DYNAMITE TRIAL.

TRIAL OF THE SIX LONDON PRISONERS.

THEY DENY GENERAL JAMES' ADDRESS FOR THE CONSPIRACY.

LONDON, June 11.—The dynamite conspirators, Dr. Gallagher, Bernard Gallagher, Ansbrough, Curtin, Whitehead and Wilson, who are charged with treason-felony, began this morning, Mr. Clark, Q.C., counsel for the defense, challenged three witnesses against the prisoners.

Attorney-General James opening the case for the prosecution and the prisoners were charged with an offense which was very near high treason. It was necessary to prove that all the prisoners included in the indictment for treason-felony intended to murder lives and destroy property without regard to who suffered by the act.

As in a different position from the prisoners, his own statement might be considered to connect him with the dynamite plot, but the evidence regarding him required very careful weighing, so as not to risk punishing an innocent man. It was alleged that the conspirators had established there was not a person in this country who would not be pleased that they had been brought to justice.

Mr. Clark, the informer, repeated the testimony concerning the doing of the conspirators that he gave at the preliminary hearing.

Ansbrough will conduct his own defense. Lurch being cross-examined said he never saw Wilson or Ansbrough at the trial in Bow street police court. "Irish republic" was mentioned in the oath he took in New York, when he joined the conspirators. He was not aware Ireland had a separate parliament in the last century. He had never been associated with any rebellion or plot in England or Ireland. It was not an account to him whether Ireland became a republic or had home rule. He never conversed with Dr. Gallagher in the presence of James. His suspicions were aroused by the spring which Gallagher handed him and which he admitted he broke his oath in the spring club, New York, which was as binding as the one he took in court. He did not know the object of the oath, but was joined, and then did not like to back out.

Several witnesses testified that Whitehead purchased the dynamite used in the manufacture of explosives.

The case was adjourned.

There was an enormous crowd around the Old Bailey and the court was jammed. Special precautions were taken to prevent a disturbance. It was stated the crown had accepted Wilson as a witness.

The Vatican's Confidence in English Rule in Ireland.

ROME, June 11.—The text of the reprint of the five acts of the pontifical constitution relating to Ireland was the letter of May 11, in which the pontiff formulated the unchanging policy of the Vatican throughout the present pontificate, and that the pope's attitude toward the British Empire on Aug. 1, 1882, informing him that he was confident British statesmen would give satisfaction to the Irish people when they demanded what was just.

The court of common pleas has refused to declare any candidate elected councillor for the ward in Dublin, formerly represented by Carey, the informant, as it has no evidence that a vacancy exists.

Abuse of the Stratford Act.

LONDON, June 11.—Wedge alias Archer, now out on bail on a charge of forgery, on which he was extradited from New York, should have appeared at the police court to-day, but failed to attend. The case was remanded from Saturday when the police prosecutor stated there had been a gross abuse of the provisions of the extradition treaty. The prisoner was really wanted to answer for another charge at Bristol. The persons who deposited to the information on which his extradition was granted had not appeared and the court was confirmed by unanimous vote. Occasional he then handed his resignation to the speaker which was accepted unanimously. It was couched in the most offensive terms.

BRADLAUGH ON THE WAR PATH.

LONDON, May 21.—There is in the city, in a rather busy thoroughfare called Old Street, a place of meeting named the Hall of Science. It may comfortably seat 2000 people. About six years ago I went there on a Sunday night for the first time. There were probably fifty persons in the room. On the platform at one end of the hall were a lady and a gentleman. He had a massive frame, the appearance of a priest and the face of a bulldog. The lady was Mrs. Beant, the wife of a clergyman. Her partner was Mr. Charles Bradlaugh. They both told us bold things about religion, and tried hard to persuade us that there was no God. I went there again and again. Each time the room got fuller and the doctrines bolder. New and then politics took the place of theological and biblical raids, and republican principles got vented. As first the attendance was evidently mainly composed of people who had dropped in through curiosity, without any notion of what they were to hear, but gradually came a public attracted by sympathy for the principles that were preached. This public was composed of mechanics, clerks, and small shopkeepers, many of them accompanied by their wives or sisters.

