

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences
Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

CIHM/ICMH
Microfiche Series.

CIHM/ICMH Collection de microfiches.

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

© 1982

Technical and Bibliographic Notes/Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

- ☒ Coloured covers/
Couverture de couleur
- ☐ Covers damaged/
Couverture endommagée
- ☐ Covers restored and/or laminated/
Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée
- ☐ Cover title missing/
Le titre de couverture manque
- ☐ Coloured maps/
Cartes géographiques en couleur
- ☐ Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/
Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire)
- ☐ Coloured plates and/or illustrations/
Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur
- ☐ Bound with other material/
Relié avec d'autres documents
- ☐ Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion
along interior margin/
La reliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la
distortion le long de la marge intérieure
- ☐ Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/
Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées
lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte,
mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont
pas été filmées.
- ☐ Additional comments:/
Commentaires supplémentaires:

L'institut a mic. filmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

- ☐ Coloured pages/
Pages de couleur
- ☒ Pages damaged/
Pages endommagées
- ☐ Pages restored and/or laminated/
Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées
- ☒ Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/
Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées
- ☐ Pages detached/
Pages détachées
- ☒ Showthrough/
Transparence
- ☐ Quality of print varies/
Qualité inégale de l'impression
- ☐ Includes supplementary material/
Comprend du matériel supplémentaire
- ☐ Only edition available/
Seule édition disponible
- ☐ Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to ensure the best possible image/
Les pages totalement ou partiellement obscurcies par un feuillet d'errata, une pelure, etc., ont été filmées à nouveau de façon à obtenir la meilleure image possible.

This item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below/
Ce document est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-dessous.

10X	12X	14X	15X	16X	18X	20X	22X	24X	26X	28X	30X	32X
							✓

Technical and Bibliographic Notes/Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

L'institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

- ☐ Coloured covers/
Couverture de couleur
- ☐ Covers damaged/
Couverture endommagée
- ☐ Covers restored and/or laminated/
Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée
- ☐ Cover title missing/
Le titre de couverture manque
- ☐ Coloured maps/
Cartes géographiques en couleur
- ☐ Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/
Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire)
- ☐ Coloured plates and/or illustrations/
Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur
- ☐ Bound with other material/
Relié avec d'autres documents
- ☐ Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion
along interior margin/
La reliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la
distortion le long de la marge intérieure
- ☐ Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/
Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées
lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte,
mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont
pas été filmées.
- ☐ Additional comments:/
Commentaires supplémentaires:

- ☐ Coloured pages/
Pages de couleur
- ☐ Pages damaged/
Pages endommagées
- ☐ Pages restored and/or laminated/
Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées
- ☐ Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/
Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées
- ☐ Pages detached/
Pages détachées
- ☐ Showthrough/
Transparence
- ☐ Quality of print varies/
Qualité inégale de l'impression
- ☐ Includes supplementary material/
Comprend du matériel supplémentaire
- ☐ Only edition available/
Seule édition disponible
- ☐ Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata
slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to
ensure the best possible image/
Les pages totalement ou partiellement
obscurcies par un feuillet d'errata, une pelure,
etc., ont été filmées à nouveau de façon à obtenir la meilleure image possible.

This item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below/
Ce document est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-dessous.

10X	14X	18X	22X	26X	30X
<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
12X	16X	20X	24X	28X	32X

Good Return

The Story of Laura Secord,

A HEROINE OF —

1813.

Second Edition,

1898.

6 - 12 - 1868

In Memoriam.

LAURA SECORD, 1813.

In Lundy's Lane Cemetery is the following inscription on a marble head-stone :

HERE RESTS

LAURA,

BELOVED WIFE OF JAMES SECORD,

DIED OCT. 17, 1868,

Aged 93 YEARS.

$$1 + 1 = 2 \quad 1 + 1 = 2$$

$$2 + 2 = 4 \quad 2 + 2 = 4$$

$$3 + 3 = 6$$

$$4 + 4 = 8$$

$$5 + 5 = 10$$

R R

R R

... THE ...

Story of Laura Secord,

1813.

