Aubrey's Revenge.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Following the sound of the pistol shots came a bloodcurdling cry. "Murder! murder! Help, for God's sake!"

The old keeper and his assistant stood staring and breathless for an instant; then the latter rushed to the door and was on the point of pushing back the heavy bolt, but his companion caught his arm.

"Wait, Tom," he said, in a tone of command, "it will do no good to throw away our lives! Get the revolvers before you open the door."

There were two in Captain Stonestreet's locker in the watch room, and an old-fashioned musket besides, all kept in good order, but seldom used.

New Castle Lighthouse had a ghost, so tradition declared, the gruesome wraith of a keeper who had gone mad and committed suicide years ago, and although it had never put in an appearance, Kelpie mischievously declared that old daddy lived in constant dread of its coming, which accounted for his keeping a brace of six-shooters constantly at hand and in excellent condition.

"If you ever hear a pistol shot, Tom," she used to say, "you may know it's daddy popping away at the poor old ghost."

Tom recalled her merry jesting, and now she smiled grimly as he dashed into the watch room and secured the weapons.

The old keeper was standing with his hand on the bolt and a blazing light in his eyes when Tom reached his side.

"Now, Tom," he said hastily, "keep cool, my boy, and don't shoot unless we are hard pressed."

"You take the pistols, sir, and I'll open the door," urged Tom, but the captain put him aside.

"No, stand back, I prefer to take all risks, if there be any. Your life is worth far more than mine."

"Help! murder! murder!" came from below, and in the same breath there was a sudden shock, as if a heavy body had fallen.

The old keeper pushed back the bolt and opened the door, while Tom, clutching a six-shooter in each hand, stood ready for action.

But there was no need of the weapons; as the heavy door swung back, the body of a man, with a stream of blood gushing from an ugly hole in his breast below the left shoulder, fell forward and lay like a log at the old keeper's feet.

Marvelous Balsamic Essences Cure Catarrh

No Drugs To Take—A Direct Breathing Cure

Statistics Prove Ninety-Seven Percent of Canada's Population Is Infested With the Germs of Catarrh.

This disease is most dangerous owing to its tendency to extend to the bronchial tubes and lungs, where it causes Consumption. Unfortunately the people have had faith in sprays, ointments and snuffs, which can't possibly cure, and in consequence catarrhal disease has been advancing every day.

For Asthma and Bronchitis, Catarrh and Asthma. It contains pure pine essences and healing balsams that go to the remotest part of

At the same moment, down in the gloom of the secret stairway, Tulliver's face, mocking, devilish, his black eyes glowing like balls of fire, appeared for a moment, then came a peal of horrible laughter, and the sound of descending steps on the iron ladder, in the dark depths below.

"Did you see that face, Tom?" said the old captain breathlessly. "It was Tulliver's, I could swear to it. Why didn't you shoot the infernal scoundrel? He'll make his escape before we can head him off."

"You charged me not to shoot, cap'n, unless we were hard pressed."

"Well, so I did, but it's aggravating to see that bloodthirsty scoundrel give us the slip a second time."

"If the door of the storage room hadn't been bolted," suggested Tom, "he'd have stolen in and murdered us as he murdered this poor man."

Captain Stonestreet for the first time gave his attention to the prostrate form at his feet.

"Good God, Tom, the poor fellow's bleeding to death!" he exclaimed. "We must do something for him."

Tom had already thrown aside his weapons and was kneeling by the wounded man's side.

"My poor fellow, are you suffering a great deal?" he asked, raising the man's head from the rough floor and resting it on his knee.

"Water, for 'pity's sake give me water!" he gasped.

"Let's get him into my bedroom, Tom," said the captain.

"Better get him a drop of brandy and water first, sir," said Tom; he's about done for, poor man. I don't know that he'll stand moving."

The requisite articles were brought and when a small quantity had been poured down the dying man's throat, he rallied slightly and opened his eyes.

"I wanted it for Nell," he panted, the effort of speaking bringing great drops of moisture to his forehead.

"I've treated her like a brute, poor girl, but I wanted her to have that belt. I came here to find it, and that fellow shot me down like a dog. I suppose he took me for a thief."

"Poor fellow, his mind is wandering," said Tom.

"Hush!" said the captain excitedly; "I think I know this man."

"My friend," he went on, when he had administered a few drops of the brandy and water, "will you tell me your name?"

"Who wants to know my name?" the man demanded, in a hoarse whisper. "It's Rutherford."

"I thought so!" exclaimed the old captain. "I thought I couldn't be mistaken in you, Ralph Rutherford's your name. Tim Duffy didn't make an end of you, after all, it seems."

The man uttered a sharp exclamation and made an effort to struggle up on his elbow, but the blood gushed out from the wound in his breast, and he fell back, white and exhausted.

"It won't do for you to exert yourself," said the captain. "Give him a little more brandy, Tom. We'll get you to bed, poor fellow, as soon as it's safe to move you."

"No use to get me to bed," the man gasped feebly. "I'm done for! The grave's the only bed I shall ever have need of now. Serves me right, too! I've been a tough chap in my time."

"Do you think there's any chance for a fellow who makes up his mind to do better at the eleventh hour?" he went on, speaking with an effort.

"Did Nell tell you where to find the belt?" asked Captain Stonestreet.

"Yes, that's what brought me here. I rowed over from Thatcher's Rock."

"Well, what then?"

"There was a boat down below, and a man with a dark lantern in his hand was entering the door at the base of the tower just as I got here, and I followed him."

"Well, go on," urged the old captain.

"That's about all, and my breath's gone. He went up an iron ladder. I followed him. As we reached a sure footing, I spoke, and he turned and shot me down, and I fell against the door."

"But you didn't find the belt?"

"No."

"Tell me where to find it," said the old keeper, "and my assistant will go and get it for you."

Ab! My Tired Feet Ached So for "Tiz."

"TIZ" eases our sore, burning, swollen, sweaty, calloused feet and corns.

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "TIZ" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "TIZ" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "TIZ." Its grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "TIZ." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture.

Get a 25-cent box of "TIZ" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel. You can wear shoes a size smaller if you desire.

"To be sure I do," the old keeper answered promptly. "As long as the spark of life continues to burn, there is hope of God's forgiveness."

"I don't know so much about that," the man continued, with a hoarse laugh. "If Nell could see me lying here, she'd cry over and pity me, no matter if I did break her heart, but I'll never see the poor little girl again."

"What Nell are you talking about?" said the old keeper. "The girl who was Tim Duffy's sweetheart twenty years ago?"

