Fruit Growers' Association Is Addressed By Messrs Tweedle And Smith

SAN JOSE SCALE TALK

The meeting of the Fruit Growers Association was held in the Council Chambers Friday night, was well attended. The chairman of the even ing was Mr. M. Backus, who after a few opening remarks introduced Mr. Smith, of Glanford, one of the gen-tlemen who has been appointed by themen who has been appointed by the Government to canvas the western district and find out what the fruit growers are doing to stamp out the San Jose Scale, and what they wish the Government to do for them.

Mr. Smith informed the audience that a solution of lime and sulphur would, if applied thoroughly two or three times before the trees came in leaf, got only kill the scale, but also be of great benefit to the trees in general.

Mr. Tweedle, of Fruitland, who si Mr. Tweedie, of Fruitland, who si accompanying Mr. Smith, then took the floor, and gave the formula for the solution of lime and sulphur. He said that if one-half bushel of lime and 17 1-2 pounds of sulphur were put in eight or nine gallons of boiling water and boiled for an hour and a quarter, this in turn to be then diluted in about 40 gallons of hot water and applied to the trees while in this heated condition, was the best and most effective thing yet discovernd most effective thing yet discover-and most extensive thing yet discover-ed by them.

Mr. Tweedle is an extensive fruit grower himself and has used this formula with unlimited success. He gave several accounts of where it had been used quite effectively, and advised the fruit growers to try it before they tried any other formula. A number of ideas were discussed, and although the opinions were varied in hat if the scale continued as it has that if the scale continued as it has in the past, there would soon be no trees left to spray.

Mr. W. McGeachy made a few remarks to the effect that Mr. G. Marshall, off the River Road, Harwich, who sent out the heaviest order four years ago, when the Fruit Growers' Association was formed, did not have a barrel of apples last year, owing to the scale ruining all his trees.

After further discussion, the Association drew up a petition asking

After further discussion, the Association drew up a petition asking the Government to set aside a department solely for the procuring or seeking of the best and cheapest means of getting rid of this scale, either by securing other parsites or by applying solutions.

A vote of thanks was then given to Mr. Smith and Mr. Tweedle, and the meeting closed.

GOVERNMENT'S VICTORY

Berlin, Jan. 26.—The Government has won a definite victory in the general elections held yesterday for a new Reichstag. The Liberal, Radical ervative parties, supporting Prince Von Buelow's colonial policy, have won at least twenty seats. But more important for the Government than the success of its colonial plans, than the success of its colonial plans, is the crushing defeat of the Socialists, who will lose a total of seventeen or eighteen seats.

This is the first election since 1887 that the Socialists have not increased their representation in the Reichstag by from five to twenty seats. They have lost especially in several large cities, among them Breslau, Halle, Madgeburg, Leipzig and Koenigsberg. The Clerical Centre holds nearly every one of its former 100 seats. There is a possibility, however, that re-ballotings in the undecided districts may lose that party one or two more seats.

The Conservatives have won six seats, two of them from the Socialists. Re-balloting probably will be necessary in 175 constituencies, so that complete returns will not he in before Rideau Rink Burned.

Ottawa, Jan. 26.—Rideau Rink, the scene of many great hockey matches in the past and the quarters of the Minto Skating Club, was burned yesterday morning to the ice. It was valued at $12,000. Five people in the caretaker's quarters had narrow escapes. The firemen had to go up two flights of stairs to rescue the inmates amid dense smoke and flames. The caretaker stayed behind to get out belongings, and was cut off, so a net was spread and he jumped safely.

Ends Life With Carbolic Acid.

Toronto, Jan. 26.—James W. Hackett, an engineer on the fire department, committed suicide at his home, about 6.30 last night, by drinking carbolic acid. He spent the afternoon at a theatre with his son, aged 12. The family were at supper when he arose from the table, saying he was going to the drug store. He returned in a few minutes, and went directly upstairs, saying good-bye as he went. At the top of the stairs he drank out of a vial and threw it downstairs. Death occurred in half an hour. No reason can be given for the act, except that he has been complaining of neuralgia in the head. He leaves a widow, three daughters, one married, and two sons.

THAMES RIVER FISHERIES.

To the Editor of The Planet: A few days ago I saw in your columns a report made to the Government by fishermen at the mouth of the Thames River in which they ernment by fishermen at the mouth of the Thames River in which they assert that bass do not frequent the waters of this river in any numbers; that the only fish are mullets, suckers, German carp, and other such soft, coarse grained fish.

Now, Mr. Editor, I know this river from its head waters in Perth, Waterloo and Oxford counties to its outlet at Lake St. Clair, and from that knowledge I have decided that that report must have been sent to the Government by the direct descendants of Ananias and Saphira, or else are ignorant of past conditions, for if there is any river in Ontario in which bass, white, gree and black, and pike and pickerel congregated in shoals, it was in our River Thames before these Canadian-Yankee fishermen were permitted to exterminate them, by the connivance of an unprincipled gang of venial politicians. I have seen brook trout in this river's clear spring, head waters: I have caught bass near the London and Port Stanley Railway bridge; I have caught them at Komoka; I have caught them at Komoka; I have caught them at Komoka; I have caught as half a dozen at one shot, the heavy bullet striking the water with such a jar that it stunned all that were near by. In those days there were fish for everyone from one end of this river to the other. Now all is changed; some Canadian-Yankee fishermen catch them at the mouth of the river and send them to U. S. cities; to save appearances a few measily specimens are brought to Chatham and offered for sale at "diamond" prices—not to be bought by the poor.

If any fish get up the river it must have slid through the mesh of the nets, its mates have gone to New York.

It is just as Caleb Wheeler says, the politicians have exploited these fisheries for votes. All the people up the river do not count.

If people would only look at questions from the standpoint of the general welfare, instead of being led around by the nose by political shisters who have shout as much regard for them as they have for the fish, they would have looked after, their own interests and prevented this ruin of the River Thames fisheries.

For many long years the people kept in power at Toronto a party-of-politicians, not statesmen, who cared for nothing but office for themselves, and place for the political crooks who had the people by the nose.

There is a different tot governing there now; it is our duty to see that they do not get into the same un principled political net.

Politically, although classed as a Conservative, I am Independant. My political principles are the welfare of the people should be the whole law; and that no article of human necesity, which nature supplies practically prepared for human uses, should ever be sold or surrendend, to be the exclusive property of any, man or set of men, but should be held in control by the Government for the benefit of the whole people. Coal is a natural product which is an absolute necessity and should be, and when they know, then demand them, and they can soon compel the politicians to stand in line on public welfare.

HOW LINCOLN WON:

A Bad Looking Legal Case That Was Saved by Frankness.

The lawyer whose honesty is proved has the confidence of the judge and jury. A story of Abraham Lincoln is an illustration. He was appointed to defend one charged with murder. The crime was a brutal one, the evidence entirely circumstantial, the accused a stranger. Feeling was high and against the friendless defendant. On the trial Lincoln drew from the witnesses full statements of what they saw and knew. There was no effort to confuse, no attempt to place before the jury the facts other than they were. In the argument, after calling attention to the fact that there was no direct testimo stances and, after conceding that this and that seemed to point to defend-ant's guilt, closed by saying that he had reflected much on the case, and, while it seemed probable that defendant was guilty, he was not sure and, looking the jury straight in the face, said, "Are you?" The defendant was acquitted, and afterward the real criminal was detected and punished. How different would have been the conduct of many lawyers! Some would have striven to lead the judge into technical errors with a view to an appeal to a higher court. Others would have become hoarse in denunciation of witnesses, decrying the lack of positive testimony and the marvelous virtue of a reasonable doubt. The simple, straightforward way of Lincoln, backed by the confidence of the jury, won.

THREE WAYS OF SERVING HEART.

Beef heart is so suggestive of the cheap bourding house that the very sight of it ordinarily brings a no-L-thank-you to mind/ but when prepared by the following recipes it has a daintiness, both of taste and appearance, to plead for giving it a frequent place on the bill of fare.

HEART SALAD.

HEART SALAD.

Boil a beef heart in slightly salt water until tender, When it has cooled trim off the fat, cut it in strips and run them through a meat cutter. Add salt, pepper, grated celery, the least bit of onion and six boiled eggs which have been mixted. Mix in a bowl with a cilver fork, taking care not to break the graininess of the heart. Set the bowl aside. Break an egg in a small agateware boiler and beat it thoroughly, With this smoothly mix small agateware botter and beat it theroughly, With this smoothly mix a level teaspoonful of mustard, then stirring steadily to prevent coagu-lation gradually add a half cupful of vinegarl Put the boiler on the stove and cook the mixture until it thickens like custard, stirring it all thickens like custard, stirring it and the while to avoid scorching. When cooled pour it over the minced heart and egg, and, tir with a fork until sufficiently blended, Arrange it on a salda dish and garnish with sprigs of parsley, celery or fettuce leaves.

SAVORY HEART.

After a heart has been ground in a meat cutter, as in receipe for salad, season it with salt, pepper, celery salt and, a half a cupful of butter broken in bit. Sir this with a fork, and when mixed pour it in a pudding dish and put it in the oven. In ten or fifteen minutes it should be slightly browned over, then serve it hot in the pudding dish. The delicate flavor of savory heart je embles that of brains. After a heart has been ground in

HEART ROSES

For making these see that the heart comes from the meat shop without bring split, as they are usually s.l. When boiled tender, before it it cold, trim off the fat and scoop of the inner part, taking care to co. it evenly and of a uniform thick is after trimming off the grifte, induce the part that was out out. To shis add four boiled eggs which have been minced, salt, pepper and celery salt according to taste, enough of the liquor in which the heart was boiled to moisten it, ind blend all together with a spoon. When quite smooth stuff this mixture in the heart shell, and pin a cetch around it to hold the ruffing in place. Let it stand in the refrigrator at least four hours; over light is best. To serve, take the cloth off and, beginning at the larger end, with a sharp knife, cut off thin, uniform slices. As each slice is cut, lay it on a platter and arrange sprigs of parsley around the edgd. Cubes of tomato jelly arranged alternately with the heart roces on chilled lettuce leaves not only improve their appearance, but are a delicious accompaniment. They may be varied by preparing two hearts b at the same time; using the whites of the boiled eggs and the white meat of cold turkey or chicken for the stuffing of one, and the yelks with the dark meat for the other—Lea Watson Walker, Georgia.