BY S. A. CURZON,

Honorary President of Women's Historical Society, also Honorary Member of the Lundy's Lane Society.

---

PUBLISHED UNDER THE DIRECTION OF

THE LUNDY'S LANE HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

---

SECOND EDITION, 1898.

---

PRICE, - - 10 CENTS.

168201

OFFICERS

—OF—

The Lundy's Lane Historical Society.

REV. CANON BULL, M. A.,	PRESIDENT.
JOHN A. LAW,	1ST VICE-PRESIDENT.
CHARLES PATTEN,	2ND VICE-PRESIDENT.
JAMES WILSON, Park Superintendent,	SECRETARY-TREASURER.
REV. CANON HOUSTON,	CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE:

JAS. A. LOWELL,	GEORGE WOODRUFF,
ABEL LAND,	GEORGE HENDERSON,
H. G. A. COOK,	JAS. C. HULL,
J. G. CADHAM,	J. G. ROBERTSON.

Donations to the Laura Secord Monument Fund will be gladly received by any one of the above names.

PREFACE.

It is a matter of congratulation that a second edition of "The Story of Laura Secord" is required, and it is a labor of love on the part of the present writer to comply with the request of the President of the Lundy's Lane Historical Society to write the preface. To introduce Mrs. Curzon to the public is unnecessary, but it is only fit and right that our indebtedness to her should be acknowledged. While the work of the historical societies has awakened the public to the need for historical investigation, to Mrs. Curzon is due the interest in the story of Laura Secord; by her stirring ballad, by her drama told so thrillingly and with such pathos, sweetness and power, and by the present story told in noble prose, (although other writers have also told the tale) to Mrs. Curzon principally we owe that Laura Secord is enshrined in Canadian hearts as a heroine. So long as love of country is an impulse in the human breast, so long as men and women shall do and dare to serve their country—so long shall the deed of this brave woman on that sultry day in June be told, and so long shall hearts throb high in sympathy with the noble deed. May the day not be distant when some memorial shall be erected fitly to mark the resting place of one who did her part so well to preserve to the British Empire what is now acknowledged to be the fairest jewel in her crown of colonial possessions.

For all that Mrs. Curzon has done in investigating knotty points in Canadian history, for her contributions to Canadian literature, for her work while President of the Women's Historical Society for the first two years of its existence—a well deserved honor, for all that she has done to encourage love of their land in Canadians, we rejoice to pay our tribute to the biographer "Laura Secord."

J. C.

June 24th, 1893.

The Story of Laura Secord.

ON the 17th October, 1803, at the pretty village of Chippawa, where she had lived for fifty years as wife and widow, died at the age of ninety-three, "one of the most patriotic and courageous women of any age or country." *

Born in 1775, in Massachusetts, the very foremost of the revolting colonies, Laura Secord, nee Ingersoll, came to the then unopened west of Canada, the infant of her father's family.

Thomas Ingersoll was a wealthy man, of good social position in Massachusetts, and his wife was Sarah, daughter of General John Whiting, of Great Barrington, County Berks, Mass., therefore Laura Ingersoll was born to affluence and station. But the Ingersoll blood was loyal, and could not brook the forswearing of oaths of allegiance and the compulsory terms of the new doctrines of a new liberty. Therefore, on the invitation of his old friend, Governor Simcoe, who, as "Commander of the Queen's Rangers, a Royalist corps which had been raised in the revolted colonies, and had there done loyal service for the Crown," † Mr. Ingersoll sought Canada, the home of the United Empire Loyalists, and in accordance with Simcoe's views of the future of the country, sought to make his domicile, together with eighty or ninety families who came with him, in what is now Oxford County, on the banks of the Thames. Certain drastic measures on the part of a subsequent Government seriously interfered with the welfare of the little settlement, and Mr. Ingersoll himself removed to the newly set off County of York, settling in the Township of Etobicoke, whence he again returned in the course of years to Oxford.

