The following By-Laws of the Association are published for the information of motorists generally. Learn them by heart and follow them!

1. If stopping, slowing down, or turning out of the road, right hand held out horizontally. If the driver is left hand, left hand held out.

2. Any Motorist Member of the Association desiring to overtake or pass a car must blow his horn two blasts, and the driver of the car ahead shall signal that he has heard the horn by answering two blasts. If the car ahead cannot keep ahead of the overtaking car, the driver should allow the overtaking car to pass and the overtaking car must immediately get far enough ahead to prevent the occupant of the car passed from getting the dust.

3. A Member of the Association must help any other Member whose car is on the road and in trouble if requested to do so.

4. Cars meeting must keep as close to the left side of the road as possible and slow down.

5. A signal of three blasts will mean that the person blowing is under the impression that the other party has offended against some rule.

6. The horn must be blown at every blind corner and the car must be under close control. A car is under close control when it can be stopped within 10 feet. At sharp curves the horn must be blown.

"The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER VII.

The rectory household was an early one; but Sidney was the first down the next morning, and Isabel found her standing in the dining-room window, looking out into the snow-covered garden, her thoughts evidently so far away that she started when Isabel wished her "Good morning." She recovered herself immediately however, and was her own bright charming self again when the rector came in, rubbing his hands and complaining of the cold in a good-humored grumbling manner, pooh-poohing the girls' assertions that it was charming seasonable weather, but evidently enjoying the bright cheery morning.

"What time does the post come round?" Sidney asked, as they sat down to breakfast, Bell officiating behind the urn—for Mrs. Bevis was somewhat of an invalid, and did not make her appearance until later in the day.

"At about nine o'clock," answered the rector. "I dare say he will be a little late this morning," he added, smiling. "The snow will make it rather heavy walking, and he will not know how impatiently he is looked for."

"Do you expect a letter, Sidney?" Bell asked, her pretty blue eyes brightening at the thought that she had been mistaken after all, and that Sidney must really care for her fiancée or she would not be so anxious to have a letter from him so soon after leaving home.

"I thought perhaps papa might write to me," was the unexpected answer. "I was obliged to leave home without seeing him yesterday morning and I think he will send me a few lines."

"Oh!" said Bell, in a dissatisfied tone, retiring behind the urn once more.

"I suppose a doctor's time is even less his own than a clergyman's," Mr.

Bevis remarked, in his gentle kindly way. "Your father, like myself, cannot count upon a quiet hour, I dare say."

"No, indeed," Sidney answered, smiling as she thought of her father's busy life compared with the rector's quiet existence. "It is very trying sometimes. Just as we are going out to a dinner-party or a dance papa is called away, and we must either go alone or else send some excuse and not go."

"You talk of dances and dinner-parties as if they were of every-day occurrence, Sidney," Isabel remarked.

"Is Ashford a very gay place?"

"I don't know," Sidney answered, laughing. "It is certainly very gay when compared with Chapone House; but I should think, when contrasted with the London season, it must be the acme of dullness."

"But you do have parties sometimes?"

"Oh, yes—dances in the winter, and garden-parties in the summer, and dinner-parties all through the year!"

"Oh, you lucky people!" Bell exclaimed, ruefully. "Our gazettes are restricted to a school treat and a choir outing—and tea-fights of course!"

she added as an after-thought, drawing down the corners of her red lips in contempt for the latter form of entertainment.

"I can remember the time when Ashford could boast no greater pleasure, my dear," remarked the rector. "When I was a curate there, over thirty years ago, a dance would have been an unparalleled event in the little town."

"So I have heard papa say," replied Sidney, smiling.

"It was so indeed," said the rector, thoughtfully. "But the cloth-mills have done wonders since then. Mr. Daunt is a wonderful man."

"Is that your friend with the bonbons from Strandin's, Sidney?" asked Bell, with a swift, keen glance.

"No—his father," Sidney answered, quietly. "Is this the postman, Mr. Bevis?"

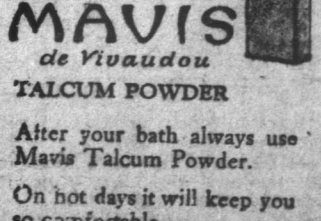

"Yes," said Bell jumping up to get the letters. "I have been longing to see the papers with the account of the Hunt ball, Sidney. We get the evening papers the next morning in this benighted region, you know."

She ran out into the hall, and the next minute she came back into the dining-room with her little hands full of letters and newspapers.

"A heavy mail this morning," she said, gayly. "There must be at least one letter for you among all these, Sidney."

She turned over the letters, hurriedly separating them from the newspapers, and glancing at the addresses as she did so.

"Nothing for you, Sidney," she said, lightly, but with some disappointment in her pretty voice. "Very sorry, dear; but this impatient father of mine takes all the correspondence. There are the papers, however, and we will console ourselves by a perusal of the description of the Hunt ball. Which will you have, the Ashford Chronicle or the Stroud Herald?"

"You had better keep the Chronicle," said Sidney, laughing. "No doubt it will contain the best account of the entertainment. I dare say they will have all the dresses wrong; they always do."

"Then, if any sound dubious, I will come to you for correction," remarked Bell, opening the newspaper looking eagerly for the column devoted to fashionable society; while Sidney took the wrapper languidly of the Stroud Herald and glanced down its columns.

Bell, devouring the description of the ball with all the eager curiosity of a country girl debarred from such gayeties, was immersed in a glowing account of the entertainment, and delightedly picturing to herself how exquisite Dolly Daunt's dress must have been, and how superb Mrs. Rutledge's, when a faint, startled, gasping cry made her look up suddenly.

Sidney was half leaning forward on the table, her eyes dilated with fear and horror, her lips utterly colorless, the newspaper crushed in her hand.

"Sidney, what is it, dear?" Bell cried hurrying to her and putting her arms round the slender drooping figure. "Are you ill? What is it?"

"No, no!" Sidney answered, rising feebly and gently putting aside Bell's tender arms, the look of horror and fear deepening on her face. "No, not ill; but I must go home—I must go home. Don't try to keep me, Bell; I must go—I must go!"

"You shall go, dear," Bell said, gently, trying to soothe her. "What has happened? Is Dr. Arnold ill? They would surely telegraph it."

"It is not that," Sidney answered, pitiously, swaying to and fro in her weakness—"not that—but—Mr. Bevis, will you read it? I do not know whether I understand it rightly. Perhaps—perhaps—"

Her voice failed her as she sunk down upon her knees by the table, looking at the two startled faces with feverish lustrous eyes, and pointing with her little trembling hand to a paragraph in the newspaper headed in large capitals. Mr. Bevis took the newspaper, his hands a little unsteady as he hastily adjusted his spectacles, and read as follows:

"The town of Ashford was yesterday thrown into a state of great excitement, alarm, and consternation by a report circulated early in the morning, which unfortunately later in the day proved to be only too true. Squire Rutledge, of Rutledge Hall, a gentleman well known and greatly respected in the country was found in his library, by one of his servants, lying across his writing-table, quite unconscious. Assistance was immediately procured; but Dr. Arnold found, on arriving at Rutledge Hall, that the unfortunate gentleman was quite dead, and had been so for some hours, death having resulted from his having been shot through the heart. This distressing event has caused the greatest consternation in every circle, and every inquiry is being made to discover the murderer, for the doctors agree in declaring that the wound could not have been self-inflicted. Indeed, such a supposition would be a very wild one, since Squire Rutledge had everything to make life pleasant, and had lately added considerably to his happiness by marrying a young and beautiful lady who has won general admiration. Squire Rutledge was a keen huntsman and enjoyed excellent health. He was in his forty-ninth year."