GRANDM THER'S APPLE FRIT-TERS.

Make a batter with six tablespoons of flour, one cup of milk and cone tablespoon of liquid yeast. Cover and let stand in a warm place until morning. Then add two eggs well beaten, one heaping tabletipposaful of sugar, one level fablecupposaful of butter, two or three chcipped apples, half a cupful of cleaned currants, and a tablespoon minced lemon peek Fry in plenty of good drippings to a nice brown, drain a minute on brown paper,
and ierve with butter and sugar.

CHEESE BISCUIT.

Roll some puff paste out thin and sprinkle over it a dash of cayenne and dry grated cheese to cover it; double up the paste, roll it out again and cut it with a small round cake cutten Brush over the biscuit with an egg, lay them on a floured tin, and bake in a hot oven to a very pale brown. Any stale bits of cheese may be pleasingly used in this way. u ed in this way.

production of "Kent Mills" qualities of the flour. Flour.

Before being ground the grains of wheat are thoroughly cleaned, dusted and scoured by special machines.

All the sand, dust, light grains, seeds and other foreign substances, which are always present to a more or less degree when wheat is delivered at the mill, are left behind when the wheat starts on its journey to be crushed into flour.

By our improved process of milling the hard, fibrous bran and cellulosic coats are so carefully removed from the starch and gluten cells, which are crushed into flour, that there's not the remotest possibility of a single atom of these impure and indigestible substances remaining in "Kent Mills" Flour.

H. P. DWIGHT'S CAREER

LONG KNOWN AS "THE FATHER OF CANADIAN TELEGRAPHY."

Entered Upon His 79th Year on Sunday, Dec. 23, 1906-Career in Which the Community Was Interested by His Devoted Service-What He Did at the Time of the Fenian Raid-President G.N.W. Telegraph Co.

Sunday, Dec. 23, 1906, the many friends of Mr. H. P. Dwight of Toronto were able to congratulate that gentleman upon having reached another milester. genteman upon naving reached another milestone in a life many years of which have been devoted to the service of the community in a variety of ways. Mr. Dwight has for long been known as "the father of Canadian telegraphy." Born at Belleville, Jefferson County, in the States of New York on Dec. 23, 1838, he came to York, on Dec. 23, 1828, he came to Canada when a youth of 19, and entered the service of the Montreal Telegraph Co. as an operator. By a strange coincidence his first appointment was held at the Canadian town of Belleville, and he enjoys the dis tinction of having been the first knight of the key to follow the telegraphists's vocation in that city.

It was not long, however, before the second step was made in what became a most successful career. Mr. Dwight was first promoted to Montreal, and three years later, in 1850, to Toronto, where he has made his home ever since. In a comparatively short time after coming to this city Mr. Dwight was appointed superingendent of the company's western sermr. Dwight was appointed superintendent of the company's western service, and in 1881, when the Dominion and Montreal Telegraph Companies were merged under the charter of the G.N.W., he was appointed to the important position of general manager. No doubt it was his successful work in certains out a scheme of organino carrying out a scheme of organization which led to his election first as vice-president and then, in 1893, as president, an office which he centinues to hold at the present time. Mr. Dwight, with 56 years of active service to his credit, retired from the general managership of the company three years ago, and was succeeded by Mr. Isaac McMichael.

Not only did Mr. Dwight play a prominent part in the building up of a great Canadian telegraphic service, but on more than one occasion he renbut on more than one occasion he rendered notable service in the public interest. In the eventful days of the Fenian raid the Government entrusted to him the work of distributing operators along the frontier where there seemed danger of an outbreak, and it was largely due to his foresight and completeness of arrangements that the Government were enabled to act with a promptness and exactitude that would otherwise have been impossible, and on that occasion been impossible, and on that occasion his services were acknowledge in Par-liament by the then Minister of Mili-

Again in 1885 he rendered similarly effective assistance in respect city connected his residence and the testing station. Mr. Dwight has been for a number of years chairman of the investigating governors of the Royal Canadian Humane Association, presi-dent of the Canadian Birkbeck Investment & Savings Co., and was one of the original members of the On-tario Fish and Game Commission.

Declare Tea and Coffee Nerve Foods At the hygienic conference which recently sat in Paris the question of the value of tea and coffee as a perve food has been discussed with much warmth.

M. A. Gautier said that, although tea, coffer and wine were of no value whatever as nourishment, they were valuable as nerve food, as they help-ed quickly to dispel the sense of bod-

On the other hand, N. Charles Fere contended that the use of stimulants should not be encouraged at all, as should not be encouraged at an, as the effect they gave was not lasting, and after the first excitement had passed away the patient felt more fatigued and depressed than before. People should be taught to do with-out stimulants, and should so manage themselves that they could do the themselves that they could do the greatest amount of work with little expenditure of their energy.

Wheat As a Dairy Feed: Wheat As a Dairy Feed:
While wheat is excellent to make cows give a large mess of milk, care should be taken not to feed to excess, as the cream will rise slowly and will be hard to churn, and the butter will be pale rather than a golden yellow. Fed in connection with cornmeal it can always be used in the butter dairy to an advantage.

THE GROWTH OF CULTURE

The day is past when culture and true social enjoyment were confined to the few—to the privileged classes. We live in a day of enlightenment and democracy. Equal educational advantages, equal opportunities for culture and enjoyment of those things in life that are best worth while.

The luxuries of yesterday are the necessities of to-day, and in the musical world nothing is more noticeable than the demand of all classes for the highest possible grade of piano. The piano manufacturer who meets this demand is never slack for want of orders.

THE New Scale Williams PIANO

is Canada's greatest piano. Its improvements and latest features have gone far toward creating a better appreciation of good music all over Canada. It more nearly approaches the ideal piano than any other.

Its tone, quality, construction and architectural beauty are unexcelled. For good music, for accompanying the solo voice or chorus of song, great artists all over the world are loud in its praises. And yet it is a Canadian instrument—perhaps the highest exponent of Canadian industry.

If you will

If you will fill in the con-pon below, cut it out and take to your dealer or send to the Williams Piano Co., we will send you ABSOLUTE-LY FREE SEVERAL BEAUTI-PUL BOOKLETS, "The Making of a Great Piano," etc. We will also tell you of easy purchase plans that will interest you.

BRAGG-BARFOOT BLOCK

A Shooting Gallery Secret.

"Do you see this glass ball?" said the shooting gallery man. It was a ball of hollow glass, an airy glass soap bubble, that had swung all season at the end of a thread in the foreground of the clay pipes, bells and what not that had made up the gallery's targets, "This glass ball," the man went on, "is my great money maker. All season long people tried to hit this ball—it was bigger and nearer than any other target—and everybody failed. Thou-sands of bullets were fired at the ball, thousands of nickels were spent on it, yet here it is, still untouched, my best breadwinner. All wise shooting gallery men have a glass ball like this. It makes such a tempting target, yet it is never hit. It is never hit because the air that precedes a gun charge is sufficient to blow the ball aside, out of the way. You might fire a hundred shots at it, but, like a living thing, like a timid soldier, for instance, it would dodge each shot."

Mary Anderson's Voice Miss Anderson's voice was always her predominant charm. Certain tones in it-so thrilling, so full of wild passion and inexpressible melancholywent straight to the heart and brought tears into the eyes. The voice is the exponent of the soul. You can paint your face, you can pad your person, you can wear a wig, you can walk in shoes that augment your height, you can in various ways change your body, Northwest rebellion. Always taking a keen interest in the affairs of civic government, Mr. Dwight was among the pioneers of the movement which but your voice will sooner or later reveal you as you are. Just as the style | nest again! the pioneers of the movement which led to Toronto being lighted by electricity, and when the telephone was in its early and experimental days the first telephonic wire used in the telephone was the actor's nature. It seems unlikely in its early and experimental days the first telephonic wire used in the ish impartments, but the copious, lovely voice was there, and it gained her first victory.-William Winter in Saturday Evening Post.

Running as Exercise. The fact that a person is capable of doing the best running and speed walking before the thirtieth year need not lead those who have passed the third decade to think that they are on the down grade of life, says an authority. These exercises call for elasticity of the arteries, and that lessens soon after the thirtieth year, but powers of endurance increase in the well preserved man or woman up to fifty fifty-five or even later. Soldlers of fif-ty are like leather and can perform feats of endurance that would kill the stripling, and the same is true of women.

Bine Eyes.

That the color of the eyes should affect their strength may seem strange, yet that such is the case need not at this time of day be doubted, and those whose eyes are brown or dark colored should be informed that they are weaker and more susceptible to injury from various causes than gray or blue eyes. Light blue eyes are generally the most powerful, and next to those are gray. The lighter the pupil the greater and longer continued is the degree of tension the eye can sus-

GOT A PAIN IN YOUR BACK?

You get a pain in your back, and you wonder what is the matter. You perhaps pay no attention to it. Backache is ca by imperfect action of the kidneys, in fact, is the first sign of kidney trouble to follow.

The kidneys, proper, are composed of a close network of fibrous tissue, interlaced with tiny elastic fibres. Their object is the excretion of the uric acid, and other us matter composing the urine, from the blood. They are continuously at work to preserve the general health of the body and most people are troubled with some form of kidney trouble, but do not suspect it.

Some of the symptoms are: A feeling of weakness in the small of the back, sharp pains in back, puffiness under the eyes, and swelling of the feet and ankles, urinary troubles such as supressed urination, excessive urination, cloudy, thick or highly colored urine, etc.

Mr. J. L. Whiting, Osnabruck Centre, Ont., writes: "I suffered for two years with kidney trouble. I had ter-tble pains in my back, hips and legs. I could not sleep and had a poor appetite, I took four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and the pains left me, my appetite returned and I now sleep well. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone suffering from kidney trouble.

