WHAT'S DONE

WITH THE OIL?

The Chatham News, which appears of booming the Raleigh oil regions, continues to tell most encouraging stories of the progress and prospects of the new field, of the big strikes of the new field, of the big strikes that have been already made, and of other big strikes that are confidently expected. If there are so many good wells in the Raleigh oil region as the Chatham paper talks about, it is a singular thing what they do with all the oil. The entire output of the Raleigh field is supposed to come to Sarnia via the L. E. & D. R., and those who have kept tab in the matter say that there have been only twenty-three car loads of Raleigh crude brought up altogether, and only three cars have come over the road since New Year's.—Sarnia Canadian.

"Certainly my dear Mrs. Brown, I will tell you why I do it, In the first place I am sure of the quality of the Shoes I buy at Turrill's.

Then I am positively certain that I can get there more stylish Shoes than I have ever been able to buy anywhere else. Besides, it's a great comfort to get a Shoe that is stylish, and that fits the foot nicely, without cramping the toes. Then again, I can buy Shoes there in all kinds of leather, in all sizes, and in all widths, and I know they are made as well as Shoes can be made, and just think of it! I pay only from two to three dollars per pair."

Mr. Aubrey White, Deputy Commissioner of Crown Lands for Ontario, delivered an instructive and practical address, entitled "History and Results of the Fire Ranging System in Ontario." Mr. White stated that in 1885 he was asked by Mr. Pardee, the then Commissioner of Crown Lands, to submit a memorandum embodying. Called to Deal With Panama Canal and Cuban Treattes.

Washington, March 6.—In obedience to the President's proclaimation, the Senate of the 58th Congress convened in extraordinary session at noon yesterday. A large crowd witnessed the ceremony. The President's proclaimation said the Senate had been called in extraordinary session to consider the Cuban reciprocity and Panama Canal treaties. The oath was administered to so Senators, who take office for six years. Of these seventeen were relected, as follows:—Allison (lowa), Clay (Ga.), Dillingham (Vt.), Fairbanks (Ind.), Foraker (Ohio), Gallinger (N. H.), Hansbrough (N. D.), Kittredge (S. D.). McEnerey (La.), Mallery (Fla.), (serving on appointment until the Legislature meets). Penrose (Penn.), Perkins (Cal.), Pettus (W. Va.), Platt (Conn.), Platt (N. Y.), Spooner (Wis.), Teller (Colo.). The thirteen new Senators, although one, Mr. Gorman, had previously served eighteen years in the Senate, are:—Ankeney (Wash.), Clarke (Ark.), Fulton (Ore.), Gorman (Md.), Heyburn (Idaho), Hopkins (Ill.), Latimer (S. C.), Long (Kas.), McCreary (Ky.) appoint rangers as Magistrates and their assistants as constables. Owing to the character of the men chosen by the lumbermen, however, the Government had not felt justified as yet mappointing many rangers as Magistrates. The cost of the supervision of the forests and the suppression of fires was divided equally between the lumbermen and the Government. The licenses required the rangers to keep a diary of their movements from day to day, and to note anything of interest which occurred on the limits. In this way a good deal of interesting information was obtained. It was not until 1887 that fire rangers were appointed on lands of the Crown. In 1885, at the inception of the system. 37 men were kept in the field, at a cost of $7,911. Last year 234 rangers were employed, at a total cost of $108,000. ton (Ore.), Gorman (Md.), Heyburn (Idaho), Hopkins (Ill.), Latimer (S. The fact is that the Pontiff's physical prostration is due to overwork and overexcitement, which, however, leaves his mental faculties perfectly clear, wonderfully so, indeed. Therefore, Dr. Lapponi thinks that a few days' rest will restore the Pope to his usual condition. The physician also hopes that the suspension of audiences will induce the numerous pilgrims and notable persons who are now in Rome to abandon the idea of seeing the Pontiff, and thus avoid causing the latter further fatigue, which might place him in serious langer. Splendid Victory Scored by the Op-Tokio, March 6.-The general elections have passed off calmly. The retions have passed off calmly. The returns received up to yesterday show that 183 members of the Constitutional Political Association, formed by the Marquis Ito, 92 Progressives, 14 Imperialists and 74 members of the Independent party have been elected. This gives the Opposition already 275 members out of a total of 375.

MR. KING'S ACCIDENT

Hooper King had a narrow escape from instant death out West this week. He was in charge of two carweek. He was in charge of two carloads of potatoes which he was bringing from Minnesota for the Northwood Produce Co., this city. Mr. King had to keep a fire in the stoves in the cars in which the potatoes were. He had just fixed the fires and left the potato car when an accident befel the train. The car Mr. King had just left was smashed to pieces and the potatoes were strewn all over the track. Had Mr. King remained in the car a second longer, he would in the car a second longer, he would have met instant death. The potatoes were gathered up, put in another car and brought all the way to Chatham. The accident happened west of Chicago.

BRITAIN'S FOOD SUPPLY.

PREMIER BALFOUR THINKS AN INQUIRY DESIRABLE.

Investigation Should Also be Made Into Conditions of Naval Warfare and Other Problems.

London, March 6.-Replying to a large and influential deputation which visited the Foreign Office to urge the appointment of a royal commission to inquire into the question of the securing of the food supply of Great Britain in time of war, Premier Balfour expressed the opinion that the danger to be met was not the exclusion danger to be met was not the exclusion of grain and the raw materials necessary for the country's national existence, but the cost of introducing them, and the question of price was ultimately a question of insurance. He admitted that an inquiry into the matter was advisable, because it would tend to allay some unfounded fears, as well as show that some of the difficulties of the situation could not be wholly removed. Mr. Balfour added that he thought the inquiry ought to include the questions of insurance, the conditions of modern maritime warfare, the tions of modern maritime warfare, the methods by which commerce could be protected and destroyed, and the amount of the actual grain supply of the country. He hoped, however, that nothing would be done to establish a Government machinery which supplied.

LORD ROBERTS JUSTIFIED.

Guards Scandal Aired in the House of Commons

London, March 6.-The Grenadiers Guards scandal was officially explained by Mr. Brodrick yesterday, and the responsibility for the suspension of Lieut-Colonel Kinloch was placed where it belonged. Lieut-Colonel Kinloch had convicted himself by his own testimony, the Commander-in-Chief being the judge. Mr. Brodrick's statement was unexpectedly strong, and Lieut-Colonel Kinloch's defenders were temporarily silenced. The important lacts were that the complaints presented by Lord Belhaven and Lord De [Saumarez had been followed by a military inquiry, and that subalterns were caned for military offences, as well as matters of social etiquette. The subaltern court-martial was revealed as a recognized agency of military discipline, and sentences the responsibility for the suspension of military discipline, and sentences for trivial offences were enforced with for trivial offences were enforced with extreme rigor.

Lord Roberts' action in disciplining a commander who failed to suppress such proceedings, was justified by the necessity of reforming existing scandals. Mr. Brodrick's statement was generally commented upon in the lobbies of the House of Commons. The talk about public school precedent has ended, and sensible journals are taking the tone of The Times, contending that the country is entitled to get its full money's worth in the army, and that subalterns' courts and brutal and degrading punishments are unworthy of British traditions.

Anyone may hate the wrong, but it requires strength to do the right.

Lord Stratheona said that Canadians were ready to defend their country and their homes with their lives. Another arsenal, he said, was being built at Ottawa.

TEMPESTUOUS VOYAGES.

Several Ocean Liners Damaged by Huge Waves.

New York, March 6.-Several Atlantic liners reached port, all bearing stories of an unusually rough crossing. The Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse showed many evidences of her battle with the waves. Her funnels were encrusted with salt, and the seas were so heavy that they boarded her decks and smashed five lifeboats. It was on Sun-day evening that the worst of the storm smashed five lifeboats. It was on Sunday evening that the worst of the storm was encountered by this vessel. Besides the damage to the lifeboats the flooring of the sun deck was smashed, davits were twisted, and owing to the breaking of dead lights a number of cabins were flooded, driving out the occupants.

The Oceanic met equally as bad weather, and, like the Kaiser Wilhelm, was compelled to go under reduced speed for five days.

Halifax, March 6.—The Allan Line steamer Numidian, with the weekly mails and passengers, arrived in port four days overdue. The steamer had a very rough passage, and one day she covered only 85 miles. One boat was smashed, and she sustained some slight deck damages. The steamer brought twelve cabin, 134 second-class and 216 steerage passengers. ond-class and 216 steerage passengers, nearly all of whom landed here.