"The same. But how did you come to know?"

"Tim told me his story on his death bed."

The dying man laughed hoarsely. "Did he tell you how he knocked me down and tossed me overboard?" he asked.

"Yes," answered the captain; "he told me everything, and poor Tim also made me promise to find a belt that was hidden in a secret stairway and convey it to your wife."

"Did you find it?" gasped the wounded man, clutching at the old keeper's arm with both hands, his white face convulsed, his eyes blazing; "did you find it? Speak quick!"

"No, I have searched for it repeatedly, but I've never been able to find it."

The man had raised his head in his excitement, but it fell back and his hands relaxed their eager clutch.

"More brandy," he gasped; "quick, quick! I'm almost gone, and I must tell you."

Tom put the glass to his lips, and Ralph Rutherford drank with feverish thirst.

"I can tell you where to find the belt," he went on, after a moment. "Nell told me, she's been gone for years, but I found her a week ago in an old convent, and she told me Tim Duffy had left a sealed letter with an old woman, to be delivered to Nell if she ever came back, and she had just got it when I found her."

"Did Nell tell you where to find the belt?" asked Captain Stonestreet.

"Yes, that's what brought me here. I rowed over from Thatcher's Rock."

"Well, what then?"

"There was a boat down below, and a man with a dark lantern in his hand was entering the door at the base of the tower just as I got here, and I followed him."

"Well, go on," urged the old captain.

"That's about all, and my breath's gone. He went up an iron ladder. I followed him. As we reached a sure footing, I spoke, and he turned and shot me down, and I fell against the door."

"But you didn't find the belt?"

"No."

"Tell me where to find it," said the old keeper, "and my assistant will go and get it for you."

Rutherford turned his head and regarded Tom with a questioning gaze. "Will you promise?" he faltered, with quivering lips.

"Promise what?" demanded Tom. "Not to run off with the belt."

"Yes, I promise to bring it here, and put it in your hands. You'd better be quick about it, my poor fellow."

The man's strength was quite gone by this time, and that strange gray shadow which is an unmistakable sign of coming dissolution had fallen on his face.

He rallied, however, and his glazing eyes flashed with sudden fire. "Twenty inches from the iron hook a spring," he gasped; then his voice failed utterly.

"Quick, Tom," said the old keeper. "I'll give him a little more brandy."

The young assistant took an ivory rule from his pocket as he entered the storage room.

Fortunately, the great golden light illuminated every crack and crevice, even sending long rays of light from it down into the black depths below.

It was the work of a moment to slip the secret panel in place, and then, even before he had measured the distance from the iron hook, his sharp eyes caught sight of something he had never noticed before: a little speck which seemed to be the head of a nail, embedded in the heavy board.

Tom pressed it with his thumb; then he gave it a crack with the brass head of his rule.

A sharp click followed, and, as if by magic, a narrow drawer shot forth. Apparently the drawer was filled with yellow paper.

Tearing this away, a leather belt and a package of papers, yellow with age, were revealed. Tom seized the belt and rushed back to the spot where the dying man lay.

"I've found it!" he cried; "here it is!"

The old captain raised his hand. "Hush, Tom," he said, solemnly, "the poor fellow is dead."

Tom stood speechless a moment, looking down at the poor, haggard face.

"I wish he could have lived to know the belt was found," he said at last.

"Yes, it seems a pity," replied the old keeper, "but perhaps it is as well. If Rutherford had lived to get the valuables in his hands, he might have changed his mind and squandered them on himself; but poor Nell is sure of them now."

CHAPTER XXXII.

The night was well on into the wee, sma' hours when Tom Holland sat down at his desk in the watch room to answer Kelpie's letter.

There had been an unusual bustle and a good deal of excitement in the old lighthouse that winter night, but it was all over now, and only the ceaseless sound of the sea broke the solemn stillness.

"That's My Corn"

What a Confession!

Something hits a shoe. There's a flash of pain, and the victim says, "That's my corn."

"My corn," pined and coddled for years, perhaps. It's as needless as dirty hands.

A Blue-jay plaster, applied in a jiffy, would end that pain instantly. And the B & B wax that's in it would terminate the corn in two days.

No pain, no soreness, no inconvenience. The corn loosens and comes out. It disappears forever.

It's hard to prevent corns while having dainty feet. But it isn't hard to end them. A million corns a month are ended in this easy Blue-jay way. You do yourself injustice when you suffer from a corn.

Half your friends have proved this.

Are you "Nervy"?

Do you "jump" at a sudden sound? Do you have headaches or neuralgia? Are you irritable? Are you depressed? Are you troubled with sleeplessness? If so, you need a short course of "Wingarnis" (the Wine of Life). There is nothing so good as "Wingarnis" for re-vitalizing the nerves—nothing so prompt in giving them new life.

"Wingarnis" possesses the great advantage of getting right to the root of nerve troubles, and by means of an enriched blood supply to give new vitality and new life to the whole nervous system. That is why over 10,000 Doctors recommend "Wingarnis."

The dead man had been laid out in a room below, and two of the men detailed to watch by him, and Captain Stonestreet and Tom, sitting together in the watch room, had examined the contents of the long-hidden belt.

As Tim Duffy had stated, it was filled with valuables. There were a set of diamonds, some very fine rubies, a brooch or two, several handsome rings, and quite a snug little sum in gold pieces, tens and twenties, deftly concealed under the lining of the belt.

"I'd like to know how Rutherford came by all this gold and these fine trinkets," said the old keeper. "Won't them at the gambling table I dare say. He's been a bad man in his day, but he's gone to his last account, poor fellow, and I trust this little gift he leaves behind may compensate poor Nell in a measure for all the heartache and privation he has caused her. We must set about finding her, Tom."

"To advertise will be the surest way, sir," suggested Tom.

ASTEROIDS.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old St. John's." The Asteroids are a great flock of planets whose growth was apparently stunted in infancy. They revolve about the sun in an aimless and eccentric manner about as far beyond the earth as Champ Clark is to the presidency and do not add anything to the general beauty of the landscape, being entirely invisible to the naked eye.

The Asteroids remained in obscurity for thousands of years but the vacancy in the space between Jupiter and Mars, where a planet ought to be, had always worried the astronomers and over a century ago a search for the missing star was begun. This was rewarded by the discovery in 1801 of a light draught-star of medium sized about as big as a freckle on Jupiter. It was named, weighed and measured like any other infant and was found to be 400 miles in diameter.