Farmers united to attack noxious weeds. The townships appointed inspectors to enforce the law and there was no great storm raised:

"The sense of the meeting throughout appeared to be voiced by Mr. O. P. Handy, who expresel himself as follows:

"The man who owns fruit trees if he withes to save them must fight the scale himself. The man who neglects to do so, but waits for assistance or depends upon someone else doing his work, will soon have no trees to spray! " The first man reaps his reward by having clean trees, clean fruit, and high prices for what he sells."

It will be seen from this that the Government is willing to do all in their power to assist the farmers. but the real fight depends upon the affected farmers themselves, and those who are daily running the risk of becoming affected by the ravages of the scale.

These meetings have been successful in bringing out information and in creating an interest in the matter and it is hoped the farmers and fruit growers will not allow this interest to die out, but will continue the crusade with renewed vigor until the scale is entirely eradicated and the orchards restored to

The City of Great Britain Unless we command the sea we cannot keep open the roads by which our people are fed. Britain has in effect ceased to be a country. She is now, considered from the political and military point of view, a city, though a city with very large parks and pleas-aunces and kitchen gardens in which to grow her flowers, fruits and vege-tables. A city, from the point of view of war, may be described as a place which if besieged long enough must fall, since supplies once consumed cannot be replenished. Britain gnswers to this description. The moment the sea roads to her are closed by an enemy she is, ipso facto, in a state of siege Face to face with a need so imminent it would be madness for us to give any consideration to what we hope or believe are the intentions of this or that foreign power. All that we can rightly do in considering how to secure our national safety and independence is to count ships and guns and to com-pute the units of naval efficiency.

A WONDERFUL LAMP.

How to Produce a Brilliant Light With Alcohol Vapor.

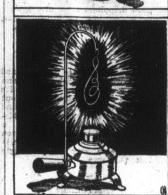

This lamp is not the famous lamp of Aladdin, which he had only to rub gently in order to bring about the most wonderful and extravagant doings in the world.

It is, however, a wonderful lamp, for It has power to produce an extraor-dinary light similar to that of a powerful incandescent electric globe, and that, too, without either smoke or any sort of disagreeable odor.

In fact, you might almost call it an incandescent lamp, only instead of an electric current you have alcohol vapor or gas.

First, you must be told that platinum is a metal that has the property of absorbing a great deal of gas or vapor. Very well. Now prepare your lamp thus: Take an ordinary chafing dish

WONDERFUL VAPOR LAMP. samp (alcohol lamp), fix up a strong wire arm over it, something like a fancy street lamp post or shop sign sup-port, and from this arm suspend a platinum wire which has been twisted into a spiral. Make sure that the wire hangs directly over the wick or the hole through which the flame rises, Now light the wick or alcohol, and the flame will quickly shoot up platinum wire and make it red hot. In a few moments put out the flame. You will then discover the astonishing fact that the platinum wire, far from gradually cooling, will grow steadily hotter (the wick being warm enough to promote a continuous vaporization of the alcohol and the vapor being steadabsorbed by the platinum wire), and as soon as it turns to a pinkls white color it will begin to throw out an intense clear light, which will con tinue as long as the alcohol lasts.

This is an interesting experiment and worth your trying, boys and girls.—

Philadelphia North American. The Badger and the Fleas.

A man who is familiar with the habits of many kinds of animals gives an amusing description of the way in which a badger gets rid of fleas. It goes to some stream, and, standing on the bank, it reaches around with its mouth and pulls a little tuft of hair out of its tail. With that tuft of hair in its mouth it turns around and backs slowly down into the water. The fleas naturally crawl toward the badger's head to keep out of the water, and as it gets farther and farther into the stream they crawl on to its head and finally on to the tuft of hair in its mouth. When they all get there the badger opens his mouth and lets the tuft of hair float downstream. Then he comes back to the bank, shakes himself and laughs perhaps to think how neatly he did the job.—Chicago

PLENTY OF CHALK.

A Block That Was Once as Large as the Continent of Europe.

The small piece of chalk which is in constant use in the schoolroom the lecture room, the billiard room and the workshop has a strange his and the workshop has a strange his-tory, the unraveling of which through all its complexities is one of the most difficult problems with which the sci-ence of the present day is called upon be deal. This piece is in reality a chip of an immense block of chalk that once filled an area the size of the continent of Europe and of which the continent of Europe and of which even yet several gigantic fragments remain, each hundreds of square miles in extent. These patches are miles in extent. These patches are scattered over the region lying between Ireland on the west and China on the east and extend in the other direction from Sweden in the north to Portugal in the south.

In the British Isles the chalk is found in greatest perfection and continuity in the east and southeast of England. A sheet of chalk more than a thousand feet in thickness underties all that portion of England which is situated to the southeast of a time crossing the island diagonally from the North Sea at Flamborough Head to the coast on the English Head to the coast on the English Channel in Dorset. This enormous sheet of chalk is tilted up slightly on the west, and its depressed eastern ortions that dip toward the waters the North Sea are usually buried from sight by means of overlying sands and clays. Where the edges of the chalk floor come upon the sea the cliff scenery is strikingly grand and beautiful. Any one who has once seen the magnificent rocks of Flamborough and Beachy Head, the jagged stacks of the Needles or the dizzy mass of Shakespeare's cliff, near Dover, can understand why "the white cliffs of Albion" has grown into Head to the coast on the English Channel in Dorset. This enormous white cliffs of Albion" has grown into This massive sheet of chalk appears again in France, in many parts of Europe as far east as the Crimea and even in Central Asia beyond the sea of Aral. How far it stretched westof Aral. How far it stretched west-ward into what is now the Atlantic may never be known, but chalk cliffs of at least 200 feet in thickness are seen at Antrim, in Ireland, and less conspicuous formations are found in Scotland, in Argyll and Aberdeen. There can be little question that all these gong isolated patches, were once there can be little question that all these now isolated patches were once connected in a continuous sheet, which must therefore have occupied a superficial area about 3,000 miles long by nearly 1,000 broad, an extent larger than that of the present continent of Europe.

Unnecessary Hurry.

You have promised, let us say, to call for a friend at his office, so as to go down into the country together. He is a stockbroker, merchant, what you will. His place of business being ten minutes' walk from the station, you call after business hours, about a quarter of an hour before the train starts. You find him cheerfully doing nothing unless a cigarette counts for ork. He absolutely declines to start. It is too absurdly early. After five ork. He absolutely declines to start It is too absurdly early. After five anutes you suggest departure. By no means will he move. It never takes him mere than seven minutes at the utmost. Knowing his walking capacities, you doubt, but acquiesee. At last you are off, and halfway to the train he says: "By Jove, old man, we must hurry up. My watch is slow." So you run—ignominiously you run. If luck befriend you, you just catch the moving train, and as you sink perspiring and breathless into your seat he says: "You see, we were in plenty of time. Never missed a train in my life." Plenty of time, indeed! And all this hurry for nothing. If he had been doing anything—had a letter to write or the like—in those wasted eight minutes, you could forgive him, but he hadn't, or at all events he didn't. You mop your brow and, though he is your very good friend, remember with complacency that this "just catching trains leads to many coroner's inquests.—London Saturday Review.

SONG OF THE PLOUGH.

I'll sing you a song of the plough deep with my tempered share
I furrow the earth, the rich brown earth, paving the way for spoil.
With joy I bend to my task, guided with joy I bend to my task, guided with sturdy care—

From dawn till dusk I follow the way through loam and fragrant soil.
And I sing as I go my way,
From dawn till the sunset's gold,
And I sleep when the world is Deep in the morn's enfold.

I come with the lark and thrush, and my good steel shimmers bright. Steady I turn my furrows deep that fields may grow and wave:

The bread of the world is mine, reared by my strength and might.

And I scatter it wide, from land to land, that all may say a gave.

And I sing as I go my way,

From dawn till the sunset's

From dawn till the sunsets gold,
And I sleep when the world is Deep in the morn's enfold.

My share came from the earth, and so to the earth I cleave, And I shall cling to its breast foreer, to serve my-master, man; And never shall I forsake, and never my master leave,

Till the world and Time are old and gray in this, God's earthly plan.
But I sing as I go my way,
From dawn till the sunset's From dawn till the sunset's gold,
And I sleep when the world is Deep in the morn's enfold. Canada's Very Own.

Canada's Very Own.

John Colin Forbes, R.C.A., whose recent portrait of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman has caused such widespread and favorable comment, is one of Canada's very own artists. Mr. Forbes was born at Toronto in 1846, and educated at Upper Canada Gollege. While still a lad he evinced a liking for sketching and drawing, and one of his first efforts, a drawing of Toronto Bay, took first prize at the Provincial Exhibition in 1866. Soon after this young Forbes went to England, where he studied at the South Kensington Museum and at the Royal Academy. On his return to Canada he was commissioned to paint several portraits of public men, among them the Earl of Dufferin, Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir Charles Tupper, Sir Oliver Mowat, Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, and Hon. Edward Blake. He has also painted a series of Rocky Mountain scenes for the Canadian Pacific Railway. In 1891 Mr. Forbes was sent to England by a number of prominent members of the Canadian Liberal party, and there executed a full-length portrait of Mr. Gladstone. party, and there executed a fi length portrait of Mr. Gladsto which was afterwards presented the National Liberal Club of Lond

THE BERESFORDS.

As a Family They Are Superstitious -Family Ghost Appears Before Lord Delaval's Death In Soo Wreck.

Lord Delaval Beresford's death in the Soo railroad wreck a fortnight ago seems to have been heralded in the customary manner by the appearance of the ghost of the wife of Sir Tris-tram Beresford at Curraghmore, the ancestral home of the Beresfords and one of the grandest country places in the south of Ireland, writes the Marthe south of Ireland, writes the Marquise de Fontenoy. This ghostly Lady Beresford, arrayed in the garb of the beginning of the eighteenth century, with fair hair and a broad-black ribbon tied round the wrist of her left arm, always shows herself when any death or misfortune is about to overtake the house of Beresford.

