A FAREWFLL. Do not tell me to forget thee! Thou has round my memory twined, Since the day when first I met thee,

This hopeless love hath so enwound thee; I cannot tear thee from my heart; All my hopes are c'ustered round thee— Thou art of my life a part.

Deeply, fervently, I loved thee,
Vainly, deeply, love the yet;
Doubt not, for years have proved me—
Years which brought but vain regret,

Fondly to my heart I pressed thee, Dreaming of the blisful years; And I kissed thee and carrossed thee— Kissed thee through thy falling tears. I will go; I cannot claim thee; We will meet no more in life; Sister, Friend, I cannot name thee,

Since I may not call thee Wife. I will go; but ever round thee Falls my blessing, like a light; With amaranths of love I crowned thee Now-I bury thee from sight.

In my heart's deep, strange recesses H.de thee, where no hope can bloom, Lips, and eyes, and golden tresses, -cold-in cryptic gloom I will go ; but ever o'er n e

The Great Bank Forgers—The Plot t Rescue them from Newgate Prison

The story of the plot to liberate the Bank of England forgers from Newgate was obtained yesterday from Mr. William A. Pinkerton, the well-known detective, Ladies' and Gentlemen's who was in London previous to and during the trial of Macdonnell and his associates. He arrived here on Sunday. Mr. Pinkerton says that the London officers learned of the attempt to free the prisoners by accident. Three Americans were the instigators of it. John W. Bidwell, a farmer and Justice of the Peace at Muskegon, in the Black River district in were a cousin of George Macdonnell from Brooklyn, and a man who passed under the title of Major. They began by open THE Subscriber begs to announce to his friends and the Public generally that he has leased and fitted up for a HOUSE OF ENTERTAINMENT the above delightful property on the MANAWAGONISH ROAD. movements. He sat at their back while they were riding on the top of a stage coach and overheard them discussing plans for the release of the forgers. He learned from their whispered conversation that they had been promised £1,000 each by the Americans for their services, and that they had already received the first instalment of the money. They were to receive the bulk of it the moment the forgers stepped outside of Newgate. The day following the stage incident one of the bribed turnkeys was intercepted as he was leaving the jail, and on being searched he was found in possession of letters addressed by Macdonell and one of the Bidwells to those who were plotting their escape. The letters contained full proof of their intentions. The turnkeys were placed under arrest, and are awaiting trial.

The Michigan Justice and his two confederates fied from London to avoid the punishment which threatened them. Five years' imprisonment would have been their sentence if convicted. The Old Jewry Sergeants made a searching investigation of the plot, during which they found out in some way of a neat trick by which the relatives and friends of the forgers contemplated swindling the turnkeys. The latter were to be handed their bribes as soon as they opened the avenue of escape. The money packages were to be padded out in such a way as to appear as if they each contained £1,000 in Bank of Eugland notes, while in reality there was not to be one-tenth part of that sum in them.

A Lively Night in Proche. [From the Pioche Record, Sept. 4.] Night before last Pioche, or at least a certain portion of its inhabitants, got drunk. There were drunks in the saloons ing in a "hurdy" ball room, drunks lying on sidewalks and boot-black stands, and more drunks affectionately caressing there were drunks of all imaginable kinds in every conceivable place. One lot of German drunks sang "Die Wacht am Rhein," with all the rich beauty of tone natural to the natives of Faderland until 1 o'clock, and then indulged in a sociable knockdown. Some whiskey drunks amused themselves by sticking bowie knives into barroom tables, and in "sling-in' their whistlers" around each other's ears. Besides tripping the light fantastic toe at the Lancour street "ball," the honest miners indulged in the terpsichorean art in the "hurdy" houses. The various "tigers" were extremely happy, and the keepers of all games rejoiced. POR PURIFYING THE BLOOD, nothing has ever been offered which can compare with this Extract of Sarsafarillal. It is found a great promoter of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the humors that rankle in the system at this season of the year. Many complaints have their origin in the spring, and in the causes above mentioned, for which no better remedy has ever been devised. By its use multitudes can spare themselves from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcerous scree, through which the system strives to rid itself of corruptions, if not assisted to do this through the natural channels of the body by an alterative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, or sores; cleanse it when you find its obstructed and sluggish in the veine; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will toll you when. Even where no particular disorder is felt, people enjoy better health, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and all is well; but with this pabulum of life disordered, there can be no lasting health, Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