In the meantime the infant daughter was growing up, sharing hardships of which the present generation know nothing, laboring with her hands in concert with her mother and sisters for the comfort of the father and brothers whose lives had to be spent battling with nature, and in laying the foundations, deep and wide, of that civil and religious liberty we now, perhaps too complacently, enjoy. In those days the means of education were small. Mothers and fathers whose learning and polish had been received at Harvard, William and Mary, and the numerous seminaries founded by the munificence

* See "The Battle of the Beechwoods," page 1, by Major Ernest Cruikshank.

† "Illustrated Toronto," by G. Mercer Adam (1891.)

of the English Government and the liberal tastes of wealthy colonists, saw with pain their own advantages denied to their children; but like brave men and true, they made the best of things, and, while imparting to their children such knowledge as they were able in the midst of sterner labors, never omitted to avail for them of every opportunity that came in their way, whether it were the occasional visit of some university graduate on the search for a site of refuge, some civil officer whose duties placed him among them for a brief period, some clergyman whose widespread parish called him to periodical visits of Christian consolation and religious office, or some school, to be reached only at a great expense of means, time and labor, that had been set on foot at an important centre, such as York, Kingston or Newark. Of such intermittent, though, it may truly be said, thorough education, the heroine of the future partook a share; and as she developed into youth and beauty, she was fain to shine at the official functions and entertainments of her father's old and faithful friend, Major-General Simcoe, who had been fittingly chosen, on the setting off, in 1791, of the western region of Canada into a separate province, as first Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada.

At that period one of the most important families settled in the Niagara district were the Secords. This family was a notable one. Family documents shew that in the reign of Louis X. of France a certain Marquis d'Secor was a marshal of his majesty's household. A son of this marquis embraced the Protestant faith, as also did younger branches of the family. During the persecution of the Huguenots that preceded the massacre of St Bartholomew, several of them suffered at the stake, and the family estates situated at La Rochelle were confiscated. The survivors escaped the massacre by flight to England, together with some other noble families, among whom were le Comte du Puys, the Badeaux, and a Holland family, the Van Cortlandts. Eventually five Secord brothers emigrated to America, where they settled in New Jersey, purchasing large tracts of land, founding New Rochelle (Westchester County, N. Y.) in honor of their ancient home, and engaging in lumbering. On the breaking out of the Revolutionary War the family divided; certain of them anglicized their surname by placing the d of nobility at the end, thus making it Secord, and others dropped the letter entirely, remaining only Secor. United Empire Loyalists of the strictest type, the Secords had warmly espoused the King's cause, and, as a consequence, the five brothers, with their families had to fly early in the struggle, leaving their estates, and reaching Kingston and Niagara by way of New Brunswick as best they could. It is said that James Secord, who married Laura Ingersoll—thus giving her the name by which she is best known and will ever be commemorated—when only a child three years old had accompanied his mother in her flight through the wilderness, with four other homeless women and many children, to escape the fury of a band of ruffians who called themselves the "Sons of Liberty." After enduring frightful hardships for nearly a month, they finally arrived at Fort Niagara almost naked and starving.*

Such terrible experiences were by no means uncommon. In numerous well authenticated cases, the men of the Loyalist families had to fly for their lives leaving their wives and children, goods and chattels, estates and money, the latter in all instances a forfeit to the new Government, the former to enter an unknown wilderness, themselves and their little ones alike unprotected and unsupported, save by that deep faith in God and love to King and country which, with their personal devotion to their husbands, made of them heroines whose story of unparalleled devotion, hardships patiently borne, motherhood honorably sustained, industry and thrift perseveringly followed, enterprise successfully prosecuted, principle unwaveringly upheld, and tenderness never surpassed, has yet to be written, and whose share in the making of this nation remains to be equally honored with that of the men who bled and fought for its liberties.

---

* See the "Battle of the Beechwoods," by Ernest Cruikshank, page 13, first edition.

Of enterprising temperaments and of large experience in the commerce of the time, the Secords set on foot lumber and grist mills, together with the accompanying trade at Newark, Queenston and St. David's, and were soon counted among the successful men of the province. But they were more, they were Loyalists, and as such placed themselves upon the militia roll as defenders of Canada. As soldiers, each generation left a noble record to their children, and established a claim upon the gratitude of their country.