It is, perhaps, by reason of this that the Beresfords are all so intensely superstitious. Indeed, the present head of the house, Lord Waterford, gave an amusing illustration of this peculiarity on the occasion of the birth of his eldest son and heir, little Lord Tyrone. He owns a fine house in Cavendish square, London, which unfortunately bears the number thirteen, and, so alarmed was he lest this unlucky number should cast a blighting influence over the so-called "happy event" that he actually leased for a couple of months another furnished house in the same square, and it was there that the birth of the child took place.

Young Lord Waterford, who is mar-

Young Lord Waterford, who is married to a daughter of Lord Lansdowne, has now two boys. After them in the line of succession to the marquisate and estates comes Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, who has no sons, and after him the 10 year old son of the late Lord William Beresford and of his American wife, a daughter of Commodore Cicero Price of the Uni-ted States.

with regard to the Lady Beresford With regard to the Lady Beresford who always heralds a death in the Beresford family there is a strange story with regard to the black ribbon which her ghost is said to wear always on the wrist, and which figures also on her portrait. It seems that she had a romantic affection for the Lord Tyrone of her day, and, filled with doubts and fears as to the value of their religious opinions, they made a solemn promise to one another that whoever of the two died first should, if permitted by the Almighty, appear to the survivor, for the purpose of solemn promise to one another that whoever of the two died first should, if permitted by the Almighty, appear to the survivor, for the purpose of proving the existence of the Divinity. Fifteen years later she came down one morning to breakfast looking much agitated, with a black ribbon tied round her wrist. Her husband asked her if she had hurt herself, whereupon she earnestly entreated him not to inquire as to the cause of her wearing it, saying, "You will never see me again without it." She then eagerly and anxiously asked whether any letters had arrived, and, on being questioned by her husband, remarked that she expected to hear of Lord Tyrone's death, which, she declared, had taken place the previous Tuesday. Her husband laughed. But in the afternoon a letter was brought in stating that Lord Tyrone had died Tuesday morning at Dublin. To the amazement of Sir Tristram Beresford, his wife, instead of manifesting grief, showed feelings of relief, and exclaimed. "I can now give you a most satisfactory piece of intelligence. I am going to become a mother. It will be a boy and an heir to your estates." The son was born within the year, who, in course of time, inherited not only the Beresford title and estates, but, marrying Lord Tyrone's only child and heiress of all the Le Poer property, was created Earl of Tyrone himself, his father-inlaw's title being revived in his favor. Many years afterwards, when on her deathbed, Lady Beresford revealed to her eldest son and to Archbishop William King of Dublin, her spiritual adviser and most intimate friend, the reason for wearing the black ribbon on her wrist. She declared that, on the night preceding the arrival of the announcement of the death of the last of the Le Poer earls of Tyrone he had appeared to her sitting by the side of her bed. On her screaming with fright he exclaimed:

"Have you forgotten our promise to each other? I died Tuesday morning at 4. I have been permitted to appear thus to assure you that the revealed religion is the true and only one by which we sixty-eighth year."

Lady Beresford continued: "I begged him for some convincing sign or proof, so that when the morning came I might be able to rely that his appearance had been real, and not merepearance nad been real, and not merely the phantom of my imagination. He thereupon laid his hand, which was as cold as marble, on my wrist, and where the fingers touched it the sinews shrank up and the nerves withered. 'Now,' said he, 'let no mortal eye while you live ever see that wrist.'"

After Lady Beresford's death, which

After Lady Beresford's death, which occurred precisely as had been predicted, in her sixty-eighth year, her eldest son and the archbishop of Dublin untied the black ribbon, and found the wrist precisely as she had described it, with the nerves withered and the sinews shrunk, the discovery being placed on written record by both men—namely: Archbishop William King of Dublin and the first of the Beresford Earls of Tyrone.

As for Lord Delaval Beresford, he was the youngest of the brothers of the late marquis, and had practically spent his entire life since the attaining of manhood ranching in Texas, Mexico, and Canada. He visited England occasionally, and formerly held a commission in the army, but had little fondness for the constraints of life in England, preferring the free and untrammeled existence of the Mexican border. His brother, Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, is sailing from England on leave of absence, in order to attend to the liquidation of the dead man's extensive interests on this side of the Atlantic, and incidentally to deal with the claims which have been put forward by Lord Delaval's octoroon housekeeper to his estate, on the plea of being his common law wife, according to Mexican and Texan laws.

Choosing a Wife.

From Punch, with his celebrated "don't," on through the ethical writers of high and low degree, the number of those who advise on the subject of matrimony is legion. Here is rather a new suggestion from a writer in a recent margine.

rather a new suggestion from a writer in a recent magazine:

"In selecting a wife always go by the mother of the girl. It's a good rule, and I've never known it yet to fail. There's a good long stretch of future before most people who make up their minds to get married and for a considerable portion of that stretch the girl will be much more like her mother than like herself. It's easy enough to choose a wife so far as the present is concerned, but if you want to know something of your wife for present is concerned, but if you want to know something of your wife for the future you should take her mother into account. When you see a truly charming mother you may be pretty sure that her daughter is to be depended upon when she reaches the same age. Long before I was more than aware of the existence of my wife, I thought her mother was one of the loveliest women in the world. I was only a little chap, and she, a brilliant young matron, was, of course, unaware of my devotion; but my allegiance never lost its hold, and when I grew up I promptly fell in love with the daughter of the woman I had so long admired."

Editing a Newspaper.

Mr. Rendal Snell, who is laying down the pen as editor of The Marmora Herald for the past eight years, publishes a valedictory in harmony with his editorials of recent years, and in the course of it he says:—'I do not know what feeling most people have towards me, but to me life has seemed so wonderful, so divine a thing that I never could hate anyone if I tried. You may rest assured that when I say I like you the word like is too mild. It does not matter who or what you are. Editing a newspaper to me has been no light matter. I do not think the writers of the Bible could have felt a greater call to their souls to tell the truth. This is not saying I may not have made grievous errors. It's simply giving my motive. I Editing a Newspaper. believe this is true of very many newspaper men. Treating Wrong Disease.

Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heari disease, another from ilver or kidner disease, another from nervous exhaustic nor prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they all present alike to themselves and their easy-going and indifferent, or over-busy doctor, soparating the second of the second and manuerent, or over-busy doctor, spparate and distinct diseases, for which he, assuming them to be such prescribes his pills and potions. In reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some uterine disease. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, encourages this practice until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse, by reason of the delay, wrong treatment and consequent complications.
A proper medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, divacted to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort insiead of prolonged misery. It has been

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the sustem.

It is made of native medicinal roots and a perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," "run-down," deblitated teachers, milliners, cressmakers, seamstresses, "shop girla," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the uterus. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three s dose. Easy to take as candy.

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSON FOR TO-MORROW.

The Story of Cain and Abel:-Gent 4, 3-15. Study the chapter.

Golden Text—Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderbr—I: John; 3, 15.

In this lessen God gives us an account of the first death, a man hated without a cause, murdered and markyred by his own broiher for his religio. Abel was a man of God, Cain was on the evil one, see 7. John, 3, 12. Cain, as Adam's eldest son, would rule the rest both brothers are believers in God, have a religion of different kinds. V. 3—Cain being a farmer brings an effering of fruit.

V. 4—Abel, a shepherd, offers the best and fattest of the firstlings of his flock.

Cain had only an outward form of worship; Abel and bis offering; but unto Cain and his offering is unto Cain and his offering the had not respect.

Sotan stirs Cain to envy, hatred,

Satan stirs Cain to envy, hatred, malice, and finally murder, because his works were evil and his brother's righteous. Satan hates true religion that worships God through the shed blood; a sinner's covenant with God must be with blood, and without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sh. See Heb. 11.

4. Cain's offering was, a sacrifice of the wicked, which is an abomination to God,—Prov. 15. 8.

We can't be right with God and wrong our brether. See Matt. 5, 24.

As they talked together about their religious differences, Cain got mad, and when alone in the field slew Abel. People will, get hot over religion quicker than anything else, and our anger is a sure sign we are wrong; true religion deesn't get angry, for it is the love of God and man.

Cain's answer to God is insulting

V. 9-yet God's longsuffering merev gives him time for repentance.
Cain evidently had more faith in God's mercy than man's; he feared lynch law, See Va. 14-15. Although God banished him as a fugitive and a wanderer, sending him forth as a marked man, yet He pretected him from the vengeance of his fellows, and we hope the goodness of God led him to repent.

Withich of these two-men do we resemble? Cain's answer to God is insulting

Apart from Hon. G. P. Graham's assumption of the Opposition leadership, and the Premier's announcement of an extra $240,000 grant to rural public schools, there was little noteworthy in the Legislature yesterday. The galleries were sparsely filled at 3:25 when the House opened, and some minutes were occupied with the presentation of petitions against the obnoxious clause 666 in the Municipal Act.

for $610,000 was passed through committee.

G. H. Ferguson (Grenville) moved that the House "thank his honer for the gracious speech his honor addressed to us." He spoke for 35 minutes and imparted the news that the Government surplus would be over $300.000, the revenue being in the neighborhood of $7,000,000. The prosperity of Ontario had exceeded the expectations even of the Government, and he congratulated them on having lived within their income. He then took up the various topics mentioned in the speech from the threne and discussed them briefly.

Geo. P. Graham, M. P. P., Passes Away Of Heart Failure At His Home In Fredericton

GOVERNMENT'S PROGRAM COMPLAINED OF A COLD

Fredericton, N. B., Jan. 26.—The death of the Hon. A. G. Blair, former Minister of Railways, yesterday, coming so suddenly in his native city, caused a great shock to the citizens generally. It was altogether unexpected and followed an illness of only a few minutes duration. Mr. Blair came to this city on Thursday afternoon from Ottawa and stopped off here to visit relatives and look after some business matters. On his arrival he was driven from the railway depot to the home of his sister-in-law, Miss Thompson, where he usually stayed when in the city.

Yesterday morning Mr. Blair met

when in the city.

Yesterday morning Mr. Blair met J. H. Barry, K. C., solicitor for the telephone company, by appointment.
During the morning he remarked to Mr. Barry that he felt he should not have come out in such cold weather on account of his having a cold, but on account of his having a cold, but this was taken as a casual remark. However, on going to dinner about 1 o'clock Mr. Blair agreed to meet Mr. Barry at the telephone office at seven o'clock last evening, saying that he would stay in the house during the afternoon and see if he would not feel some better, and they could finish the business connected with the com-ing amalgamation of the New Brunsing amalgamation of the New Bruns-wick and Central Telephone Companies in the evening.

