

Miramichi and the North Shore, etc.

Their run out on Chatham on Saturday, having started on Friday morning. The run was a heavy one.

A New Comic Party, the Jury has reached us. It is published in St. John and starts out very well in the way of cartoon.

The Four "honorable members" for the year are from the different parts of the province.

Mr. T. Parsons has returned to Chatham and is making ready for the summer trade at his well-known meat stall, Water Street.

EVERYBODY is regretting that Northam, business is made by the elections to appear if he people did not appreciate good Government. Burgess and New-land, however, are almost responsible for a great blunder that has been made.

EASTERN PRESENTATION.—The Record of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Bay du Vin, was presented with a very handsome case by his parishioners on Tuesday afternoon. May 4th, at 4 o'clock. Address by Rev. D. Chapman and others. Tea Meeting at close.—Ad- vanced.

FIRE DEED.—Messrs. Buckley and McKinnon had a fine display of beef for Easter. Among the articles was a ham, which was a pair of even raised in Cum- berland, N. S. by Mr. T. S. Corbett, the live weight of which was 2840 lbs. and when dressed it weighed 2017 lbs. of beef.

REPRESENTATIVE.—The Government candidates, compared with last election, has a considerable record in the election. But for Mr. Hutchinson's influence there the other ticket's candi- date would have had a very small vote.

NEW CHURCH.—The corner stone of the new Methodist Church in Campbellton was laid by Miss Windsor, of New Mills, on Tuesday afternoon, May 4th, at 4 o'clock. Address by Rev. D. Chapman and others. Tea Meeting at close.—Ad- vanced.

SWEET AWAY.—Considerable damage has been done to bridges by the freshet and running loam during the past week or two. The Ducktown Bridge—a large covered one—was almost entirely de- stroyed. A good many of the Southwest River piers have been swept away.

NARROW ESCAPE.—Beaumont Moss, son of Mr. Myer Moss of Chatham, while playing with a pistol last Friday, discharged it in the hall, however, only penetrating his clothing and breaking the skin. The barrel of the weapon was much rusted, which is thought to have prevented the ball from attaining great velocity.

ELATED SERVICES.—St. Mary's and St. Paul's, the Pastor Services in St. Mary's and St. Paul's churches were largely attended and happy. There were between 20 and 30 communicants at the early communion, at St. Mary's. The service at St. Paul's was well attended, and appropriate services were rendered by the Pastor.

NEW GROCERY.—Messrs. J. Ferguson & Co. have opened an attractive grocery establishment at the Hawbolt Store near the Ferry, Water St., Chatham. Mr. Ferguson will know a having for some time had charge of the grocery and provision department of Mr. Bain's business and his experience will no doubt enable him to first establish a good trade.

1105.—Miramichi Journal No. 441. Royal Assessor, at St. John's. The date of the first and third Fridays of each month, in their rooms, Messrs. Hall, Chatham, N. B. John S. Beeson, M. D., Registrar and Medical Examiner; Wm. Wilson, Collector; John Forthright, Secy. Present membership of the board, 62,000.

FOR A NEW FERRY.—Mr. J. J. Anslow of the Advocate takes leave of this paper and his Miramichi friends in a valedictory article this week, in part, to his de- parture for Windsor, N. S. where he has been brought to reside in the Hotel Grand. We would like to be successful in his new field and have no objection to uphold the political friends he may make in that County as he does those he leaves in this.

ANOTHER ARMY SCHOONER.—A telegram from the marine ministry here certifies to Wm. H. Moran of Port Med- way, N. S., announces that the schooner L. Howlett, recently built by Captain John Hatt at Chatham, has been ac- cepted by the government for an armed cutter. The Howlett is a very fast as well as a very handsome schooner, and will not be slow in looking after intruders in our waters. Liverpool Times.

THE STRAITS "NEBON" will be on the route between Chatham, Nelson and intermediate points to-day. During the winter she has been considerably im- proved. The promenade deck has been shortened forward, leaving the main deck clear overhead to a point within a few feet of the wheel house. The boiler has also been shifted several feet forward so as to leave a much larger clear space between the midship galleys.

SUPPER.—A farewell supper was given at the Adams House last evening to Mr. T. E. Keary, who is removing from Chatham to Bathurst, where he has, as already noticed, purchased the Wilbur House. The attendance on the occasion was proof of the esteem in which Mr. Keary is held, and the good fortune of Bathurst in gaining from Chatham so popular a man was the subject of general comment.

ROYAL MAIL SERVICE.—The Canadian government has concluded an arrangement with the Allan S. Co. and the Dominion S. S. Co., in regard to a weekly mail service between Quebec and Liverpool during the summer season, by which it is provided that three Allan boats and two Dominion boats are to do the work. Other first-class boats of the Allan line will, by service, as heretofore. The mail steamer will this year leave Quebec on Thurs- day, instead of Saturday, and the mail will, therefore, leave Chatham on Wednes- day.

