast to the modest motor boat, and the trim boats of the southern shore which prosecuted the voyage at Cape St. Mary's, were of Titanic proportions to the motor boats. The southern shore boats were numbered by the score, and Trepasser, Renewa and Permusa, as well as Bay Bulls and Widless Bay and Ferryland, annually sent out their flotilla. It was by the prosecution of the voyage by those boats that the hamlets of the southern shore were built up, and whatever success may have been achieved, must go to their credit. But now the boats are gone, and here and there their timbers may be seen as they lie on the beach; and if the success which they brought is to be perpetuated, it will be by the use of the motor boat. Those boats had their halo of romance, and their tanned sails in the gleam of the early morn seemed to display a starry nimbus, which when viewed in a fleet, looked like some aureola of the discipline. Those boats were smart; and like the boats, the crew that manned them were smart also. Of our southern shore fleet the same may be said, for they too were instrumental in building up that section of our country; and their crews prosecuted the fisheries in keen and wholesome rivalry with the men of the north and of the west. The north owed much to the schooner. For many of the people the schooner was a home during the fishing season, and the household was in transit for awhile. It was the order of the day to do so, and there was a sort of family interest in the voyage. All this is now changed, and is annually dying out, and a new order is gradually coming in, and the puffing of the motor engine is asserting its claim. There is not now the need of so many schooners. Many crews go to the scene of the summer's work by steamer, and much of their catch is marketed by the same means. The delays of sail are thus avoided, and its dangers are minimized, and a greater certainty exists as to the date of departure and return.

THE VANISHING SCHOONER.
These are some of the agencies that have supplanted the fleet of vessels which was once our proud boast. We may not wish to admit their loss from our commerce, but they are going, and already more than half of the fleet, even of ten years ago, have gone out of commission. Conception Bay has no shipping, either local or foreign, worth while now. The same may almost be said of Trinity Bay; and to parts of Bonavista Bay it also applies. The change is truly great in this feature of our fishing industry, and it is because of this change, that we ask ourselves the question, "Will our fishing fleet become a thing of the past?" Such may not happen, but to say the least of it, one must admit it looks very much like it—the tide is in that direction. This loss of shipping does not apply to Newfoundland only; it applies to the lower provinces of Canada, and also to the New England States. Who does not remember the fleet of bankers which so long sailed out of Gloucester, Mass., U.S.A.? To-day that fleet is of the past; and Gloucester does not commission a dozen schooners. Who does not remember the whaling fleet of New Bedford, U.S.A.? To-day New Bedford has not ten sail of ships. Who does not remember the fleet of Provincetown, Mass., U.S.A.? To-day not one schooner sails from that port. And so it is all around: the fleets have dwindled and now they have reached almost to vanishing point; and it seems that in a figurative sense the prophecy of the Apocalypse will be fulfilled, "and there was no more sea." The motor boat and the aeroplane will tend to bring in this day. Let us hope it will be a better day; a day of less hardships to the tiller, and greater safety to the people generally.

BRIG DEFIES THREE BATTLESHIPS.
On the morning of July 2, 1801, off the coast of Alicante, three huge French line-of-battleships were manoeuvring and firing round a tiny little British brig-of-war. The brig was Lord Cochrane's famous little "Speedy," which had been caught by Admiral Linale's squadron, consisting of two ships of 90 guns and one of 74, on a lee shore, where escape was impossible; but from four to nine o'clock Cochrane evaded all the efforts of his big pursuers to capture him. The French ships separated on different tasks, so as to keep the little "Speedy" constantly under the fire of one or the other; and as the British brig turned and dashed at one opening of the moving triangle or the other, the great ships thundered their broadsides at her. Cochrane threw his guns and stores overboard, and by the most ingenious seamanship evaded capture for hours, surviving some scores of broadsides. He could tack far more quickly than the gigantic ships that pursued him, and again and again the "Speedy" spun round on its heel and shot off on a new course, leaving its pursuers nothing but space to fire into. Once by a quick turn he shot past one of the 90-gun ships occupied in trying to tack, and got clear. The "Desaix," however, was swiftly on the track of the "Speedy"; its tall canvas under the growing breeze, gave it an advantage, and it ran down to within gunshot of the "Speedy," then yawed, bringing its whole broadside to bear, intending to sink its tiny foe with a single discharge. In yawing, however, the "Desaix" shot a little too far, and the weight of her broadside only smote the water, but the scattered grape cut up the "Speedy's" rigging and canvas so terribly that nothing was left but surrender. When Cochrane went on board his captor, its gallant captain refused to take his sword, saying he "could not accept the sword of an officer who had struggled for so many hours against impossibility."