FRIDAY, MARCH 6. HONESTY IN POLITICS.

Hugh Clark has begun well. His epigram, "the machine can never be nashed by another machine," strikes an excellent note, and should be pondered upon by the decent people of both parties, who are wearying of prolessionalism in our politics. - Toront

Mr. Clark, whose victory in Centre Bruce against the concentrated forces of the Ross Government, seems to have been very popular throughout Ontario, has struck the right chord. Occasionally one hears the doctrine of "fighting the devil with fire" preached, which simply means that the Conpervative managers should be as crooked politically as the Liberal "machine." This is a rotten political faith lo teach, for dishonesty pays no better in politics than in business.

Hugh Clark has shown that a man may win honestly. Better for the Conservatives to stay in opposition than win by crooked work. But the Conservatives may rest assured that before long the political vices of the Ontario Government will compass its destruction.

AN INDEPENDENT VIEW.

up Sunday evenings with Mary Clayton, has quit and has taken to the south ridge road on Sundays. The London News, which is as far from being Tory as the south pole is from the north, has this news on the Centre Bruce election:

"The Centre Bruce contest proves Ont: "The energy of industrial life in Western Ontario was never at a higher ebb than at present." one thing, and that is that the Grits have not got the Tories on the run. There is still fight left in the Whitney crowd, though the results of yesterday's contests do not affect the standing of the government. Mr. Ross has still a majority of five, with one meat, North Renfrew, vacant. How you in trouble, and if you haven't any trouble they will hunt them up for this constituency will go is a matter For conjecture. It is likely a Liberal a Conservative and an Independent will be in the field, and it is possible that a Tory may be elected. This would be bad for Mr. Ross, as it would leave him with a majority of but four in the house. This is, of course, not counting in this vicinity at present.

A few jumped the train Wednesday to see the ruins of Steward fire.

Will Hardy owns good horses, but had the misfortume to lose one of Mr. Gamey, the Manitoulin Tory, who has signified his intention of supportthe Ross government. There is one feature of the Centre Bruce election which looks bad for the Liberals, and that is that Premier Ross, Hon. Frank Latchford, minister of public works, and twenty-three Liberal members of both houses stumped the country for Mr. Stewart, the Liberal candidate, and yet he was defeated. This looks as though the Liberals have not the right kind of talk, or wise they made such an onslaught on Clark that they made a martyr of

GOLDWIN SMITH ON METHODISM.

Bystander in Weekly Sun. The spiritual enthusiasm which gave birth to Wesley's movement has gradually declined, and there remains a great ecclesiastical organization seeking to extend its influence, and for that purpose allying itself with political party, courting popularity, and doing homage to the powers that be. There is nothing in this at which we need be much surprised, or which we are called upon very much to blame. Enthusiasm is in its nature evanescent, and apt to fail, while or-ganization and vested interests re-

Sir Joseph Whitwell Pease, M. P.,

Down in Business.

Sir Joseph Whitwell Pease, M. P., the head of the great Darlington firm of coal and iron masters. recently made an assignment of its affairs for the benefit of its creditors, is, says a London paper, one of Mr. Gladstone's baronets, and was born at Darlington in 1828.

He was first elected to Parliament for South Durham in 1885, and after representing that constituency for twenty years transferred his services to the Barnard Castle Division at the redistribution of seats in 1885. He is now the father of the Liberal members of the House of Commons, in which his second son, Mr. Joseph Albert Pease, represents the Saffron Walden Division of Essex, and his nephew, Mr. H. Pike Pease, sits for Darlington, while Sir Joseph's eldest son, Mr. Alfred Edward Pease, was also M. P. for the Cleveland division until his recent resignation.

The fortunes of the Pease family were founded by Edward Pease, the Quaker, "Father of Rallways," who was the friend of George Stephenson, and who obtained in 1821 the royal assent to the Stockton & Darlington Railway. This Joseph Pease was the first Quaker member of Parliament, to which he was elected in 1832, and his objection to taking the oath led to bitter debates. Sir Joseph was the first Quaker to accept a baronetcy. He made his maiden speech in Parliament on June 7, 1866, in the debate on Mr. Gladstone's reform bill.

Corporate Farming

"Corporate farming" is coming. By this we mean the ownership and management of farms by corporations. An instance of what can be done in this line is afforded by the interesting article about the Funk farm noted in a recent number of Orange Judd Farmer. We expect to see such instances multiplied in the future. It will frequently be found advisable for several adjoining farmers to merge their interests into a wingle company, incorporated under mers to merge their interests into a single company, incorporated under the corporation laws of the state. The management of such farm companies will of course be divided among the principal owners in such way that the talents and abilities of way that the talents and abilities of each shall be utilized to the best ad-vantage. There is a chance here for the co-operative idea to be worked out to the profit of all concerned. And in many cases also this idea can be utilized without interfering at all with the independence of each farm family. This topic is one of all with the independence of section of the farm family. This topic is one of big interest, and we would like to see its pros and cons discussed. Our friends who know of instances of this kind, whether successful or unsuccessful, whether successful or unsuccessful or un kind, whether successful or unsuccessful, are requested to write us about the same. Certainly there are important advantages to be gained by consolidation of farms in certain cases, but no general rules can be applied to the proposition—Orange Ludd Farmer.

Atliments of Morses.

A disease that ends in a queen growth on the very poll or top of the head of the horse is called 'poll evil.' The trouble is quickly observed owing to the habit of the korse in stretching his neck straight out in front and makes a pitiable spectacle of the patient. There is little left to do for the poor creature except to the patient. There is little left to do for the poor creature except to put it out of its misery.

A common blemish is the curb, a rounding of the bone of the hind leg just below the back point of the hock. This formation does not injure the serviceableness of the driver appreciably. If patiently rubbed when it first appears, the curb can be reduced, the bone absorbing the growth if not too prominent.

A Neat Booklet on Patents

We have received from Messrs. Marion & Marion, Patent Attorneys, of Montreal, an admirable compendium of condensed information on the subject of Patents and everyday statistical data. This little book, entitled "Invention," is just the proper size for the vest pocket, 2 1-2 x 4 1-2 in, hound in handsome celluloid covers, and contains not only quadrille-ruled blank page. for memor anda, but also 28 pages of interesting printed matter, including quite a surprising amount of novel and assful information not heretofore published. Among the items of information contained in this compact little volume are graphically illustrated tables showing the growth of the United States and Canada Patent Offices, Geographical Distribution of United States and Canadian Patentees, Distribution of Canadian Patentees, Distribution of Canadian Patentees, the Inventiveness of Canadian Patentees among the different countries, the Inventiveness of Canadian Patentees among the United States and Canada, the World's Greatest Inventiveness of the United States and Canada, the World's Greatest Inventiveness, and legal markings of patented articles, in addition to the very full and useful description of the mode of patent and trade mark procedure and the extensive equipment of Messrs. Marion & Marion for their work. A full schedule of costs is also given, and a highly interesting list of some of the fields of invention in which they have obtained patents.

The book is prepared especially for the use of the technical and industrial clients of Mrssrs. Marion & Marion, and does this enterprising firm much credit. We understand that it is to be had from them by the readers of this paper on request, for 10 cents.

All Kinds of Kisses.

A serious book, on a frivolous subfiect, by an eminent scholar—such is "The Kiss and Its History." It has been translated into English from the Danish of Dr. Christopher Nyrop, professor of romance philology in the University of Copenhagen, by William Frederick Harvey of Oxford, and, according to the preface, has also been translated into German, Swedish and Russian, and has gone through two editions in Denmark. Verily, the history of the kiss is a matter of universal interest. Dr.
Nyrop presents in the volume but little personal opinion; rather he contents shimself with weaving together proverbs of all peoples of all times on the subject of kissing, and gives, in addition, quotations from the poets who have rhymed of kisses—and they are no small number! For his quotations he has hunted in out-of-the-way places, and has sought them among the russess as well as the classes. For instance, the ladies of Germany have the poetical saying that "a kiss without a beard is like Vespers without the Magnificat," but the milkmaids of Jutland express a like idea by the rough-hewn proverb that "kissing a fellow without a quid of tobacco and a beard is like kissing a clay wall." That kisses are naughty the Italians deny, saying "that a mouth is none the worse for having been kissed," while the French proverb runs: "Bah! two kisses. What of that? They are exchanged like bullets that miss the mark, and honor is satisfied," and even cooler-blooded races agree to that, saying "a kiss can be washed off," though to this proverb there is a corollary which runs: "A kiss may indeed be washed away, but the fire in the heart cannot be quenched." Of stolen kisses there are many proverbs. "One returns a stolen kiss," say the honest Germans, and the Spanish have the same idea: "Dost thy mother chide thee for having given me a kiss? Then take back, dear girl, thy kiss, and bid her hold her tongue." The learned author casts a glance at the proper number of kisses that ought to be bestowed at one time, and a page or two lightly

"Who's gone?" said Mr. Wædle fiercely.