Shortly after this another peewee planet was discovered and named. The work kept on until the astronomer who hadn't discovered an Asteroid was as longwinded as a Frenchman who doesn't belong to the legion of honor. Over 600 Asteroids have now been discovered and each year about thirty more are roped and branded. Getting names for the new arrivals is as difficult as choosing names for Pullman cars and they will soon have to be tagged and numbered like cannon fodder.

Formerly the astronomer chased the shy and elusive Asteroid around the heavens with a telescope until he cornered it, but now photographic plates are exposed in the observatories and the new laid Asteroids register themselves on them like guests on a hotel register. Nothing is calculated to inspire the layman with more awe for astronomy than the task of scrying out pin points of light on a photograph and determining which one of them belongs to a brand new Asteroid. It is like identifying fleas across the grand canon with an opera glass.

How the Asteroids happened is a mystery, though many astronomers believe that they are the remains of an old planet which has exploded under some great stress, such as trying to be neutral enough to satisfy two belligerent neighbors. The largest Asteroids are 400 miles in diameter and the smallest are probably less than 15 miles through. If they were nearer to us with better transportation facilities they would be very useful. Nothing would be more satisfactory to the general public than to remove some man who was trying to run the earth to a planet 15 miles in diameter where he would revolve dizzily through space forevermore, holding on with both hands and too busy to do anything else.

The cheaper cuts of steak, fried, ground and seasoned, make excellent sandwiches. So does fried calves' liver, cold and chopped fine.

LAUGHING NATURE'S TONIC.

A hearty laugh is nature's tonic for beauty. Practice it then with all your heart. Don't let a day go by without indulging in this wonderful form of relaxation.

Laughing is the cheapest medicine in the world, and the most beautifying. All the visits to the vanity parlors in the world will do you no good if you come away with a stern, cold face and set jaws.

A good laugh stimulates the circulation and stirs sluggish veins to activity. Its vibration seems to force new life into the very springs of our being.

If you were to stop and figure up the number of times you have indulged in a good laugh you would be surprised to find that they are very few. Practice it as a duty if you cannot laugh spontaneously at first.

Relax your face muscles, loosen up the cords of your heart, and burst forth in a peal of musical gaiety. Laugh and the world laughs with you, weep and you weep alone, remember.

Taking cold can sometimes be prevented by breathing deeply when chilly. The body will soon become much warmer, because deep breathing sets the blood to circulating more rapidly.

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, April 1.
The Governor, Newfoundland:
The French Government reports incessant activity in the Argonne, the enemy regaining part of their lost position, and being again dislodged.
Enemy bivouacs in various districts and the Maritime Station at Bruges, were successfully bombed by the French airmen.

A German submarine was rammed
by a French warship off Dieppe.
The Russian Government reports that fighting continues along the Ni-emen and in the Carpathians, the Russians capturing further men and machine guns.

The Admiralty report that successful air attacks on German submarines constructing at Hoboken, and on two submarines at Zebrugga, were made this morning.

HARCOURT.

GERMAN SUBMARINE RAMMED.

PARIS, via St. Pierre, April 1.
Yesterday afternoon a French auxiliary cruiser sighted a German submarine manoeuvring on the surface, off Dieppe. The cruiser immediately started in chase, meanwhile opening fire on the enemy's periscope and compelling the submarine to submerge. The cruiser then changing her course, prepared to ram, and passed over the submarine just as the latter's periscope disappeared. A large quantity of oil was then seen floating around the spot where the submarine had disappeared from sight.

EARL GREY RE-PLACED.

LONDON, April 2.
Premier Asquith has taken temporary charge of the British Foreign Office, Sir Edward Grey having been compelled to take a short holiday.
It is expected that Grey will be away from the ministry for about three weeks.

ANTI-WAR RIOTS.

ROME, April 2.
Advices received from the Austrian frontier describe the internal situation in the Dual Monarchy as increasingly grave. Opposition to the continuance of the war is said to be growing stronger among the classes which are suffering most from the scarcity of food. Violent anti-war demonstrations are reported to have attempted to stone the windows of How Mrs. Hurley Was Restored to Health by Lydia

Eldon, Mo. - "I was troubled with weakness, inflammation and female irregularities. For two years I could not stand on my feet long at a time and I could not walk two blocks without enduring cutting and drawing pains down my right side which increased every month. I have been at that time purple in the face and would walk the floor. I could not lie down or sit still sometimes for a day and a night at a time. I was nervous, and had very little appetite, no ambition, melancholy, and often felt as though I had not a friend in the world. After I had tried most every female remedy without success, my mother-in-law advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and gained in strength every day. I have now no trouble in any way and highly praise your medicine. It advertises itself." - Mrs.
S. T. HURLEY, Eldon, Missouri.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For sale everywhere.
It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacand nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try

AEROPLANE ATTACKS SUCCESS-FUL.

LONDON, April 2.
Aeroplane attacks on German submarines at Hoboken and Zebrugga, in Belgium, have been accomplished successfully. The British Admiralty to-night gave out the following report received from Wing-Commander Longmore: "I have to report that this morning Flight Sub-Lieutenant Andrews carried out a successful attack on German submarines which are being constructed at Hoboken, near Antwerp, dropping four bombs.
Also, Flight-Lieut. Wilson, while reconnoitering over Zebrugga, observed two submarines lying alongside the mole and attacked them, dropping four bombs with it, is believed, successful results. These officers started in moonlight this morning, and both returned safely."

FORTRESSES BOMBED.

LONDON, April 2.
An Amsterdam despatch says that a message from Berlin states that a hostile aircraft appeared above Mul-heim, in Baden, yesterday, and dropped bombs, which caused considerable material damage. Another aviator dropped three bombs on Neuenberg, also in Baden. The damage done was slight.

INACTION PREPARATORY.

ATHENS, April 2.
Inaction of the allied fleet on Wednesday and Thursday, is attributed to stormy weather. It is stated, however, by a British naval officer of high rank, that this action is merely apparent, and that the fleet is reserving a surprise for the Turks, who are declared to be completely demoralized.

AUSTRIAN STEAMER STRIKES A MINE.

PARIS, April 2.
An Austrian steamer, loaded with arms and ammunition, on the way from Sennella to Pancova ports on the Danube, struck a mine in the river last night. Serbian artillery immediately opened fire on the vessel, which exploded with terrific force.

ANOTHER BRITISH STEAMER
TORPEDOED.