THE DAYS OF THE CLIPPER SHIP.
Boston, Oct. 11.—(Associated Press)—Rivalry between the sailing fleets of Boston and Gloucester for the honor of defending the international trophy in the fisherman's race of Halifax, N. S., will be put to a test tomorrow in the elimination race to select the American defender. Both cities have furnished some of the ablest and fastest vessels that have ever flown the American flag. The swiftest sailing ship that ever spread canvas to the winds of heaven was launched at Boston. This was the extreme clipper, Lightning, launched at the beginning of the year 1854, from the Boston shipyard of Donald McKay, a native of Nova Scotia, and the premier designer of American clippers in the classic age of the sailing ship. When the dash to the gold fields of Australia was at its height, James Baines, of Liverpool, Eng., managing owner of the Australian Black Ball Line, ordered four ships from McKay, and all were delivered in 1854. The first and most famous of these ships to take the water was the Lightning, of 2,854 tons; quickly followed by the Champion of the Seas, 2,443 tons; the James Baines, 2,315 tons; and the been badly burnt in New York. Forbes got into an argument on theology with McKay, and as they were still disputing when the Lightning was ready to sail, he invited McKay to accompany him on the voyage. He wanted to continue the argument and incidentally have assistance in handling the latest creation of the Boston shipyards. The Lightning left Boston in mid-February, bound for Liverpool. Outside Boston Light the two captains forgot all about their argument and devoted their attention to tuning up the big clipper for the dash across the Atlantic. In the hands of these two noted shipmasters the Lightning put her best foot forward, and developed a speed never gotten out of her on subsequent voyages, an unusual thing for a clipper on her maiden voyage. Although she encountered an unusual percentage of easterly gales for the season of the year she made the run round the North of Ireland to Baginbun Island in 10 days, and to the City of Man, within 80 miles of Liverpool, in 13 days, and anchored in the Mersey in 13 days 19 hours from Boston.

A record Sailing Run.
At noon on February 23, while bearing up for the North Channel with a strong southerly gale sweeping through her tall spars, the Lightning began the greatest day's run ever made under canvas. During the following 24 hours she carried away her big foresail, main jib and other sails and, with the ship plunging wildly in a heavy sea, it took some time to bend new sails. In spite of this handicap, the thoroughbred clipper made a run of 436 nautical miles in 24 hours and won the distinction of leaving behind her in a single day more miles of salt water than any other sailing ship that ever ploughed the seas. Although Forbes allowed the James Baines to establish the record, from Liverpool to Melbourne, 63 days, the Lightning made the record for the return voyage, also 63 days. On this record passage the Lightning was ballasted with $5,000,000 worth of gold dust and nuggets. She ran 3,712 nautical miles in 10 consecutive days, making 412 miles in one day. Many of the Boston-built clippers made noon to noon runs which marked them as the speediest craft afloat in heavy

Flying Foxes in Queensland.
Flying foxes, which are rather unwelcome visitors in some districts of Queensland, have lately received efforts on account of the efforts which have been made to destroy them by James Baines and the like. The animal belongs to the order of chiroptera, which are adapted for flight, which are, unfortunately, rather too well represented in Australia. The sub-orders are two in number—fruit-eating bats and insectivorous bats. The fruit bat is a flying fox, the name being due to the doglike head and the reddish colour. The foxes are, mainly speaking, animals belonging to the tropics and sub-tropics, though they extend south as far as Gippsland. The bones of the flying fox are very light, and the powers of flight are most remarkable. It lives in vast herds of "camps" in secluded corners of the scrub and in gullies, and is especially fond of selecting the mangroves on tidal creeks, where during the day it hangs from the branches head downwards. At dusk it moves out to the orchards, where it does incalculable damage, not alone in what it actually eats, but in what it destroys. Its power as a flier enables it to move from district to district where fruit is most abundant. Nor will it hesitate to come right into the heart of the city, whither any fruit—even Moreton Bay fig—attracts it. It is fond, too, of the eucalyptus flower. On South Keppel Island, it is much noticed, for hours moving to and from the wild apple trees and the banksia with its heavy characteristic flight. As a fruit and honey eater, the flier ought to be palatable. The blacks certainly fed out it, and Dr. Leichhardt, the famous explorer, avers that he found it an excellent article of food. Charles Barrett, in his "Australian Wildlife," speaking of his observation of the foxes in a fig tree, describes them as "a noisy quarrelsome dinner party entirely lacking in table manners." He goes on to speak of "a specimen shot for museum purposes," which proved to be a female, with a naked young one clinging, spread-eagle fashion to the under surface of the mother.