Last night I was there again. Expecting to find a large meeting, owing to the increasing popularity of Mr. Bradlaugh among the working classes, I arranged to arrive three-quarters of an hour before the beginning of the proceedings. Seats were to be had for a shilling and for a sixpence. The room was already full. It was only by a combined effort of diplomacy and weight that I passed myself down between a middle-aged lady, fashionably dressed, and a young red republican. After that many other people came and were most numerically packed. There were as many outside as there were inside. I had gathered a few days ago from the general tone of a conversation of an aristocratic circle that it was all over Bradlaugh; that the fellow was completely crushed and would never be heard of again. Having had many opportunities of studying the representative of Northampton, and knowing him to be a man of will, I disapproved of the rose-colored view, but was lagging at the appointed time Mr. Bradlaugh, a young, bright looking, and intelligent lady of about 25. Then Mr. Bradlaugh began to speak. His delivery was first low, as though his lungs were weak, gradually grew stronger, till it vibrated like an incessant roll of thunder. His speech was clear, quiet and clever. His appeals from what the speaker called the treason of the commons to the rights of the people won a temporary triumph. It would have been badly laded with certain members of the house if they had been within the reach of some of his neighbors. The speaker very ably contended that the commons had committed treason against the constitution by refusing to receive him. His constituents, although he had been lawfully elected by them, as admitted by his neighbors, to sit, why was not a new writ issued for Northampton? No legal objections could be urged against his return. He was therefore one of the commons of England, and business should not go on in parliament without his taking part in it, for it was not only his right, but his duty to do so. "If the house of commons," urged the orator, "amid the fresh valley of deers," "would, by its mere resolution alone, override law, what reasonable security was there for the liberty, or property of any subject of the nation?" Then he went on to remark that he was afraid, as it has been said, that the house had gone too far to recede; yet one of them must recede, and he would not recede. Turning then against those who had assailed him the most in the commons, the radical orator swept himself with bitter sarcasm, crushing under foot all consideration of rank or past glory. He cut out especially with remarkable spirit of his Lord Randolph Churchill, until he figuratively got him in chains, as one of his neighbors had said. Having reminded the meeting that Lord Randolph had said that he (Mr. Bradlaugh) had been elected by the votes and consent of Northampton, he asked whether anything could be more insolent, and at the same time more awkward than this definition of a most honorable body of citizens by the descendant of the man who was for selling his country, and who enriched himself by robbing soldiers of their bread and carrying them to death.

The largest of Northampton has there issued his challenge to the commons. During the ensuing weeks weeks he will hold meetings all over the country, to be wound up by two monster ones in London in July and August. After that, having satisfied himself, as he said, that he will take his seat.

Rarely have political assemblies shown so little foresight and judgment as have been displayed by the commons in this affair. Mr. Bradlaugh was quite in the wrong at first. They have helped him out of his position and put themselves in his place. He was disliked and ill-sustained. They have given him the prestige and power of a martyr, and now should there be broken heads and ugly riots, the fault will lie with them.

A few most tactless tactics of this kind were got forward checking the respect of first ladies of the opera, and first gentlemen of the play too, for that matter.

MUSIC HAD.

There is nothing in the classics that cannot play at night.

His excellency's performance seems so classic, and a long-haired Dutch professor, much more in keeping with her shoulder as she plays.

She never up to breakfast, I cannot wonder at it.

With a hammer at Beethoven until one o'clock, and that horrid Dutch professor never goes to take his nap.

Ill the very latest harmony is done.

In the days when I was courting she could rattle off a sonnet.

Some simple thing that I could understand.

She is a little wiser by the soft light of the moon.

And 'twas only her plans that was grand.

But to-day how sadly altered; almost welcome to my eye.

In the heart of the cat upon the fence.

And the moonlight performance seems so classic, and pure and clear from the classical museum.

That warning by the symphonies that blast my health and life.

That I have suffered once—

That I try to seek for music when you're seeking for a wife.

And avoid long-haired professors that are Dutch.

Her own.

Her own were clasped about her.

COMIC OPERA AT THE BOO.

The Opening Even Attended by a Large Audience.

Nearly one thousand people attended the theatrical performance last night to witness the opening performance of the summer series of comic opera. Olivette was the bill of fare, and the Holmans were the performers. The gardens were handsomely illuminated with Chinese lanterns and lime lights, the effect being very pretty. The stage was erected at the north end and a canvas covering was above the audience. The managers, however, will have to provide for more seating capacity, as there was not nearly enough of room. The animals seemed to enjoy the music as much as the audience, and showed their appreciation by keeping attentively quiet. Great Peter made a clumsy attempt at a walk in his cage during one of Sallic's duets, and the audience put there with a big stick which his keepers kept to prod him up occasionally. The opera was very nicely rendered, considering the limited size of the stage. The scenes and properties were pretty. Mrs. Holman presided at the piano and was assisted by Prof. Marley's Grand Organ. Olivette will be repeated to-night.

It is gratifying to note the enthusiasm with which the opera was received. Miss Sallic Holman in her excellent voice, and her most cordial welcome to the audience, and the presence of several couples. Miss Holman also came in for a good share of complimentary remarks. It is much to be regretted that she was not given by the audience, while the new opera, for Mr. T. Dalton and Mr. Al Holman, is in the hands of the manager.

A ROYAL ROAD TO LEARNING.