"Mister Jingle and Miss Rachel—started off in a motor hired ten minutes since, and—"
"Quick!" shouted Mr. Wardle, "my car, at once! John, Harry—some of you—go and get the petrol! Tom, my respirator and spectacles this instant! Come along, Pickwick, we'll catch 'em in less than no time—out of the way, Winkle, out of the way! Here we are—jump in, Pickwick. Stand clear there!"

And in less time than it takes to de-

And in less time than it takes to describe the event the two intrepid old gentlemen had started on their chase. Away they went, down the narrow lanes, jolting in and out of the cart-ruts and tumping against the hedges on either side.

bumping against the hedges on either side.

"Is it—is it safe?" mumbled Mr. Pickwick behind his respirator, as he peered anxiously through his goggles into the surrounding darkness.

"Hope so," replied Wardle, fumbling with the speed-gear. "Wish I understood this blessed machinery better, though. Only had a motor a week, and—"

A violent cannon against a signpost cut the remark short.

For a while there was silence. Them Mr. Pickwick, who had been saffling uneasily, broke the silence once more.

mr. Pickwick, who had hear sniffing uneasily, broke the silence once more.

"My dear good friend," he gasped,

"what is this abominable smell?"

"Acetylene," rejoined Mr. Wardle abruptly. "Something gone wrong with the lamp. Look out, sharp corner here—and now we go downhill. Sit tight!"

But to comply with this direction was impossible. Mr. Pickwick was thrown up and down in his seat like a cork, this goggles were jerked from his nose, his cap blown like a feather towards the sky, his whole body converted into one tremendous bruise.

"Ah, we're moving now," cried Mr. Wardle exultingly—and indeed they were moving. Fields, hedges and trees seemed to rush from them with the velocity of a whirlwind. Suddenly Mr. Pickwick exclaimed with breathless eagerness: "Here to rush from them with the velocity of a whirlwind. Suddenly Mr. Pickwick exclaimed with breathless eagerness: "Here they are!"

Yes, a few hundred yards ahead of them was a motor, on which the well-known form of Jingle was plainly discernible. It was traveling quite slowly, and Mr. Wardle increased his speed yet further with a shout of triumph. "We have them, Pickwick, we have them!" To cried, while the car flew like a streak of lightning. And then suddenly—a bump—a crash—and Mr. Wardle and Mr. Pickwick found themselves seated in the middle of the road, which was strewn with fragments of their machine. Two members of the constabulary were coling up a rope which, stretched across the highway, had procured their downfall. A third policeman licked his pencil, and produced a notebook.

"Thought our rope would spoil your little game. Thirty-seven miles an hour, I make it. Names and addresses, please?" Jingle's car had 'stopped a short way, ahead. "Ta-ta, Pickwick," he shouted, "good-bye, Wardle—measured mile—twigged 'em directly—slowed down. If Incky—option of fine—probably impriaonment. Well, so long!" and restarting his machine, he disappeared.—"Punch."

Scared Off by Dressmakers

Women's love of dress, Henry Waldorf rancis declares in the "Arena," is one if the potent reasons why many roung men do not rush into matrimony rancis declares in the "Arena," is one of the potent reasons why many roung men do not rush into matrimony wen when they are earning respectable ages. He adds: "They see no chance saving for a 'rainy day' with a wife ho as a girl became imbued with the ove of dress. They have female 'cousna'—not to speak of 'nearer ones'—and emale acquaintances, single and married. They hear their conversations and their repetition of their friends' gossip; and this is the sort of thing they listen to: 'I can't visit Miss Brown and her friends the way I dress.' (It is not shabby and it is not worn, but it has been perhaps in frequent use). 'I don't see how that girl dresses on her income.' (An innuendo that likewise has not escaped the thoughts of the young man). 'I am ashamed to be seen again in this costume,' etc.—with the young married women as particular as the single girls. Certainly no one wants a girl to dress shabbily or dowdily if it can be avoided; and with the quantities and varieties of dress goods to be had nowadays it is possible to dress neatly at a modest cost, especially if a girl has any taste and will learn to be handy with the needle—an accomplishment that the vast majority of girls could acquire if they would make an effort. But when it comes to wanting a new dress for every occasion; when it comes to deriding a costume, not because it has been in use over a given time; when it comes to striving to dress as if one possessed an independent income to be used solely for dressing, and as if dress were the main object of life (and, by the way, it is offly the parvenu and the most ignorant of servant girls who make displays of themselves upon all occasions); when a large majority of women think of little else than dress (frequently, as the observant young man has found out, procured at the expense of landlord, grocer, and butcher, which is decidedly not honest)—it is an altogether different story, which at least suggests why the modern young man is holding aloof from matrimony. butcher, which is decidedly not honest)— it is an altogether different story, which man is holding aloof from matrimony.

He is not telling the girls the reason, but his male friends know it. He admires the girls—he likes to take them out in a splendid costume, which draws forth complimentary remarks and attention—but he is not asking them to marry him."

When England is Swamped.

The geologist was entertaining the habitues of Mulcahey's with an interesting story about the gradual encroachment of the ocean upon the coast of Great Britain, says the New York "Tribune." Among other things, he told them that Father Neptune annually bit out and swallowed a tract of land off the east coast of the country named equal in extent to Gibraltar; that between Cornwall and the Seilly Isles a tract of 227 square miles has been gradually covered with the waters of the Atlantic; that in Yorkshire there are twelve towns which have been submerged within the memory of waters of the Atlantic; that in Yorkshire there are twelve towns which have been submerged within the memory of man, in Suffolk at least five; that visitors to Coromer, in Norfolk, are shown a rock far out in the ocean on which once stood a church which was then in the center of the village. So great, he said, has been this gradual, but steady, encroachment of the sea that the total area of England, which in 1867 was 32,599,397 acres, had in 1900 shrunk to 325,549,019 acres, a loss in that period of more than 40,000 acres. Thus, he explained, England is being swallowed up by the Atlantic at the rate of about 2,000 acres annually.

"How long will it take to swally up the hull dom country?" asked Mulcahey, who had been an intensely interested listener.

"Let me see," replied the geologist. "At the rate mentioned it will take about five hundred years to engulf a million acres, and in about sixteen billion years the whole of England will be under water."

"Bully for that," fervently exclaimed Mulcahey. "It serves 'em good an' right, bad cess to 'em. I only hope I'll live to see the day it comes to pass," and he went behind the bar to fill an order for the drinks.

order for the drinks.

"And is he married yet?"
"No, bedad—and a mighty good thing it is for his wife."—From "Ally Sloper's Half-Holiday."

Criticism Disarmed.

A good instance of the truth of the saying that "a smart answer turneth away wrath" was heard, the other day, in a French painter's studio. The painter in question had a fixed rule that none of his pupils were to be allowed to smoke in his atelier. One day, however, he came into the room, and distinctly saw that one of the pupils had a lighted eighted in his fingers, which he was endeavoring ineffectually to concea. With a style of somewhat heavy banter the painter went up to him and remarked: "That is a curious kind of pencil that you have got there, my young friend. May I ask what you propose to draw with it?" "Clouds," was the ready answer, and the roar that went up from the other students plainly showed the artist that the sense of the house was against him.

The mayor, the members of the city Board of Works, and the city engineer, left this aftermoon for Windsor upon the invitation of the Ontario Asphalt Block Pavement Company, who are building a new factory in Windsor. This company put down one of their pavements in Windsor.

ODNTRACT SIGNED

Mr. VanVlack, president of the Dominion Paving Co., Toronto, has signed the contract for the new pave-ment on William street from Col-borne street to Stanley avenue. The borne street to Stanley avenue. The contract was signed yesterday and Mr. VanVlack says that he will go on with the work as soon as weather permits. The pavement will be wooden blocks, chemically treated with carbolite carbolinum and will be laid on a cement sub-structure. Mr. VanVlack says that he is ready to finish the William street pavement as soon as the weather will allow it.