A British Soldier and His Bible.

A private soldier, named Richard Lee, was taken before the magistrate in Glasgow for playing cards during divine service. When the other soldiers had found the text in their Bibles, Lee had spread out a pack of cards and when he had refused to take them up, was made prisoner, and made the following explanation to the Mayor: "I have been about six weeks 'on the march. I have no Bible or Common Prayer Book. I have nothing but a pack of cards, and I hope to satisfy your worship of the purity of my intentions." Then, spreading the cards before the Mayor, he began with the ace.

"The ace reminds me that there is but one God. The deuce reminds me of Father and Son, which I see the three remains me of the Trinity. The four reminds me of the four evangelists, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. The five reminds me of the five wise virgins who trimmed their lamps. There were ten, but five were foolish and were shut out. When I see the six it reminds me that in six days the Lord made heaven and earth. The seven reminds me that on the seventh day God rested from His great work. The eight reminds me of the eight righteous persons who were saved, when God destroyed the world, viz., Noah and his wife, his three sons and their wives. When I see the nine I remember the nine lepers that were cleansed by our Saviour. There were nine out of ten who never returned thanks. Then the ten reminds me of the Ten Commandments which God handed down to Moses on the table of stone. When I see the King it reminds me of the Great King of Heaven which is God Almighty. The Queen reminds me of the Queen of Sheba, who visited Solomon, for she was as wise a woman as he was a man. She brought with her fifty boys and fifty girls, all dressed in boys' apparel, for King Solomon to tell which were boys and which were girls. The King sent for water. The women to wash, the girls to wash in the tub, and the boys to the well, so he told by that."

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

You know that pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several peculiar elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine is famous for this purpose. Pine cough syrup is a combination of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pine in a 16-oz. bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use refined molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make 10 ounces—more than you can buy ready-made for $2.50. It is pure, good and very pleasant—children take it eagerly.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—irritated membranes—and this Pine and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Spending too, for "cough" cures, hiccups, or any ordinary cough ailment.

Pine is a highly concentrated compound of essential oils, and is famous the world over for its wonderful effect upon colds, influenza, and other ailments. Ask your druggist for "10 ounces of Pine" with directions and don't accept any substitutes. Guaranteed to give absolute relief, or money refunded. The Pine Co., Toronto, Ont.

When An Earldom Went a Begging.

When the tenth Earl of Huntingdon was laid to rest on October 23, 1780, it was thought that his family history was closed for ever, and that he was the last of the line. But noble houses are not so completely extirpated. He had not been dead long when the Rev. Theophilus Henry Hastings, an old and eccentric cleric, turned up to claim the title, and proved he was the rightful heir, although he had to go back to Elizabethan history to do so. In due time he went the way of his ancestors, and then it seemed certain that the Earldom had become extinct. Years afterwards, however, a Captain Hans Francis Hastings, who had been a Navy captain, but was now a storekeeper, was one day tramping in Leicestershire, when he was overtaken by a garrulous old woman in a market-cart who began to tell him her history. She had been in the employ of the Hastings family, she said, and she went on to tell how the youngest son Hans had been drowned, when a boy, in the Cove of Cork. The captain pricked his ears, plied the woman for more information, and before he left her was convinced that he was really the Earl of Huntingdon. He hastened to a lawyer-friend, and the case was laid before the Attorney-General, with the result that a petition was presented to the Crown, pleading his Royal Highness the Regent to graciously order a writ of summons to pass the Great Seal to summon Hans Francis Hastings to sit in Parliament. The Royal Warrant was signed, and a few days later the storekeeper was making his stately progress in his peer's robes up to the floor of the House of Lords to take the oath and his place as the twelfth Earl of Huntingdon.

