CHAPTER X.

Next day Malcom Kirk had the melancholy pleasure of taking Philip Barton out to "The Forks." He had recovered sufficiently to be moved, and Malcom borrowed a spring wagon and placed him in it comfortably. He complained of feeling queer in the back, and could not stand on his feet, and the doctor said Kirk before he started that it would not be at all unexpected if Barton should be paralyzed. In fact, Mr. Kirk, my examination makes it almost certain that the boy will probably never recover so as to use the lower part of his body. It seems probable that the wheels of the hay wagon passed over him after he fell out.

The prairie was one vast, burned stretch of plain, with the road grey and distinct through it. Philip Barton lay back on the cot that had been arranged in the wagon box, and looked up at Malcom with a white, strained face as he drove slowly along over the smooth, elastic prairie road.

At first Malcom drove on silently. The boy seemed to be quite comfortable, but unwilling to talk, and during the first two miles hardly a word was spoken. Then Malcom stopped the horses, and bent down to arrange some part of the cot. When he had finished and gathered up the lines to go on again, young Barton spoke.

"You were one of the men that found me and brought me into the town, Mr. Kirk?" The boy had asked it twice before.

"Yes," replied Malcom, smiling. "You can't imagine what a great joy it was to me when we found you."

"And Carver was the other man?"

"Yes."

"That seems queer to me. How did he happen to go with you?"

"Well, I don't know exactly. He seemed eager to go."

"Was he--had he been drinking?"

The question came with evident painful effort.

"Yes, I think he had," replied Malcom, frankly. "But he was sober enough when we found you."

There was silence, and Malcom gathered up the lines again and started on. The day was very still, and there was a great cloud coming up in the south-west which promised rain before night.

"It was a great thing for you to do," said Philip, slowly. "I'll never forget it, Mr. Kirk."

"It was a very little thing, my boy, compared with what was done for me once," said Malcom, gravely.

"What was that?"

"I was lost once in a great wilderness and surrounded with wild beasts. I was sick and starving, and unable to save myself. Night was coming on, and every minute added to my danger. Just when I had given myself up as lost, and the wild beasts had gathered around me in the growing darkness, a friend suddenly appeared. He saved me, but in doing it he lost his own life. That is a good deal more than I did for you."

Philip had listened intently. But something in Malcom's manner kept him silent.

"That wilderness where I was lost," continued Malcom, softly, as his early life before he entered the seminary came back to him, "was the wilderness of sin, and the wild beasts were my passions, and the friend who saved me was Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the lost, who gave Himself a ransom for many."

There was not a particle of cant or attempt at preaching in what Malcom had said. It was so simple, so natural, that the boy on the cot hardly realized at first what the minister had said.

When it dawned upon him that Malcom had spoken of his own conversion, he closed his eyes, and his face brightened under his emotion. When he looked up again, Malcom had turned, and was looking down at him.

"Do you mind if we pray here?" said Malcom.

Philip moved his head, and in his eyes a look of expectant wonder grew. Malcom stepped the horses. The prairie was wide and desolate, and black. Not a sign of life anywhere. The atmosphere was still. The sun shone over it all. The two lay side by side in the near distance. And somehow, it seemed as if Kirk spoke to God close by. He sat with his hands on his knee, and looked out into the line of the horizon.

"Father in heaven," he said, "we do not know what it all meant when the Lord came to this earth and lived, and suffered and died. But we know enough to feel sure that love for us was what made him do it. Love for sinners. We are always asking something, Father, but what we want now is what Thou dost want. Save another life, this one here that is in so much need. His body has been saved for a little while from physical death. Save his life for all time from eternal loss. His mother is praying for him. All heaven is anxious for his salvation. If Thou wilt show us what more we can do, dear Lord, we will do it. But lead him to Thyself, for we cannot forgive his sins nor keep him from Thee. For the great love of Jesus to us we give Thee all we have. For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory. Amen."