WHERE THEY ARE

Marbles no longer occupy the attention of the young lads of the Maple City. Even playing in mud puddles has lost its charm, and tops are laid aside. This lack of interest in seasonable sports may strike the uninitiated as strange, and the men who used to complain about the boys playing on the corner at nights now feel lonesome, for the boys have disappeared.

The mysterious absence of the boys

The title roles in the North side company are played by Con. Delahun-ty, Roy Macdonald, Harry Nagle, Duff, Morrison and Norman Warren. Last night they played Reuben in New York, to a fair house. To-night, they play Jesse James in Missouri. There is considerable rivalry between the two theatrical companies. Campbell's two ineatrical companies. Campbell's crowd are hanking om a great seenle production which they are now rehearsing. They claim that its appearance will make the North side look like real barnstormers. The piece is called A Stereotyped Edition of Florodora. Dyke Campbell plays the title role.

CUAL CONTRACT

Water Commissioners were Fortunate in Dealing with Lake Erie Co.- Were Fairly Treated

At the regular monthly meeting of he Water Commissioners in the Sec retary's office last evening the Commissioners highly congratulated them selves on having had such an excellent coal contract with the Lake Erie Coal Company, which has supplied the waterworks with coal during the past

The Coal Company, however, wrote saying that the price would have to be raised for a time on account of the stampede of the cars, until the Shenango could cross Lake Erie. The Commissioners thought that as the Coal Company had dealt very fairly with them that they should agree to the temporary increase.

Dr. Bray—The contract expires April 1st, and we'll agree to the advance and ask them to continue sending the coal till May 1st before we advertise for tenders. Have we much coal on hand at present, Mr. Jones f Supt. Jones—No, not a great deal; we loaned the Gas Co. enough to tide them over the other night when they would have run out.

Mr. Sheldon—It's only right that while there's coal in town the gas and waterworks should have it rather than the city go without water or light.

A rebate of $1.40 was granted Mrs. Wemp, also John Carpenter rebate of $10.

A very interesting statement of the waterworks since the city took hold of it in 1895 up to November, 1902, gotten up by T. K. McKeand, was read and discussed. Mr. McKeand was heartly thanked by the Board for his work.

Commissioner Sheldon thought the rates for small houses, such as four or five room dwellings, was too high, or five room dwellings, was too high, as it was mostly poor people who could not afford to buy a meter. He therefore gave notice of motion that the rate for four room houses be $3.00, five room $4.00 and over five rooms $5.00, and that the meter rate be 20 cents per thousand gallons, a reduction of five cents per thousand. DEATH TO FOREIGNERS.

Outbreak in China Regarded as Im-

Victoria, B.C., March 6 .- According to advices from Pekin an outbreak, and with it a carnival of murder exceeding that of the Boxer uprising, is regarded by many as imminent. Correspondents of Chinese papers at Pekin are sending columns telling of the duplicity of the Empress-dowager and of the threatened outbreak. The North China Daily News, one of the best informed journals of the east, has received advices that the Empress-dowager and Yunglu, the Grand Chancellor, are known to be aiding the movement of Tung Fubsiang the Grand Chancellor, are known to be aiding the movement of Tung Fuhsiang in Kansu, and on the authority of a Chinese of high literary rank at Pekin the Shanghai paper says that while the Empress-dowager is issuing edicts commanding reforms on western lines, and pretending to initiate reforms, she is secretly sending instructions to viceroys and governors prohibiting the inauguration of foreign methods within their jurisdictions. The Empress is also safe to be sending notifications to some viceroys that Tung Ruhsiang is to be viceroys that Tung Euhsiang is to be aided in marching his army to Pekin to escort Puchun, son of Prince Chun and ex-heir apparent to the throne. On their arrival Kwoning, the present Emperor, is to be made away with. The Emperor, says the Chinese correspondent, the representatives of the various foreign powers, and all foreigners in the capital, as well as in the provinces are to meet the same fate provinces, are to meet the same fate without distinction.

POSTAGE ON PERIODICALS.

Immediate Reduction in the Rate to Great Britain

Ottawa, March 6.-For several years Sir William Mulock, Postmaster-Gen eral, has been endeavoring to secure the consent of the English Postoffice authorities to a reduction in the rate of postage upon newspapers and periodi cals passing between the two countries The matter was brought to the attention of the Imperial conference last summer, and a motion favoring reduc tion was carried, but up to the present the English postal authorities did not see their way to agreeing to such a proposition. Amongst other things, it was represented that loss of revenue would be occasioned, and, moreover, they did not feel at liberty to make an exception in favor of Canada alone of all the British possessions. Upon the appointment of Right Hon. Austen Chamberlain as his Majesty's Postmas-ter-General, Sir William Mulock press-d the subject word his attention ter-General, Sir William Mulock pressed the subject upon his attention, and also informed Mr. Chamberlain that her rate Canada was prepared at once without waiting for England to reduce outgoing mail matter. Under the terms of the universal postal convention the consent of two countries is necessary before any reduction of postage on mail matter between them can be made, and therefore so long as the Imperial Government's consent was withheld Canada could not reduce her outgoing rate. Yesterday this consent was received, and to-morrow the reduction will be gazetted and go into effect. Therefore on and after Saturday, the 7th inst., the sate of postage on newspapers and on and after Saturday, the 7th inst., the rate of postage on newspapers and periodicals posted in Canada for transmission to the United Kingdom of Geeat Britain and Ireland will be the same as if for delivery in Canada. Doubtless this important concession will lead to a very considerable increase in the circulation of Canadian newspapers in Great Britain.

BARRIE'S NEW HOSPITAL $20,000 Institution Opened Yesterday-Call Sustained.

Barrie, March 6.-An immense crowd of people from Barrie and surrounding country attended the formal opening of the new Royal Victoria Hospital here yesterday. The hospital, which is yesterday. The hospital, which is one of the best equipped in the Province, and has accommodation for forty patients, is a splendid structure on a commanding site, overlooking Queen's Park. With furnishings it cost $20,000, and is opened almost free of debt. Warden Murphy made the formal opening, and speeches were made by the President, Rev. THE FEAR OF HUMBUG

Prevents Many People From Trying & Good Medicine

Stomach troubles are so common and in most cases so obstinate to cure that people are apt to look with suspicion on any remedy claiming to be a radical, permanent cure for dyspepsia and tindigestion. Many such pride themselves on their acuteness in never being humbugged, especially in medicines.

This fear of being humbugged can be carried too far, so far, in fact, that many people suffer for years with weak digestion rather than risk a little time and money in faithfully testing the claims made of a preparation so reliable and universally used as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are vastly different in one important respect from ordinary proprietary medicines for the reason that they are not a secret patent medicine, no secret is made of their ingradients dicines for the reason that they are not a secret patent medicine, no secret is made of their ingredients, but analysis show them to contain the natural digestive ferments, pure aseptic pepsin, the digestive acids, Godden Seal, bismuth, hydrastis and nux. They are not cathartic, neither do they act powerfully on any organ, but they cure indigestion on the common sense plan of digesting the food eaten thoroughly before it has time to ferment, sour and cause the mischief. This is the only secret of their success.

success.

Cathartic pills never have and never can cure indigestion and stomach troubles because they act entire-ach troubles because they act entirely on the bowels, whereas the whole trouble is really in the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken after meals digest the food. That is all there is to it. Food not digested or half digested is poison as it creates gas, acidity, headaches, palpitation of the heart, loss of flesh, and appetite and many other troubles which are often called by some other name. They are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package.

GARVER AT THE C. O. I.

The lecture given in the C. C. I. Hall last night by Leonard Garver, was a very interesting one indeed. It was very interesting one indeed. It was attended by a large number of Chatham's intelligent people, who, judging from the many complimentary remarks passed afterwards, were thoroughly delighted with the evening's entertainment.

The Garver lectured on Victor Hugo's great novel, "Les Miserables." He treated the career of Jean Valgean, the hero of the work, sllowing the workings of the man's conscience gean, the hero of the work, showing the workings of the man's conscience in the different phases of the life which he led, first as a boy of 17, when he undertook to support his sister and seven children, then as a convict at the galleys, where he was sent for stealing a loaf of bread to keep these seven children from starving. He then spoke of the man's struggle after 19 years of imprisonment, of the awakening of his conscience by the good old Bishop, of his attainment to influence and wealth, and also of the great struggle of his life when, after he had attained to attainment to influence and wealth, and also of the great struggle of his life when, after he had attained to this position of greatness and eminence under another name, he gave himself up into the hands of the law as the real Jean Valgean, although it caused him to be imprisoned again.