And underneath was another short-paragraph headed "Latest particulars:"

"We understand that the mystery of the terrible event at Rutledge Hall grows apace. Mrs. Rutledge, the beautiful young wife of the unfortunate gentleman, has disappeared. Rumors of the disappearance also of a gentleman well known in Ashford, whose name was mentioned in connection with Mrs. Rutledge before her marriage, are also afloat; but nothing is yet known for certain. Our readers may count upon having the fullest and earliest particulars in to-morrow's issue."

The Market in the Baltic

It is a noteworthy fact that whereas about a year ago German industrial products reigned practically supreme on the Lithuanian market, they are now being gradually supplanted by French, Belgian, English and Czecho-Slovakian goods. Apart from the credit of £1,000,000 granted by the British Government to the Bank of Lithuania for the purchase of railway materials in Great Britain, Sweden has placed at the disposal of Lithuania for the purchase of breed cattle and agricultural implements a large long term credit. Germany is not showing nearly such willingness to grant credit, and as the prices of German goods are considerably higher in many instances than the French and Belgian the latter are being increasingly favored in Lithuania.—Danzig "Zeitung".

Replace the Trees

Calling for the curtailment of forest waste in various forms—such as destructive logging methods, forest fires, etc.—the substitution of other materials for wood and a sound policy of reforestation, as practical methods to insure a future supply of wood and wood products in the United States, the Guaranty Trust Company, of New York points out that less than one-third of the original supply of timber in the United States remains. The original stand estimated at 5,500 billion board feet has been reduced to about 1,600 billion feet and this supply is being drawn upon at the rate of about 25 billion feet annually, offset by an equal growth of approximately 6 billion feet. Intensive methods of forestry are urged in order to bring the annual growth up to annual consumption.

Will he fall in the Fight?

All life is a fight. Germs of illness are constantly attacking your child.

Many children go under simply because they are not properly nourished—they are unfit to face the fight.

That is why you must give your children VIROL, which contains just those vital foods which strengthen resistance to the attacks of illness. VIROL is the great life-saving food.

And What is Your Mother's Maiden Name?

The chances of a stranger forging another man's name to a check and getting the money from the teller are very much reduced when he has to tell the man in the cage what his mother's maiden name was. Not that this is often asked by the average teller, but it is one of the safety devices used by the Huron and Erie Mortgage Corporation in its daily business in London, Ontario.

On the sample signature card which all depositors fill in is a space for the maiden name of the mother of the depositor. In this way the office has a check on the individual which is practically foolproof. There is not a chance in a hundred thousand that the man who might forge a name should have a mother with the same maiden name as the man whose signature he is copying.

The assistant manager of the head office branch of the Huron and Erie said that, while there were very few occasions in which the teller was forced to fall back on this means of identification, it was a measure of safety which the company felt necessary in the interests of its customers.

"It is very useful," he said, "where a staff is changing from time to time and where a new teller may not know some of the depositors by sight. It is generally recognized as an almost infallible remedy for misrepresentation, and we would not do without it."

Banks in London, interviewed for the local papers, however, did not attach much importance to this. They simply ask for the signature of the depositor on the cards. They are content to rely on the ability of their staff to tell the difference between genuine and false signatures. They argue that an expert teller can recognize both a genuine signature and a faked one and that if he has any suspicions he can ask whatever questions may be necessary in any case.

The Celtic Mecca

PROPOSED GREAT GATHERING OF GAELS IN GLASGOW.

Simultaneously with the holding of the Celtic bazaar in Glasgow next summer it is proposed that the city should be the Mecca of representative Scotch Gaels, not only from all parts of the Empire but from all over the world. The Duke of Atholl is president of the movement, Mr. Angus Robertson (president of An Comunn Gaidhealach) is vice-convenor, and Mr. Murney-Campbell of Ormidale is convenor of committees; and the object, of course, is to find ways and means for a more vigorous prosecution of the objects of An Comunn—the preservation of Gaelic as a spoken language, the popularizing of its music, the development of its literature, and the study and practice of Celtic art.

In a letter sent to Scottish Associations in all parts of the world, it is pointed out that the existing revenue of An Comunn Gaidhealach is not sufficient to meet its expenditure, but "the circumstances of the time seem propitious for an onward movement. A greater interest is being manifested in Celtic matters by the general public than ever before; old prejudices are disappearing, and new values are being set on racial mental inheritance."

"The establishment of a centre of Gaelic culture," continues the statement, "somewhere in the Gaidhealach, has become one of the great ambitions of An Comunn. While it may not be practicable all at once to set up such an institution, a beginning might be made by establishing an annual summer school, which, if carefully fostered, would gradually develop into a Celtic College, in which Celtic literature, music, and art would receive continuous and systematic study."

"An Comunn Gaidhealach proposes to hold a great Fèil in the summer of 1926 in Glasgow to enable it to carry out in their entirety the objects for which it exists, and it confidently hopes that the response in money and goods from Scots and Gaels at home and abroad will be generous beyond all previous experience. It is proposed at the same time to convene a Cochrinnneachadh mor nan Gaidheal—a great gathering of Gaels—and invitations will be issued to representatives of all known overseas Scottish and Highland societies to attend this Celtic conference, at which opportunities will be afforded for friendly meetings and greetings, interesting discussion, and interchange of opinions as to the best means of securing a mighty revival of interest in the study and practice of the old Gaelic tongue—the common language of their forefathers and ours."

The last organized effort for raising funds secured for An Comunn Gaidhealach a sum of £7,000, and while the original idea of founding a Celtic College at Iona is abandoned, the idea of having such a scholastic establishment in some part of Scotland is being maintained and kept in view. It is understood that Mr. Angus Robertson, the president of An Comunn, received a promise when over in the United States from Gaels there that they would endeavor to raise some hundreds of thousands of pounds for the preservation of Iona and the establishment of a Gaelic College in Scotland, and it is hoped that the conference and bazaar in Glasgow next June will be not only the means of providing substantial funds for the regular work of An Comunn, but enable it to fulfill those other more tangible aspirations.

The Torbay Garden Party

For close on ninety years, the little Church under the hill has done duty as a place of worship for the Anglican community at Torbay. Now, sadly out of repair and not worth repairing, it is to be replaced by a larger and more modern building, just as picturesquely situated and far more in keeping with the modern and attractive homes and business places of such an enterprising settlement as Torbay.

The Anglican community at Torbay have worked hard and sacrificed much on behalf of their new church, and have paid for every cent's worth of work done and material purchased right up to the present stage of construction operations. Their very laudable determination is to finish and pay for the building at the same time.

The energetic pastor of Pouch Cove Mission, in which Torbay is included, is appealing to his friends in the city to help along with the good work. Rev. J. T. Tuik has worked hard on this great project himself and will be grateful to those who now come in from the outside to lend him a hand.

On Wednesday afternoon, the last half holiday for the season, a garden party is to be held at Torbay to raise funds to help finish the construction of the church. City athletes are invited to compete in the events on the sports programme. These include a five mile race, half mile race and mile race, for which beautiful cups have been donated as prizes by Sir Michael Cashin, Hon. W. J. Higgins and C. J. Fox, M.H.A. Kindly disposed city friends have also donated medals for football sixes in which it is expected teams from St. John's will compete.

Transportation is being provided for all city athletes who enter these various sporting events. There will be ninety dollars worth of prizes given to the winners alone. The winner takes 60 per cent. of the prize, and the loser 40 per cent. There will be no delay this time. First boat starts at 8.15. This will be a night of sport from start to finish. Motor Smashups ONE PASSENGER INJURED. A motor car smashup occurred yesterday morning near Duncombe's Bridge or Mount Pearl Road between a Red Taxi car. Driven by T. Osborne and Sir Richard Squires car, driven by T. Crossman. The Red Taxi car was proceeding countrywards with several passengers on board, and the latter returning when the smash occurred. Mr. Curtis, who was motoring in the taxi, received a bad gash in his forehead as a result of flying glass from the windshield. All the other occupants escaped unhurt. The Red Taxi car, feared badly, having radiator and bonnet smashed besides damages to the windshield and mud guard. The only damage done to Sir Richard Squires car was a bent bumper.