Major Ernest Cruikshank has done good service to Canadian history in, among much other similar research, collating and editing "Some Papers of an Early Settler," which appeared in the Welland Tribune, in which the Secords are prominently mentioned. From these papers we learn that, as Rangers in the Indian Department, may be found the names of John Secord, sr., John Secord, jr., David, Peter, Silas, Stephen, and Solomon Secord, all mentioned in a letter to Sir Guy Carleton from Col. John Butler, dated from Fort Niagara, 15th June, 1777: and also in the following year the same names are to be found on the muster-roll of Captain Walter Butler's company, being the first organized company of the celebrated partizan corps of Butler's Rangers.

That the Secords were settlers in the true sense of the term, and not merely freebooting adventurers, as has been most unjustly said of the men of Butler's Rangers, is shown by the fact that immediately on the close of the Revolutionary struggle two brothers, Peter and James Secord, applied to Governor Haldimand, through Col. Butler, for the ironwork and stones necessary to the furnishing of a saw and grist mill, to be built close to the Barracks at Niagara. These furnishings they intended to buy in Lower Canada, but were informed that "the mill could not be run as a private property, * but that the materials would be sent up, and the Secords allowed a fair profit for managing it."

"It is almost certain," says Major Cruikshank, "that this was the first mill in the Province of Upper Canada, and it was beyond question the first built in the Niagara district." Moreover, these same brothers appear in the list of farmers to whom wheat for sowing was to be supplied by the Government.

Early in 1780 Major David Secord, whose military record is as remarkable for "hairbreadth 'scapes" as for heroic action, applied for and received a grant of "a single lot in the township of No. 1 (Niagara), in the district of Nassau," and later another grant of six hundred acres near the present village of St. David's, which received its name from him. During the war of 1812 he lost all he had by the pillaging of the American soldiery at Queenston, in which loss others of his family and many of his neighbors suffered, and by the burning of St. David's, where mills, houses, cattle, horses, and securities for loans, all perished in the conflagration. To these were added losses at Toronto and other points in the course of the struggle.

* The country then being necessarily under military rule, private ventures of the kind were forbidden, lest the claims for indemnity on war losses should become unduly heavy, or form a source of temptation to recklessness.

The Secords were all active defenders of their country. The present writer has seen on various regimental rolls in the Archives at Ottawa the names of Major David Secord, Lieutenant Courtland Secord, Quarter-Master Daniel Secord, Captain Elijah Secord, Lieutenant John Secord, Sergeant James Secord, (this was undoubtedly Laura Secord's husband; under date of 29th June, 1812, he is enrolled as Sergeant in Capt. Geo. Law's Company, 1st Lincoln Militia.) To these may be added others of the name, viz: Abraham Secord, Edwin Secord, John Secord (age given in the company roll, 19), Joseph Secord, Solomon Secord, Stephen Secord—a list of loyal and patriotic men of one race it would be hard to match.

Nor was the Ingersoll family, so soon to be united by a marriage with the Secords, less distinguished for loyalty and military ardor. In Vol. 15, M. G. Dominion Archives may be found the entry, dated 5th September, 1805, "Thomas Ingersoll, Captain of the Militia of Oxford, London District." This militia consisted of one captain (Thomas Ingersoll), one ensign, three sergeants, three corporals, and twenty-five rank and file, 4th June, 1805; but in 1804 the composition of said militia is stated as, one lieutenant, one ensign, three corporals, one drummer, and forty-five rank and file.

No doubt much fuller proof of military service than one meagre record could be found were the militia archives of that date to be consulted. It is, however, certain from other sources that Charles Ingersoll fought in 1812-15, and at the time of his sister's famous exploit was lying wounded at St. David's. Later in life he held prominent public positions of trust in the gift of the Government, and was also a highly respected merchant and trader.

James Ingersoll, the younger brother, was a magistrate of high repute, and occupied a foremost position in the militia, in which he held the rank of lieutenant-colonel at the time of his death, which event took place on the 9th August, 1883, when he had been Registrar of Oxford County fifty-two years.