We have found upon our table a series of Canadian school books extending to six volumes, lettered "The Royal Readers," and bearing the well known imprint of James Campbell & Son, Toronto.

What a pleasure to our friends across the border are not satisfied with a huge measure of protection, they really appear to be young saplings from the depositions of the unthinking brute creation or the equally unthinking small boy.

Where such a high degree of excellence prevails throughout, it is difficult to know what precise features may best be singled out for special comment in a brief notice of this kind.

The rightness or wrongness of publishing a Sunday paper is ever and anon coming to the surface, Sabbatarianism of course denounces it, probably forgetting that the same objection is made against the Sunday paper.

It is the Rideson hall officials continue to contradict the stories about her majesty's head, their number will have to be increased. The latest yarn comes from Washington and it is more startling than any that have gone before.

LOCAL PARLIAMENTS.

To the Editor of The World. Sir: Reader thinks that I quite ignore, in my communication about the true meaning of our federal-constitution, the cost of local government.

There is just as little community of interest between Ontario and Manitoba, as shown by the agricultural implement dealers of the province.

There is a time when by means of forethought the federal union might have been placed on an enduring basis. The Tilley tariff has done more to injure the farmer than to help him.

It should ever be borne in mind by those who contemplate the study of shorthand that shorthand is not a science.

It is a pity that the many others who would study the quality of the raw material to those who have taken up the study of shorthand, and by their own unaided efforts followed it through all its disheartening intricacies.

On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the stomach, nervous prostration and neuralgia.

HOMESTEADS

CRESCENT LAKE, N. W. T., IS THE SPOT.

Those who noted the lengthy published list of desirable settlers who have taken up land with our Company will be curious to know why they like the place.

MR. W. BAKIN, May 11, 1888, referring to the district between the Canadian Pacific Railway and our location as to timber, log and quality of soil, says: "It is not as good as what I have seen in our townships."

MR. THOS. EVANS, May 11, 1888, in a letter to his wife, says: "I saw the two farms, and we are quite satisfied with them. As soon as Mr. Outhwaite had finished going round his land he said, 'Well, it's splendid!'"

MR. J. LESTOCK REID, D. L. S., May 15, 1888, in a personal letter writes: "I am quite sure that the longer they or any other settlers are on these townships the better they will like the locality, and there is one thing sure—they cannot get better soil and a district more adapted for farming than these townships."

MR. GEORGE ADDISON, May 16, 1888, writes: "Mr. Bakin says the Eckarts have a good section, and have even some grain. They are pleased with their land."

MR. CHAS. BARBANS, May 20, 1888, says: "I am very well pleased with the country, and it all as represented. The country looks splendid; never saw better farms anywhere."

MR. GEO. S. THOMSON, (late of Toronto) writes, May 20, 1888: "I may say we are both thoroughly well pleased with the country. I have not seen better land. Game is plentiful up here, and the boys say that they have got tired of shooting them now, for they can easily knock them down with sticks."

MR. EDWARD CUTWAITE, (late of Yorkville) writes, May 21: "We are as happy as in my life long. Advise Mrs. Outhwaite to sell out; there is too much worry in business. Mr. Moore, I find this place just as you said. It is quite a park. I have not seen anything like it in Ontario. The land is good—wood is plenty—water splendid!"

People may well believe that we Really and Truly invite them to a Beautiful Country, possessing a rare combination of these essentials to comfort and prosperity, viz.: Rich Soil, Sufficient Wood, Luxuriant Hay, Pure Water.

WHERE IS IT? Crescent Lake is in the District of Assiniboia, only 40 miles north of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Address an excellent natural trail has just been located to Broadview, the nearest station. Broadview is an important place and the end of a locomotive division.

of the union. Money is ever repeating the blunder of assuming that it can control public journals to public deception, and it doubts will continue to display its singular weakness by continuing to buy or start newspapers to languish or die unlamented.

The history of Toronto journalism will add a line to the money of a west King street newspaper proprietor has lately failed to supplant a hated and successful contemporary.

Whittier as a Humorist. No one thinks of Whittier as a humorous poet, or as other than grave and dignified. Yet the following lines—which may be found in a poem called Trust, page 208, diamond edition of his works—might have been written by one of our provincial funny men:

"A pleasure memory brings to me; I look across the years and see myself across my mother's knee. I feel her gentle hand restrain My selfish mood, and know again A child's blind sense of wrong and pain."

A Fox Hunt in London. There was a fox hunt on the Victoria embankment yesterday afternoon, May 28. A fancier was proceeding up the embankment when a fox under his arm a retriever dog attacked the fox from behind, causing him to break away from his proprietor. This was the commencement of a general attack upon the fox, and at every step he found new opponents, from the Newfoundland downward. Running through the rails of the embankment, he managed to evade his pursuers for some time, but was eventually brought down in the open.