Professor W. Seeley THE MUSCLE BUILDER

Will appear again at the Prince of Wales Rink on Tuesday night, Sept. 15th, in all new features of strength, one of which will be the holding of TWO MOTOR CARS. The Professor will stand between the two cars; one car on each side will be tied with rope or chain to the apparatus which passes over each arm, just above the elbow. The cars will be pulling in opposite directions in the same form as the horses were in the last performance, August 31st, at the Rink. When the drivers of the cars will put their feet on the gas, putting the cars in high or low gear, whichever they wish, the wheels will turn around but still they will not pull the Professor's hands apart.

To see this feat of super-strength should alone be worth the price of your ticket. Besides this, many other astonishing feats of strength will be performed, including four real good Boxing bouts, three three-minute rounds. One of the light-weight bouts will be between Jack Phelan from the city, and John C. Garland, from Bell Island. These boys have been training for some time and they will both be ready for business when the gong sounds. And the following bouts: Thos. J. Benson vs. Patk. Linegar, 128 lbs. Wm. Frost vs. Gordon Parsons, paperweight, 80 lbs. Also two other interesting bouts being arranged.

There will be ninety dollars worth of prizes given to the winners alone. The winner takes 60 per cent. of the prize, and the loser 40 per cent. There will be no delay this time. First boat starts at 8.15. This will be a night of sport from start to finish. Sideside Seats--Tickets60c. Side Gallery--Tickets40c. Front Gallery--Tickets30c. Admission only25c. Presentation Convent Ladies' Association

The regular monthly meeting of the above Association was held yesterday afternoon, and was attended by quite a large gathering of members who were all very enthusiastic over plans to be made re adding to the funds of the Association during the next few months. Quite a few new Members were added to the roll, including several who became "Life Members" on payment of the usual fee. A card party in the schoolroom was arranged for Thursday evening of this week at 8.30 o'clock Sept. 17th, and several ladies arranged table for the popular game of "Auction," for which a valuable prize was promised to the highest scorer, and it is hoped that all members will patronize this party. Miss Furlong (Smithville) very kindly announced that she would give a card party at a date to be announced later. It was also decided to hold a "Sale of Work," followed by a concert and cards on "Presentation Day," November 21st, arrangements for which will be finalized at next meeting. Votes of sympathy were passed to Mesdames R. Power, T. Donnelly, Misses Scott and Mitchell in their recent bereavements, after which the meeting adjourned.

Attempted Suicide at Grand Falls

It is learned on good authority that a resident of Grand Falls attempted suicide at that place on Wednesday night last, by slashing his throat with a razor. The man, it is said, became overcome with excitement at the football game and attempted to carry out his rash act in the woods at the rear of the S.A. Grand. After being found he was rushed to hospital, and is now in a very critical condition.

Good Fishing North

Passengers who arrived in the city yesterday from the north by steamship Susu, report the fishermen are still doing well with hook and line in the vicinity of the Fog Islands and Joe Batt's Arm. When the ship was returning south a flotilla of schooners could be seen off Lumsden returning from Labrador, all apparently well fished. Excellent weather prevails north, and the only delay to the ship was at Herring Neck, when 300 barrels of herring was taken on board for transshipment to the States.

Personal

Miss Margaret Buckley, accompanied by Miss Mary Kennan, are passengers by the S.S. Munceaster, for Boston. Mr. H. B. Thomson, Optometrist, arrived by the S.S. Susu, from Bonavista, yesterday, and will be leaving on Wednesday for points in Conception Bay. The summer vacation is at a close and Miss M. O'Keefe has just returned to Norris' Arm, to resume her duties as R.C. teacher there. She is looking well after her holiday, and is residing at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Basha. The little children are glad to have her in their midst again and a hearty welcome is extended to her from the people in general. His Lordship Bishop March is expected at Norris' Arm by the end of the month, where he will administer the Sacrament of Confirmation to a number of children. Mr. J. E. McLurg, Vice-President of Besco and Mr. H. B. Gillis, Superintendent of Mines and Quarries were passengers by express for Canada yesterday. Mr. Vincent Rich, District Passenger Agent for the Munson Line at Boston, arrived by the Munceaster yesterday on a visit. Miss Laura Ryan, who had been on a visit to her sister, Mrs. W. Billings, at Bell Island, and friends in the city, returned to Boston by S.S. Munceaster.

Motor Cars of the Future

(By MAJOR F. A. C. FORBES-LEITCH)

So rapid has been the growth of motoring in recent years that even the most negligent observer is profoundly aware of it. Those who have never handled a steering-wheel nor sat astride a motor cycle are discussing the wonder of the growth of motoring, and the possible developments of it.

As yet the internal-combustion engine has not reached its zenith, but in the U.S.A., where motoring has reached a point far ahead of that which exists in Britain, it is already obvious that conditions are such that a change in the entire principle of this great industry must take a relatively early appearance.

There are in the city of New York (whose area is considerably more restricted than London's) more cars than exist in the whole of the United Kingdom, the United States owning about 72 per cent. of the world's motor-vehicles.

In New York's horse is a rare sight, and the few horse-drawn vehicles that are now in use are merely reminiscent of a past age in traction. At every quarter-end the reports of the great motor manufacturing companies show enormous increases in production, and throughout the whole world motoring is being adopted with increasing rapidity as a means of pleasure and as an invaluable aid to commerce.

Orgy of Oil Consumption.

Recent contributions to the press have called attention to the eventual effect upon the world's oil supplies of this great increase in motoring. Apart from the great oil demand for land transport, nearly every modern ship that leaves the stocks is fitted with oil-burning furnaces. This orgy of oil consumption surely raises a most important question, upon which the opinions of scientists and experts are of great moment. How long will our oil supplies last? How long will our increasing demand? The answer to this question may influence development in a revolutionary way.

We have all the joy—and none of the drawbacks—of motoring when we traverse a fine country road on a sunny day in an efficient car, but in the great cities, where tens of thousands of exhaust pipes belch forth smoke, foul-smelling gasses, and deadly carbon mono-oxide, the effects upon the public health of such wholesale pollution cannot be anything but detrimental.

Far From Ideal.

What of the effect of the incessant noise upon the jaded and high-tensioned nerves of humanity? Here is another aspect of the motoring boom which merits attention.

Now, although we have brought internal combustion machinery to a state of perfection so high that it is difficult to conceive of further substantial improvement, can it, viewing these objections, be considered an ideal means of power? My opinion is that it is not ideal.

Firstly, a condition in which all science is straining to the utmost in supporting metal in a battle against heat is not ideal. In the long run the metal always loses, and this factor alone makes motoring an expensive hobby and a motor car an expensive article. Moreover, the internal combustion engine is not by any means a piece of machinery that can be called clean. It is, of necessity, an attractor of dirt. Another argument against it is the fact that no really satisfactory means of transmission, other than through an expensive gear box, has yet been produced—at least, I am not aware of one. Those who have an intimate knowledge of the principles of internal combustion will probably share my view that a change in this respect seems a long way ahead.

Electricity the Answer.

Every one of these factors tends to make motoring expensive, and renders highly improbable—if not impossible—the production of petrol driven vehicles at prices lower than those which rule to-day.

It is easy to be a destructive critic, however, and, naturally, I shall be asked what is the alternative. My opinion—and also my firm conviction is expressed in one word—electricity. Electric cars that produce no heat, no noise, no smoke, and no obnoxious gasses to poison the populace, and—what is almost equally important—cars in which a direct drive is practical represent the next development of motoring.

Replacing Petrol.

It may be argued that, in the electric automobile, there will be just as much inconvenience in the charging and charging of storage cells; and, as development now stands, I must admit that we are not ready for such a change.