He gathered up the lines and went slowly on, and for the next mile not a word was said. Then, Malcom, hearing the boy more to change his position a little, turned and looked down at him.

"Do you believe that, Mr. Kirk?" he asked, while his lips quivered.

"What?"

"That 'all heaven is anxious for my salvation'?"

"Why not? The Book says there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth. Why shouldn't heaven be anxious to have you repent?"

"I don't know, but--"

"God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son. He came as much for you as for any soul on earth," said Malcom gently.

Philip was silent after that during the rest of the drive. He lay with his eyes closed, and Malcom did not think it wise to talk any more to him, but a continual prayer went out of his heart for another sheep gone astray.

When they drove up to the house at "The Forks," Mrs. Barron came running out. She helped Malcom to lift Philip into the house, and as the boy was being lowered upon a bed, he reached up his arms and put them about his mother's neck. The poor woman sank on her knees, and with her face buried on the breast of her boy, sobbed out her heart's joy at his home-coming. When Kirk was ready to return to Conrad he held his hand, reluctant to leave him go.

"Heaven bless you, Mr. Kirk. I saw you more than I can tell. The fire carried off our grain stacks in the field out there, and we lost several of our sheds, but I would gladly go out into the world a beggar if Phil would only turn to God, and give up his drink. And you and Mrs. Kirk have around me in the growing darkness, a friend suddenly appeared. He saved me, but in doing it he lost his own life. That is a good deal more than I did for you."

Philip had listened intently. But something in Malcom's manner kept him silent.

But never a cloud o'ershadow the day,
And flung its shadows down,
But on its bosom gleamed some ray
Forming a sunshine crown.

It is dark on only the downward side,
Though rage the tempest loud,
And gathered its terrors far and wide,
There's a light upon the cloud.

And often, when it traileth low,
Shutting the landscape out,
And only the chilly east wind blow
From the foggy seas of doubt.

There'll come a time near the setting sun,
When the joys of life seem few,
A rift will break in the evening dim,
And the golden light stream through.

And the soul a glorious bridge will make
Out of the golden bars,
And all its precious treasures take
Where shines the eternal stars.

felt the touch of grim and stern economy. Her little dowry, saved from the wreck of her father's failure, had been added to Malcom's small salary, but the illness of the baby and the constant calls on their help from various sources had eaten into this little fund, and it was gone. Dorothy's aunt would gladly have helped, but her own resources were absorbed by business failures within the three years that Dorothy had been west. Now the loss of the parsonage with nearly everything it contained was added to all the rest.

"Little woman," said Malcom, that evening, after he had been to "The Forks," "we have very little left excepting our good looks, and the balance is in your favor."

They were sitting in the little room kindly offered them by one of their church members, and had been talking over the situation with the frankness that had always characterized their married life.

"I used to read in the novel," said Dorothy, with a peculiar smile, "about the girl who married the poor but gifted young man and spurned the rich and high-born suitor, but I never thought I should be material for such a story myself."

Malcom looked at her, and deep in his heart there was a battle going on that he hardly dared to analyze. He only knew that he longed, somehow, to be able to grapple a physical, tangible something, and fight it for Dorothy's sake and prove to her that he could be more than a poor man.

"Malcom," Dorothy said, as she came over and sat down on a stool near him, and put her hands in his great brown palms, looking up at his sober, anxious face, "Malcom, once for all, I need to say it, I am not afraid of being poor. I trust you. You do not think I will add to your burden by being weak at such a time as this? Was it not through sickness and weakness for better, for worse, that I vowed to give you all I have and am until death do us part?"

Malcom Kirk caught up his wife and a great shadow swept out of his soul, and a great burden fell off his heart. He had not really doubted Dorothy's ability to face any possible event in their lives, but he eagerly welcomed her loving unconditional statement of it.