After dinner Mr. Blair remained in the house and between 4 and 5 o'clock he was talking over the telephone, transacting some business, and did not seem to be in ill-health at all from outward appearance. When his sister-in-law came in between 5 and 6 o'clock she found Mr. Blair reclising

His Last Words.

After pleasant remarks Mr. Blair, in referring to Miss Thompson's work at the deueation offices, where she is employed, asked: "What progress have you made in your work to-day?" These proved to be his last words. He soon collapsed, his head fell back and he commenced to breathe hard. Next door lived Judge William Wilson, a former fellow-politician and a

His re-entry into politics had been freely spoken of within the past few weeks.

His Chief Legislature Work.
Mr. Blair's chief legislative work was the Railway Act of Canada, creating a commission for the control of the railways of the country. In guiding it through Parliament he exhibited a knowledge of railways, railway law and railway operation that showed him to have greater powers of mind than had been conceded by ordinary observers and raised him in the estimation of Parliament and the country. By common consent also he was designated as the proper person to take the chief position on the commission his bill provided for, and his successor, Mr. Justice Killam, told the Canadian Club at Ottawa the great value of his work in this respect, in these words:

"There is one thing more I ought to say: I think this country owes a deep debt of gratitude to the first chief commissioners, the Hon. Mr. Blair. Mr. Blair is a very able lawyer; he had much experience as Minister of Railways, and as the head of the railway committee of the Privy Council he took great part in drawing up the Railway Act under which we are working at present, and in order to frame it he must have enquired fully into the different systems in vogue elsewhere. Mr. Blair went to the board of railway commissioners with a large amount of knowledge; more than any other man could have had in undertaking such work. He did great work in establishing the Canadian railway vommission; he established it upon broad lines. I very much regret, and I think the country should regret, that he saw fit to retire so soon from the work of the board.

"I can only say that it appears to me, from my experiences since I have been with the board, that any defects in the system, or in the organization of that board, are almost if not wholly in regard to matters as to which Mr. Blair's ideas were disregarded and overruled, rather than as to those matters with regard to which his ideas were carried out."

Great Shock At Ottawa.

Ottawa, Jan. 26.—The announcement of the sudden death of Hon. A.
G. Blair came as a great shock to the people of Ottawa. Many who heard the news were even then reading in the evening paper an interview but a few hours old with Mr. Blair at Fredericton, in which he had repudiated the idea that he would accept the Lieutenant-Governorship of New Brunswick. "I am not ready yet to be shelved," he said to the reporter.

THE GREEN HORN IN STOCK! shows no signs of life. Perhaps it Why the Amateur Who Would Get-Rich-Quick Would Better Reconsider His Determination.

Greenhorn purchasers of mining stocks often find out that the game is not so simple as it looks, and that it is not all a mere matter of buying anything the promoter recommends, and later selling it out at a

The term "greenhorn" in this case is used advisedly, as it is the amateur speculator who gets landed by ild-cat promoter in nine cases out of ten. The old hand doesn't buy wild-cats, says The Toronto Star. He can spot them a mile away, so to speak, and pretty generally places his money in a producing mine for the stock in which there is a more or less assured market. ess assured market.

Some of the devices which the promoters of these wild-cats use to entrap the unwary are old, but still apparently effective.

One of the most effective devices is that the promoter who puts a certain number of shares on the market at a low price, usually 25 cents a share, with the announcement that the supply to be sold at this figure is limited. He advertises largely, and the amateur speculator, generally a person of most modest circumstances, makes haste to buy, and the promoter rakes in considerable cash. When the silver stream shows signs of drying up, the promoter has recourse to his advertising campaign, and announces in large type, the larger the better, that on and after a certain date, usually not far away, the price of shares in the particular mine he is booming will be advanced, say, to fifty cents a share. This hurries up a lot of reluctant nibblers, who haste to get in before the price gets up. The day comes, and the advertisements are changed accordingly.

ap. The day comes, and the advertisements are changed accordingly. Atmention is drawn to the promise, which is now fulfilled, and the stock, at is now announced, has advanced ato 50 cents a share.

This, however, does not mean that the immonder will now pay 50 cents a share for any stock his clients who bought at 25 cents might wish to sell back to him, and so double their money. Oh, no. That would be too easy! It only means that purchasers from the promoter must pay 50 cents from the promoter must pay 50 cents from the promoter must pay 50 cents a share, unless they can get a private discount; while all the 25-cent crowd can'do is console themselves by believing that their stock is worth donble what they paid for it, even if they can't sell it. This game goes on for a while, and finally the advertising a while, and finally the advertising compaign languishes. Clients write and want to know when or where they can take their profits.

Probably their letters aren't answered. If they come in person, they may be told a dozen things. The mine may be a supported by the second out. The may have suddenly petered out. The demand for the stock has fallen off, but will likely revive again shortly, r any other reason may be advance which will sound plausible.

The real explanation is that the premoter has sold all of that particular kind of paper that he can, that he doesn't propose to buy any back, that he doesn't propose to keep on advertising so as to create a market for other people's stock, and that he probably has a new mine to float, and the result is that thousands of people hold on, with the hope deferred that maketh the heart sick, to the worthless paper which they have bought, but which they have never been and never, in all human probability, will be able to sell.

Another successful device is for the promoter, after he has sold all the stock he can't to anneunce that the balance of the stock and control of the property has been bought by an doesn't propose to keep on advertisnever existed. Ask the promote it, and he'll tell you that he control over the syndicate, that perhaps they are short of money, or have decided, after all, that it would cost too much to develop. In any event, the promoter's skirts are clear, and dupes-well, they are just dupes,

There are dozens of other devices. There is the device of publishing fic-titious bids for a stock, where nobody ever can locate the bidder. It is an old device of promoters to quote a high price as being bid for their stock while they are on the quiet, and through other brokers, dumping all the stock they can get rid of at lower prices.

That the game is profitable for the promoters nobody doubts, and that it ultimately works injury to the shares of reputable properties nobody doubts either, while the misery and the heartache that is caused in thoustoness the control of the doubts. ands of homes where the few dollars that the wild-cat promoter has gobbled could be ill spared cannot be

For the average small house, such as one finds in rows in every suburban town, according to Suburban Life, it is a very good plan to run the same wall paper through the entire first floor, including the hall. This makes the house be given by different ways of treating detail, different colored woodwork in the different rooms and different colored curtains in each room. For in

A house needs to be both large and spa-cious, with big, high studded rooms, to look even passably well with the usual kaleidoscopic method of doing each room in a different color without regard to the others. It would be much more harmonlous to choose some keynote or tone, as gray, brown or green and lead from one room to another with variations, but with constant regard to the harmonious effect in pass-ing through. With any of these colors as a ground tone one can do much, or even the last three well chosen would go well together, and blue may be carefully introduced—"carefully" meaning

Every woman who sews knows how soon that finger becomes disreputable and untidy because of the frequent needle prints which it gets. The work is always held over that finger, and the needle is constantly taking off little slices of it or jabbing into it. At first it is sore, but soon reaches the callous and unsightly stage where the fiercest jab does not affect it. But it looks dreadful, and I know more than one woman who will not sew much because of it. They are proud of their hands and say they simply can't stand having a chawed up left forefinger.

Removing the Collar Lines. There are two ways of removing the dark collar line about the throat. One is to apply peroxide of hydrogen by means of a bit of absorbent cotton or a soft cloth. Apply two or three nights until the stain is bleached off. In a ouple of weeks this should be accomplished. The other way is to rub cold cream or vaseline well into the throat, letting it remain all night, then wiping off whatever excess of grease there is in the morning and bathing with soap and hot water. Do this every night for two or three weeks, and the dark line will gradually disappear.

Restingen Mantle. When some people wish to clean the fittings of an incandescent burner they are often puzzled about a place for the mantle. The mere contact with a hard substance will sometimes shatter such a fragile thing, therefore resting it on a table is a risky proceeding. But when this method is applied the mantle can be safely removed. Insert a hatpin or kuitting needle in the loop at the top and thed balance the pin across an empty tumbler. The mantle then rests inside, where it is safe.

THE HIDDEN TREASURE

SUNKEN WEALTH BENEATH WAT-ERS OF THE GREAT LAKES.

Treasure Hunting Expeditions Usually Only Eusiness-like Ventures, But Occasionally Some of Them Have a Tinge of Romance or Adventure In Thom-The Tragic Story of the "Erie"-Whiskey Lost.

While the oceans and islands in them undoubtedly contain the greater part of the hidden treasure of the world, there are other places which are beginning to attract those infest ed by the germ of "treasureitis," and among these are the Great Lakes. From time to time treasure hunting expeditions have been fitted out at various ports, but they have been gen-arally regarded as such business-like ventures that only now and then has one seen much of romance or adven-ture in them. The majority of these expeditions were unsuccessful in their efforts, but a few of them have reaped rich rewards.

Probably no similar area of any ocean, if suddenly robbed of its waters, would expose to human eyes more sunken ships or more valuable car-goes than would the five Great Lakes. This is easily understood, says The Detroit News-Tribune, when one knows that during the twenty years between 1878 and 1898 only one less than 6,000 vessels were wrecked on the inland seas, and that 1,093 of these were total losses. The loss of cargo during those years, which represent but a little more than one fourth of the years of navigation on the Lakes, was 6,548,900, and from this it is quite safe to reason that the total amount of property which has gone to the battom of the Lales, counting only cargoes, would make the enormous total of at least $12,000,000.