I am, however, endeavouring to look further ahead than present times. The possibilities of the storage cell are tremendous, and, as a factor in electric development, it is yet in its infancy. When the tides and more frequent rivers are harnessed to produce unlimited electrical energy at a minimum of cost, I anticipate that such strides will have been made with storage cells that it will be possible for the motorist of the future to stop by the road at electric service stations where, by connecting two wires to the car, his batteries will be charged

What Germans Eat

(By ROTHAY REYNOLDS).

BERLIN—"The German displays a preference for everything which comes from the swine," writes Dr. Geno Ohlschlaeger, who has been trying to find out what are the favourite dishes of his fellow-country.

The doctor began his researches at the Reichstag; for, as he justly points out, the members represent not only the political views but also the gastronomical tastes of Germany.

A question put to the manager of the Reichstag restaurant brought the unhesitating reply that what the members like above all else is knuckle of pork with sour cabbage.

The answer strengthened the view which I formed long ago that Germans are at present at the stage of civilisation which we reached in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. In her time knuckle of pork was a favourite dish in England. Marlowe makes Gluttony in the masque of the seven deadly sins in Dr. Faustus declare that her father was a knuckle of pork.

I once ordered this dish in a Berlin restaurant and the waiter set before me a long, thin joint with enough meat on it for a family. The mere sight of it took away my appetite; but probably that fine old Englishman Sir

John Falstaff would have gobbled up the lot with as much gusto as a modern German.

Dr. Geno Ohlschlaeger does not spare his countrymen's feelings. "It is perfectly clear," he writes, "that the Berliners and, indeed, Germans in General attach less importance to the quality of their food than the people of any other country. All experts with international experience agree that for the German the chief thing is the quantity of the portion he receives and that both at home and in restaurants one can give him food which in other civilised countries people would not dream of eating."

He might have mentioned that there are restaurants in Berlin which advertise that every customer will receive an entire pound of knuckle of pork.

Ms. Find Disputed

BERLIN—The announcement made that Professor Nicos, B.S.S., of the Greek Legation in Berlin, had discovered a fragment of the famous Codex (ancient MS. in book form) Sinaiticus, the incomplete fourth-century manuscript of the Greek Bible, which has been in the library at Petrograd since 1859, created a flutter in the learned world here.

Another scholar, Professor Degering disputes the authenticity of the fragment, which was found in the collection of Frau Dr. Grote.

He declares that the script is different from the words of the codex, and declares that the codex is complete at the place at which the passage written on the fragment would have to be inserted.

Are You Eating the Right Kind of Food

The adulteration of food, the use of artificial food processes, and the growing increase of fads in feeding are matters round which serious controversy centres at the present time.

Food faddists, it must be confessed, are chiefly women. A friend of mine who entertains a great deal confided to me recently her difficulties in entertaining.

Fastidious Guests.

"I am afraid to ask some of my women friends to a meal," she said. "One refuses every dish offered to her unless it contains nuts or lemons; another keeps to a potato diet on certain days of the week; and so many women are now hanting that it is necessary to consider whether a dish will suit So-and-So, and, if it does, what to have as an alternative, because the menu will surely find disfavour with some other guest who happens to be present at the same time."

Altering Their Diet.

It is extraordinary how eager some women are nowadays to alter their diet without knowing anything about the right choice of food in relation to health.

"Civilized man has no instinct for choosing the right kind of food," says Dr. R. H. A. Plimmer, professor of chemistry in the University of London at St. Thomas's Hospital Medical School, who has collaborated with his wife in writing "Food and Health." "His likes and dislikes are not a reliable guide among the overwhelming abundance of artificial products which are offered to him. If we want to find races with splendid physique and health, we must look in those out-of-the-way corners of the world where geographical isolation or religious restrictions have caused the natives to adhere to the primitive diet of their forefathers—wholemeal flour, seeds, fruits and vegetables, often eaten raw with a good deal of milk and butter and little or no meat. On this diet they are healthy and live to an active old age."

In order to show which foods are body-building and necessary in a healthy diet, and those which serve only as fuel, and therefore should only be eaten in small quantities, a diagram headed "A Square Meal" has been included in this book.

How Food is Spoilt.

The need for fresh fruits and vegetables is emphatically pointed out. Dr. Plimmer is very much against the common practice of adding soda to vegetables to retain their colour while cooking. Boiling for a short period, he states, has a less harmful result upon vitamins in food (which are so essential to health) than slow cooking at a lower temperature, and he does not approve of vegetables being stewed. Twice cooked foods, such as re-cooked potatoes, are practically valueless as a source of vitamins. Fresh fruit and vegetables are much to be preferred to those which have been stored for some length of time.

The housewife's responsibility in providing the right foods for her family is a grave one. Dr. Plimmer deplores the present-day habit—for the sake of convenience—of replacing natural foodstuffs with less perishable foods, and declares that the health of the nation must suffer severely from the effects of a chronic slight shortage of one or more of the essential vitamins.

Britain and Yugo-Slavia

If Great Britain does not always see eye to eye with Yugo-Slavia in political matters—and that may largely be the fault of Yugo-Slavia—the British show a keen economic interest in the country, which is worthy of response. The conclusion of a new treaty ought to dispel much of the prevailing mistrust in Great Britain against Yugo-Slavia. In any case, economic circles in Yugo-Slavia await with the greatest interest the conclusion of a commercial treaty which would draw the two countries more closely together. Belgrade "Zelting."

Rev. Father McGrath

LECTURES ON "CHINA'S CIVILIZATION"

The lecture given at the Star Hall last night, by Rev. Father McGrath, of the China Mission Seminary, Scarborough, Ont., under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, was attended by a very large gathering. Preceding the lecture, Miss Josephine McNamara, at the request of the Chairman, J. F. Moohan, rendered a solo, "Ave Maria," after which Mr. Moohan, introducing the lecturer, explained that four years ago Father McGrath had been ordained to the Priesthood by His Grace Archbishop Roche and was for a time attached to the Cathedral. After a short time he asked to be relieved to parochial duties and volunteered for missionary work in China, and since that time has been actively engaged in forwarding this noble undertaking.

Father McGrath, in opening, stated that he had chosen for his subject, "China's Civilization and Ours." He would touch briefly on some main features in both, and then would briefly draw a few conclusions. There can, he said, be little comparison between the civilization of China's and ours, as it must always be remembered that China has 5,000 years of civilization behind her and in spite of the fact that the world is greatly prejudiced against her, she has been very quietly pursuing her way.

An outstanding feature of the Chinese is their honesty, and so well is this realized in Japan that in that country all the Bank clerks are Chinese. In the early days of Chinese civilization, dishonesty was treated with capital punishment and this, perhaps, more than anything else, has had the effect of making the Chinese honest. The methods of serving out capital punishment were explained by the lecturer who related stories in the personal experience of Father Francis to show that it had been carried out. Another characteristic of the Chinese is their fundamental respect for authority. Every man, woman and child respects their parents, and so right up to the higher authority. A remarkable thing about Chinese civilization is that Confucius, who is looked upon as the greatest of Chinese teachers, preached the doctrine "never do to others what you would not another do to you." This is a fundamental of Christianity and is significant that it should be taught in these early ages, especially when the Jews, who were afterwards the chosen people of God, should have for their doctrine, "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

The lecturer then mentioned some of the peculiarities of the people of China, their habit of paying compliments to one another, etc.

One of the evils of doctrines preached by Confucius is Polygamy, and he gave seven reasons for it, all of them, however, very frail ones. The Chinese believe that the best way to get even with a man who has done them wrong is to commit suicide in his house, and he told a story illustrating this, where a Mandarin cut his own throat in the house of a small community of priests because they had obtained permission to build a church over his authority; and when some Chinese students heard of it they went outside and told the people the Priest had killed the "Mandarin," as a result of which the Vicar General and one Priest lost their lives.