Nevertheless, he began his struggle for a new church and parsonage during the weeks that followed, with vague questionings of his choice of a place for his life work. He no longer had any fears for Dorothy's sake. But he found himself longing to give her what he could not give, from any human foresight, in the home missionary field where they now were.

It was at this time, with this experience, personal and peculiar to his married life, that Malcom Kirk, fighting against great odds, began a work in Conrad that had the farthest possible results on its after life. This work was an attempt to unite the various churches in a combined and constant crusade against the saloon. Matters were nearing a crisis for the temperance cause. All over the state meetings were being held. The agitation for a prohibitory amendment was growing into such proportions that men who felt the pulse of the common people predicted victory. And still the whisky forces sneered at the possibility of an amendment.

Kirk succeeded in uniting the five other churches with his own in a series of union meetings during the week, as well as on Sundays. His own church secured for the use of worship, a little store room on the front street while waiting to hear from the Church Building Society to which they had made application for a grant of $500 to help rebuild church and parsonage.

Together with all this work in the town, Malcom was constantly sent for to speak in the district school houses. His reputation as a temperance talker was growing. He often went out during the week and spoke to crowded houses, returning late at night.

It was during his absence from Conrad on one of these school house campaigns, that one evening four letters came to him, and Dorothy opened them, as Malcom had always asked her to do, in order that answers might be sent, in case he was detained from home several days at a time.

The first letter was from the superintendent of the Home Missionary Society, and read as follows:

"Rev. Malcom Kirk, Conrad, Kas.
Dear Brother,—It is with great regret that the Society is compelled to announce to many of the brethren who are commissioned on the frontier that, owing to a lack of funds in the New York treasury, it will be impossible to forward the quarter's salary when due. It is with the greatest possible regret that I am obliged to make this statement, but it is unavoidable. It is probable there may be a delay of three or four months before the money can be sent. Meanwhile, your church must be urged to do all it can for your support until the weather church responds to the special appeal now being sent out by the Society in behalf of the missionaries at the front."

"I am, Your Brother, etc.

The second letter that Dorothy opened was from the Church Building Society, expressing great regret that, owing to excessive calls from other fields, the society did not have funds to spare at present to assist the unfortunate church at Conrad, but hoped to be able to do so at some future time, etc., etc.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAY 5, 1899.

The New Town Hall Proposition.

Scarcely anyone in the town but will admit that a new town building occupying a central position in the business portion of the place, and large enough to contain beside the usual apartments for town purposes, a department for the headquarters of the fire brigade, would be much more desirable than the building which at present masquerades under the name of Town Hall.

As we pointed out last week, and as has been stated much more forcibly and convincingly by other of the citizens, the present arrangement is about as unsatisfactory as could possibly be. The building originally was never intended for the purpose to which it is now devoted. It was built for a schoolhouse, and long before its dimensions became an objection it was declared to be utterly unsuitable for such a purpose.

Certain repairs have been made upon the building since it has been devoted to its present use. In fact almost every year it has been found necessary to make some outlay of the town's finances in this direction. But all these expenditures have been little better than a waste, and have proved the folly of inserting new "cloth into old garments" or the putting of new wine into old bottles.

In fact the truth of this principle was brought out in a very literal way last winter when the policeman discovered in his charge that the old lock-up was not adapted to retain the youthful Bacchus.

Under the present arrangement the town business is virtually transacted in a corner. This interest in public affairs which is so conducive to good government meets with little encouragement. The Council assemblies in an isolated part of the town in a room not large enough to accommodate a half dozen spectators, and as a consequence few attend or take any interest in the meetings of the city fathers.

The firemen, who have rendered such sterling service to the town in their fiery combats, assert that they cannot render effective service on a really trying occasion with the present accommodations. These men have looked into the matter carefully and they ought to know whereof they speak. They have a large financial interest in the town and so they can have no motive in attempting to increase the taxes uselessly. We believe the majority of the citizens will take their ruling as final.