NEWHAVEN, Eng., April 2.
The British steamer "Seven Seas," 622 tons, was torpedoed by a German submarine this afternoon. The attack was without warning, and eleven of a crew of 18, including all the officers except the second engineer, were drowned. The steamer was bound from London for Liverpool. Such was the force of the explosion that the hatches were blown off and a big hole torn in the steamer's side, causing her to sink in three minutes. The survivors, three of whom were injured, were landed here this evening by a destroyer.

ANOTHER ADDED TO THE LIST.

LONDON, April 2.
The British steamer Southampton, the crew of which landed yesterday at Lisbon, was not lost in a storm, as reported, but sunk by a German submarine, sixty miles off Cape Finisterra. (3,553 tons gross, built in 1900.)

HARRASSING THE ENEMY.

TOULON, April 2.
Allied cruisers during the week seized more than 2,500 parcel post packages, sent from Germany aboard various ships. Five steamers have been taken to ports on the French coast to discharge merchandise consigned to or from Germany.

STEAMER RELEASED.

LONDON, April 2.
The Chronicle publishes a despatch from New Haven, stating that the Lodwjk Van Nassau, was released after an examination of her cargo, which revealed the fact that there was no reason for detaining the vessel.

WOULD BE NO SAFEGUARD.

LONDON, April 2.
The torpedoing of three more British merchant steamers has brought new demands for reprisals to-day from British shipping firms. They propose that German prisoners of war be placed aboard all English vessels, traversing the German war zone, as a safeguard against submarine attacks.

KEEPING UP COURAGE.

BERLIN, April 2.
Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, Imperial Chancellor, who spoke at the Bismarck centenary celebration in the Reichstag, to-day, said: "What Bismarck created, no German will allow to be destroyed. Our enemies are raging round the empire, but we will beat them. He taught us to fear only God, to wage war against the enemy, and to believe in our people.
Thus we will fight and conquer and live for the Emperor and the Empire."

THE GERMAN CROWN PRINCE.

LONDON, April 2.
The Daily Mail's Copenhagen correspondent telegraphs that the German Crown Prince has left Berlin to take up duty with the Fifth Army Corps in the vicinity of Verdun.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT SYDNEY MINES.

SYDNEY, April 2.
Two miners were instantly killed by a fall of stone at the East Slope Reserve Colliery, this afternoon. The victims were Messrs. Guthro and Flavin, residents of Reserve.

AERIAL FLEET BUST.

PARIS, April 2.
The following was officially issued to-night: At 7 o'clock this morning east of Soissons, a German aviator was shot down inside our lines. This is the third aviator to be brought back to our lines.

down in 24 hours. Our flying squad-racks, aeroplane hangars, and railway station at Vignecelles, in Woerre.

A great number of projectiles fell on their target. The aviators were subjected to heavy fire at close range.
Three of them returned with large holes in the wings of their machines, and the canvas of other machines was pierced by shrapnel bullets.

DUTCH STEAMER TORPEDOED.

HULL, Eng., April 2.
The Dutch steamer Schiedland was blown up yesterday morning in the North Sea, on the east coast of England, near the entrance of the Humber. One member of the crew was killed. The captain and seven members of the crew were brought here, with seven sailors missing.

MORE RUSSIAN SUCCESSES.

PETROGRAD, April 2.
By almost superhuman efforts, the Russians, between Lapkov and Uszak Passes, have driven the Austrians backward upon the heights, and have seized the railway leading through Volza Michova and Lapkov, southward into Hungary.

CONTINUALLY WITHDRAWING.

LONDON, April 2.
The Austrians are reported to be continually withdrawing troops from their forces in Bukovina, and sending them into the Beskid mountain region, in the Carpathians, where they are greatly needed.

GERMANS BLOW UP TRAWLERS.

NEWCASTLE, Eng., April 2.
Three Tyne trawlers, the Cloxianna, Jason and Telle, were sunk by the German submarine U-10 yesterday, after all the members of the crews landed safely in small boats. The Germans blew up the trawlers.

OFFICIAL FROM BERLIN.

BERLIN, April 2.
An official statement says that the conflict between the French and the Germans in La. Prete Forest is still undecided. West of the forest, the French attacks have been repulsed.
Artillery fighting is in progress between the Meuse and Moselle. The situation in the Eastern theatre is unchanged. A French aviator dropped bombs on two German towns doing little damage.

The occupants were Mr. James Kelly, son of the former, his wife and seven children, and Mr. Frank Pike, his wife, daughter and mother-in-law, who saved none of their belongings and escaped with their lives. Mr. Pike moved into the house on Monday last. The Pike family occupied the western end of the building. The fire broke out about 9.15 p.m. Mrs. Pike put in a fire in the front room during the afternoon. At tea hour everything was apparently right. About twenty minutes after nine, Mr. Pike, who was in the kitchen, heard the cracking of wood and rushed out of the kitchen towards the front room. On opening the door of the latter a volume of smoke and a mass of flame burst into his face. Without delay he got his wife, daughter and mother-in-law out through the rear of the house. Mr. Kelly was apprised, and after getting his wife and children out of the burning building, sent his eldest son to ring in an alarm at the Penitentiary. Mr. and Mrs. Pike started to fight the blaze with buckets of water which they got from a well in their own yard.

The Central and Eastern Companies responded, but could not get beyond a few yards of the head of Boat House Lane, or within 150 yards of the fire owing to snow banks. Desperate attempts were made by the firemen to bring their apparatus along, but without success, with the exception of the chemical engine, which reached the burning building. By that time the fire had reached serious proportions, because the N.W. wind that was blowing was increasing. The chemical engine was of little avail. The firemen worked well but were unable to cope with the flames and for want of water had to let the building burn to the ground with all its contents. They put nearly a thousand feet of hose into service from the vehicles that were impeded by the snow blockade and with a fairly strong pressure of water and even that failed to have effect. Seeing that it was hopeless to save the Kelly building, the firemen confined their attention to the surrounding property. Bennett's grove is directly opposite, and the house and stable of Capt. Keeping is situated about twenty yards east of the burning house. Kelly's stable containing five stock, only a few feet from the rear of the house was only saved by the strenuous efforts of the firemen. On several occasions Capt. Keeping's dwelling was threatened. The all out signal was sent in at a quarter of eight, or only an hour and a half after the outbreak began, though the ruins were smouldering up to midnight. The Pike and Kelly families lost all they possessed, including the shape of furniture and clothing. Some $145 that Mr. Pike had put away in a drawer went up in smoke as well. The house, we hear, was not insured, and only a small amount was carried on Mr. Pike's furniture. Not since the Ann's Regatta for 1914 was there such a number of people seen near the Lakeside. From the Penitentiary a mass of humanity extended down below Bennett's Grove, the interesting fields being crowded. While the police were keeping order they were snarled by some racials who were amongst the gathering. A telephone pole and wires began to burn away. Nobody would volunteer to climb up the pole and try to extinguish the fire. Constable A. Snow undertook the work. Frequently he was struck in the face and nearly knocked off the pole by snowballs. When Constable Grimes asked the unruly ones to stop firing, they shouted at him and then made a target of him. The police obtained the names of several persons who will be dealt with. Certainly their conduct merited punishment.

water main on Cookstown Road. The service will be extended next week. H. Bursell applied for permission to make repairs to house, No. 57 Water Street West. The solicitor will be asked if the Board has power to grant permit.