Of course, the greater part of all this sunken property has been de-stroyed by time and water, but much of it was indestructible, and is as good to-day as when it was lost. It is also true that at the bottom of the Lakes would be found valuables of less romantic interest than the gold and plate of Spanish galleons and the riches of pirate chests. There is little doubt but that there are large sums of money hidden in the inland seas, but most of their lost treasure is made up of copper, steel, iron, coal, machinery and other practically indestruct ible things which go to make up Lake

Tragic Story of the "Erie." How a ship may lose herself in the Great Lakes and for years, perhaps forever, defy all attempts to discovering her is illustrated in the tragic story of the Erie, a treasure ship which was lost in Lake Erie during the search of 1841. This vessel unseason of 1841. This vessel, un-the command of Capt. T. J. Titus, der the command of Capt. T. J. Titus, left Buffalo for Chicago on the after-noon of Aug. 9. When about 33 miles from Buffalo, off Silver Creek, a slight from Buffalo, off Silver Creek, a slight explosion was heard and almost immediately the whole vessel was enveloped in flames. On board the Erie were scores of immigrants bound for the West and specie amounting to $180,000, but in the excitement and appalling loss of life which followed, no thought was given to the treasure. The steamer De Witt Clinton came up in time to save many lives, but in going down the Erie carried 100 souls with her. For years after this the treasure ship lay half buried in the sand 70 feet under water. Not until 14 years later in 1855, was a Underwriters worked on her all one autumn, securing only 19 tons of copper. Then Capt. Baker, of Detroit, began operations which re-sulted in the recovery of nearly $100,-000 worth of property. In 1895 the William Home, loaded with $20,000 worth of steel billets, sank in 96 feet-Pressing Needlework.

A Dishwashing Hint.

In washing vessels which have been used to prepare eggs in any way or to hold batter of any kind of dough allow a cold water spigot to run upon them first. Hot water cooks the eggs and stiffens the floury pastes, making it doubly difficult to clean the pot, pan or kettle in question.

One night the Dean Richmond, with $50,000 worth of pig zinc on board, myster-lously disappeared between those two places. Every hand aboard was lost and their bodies were picked up ashore. In vain have searching parties spent much time and money in the hunt for the lost vessel. The last attempt was made by the Murphy Wrecking Co. of Buffalo, which had a vessel and several divers searching all one year without success.

where between Cleveland and the Detroit River are a deckload of locomotives, lost from the Clarion in 1851. In Lake Huron, in the neighborhood of Saginaw Bay, are said to be more lost ships than in any other part of the Great Lakes, and for that reason Huron has frequently been referred to as the "Lake of Sunken Treasure." In the days when the country along the bay was filled with lumber camps. arge sums of money were brought up a small vessels, and many of these versels were lost. In the deep water of Saginaw Bay, it is believed, lies the City of Detroit, which went down in 1873 with about $50,000 worth of copper aboard. All hands were lost and no wreckage of the vessel was ever found. The R. G. Coburn, also laden with copper, sank in the bay in 1871, with a loss of thirty lives. Although searches have been made for her, the location of the Coburn is still one of the unsolved mysteries of the Lakes.

Whiskey Cargoes Lost.

Of the treasure which is awaiting discovery in the inland seas, whiskey forms cutte a part. Scores of vessels with Cargoes of this liquor, have been lost, and while whiskey does not age under water, it would be fully as good as when it went down as when it went down.

In 1846 the Lexington, commanded Capt. Peer, cleared from Cleveland for Port Huron, freighted with 110 barrels of whiskey. In midlake the ves-sel foundered with all on board, and though sixty years have passed since though sixty years have pessed anneather then she has never been located. To-day her cargo of whiskey would be worth $115 a barrel. In 1850 the Anthrope worth $115 a barrel. In 1850 the Anthrope worth $115 a barrel. thony Wayne went down in Lake Erie with 300 barrels of wine and whiskey, and five years later the Westmore-land sank near Manitou Island with a similar cargo. These are only a few of the many cargoes of whiskies and wines which are now at the bottom of the Great Lakes.

It is estimated that at the present time there are several hundred thou-sand dollars worth of coal at the bottom of the Lakes, and that the day is approaching when modern invention will make it possible to recover much of this there is little doubt. In Tobermory Bay a device is now being used which, according to the description of its work, might be employed successfully to bring up cargoes of coal. This invention is a long pipe which can be thrust down deeper than divers can work, and which, by means of power-gratulation, and telegrams of the aged couple called to empratulation, and telegrams.

ons of coal with her, and in 1898 the St. Peter sank in Lake Ontario with a valuable cargo of fuel. These big cargoes are only a few of the many which may some day be recovariated.

THE CLIMBING PERCH.

An East Indian Fish That Travels

As a rule, fish come out of the water only at the end of a line or by other Sawoluntary process, but the climbing sperch of the East Indies thinks nothing of leaving a pool with which it is and starting overland in search of one more to its taste.

This usually happens as a result of the evaporation of a pool in the extreme-ly dry season. When the fish decide that the water in the particular pool formed during the rainy season is in danger of drying out completely they make all preparations for moving and late at night or early in the morning deliberately climb the banks and start off in search of some more commodious pool or stream net in danger of going dry. When the journey is made at the hour it usually is the fish are favored by the heavy dew which lies on the grass, but if an emergency arises they will boldly strike out at noontime along the dusty road.

They travel by means of the strong fins which are full of sharp spines, like those of the common perch. They have a receptacle in which they carry water with them to moisten their gills. It is said that they will live several days out of water, and with the assistance of the dew laden grass the fish that starts in search of a satisfactory pool or stream is practically sure of living until it finds it. — Brockton

Origin of "Jesuits." The members of the Society of Jesus appear first to have been given their cother than Calvin. Pope Sixtus V. ata tempted to change their name from "Society of Jesus" to "Society of Ignatius," after their founder, Ignatius Loyela, but the attempt miscarried. and the Jesuits have never become "Ignatians," after the model of the Franciscans, Dominicans and Benedictines, although their enemies in Spain used to call them "Inigisias" (Inigo be ing the Spanish original of Loyola's Christian name). In France after their expulsion in 1765 those who ventured remain temporarily called them-"Fathers of the Faith." "Clerks of the Sacred Heart."-London

WITH LIFE OUT OF TUNE

ONE'S DAYS SURE TO BE FULL OF DISSATISFACTION.

THE REBELLION OF JONAH

New Interpretation of the Text: "Doest Thou Well to Be Angry?" Wherein the Preacher Enforces the Influence of the Emotions Upon Those Who Permit Themselves to Be Controlled by Them.

intered according to Act of Parliament of Can-ada, in the year 1907, by Frederick Diver, To-ronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 20.—In this sermon the preacher gives a new in-terpretation to the rebellion of Jonah, the prophet, and shows that when our own hearts are out of tune with God and nature life is full of discord and dissatisfaction. The text is Jo-nah iv, 9, "Doest thou well to be angry?"

nah iv, 9, "Doest thou well to be angry?"
Sometimes I am inclined to think that Jonah is the most famous character of the Bible next to Jesus Christ. There are many people who know nothing about Abraham or Samuel or David or Isaiah who know all about the wonderful story of Jonah and the whale. That one incident in his career has made him the most famous of the prophets. His fame is due not so much to the disciples of Christ as to the enemies of Jesus. No sooner does a man brought up in a Christian home begin to listen to the enemies of the Bible and get ready to cut adrift from all past Christian associations than he hunts up the book of Jonah and sets out to prove that the Bible is a pack of absurdities by holding up the story of this recreant prophet to ridicule.

It is very easy to ridicule this story. Very shallow men devoid of logic or the power of analysis can do that. It serves as a handle of attack on the Bible, which can be used by any man who hates the Bible for its uncompromising attitude against sin and dislikes it for demanding of every man mising attitude against sin and dis-likes it for demanding of every man repentance and faith. Perhaps if Jo-nah had told the people of Nineveh what had happened to him they would have laughed at that instead of put-ting on sackeloth. De patting on sackcloth. Do not let us be led aside into such foolishness or in any way to lay stress on this incident. Peraside into such foolishness or in any way to lay stress on this incident. Perhaps if we knew more about the story and the man who wrote it and Jonahhimself we might find that there was no difficulty at all in it. It is a waste of time to dwell upon it when the moral of what the writer wants to teach is so obvious—that when God calls a man to a work it is useless to calls a man to a work it is useless to evade the duty, and if he does try to evade it he will be brought back to it by some means, ordinary or extra-

Having spoken these few words in the way of introduction, I want to dwell on one of the most remarkable characteristics of that obstinate and wayward prophet's mind. After Jonah had gone to Nineveh and told the people of Nineveh that unless they repented and turned from their sins they would all be destroyed the Ninevites put on sackcloth and ashes and repented and turned from their sins they would all be destroyed the Ninevites put on sackcloth and ashes and repented. Then God, mercifully noting that repentance, said that he would not destroy them. Then Jonah petulantly flew off into a violent rage. "There," he said, "my work of prophecy is all gone for naught! Thou, O God, hast made a laughingstock of me. I told the Ninevites they would perish in forty days. Now thou sayest they can live. Who' will listen to my warnings in future?" So angry Jonah goes off upon the hillside overlooking the city of Nineveh and there sulks and sulks and pouts and pouts. He said: "I knew it. I knew God would not destroy them. And now my business of prophesying is ruined forever. No one will believe me." Then God speaks to Jonah the words of my text, "Doest thou well to be angry?" So I ask you to-day the same words. "Doest thou well to be angry?" Now, why did God say unto Jonah, "Doest thou well to be angry?" Now, why did God say unto Jonah, "Doest thou well to be angry?" The Bible says. "Doest thou well says. "Doest thou well says." The Bible says." Doest thou well says.

have not quoted the whole of the pas sage. The Bible says, 'Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd?' While Jonah was upon that hillside over-Jonah was upon that hillside over-looking the city he sat under the sha-dow of a broad leaf that spread it-self out as an umbrella over his head. This leaf had a mushroom growth. It grew up in a night. It grew so rapid-ly that you could almost see it grow if you watched it. But, like all quick growing fungi, it withered away even ly that you could almost see it grow if you watched it. But, like all quick growing fungi, it withered away even more quickly than it grew. While the prophet sat upon the hillside this leafy umbrella suddenly shrank and fell. Then the hot Assyrian sun beat down upon his unprotected head, and he was overcome by the heat. He had a sunstroke. He fainted dead away. When he came to, he was mad. He practically said 'O God, I fel so miserable I wish I were dead.' And I do not blame him. With parched lips and overheated brow and excurciating pains chasing themselves up and down his anatomy he might better be dead. There is no sun hotter on earth than the Assyrian sun. The old site of Nineveh lies to-day in the midst of a desert. Jonah was simply physically sick from the heat, and that, of course, made him mentally and spiritually sick also."

and overheated brow and excruciating pains chasing themselves up and down his anatomy he might better be dead. There is no sun hotter on earth than the Assyrian sun. The old site of Nineveh lies to-day in the milist of a desert. Jonah was simply physically sick also."