RAVE CHARGES.—Mr. Harry Shirreff, who has so acceptably filled the position of Cashier of the Bank of Montreal, Chatham, for the last six months, has been transferred to the Gulf, Ontario, Agency, his place here being taken by Mr. John M. Davidson. On the evening of his departure—last Friday—a number of his friends presented him with an address, accompanied by a drawing case and the staggering hope of a successful position. The almost unanimous support which the government candidates are meeting from the lumber trade on the North Shore is all the more significant by the decision of Messrs. Ritchie and Hutchison. These gentlemen may have good private reasons which may influence them to their course, but which have not sufficient importance to the public dis- cussion.—St. John Globe.

FOR.—Between the hours of ten and eleven o'clock on Monday night of fire and the loud ringing of the fire bell startled the inhabitants of this town, many of whom had retired for their needed rest, but a glance towards the river showed that a fierce fire was raging on one of the wharves. The fire was in a ware- house owned by Mr. C. S. Ramsay, situated at the river end of the wharf and property owned by him, formerly known as Watt's wharf, and used by Mr. Ram- say for storing agricultural implements, hay, etc.

The fire must have been burning in- cessantly for some time, for it was not discovered until the flames burst out furiously on all sides. The wind was blowing lightly from the North and drove the sparks directly over towards the large building on the public wharf owned by Mr. R. B. Call. The shingles on this building were on fire at different times, but men on the exposed side of the roof, and kept the fire down until the steamer got to the wharf all danger of the fire spreading was at an end. Before this time, however, the burning building was almost entirely consumed, the gable ends alone standing when the steam engine was started.

The schr. Fury, owned by Mr. T. W. Crocker, was moored to this wharf, and at one time looked as if she too would be destroyed, as it was impossible to get past the burning building to remove her. Mr. Crocker and some others got on her by a boat from Call's wharf and removed her to the wharf below. Mr. Ramsay is a heavy loser, and estimates his loss at $3000, made up as follows:— 10 tons screwed hay, $120 00 2 New Edgemoor wagons, 250 00 8 mowmen, 100 00 1 Moxon mower, 70 00 4 turnip drills, 80 00 Extra parts of machines $700 to $800 20,000 Shingles at $2.00, 40 00 Building valued at, 300 00 Damage to Wharf, 300 00 $3025 00

Mr. Ramsay asserts that the building was set on fire because of the stand taken by him in the election of Monday. An investigation should be held for the purpose of ascertaining, if possible, whether the fire was accidental or as he asserts the work of incendiaries. We sympathize with Mr. Ramsay in the loss he has sus- tained, and hope an investigation when held will prove some other cause than that of incendiaries, as it is just possible that some person may have been in the building smoking, and the fire occurred by a match thrown carelessly down among the loose hay, or by a spark from the pipe.—Advocate.

Sam Small on Newspapers.—Sam Small, who is now laboring in connection with Sam Jones, the famous evangelist, has a remarkably level head. He says that if he wanted to get a right square judgment of anything, he'd rather go into a newspaper office than into a court of justice. "No man whose life is in jeopardy," he says, "ought to go into a newspaper office in America. The are the best detective force in the country to-day. They have punctured more shams, and so far as I'm concerned, I would not be so sure of my own skin if I were wounded in the leg, while several others received wounds more or less serious. A prisoner named Corvican was shot dead, five other prisoners were wounded, none of them escaped."

THE ELECTION RETURNS.—As far as can be ascertained at present the elections have resulted in a North- westerland, Gloucester and Westmor- land returns for this County are as follows:—

Table with 4 columns: Name, Votes, and other details. Includes names like Chatham No. 1, B. B. No. 2, etc.

St. Andrew's Church, Newcastle. The Easter services in this church were of the character appropriate to the Queen of Festivals. The church was very prettily and lastly decorated for the occasion, two ladies of the congregation having im- ported choice flowers for the purpose. The Good Screens looked remarkably well; the several divisions were marked off by green wreathing, the arches covered with white wool and relieved at intervals with red and maroon. Over the centre arch was a circle with the sacred mono- gram, in golden lettering on a white foundation, surmounted by a golden crown. Running the whole length of the screen, on the top, was the illuminated text—"Alleluia—Christ is risen—Alle- luia," on the lack of which, and the screen itself, was a beautiful assortment of flow- ering plants, kindly lent for the occa- sion. The whole was a very striking effect. The altar was in its usual orna- mented and in addition to its usual orna- ments had two vases of calla lilies. On the top of the altar was the text "Alleluia, Alleluia." The Font was covered with plants, and being near the door, looked very well on entering the church. There were four services during the days of 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m., and 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 a.m. All were well attended. The singing was, as usual, very good. The antiphony—"Ye choirs of New Jerusalem!" was sung with the evening service. There were 63 communions made during the day—the largest number for many years. The annual Easter Meeting was held on Monday evening at 7 o'clock at the School House at 8 o'clock. The finances of the church were shown to be in a very satis- factory condition. R. B. Hadwin, Esq., and T. Malby, Esq., were elected War- dens for the coming year. Vestry clerk and Treasurer, R. B. Had- win, Esq. Vestry—Wm. Malby, J. G. Kethro, Charles Malby, Russell, R. L. Malby, James Corp, Geo. Burdett, Hugh Hutchison, Hugh Black, Thomas Black, J. W. Davidson, and Geo. O. Allen. Representatives to Synod.—William Malby, by Richard Malby, Substitutes, R. B. Hadwin, J. G. Kethro. The same were also appointed as delegates to the Diocesan Church Society.

