THE WANDERER'S RETURN

A wanderer in a foreign clime
Sat thinking 'neath a tree
That waved its naked boughs
High o'er the snowy lea.
The March wind's whisper softly stole
Across the empty plain,
As there he sat forlorn—alone—
To dream old dreams again.

His face was sad, serenely so,
Yet noble, brave and true,
And in his hand a letter—yes!
Was shining, peering through.
'Twas a message from old Ireland,
From a mother far away,
With a bunch of smiling shamrocks
For her son—Saint Patrick's Day.

He read the words a mother's heart
Had echoed 'cross the sea;
He heard again his mother's voice
Ring o'er the snowy lea.
His heart beat high and sadly now
The tears, they went and came;
He pressed those sweet lips to his lips
And softly breathed her name.

And now a dream of Erin sweet
He dreams in fancy rare
And springtime lingers on the hills
Of dear old County Clare;
And there below those hills of green
A grave is blooming now—
He reads the name upon the cross
And sorrow clouds his brow.

"And is he dead? Alas!" he asks:
"Ah yes! the letter's true."
"From poor dad's grave the shamrocks
green,
I send in pain to you.
One morning, when the sunlight shades
Hung heavy round the trees,
The tolling bell sang him to rest
Where sweetly blows the breeze."

He read the letter once again
And tears rained from his eyes:
"Poor dad! He's dead," he whispered
There—kneeling 'neath the skies.
A prayer thus pierced those clouds of blue.
"O God! grant him sweet rest."
And saying this he sadly pinned
The shamrocks on his breast.

Then slowly down the hill he sped
With heavy heart and lo!
The sun burst through a gloomy cloud
And sent its smiles below.
His heart so young then told its tale
Fresh, to the morning air;
Long days he tramped and wandered far
Poor soul! He knew not where.

Ten summers gay had lingered now
O'er dear old County Clare;
Ten years of longing fraught with pain
Had showed a mother's hair
Within the cot just down the lane
A mother waits the day—
The day to bring some news of him—
Her son so far away.

Alas! now in the twilight lone,
When all is free and still,
A gray-haired mother weeps with tears
That grave below the hill.
Two silent crosses—the shamrocks green—
The willow overbend—
All bear the prayer she utters for
The son, whom none as dead.

Another year has run its course,
And spring birds fill the air,

And chapel chimes ring sweetly
O'er the hills of County Clare
The village streets are teeming o'er
With voices young and gay—
Green banners gaily flying there—
Aye! 'Tis Saint Patrick's Day

Pray! Mark the man with tender mien
Who hurries so between
The crowds of merry jester—
Like a stranger he does seem;
His face is like a summer sky
No gloomy clouds to trace;
Did any one in passing
See the bright, familiar face?

And now with eager step and quick
He hurried down the street,
Which oft in days of boyhood
Felt the patter of his feet.
Long years have passed yet little changed
The village seems to him;
He spied a cot down the lane,
Its walls black old and dim.

His dear old home—he sees it now
Bright 'neath its waving trees;
He had worked and made a fortune
Beyond the distant seas.
And now that work was over
He longed for needful rest;
His hope—his life was to embrace
His mother to his breast.

He reached the door and softly tapped
No voice spoke from within,
Yet from a bed a face looked up
But 't was changed and thin.
The gray haired mother raised her arm
And smiled a smile of joy.
"O God! Be thanked a thousand times
For bringing back my boy."

Their faces met in fond embrace
And both wept happy tears
And this moment's merry meeting
Dispelled the pain of years.
"O God! I've seen and blest him
And now my time is run"—
She smiled and sighed and closed her eyes.
Death's angel then had come.

A broken heart sobbed forth a prayer
To heaven's courts on high;
And yet he had just come to see
His poor, old mother die.
And from his coat he sadly took
A letter—dated now
A message from the long ago,
A shadow creased his brow.

The shamrocks green a mother sent
Fall down upon the bed.
Ah! Did he dream long years ago
They'd smile upon the dead?
He kissed them o'er and o'er again
Like on that distant day.
Then placed them on his mother's breast
One sad Saint Patrick's Day

Fraternalism Among Societies

The greatest enemy fraternalism has to meet is the tendency on the part of some societies to meet others in an unfraternal way. Emulation as to which shall accomplish the greatest ends or do the most good is always in order and healthful for the system. But when the representatives of one society attempt to score a point at the expense of a sister institution it commits a great mistake. Remember the traditional bundle of sticks. Powerful opposition is arrayed against our cause. We must present an united front. Put this in your hat.—Fraternal Monitor.