It was during the years of Capt. Thomas Ingersoll's residence in Etobicoke, then, as to-day, a flourishing township, that James Secord married Laura Ingersoll. Certain township records show that within that period James Secord and his mother Sarah applied for certain permissions to prosecute a business; thus we arrive at the conclusion that Mrs. Sarah Secord was at that period a widow. When or where the marriage of the two young people was performed, or who officiated on the occasion, we have no record; judging from the conditions of the time we may fairly assume that the holy ceremony was performed at her father's house, and that the clergyman who united the future heroine to her young husband was the old friend of the two families, whose parish extended from the banks of the Niagara to beyond Ancaster, the Rev. Mr. Addison. Of their private life subsequently we know little, beyond the statement made by a daughter of the heroine, that "their married life was a most happy one," and that "at the date of the Battle of Queenston Heights (Oct. 13, 1812,) their family consisted of four daughters and one son." Two daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Secord subsequently to the war.

Henceforward, so far as available records go, the history of both the Secords and Ingersolls is absorbed in the history of The War of 1812.

Not long was it to remain so! The strife that proved to the full the patience and heroism of Canadian men, brought to the surface the devotion and courage of Canadian women. Loyalty is a principle, not an epithet.

The first year of the war was past, and the invaders had gained nothing. Irritated by the want of success of their arms, the American people, always excepting the saving few, rated the Government, and the Government replied by throwing into the field all the money and forces it could raise. By land and water the struggle was continued, and during the first portion of the campaign of 1813 the Americans scored several important successes. In June they held Fort George, and it had become the headquarters of their general, who, irritated at finding he had picked up a shell with nothing in it, inflicted on the inhabitants within his limits, which covered Queenston and reached on towards Burlington, many unnecessary restrictions. Every male from the age of the boy to that of the octogenarian was put on parole, or forbidden to leave his immediate home on any pretence whatever.

General Vincent had retreated before the invading force to Burlington Heights, and the situation looked very unpromising, mainly owing to the absence of necessary reinforcements, when on the advice of Lieut.-Col. John Harvey, Deputy Adjutant-General and principal staff-officer to the division, who had been afforded an opportunity of reconnoitring the enemy's position, General Vincent turned the scale of events in some measure by a successful night sortie upon the enemy, on the 5th of June, at Stoney Creek. Seeing that the Loyalists, though cast down, were by no means destroyed, General Dearborn thought to crush them in another quarter, and in some measure retrieve the prestige lost at Stoney Creek; and it seemed a very easy thing to do. At the cross-roads at Beaver Dams, by which only could Vincent receive supplies or reinforcements, was posted, in Decau's (or DeCew's) stone house, Lieutenant Fitzgibbon with a picked company of thirty men, all volunteers, several of them veterans of the 49th—Brook's old regiment, and to which Fitzgibbon belonged—and others, cadets of the York and the Lincoln militia, in charge of certain stores. To take this post was to open up the whole peninsula, and for this errand Col. Boerstler, a gallant officer who had already distinguished himself, was ordered to prepare himself. He was in command of the 14th United States Infantry, one twelve and one six-pounder field guns, with ammunition wagons, etc., a few cavalry, and volunteers; in all, six hundred and seventy-three men—a mountain to crush a mouse! But so confident were the Americans of their ultimate success in annexing Canada—"the people" indeed regarding it for some time as a mere walkover—that they were heedless of proper precaution in an enemy's country, and talked—among themselves, to be sure; but the old proverb, "stone walls have ears," was exemplified on this occasion; for hints of the intended night surprise fell from the lips of certain the American soldiers in the house of James Secord, where, by the right of might, the invaders were wont to make themselves free of such comforts as it afforded.

James Secord had been desperately wounded at the Battle of Queenston Heights, and was at home under parole. But Lieutenant Fitzgibbon must be warned: his chance against the force that was to surprise him was nil. Moreover the country must be saved. And who could do it? The dilemma was soon settled: the loyal heart of the devoted wife was touched to the core at the peril of the time, and Laura Secord, rising to the occasion, essayed a task from which strong men might justly shrink.