All through his life the struggle of right against wrong was displayed, proving conclusively that conscience is either the light that guides a man to all peace or the scorpion that whips him into all misery.

Mr. Garver's opening was especially fine, his language chaste and the sentiment of the purest and highest. The lecture lasted through two hours and was given without reference to any note. There were places, however, where Mr. Garver permitted his voice to drop so low that he was scarcely heard, and his delivery was so rapid that his audience could not fully follow him and he failed to make the best use of the full, rich voice with which nature has endowed him. It was a most enjoyable evening, and Mr. Paterson is to be congratulated upon bringing this class of an entertainment to Chatham.

Mr. Garver was introduced by Dr. A W. Thornton, of the C. C. I. Board.

During the evening also W. H. Brackin, Chatham's popular tenor, gave a number of solos. Miss Flossie Bogart acted as accompanist.

shipment of the very best made Scotch and Irish linens, which were tastefully displayed in the millinery show rooms. These linens are among the very finest ever shown in the Maple City, and the display was visited by large numbers of Chatham ladies who did not hesitate to express their delight.

One cloth shown was the exact duplicate of the linen used by the Duke and Dutchess during their recent trip through Canada. Another was almost the same pattern as that used at the wedding of Queen Wilhelmina. Some very pretty cloths were shown in the Louis XIV. pattern with the coat of arms in the centre and a fancy border.

Mr. Foreman was fortunate in purchasing these linens before the recent jump in the market, so that the prices are very reasonable. A number of imperfect cloths with weaver's imperfections are eagerly looked for and quickly bought up.

Mr. Foreman is indeed fortunate in procuring such a choice assortment of linens, and no housekeeper should fail to call and inspect his stock.

Legislation on Osculation.

Kissing will have to be done surreptitiously in Virginia, or those who kiss may be guilty of a middemeanor and punished by a fine of five dollars for each smack—that is, if a bill recently introduced in the Virginia Legislature becomes a law. The author of the unique greasure in question is Dr. R. B. Ware, a physician in good standing, who, like many other doctors, is firmly convinced that osculation spreads disease. Briefly, the provisions of the bill require that persons who insist upon kissing shall obtain a physician's certificate pronouncing them free from all contagious and infectious maladies. The text of the bill is as follows: "Whereus, kissing has been decided by the medical profession to be a medium by which contagious and infectious diseases are transmitted from one person to another, and whereas the prohibiting of such an offence will be a agreat preventive to the spreading of such diseases as pulmonary tuberculosis, diphtheria, and many other dangerous diseases, therefore, be it enacted by the General Assembly of Virginia, that it shall be unlawful for any person to kissanother unless he can prove by his family physician that he hasn't any contagious or infectious disease. 2. If physician factifies that the defendant has weak lungs he shall be found guilty of a misdemeanor, and the same penalty shall be simposed as if he had some contagious or infectious disease. 3. Any person violating the provisions of the first and second provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not less than one dollar nor more than five dollars for each offence." Commenting on this unique bill, the New York "Sun" says: "Dr. Ware seems to regard kissing loses half its satisfaction if mot reciprocated. As well smack a Parian statue as a lass who would not kissback. The learned doctor must know this, and therefore he will amend his bill to cure the oversight. As it stands mow, the gentle sex may osculate at will arequire or lovers the maidens of their choice, unless they are free from the suspicio

Blunders in Public Speaking.

Mr. Joseph Malins, in the "Prize Reciter," says: "A well-known public man was lately assured by the chairman that the assembly welcomed him with no underigned pleasure," at which the visitor deigned pleasure, at which the visitor was so embarrassed as to say, "I—I'm salways glad to be here—or anywhere else." Those at the recent Birmingham town's meeting, on the bill touching the municipalization of the tramways, probably err in asserting that it was the manyor who ordered an interrupter to six down and go out!" He was not as polite as a suburban councillor who delicately intimated that an opponent was downties afflicted with a slight impediment in its veracity." Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, when Mayor of Birmingham, was dess polite when he denied the 'allegation' of an opponent and repudiated the 'alligator.' In our presence a Gloucestershime speaker suggested that the pendof an opponent and repudiated the 'alligator.' In our presence a Gloucester-shire speaker suggested that the pending proposition 'be postponed to the future—or some other time.' The recent appointment by a Midland authority of a 'ady as medical officer brought a pretest 'against women becoming medical men;' which reminds one of the convening of a meeting of 'women of every class—regardless of sex or condition.' Sir Francis Scott: who commanded the late class—regardless of sex or condition. Sir Francis Scott, who commanded the late expedition in Ashantee, in subsequently reviewing his troops, said that if there had been any fighting there would have been many absent faces here to-day.' This reminds one of the scantily attend-ed meeting at which we heard the chair-cran say, I am sorry to see so many ab-sent faces here.'"

The Germ of Laziness

The newspaper report of the recent address of Dr. Stiles, a zoologist of the Department of Agriculture, before the Sanidary Conference of American Republics, rabout the hook-worm disease, has been reserved with impassioned interest by thousands of more or less afflicted readward. Dr. Stiles is the discoverer of this mailady, which he has named uncinariasis. He has just come back from studying in parts of the South where it flourishes. He says it is a bad disease, little understood, and almost always confused with stood, and almost always confused with malaria. It is what is the matter with many of the poor whites in the Southern Blates. Their laziness is abnormal, Dr. Stiles says. Their pitiable condition, due immediately to laziness and to their inferior physical and mental development, as more remotely due to the presence of this hook-worm disease among them for this hook worm disease among them for The clay-eaters and generations past. The clay-eaters and pickle-eaters of North Carolina owe their pickle-eaters of North Carolina owe their abnormal appetities to uncinariasis. The dazy crackers who send their infant chil-dren to work in mills have got it, too, but the children themselves, Dr. Stiles thinks, profit by the change in their en-wironment. He says that the disease can be cured, but that the physicians in the sand districts where it abounds most caust be taught to know its asymptometric. must be taught to know its symptoms and how to treat it

A newspaper, in telling of 'Dr. Stiles' discovery, cries in headline type that the germ of laziness has been found. That expresses the feelings of the general reader and accounts for his enthusiasm expresses the feelings of the general reader, and accounts for his enthusiasm over the discovery. Every man, remarks "Harper's Weekly," feels the germs of laziness working in him, and would like to have them killed out of him by treatment from the outside if possible. He is glad to lay the defects in his energy to the hook worm. But Dr. Stiles' hook worms seem not to be available for general use. They are real microbes, and so far as appears, they only flourish in districts, and under conditions favorable to their development. It is no wonder that they have been confused with malaris, for the symptoms of malaris and the symptoms of sin are very much alike, and the hook-worm symptoms resemble both. We want to hear more about the dook-worm. If he can be extirpated in the cracker with good results a worder waill have been done. The South American delegates who were told about him think he exists in their countries, too, and are going to search for him when they go home. Maybe he exists in the Philippines also. A traveller lately returned from those islands says that the Ellipines won't work, and that industrial development can only come with the introduction of Chinese labor. That sounds like hock worms.

In Chicago little Herbert Vance Taylor, son of a wealthy leader of fushion, suddenly disappeared. The neighborhood was searched for him and the machinery of the whole police force of Chicago was set in operation to find the child, on the theory that he had been kidnapped. No trace of the boy could be found.

Four days later, on Mrs. Taylor's At Home day, some ladies called to tender their condolences to the distracted mother. They were shown into the darkened parlor—a great, unused brie-a-brae shop of a room. For the first time since the of a room. For the first time since the child's disappearance, the shades were opened and the sunshine was let in on the expensive rugs and the dainty, moss-like carpet— a carpet like that in a thousand other homes of luxury, too delicate to let the children tumble on. So the children had always been barred out of the parlor. They might mar a So the children had always been barred out of the parlor. They might mar a Morris chair or break a Satsuma vase. Month after month the parlor had been left silent, in the darkness of a crypt, save when thrown open in honor of some fashionable clothes-horse of a visitor. The housemaid, who preceded the mother, on entering, groped for the window shades and stumbled over a small body on the floor. It was the missing baby shades and stumbled over a small body on the floor. It was the missing baby—and he was dead.

It appears that the child had stolen into the darkened parlor four days previously, and in clambering up to raise the window shade had overturned a heavy bronze statuette, which, in falling, had crushed the little fellow's skull. For four days the pathetic little body had lain there, in the parlor, the spot too good for the children of the house to romp in, the room sacred to the occasional visits of the members of "the 400." By a strange and ironical coincidence, the statuette which crushed the life out of the strange and ironical coincidence, the sta-tuette which crushed the life out of the little boy was that of "Niobe, weeping over her slain children."