All, we think, will agree, therefore, that a new building is very much needed, and the only objection that can possibly be raised is the question of expense. It is well that this side of the question should be looked at, for we do not want to be in the position of the man "who after he hath laid the foundation is not able to finish it."

In this connection, however, these considerations must be borne in mind. The land on which the old building now stands would make very valuable building lots and would bring considerably more than a new lot would cost. A new building could probably be erected for $3,000 or $4,000 at the outside. We will not consider the revenue which would accrue from the renting of a dwelling to the policeman or any from any other source. The undertaking would therefore cost the town annually from $120 to $240. The assessment of the town is about $500,000, so the new building would cost the ratepayers only about 2 1/2 cents for every $100 of assessment. This is certainly not a great burden, considering the benefits which will result therefrom.

It must also be remembered that the town is at present paying out money almost annually for repairs on the present town building, and that it does not take any extensive repairs on an old building to amount to $120. There is, therefore, to be said. In the event of erecting a new building we will be looking to permanence, and we will not be confronted some time in the future with the reminder that while we have been expending our money annually we have at last nothing to show for it, neither safety or convenience in the past or provision for the future. From an economic standpoint merely we believe the venture will pay.

The press of the United States, a short time ago urged interferences in Cuba because of barbarities which it was supposed the Spaniards were inflicting upon the revolting Cubans. The other day a negro in the State of Georgia, suspected of committing a revolting crime, was dragged from his prison by a mob and in the presence of a crowd of sympathizers which stretched for a mile away, was chained to a tree and burned. Before the fire was lighted his ears and fingers were cut off, one by one, and after he was dead his body was cut to pieces by jack-knives and divided among the crowd.

What would be the matter with Great Britain or some other philanthropic country considering that the Yankees were not fit to govern the South, and beginning a crusade to free the negro.

Town Council Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the town council was held on Wednesday evening. When the chair was taken the Mayor, Couns. Borden, Porter and Franklin and the Recorder were present. Couns. DeWitt and Chipman took their places soon afterwards.

There were no reports from the standing committees, except a verbal one from Coun. Franklin on behalf of the Poor committee.

A communication was read from the secretary of the Wolfville Board of Trade, stating that at the last meeting of the Board a resolution had been passed asking that the Council take steps to procure a survey of the town and cost of a suitable system of sewerage.

The following accounts were read and ordered paid: Illey & Harvey $25 42, G. N. Knowles 30, T. McArthur & Son 34 37, Acadia Edison Electric Co. 49 13, Theo. Brennan 9 25, Town Clerk (postage) 2 84, E. S. Crosby (insurance) 1 23, Dr. Burns (insurance) 1 50, Capt. J. E. Eagles 40, J. N. Murphy 50, John Murphy 50, Valley Telephone Co. 5 00, R. S. Harris 25 12.

Coun. Chipman on behalf of a committee appointed at the last meeting to examine as to the condition of the clerk's rate books reported that the books had been examined and that no error or irregularity had been found. On motion the report was adopted and the rate book for 1899 was approved and passed.

Resolved that the town clerk be instructed to issue the tax papers on the 17th day of May, and that they be payable on or before the 5th of June.

Dr. DeWitt asked the council to relieve him of a bond of indemnity given by him to the town four years ago at the time of the taking over of University avenue to insure the title of those giving the land. Couns. Borden and Porter and the Recorder were appointed a committee to enquire into the matter and report at next meeting of council.

A proposal from Mr. C. M. Gormley with regard to extending the water service to his property on Maple avenue was referred to the Water Committee.

The proposal to straighten the Ferry Lane by buying a strip on the east side was referred to the Street Committee to be reported on at next meeting.

The matter of greater need of hose and other fire equipment was brought up by Coun. Porter who stated that an agent of the Gotta Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co., of Toronto, was in town with samples. A letter from the company was read stating prices of hose, hose-carts, &c. The agent who was present also made explanations.