Whoever now should travel from Queenston to Beaver Dams would find a fine stone road to traverse all the way. Skirting the lovely and fertile vale of St. David's, he would be filled with admiration, not more of the natural scenery than of the fine agricultural district dotted with substantial homes that would greet his eye on every hand. On the north-west, as he advanced, another fertile valley of great extent would come into view. At three points within the valley the church spires and tall chimneys of manufacturing villages would meet his vision, while on the shores of the blue waters of Lake Ontario,—stretching away in the distance, two considerable port towns would be distinguishable. At the back of the valley the traveller's eye would rest upon high bluffs, richly wooded, curving south-westerly, and losing themselves in the high plateau on which he was advancing. He would also observe with much admiration the stupendous piece of engineering that crosses the valley from the high land at his feet to the lake shore, the Locks of the Welland Canal; and travelling a little further, until the canal itself crossed his path, he would be stopped by a magnificent cantilever bridge. Turning to the left of the bridge, about fifty yards from the river bank, he would see a fine memorial stone to the memory of the killed at Beaver Dams.

Not such was the valley nor such the road in 1812, when Laura Secord essayed her journey of patriotism and mercy. The whole of the valley was a swamp traversed by innumerable creeks, full of wild creatures, and across which no path led. The road was a quagmire, and, moreover, was not open to peaceful travel. To have pursued a direct route to Fitzgibbon at DeCew's would have been a trying and toilsome journey indeed, but the delicate woman, the mother of five little children, was forbidden even that. The enemy's pickets were out on all the roads; she would have to travel through the swamp, climb the heights at Twelve-Mile Creek, push her way through the beech woods, and reach DeCew's from the back. The distance involved was the smallest item of the terrible journey. The thickets of the swamp, with its dense underbrush, the lurking-place of the wolf, the wild-cat, the bear, and the rattlesnake; the pathless wilderness with its oozy bottom, its solitude, its terror, these were the real hardships, even the mountain, its steep sides, its brawling stream, its dark mantle of virgin forest was not so terrible, for, once upon it, she might meet a British picket; she did not count on Indians, a sufficient terror in themselves if come upon unawares.

But duty had to be done, and Laura Secord did it. Leaving her home, her sick husband and young children—not without many a scalding tear, we may be sure, though all signs of agitation had to be concealed—the brave woman set forward on her journey, all unprepared for it indeed, for she did not dare alter her usual early morning attire by one lota, and had to circumvent three American sentries before she reached St. David's, one at her own gate, where the pretence of a strayed cow sufficed, the others by the true story of a sick brother at St. David's.

At St. David's she entered the swamp, known to the older settlers still as the Black Swamp, through which she guided herself by those signs of the points of the compass known to most settlers in those times. But she lost herself more than once, and the moon was rising as she reached the further end. All that long, hot summer's day, from daybreak to moonlight, on the 23rd of June, she had traversed the haunted depths of the forest, alone, hungry, faint, and, for the most part of the way, ragged and shoeless. Even to-day we can judge how short a time it would take to destroy every article of attire in a thicket full of thorns and briars, of branches and fallen trees, of water and bog. Wild creatures alarmed her, for the rattlesnake often strikes as he springs his alarm, and the wild-cat drops from the high branches without warning, or pursues his prey perseveringly until he is sure of his aim. Once only she faltered, and it was at the dread cry of wolves; but they passed at a distance, and she went on trusting more than ever to the Hand that guides the world.

Crossing by means of a fallen tree the Twelve-Mile Creek, then a swollen and considerable stream, for rains had been heavy for days previous, the heroine climbed slowly and painfully the steep sides of "the mountain," and on the ridge encountered a British sentry. O joyful sight! A friend once more! By him she is directed to Fitzgibbon, still however, some miles distant. Her heart is lighter, for she is within British lines. But oh, how heavy are her feet! She enters at length upon a little clearing, the trees have been felled, and their twigs and branches strew the ground; they crack beneath her tread. Suddenly she is surrounded by ambushed Indians, and the chief throws up his tomahawk to strike, regarding the intruder as a spy. Only by her courage in springing to his arm is the woman saved, and an opportunity snatched to assure him of her loyalty. Moved by pity and admiration, the painted chief gives her a guide, and at length she reaches Fitzgibbon delivers and verifies her message, and faints.