It was surmised, correctly as it turned out, that it would make no difference to Hazen & Whipple, that the City would have to pay them for their services in any case; Hazen & Whipple were engineers and not agents for Pipe Companies, and in this matter were acting as the agents for the City.

STATEMENT. On January 28th letters were sent to Hazen & Whipple, New York, and to McLaren & Co., Glasgow, asking for quotations by wire on cast iron water pipe.

$23.00 for 8 to 6 inches. Less $1 per ton for any pipe then in stock. Mr. O'Driscoll in the meanwhile, March 25th, had received a telegram repeating the price of $22.90 and asking for counter offer.

There was one other consideration beside the price—April and September shipments, were offered by the Wood Co. The offer received by Mr. O'Driscoll was for June and July, which was not so suitable.

During the afternoon a letter was received from Mr. O'Driscoll saying that the U. S. Cast Iron Pipe Co., reduced their offer 45 cents. Even if this offer had not been received too late, it would still have left a difference in favour of the Wood Co.

In addition to this order, the Board require about 5,000 feet of 6 inch pipe for the work undertaken last year, and it was thought desirable to get it here as early as possible, so that employment could be given to many men as possible before the larger work was begun.

Russians Take 230,000 Prisoners.

The Official Army Messenger announced today that 230,000 prisoners had been captured by the Russians in Galicia since January 21. These include both Germans and Austrians. According to previous official estimates published here, the Teutonic armies had lost more than 600,000 men since January 21. Of the 230,000 taken since January 21, says the Army Messenger, 120,000 became prisoners when Przemyśl fell, and 110,000 were captured in the Carpathian battles.

Easter Messages.

We publish to-day a series of Easter messages from a number of clergymen, working in the city or elsewhere in Newfoundland. In our next issue we hope to publish an Easter message from the Rev. F. R. Matthews, B.A., to which we are unable to give publicity to-day.

The Pitiless Huns.

It will be seen from the war messages that the Germans have had the effrontery to protest against the action of the British in refusing to treat prisoners from German submarines to the courtesies usually given to honorable prisoners of war.

The Message of Easter Morning.

REV. A. G. BAYLEY,

Bonavista. LIFT UP YOUR HEARTS!

EASTER, preceded by the Passion and Death of Jesus Christ glorified over a law which runs through the world, of nature, and of men, at sacrifice alone is fruitful in eat and good results.

The joy associated with the first EASTER DAY is renewed, and increases every year. What a day Easter will be, for millions who have seen it, when this "Great War" is over! Must bring its seasons of high hope all who strive and suffer for the light. For Easter celebrates the beginning of the end of death, and its triumph of righteousness.

The Agony and the Cross were entered by Christ with holy joy, in the spirit of the great moral and spiritual things which were to result to mankind. Let us be like-minded. So it, whatever of pain, or of suffering, or of loss, should come to us, rough this warring of nations, we are carried along by the high consciousness that we are fighting to go, and to hold, higher than ever before, the banner of truth, and honor, liberty and justice.

We have no broken pledges, and no traitors of friends to weigh us down, we have chosen to suffer because we are worse than those who war death. We believe, too, that the time will be for the good of all mankind.

Napoleon's wars were followed by educational, social, philanthropic and religious movements. When a smoke of the conflict shall have passed away we must strive to see early and to act strongly in the case of all things that war against a welfare of the peoples of the earth, and to exact the right. Is it idealistic to hope that all true men will work once more for a corporate union of the divided church of Christendom? We have flared together, may we not also rejoice together?

REV. P. J. O'BRIEN,

Tor's Cove. AN EASTER MESSAGE—PEACE.

Peace is that perfect complacency which intellectual beings experience when they conform to the laws of harmony with the will of the Creator. When the divinely ordered elements which constitute the relationship of an individual with his neighbor and with God, become disturbed there is bellion, and though man possesses a power of upsetting the concordance of these relationships he cannot do so with impunity, and therefore must enjoy peace—"There is no peace to the wicked." No sooner was that harmony broken, and the designs of God again usurped, than mankind was placed in a condition of antagonism to his creator. The primal evil perpetuated in race, leaving one solitary exception—"Our tainted nature's solitary boast," and through whom alone, in the designs of God could reconciliation with the Deity be effected and race restored.

"Peace on earth to men of good will" was the angelic message that heralded the first realization of human hope through the Eternal Word incarnate.

As had been foretold the Son of God took upon himself the "iniquities of us all," and through His death on a cross "blotted out the handwriting against us."

Peace was an impossibility without Christ, and "was not till after His resurrection did He greet His disciples with the words: "Peace be to you."

Christ our Redeemer purchased for us a "copious redemption" but our salvation depends upon our co-operation with the graces given us through the merits of His Precious Blood.

After nearly 2000 years of Christianity two-thirds of the human family know not Christ and a vast majority of those who profess faith in Him, are not living up to the Gospel Precepts. The world has again become estranged from God, and the triple consciousness has exercised such potent influence for evil, that men seem to ignore the existence of a Deity omnipotent and omnipresent, or if they do admit His existence, they refuse to take Him into account, and as a consequence the most powerful nations of the earth are engaged in the most widespread and deadliest conflict in the world's history.

"Out of evil cometh good," not directly but as an occasional cause, and God in His inscrutable wisdom has allowed the fierce war now raging to open men's eyes to the errors of their ways that in time they may realize their dependence on Him, and His supremacy. And this is being brought about dutifully, and not alone on the battlefield where men hourly face death in awful forms, and the dread of eternity hangs over them, but every shrine of Christian worship throughout the world is thronged with supplicants to the throne of grace and mercy.