Why He Married the Bachelor. A postman left two letters at the residence of a Chicago minister, both of which contained an application for his services to perform the marriage ceremony at the same time. "I hardly know what to do," he remarked to his wife, "I can't accommodate them both. Let me see—Mr. A. has been married before, has he not?" "Oh, yes," she replied, "he lost his first wife six months ago."

"And Mr. B. is a bachelor?" "That settles it, then. I shall marry Mr. B. When a man marries the second time he never pays the minister any more than the law allows, but young bachelors sometimes very foolish," and the good man rubbed his hands merrily.

Grattan's Grave. Letter to the London Daily News. I went lately to look for Grattan's tomb in Westminster abbey. Knowing that it consisted of a plain slab near the more majestic monuments of Pitt and Castlereagh, it is feared that after some difficulty found it so placed that it could not possibly attract attention and could only be discovered by a diligent seeker, being under one of the seats, which with their foot-holds are many of the plain monuments in this part of the abbey. In these days when not few Englishmen look back with lingering regrets at the great Irish patriot, who always aimed to avoid arousing "an alien or distrustful spirit toward England," he might surely pay as much respect to the memory of Henry Grattan as to his simple tomb lying open to the public gaze when this needs merely the removal of the slab, or at most, the last two seats of the series which now cover it.

The Dress of the Future. The "Dress of the Future association" is now holding its exhibition in London. The main idea is to equalize the weight of dress upon the body, or rather to shift the burden on to those parts of the body best able to bear it, and to fashion the new garments that they shall combine at the waist without any compression of it, throwing part of their weight upon the hips, but ultimately depending for their position upon the shoulders. They are to hang loosely—not, however, in the manner of the new gowns of a Blouner costume of Albanian type. The upper part will be gathered in as loosely as possible at the waist, and as full as to hang in loose folds over the bosom; while the lower consists of a short skirt suspended from the bodice, and of trousers, either of the knickerbocker kind, caught in below the knee with a frill of lace, or reaching to the ankles. Fading of all kinds is tabooed.

Marriage Debility. Both Nervous and General. Lack of Self-confidence, and Will-power, Impaired Memory, Disproportionate Weak Back, and kindred affections, are common results of the excessive and pernicious practices, pursued in solitude. Means of restoring and perfect cure are suggested in large illustrated treatise, sent free to those who send age stamps. Address: WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N.Y.

Which is Why. "Was not for your fairy like figure, Nor yet for your angel-like face; But for the fact that you were so kind, Nor yet for your exquisite grace."

"Was not for those meaningless whippers That fell with such musical sound, 'Tis the case of the evasive glance, Such charms I could quickly relinquish Without a care of a pang or sigh."

For none of these things I adore you— But for the fact that you were so kind, And that the hair that you gave me Was not parted so out on my side."

The Rain. From the Century. "Hark! It comes! With ear to ground I catch the sound. The warning, courier-coar that comes before the shower."

The Rain, unburdened, sing: Up to the skies, Up to the skies, Is drawn."

"Bob, can you tell me where I can find some paupers?" asked a motherly appearing old lady of an archon on the street. "I'll give you a list of the names of the poor," was the reply of his amiable spouse.

The hat of a girl employed in an eastern cotton mill was caught in the machinery, and she was killed. Her death was a sad one, and it is a warning to all girls who work in such places.

At a wedding up-town, the other day, where the bride was very dilatory in arriving at the church, a lady remarked, concerning the affair: "Well, the idea of that woman being late at a wedding, when she has been waiting twenty-two years for just such a chance as this!"

At the sacrifice of her estate, Mrs. Annand, of London, a Baron of high social standing, will study medicine in the Woman's medical college of Philadelphia. She is only 17 years of age, and is a native of this country.

If the members of the gentler sex in this state also earn their own living, receiving from $10 to $2000 each per annum, this does not include amateurs or mothers and daughters in the household. As there are 70,000 surplus women in Massachusetts, it is a question of employment are widely appreciated.

Saxony has some very curious laws concerning servants. For instance, the mistress is required to allow the servant one pound of butter and one pound of coffee per month, or the equivalent in money. If she does not furnish her own bedding she receives one and one-half cents extra per night for so doing. Seventy-five cents per month is allowed for her washing, and she receives five per cent on all purchases she makes. She must give a month's notice before leaving her place, and she must be provided with a certificate of good character, in which, upon leaving her place, her mistress is compelled to state the cause of the servant's leaving and also what is her character.

She looked very sad, and had black rings around her eyes.

It does not seem improbable that a war will break out between France and China. If so, American newspaper correspondents had better study up their laundry receipts, tin snips, fire-cracker labels and get ready for the worst.