A Word to the Wise, etc

A representation of an insurance department recently said: "A fraternal people have the power to secure any legislation you want; but you don't get it right unless you hang together." No comment is necessary.—Fraternal Monitor

A Power for Good

Fraternal societies to day exert a mighty influence in preventing want. Point to a neighborhood where there are a gaudy number of people who belong to one fraternal order or another, and you will see a community in which want and pauperism are practically unknown.

Speak Well of Your Order

Members cannot afford to be against an Order of which they are members or denounce its worth. When you do this and prevent the Order's growth, you are increasing your own cost of growth among young, healthy members is essential in keeping down the death rate and consequent number of assessments. The Review.

Increase of Fraternities

The increase of fraternal organizations in this country is a cause for gratification. The guilds and benefit societies, bands, lodges and encampments, apart from their immediate benefit to provide relief for members and their families when in distress, exert also important social and educational influences. These associations tend to break up the excessive individualism which is perhaps a characteristic of Americans, and the excessive "selfishness" which, unfortunately is a characteristic of all mankind.

The man who is a despot in his own home, whose will is never disputed when he comes into the fraternity halls that there are other people besides himself; his sharp angles and points that are constantly inflicting wounds in the home become somewhat worn off by attrition. He learns both the necessity and the method of getting on with people who do not think exactly as he does. This is a step in advance when a man leaves the care of his family, it is a still more welcome success when he learns to think of his fraternity, the members of his calling, etc. His hope that in time his views will be enlarged as to take in his whole country and perhaps the human race. In a fraternity men learn how to manage business, they learn to consult, not merely to talk for the sake of oratory, but to talk with reference to some distinct practical end.

Men learn how to create and carry forward an organization and doing so they learn how to perform their duties as citizens in the primary meetings, in the caucus, in the convention, and, perhaps, without their ever having heard the word "fraternalism" they are learning much of its practical meaning. Fraternalism is the extending of man's sympathies beyond himself and beyond a very narrow circle of which he himself is the centre.—Fraternal

CATHOLIC FRIENDLY ASSOCIATIONS IN AUSTRALIA

In a recent number of that excellent Catholic newspaper, the Liverpool Catholic Times, Mr. W. M. Fox, of Sydney, Australia, contributed an interesting article on the growth of Catholic friendly societies in Australia. It would appear that under the southern cross our co-religionists are making great advances in maintaining fraternal societies and considering the relative population they surpass the Catholics of Canada in this matter. In the seven colonies of Australia the Catholic population is about 1,000,000, or about two-thirds of the whole population. In Canada the Catholic population is about 2,000,000 out of a total population of about 6,000,000, or approximately about one-third of the total population. Yet, taking the principal Catholic society in Australia and comparing it with our Association, which is the leading Catholic society in Canada, we will find that the Australians are ahead of us. It appears that there are several Catholic friendly societies in Australia, but the leading one is the Hibernian-Australian Catholic Benefit Society, established in 1871. It has a roll of 16,000 members, and accumulated funds of £95,000. It is open to Catholics only, the periodical approach of the sacraments being obligatory on all members. Needless to say, it has the cordial approbation of the hierarchy. This society has 260 branches. The members in each colony are organized into district boards, which have all necessary power to frame rules, and these district boards in turn elect delegates, who constitute the annual movable meeting which is the supreme controlling body. In this matter of government their rules appear to be different from ours, and besides they make a strong feature of sick benefits.

In the comparisons which we have made, we have not lost sight of the fact that in the great Catholic province of Quebec the C. M. B. A. has not yet attained its proper position. Under ordinary circumstances, Quebec should give as much support to the C. M. B. A. as all the other provinces combined. We have reason to hope, however, from the assurances received from influential friends in that province, that they will in time make it the banner province of our Association, and with Quebec heartily co-operating with the other provinces, we will soon be able to invite more favorable comparison with our brethren in Australia, whose success in the matter of fraternal organization will, we hope, steadily continue

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

One of the Chancellors of Prince Edward Island sends us the following questions and requests an answer through THE CANADIAN:

Does Section 5 of the C. M. B. A. Constitution give a member power to alter, change or amend the designation of his beneficiary certificate by a will, without any endorsement on the back of the policy to that effect—the will, of course, by number or otherwise, identifying the certificate.

For instance: Five years ago a member had his certificate made out in favor of his wife alone. Now new conditions call for a change in favor of, say, his children. But not wishing to tamper with the beneficiary certificate, he takes the precaution to have a will written embodying the changes he wishes to have made in the designation of the certificate. In the meantime, by an accident, he is killed instantaneously. His friends find in the one envelope both certificate aforesaid and an accompanying will. The will (of subsequent date to the beneficiary certificate) changes the designation of the said certificate. Which prevails?