Oh. no, my brother, you are wrong. Jonah was not angry so much with the folding up of that great leaf which protected him as an umbrella as hewas angry with himself. The gourd was a mere incident. God told tim to go to Nineveh. He would not go to Nineveh. He would not gost of Nineveh. He would not gost of Nineveh. He would not go to Nineveh. And when he got angry with himself he got angry with all his surroundings. And when finally he had to go to Nineveh under compulsion, as a slave is driven to his task, he grumbled all the way there. He grumbled while he delivered his prophecy. He grumbled when the gourd was taken away. He would have grumbled if the leafy sunshade had remained open, just as he grumbled when it withered away. In other words, Jonah was grumbling with his surroundings, just as some of us are grumbling with our surroundings merely because we are not willing to obey God's commandments. When you and I get out of touch with God, every flower we see will become a weed, and every living creature that flies about us will be a hornet thrusting a sting, and every sunbeam well have a blasting heat, and every wind will be a sirocco hissing and moaning over a desert of sand. Jonah was not angry with the withered leaf. He was not angry with his own obstinate, sinful, selfish self. He was out of tune with the divine nature, and therefore he was out of harmony with everybody and everything.

My brother, do you want to see the tal of the north.

the divine nature, and therefore he was out of harmony with everybody and everything.

My brother, do you want to see the sun shale again? Do you want to associate with loving, gentle, kind people? Would you have your pathway strewn with flowers and your heaven melodious with songs? Then get right with God. Get right with your better and truer self. Undo at once the wrongs you have done your neighbors. But we must not halt here. Jonah's anger stands as the symbol of the small souled Christian that we see sometimes on a throne or in a bishop's chair, who says: "If the world cannot be saved through me, then I shall do all in my power to destroy it. If I cannot make all Christians surround my chancel or study my catechism or listen to my preaching, then I will do everything in my power to debar them from entering any other church or studying any other catechism or listening to any other preaching. What we want in religious work is a great church trust. And the man whom we want at the head of that great church trust is a man of our own denomination or selection. In other words, if I and mine are not going to get the credit for saving the world, then I and tion or selection. In other words, if I and mine are not going to get the credit for saving the world, then I and mine will do all in our power to keep the world from being saved." Is not that exactly the position of Jonah when he got angry with God because God had repented of the evil that he had said he would do unto the Ninevites and he did it not?
"There," I can hear Jonah say, "I knew it. I knew it. Here I was, the greatest prophet in all the east. The crowds everywhere ran after me.

knew it. I knew it. Here I was, the greatest prophet in all the east. The crowds everywhere ran after me. Whenever I lifted up my voice I could see men's cheeks pale and their limbs tremble. They were afraid to have me speak one word lest I might hurl a divine thunderbolt at them. I gloried in my power. When I went to faroff Nineveh, even there the people had heard of my fame. And when I entered into that city and began to cry, 'Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be destroyed!' pandemonium reigned everywhere. The people got as frightened as a lot of fawns being chased by the falcons which are trying to pick out their eyes. They immediately fell down upon their knees and began to pray. I was the biggest man in that town. What I said was quoted by every lip. But now God has gone back upon that prophecy. The forty days have passed, and every wall is standing, and the homes are all filled with happy families. He has ruined all my prophecy business. If I go back into Nineveh, the little children will follow me and laugh at me and say to me: 'Aha! There is Jonah, who said Nineprophecy business. If I go back into Nineveh, the little children will follow me and laugh at me and say to me: 'Aha! There is Jonah, who said Nineveh was to be destroyed. Look about you, Jonah, and see the city. You are a fine prophet, Jonah! You could not tell the time of day with your eyes open, let alone what is going to happen to-morrow.'' "But it displeased Jonah axceedingly, and he was very angry." Angry for what? Because God had saved a city? No. Angry because the people might not think him a great prophet, as they did a few days ago when he cried out, "Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be destroyed!" and yet, my brother, I want to ask you a question. Is Jonah's sinful, childish anger any different from the mean, despicable and repugnant jealousies of many of our modern Christian workers? I believe not. I believe it is not very different from that which is to be found in some of our own selfish hearts.

Oh, that we could one and all so sink our selfish personalities in gospel work that we did not care by what means the sinners should be led to the cross, as long as the wayward and the lost were able thereby to find Christ! May we be enabled to cease our sectarian conflicts. May we not strive to lift our sectarian creeds

Christ! May we be enabled to cease our sectarian conflicts. May we not strive to lift our sectarian creeds above the cross. May we cease to be bigoted and selfish Jonahs. May our one joy be to see men and women come to the cross. May we care not, by what means sinners come as long as they are saved. Lord God, teach us to sink self that they Son, our Saviour, may be glorified before men. But why was it that Jonah fled away from Nineveh, and why did he sail for Tarshish? I want to show you why he shirked his duty. To show the cause or why a sin is committed is often to show us how we may flee the results of that sin. Jonah wanted to be God's prophet, but he wanted to be a gospel soldier without having to meet the dangers and trials and sacrifices of a gospel warrior. I believe all this can be substantiated by studying the geographical position of the great capital of Sennacherib, whose palaces in nearby Kuyunjik were one of the world.

Jonah was then living at the beautiful seaport town of Towar the city, and cry against it, for their wickedness is come up before me." In other words, God said unto his prophet soldier: "Gird on thy armor, mighty prophet. Go forth to battle. Draw the sword of faith and strike at my enemies. Go into the citadel of sin called Nineveh, the great capital of the north."

Now, what happened? Jonah began to make excuses. I think I hear him say: "Lord God, why dost thou command me to go to Nineveh? Dost thou want to kill me? Dost thou want to kill me? Dost thou want to destroy me? Nineveh is at least 700 miles to the northeast of Joppa. In order to travel toward it I will have to cross the deserts and be attacked by the wild beasts and be hunted by the Eedouin robbers, who are more merciless and ferocious than wild beasts. Besides, Lord, I must go alone. I will certainly die if I have to go." Then Jonah, in his own mind, began to conjure up difficulties. He piled them up and up until at last he said: "I will not go. No, I won't. God has no right to ask me to make this sacrifice." Then, as he makes this sinful resolve, he looks out of his window, and he sees a ship at anchor. It was taking on its lest hale of car. Now, what happened? Jonah began window, and he sees a ship at anchor. It was taking on its last bale of car-It was taking on its last bale of cargo. It was just ready to sail for Tarshish. That was the ancient name for the modern country of Spain. And so he got into a rowboat and pushed out to the ship and set sail for the west instead of setting out to travel over the Assyrian deserts to the northern capital of Nineveh. And, my brother, you know as well as I know that the reason most of us flee our Ninevehs is because we are not willing to make the sacrifices God wants ing to make the sacrifices God wants us to make.

But I cannot close this sermon without noticing another fact. Jonah without noticing another fact. Jonah was angry because God repented of the evil that he had said he would do unto the Ninevites and he did not. Why? Because these Ninevites were Gentiles and not Jews. In the sight of Jonah they belonged to the barbarians. He would not have cared so much it they had been Hebrews, as he was a Hebrew. But they belonged to a class outside of his own nationality. And from time immemorial the Hebrews always looked upon their God as their own God exclusively. Thus, by accepting this repent

ly. Thus, by accepting this repentance of the Ninevites, God was practically saying: "Jonah, I am a God to the Hebrew. Jonah, I am a God to the Egyptian. Jonah, I am a God to the white and to the black and to the yellow skinned and to the Malay. I am God to all peoples of all classes. yellow skinned and to the Malay. I am God to all peoples, of all classes. Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." And I see Jonah sitting upon that hillside. I hear him say with angry lip: "Nay, Eord, nay. If thou are to be a God to the Hebrew, then be a God to the Hebrew race alone." Some time ago I was talking to some

Some time ago I was talking to some of the ablest Bible students of the west, and without exception they devest, and without exception they declared that this national exclusiveness was one of the chief causes of the anger of this obstinate prophet. And yet, after I had been thinking, along this line for a little while, I said to myself: "Are we not all Jonaha? Do we not want to hem in the work of Leves to any corn social and work of Jesus to our own social and national cliques? Do not some of us-say: 'What is the good of sending missionaries to China? Let China keep on worshiping its idols if it wishes. We are not responsible for what China Do we want our Christ to be does." Do we want our Christ to be the Christ of the harlot and the laborer and the black man? Are we trying with an intense yearning desire to bring all social classes into our churches and have the poor and the unfortunate worship Christ by our side in our own church pews? "Nay." side in our own church pews? "Nay, nay!" some of us say. "Let the missions be run for the poor and the so-cial outcasts. But, for me and my. my home, let us worship Christ amon respectable Christians in a respectable neighborhood, in a respectable way." O man, when thou art crowding the poor man and the harlot and the drunkard and the thief from the church door art thou not a Jonah, angry because God has forgiven the Ninevites their sins?

As I come to the end of this sermon I want to lead you for a moment within the mighty walls of this great capital of the north. I want you to see the mighty rivers that flow through it. I want you to see its dams and the seed of the s sluices and great canals. I want you to see its castles and walls and pal to see its castles and walls and pal-aces and temples. Nineveh was not a village. Nineveh was the mightiest capital of the east. It covered an area of over 400 square miles. I want you to see the princes and princesses and nobles and common people now jostl-ing each other. I want you to hear the songs of praises as they sing them to the great God who has forgiven them their sins. Then I want to tell them their sins. Then I want to tell you that this mighty people and this mighty city, after they had heard the warning call of Jonah and repented of their sins, fell again into sin. Their last sins were worse than their former sins. Two centuries later, in 625 B. C., God wiped out that city on account of those sins from the face of the earth and so obliterated it that for over a thousand years so one knew where this mighty capital of the east

This is the conclusion of an old employe in the Royal Park, London, a careful observer who has seen the question "Should women ride astride?" raised more than once. The matter was discussed in the newspa-

Among the distinguished woman's bicycle.