"Summer-time" Surprise

How many people know that our "summer-time" is not a new thing at all? As a matter of fact, it is only a feeble imitation of a common practice of the Romans. In every province of the Roman Empire day began, at all seasons of the year, at sunrise, and ended at sunset. The day consisted of twelve "hours," whose duration was not sixty minutes but one-twelfth of the total period of daylight.

Cleans and Whitens.

A little shaken into the toilet bowl renders it free from odors and snow-white.

Snowflake Ammonia

In winter-time when the sun rose at 8 a.m., and set at 4 p.m., the day was only eight of our hours in length. The Roman mid-winter hour was therefore only forty minutes. Thus the first hour was from 8 to 8.40 a.m., the fifth from 10.40 to 11.20 a.m., the twelfth from 3.20 to 4 p.m.

In high summer-time, with sunrise at 5 a.m., and sunset at 9 p.m., each "hour" consisted of eighty minutes. The first hour was from 5 to 6.20 a.m., the second from 6.20 to 7.40 a.m., so on.

But while we alter the clock twice a year, the Romans made change every day.

In every province of the Roman Empire day began, at all seasons of the year, at sunrise, and ended at sunset. The day consisted of twelve "hours," whose duration was not sixty minutes but one-twelfth of the total period of daylight.

Hours were normal only at the spring and autumn equinoxes—that is on March 21st and September 21st when night and day are of equal length.

Peace Hath Her Virtues.

GERMANY BEATING SWORDS INTO PEACETIME TOOLS.

BERLIN. (Associated Press.)—The principal former military and naval workshops of the German Government, which were closed in 1919 in accordance with the Treaty of Versailles, have been re-opened as "peace-time factories" and are producing goods more adapted to needs of peace than war. Two hundred thousand workmen, thrown out of employment by the closing of the shops, have been re-employed.

Among the larger factories converted from military to commercial purposes were the artillery workshops, ammunition, gun, powder, and rifle works laboratories at Amberg, Dachau, Cassel, Erfurt, Igelstadt, Lippstadt, Manich, Siegburg, Spandau and Wolfgang, near Hnanau, as well as the navy yards and naval torpedo shops at Friedrichport, Kiel, and Rostock. These factories are operating virtually full time, producing foodstuffs, products and wrought iron stamped and drawn pieces, all sorts of machinery, railroad supplies, motors, motor cycles, hand and machine tools, pneumatic tools, electric utensils, ship machinery, motor and sailing boats, agricultural implements, furniture, locomotives, railroad cars, automobiles and auto trucks. The work of transforming the war factories to commercial usage, undertaken by the Government with the permission of the Council of Ambassadors, was assigned to a stock company, shares of which were taken by the government, the board of control being composed of government officials and representative financiers and industrialists.

German demands are accounting for most of the output of these factories, but surplus products are finding a ready outside market, particularly in the Scandinavian countries, where the high price of money as against the German mark adds to the attractiveness of purchases of German wares. German-made automobiles are especially in demand by foreign dealers. The manufacturers of farm machinery and railroad equipment are looking to Russia as a chief customer as soon as conditions in that country have been stabilized, and already hundreds of representatives of German exporting firms have gone into the Soviet republic to study the situation and prepare for a commercial offensive, in which the British are expected to be the most alert competitors.

No Prohibition on "Renown."

CIGARS, CIGARETTES, TOBACCO AND SPIRITS.

LONDON. (Associated Press.)—The battleship "Renown" will carry two princes when she starts for India to carry the Prince of Wales on a visit to that empire. Prince Charles, the second son of the Belgian King Albert, is a midshipman on the "Renown," but will devote his time to his duties. He is well acquainted with members of the British royal family, for he was a cadet on board the vessel in which the British Prince George recently made a Mediterranean tour. Eleven black cats have been taken on board the "Renown" as mascots.

The battleship will have 65 officers and 1,250 men aboard in addition to 16 boys from Eastney, who will form a drum and life band. The "Renown" will take with her for receptions several thousand cups and saucers, plates, knives, forks and spoons. The provisions include 112,000 pounds of flour, 15,000 pounds of "bully" beef, 8,000 pounds of salmon and 2,000 pounds of "First Mince." For the use of the officers there will be a stock of 155,000 cigarettes, 2,000 dozen bottles of wine and 9,000 cigars, the latter in addition to 5,000 cigars taken by the Prince of Wales himself. Throughout his Australian tour the Prince preferred, during the day, to smoke a pipe of tobacco but after dinner he invariably had a Havana. Apart from the monthly issue of loose and leaf tobacco the man's smoking needs will be met by the captain on board, and for them there will also be 5,500 gallons of neat rum and 4,000 gallons of these juices.