An able editorial writer draws some striking lessons from this tragedy. He says: "Do you suppose that this incident will make any difference to the women who have been educated to believe that the front perfor is a vecent terms." who have been educated to believe that the front parlor is a room too good for the family to use? Not a bit of it. It is one of the outgrowths of our shoddy and hypocritical civilization, this desire to make an impression on visitors at the expense of the comfort of the family. What people will say of our swell furnishings is of such vastly greater importance than the happiness and wellbeing of the little chaps at home or the comfort of Jim, who is struck by an avalanche of invective if he has the presumption to light a cigar in the Sacred Black Hole of the home, known as the parlor—or even to rest his tired back in one of the daintily upholstered easy chairs.

"Why do we insist on being sleep to

"Why do we insist on being slaves to our possessions? Why do we defraud ourselves and those nearest, if not dearest, to us, out of half of life's sweetness, by littering up our homes with furniture and articles of vertu too expensive and good to be of any earthly use outside of a museum? Why do people hire gardeners to make beautiful lawns and flowered borders, and then hire governesses to spank their children for indulging their most unnatural and depraved desire to go out and put it to its greatest use, by tumbling and playing leap-frog on the grass?"

THOUSANDS LISTEN

To The Strange Tale of Mrs. James Bradley-What Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets Did For Her.

"No tongue can tell what I have suffered." So says Mrs. James Bradley of Smith's Cove, Digby Co., N. S. And when it is explained that Dyspepsia caused her suffering thousands of Canadians will echo, "That's true, sure enough." These thousands have Dyspepsia themselves and they know. But let these thousands listen to the whole of Mrs. Bradley's story and if they profit by it as they should, they will stop moaning over Dyspeptic pains and turn instead to singing the praises of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.
"I had Dyspepsia for over nine pepsia Tablets.

"I had Dyspepsia for over nine years," says Mrs. Bradley. "I have tried the best doctors in this place and never got relief. I had to starve myself from eating and had given up myself from eating and had given up hope of ever having any help. No tongue can tell what I have suffered. I cannot describe it. I saw an advertisement of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and sent for six boxes of them. They refieved me almost at once and before I had finished the six 'boxes I could eat most anything and steep comfortably, which I never expected to in this world.

"I advise all who suffer as I have to use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and never to be without them."

The Palmist and the Pope.

The diary of M. Desbarolles, the clever palmist who for years traveled about Europe enlightening sovereigns and meaner mortals on their various apti-tudes, contains curious details about an interview he had with Leo XIII., who, strange to say, is inclined to believe in palmistry.

interview he had with Leo XIII., who, strange to say, is inclined to believe in palmistry:

Desbarolles begins by discussing the hands of the Holy Father: "Poor, bloodless little hands," he says, "emerging from white silk mittens which were evidently too tight for them. They are not fat and comfortable, like those of most of the church dignitaries who surround him; not hard and wiry as ween said to be those of Sextus V., who was a worker and carved many of the chairs arranged against the walls of the antecameras in the Vatican; not energetic-looking, like those of the soldier-Pope Julius II., or bloated and swollen, like the hands of apoplectic and hydropic Pius IX.; they are like two tiny ivory jewels, colder than the big sapphire surrounded with brilliants which he offers to the lips of his adorers. These hands, the touch of which is weird and almost unearthly, never answer by a pressure ever so slight, to that of a friend, but are full of reserve and never responsible. The lines which are in them are not so numerous as one would have expected, because there is only one sot of the art.

There are none visible coming from the heart.

"Most likely a human and perhaps kind heart is beating under the Pope's red mantle, but he has always kept it under the mastership of a powerful minda mind decidedly inclined towards politics; too much so, in fact, for a holy prelate; and when I ventured to point out this trait of character I saw the lightless eyes of Leo XIII, blink and become as cold as those of a serpent; he was not pleased, and showed it by quickly withdrawing his hand from mine. I did not see avarice in the hand of Leo XIII, though he is said to be somewhat parsimonious; but he is at once a close reckoner and a strangely careless man about money matters. about money matters.
"One knows, for instance, his almost ludicrous adventure with Monsignor Folchi, his ex-treasurer. An enormous sum of money, which had been sent in a bag of crimson velvet by the Roman Catholic people of New York, was nowhere to be found, and the wretched cardinal, much distressed by the anger of His Holiness, was sent about in the Vatican, and even to the police, with strict orders to trace the lost treasure. When he came back to the palace in a state of great distress—for his errand had been fruitless—he found the Pope blandly smiling. 'I must apologize', he said, quietly. 'You were scarcely gone when I remembered that I had placed the bag in this little recess.' ludicrous adventure with Monsignor Fol

I remembered that I had placed the bag in this little recess."

"The hand of Your Holiness is often full," Desbarolles said. "and Your Holiness knows exactly what is in it." On which the prelate, with a sort of childish gesture, laughed softly, rubbing his knee with his left hand.

"I saw on the hands of the Pope," Desbarolles continues, "the gift of a wonderful memory, and also the love of all that is gorgeous and imposing. When I told him so, he answered, naively, 'Are not our beautiful ceremonies the best vehicle for bringing people into our churches, the women especially?"

"Besides these lines, I saw all those which are visible on the hands of painters, architects, poets, and even engineers.

which are visible on the hands of painters, architects, poets, and even engineers. No wonder that one sees installed in the palace all the modern inventions, and that the first thing Leo XIII. did when he came to live in the Vatican was to put into corners, as mere ornaments, the wick lamps used by Pius IX. Gas was installed at once, but a few years ago this was discarded, and electric light is now shining all over the palace. Leo XIII. has a hydraulic lift to carry him up to his tower in the gardens, and a cardinal related to me how His Holiness spent a whole day talking and listening cardinal related to me how His Holiness spent a whole day talking and listening at the new telephone which he had installed between his summer residence and the palace."

After Desbarolles had told him all that he read in his hand, he heard His Holiness mumble between his teeth, "A Jack-of-all-trades, then?"

"Who would have become a master in

"Who would have become a master in each of them," courteously answered the palmist.

The Pope sighed. "Better be the Father of all men, M. Desbarolles," he said; "at least," he corrected, "if you see in my hand that I am worthy of my mission!"

A Clue That Failed.

Deductions in the manner of Sherlock Holmes do not always work out successfully. They did not in a case reported by the Washington "Post." A group of reporters were talking together, and one of them, who liked to play the amateur detective, devoted part of his time to watching a man standing some distance away.

"How do you know?"

"See how he puts his hand into his trousers pockets. He lifts up the side of his coat—look! he's doing it now—instead of pushing the coat back as we do. He acquired the habit from wearing a fatigue coat in the army. A fatigue coat, you know, is cut square about the body. To put the hand in the trousers pocket, one must lift up the side."

Some discussion followed, with the result that one of the reporters voluntered to lay their speculations before the stranger. He proved to be a worthy real estate dealer. After listening to the reporter's explanation, he replied, with much amusement:"

"I'll tell you why I put my hand in my pocket that way. I used to be a butcher in New York thirty years ago, and I got that habit raising my butcher's apron to make change."

"My dear," said the careful mother to her sixteen-year-old daughter, "that is a book which I must absolutely for-bid you to read." "That's all very well, nid you to read." "That's all very well, mamma," replied the Twentleth-Ceatury Girl, "but how am I to know what books to forbid my children to read unless I read them myself while I have the chance?" And she bore off the book in triumph to study it in the solitude of her own conder.

I had, the other day, says Marshall P. Wilder, the following conversation at Sherry's with an Englishman who had just arrived in this country:
"You Americans," observed the Briton, "have a most peculiar way of twisting the English language."
"How so?" I asked.
"We'!, take this turkey, for example. You call it turkey here, don't you?"
"Yes."

"Yes."
"In England we call it fowl."
"I know you do."

"Yes."

"And if you'd want a bit of the breast you'd ask for the light meat, wouldn't you?"

"Yes."

"That's very awkward," added the Londoner. "Fancy a man calling on his sweetheart and saying: "Sophie, you come here and sit on my dark meat and put your head on my light meat'!"