Another evil is spirit worship, and the lecturer told how the natives worship the spirits of the sun, moon, stars, etc. A story was told of how several able-bodied coolies stood on the bank of a river and saw three boys drowning without any attempt to save them because they believed that by doing so they would incur the wrath of the God of the river. Every year two millions of baby girls in China are slaughtered by their parents. The people there live in abject poverty, have can only about an acre of land on which they are dependent for a living and if anything goes contrary to hopes, as the result, and dire distress is the result, and for this reason they think it better to destroy the baby girls.

The lecturer then went on to dwell on some of the various phases of our own civilization. Speaking of honesty, he wondered if all the people of the world could boast of this as China can. Statistics show that in America last year there were 10,000 murders; this is more than China with all her millions, has had in centuries. It has become a truism in America now that "you can't hang a million dollars," from the manner in which some things have been handled. Another evil of our civilization is the public school where the name of God is shut out from the hearts of the young innocents. The lecturer then dealt with some of the evils that have attended the divorce court and prohibition.

The only big failure in our Christianity, is that Christendom plays no part in it. After the War the world said Christianity had failed, but at Fr. Martin Scott says: "Christ had prescribed a cure and if the world refused to accept that cure it must bear its own responsibility." With our Christianity, there are yet millions in London and America who know no creed. China never had a chance as we had and it is to give them that chance that hundreds of Missionaries are yearly crossing the Pacific. Father McGrath's lecture was listened to with deep interest and at the close he was warmly applauded. The Chairman briefly expressed thanks to the lecturer for his splendid address, and a collection was then taken up in aid of foreign missions. Miss Alice Curtin and Mr. Jack Curtin, rendered pleasing solos and after Fr. McGrath had thanked Monsignor McDermott, the priests, the Knights of Columbus, and all who had helped to make the evening so successful, the National Anthem brought the evening to a close.

CONFEDERATION LIFE. — aug 17, 3 mos

Recent Scientific Developments

So vast and international in its scope has scientific research become that unless co-operation and interchanging of information and results can be materialized much will be lost to the world. For the purpose of making possible such international co-operation the International Research Council was organized six years ago in July, 1919. At that time defeated Germany and her allies were excluded from the international scientific fellowship in which she played such an important part before the war. Now many nations and scientists believe that war hatreds have been sufficiently softened that all the nations can be invited to sit down at the same table for scientific discussion. In fact, the scientists of the Central Powers very quickly were admitted into many international scientific meetings on an equal footing with the scientists of more fortunate countries. Yet the bars are still up so far as formal organization of international science is concerned. The International Research Council at its third meeting held in July failed in an effort to admit to this international organization the countries not included in the ranks of the Allies and neutrals of the war period.

Although there is a minority, represented chiefly by France, Belgium, Czechoslovakia and Poland, that favors the continued exclusion of their former enemies, it was the method of voting rather than this faction that prevents the opening of the Council's doors to a truly international membership. The rules of the union, composed of thirty-one members since the recent admission of Latvia and Tunis, require a two-thirds vote of all member countries for a modification of the rules of the Council. A two-thirds majority means fifty-three votes and there were only fifty-two votes represented at the Brussels meeting. Dr. Vernon Kellogg, permanent secretary of the National Research Council, who headed the United States delegation, voiced his disappointment and made clear his apprehension at the state of affairs.

Diminished Fish Supplies.

Nothing is more international than the sea which touches the shores of all lands. From earliest times man has looked upon the oceans as storehouses of food. The question has been raised as to whether the food resources of the sea are being exhausted in the same way that man is cutting the forests and killing wild game, exhausting the fertility of our soil, and emptying our mines and oil wells. While the sea is not as barren as it looks, its supplies are by no means as inexhaustible as some would have us believe. This has been quite forcibly demonstrated in the fisheries of the North Sea, Iceland and other areas. From 1906 to 1913, the average catch of a British trawler per day's absence from port ranged between 1,837 and 2,027 pounds. As a result of the restrictions on fishing operations during the Great War, the fisheries were afforded an opportunity to recuperate. With the renewal of operations in 1919, the average daily catch increased to 4,823 pounds, or 90 per cent. greater than the pre-war average. In 1921 it had declined to 2,173 pounds and in 1923 to 1,568 pounds. Thus, within a five-year period of fishing the increment gained during a five-year closed season was wiped out and new low levels reached. The record of British trawlers operating in Iceland waters is similar. The average daily catch per day's absence for the years 1906-19 ranged within the limits of 4,883 and 5,278 pounds. In 1919 it increased to 7,438 pounds, falling to 4,872 pounds in 1923.

According to Dr. Lewis Radcliffe, United States Deputy Commissioner of Fisheries, this depletion of certain areas and expansion of operations emphasizes the need of extensive studies of the life histories and habits of the important marine fishes to prevent their ultimate exhaustion. Fortunately, the nations are beginning to realize the importance of such work and to expand their programme of scientific research. Provided trouble is taken properly to conserve and regulate the utilization of the natural resources of the sea, a billion dollars annually is the wealth that the Pacific Ocean should yield to man. Many forms of sea food now considered of scant value have great possibilities, and in view of the depletion of supplies of shad, sturgeon, salmon, lobsters, crabs and other forms that are now used, the neglected ones may come into importance. An examination of our fishery statistics reveals the absence of some sea foods health, will require drastic measures both politically and socially, and a lot of soil will have to be buried. The present standard of legislation will not do; there must be a higher standard—a higher standard than any party has yet attained unto. The lesson that fifty years of public life and social reform has taught me is, that selfishness is the one great hindrance to reform. The measure may be all right, but the moment it interferes with self-interest, it is all wrong. And this is what ails England. The slums and the alleyways, and the unsanitary conditions of so many houses, and the million and a half of unemployed, represent so much squalor on one side, and the vested rights of capitalists, and the lack of soul of corporations represent the other side. To blend these conflicting interests is what is wanted; but to accomplish this, a greater and nobler spirit than is possible for any political party to exercise, will have to be manifested. No doubt the Labour Party see all this, and they wish to mend the breach. This is the doubtful point. To mend this breach between the conflicting interests will require great discretion and good diplomacy—more, we fear, than the Labour Party possess. But they mean to try their hand, and they are sincere in their purpose and zealous in their efforts. If therefore they can do any good, we wish them well, for we all desire to see the Empire preserved, and the world happier, and the children of men as God meant them to be—in a word, we want health restored and war abolished.

Powerful Attraction at the Nickel To-Day

ROBERT KEABLE'S SENSATIONAL STORY "RECOMPENSE"

The Nickel Theatre offers its patrons "Recompense" to-day a picture that promises to prove something of a double-header. To begin with, "Recompense" is the sensational "best seller" that Robert Keable wrote as a sequel to "Simon Called Peter," and those who remember Mr. Keable's story of Peter and Julie, know what to expect.

Then, the two powerful personalities of Peter and Julie will be interpreted on the screen by Monte Blue and Marie Prevost, which means that these parts will receive the finest shades of dramatic finish, if the past performances of these two artists are to be depended on.

"Recompense" has been reproduced on the screen by Warner Bros., the producing company that is celebrated for its success in translating "best sellers" onto the silver sheet. Harry Beaumont handled the directorial end of the picture, which was adapted for the screen by Dorothy Farnum of "Beau Brummel" and "The Lover of Camille" fame.

John Patrick, John Roche, Etta Lee, Wm. C. Davidson, Virginia Brown Fairre, Charles Stevens, George Slegman, and Katherine Lewis support Monte Blue and Marie Prevost in the leading roles.

Those who have read Robert Keable's famous book "Simon Called Peter" and its sequel "Recompense," will remember the struggle that Peter and Julie made for happiness. The two characters, Peter and Julie, have become so well known to the people of America, that the announcement that "Recompense" has been made into a motion picture is of considerable importance to the reading and screen public.