Why Are We Right-Handed?

The most recent explanation of right-handedness, by a psychologist, is exciting some merriment among medical men. He supposes the human body to have unexplained polar properties, somewhat like those of a magnet, the right side being always "positive" and the left "negative."

The most rational explanation would seem to be that which accounts for right and left-handedness by the position of the heart. The shield would naturally be held in the left hand to protect this vital organ, so that the active work would fall to the right hand. Those who maintain that acquired characteristics cannot be inherited will desire to have this expressed somewhat differently. According to them the positions of spear and shield were at first a matter of individual choice, but those who held the shield in the right hand, leaving the heart exposed, were more frequently killed.

A North Pole Deception.

It may surprise many people to learn that even when an Arctic explorer had the Pole Star exactly overhead he would still be about eighty miles from the North Pole. Why? Because the Pole Star—or Polaris, as it is known to astronomers—is not the North Celestial Pole, to which the geographical North Pole corresponds, but nearly three times the apparent breadth of the full moon from it.

The fact is, that the Pole Star merely happens to be the nearest bright star to the North Celestial Pole. This latter point is an imaginary one in the heavens, marking the spot towards which the earth's axis is directed. Owing to causes which need not be entered into here, this imaginary point is moving in a great circle in the sky, a circle so vast that about 26,000 years is taken to complete it.

A few thousand years ago it was a long way from the present Pole Star, and in those days the star was quite an ordinary one, differing in no way from hosts of others we see around us on any fine night. In another few thousand years to come our present "highly important" Pole Star will have again sunk into obscurity through having been left in the lurch by the steadily-moving North Celestial Pole. The brilliant blue-and-white Vega will be the most magnificent Pole Star of the island, but will be about 12,000 years, however, before its turn comes.

The Loneliest Islanders.

VISIT TO PITCAIRN. — HATLESS AND BOOTLESS PEOPLE.

(By Ivy Dean, in Daily Mail.) A lonely island in the Central South Pacific Ocean and more than a thousand miles from anywhere, Pitcairn Island, with now about 180 inhabitants, forms a part of the High Commissionship of the Southern Pacific. Owing, however, to its isolated position, it had never hitherto received a visit from the High Commissioner, so that I considered myself fortunate indeed to be in the steamship "Ionio," of the Shaw Savill Line, with my uncle, Sir Ralph Williams, bound from New Zealand to England, and with Sir Cecil Rodwell, the High Commissioner, when she received orders to diverge to Pitcairn; and still more so to find myself one of the few included in the official landing party.

At 8 a.m., on June 14 the captain sent down word that Pitcairn was in sight, and soon after 10 we were lying a little way off it and two boats were speedily on their way out to us. There was a heavy swell running and it was a wonderful sight to see the islanders handling their boats. Several of them came on board, bringing with them a tale of disaster which cast a gloom over the ship. One of their boats had been dashed to pieces that very morning as they were launching it. One of the crew was killed and two others were severely injured, one of whom died soon afterwards.

1,000ft. Climb. The first thing, of course, was to get the deers ashore. Our crew of twelve men, five pairs of sculls, one man in the bows, and a man steering with a huge skill at the stern, made short work of the journey to the shore, in spite of the heavy swell running. Our party was 34 in number, including Sir Cecil and Lady Rodwell and their eldest son, a boy of 14, and Sir Ralph Williams. As we got near the island I liked the look of our landing-place not at all. A huge swell was breaking on the rocks, and the prospects of getting ashore dry seemed remote indeed. However, we managed it somehow, and then started on what we fondly imagined would be a short walk to the township. Never was a landing party less prepared for what was before it. Clad more or less in garments of ceremony, we found ourselves faced with the task of climbing to the top of the island and down the other side. With a tropical sun on our backs (and in my own case slippery shoes on my feet and a skirt too narrow), we found ourselves swarming up a precipitous rock track, sometimes on bare rock, sometimes on shifting shale that gave no foothold, nor any hand-hold either. Purple, and dripping with heat, with pulses beating all over, we toiled on and on. What the distance was I do not know; the height was not far short of 1,000ft.; anyway, it took us nearly three hours of the toughest work I ever put in.