The annual Easter Meeting was held on Monday evening at 7 o'clock at the School House at 8 o'clock. The finances of the church were shown to be in a very satis- factory condition. R. B. Hadwin, Esq., and T. Malby, Esq., were elected War- dens for the coming year. Vestry clerk and Treasurer, R. B. Had- win, Esq. Vestry—Wm. Malby, J. G. Kethro, Charles Malby, Russell, R. L. Malby, James Corp, Geo. Burdett, Hugh Hutchison, Hugh Black, Thomas Black, J. W. Davidson, and Geo. O. Allen. Representatives to Synod.—William Malby, by Richard Malby, Substitutes, R. B. Hadwin, J. G. Kethro. The same were also appointed as delegates to the Diocesan Church Society.

St. Andrew's Church, Newcastle. The Easter services in this church were of the character appropriate to the Queen of Festivals. The church was very prettily and lastly decorated for the occasion, two ladies of the congregation having im- ported choice flowers for the purpose. The Good Screens looked remarkably well; the several divisions were marked off by green wreathing, the arches covered with white wool and relieved at intervals with red and maroon. Over the centre arch was a circle with the sacred mono- gram, in golden lettering on a white foundation, surmounted by a golden crown. Running the whole length of the screen, on the top, was the illuminated text—"Alleluia—Christ is risen—Alle- luia," on the lack of which, and the screen itself, was a beautiful assortment of flow- ering plants, kindly lent for the occa- sion. The whole was a very striking effect. The altar was in its usual orna- mented and in addition to its usual orna- ments had two vases of calla lilies. On the top of the altar was the text "Alleluia, Alleluia." The Font was covered with plants, and being near the door, looked very well on entering the church. There were four services during the days of 8, 9, 10 and 11 a.m., and 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 a.m. All were well attended. The singing was, as usual, very good. The antiphony—"Ye choirs of New Jerusalem!" was sung with the evening service. There were 63 communions made during the day—the largest number for many years. HERO'S LOVE.