Marie Prevost and Monte Blue renowned for their harmonious teamwork in many screen dramas of the Army Chaplain and the nurse.

PRAYER FOR THE HOME. Peace, unto this house, I pray. Keep terror and despair away; Shield it from evil and let sin Never find lodging room within. May never in these walls be heard The hateful or accusing word.

Grant that its warm and mellow light May be to all a beacon bright. A flaming symbol that shall stir The beating pulse of him or her Who finds this door and seems to say, Here ends the trials of the day.

Hold us together, gentle Lord, Who sits about this humble board May we be spared the cruel fate Of those who hatred separates. Here let love bind us fast, that we May know the joys of unity.

Lord, this humble house we'd keep Sweet with play and calm and sleep. Help us so that we may give Beauty to the lives we live; Let Thy Love and let Thy grace Shine upon our dwelling place.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

AN ANNEX FOR MOTHERS.

This is the day of the child (as I have so often remarked before in this column) and summer camps where everything is arranged for the convenience and comfort and happiness of the young folks are as common as summer hotels. But someone with a sympathetic imagination conceived the idea of an annex for mothers, and judging by the enthusiasm of a friend of mine who has just returned from there after a two week's stay with her three girls it ought to prove a popular innovation.

"I can't tell you what it meant to me," she said. "Always, other years, we have taken them to a hotel and I had the children on my mind every minute, worrying if they were in the water, trying to think up things to keep them busy rainy days and out of other guests' way, struggling with the problem of keeping them spruce-dressed and all that sort of thing. But at this new camp I had no care at all. Dressed in khaki, the girls enjoyed all the fun of camp life under the supervision of trained counsellors, and I spent all my time in the mothers' annex where all the mothers just rested, and loafed, and enjoyed each other, without any of the care of a household or any worry over the children. Part of the programme for the youngsters was to plan an occasional good time for the mothers. I've never had such complete relaxation in all my married life and I feel so rested and so ready for the winter."

Doesn't that sound as if camps of that sort would fill a long felt need? And now comes a letter from one of my Reader Friends telling in such a charming way of "her happiest vacation" that I'm going to share the letter with you.

The Loveliest Camp in the World.
"I used to dream of the days when I'd grow up and have some money of my own," she writes, "and then I planned that I was going to take mother away for a vacation, just as two. Well, I'm just back from the loveliest camp in the world, one just opened this summer by our lodge, and it was my treat to her. There was the loveliest crowd of girls there, and a good many of them had their mothers along, too. So while we were racing around trying to cram the seven days as full as possible, our mothers were resting, and idling under the trees, or reading and embroidering. And the nice part that struck me as rather romantic was that our mothers happened to be school chums, or had been school chums with father, and after drifting apart for so many years they met at this lovely camp and their children who had never heard of each other met for the first time, and became the best of friends. Maybe this sounds silly to you, but the reason I'm so happy and thrilled over it is because, in spite of the fact that there were four boys and my daddy to be taken care of at home, we got away for a vacation together and they kept bachelor's hall without us. I've never had such a perfect vacation before."

A Joy Shared A Joy Doubled.

I can well believe it. A joy shared is always doubled. And can't you just peep behind the scenes and see "daddy and the four boys" and daughter all prying mother loose from the idea that they couldn't get along without her, and showing her off to that carefree, joyous week of rest, and happiness, and delightful companionships at the "loveliest camp in the world." Here's hoping that other lodges and other daughters may follow the happy example of these "way down in sunny Tennessee."

"Good morning," all of a sudden cried a voice as Lady Love, Little Jack Rabbit and the Yellow Dog Tramp were eating breakfast.

There at the kitchen door stood the Donkey Postman, a big bag of letters on his back and his long ears a wiggle-waggle. "A letter for the bunny boy."

"Who from?" asked the little rabbit, all excited, so excited that I'm sorry to admit he forgot to say, "From whom?" But the Donkey Postman understood him all right. Oh yes, indeed, for he answered right away quick, "I'm sure I don't know. From some big, enormous person I should say, judging from the writing. It's spread all over the front of the envelope and partly on the back."

"It's from the Circus Elephant," the next minute shouted the bunny boy. "I'm invited to visit him in the Shady Forest. Let me read the letter aloud," and crossing his legs, the little rabbit wrinkled his forehead and began: "Dear Little Hipperty Hop,

"That's his pet name for me," explained the little rabbit, looking up over the sheet of paper. The baby elephant has grown to be a fine, big fellow. Come to see us. You know the way. We are still living in my log cabin in the wood. Bring along some lollypops. If you have room in your knapsack, a bushel of peanuts. Slip in your pockets a couple of bottles of Ginger Pop. It's so long since I've been with the circus that I've grown a big, healthy appetite. Does Lady Love still make angel cake? You know how much I think of her angel cake. Haven't space enough left in this letter to tell you.

that they nearly caught us both a few hours ago?"

"I'll go with your little rabbit," promised the kind Yellow Dog Tramp, wiping his whiskers with the nice clean napkin which Lady Love had placed beside his plate.

"We'll stop at the Three-in-One Cent Store on the way for the peanuts and ginger pop," cried the bunny boy. "The lollypops I can get from the Big Brown Bear. He'll climb the lollypop tree for me and bring down a hundred and sixty-three."

"And I'll furnish the angel cake," laughed Lady Love, happy once more at the sight of her little rabbit's smiling face. Just like your dear mother and mine, Little Reader. Smiling children make happy mothers; something money can't always do. Smiles can't be bought with lettuce leaf dollar bills even in Rabbitland.

As soon as the angel cake was carefully packed in the knapsack, the little rabbit kissed Lady Love goodbye and set off with the Yellow Dog Tramp. Clipperty hop, Hipperty hop he hopped up the Old Cow Path and over the hill, the good kind dog trotting by his side. On reaching the Shady Forest they followed the trail that led to the Big Brown Bear's Cosy Cave. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Marconi Makes Raido Experiments

LONDON, Sept. 5.—(C.P.)—Aboard his yacht Electra yesterday, William Marconi successfully demonstrated his latest radio adaptation, the "wireless lighthouse," erected for experimental purposes on South Foreland, a headland of the County of Kent. Instead of flashing light signals, the lighthouse flashes wireless warnings to navigators. A wave length of only 6 meters is used, so that the signals are "jam proof."

Electricity From the Shannon

A number of representatives of Government departments and shipping companies witnessed the experiments.

The first task to be undertaken will be the construction of two railway lines, one from Limerick Harbour to Limerick Railway Station, and the other from Longpavement to Ardara-croaha, where the power station is to be built. Thus the power station will be immediately connected with Limerick docks.

Siemens-Schuckert have already made arrangements for the shipment of the necessary plant, from Berlin, and the first German steamer is expected in the Shannon shortly.

The railway construction is expected to be completed by the middle of December, and more than 500 men will be employed on the work. The key positions will be filled by Germans, but there will be a certain number of young Irish engineers engaged, and all the unskilled labour will be supplied as far as possible locally.

Hutments From Germany. The immediate difficulty is the provision of accommodation for the workmen. Ardara-croaha is a tiny village consisting of a score or so of houses, and Siemens-Schuckert must accommodate their large staff in temporary hutments which probably will be brought from Germany.

When the railway is built work will be started on the preliminaries for the power station, but the actual work on the canal excavation will not begin until next April. It is understood that the German firm will undertake an extensive propaganda campaign later on, in order to impress upon the Irish people the possibilities of electric power in the home and in the farm.

After waging a grim and silent battle against the onrush of civilization, a group of cattlemen decided to send John Brent and his son, Hugh, for eastern backing to repel the invasion. Telephone poles, railroad stations, truck gardens, Ford's and patent medicine doctors gradually won their battle and the eastern trip of the Brents availed nothing.

On their return the cattlemen met to ponder over the question. It was decided they would move their gigantic herds across the border into Mexico, where the acreage afforded ample grazing land.