Still the conflict rages. Young hearts are bleeding, homes are desolate, the resources of the nations are being exhausted—hunger and pestilence stalk abroad. Rivals in the conflict seem to have confidence in the strength of their artillery. But outside the firing line the "Kingdoms of Heaven suffereth violence; from the heads of the churches, the rulers of the nations" spare Domini, spare populo tuo ("Spare us, O Lord, Spare thy people") goes forth and hope is once again centered in the God of Armies, the Victim of Calvary, Christ resurrected. He is the only secure refuge in this hour of dire distress; He alone can say: "Pax Vobis" (Peace be unto you).

But when shall we find this longed for peace? when men shall have inflicted on themselves severment of temporal punishment, to take account of that which is eternal; when they feel they are the instruments of the just wrath of God; when they become sufficiently convinced of the folly of opposing Him who alone is over-Lord of all, and who holds the earth as a "drop of water in His hands." The innocent now suffer with the guilty, and this war is a scourge from a human standpoint, while it is a blessing from the standpoint of God. Death is not untimely when a soul is saved; and there are thousands dying on the battlefield to-day at peace with their Saviour who may never have known that peace were it not for the circumstances of their death.

It was for man's salvation that the Son of God appeared upon earth; and it behooved Him to suffer and thus enter into His glory. So with us "if we suffer with Christ we shall be glorified with Him."

Channel. A MESSAGE OF HOPE.

Hope has been described as "one of the greatest assets in life for which we have a splendid security." Hope is natural to all of us. It is ours by nature. The future is full of it. We cannot face the future without hope. We live in hope and we die in hope. It is indeed the Gift of God.

Why shouldst Thou Fear the beautiful Angel, Death, Who waits Thee at the Portals of the skies, Ready to kiss away Thy struggling breath, Ready with gentle hand to close Thyne Eyes?

Oh what were life, if life were all? Thine Eyes Are blinded by their tears, or thou wouldst see Thy treasures wait thee in the far off skies, And Death Thy Friend will give them all to thee."

REV. HENRY GODFREY.
THE MEANING AND MESSAGE OF EASTER.

With millions of men at war, and hundreds of thousands asleep in their newly-made and strange graves and a vast multitude of broken-hearted mourners, Easter Day will break upon a sad scene.

During the crisis through which we are passing, the question has persistently presented itself—"If a man die shall he live again?" Here and there are men who do not wish to live again, but they are comparatively few. Most desire and hope to live again and believe they will. There are some, who while they hope to live again, do not hope with much certainty, yet if life were all there is for them, they regard it as a splendid thing to have lived. Others see no meaning in this life, if it is not to be continued beyond death. To these, as they say, "the game would not be worth the candle."

Speaking generally men have always believed in a life after death, based first upon their intuitions and then upon revealed religion. True, the Hebrew and the Greek Hades, with its fair fields of Elysium, was very little brighter, but both Greek and Hebrew followed the plain which stretched forth to Christ, the Light of the world.

Easter Day comes with its message of certainty. Light and immortality are brought to light! If a man die shall he live. This is not theory, it is fact, not something merely told us, but proved for us. Such a message should not fall to comfort the many sorely bereaved ones to-day.

Confident that we shall live again, we may also expect that human personality, "cabin'd and confin'd" will have ample room and time there for future growth and service and our work, incomplete here, will be continued there.

We may also feel assured that the injustices of life will be rectified beyond death. Here the saints are crucified and the seam walk around and wag their heads. The best are often doomed to hard toil and poverty, while the worst live in idleness and luxury. The Easter faith believes that all such injustices and distinctions will be swept away.

Easter Day also proclaims that "might is not right." While Jesus hung upon the Cross and lay in the grave it did seem that might had triumphed, but that triumph lasted for only a brief hour. We cannot but feel how feeble was the power that tried to destroy Jesus. The Christ who lives after all was the strongest thing in the universe. Evil could do it no real harm. "The Victor rose triumphant over His foes."

It is precisely so to-day. Easter proves that all that is best in life cannot be buried, it must, by reason of the Mighty Spirit that supports it, stand up in life. Vandals, Hunas, Kaisers are short-lived; Krupps and cruisers may prevail for a time, but the Christ Spirit, inherent in the race will ultimately rise up in resurrection power. Paradise is now turned into mourning and Gethsemane's gloom hangs over us, but it cannot be for long. Peace will come.

Over blood-soaked Europe the fair flowers will bloom again, the merry children will play in the green fields, might shall be overthrown and "right and truth and love shall reign as in their home above." This is the meaning and message of Easter.

REV. CANON SMITH.
EASTER HOPE.

Easter is the Spring festival—and it speaks to us of life—life from the dead. In the Spring Nature awakes from her winter sleep, causing the grass and the plants to spring and the flowers to bloom, and, thereby speaks to us of resurrection from the dead.

So that the Great Festival of our Lord's Resurrection from the dead is appropriately celebrated in the Spring of the year.

As a recompense for having surrendered at His Incarnation the glories of His Divine Nature, at His Resurrection and His Ascension He receives back the glory which He had with the Father before the World was; and angels and archangels and powers are made subject unto Him.

If this risen Christ be the Son of God, His true and only Son, as assuredly He is—and if by His Passion and Death He has reconciled us to God—as assuredly He has—then He will certainly finish the work which He has begun and save us, non-reconciled, from sin and its consequences, if we shall submit to Him.

"When as enemies we were reconciled, much more then being reconciled we shall be saved, if we voluntarily and consciously put ourselves under Him for purposes of salvation by Him as a living Saviour. What did He die for? Did He not aim to assure us of the truth of all He said and of all He said and promised during His ministerial life on earth? Did He not arise to assure us of our own salvation? Most assuredly; the Apostle says "In Christ shall all be made alive."

Hence those of us who by reason of this terrible war have had, for all time, to part with those they loved, best can still have Easter Joy, restored by Him as a living Saviour. What did He die for? Did He not arise to assure us of the truth of all He said and of all He said and promised during His ministerial life on earth? Did He not arise to assure us of our own salvation? Most assuredly; the Apostle says "In Christ shall all be made alive."

of our infirmities. The resurrection preserves for us the continuity of the earthly life of the Christ with all that in His keeping, and they live. We have not lost them, as we shall know assuredly when some day we too have passed beyond the veil. "If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so then also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him."

How great a compensation have we here! How consoling the promise here contained. Those who hold by the Easter message, and have the opportunity to hand it on, are trustees of a far-reaching heritage. Herald abroad the glorious truth that the power of death is broken. Tell those who long to hear it that those who have been willing to die have found the way to life. REV. D. HEMMEON.
"A TRANSFIGURED SORROW."
(Matt. 28: 10, "Be Not Afraid.")