The worries of a weak and sick mother are only begun with the birth of her child. By day her work is constantly interrupted and at night her rest is broken by the wailing of the peevish, puny infant. Dr. Pierce's Favorite prescription makeg weak women strong and sick women well. It lightens all the burdens of maternity, giving to mothers strength and vigor, which they impart to their children. In over thirty years of practice Dr. Pierce and his associate staff of nearly a score of physicians have treated and cured more than half a million suffering women. Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free of charge. All correspondence is strictly private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

When this particular lawyer was first struggling along in his profession he received a call from a well-to-do farmer, who was in need of legal advice concerning his rights, which he thought had been ignored by the section hands on a Pennsylvania railroad. The lawyer looked up the statutes, and told the farmer what he should do.

"How much?" queried the farmer.

"Well, let's call it three dollars," replied the lawyer.

The farmer handed over a five-dollar bill. The lawyer seemed embarrassed. But after searching through his pockets and the drawers of his desk, he rose to the occasion and pocketed the bill as he reached for a digest.

"I guess, neighbor," he remarked as he resumed his seat, "I shall have to give you two dollars' worth more advice."

The elder Sothern was extremely sensitive to interruption of any sort. Seeing a man in the act of leaving his box during the delivery of one of the actor's best speeches, he shouted out: "Hi, you sir, do you know there is another act?" The offender was equal to the occasion, however. He turned to the actor and answered, cheerfully: "Oh, yes-that's why I am going!" answered, cheerful why I am going!"

In response to a missionary's appeals for various articles for us on an African farm, a miking-stool was sent to him from England. He gave it to the negro whose duty it was to milk the cows, with injunctions to use it. On the first day the negro returned home from the cow-sheds, bruised and battered, but with an empty pail. When the missionary saked for an explanation, the negro replied: "Milk stool very nice, massa, but she won't sit on it!"

A Columbus, Ohio, pastor called on one of his parishioners, whose six, year-old boy is a bright youngster. Freddie had previously heard his mother say that the pastor was very successful in saving souls. During a pause in the conversation, Freddie, who was sitting on the pastor's knee, asked: "Do you save souls?" "Yes, Freddie," replied the man of the cloth. "Will you tell me," went on Freddie, seriously, "how many souls you got saved up?"

M. C. F. Stanburg relates in "The

Mr. C. F. Stanbury relates in "The Barrister" many stories of Tom Nolan, the counselor who for years kept the New York bar laughing at his conscious and unconscious drolleries. One of the best is the following: Once Nolan was arguing a case in behalf of clients who were sallors, and while in the midst of an exhaustive display of lore on nautical matters, he was interrupted by the court. "How comes it, counselor, that you possess such a vast knowledge of the sea?" "Does your honor think," responded Nolan, "that I came over in a hack?"

In a series of sketches, entitled "Lights In a series of sketches, entitled "Lights and Shadows in a Hospital," Mrs. Terton tells of a fielancholy man, depressed with rheumatism, in her cottage hospital, whom she wanted to cheer by reading. Ordinary hospital literature was no good. At last, said the nurse: "I shall read him "Three Men In a Boat," a shall read him "Three has him I shall shall read him "Three Men In a Boat," and if that doesn't amuse him, I shall give him up as hopeless." So she read, till finally "a reluctant smile came over his face, and he said, with slow satisfaction: 'I do think they be three rum 'uns.'" That was the turning point in his illness. He recovered completely, and left the hospital a bright and cheerful man.

At the time, now some years ago when subscriptions were being solicited for the erection of a statue in New York city to George Washington, a gentleman called on Russell Sage to secure a contribution. On learning the object of the visit the rich man exclaimed: "Washington I Washington! Washington! Washington! Washington! Washington! Washington! Washington does not need a statue. I keep him enshrised in my heart." In vain were the caller's solicitations, and he was naturally indignant at the parsimony of the multi-millionaire. "Well, Mr. Sage" he remarked, quietly, as he rose to leave, "all I can say is, that if the Father of his Country is in the position in which you describe him, he is in a tight place."

Quirsing a boy is not always so easy

Quixxing a boy is not always so easy as it seems. The Cincinnati "Enquirer" gives an instance in which a business man of that city came out second best in a passage at repartee with a boy named Claude who looks after the hatrack in a well-known restaurant.

Mr. Smith started out of the restaurant after anjoying his meal, and was seized, as Claude handed him his hat, with the impulse to quiz the lad.

"Is this my hat?" he asked.

"I don't know, sir," was the answer.

"Well, then, why do you hand it to me if you don't know whether it is my hat or not?" asked Mr. Smith, sharply.

"Because, it's the one you handed to me when you came in," answered Claude.

At the watch night of the Authors'

At the watch night of the Authors' Club on the occasion of the outgoing of the old and the incoming of the new year last winter, the subject liscussed was "Fame and Its Blunders." Each member received the privilege of explaining why he was not so famous as he should be, or why some other member was more famous than he. According to the "Bookman," the late Frank Stockton when his turn came, said that he to the "Bookman," the late Frank Stock-ton, when his turn came, said that he was quite satisfied. Referring to his long drudgery upon magazines and newspa-pers, and his final breaking loose into literature, he illustrated his point by reciting the following lines:

There was an old monk of Siberia,
Whose life it grew drearier and dree
Till he broke from his cell

With a hell of a yell, And eloped with the Mother Superior, which lines are supposed to symbolize Mr. Stockton's breaking away from editorial toil.

Senator William P. Frye was once talking to the celebrated naturalist, Agassiz, of his fishing experiences. "Among my triumphs," said he, "was the capture of a speckled trout that weighed fully eight pounds." Dr. Agassiz smiled, and said: "Reserve that for the credulous and convivial circles of rod and reel celebrants, but spare the feelings of a sober scientist." Frye insisted that he was not exaggerating, but Agassiz refused to be gulled. "My dear Mr, Frye," he said, "permit me to inform you that Salvalinus fontinalis never attains that extraordinary weight. The creature you caught could not have been a speckled trout. All the authorities on ichthyology would disprove your claim." "All I can say to that," replied Senator Frye, "is that there are, then, bigger fish in Maine than are dreamed of in your noble science." The next season, while fishing in the Maine woods, Frye caught a handsome speckled trout that weighed nine pounds, and sent it to Dr. Agassiz. A few days later he tramped to the station, where he found an epigrammatic message awaiting him from the great scientist, which read: "The science of a lifetime kicked to death by a fact. Agassiz."

A certain very small girl approached her mother on the subject of being allowed to take her wax doll to heaven with her, and she was deeply offended on being told that such a proceeding would be quite impossible. She hung about for some time, looking very sulky, and finally announced a change in her intentions as follows: "Mother, I think I'll take my old rag doll and go to hell."

Speaking the other day at a county

Speaking the other day at a county bazar at Leeds, Sir Charles Wyndham told the following amusing story: A certain prominent bishop who had developed some lung affection was ordered by his physician to repair at once to the South of France. The bishop demurred, and told his medical attendant that he was readyed to winter in England. "My was resolved to winter in England. was resolved to winter in England. "My lord," said the doctor, "if you are resolved to winter in England, in less than a month you will be in heaven." "You don't say so," exclaimed the bishop, "will go to the South of France at once."

"I remember once," said Lord Ran-dolph Churchill, "when I had irritated Sir William Harcourt beyond endurance in the House of Commons, he leaned forin the House of Commons, he leaned forward and called out to me across the floor, 'You little ass!' So I just shouted back, 'You damned foo!!' His face was a delightful study. He rose several times, intending to call the Speaker's attention to the expression, but gave up when he remembered how far from parliamentary his own language had been. The Speaker afterwards remarked that this was the most highly-condensed debate he had most highly-condensed debate he had ever sat through."

Despite his efforts, his client was hanged. Later, when he presented his bill to the man's family, they refused to pay it, on the ground that it was excessive. He took the bill to Charles O'Conor, the great criminal lawyer, asking him to pass judgment as to the equity of his charges. O'Conor scanned the account very closely, and then, turning to Conkling, very gravely remarked: "Well, Conkling, taking into consideration the enormous amount of energy and time you have devoted to this case, the charges are reasonable; but see here, Conkling, don't you think the man could have been hanged for less money than that?"

you think the man could have been hanged for less money than that?"

One of the agents in a Midland revision court in England objected to a person whose name was on the register, on the ground that he was dead. The revising barrister declined to accept the assurance, however, and demanded conclusive testimony on the point. The agent of the other side rose and gave corroborative evidence as to the decease of the gentleman in question. "But, sir, how do you know the man's dead?" demanded the barrister. "Well," was the reply, "I don't know. It's very difficult to prove," "As I suspected," returned the barrister. "You don't know whether he's dead or not." The barrister glanced triumphantly round the court, but his expression gradually underwent a change as the witness coolly continued: "I was saying, sir, that I don't know whether he is dead or not, but I do know this: they buried him about a month ago on suspicion."

know this: they buried him about a month ago on suspicion."