By its Act of Incorporation the Constitution was accepted in this Province. There is, as far as we can learn, no special legislation determining as regards of beneficiary certificates issued by any assessment or fraternal association as there is in Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick?

Now, does the Constitution allow a member full liberty to assign his beneficiary to relatives other than wife and children, to the exclusion of wife and children, when there are no valid reasons for disinheriting them?

Would such alteration be accepted by the Grand Council if made by will? I can readily understand that, being at variance with the spirit of the Association, they might decline to accede to it if made in the usual way if aware of the circumstances, but how would they act if they had a will to deal with?

Would the Grand Council allow a member to disinherit his wife (a good woman) to enable him to endow a charitable institution, say a hospital ward or to found a parochial library?

How should wills affecting a C. M. B. A. policy be dealt with?

How would it be if the Grand Council paid over the amount of the policy to the person designated therein and then some three or four months afterwards a law will and testament turned up. What should be done to guard against such a contingency?

Would it not be wise for the C. M. B. A. to ask for probate of wills?

ANSWERS.

Section 5 of the institution gives the member power to change the designation of the beneficiaries by will identifying the policy, without an endorsement on the policy itself.

The change must be made, however, within the class of beneficiaries which the C. M. B. A. is designed to aid. A man may, in the Province of Prince Edward Island, change a certificate payable to his wife, and make that certificate payable instead to his children, but he could not, in our opinion, transfer it from the wife to persons who did not belong to the class of wife, children or dependents mentioned in sub-section "C" of Section 1 of the Act of Incorporation.

Under the circumstances stated in the letter, the will modifying the designation of the certificate, if it properly identifies the certificate, and transfers it within the class stated or to executors would, in our opinion, prevail as against the designation made in the certificate.

The Constitution does not, as indicated, allow full liberty to a member to assign his beneficiary outside the class mentioned in the Act. If a member made such an attempt the C. M. B. A. would not decide, in advance, whether his action was valid or invalid, nor would it issue a new policy. No insurance company takes to itself the right to determine whether an assignment is valid or not. That is a matter for the courts to decide, and in case of dispute between the parties claiming under a certificate the money is paid into Court. This practice has been followed by the C. M. B. A. since we have been connected with it, and is followed by all insurance companies.

The Grand Council cannot forbid or permit a member to disinherit his wife. That action is not the function of the C. M. B. A., but if a member attempted to transfer the benefits under a policy from his wife to a charitable institution, no matter how deserving, and the matter were referred to us, we should deem it our duty to advise that the attempted change was invalid.

Willis differ so widely even in their connection with C. M. B. A. policies that each must be considered by itself, and it is very hard to lay down any general rule that would apply to even a limited number. Each case as it arises must be separately dealt with.

Where the beneficiary is named in the policy and the C. M. B. A. has no notice of any will, it is protected by statute if it makes a payment in accordance with the terms of the policy. If, however, having notice of the will legally affecting the policy, the C. M. B. A. should disregard the provisions of the will, it would be obliged to pay a second time, though it would doubtless have a right of action to recover back the money that it had paid. It is for those who claim under a will against the C. M. B. A. to give notice of their claim and make it good before the C. M. B. A. pays over the money to the beneficiary. There is no duty cast upon the society to ask for probate of wills, though if a will is produced it must be probated before payment is made.

Answer to Brother McKinnon's question in last month's issue of THE CANADIAN:

The change in the designation of beneficiaries is, in the first place, subject to the law of the Province in which the member resides, and then subject to the Constitution of the C. M. B. A.

There is no statute of the Province of Prince Edward Island affecting the matter. It is therefore, wholly governed by the Constitution, which provides, in Section 5, that the policy may be changed. The powers are not, however, absolute. The object and purpose of the C. M. B. A. must be regarded. In our Act of Incorporation it is stated that the money shall be paid to the widow, orphans, dependents, or other beneficiary whom the deceased has designated. The words "other beneficiary" have been construed to mean beneficiaries of the same class as the widow, orphans, and dependents of the deceased member. The "other beneficiaries" must, therefore, belong to the same class of persons as the widow and orphans. A mother would certainly be within such class. Possibly also a father and sisters. So also would adopted children.

In your Province, therefore, the change could be made within such class, and it could also, in our opinion, be made from a beneficiary or beneficiaries belonging to such class to executors or administrators. The consent of the beneficiaries would, in the absence of any statutory enactment, not be necessary in the Province of Prince Edward Island.