The Herculean task did not dishearten the cattlemen. They faced the rigors and hardships of the long journey with brave hearts.

The last straw was when the railroad refused permission for the herds to cross into Mexico. The infuriated cattlemen took the railroads by force, blocked four locomotives and crossed into Mexico—their sundown.

Ellen Crawley and her family said goodbye at the border town. Hugh promised to meet her soon.

And so they went over the hills and away.

USEFUL LESSONS.

My nephews number seventeen, and now and then I take them where some experience that's keen may jar them up and shake them. For nephews' tire of moral talk, of text and admonition, and sometimes it requires a shock to better their condition.

The poorhouse stands upon a slope, and there to-day we wandered; the sad-eyed inmates, shorn of hope, we watched a while and pondered. We saw the paupers in their stalls, where we were slowly guided, by county boards provided. "That is the saddest place on earth," I said, as we departed; "its people don't indulge in mirth, they're sad and weary-hearted. It's sadder than the village jail, for there the men in fetters have dared the laws that should prevail, and barked or slugged their betters. But now we hear old harmless gents against their fortune holler; they didn't salt down fifteen cents when they had earned a dollar. I doubt not that, when in their prime they drew down goodly wages, and never thought to save a dime, as urged by bards and sages. No doubt they scorned the thrifty lads with idle jeers and ravings, when they, on pay day, took some scads and placed them with their savings. Now we behold the paupers drift, attired in dingy cotton, in shadows that will never lift, all pride and hope forgotten."

Fighting Planes

NEW 180-MILES-AN-HOUR TWO-SEATERS.

Orders are being placed, says the Air Correspondent, for new British two-seater fighting aeroplanes which represent a great advance.

By further lessening of head-resistance and other technical improvements, it has become possible to produce a specialised fighting craft which, when carrying even pilot, gunner, and full military load, will attain a maximum speed of more than 180 miles an hour.

Dancer Shot Dead

AT A GOVERNMENT HOUSE BALL, MELBOURNE, Aug. 28.—A revolver shot fired in the ballroom at Government House, Perth (Western Australia), early this morning ended the charity ball for which the room had been lent.

A girl, Audrey Campbell Jacob, tried to speak to a young man, Cyril Gidley, while he was dancing. The man asked her to wait, and a shot rang out.

Gidley fell from his partner's arms dead.

The girl has been arrested and charged with murder.

An Exchange Melbourne message says that the girl was a former fiancée of Mr. Gidley, who was a marine engineer. The shot was fired during the last dance.

When Dreams Come True

... still baffles scientists. If only the secrets of success might be laid in the curriculum of every school.

... ANSWERS' OWN MEDICAL SPECIALIST.

... writing this article before the press-meeting.

... cannot say which of all the horses my friends tell me are going to win. In fact, to winners in big races. But I can tell you last year one of my friends actually dreamt the name of Lord's colt about a month before the race. She backed it, and so did her husband, and they made money.

... is not a case which was referred to me by somebody, who had got it from somebody else. I know it, and I heard of her dream before the race took place. Had I might have won money myself following the "tip" she gave.

... Hopes For The Ebor.

... didn't do that because I have not convinced myself that such dreams really can be trusted.

... had you, honestly enough. I have had a second example of the same kind brought before me.

... brother-in-law of the same lady named a short time ago that a horse with a small race to be run the day. He is not a racing man; he has put a penny on any horse, however, he is the head of a business, and very much occupied.

... just for his dream's sake, he had the trouble to find out if the horse was really running in this race, and so he backed it.

... these are the only two examples of dream dreaming which I have ever seen in my life, and they occurred in the same family within the same year. Neither of the dreamers had any other "tips" of this kind, and their friends still hope that the man before the Ebor Handicap may have some enlightenment. But I'm unable to give you any "sure things".

... Nor have they any idea how or why

... they know what is hidden from all their competitors.

... Unlucky Star.

... "Good luck" itself is probably of the same nature—an instinctive knowledge of what to pursue and what to avoid. It is a fact that, before almost every big railway disaster, several persons leave the ill-fated train in response to some feeling that they had better not continue their journey. Such people have a sixth sense, which apprehends the future and warns them.

... Others know, by instinct, when a share or a horse is going to prove a "winner," and promptly put their money on it. Their friends sigh and declare that "they were born under a lucky star."

... It may be that, in the future, science will be able to discover the real character of this strange power. Already some feeble steps have been taken in this direction.

Marvellous "Brass Brain" Has 15,000 Separate Parts

The "brass brain" a device that can predict what the tides will be in any seaport in the world at any time—tomorrow or 100 years from tomorrow—is in constant use in the laboratory of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, in Washington, D.C.

The machine is said to do the work of 60 mathematicians, and actual check on the predictions proves it to be nearly 100 per cent. accurate. At present the "brass brain" is being used to predict the tides at 85 ports all over the world. As a result of predictions, the department is able to tell two years in advance what the high-water mark will be at 3500 other ports.

The idea was conceived by R. A. Harris, Chief Mathematician of the department, and the plans and construction were under the direction of E. G. Fischer, M.E. It took 15 years to perfect, and its name is derived from the fact that practically all of its 15,000 parts have been made of brass.

Even the extra day in Leap Year is given consideration by the wonderful "brass brain."

THE SIGN OF THE BIG BOOT.

From Pirate to Parson

SLAVE-TRADE'S FAMOUS HYMNS

There has just occurred the bi-centenary—the two hundredth anniversary—of the author of two of the best-known hymns in the language, "Glorious things of Thee are spoken," and "How sweet the name of Jesus sounds." He was the Vicar of Olney, lived next door to the poet, WILLIAM Cowper, and collaborated with him in the production of the famous Olney Hymns.

Yet the Rev. John Newton had been a turbulent African slave-trader. He began his career as a ship's boy, and later became a naval midshipman, attempted desertion, and was flogged. Eventually he was transferred to a slave ship, did the most menial jobs for a brutal slaver, and gave himself up to every form of dissipation.

Converted By A Storm.

It is said that his mode of life was changed by the strain of steering a water-logged ship through a terrible storm, but it is certain he came under the influence of Wesley and Whitefield, and although he remained at sea for some time, and even in the slave trade, his ship must have been one of the strangest that ever sailed the seas. No swear word was heard on board that craft; nobody ever got drunk, and the Church service was read daily.

But though there was no form of wickedness to which he has not confessed in his autobiography, he was still only thirty when he amazed the Archbishop of York by his request to be admitted to Holy Orders. It took him some time to get his desire fulfilled, but it may be said at once that the Church never had a more faithful minister. He was rector of Olney for fourteen years, and then removed to London to the Church of St. Mary Woolnoth, a few yards from the Mansion House, where he remained for twenty-eight years. He died at the age of eighty-two.

The career of John Newton inevitably suggests that of John Bunyan, who, if his own account may be trusted, was in his early days "a practical atheist, a worthless contemptible fellow, a vile rebel to God and goodness, a common profligate, a soul-despising, a soul-murdering, thoughtless wretch as could exist on the earth."

But Macaulay avers that his own and others' accounts of his extreme wickedness are traceable to Bunyan's exaggerated view of the blackness of his own heart, and that the author of "The Pilgrim's Progress" would have been regarded by the average village rector of his day a model youth and an example to the parish!

But it is fact that Launcelot Blackburne, who became Archbishop of Canterbury, had formerly been a pirate. After a wild career at Cambridge it is said that he stole a fiddle from his tutor's room, and played his way to London, where he shipped as cabin boy on a collier.

On abandoning piracy Blackburne returned to Cambridge and restored the fiddle to its rightful owner, together with a silver case. When he was Archbishop, tobacco and punch were always served in his vestry as he performed a confirmation.