It is a wonderful story. To-day, when we are lost in admiration of the pluck of a Stanley, a Jephson, and a Stairs, with their bands of men diving into the heart of Africa, we may reasonably ask ourselves which was the greater, theirs or Laura Secord's. The distinction is only a difference of climatic conditions; the end was the same, the unity and glory of the British Empire, and the heroism is surely equal.

Fitzgibbon's prompt action, his success, and his promotion for it, are matters of history. To Mrs. Secord he was ever grateful, and never failed to show it on occasion. Promotion came to him, but there was no reward for Laura Secord, whose self-denying devotion to her king and country led to it. Still, we are glad to say, not wholly unrecognized:

"When in the summer of 1860, the Prince of Wales visited Queenston, the veteran soldiers of the Canada side of the Niagara frontier signed an address to His Royal Highness. Mrs. Secord claimed the privilege of signing it. 'Wherefore?' was asked. She told her story, and it was allowed that she eminently deserved a place among the signers. Her story was repeated to the Prince of Wales. He was greatly interested, and learning that the heroine had not much of this world's goods sent her $500 soon after his return home in attestation of his appreciation of her patriotism"—Benson J. Lossing, in private letter to the writer, 1884.

Nor did she look for reward, save that achieved by the success of her errand. But to-day, when we are gradually awakening to a better appreciation of the heroes who gave us, by preserving to us, our liberties, we know that Laura Secord ought to find a place among them. We have been less susceptible to greatness than the ancients, in whose Pantheon the deities were not all gods. Nevertheless, we have not been wholly unmindful; we have contemplated doing the memory of Laura Secord some honor; we have approached our Provincial Legislature for a grant to be expended on marking her last resting-place, in Drummondville Cemetery, with a memorial stone somewhat worthy of her and of us. We are ready to open a subscription list on the part of the men and women of Ontario, if it should prove desirable to supplement such grant as we may obtain, in order to carry out to the full our sense of the heroine's deserts. But let us not be laggards; time flies!

Within the last decade a great awakening of interest in the details of our history has been remarked in our literature, and it is not to be wondered at that the romantic story of Laura Secord's heroism has touched the imagination of our poets. Mair, Machar and Jakeway have sung of her in harmonious strains, while many a laurel has been laid on her lowly tomb by others. Mrs. J. D. Edgar, whose fine volume, "Ten Years of Peace and War," forms so valuable an addition to our historical records, in telling Mrs. Secord's story, says: "As to Laura Secord's reward, it has come to her in the fame that rests on her name whenever the story of 1812 is told."

"The heroine lived until the year 1868, and sleeps now in that old cemetery at Drummondville, where lie so many of our brave soldiers. There is no 'Decoration Day' in Canada: but if there were, surely this woman is entitled to the laurel wreath."

And in writing on a matter less directly dealing with the story of woman's heroism, Mrs. Herbert says: "It gave Gen. Herbert and myself the greatest pleasure and interest, last week, to visit Niagara and its ever-memorable surroundings, especially the field of Lundy's Lane. I trust the spot where Laura Secord rests will be marked by a monument worthy of the brave and noble spirit we all must honor."

As sings Charles Sangster:—

"The hero deed can not expire,
The dead still play their part.

    Raise high the monumental stone!
A nation's fealty is theirs,
And we are the rejoicing heirs,
The honored sons of sires whose cares
We take upon us unawares,
    As freely as our own."

S. A. CURZON.

to the heroine come in private of her appre-

know ss sus-were have ve ap-ng her some-on the apple-sense of our ed at ation

nious
Mrs. mis so
story, rests

eme-is no titled man's atest

suraura
oble

N.

34
394846c

