delivered a judgment in the case of Carlisle, a pound-keeper of Douglas vs. Clements, in in which he decides that the appointment of Carlisle by the Parish Councillors in April, after the annual meeting, is void, and that pound-keepers have no legal right to impound cattle in any enclosure other than a district pound. This decision will lead to the necessity of dividing the Parishes into pound districts, and the erection of pounds in each district throughout the County.

Vandalism.

A most despicable act was perpetrated in the Collegiate School on Friday morning. After the Janitor had kindled the fires and set the rooms in order, the building was left for twenty or thirty minutes before the arrival of pupils or teachers. In the interval an expensive bible, purchased some years ago by subscription among the pupils, several valuable atlases, a school gong and some other articles, were piled into the stove and utterly destroyed. All the keys of the school building were also abstracted. The parties did not belong to the school and no parties did not belong to the school and no possible motive for the dastardly business can even be imagined.

Mrs. Nicholson has the use of the dwelling house on Meclenburg street for her lifetime; on her decease the rose in her son, at whose death it is to be rented or sold. The testator leaves to his widow all his household furniture, plate, etc. with reversion in tenancy to his children at her death. He directs that a sum of $75,000 be set apart to provide an annuity of $4,000 per annum at 10 o'cloed, after reading of the minutes.

The Dighy Courier says:—Mr. Gale, senior counsel for Amireau, writes to J. M. Owen under date of 20th ult. saying that the newspaper reports that an arrangement for Amireau's discharge had been effected, are not all true. Under the law of the State, he had no power to prevent a postponement of the trial till Cebruary; and whether the Attorney General will then ask to have a day fixed, or not, he does not know nor has no means of knowing. It is therefore, as yet uncertain whether Amireau's discharge he will be put to not; but meantime no preparations are ommitted by Amireau's Counsel. The probability at present seems to be that he will be put to his trial; but possibly not. If a day for his trial is not fixed for February, Mr. Gale and Mr. Crowley will then strongly press for his discharge.

TO THE ELECTORS YORK COUNTY.

GENTLEMEN,—In consequence of the death of Mr. Pickard, you will shortly be called upon to elect a Representative to serve you in the House of Commons of Canada, and at the request of a very large number of Electors, I, will be nominated as a Canidate for your suffrages.

To clieve that an economical administration of lovernment the limiting of taxation to the necessities of Revenue: the maintenance of Provincial rights, and resistance to the centralizing tendencies which now prevail, should be the aim of the Corremance of Canada, and I believe that these principles are fully recognized and the polyment of Canada, and I believe that these principles are fully recognized and the polyment of the Canada, and the property of the Canada, and the principles are fully recognized and the polyment of the community of the Canada, and Taxation to the communities of the principles. principles.

On the subject of Protection, or the NationalPolicy as it is called, while recognizing the desirability of encouraging such Domestic Manufactures as are adapted to the condition of the country, my view is that the requirements of Revenue will afford sufficient protection to such manufactures, and all that ought to be asked; I would therefore favor limiting protection to the amount of rovenue required for the purposes of Government, and development of the country. required for the purposes of tovernment, and development of the country.

During the time before Election, which it is reasonable to presume will be short, I will visit as far as possible the different portions of the Coenty and address you at length on the political questions of the day; but as in the Summer of 1882 I addressed meetings in the interests of Mr. Pickard, and so made myself known to many of you, I will feel it advisable more particularly to speak at such places as I did not then visit, and I trust I will be excused if time should not permit me again to address the audiences who that confidence in your loyalty to the continuents you so unmistakubly expressed in the General Election of 1882, I ask you to favor me with your support, and if elected I will endeavor worthily to fill the seat vacated by our deceased