"Billy Sunday" and Gipsy Smith are regarded to-day as the greatest evangelists in the world. Each can attract an audience running into tens of thousands. The former was once a famous baseball player, and still uses the language of the game to illustrate his sermons. The latter was a gipsy, born in a tent. His father used to preach on Hampstead Heath, being a product of the Salvation Army movement in its early days.

PROPOSAL TO BUY MINES.

At a meeting of Wicklow County Council, Mr. James Everett, a member of Dail Eireann, stated that the German expert who had been asked by the Government to examine the Avoca sulphur deposits—mined for many years—with a view to their exploitation, had intimated his desire to return to Germany to report to his firm with a view to obtaining the Government's permission to buy up the mines.

The Government, Mr. Everett added, had promised every assistance, and if the scheme materialized local labour would be extensively employed.

Germany is taking a keen interest in the possibilities of Free State development. Recently the Dublin City Commissioners invited tenders for the erection of 230 houses as an extension of a housing scheme, and the lowest tender of £118,491 was from a Bremen firm.

The acceptance of this tender will be proposed at the next meeting of the Commissioners.

Memorial Window

UNVEILED IN ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

A large congregation was present at the morning service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church yesterday when the beautiful stained glass window, "The Crucifixion," was unveiled to the memory of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Frew, by the Pastor, Rev. R. J. Power. During his sermon, Rev. Mr. Power announced that the Prime Minister intended to replace the window to the memory of the late Moses Monroe by another which would be more in harmony with the others in the sacred edifice.

Eel Grass Shipment

During the past six weeks many enquiries for eel grass have been received by the Agricultural Department from users in the Old Country. Those who would likely engage in the business of shipping were solicited, but there was not any willingness on their part to embark until it was demonstrated that the industry would be profitable. Under the circumstances the Department had to take the matter up and a shipment of about twenty tons is being collected in Placentia Bay under the supervision of J. Downey. It will be ready to forward to England by S.S. Harmony sailing early in October.

Canadian Failures in August

There were fewer commercial failures in the Dominion of Canada during August than in that month of all years since 1920, according to the records of R. G. Dun & Co., while the liabilities are the smallest for the period in six years. Numbering 126, last month's defaults compare with 130 in August, 1924, and with 289 in 1923, the high point for the month. In August, 1924, the number was 102. At $1,801,584, last month's liabilities made a close comparison with the $1,837,160 of August, last year, but are much below the amounts for August of all other years back to 1919. The indebtedness was particularly heavy in August of both 1922 and 1921, being in excess of $12,000,000 and $10,000,000 respectively.

The Canadian insolvency statistics for August are compared herewith for a series of years.

Year	No.	Liabilities
1925	126	$ 1,801,584
1924	130	1,837,160
1923	220	4,450,232
1922	289	12,210,845

Canadians and Imperialists

Le Droit (Ottawa): Mr. Howard Ferguson, interviewed by the press in Montreal, said on his return from Europe that he came back more imperialist than ever! It would be no exaggeration to say that he was already passionately so before his departure from Ontario, but if his trip has resulted in strengthening his imperialist convictions, it is a pity. He will not be the first in the political history of our country, who has learnt, through a visit to London, to sacrifice Canada. For imperialism is the sacrifice of Canada to the advantage of an agglomeration of countries—an Empire; a fatal doctrine with which all our great Canadians have vigorously struggled.

STUDEBAKER CORPORATION.
Company is in Strongest Financial Position in Its History Says President.

NEW YORK, September 5.—President Erskine of Studebaker Corporation, states:—"Our cash holdings stand at upwards of $17,000,000, after deducting about $2,000,000 in dividends paid on September 1. Viewed from any angle, the corporation is in the strongest fiscal position in its history.

"Automobile business continues at a surprising rate, and I look for a big third quarter. Our sales in July and August amounted to 25,000 cars, and September's business will probably bring the total to more than 35,000 for the third quarter. We have been operating close to capacity since March 1, and there are at present no signs of any severe let up. Eighty-five per cent. production is in closed models.

"Our exports to August 1 exceeded the total for the entire year 1924." Mr. Erskine declined to discuss earnings, but intimated that the forecast which he has already made of third quarter's net could still be accepted, notwithstanding price reductions recently made. He stated at the time that the outlook for the third quarter earnings and sales double those of the corresponding period of 1924.

On this basis it may be assumed that Studebaker will earn upwards of $4,000,000 in the current three months, or more than $2 a share on 1,875,000 common shares. Added to the first six months' showing of $5.24, this would bring earnings of the first nine months to around $14,000,000, or between $7 and $7.50 a share.

On the prospect of an increase in dividend payment this year, or an extra dividend in addition to present $4 annual rate on common, Mr. Erskine likewise refused to comment, stating that this was a matter for the directors to determine at their meeting at the end of October.

Studebaker's sales of 25,000 cars in the third quarter would compare with 42,054 in the second quarter and 29,937 in the first three months. It would represent the second largest third quarter in the corporation's history, and compares with previous record established in third quarter of 1923 at 40,695 cars. It would be almost double the 18,921 cars sold in the corresponding quarter of 1924.

Stressed After Meals?

Indigestion, no matter how slight, is a nuisance. It can ruin the good nature of the most genial of us. If you are troubled this way, you'll be glad to know a simple way to avoid it. Just try eating a few Life Savers after meals. It's wonderful how these little mint circles relieve that heavy, lousy feeling after eating. Probably that's why our grandfathers so often had their bulky little bags of peppermints handy in their pockets. Life Savers are grand-dad's bag of peppermints up to date.

CITY FOOTBALLERS RETURN WITH SILVERWARE. The City football team returned from Grand Falls by special train on Saturday. A large number of fans gathered at the station to give the athletes a welcome and offer their personal congratulations on the victory achieved. The football games played at the inland city were hard fought and interesting, and in the final game, to decide the championship, victory went to the city by 2 goals to 1. All the players speak in glowing terms of the kind hospitality shown by the people of Grand Falls. Their stay was a very enjoyable one, and every player is looking forward to another such trip next year. Hearty congratulations are due Capt. Maddigan and his team on bringing the cup back to St. John's, whilst a special word of praise is due Manager T. Delahanty, who left nothing undone to make the trip for the athletes as comfortable and as enjoyable as possible. The following are the players of the victorious team:—Goal, R. Walsh, B. Mooney, back, W. Thistle, T. Duggan; halves, F. Rendell, M. Maddigan, T. Ryan; forwards, M. Flynn, W. Caul, W. Culhahan, H. Phelan, H. Coultas, R. Nolan, C. Morris, R. Meaney. Mr. H. Coultas played left wing for the City in two games and refereed in two others.

The Passing Hour

A composer in setting up the toast, "Woman, without her, man would be a savage," put the comma in the wrong place, making the sentence read: "Woman, without her man, would be a savage."

A statesman, having accused an official of dishonesty, was required to make a public retraction of the charge. He read his apology thus: "I said he was dishonest, it is true; and I am sorry for it."

To the surprise of those who had accepted it as satisfactory, it appeared in the daily papers: "I said he was dishonest; it is true, and I am sorry for it."

Reply to an advertisement of a music committee for "a candidate as organist, music teacher, etc.": "Gentleman, I noticed your advertisement for organist, and music teacher, either lady or gentleman. Having been both for several years, I offer you my services."

"Yes, but now you must forgive and forget." "Oh, I can forgive, but it's not so easy to forget."

"Nonsense, I can tell you a hundred things I've forgotten."

Captain: "What is strategy in war?" Sergeant: "Well, strategy is when you don't let the enemy discover you are out of ammunition, but keep on firing."

"My daughter, you know, has been travelling in the East and cruising about the Levant." "How delightful. And did she go to the Dardanelles?"

"Yes, indeed. I think they asked her to dine with them."

"Do you know how to drive?" said a gentleman riding beside a coachman. "Sure I do. Wasn't it I that upset your honour in a ditch two years ago?"