No one has ever been indifferent to death. From the earliest times men have looked upon it with awe and have surrounded it with their most solemn religious ceremonies. No religion or philosophy has ever dared to slight it. Some men have fought its inevitable approach with pitiful and anguished agonies. Some have accepted it with stoical resignation, and some have embraced it with joy. But none has ever ignored it.

The ancient religions, including the Hebrew, saw no ray of light issue from its dark abode. At the best its realm was, to them, a shadowy region surrounded by a gloom and uncertainty. No one had ever sent back from it a word of hope. No one had ever returned from its cheerless shores.

What wonder then that it is with a thrill of joy that the world hears this first utterance of the Risen Lord in that Easter dawn? "Be not afraid." For once the grave is opened and, lo, Heaven's light shines through and Heaven's truth finds a human voice to speak in undying words its message to the world.

It is a word of cheer, "Be not afraid." What a fine sequel to the Master's word of other days before His death—"Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

The place of Jesus Christ among men is unique. He lived and spoke as man never lived and spoke. His supreme position among men—a position that has never been questioned or denied, carries with it, of necessity, a corresponding authority. As we listen to His words, no matter what He speaks about, no thoughtful hearer can fail to mark behind them a calm certitude, all the more convincing by reason of its own unconcernedness of power. As the flower or the bird compel our admiration in greater degree because of their utter unconsciousness of their own sweetness and beauty; as the child claims sovereignty of our hearts by its lack of self-consciousness, so Jesus, in losing, as it were, His thought of Himself in the truth of His words, speaks to us with an added power. No line of doubt ever clouded the clear sky of His belief in the truth of what He said. No one ever carried the power of truth more lightly than He. No one ever wielded it so effectively.

And this authority attaches itself to—rather, identifies itself with—His utterances concerning death. With Him, death is only an incident in the continuity of life. The thought of death stands behind and shines through all He says about it.

He was the first to speak with intimate knowledge of death and we must listen with open minds and humble hearts.

But there is another reason—perhaps to some a deeper reason—why the thought of Jesus concerning immortality should command our consent.

He spoke not only with the authority of a supreme Teacher and revealer, but He spoke as the Evangelist and prophet of man's highest and most universal conceptions. He spoke as the Son of Man, Jesus Christ lived a representative life among men, meeting its temptations at every point as a man. He died a representative death, for He was "obedient unto death" and subject to the common lot of man.

But this sharing in man's life and death does not cover His oneness with man. Jesus not only lived and died as a representative man, but as one of humanity's millions He is alive forever. He continues to represent the human soul, in its unbroken continuity of existence. He said:

He spoke as the Son of Man, Jesus Christ lived a representative life among men, meeting its temptations at every point as a man. He died a representative death, for He was "obedient unto death" and subject to the common lot of man.

But this sharing in man's life and death does not cover His oneness with man. Jesus not only lived and died as a representative man, but as one of humanity's millions He is alive forever. He continues to represent the human soul, in its unbroken continuity of existence. He said:

of our infirmities. The resurrection preserves for us the continuity of the earthly life of the Christ with all that in His keeping, and they live. We have not lost them, as we shall know assuredly when some day we too have passed beyond the veil. "If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so then also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him."

How great a compensation have we here! How consoling the promise here contained. Those who hold by the Easter message, and have the opportunity to hand it on, are trustees of a far-reaching heritage. Herald abroad the glorious truth that the power of death is broken. Tell those who long to hear it that those who have been willing to die have found the way to life. Because Christ lives they shall live also.

REV. D. HEMMEON.
"A TRANSFIGURED SORROW."
(Matt. 28: 10, "Be Not Afraid.")

No one has ever been indifferent to death. From the earliest times men have looked upon it with awe and have surrounded it with their most solemn religious ceremonies. No religion or philosophy has ever dared to slight it. Some men have fought its inevitable approach with pitiful and anguished agonies. Some have accepted it with stoical resignation, and some have embraced it with joy. But none has ever ignored it.

The ancient religions, including the Hebrew, saw no ray of light issue from its dark abode. At the best its realm was, to them, a shadowy region surrounded by a gloom and uncertainty. No one had ever sent back from it a word of hope. No one had ever returned from its cheerless shores.

What wonder then that it is with a thrill of joy that the world hears this first utterance of the Risen Lord in that Easter dawn? "Be not afraid." For once the grave is opened and, lo, Heaven's light shines through and Heaven's truth finds a human voice to speak in undying words its message to the world.

It is a word of cheer, "Be not afraid." What a fine sequel to the Master's word of other days before His death—"Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

The place of Jesus Christ among men is unique. He lived and spoke as man never lived and spoke. His supreme position among men—a position that has never been questioned or denied, carries with it, of necessity, a corresponding authority. As we listen to His words, no matter what He speaks about, no thoughtful hearer can fail to mark behind them a calm certitude, all the more convincing by reason of its own unconcernedness of power. The Message of Easter Morning.

"I go to My Father and to your Father, to My God and your God." "I go to prepare a place for you." "I am in My Father and ye in Me and I in you." It is as though He said: "I am one of yourselves. It is the life we share in common that is immortal." And so we find Him taking up this idea with which man had been struggling for ages, and certifying its truth.

The greatest and most potent ideas of humanity are not the result of its reason, but rather of that inspiration of God by which the convictions of the race have issued from the crucible of its life and experience. Reason has discovered none of the principles that have from the first, moved men the most profoundly. Reason corrects their distortions and exaggerations, but it sits humbly by during their discovery.

This great process by which the race has forged its convictions is more than science or art. These may defend, correct or beautify them. It is more than book or institution. These may embody or interpret them. Call it by what other name you like it is the inspiration of Almighty God.

It would be a futile thing if man with all his aspirations, with his life so largely governed by considerations that reach into the hereafter, should, after all, be the victim of a gigantic deception. It would be folly to bring a beautiful flower to perfection and then to destroy it. It contradicts all our thought of God to think that he would spend countless ages in bringing man to perfection only to pass him into black extinction.

"Who forged that other influence, that heart of inward evidence, by which he doubts against the sense?"

He seems to hear a Heavenly Friend. And through thick veils to apprehend a labor working to an end. "This life whereof our nerves are scant, Oh life, not death, for which we pant."

God will not crush out what He himself has planted in us. Rather does He encourage us to a firmer confidence in our immortality in the words of Jesus "Be not afraid."