And with the flash of the long green "kale" the deal was closed.

So, they are here. When you see them you'll admit that George just hits things right at the right time.

Exciting Adventure With Bull Elephants.

LONDON, Oct. (Associated Press).—A good elephant yarn is told by J. Morewood Dowsett, a well-known big game hunter, who has just returned from a hunting trip in South America. He was hunting elephants in Uganda when information was brought him of the whereabouts of a large herd. With a native chief and a house boy, he started to find them. The party came upon the herd in the forest. Mr. Dowsett got several photographs within 20 yards of the beasts, when the chief warned him that they had been "scented" and that the animals were coming for them. Snatching up his rifle Mr. Dowsett shot and killed the leader, a big bull. While some surrounded their dead leader, many of the beasts stampeded and, running the wrong way, Mr. Dowsett was cut off from the party. Reloading his gun, the hunter dashed off for safety and ran into a big bull elephant, which crashed through the bush six yards in front of him. Trunk aloft, ears extended and trumpeting wildly, the beast rushed at Mr. Dowsett and swept him to the ground with his trunk and turned rapidly in its own length ready to trample him. The hunter took a flying dive under the monster's body, realizing he would then be on the right side of the wind, but the beast turned rapidly round and again tried to trample him. Instead the animal rolled him over and over with its legs and the hunter saw above him the two great tusks of the pachyderm tried to maneuver his body into position and pick him up. Mr. Dowsett managed to roll behind the animal and get to his feet and make a rush for cover. To the hunter's relief and surprise the furious beast set off in the opposite direction and disappeared.

As It is in China.

PEKING, (Associated Press).—The inter-provincial "war" in the Yangtze valley continues, notwithstanding the withdrawal of the Peking government of Wang Chan-yuan, the unpopular high inspecting commissioner of Hupoh and Hunan. The war cry of the southerners when they invaded Hupoh was that Wang must go. Now it is autonomy for Hupoh. Whatever the real motive back of the invasion, it is being effectively opposed by General Wu Pei-fu with his Chihli and Shantung troops. Several severe battles have been fought with several thousand casualties all told, and the northerners are reported to have occupied Yo Chow, in Hunan, and to have control of the Peking-Hankow railway in the district where he was operating and tried to raise a loan from chambers of commerce and guilds. His action brought him into disrepute with the people of Hupoh, and he appears now to be classed in that province with the general run of militarists. He was formerly, and still is regarded here, as an exalted type of military leader whose acts are guided by high patriotism.

On the other hand, the southerners are alleged to have put out a cry for help from Dr. Sun Yet Sen and to be marking time until such help arrives. Trouble on the Yangtze above Hankow is serious on account of indiscriminate firing by soldiers on all craft, foreign or Chinese. Formal notice has been sent to all consulates against such navigation, and such steamers as continue to move are conveyed as a rule by gunboats, which have occasional brushes with troops on the shore.

Tricks in All Trades.

Paris, (Associated Press).—More than 270,114 rats have been killed in Paris since the offensive against them was started a year ago. Bonuses have been paid at the rate of 30 centimes a head. In the first month of the campaign the bonus was paid upon delivery by the rat hunter of the tail of the animal, but a sewer cleaner became an expert in the art of manufacturing rat tails out of leather and other material at the rate of several hundreds per day and since then the bonus has been "per head" instead of "per tail."

The attitude of Toronto papers toward so-called sport is more extraordinary than that of the American press. The Toronto ball team is composed exclusively of foreigners. Yet Toronto papers become excited and make their readers excited over the fact that a lot of Americans who wear uniforms labeled "Toronto" defeat a lot of Americans labeled "Baltimore." We do not know that even the Toronto uniforms are made in Canada. We understand patriotism, and the irrational and universal desire to see Canadian or British competitors triumph over all comers. We would have been proud even of Einstein or Capablanca, little as we understood their technique. But one of the miracles of the age, an advertising miracle, is the fact that Canadians will become so excited over the relative merits of American baseball players; that hundreds of citizens who will one day hoot a player, born in South Bend, Ind., who wears a Buffalo uniform, and the next day will frantically applaud him because he wears a Toronto uniform.