Resolved that the Water Committee be instructed to purchase 500 feet of "Maltese Cross" hose and two hose carts and needles, adapters and other attachments required by the fire department, also 100 feet of 1/2 inch hose.

Wedding Chimes.

Miss Annie Hasselbine Cohoon, daughter of Rev. A. C. Coon, of this place, and Mr. James Arthur Floyd, of Boston, were married at the residence of the bride's father on Prospect street, on Monday, May 1st, at 2:30 p. m.

A number of friends gathered in the rooms made fragrant with fresh May-blossoms, to witness the ceremony, which was conducted by Rev. A. Cohoon, father of the bride, assisted by Rev. H. R. Hatch, pastor of the Baptist church, and Rev. D. Trotter, President of Acadia College.

The bride's appearance was most pleasing; simply yet tastefully dressed in silk of a delicate, pearly, dove shade, with neck adorned with white satin and chiffon edged with pearl trimming; at the throat a dainty diamond and pearl brooch pin, a gift of the groom; bridal veil and orange blossoms, and carrying a beautiful bouquet of rose-buds and ferns.

After refreshments had been served, and the bridal attire changed for a travelling suit of blue cloth, the newly married pair were driven to the railway station, and proceeded by p. m. train to Halifax. After a wedding trip of a few weeks, which they plan to spend in Virginia and other parts of the South, they return to Boston, which will be their future home.

A pleasant surprise came just before the party left the house, when several telegrams were handed to Mr. Floyd, bearing congratulations from friends in Boston.

The bride received many presents from friends in Wolfville and elsewhere. We are sure that some of these, from Miss Cohoon's Seminary—with whom Miss Cohoon was associated for two years while teaching there—and accompanied with kindly appreciative words, will be especially valued. The ACADIAN extends best wishes.

Billtown Notes.

Lake Division, of the S. of T., recently celebrated its 50th anniversary. It was organized at Lakeville in '49. Leading men of the community were then prominent in the order, such as the late Senator Bill, Nathan Tupper, E. Bishop, &c. There was no admission then for ladies. But they are in it now and the elder men are mostly gone, but the younger are here. Well if they are animated by the same high purposes as inspired the founders of the noble order.

Mr Wilfred Wheaton has sold his farm to Mr. Alonzo Palmer and has moved into the house recently vacated by Mr. Ed. Rodolph.

Mr. Edson Keizer has sold his place to Mr. Rodolph and has moved to Centreville.

Miss Huntley and her son Percy are about making a home with her brother, C. B. Lamont, Esq.

W. S. Sweet, Esq., has purchased the farm of Mr. Alonzo Palmer, adjoining his own property.

Mr. Lewis Rockwell has purchased his father's property here. He has been home recently looking after affairs, and is returning this week to the States. He and several others are expecting to take a trip to the Hudson Bay this summer.

A company has been formed which is securing large tracts of land in that part of the country for mining purposes.

Mrs. B. O. Davison, of Wolfville, is making a visit of a few days to the home of her parents.

Lakeville Notes.

Mr Aubrey Sherry has returned with his family from the States, and has taken possession of his father's property. It is good to see our worthy young men returning to their native land. Aubrey receives a warm welcome.

Test for Visual Acuteness.

Defects of eyesight requiring correction by the use of spectacles are purely mechanical and can be so corrected by the proper adjustment of perfectly made lenses that their effects will be entirely obviated. This print should be read easily at ten inches from the eye. If you cannot do so you should wear spectacles. It does not pay to buy cheap spectacles. They distort the rays of light, disturb the angle of vision, cause pain and discomfort and injure the eyesight. When it is necessary to hold work or reading matter farther than fifteen inches from the eyes in order to see distinctly, it is a sure sign of failing vision, and such annoyance, discomfort and pain will be prevented by having a pair of glasses fitted. Eyes tested and fitted with best quality glasses. H. PINO, Wolfville.