It is not necessary that the change in designation should be endorsed on the policy. It might be made by will or by any document identifying the policy.

Nearly all the provinces have distinct statutory enactments relating to insurance for the benefit of wives and children. In certain provinces the right to change the designation is restricted. The Province of Ontario, by statute, declares "that an insurance for the benefit of a wife or children creates a trust in their favor which cannot be taken away by any act of the insured in the lifetime of the beneficiaries or any of them." An apportionment may, however, be made within the class of preferred beneficiaries.

The law affecting the change of beneficiary is, in our opinion, the law of the province in which a member resides, and the law of the Province of Ontario applies in this respect only to members resident in this province.

ORDINATION ANNIVERSARY.

L'Evangeline says: On Wednesday, Dec. 27th, a number of friends from Shediac, Dorchester, Memramcook, and Moncton, met at Grand Digue, for the purpose of celebrating the 15th anniversary of the ordination of our distinguished compatriot, the Rev. Philip L. Belliveau, P. P. Though young in the ministry, Father Belliveau occupies a high position among the clergy of the Maritime Provinces, being one of the most learned and eloquent and most highly considered members thereof. The esteemed pastor was presented with a number of fine presents, befitting the occasion. L'Evangeline joins with the numerous friends of the Reverend Father in wishing him a long life of prosperity.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of THE CANADIAN:

Dear Sir and Bro.—From the absence of communications in THE CANADIAN from members of our Association, many of whom are men of letters and competent to discuss intelligently matters of interest to members of the C M B A., one would infer that THE CANADIAN is not being read, or that we prefer to let our interest in the affairs of the Association shoulder until the convention. As it seems to be in order, in this year of grace, 1900, to review the progress made in the past, and to speculate on the changes and improvements that may be made in the approaching twentieth century, it might not be out of place here to remind our members that some of the amendments to the constitution that no doubt will be presented for consideration at the next convention to be held during the first year of the next century, may be of great importance to our Association. In my humble opinion all proposed amendments affecting the beneficiary fund law should be presented for consideration by the branches or in THE CANADIAN during this year. At the risk of being considered "fresh," I will submit a few changes that seem to me to be necessary to the vital part of our Association—the increasing of our membership. Any member who has given much thought to the subject of organizing, and has watched our efforts in that direction, must be convinced that so far they have been little better than a failure. If there is not sufficient money paid into the Grand Council by the branches in per-capita tax to efficiently maintain the Grand Council and to defray the expense of advertising that should be done, and of prosecuting such a vigorous canvass as is necessary in order to increase our membership by a substantial number each year, then let all the initiation fees go to the Grand Council—except of charter members of new branches. Our average initiations per month in Ontario should not be less than 100. At a reasonable estimate there must be about 30,000 eligible Catholics in this Province. The average in the Province of Quebec ought to reach 150. But we might just as well send a mite to convert the Mohammedans as to send an Organizer to the Province of Quebec without some assistance from the press of that Province, where we have to compete with such progressive fraternal organizations as the Independent Order of Foresters. Their average initiations, per month, in Quebec, for the twelve months, ending 1st August last, was 213. The next matter to which we should give some careful consideration is our system of paying assessments. While I prefer our present system as being the cheapest and safest, still it does not seem to be the one that commands itself to the uninitiated. In order to compete successfully with the other fraternal organizations, we must be in a position to say exactly how much it will cost per month for $1,000 or $2,000 at a certain age. The next question I respectfully submit, for discussion, by the members of the C. M. B. A. is—I fancy I hear some braves kicking already—the advisability of admitting women to membership. Being in a position recently to get the information, I took the trouble to ascertain whether many of our Catholic women were members of one of the societies into which they are admitted, and was somewhat surprised, not so much at the number who were members, but to find there many I did not expect ever gave life insurance a thought. I was informed Catholic women were initiated in their own houses, and paid their assessments and dues there. The points that will naturally suggest themselves to our minds in connection with this question are: Are women good risks? If they are good enough risks for the straight life companies, for the Independent Order of Foresters, for the Ancient Order of Foresters, and for the Home Circle, why are they not good enough for the C M B A.? What have we to fear from the presence of Catholic women in our Association? Would it not be a benefit to have women in our branches? Will men not naturally prefer the societies into which mothers, sisters, wives and daughters are admitted?

Can we successfully compete for membership with fraternal organizations into which our Catholic women are admitted if we continue to exclude them? I believe the C M B A. will stop short of its mission of amelioration if it fails to provide for the admission of women, at least those who are "bread winners."

Yours fraternally,
J. C. O'NEILL.