"But, Uncle Royal, I am certain he will reform," said Hero Lewis. "He has promised me."
Uncle Royal looked down with a sort of smile, shading it from the height of his six feet, upon his pretty niece, as he stroked her silky hair softly.
"His poor Hero," said he, "what is the word of a drunkard worth?"
"O, uncle, don't use that cruel word. Don't call him a drunkard," cried the girl, shrinking as from a blow.
"Hardly know what that word is applicable to him, Hero. No, he will never reform. And I'd rather see you in your grave than married to a man who drinks."
"Has he promised, pleased the girl?"
"Uncle, ought I not to give him another chance?"
"Your common sense, Hero, says No. I have common sense," flashed out Hero. "People always talk about common sense when they mean to be cold and hard and cruel. I love Harry Rivers, and I mean to marry him."
And Hero went away through the golden wavering of the ears of ripening rye, her blue ribbon fluttering in the breeze.
Uncle Royal looked after her with a mingling.
"Like all other girls," he said; "she is determined to have her own way. Well, if she will wreck herself, I can't help it."
"Do you expect Harry tonight?"
"Miss Ermia Lewis was an old maid, but she was young enough at heart to sympathize in the love affairs of the sister fifteen years her junior, and she, too, had a soft spot in her heart for handsome, dissipated Harry Rivers. She spoke from the window, while Hero was leaning over the gate, a light scarlet shawl thrown across her shoulders.
"His said he would come," was the half hesitating answer, "said Ermia. "It is getting late and cold," said Ermia. "Better come in to the fire. You know as well as I do that your throat isn't strong."
"Will come in a minute," said Hero.
They were telling me down at the Corners this afternoon," said Ermia, "that the railroad company are going to discharge him from their employ."
"Discharge him? What for?"
"For habitual intoxication. They say it is not a safe thing to employ a man—who is not always himself."
"Is he a slunder," said Hero, hotly. "It is the work of some base villain who wants the post himself."
"Very probably," said Ermia, sadly. "Only Hero—don't be vexed with me, darling—but they say Harry has fallen in with a set of men from the mill, and is getting into worse habits than ever."
"Have you only evil tidings to tell me, Ermia?"
"I would that they were good, for your sake, sister! But the air is growing chilly. Had you not better come in?"
"By-and-by. Don't tease me, Ermia."
And Ermia said nothing more, and closing the casement, sat down to her needle-work by the light of the lamp.
At eleven o'clock she went to bed, after having ascertained, by a peep through the window, that Hero was still leaning on the gate, all alone in the autumn darkness, with red leaves raining down around her, and the melancholy cry of an owl in the distant woods lending an additional tinge of mournfulness to the night and the stillness.
No sooner did Hero perceive, by the disappearance of the light from her sister's window, that Ermia had sought her pillow, then, softly gliding through the gate, she hurried down the road, with a scarlet shawl drawn tightly over her head.
"I will not be so deceived and put off," she murmured to herself. "I will find out for myself whether he is to be trusted or not."
The Miner's Arms, at the corner of three roads, was all light as she approached it, and from the open casements she could hear the uproarious chorus of a drinking song, and that harsh sound of besotted laughter. And lifting a rail of scarlet-leaved woodbine, which formed a natural curtain to one of the windows, Hero Lewis peeped in.
With a chill sensation of despair she saw Harry Rivers arise, staggering to his feet with a brimming glass in his hand, and propose some toast, which was received with noisy applause.
Hero did not wait to hear more. Drooping the woodbine once more, she hurried away with a white face.
"God help me!" she murmured. "For the idol whom I worshipped has fallen to the ground!"
Just at that moment the far-off whistle of a train roused through the silence of the night—a sudden, startling possibility took possession of Hero's heart.
"The midnight express!" she muttered to herself. "And he dead drunk in that bar-room!"
Hurrying down a steep ravine, heedless of cruelly piercing thorns that rent her dress and drew blood from her tender skin, she sprang like a wild deer down the declivity, scarcely ever pausing for breath until she had reached the iron track in the valley below, where a side-rail marked the interesting course of a freight road that led away toward the north. At 6 every morning and evening the freight train passed over the road-bed, and it was among Harry Rivers' most important duties to turn the switch that connected this branch road with the main track, after the freight train had gone by.
Had he remembered to do so to night. Or was the express from the west now sweeping onward to certain death and destruction?
Hero knelt to feel of the track. The switch had not been altered since the freight train came up at 6 o'clock.
A chill fear headed her forehead, a sinking sensation struck to her heart. Were she gifted with the flying footsteps of Mercury's self, she could not get to the Miner's Arms in time to avert the impending catastrophe. And even supposing that she could, was Harry Rivers in a condition to comprehend what was said to him?
Suddenly a gleam of hope shot asward her brain. She knew where the switch key was kept—she remembered having seen Harry slip it under a projecting ledge of rock upon a sort of natural shelf, beyond where she stood. What if she should attempt to save the lives of the doomed passengers every instant coming nearer to their fate! Snatching the key from its resting-place, she stooped in the faint moonlight now beginning to glimmer through the clouds, and strove with every force of her weak woman's strength to move the iron rails.

God be thanked! they stirred—they groined in their sockets—and, even at the moment in which the fiery-eyed eye of the approaching express train blazed in the fogged distance, Hero dragged the switch into its proper place.
Yet even then she could scarcely believe that it was right, as she leaned panting against the rocks until, with a shriek, the train swept by, and darkness and silence again settled down over all.
Hero Lewis neither fainter nor wept. She was not of the material that shrieks and swooners are made of. She knew that she had saved lives upon this express train; she knew that she had averted a great crime from Harry Rivers' soul, and that was enough for her.
As she climbed the hillside a few minutes later, she met Harry Rivers staggering down the road. She stopped him peremptorily.
"Harry, where are you going?"
"Don't get in my way, lass, for Heaven's sake," he cried, in a thick, uncertain voice. "It's the midnight express. I—I ain't quite certain about the switch."
"The midnight express passed by fifteen or twenty minutes ago," said Hero, firmly. "I heard the whistle!"
"The God have mercy on my soul!" cried Rivers, fairly sobbing at last by the shock.
"You need have no fears," said Hero coldly. "I was there. I turned the switch!"
"Y—yes, I know where the key was kept."
"Hero!" cried Rivers, with a strong sob in his throat. "You are my guardian angel! Hero, you are a woman among a thousand. Kiss me, my darling!"
"Never again, Harry Rivers! This night has opened my eyes. Hereafter, you are the merest stranger to me another!"
The next day his formal dismissal from the service of the railway company came, and he accepted it without a protest.
As for Hero, she never saw him again. But always within the depths of her own soul she kept the secret of the Midnight Express Train.