His faith of ours is true then. By the authority of Jesus, by the universality and pertinacity of its own testimony, and by the implied testimony of God, its origin. These words rise into the prominence they deserve and speak peace to our hearts.

But let us not forget that these words were spoken to the affectionate rather than to the judgment for it was their love and fidelity that drew the women there in the early morning.

Wherever there beats a heart in loneliness for one departed, there let these confident and cheerful words of Jesus come to comfort and to reassure. "Be not afraid."

That friend with whom you held high converse on great things, whose coming to your friends was a benediction, whose voice from beside you and whose letters from afar were among the days' delights—He has stepped from the path down which you walked through life together. But one day the broken strands of truth and life will be taken up again with clearer thought and higher purpose.

Yonder in the Bermudian lily fields they cut the larger blossoms off in order to send back the life into the bulb for greater beauty in another time. Although this is only a poor analogy, may it not serve to render more credible the thought that God removes the flower of many strong and beautiful lives here that in another time and place, those lives may show a greater beauty?

A gentle Presence comes to us in our hours of loneliness. We too hear: "Be not afraid."

Jesus loved to say "Be not afraid." They were familiar words to His friends. Across the dark tumult of Galilee where the disciples labored in their little bark to reach some haven came the blessed voice "Be not afraid." And who so faithless among us to-day, as we toil, across the troubled sea of life, alone and weary, that he cannot hear those words that have cheered the hearts of thousands: "Be not afraid."

Among the many aspects of nature by which she touches the hearts of men, none have a greater power to stir their depths than the solemn splendor of the Autumn and the bursting life of the Spring.

God must have some purpose in thus using nature to move us so deeply. If by the Autumn He would remind us of our mortality and death, by the Spring He would remind us of our immortality and regeneration. Let us not wrong our Creator by ignoring His messages to us. For through the rich horizons of the future, deep laden with His forgiving mercy, come the argosies of God. Let us hail them with joy into the harbor of our lives.

Yonder in the blue deep of heaven, the waterfowl hastens to obey the mysterious impulse that summons it, a stranger here, to its distant home. How much more shall we respond to God's call and, though we were dead, become alive again, though lost be found.

He who from zone to zone Guides through the boundless sky In the long way that I must tread alone Will lead my steps aright.

REV. CANON BOLT.

THE RESURRECTION HOPE.

If it be asked what is the distinguishing characteristic of Christianity from all other beliefs, the answer is the "Hope" which the Resurrection of Christ from the dead brings to us. It was this "Hope" which supported the early Christians amid all their difficulties and persecutions, and which enabled them to look beyond the things which are seen.

True, a belief in the immortality of the soul existed before Christ came, but the belief in the future life held by the ancients, differed greatly from that which became current among Christians after their Master's Resurrection. Even to the best and wisest of the old world, the thought of a future life brought little comfort. An existence beyond the grave was a fate to escape from rather than to be borne. And if the most devout philosophers could not pierce the mist which hung around the grave, what have been the despair of the ordinary man as his loved ones were consigned to the tomb, the tomb from which there was no awakening, in which he buried all his hopes and plans?

The great difference between Christianity and Paganism was, that Christianity looked forward, while Paganism looked backward. The religions of Greece and Rome placed their Golden Age in the past with its glories long since passed away. The future was a blank. The Golden Age of the Gospel was, in the future. Amid all the trials and distractions of life, the eye of the Christian could pierce the future, where he could see a new heaven and a new earth wherein would dwell righteousness. The religions of heathendom were religions of regret. The Gospel is a Gospel of Hope.

And it was the Resurrection of Christ from the dead which wrought this change. Death had hitherto been the great barrier to men's hopes, and now death was conquered. The stone was rolled away from the door of the sepulchre. And so while the heathen could only look out upon the world of nature, and see confirmation of his dark forebodings, the Christian apostle could in the same world of nature see evidence of man's immortality. If day deepened into night, the darkness of night would be followed by the bright dawn. If summer glided into autumn, and autumn into winter, the winter was not the end. In its time would come the bright and fresh springtime when all nature would arise once more to new life.

The very plants which before seemed to speak to men of decay and death now reminded them of resurrection and life, and man, the noblest creature of God, he too would rise again, and so instead of a lament over his grave for his life which was forever closed, we have a paean of triumph for the life which had in reality only begun.

For the Resurrection of Christ, teaches not only the immortality of man, but that death leads to life and that it is the entrance, and the necessary entrance to a higher and more vigorous life. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone, but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit."

This was the hope which supported the early Christians amid all their many and great trials, and this must be the motive power of Christian lives now. And never was that "Hope" more needed than to-day. Never did men need that anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast than now. As we think of all that is taking place to-day on the fields of Europe; as we contemplate the sacrifice of lives being poured out that right may prevail; as we think of the bereaved in their sorrow and loneliness; and as perhaps we are tempted to think, in view of all the suffering that we behold, that Christianity has failed of its purpose, as we think of life cut short, of great hopes extinguished, of vast usefulness arrested, of high powers given only to be taken away, let us reflect that nothing is lost, nothing has been in vain, what seems to us incompleteness, and failure, is but the carrying out of the Divine plan. Let us learn afresh the Easter Message that death is but the entrance to life; that Christianity points us to the future rather than to the past, and with such thoughts let us go forth to our daily work chastened and renewed in spirit, in the "living Hope" which is ours by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

Province Journal:—Does not thought occur to the German naval authorities, that, after practicing on the Dardanelles forts, the fifteen inch guns of the Queen Elizabeth might be directed at the fortified bases, Heligoland and Wilhelmshaven? It is indeed reasonable to believe, if the war continues long enough, that the attempt will be made. Submarine and mines will not paralyze the British Admiralty if it plans to storm the German fortified ports after the job in the Near East is completed. Indeed, while the experience being gained at the expense of the Turk is invaluable, a similar undertaking in the North Sea need not be delayed till Constantinople falls.

War Tax of 500,000 Roubles is Demanded of City of Lodz. Amsterdam, via London, March 28.—A despatch from Berlin, printed by the Telegraaf, states that the Russian city of Lodz has been ordered by the German military authorities to pay a war tax of 500,000 rubles ($250,000). The Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin, announced yesterday that the war levy on the town of Suwalki had been increased to $25,000, and that Crodnio had been bombed by airmen as reprisals for the "plunder and persecution" at Memel, east Prussia, by the Russians. It was stated that other retaliatory measures would be taken.