In order to emphasize the sincerity and strength of his good wishes, a speaker at a recent Masonic banquet told the following story: A passenger by the Scotch night mail gave the guard a substantial tip before leaving London, with instructions to see that he left the train at Carlisle, where he had an important business engagement. "I am a very sound sleeper." he said, "and shall probably protest against being awakened; but, in spite of whatever I may say or do, bundle me out at Carlisle." The guard promised to comply with his wishes, and he went contentedly to sleep. Imagine his disgust, therefore, on waking to find himself in Edinburgh. Angrily he sought the guard, and unburdened his wrath in on measured language. The latter listened to his harangue in respectful admiration, and when he had concluded thus avegad himself. guage. At the beginning of my literary career I used to make it a point to respond to all who enclosed stamps. That soon became impossible, and for a long time afterward those stamps weighed on my conscience. Of course I could not think of using them and religiously threw them in the scrap-basket, till one day I discovered that Mrs. Caine was as religiously orting them out from among the waste sorting them out from among the waste paper and using them."

Gentlemen,—In January last Francis Leclair, one of the men employed by me, working in the lumber woods, had a tree fall on him, crushing him fearfully. He was, when found, placed on a sled and taken home, where grave fears were entertained for his recovery, his hips being badly bruised and his body turned black from his ribs to his feet. We used MINARD'S LINIMENT on him freely to deaden the pain, and with the use of three bottles he was completely cured and able to return his work.

THE JAPANESE WOMAN.

Not a Slave, But the Autocrat and Idol of the Home-western Criticism of Them Superficial.

'No race can rise higher than its "No race can rise higher than its mothers." Japanese women are essentially a race of mothers, and the care and rearing of their children occupy so much of their time and thought that they are unable to have that extensive social life their western sisters enjoy, even were it not for the etiquette which makes it actually fashionable for them to find their pleasures in their homes

Many have imputed to Japanese women in consequence of a lack of knowledge and undue meekness, regarding them as little more than servants of their families and husbands. Such criticism is purely su-perficial and far from being accurate Indeed, it is very inaccurate. The position of a Japanese woman is a high one. She is addressed as is a high one. She is addressed 'okusama.' the honorable lady "okusama," the honorable lady of the house, and she is treated with the greatest consideration and re-spect by her husband and her fam-ily. Far from being a meek, slavish creature of the household, she is more of the mentor, the autocrat and idol of the home. In domestic affairs she has full control. Her du-ties are onerous, but never repug-nant to her. They consist of man-aging the household, practicing econnant to her. They consist of managing the household, practicing economy, making her home pleasant both in appearance and by her cheerfulness of disposition, and the education and instruction of her children, for even after the chil-dren have entered school they are still under her tutelage.

As her home is therefore her world, it is only natural that it has become the inherent instinct of the Japanese women to lavish the greatest love and tenderness upon their homes and to expend much time and thought in endeavoring to make them as attractive and as pleasant as possible.

Her house is the acme of purity Her house is the acme of purity. To a western eye the aspect of the interior of a Japanese house may at first seem bare and cheerless. In truth, the Japanese abhor decoration of any kind and consider it not only inartistic, but extremely vulgar. I was once shown a so called "Invarence recom" in the house of a gar. I was once shown a so called "Japanese room" in the house of a Chicago millionaire, and I am quite sure that the average Japanese housewife would have thought herself in the room of some insane person or else in some curiosity shop. Such a profusion of articles scattered broadcast about the room! Such a frightful display of mixed up orn-aments hanging to the wall!—Onoto Watanna in Home and Flowers.

In the Roman Catacombe Discoveries of the first importance to the students of the evidences of Christianity and to archaeologists are confidently looked for from the continued exploration of the Cata-combs of Rome. Of the 45 ceme-teries known to have existed, only teries known to have existed, only five have been made accessible to visitors. The principal Catacombsthose on the Appia, Nomentana, Salaria and Ardeatina—although open, are not yet thoroughly explored. The soil, being of volcanic origin, is too soft to be utilized for building purposes, but it is of sufficient con-sistency to enable excavations to be prosecuted without the aid of sup-ports. Until the ninth century the ports. Until the ninth century the Catacombs were places of pilgrimage, but from then until the nine-teenth century they were neglected. The entrances becane blocked and almost all the sites were lost sight of. It is computed that fully six millions of bodies lie buried in the Roman Catacombs, or more than double the number that are interred in the Catacombs of Paris. The most ancient of all known Catacombs are ancient of all known Catacombs are those of the Theban Kings, which are over 4,000 years old

In each case, says a writer in Popular Science News, a large limb was broken down from the trunk, but still attached to it. The limbs were propped up and fastened securely with straps very much as a broken with straps, very much as a broken leg might be fastened with splints, and then melted refined wax poured into and over all the cracks. The surgical operation was entirely successful. The paraffin prevented the escape of the sap, kept out the rain and moisture which would have rotted the trees, prevented the depredations of insects and the limbs seem to be re-attached to the trees.

Tides in the Mediterranean

For practical purposes the Mediterranean may be accepted as being what it is popularly supposed to be, a tideless sea, but it is not so in reality. In many places there is a distinct rise and fall, though this is distinct rise and fall, though this is more frequently due to winds and currents than to lunar attraction. At Venice there is a rise of from one to two feet in spring tides, according to the prevalence of winds up or down the Adriatic. In many straits and narrow arms of the sea there is a periodical flux and reflux, but the only place where the tidal influence, properly so called, is unmistakably observed is in the Gulf of Gabes, where the tide runs at the rate of two or three knots an hour and the rise and fall varies from three to eight feet.

PREMIER ROSS INTERVIEWED Manufacturers Looking for Skilled

Toronto, March 6 .- The manuacturers of goods requiring iron as raw material are the latest so enter a plea for more help. Yesterday deputation representing a variety of industries in different parts of the Province waited on Premier Ross to ask that something be done. Mr. J. O. Thorn and Mr. F. B. Polson of Toronto, Hon. Wm. Harty, M.P., of the Kingston Locomotive Works, and Mr. R. Moffatt of Weston were among the party. They represented that the industries of the Province had expanded to rapidly that they werently needed dustries of the Province had expanded so rapidly that they urgently needed 500 more skilled mechanics. They maintained their aim was not to depress the labor market, but only to get sufficient men for their immediate needs. They asked that the Ontario Government take some action toward the importation of men to relieve the situation. At present the Canadian Manufacturers' Association is gathering statistics of the scarcity of men, and when these are complete a further deputation will probably see the Government.

With reference to the shortage of skilled mechanics in Ontario, as spoken of by the deputation to Premier Ross, of by the deputation to Premier Ross, a skilled mechanic has written to The Globe as follows:—"I think that the iron manufacturers are in a large measure to blame for permitting so many of our best men to go to the United States. The reason is that they can get better wages and steadier employment in the States. In Ontario manufacturers employ a great many ployment in the States. In Ontario manufacturers employ a great many men during busy times, and let them go as soon as they can do without them. As a result there must be 25,000 Canadian skilled mechanics working in the States. I think this is the direct cause of the shortage, and we should reimport some of our good Canadian mechanics rather than bring in Europeans. Many of these Canadians in the States would be glad to return if they could depend upon a fair living wage for themselves and their families."

The question of why one man succeeds and another fails, is a problem that has puzzled philosophers for centuries. One man attains riches and position, while his neighbor who started with seemingly the same, and better opportunities, exists in poverty and observity.

No man can win success who is suffering from an irritating and nerve racking disease and the man who has the qualities of success within him, would be quick to recognize this fact and seize the best remedy to eradicate the trouble. A person afflicted with a serious case of hemorrhoids or piles is hanicapped in the race for power and advancement. It is impossible to concentrate the mental energies when this dreadful trouble is sapping the vital forces. To show how easily this success destroying trouble can be overcome, we publish the following letter from a prominent Indiana man.

Ulcers to the number of seven had formed on the inside of the rectum, culminating in a large tumor on the outside resembling fistula. I suffered the most excruciating pain, could get no rest day or night. After reading the booklet I sent to my druggist but he happened to be out of Pyramid Pile Cure just at that time. However, I obtained a part of a box from my brother-in-law and began their use. Five pyramids completely cured me. I procured a box later, but have had no occasion to use them.