Brantford, Feb. 5, 1900.

BRANCH NO. 90. PICTON, ONT.

To Major F. P. Horrigan, I. N. W. M. P.:

The officers and members of St. Gregory's Branch of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association desire to tender their hearty congratulations for you having received the very important appointment of Inspector of the North West Mounted Police, and also to express the sentiment of regret that each and every one of us feel at your early departure from amongst us.

When the official announcement was made and your name appeared in the Canada Gazette, the official organ of the Dominion Government, the hearts of each and every one of us were filled with delight, but when we came to give it our calm consideration we seemed to realize how true the remark "that there is no joy but what has its tinge of sadness." This is the sentiment which fills our hearts individually and collectively in addressing you this evening. As a member of our great Catholic society we have learned to esteem and admire your sterling abilities, always foremost in advancing the good work which has been the aim of our society in this town and county, viz., "piety, integrity and frugality." In educational matters you have distinguished yourself, having held the position of High School Trustee for a great number of years, and your work in connection with that important body has stamped you as one of the most efficient members that ever sat at that board.

As a member of St. Gregory's congregation your position will not be easy to fill, your valuable assistance in all important matters in connection with the parish gratuitously given will never be forgotten, and many will be the prayers and supplications which will be poured forth to the Throne of Divine Mercy from the members of the flock you are leaving that Almighty God may shower His choicest blessings, and that He may long spare you to fill the important office which you are so eminently fitted for. You are particularly honored this evening by the presence of our highly gifted Spiritual Adviser, Rev. Father Twohey. The society will never forget his kindness in showing this mark of respect to you and to the branch this evening. As a brother, we wish you God speed, and as we are about to grasp your hand and say farewell we will never forget the many happy hours which we spent in your genial company in St. Gregory's hall, and before parting we wish to say that wherever duty calls you, whether it be on the shores of the beautiful Fraser River or along the banks of the majestic Assiniboine you will no doubt make hosts of new friends and companions, but who never have truer or more steadfast than those you leave behind in this grand old County of Prince Edward, the garden of Ontario.

We ask you to accept this gift as a remembrance of your association with us, and sincerely hope and pray that you will never have to use it in self defence.

Signed on behalf of the branch,

E. F. R. C.
M. S. G.

C. M. B. A. LECTURE.

St. Mary's Branch No. 1, C M B A., Keweenaw, P. E. I., now feels satisfied that the best way to secure new members is to have the benefits of the Association discussed in open meeting. At the request of the branch, Grand Deputy Bro. James McLean, editor and proprietor of the Charlottetown Herald, on January 11, in the hall at Indian River, delivered an eloquent, comprehensive and instructive lecture on the C. M. B. A.

Bro. John T. Mullin presided in his usual efficient manner and introduced the lecturer in some very pointed and appropriate remarks.

The lecturer carefully explained what are the essential elements of a society, and clearly showed that the C. M. B. A. possesses these in a most eminent degree of perfection. Then he pointed out the relation in which many societies stand to the Church, whether in communion or opposition, and the potent influence they have for good or for evil. man's natural adaptability for society and the greater influence he wields when working through societies, the power of existing societies, their origin, aims, machinery and advantages, the origin, growth and progress of the C. M. B. A., the securing by Canada of a separate Grand Council, its rapid growth and flourishing condition in Canada and the grand future that must be in store for it, the superior over all existing societies, the truly fraternal element, the very small premiums paid on death; no large salaries paid to bodies of officials and agents, and many other interesting and thoughtful points. He closed with an animated exhortation to all young men in the parish to become members of Branch No. 1, "which," he proudly exclaimed, "I know, from official inspection, to be among the foremost successful branches in Canada."

The burst of applause with which the large and enthusiastic audience greeted this concluding remark showed that the lecturer knows well how to use a convincing argument, and soon after the meeting several persons signified their intention of applying for admission into Branch No. 1.

Rev. J. J. McDonald, P. P., Kinora, member of Branch No. 1, supplied mented the lecture with a pointed and impressive speech, in which he endorsed a that the Grand Deputy had said and clearly showed that the C. M. B. A. is the society for Catholics to join. Rev. Mr. Lyons and Hon. John McDonald also spoke in praise of the many good qualities of the C. M. B. A. A vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer and gracefully acknowledged.

In connection with the lecture was rendered a programme which included songs by Rev. J. J. McDonald, Miss George McLaughlin, Bros. T. Donohue and J. A. Ready, readings by Rev. J. M. Donald and J. A. Ready.

Branch No. 1 expects to hold another such meeting before the winter is past.

Fraternal yours,

J. A. Ready.