Among the distinguished women who ride astride at present are Lady. Castlereagh, the Duchess of Westminster, the Hon. Mrs. Fairburn and Lady. Constance Stewart-Richardson. Lady Castlereagh is for the moment the most prominent exponent of this method in London, owing to her husband being a member of Parliament. She is in town this fall and daily rides in the Row. She looks charming on horseback, and it takes some consideration to realize that she is wearing a divided riding costume. The only comment one hears as she canters on her dark little mare is—"How neatly that lady rides!"

She is almost the only woman using rides!"

She is almost the only woman using the Row just now, but there is a daily growing number of girls who put in an hour or two a day riding astride. They include the chaughter of the Duchess of Sutherland, who is, like the others, in her teens. Cyriously enough, the teachers of riding are opposed to the system. It is one very easily taught. The girls learn to ride across the saddle as easily as their brothers.

They enjoy it immensely and seem to feel very much more at home than in the old fashioned side saddle, which expert riders among the fair sex declare is tiring to both horse and occupant. They ride rather "short" as compared to the old habit. Their last sins were worse than their former sins. Two centuries later, in 625 B. C., God wiped out that city on account of those sins from the face of the earth and so obliterated it that for over a thousand years so one knew where this mighty capital of the east had stood. It disappeared more completely than did Pompeli under the burning lava of volcanie Vesuvius.

It disappeared so completely that, though Xenophon in 400 B. C. led his great army over its ancient site, he could not tell where the people of Sennacherib's capital had dwelt. So, like Nineveh, we who have once repented of our sins may fall again into sin and be eternally destroyed.

May God grant that the apostasy of a Nineveh or a Judas shall not be our spiritual doom. May we, one and all, every day of our lives continue to fight the good fight of faith as did Paul, who was the mightiest servant of Christ that ever lived. LAND OF RAINBOWS.

Strange Sights Seen By Mrs. Leonidas Hubbard, jr., In Her Remarkable

Journey Through Labrador. In her remarkable journey through Labrador last year, Mrs. Leonidas Hubbard, jr., saw many strange sights. Perhaps the most interesting of these was the caribou migration. "On August 8," she writes in the bulletin of the American Geographical Society, "we came upon the migration and saw one herd in which there were thousands. We did not find them again in such numbers, yet for there were thousands. We did not find them again in such numbers, yet for fifty miles of our journey they were seen in smaller herds every day, and sometimes many times a day.

"They were in summer dress of pretty brown, shading to gray and white on the under parts. The antlers were in velvet and of immense size, and males and females were already herding together. Apparently they had been in occupation of the country for some time.

been in occupation of the country for some time.

"From Ptarmigan Point, on Lake Michikamats, to the head of Long Lake, on the George River, the country was a network of their trails, in the woodlands and bogs, cut deep into the soil, on the barren hill-sides broad, dark bands converging to the crossing place at the river. North of the Height of Land we passed at intervals long piles of whitened antlers; and along the shore opposite our camp of August 15, a broad band of white caribou hair, four feet above the river, told of their crossing and recrossing while shedding their winter coats.

"Only once in passing this part of

"Only once in passing this part of the country did we find trace of their enemy, the wolf. Throughout the journey we did not see any, but once, while running down the lower George River, a lonely cry came down to us from one high up on the mountain side.

from one high up on the mountain side.

"Through the caribou belt other game was more abundant also. Every day mother ducks with their flocks of little ones were seen, and a number of geese were taken. Gulls and loons were there in numbers, and ptarmigan were very plentiful as far as the head of the Barren. Ground Water: but beyond none were taken till we reached the post.

"Along the lower part of each of the rivers signs of loxes in large numbers were found, and the lemmings on which they feed made us not a little trouble. They were about in thousands and the ground was so perforated with their holes as to remind one of a porous plaster.

"In the lakes fish seem abundant, though we traveled too fast to do much fishing, and the nets were not once in the water. There are brook trout, oursniche and namayoush, some whitefish, in the lakes, and tim the lower George the sea trout and salmon.

some whitefish, in the lakes, and the lower George the sea trout and salmon.

"The flowers are beautiful, though not so varied as in the home country. All along the Nascaupee, blossoms of the Labrador tea filled the air with their fragrance and pale laurel grew in abundance. Now and then we crossed great beds of blossoming cloud berries and everywhere the star flower and bunchberry showed their white blossoms.

"One day while ascending the Wapustan River Gilbert handed me a dandelion and during the day I saw several of them, but did not again find them throughout the journey. On the upper Nascaupee the pink bells of the low cranberry showed in the carpet of glossy green and near the water the blossoms of the dewberry.

"Violets grew along both rivers, but most beautiful of all was the twin flower. Its delightful fragrance first attracted my attention and looking down I saw the long trailing vines.

"At Ungava masses of this beautiful flower creep along the foot of the mountain, while indoors in a pot on the window sill Mrs. Ford, the agent's wife, treasures two tiny clover plants, almost alraid in her eagences to believe that they really were clover.

"During the journey, which occupied two months, from June 27 to August 27, the weather was wonderfully fine. We were in camp only eleven days on account of rain and the highest temperature reached was 77 degrees F. in the shade. The lowest recorded temperature was 30 degrees, though it was not the minimum reached.

"On the morning of August 10, we had snow nurries.

"Thunderstorms were rare, and compared with those in the United States very mild. On many beautiful days we had passing showers. Labrador is a land of rainbows. Nowhere have I seen their colors so brilliant or so variedly manifested. They did not always appear in the form of a bow, and once I saw them lie like a beautiful veil along the whole length of Rainbow Hill on the upper Nascauof Rainbow Hill on the upper Nascaupee.

"There was a wonderful clearness in the atmosphere, which made landmarks miles away seem very near and clothed the far distant hills with color indescribably beautiful. In the blue of the hills and the waters and the sky there was a peculiar silveriness, which, with the white of the reindeer moss and the dark green of the spruce forests, touched in places with tender green of the white hirch and poplar, made a combination of color which, I think, can scarcely be surpassed in beauty anywhere in the world. In a way which I could neither describe nor understand, it was comforting.

"The flies and mosquitoes, for which the country is famed, did not wholly fail of accomplishing, their dire designs upon us; but their ravages are easily forgotten in the remembrance of the beauties of that lone land which can smile with so much grace, even though its mood has sometimes been one of such persistent cruelty."

day are severely condemned by many doctors on the ground that they affect one's regular sleep. Scientists have found that in the ordinary course in the human being there is the greatest vitality between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. and the least between 2 o'clock and 6 o'clock in the morning. Long sleeps during the day interfere with this order of nature, sometimes causing head-ache. The nap of forty winks, but only forty, proves refreshing to many because it is too short to have any injurious consequences.

MARK TWAIN TURNED DOWN.

Unique Position Occupied In World of Letters by Publisher Carleton.

My experience as an author began early in 1867, says Mark Twain in The North American Review. I came to New York from San Francisco in the first month of that year and presently Charles H. Webb, whom I had known in San Francisco as a reporter on The Bulletin, and afterward editor of The Californian, suggested that I publish a volume of sketches. I had but a slender reputation to publish it on, but I was charmed and excited by the suggestion and quite willing to venture it if some industrious person would save me the trouble of rethering the sketches trouble of to venture it if some industrious person would save me the trouble of gathering the sketches together. I was loath to do it myself, for from the beginning of my sojourn in this world there was a persistent vacancy in me where the industry ought to be. ("Ought to was" is better, perhaps, though the most of the authorities differ as to this.)

Webb said I had some reputation in the Atlantic states, but I knew quite well that it must be of a very attenuated sort. What there was of it rested upon the story of "The Jumping Frog." When Artemus Ward passed through California on a lecturing tour, in 1865 or '66, I told him the "Jumping Frog" story, in San Francisco, and he asked me to write it out and send it to his publisher, Carleton, New York, to be used in padding out a small book which Artemus had prepared for the press and which needed some more stuffing to mus had prepared for the press and which needed some more stuffing to make it big enough for the price which was to be charged for it.

Webb had made an appointment for me with Carleton; otherwise I never should have gotten over that frontier Carleton rose and said brusquely aggressively:

"Well, what can I do for you?"
I reminded him that I was there by appointment to offer him my book for publication. He began to swell, for publication. He began to swell, and went on swelling and swelling and swelling and swelling and swelling until he had reached the dimensions of a god of about the second or third degree. Then the fountains of his great deep were broken up, and for two or three minutes I couldn't the the state of the weak words.

for two or three minutes I couldn't see him for the rain. It was words, only words, but they fell so densely that they darkened the atmosphere. I read they darkened the atmosphere. I read they derive the they darkened the temporary that they darkened the whole room and said:

"Books — look at those shelves! Every one of them is loaded with books that are waiting for publication. Do I want any more? Excuse me, I don't. Good morning."

Twenty-one years elapsed before I saw Carleton again. I was then so journing with my family at the Schweitzerhof, in Luzerne. He called on me, shook hands cordially, and said at once, without any preliminaries.

"I am substantially an obscure person, but I have at least one distinction to my credit of such colossal dimensions that it entitles me to immortality—to wit: I refused a book of yours, and for this I stand without a competitor as the prize ass of the nineteenth century."

It was a most handsome apology, and I told him so, and said it was a long-delayed revenge but was sweeter-to me than any other that could be devised; that during the lapsed 21 years I had in fancy taken his life several times every year, and always in new and increasingly cruel and inhuman ways, but that now I was nan ways, but that now I was pacified, appeased, happy, even jubi-lant; and that thenceforth I should hold him my true and valued friend and never kill him again. A Nawspaper Deg.

Out from the breezy West comes a cheerful word for and about the country editor. The Vermilion, Alberta, Signal believes that the country editor's life is not half bad, and in fact is a fascinating vocation. The editor then tells a tale of how a faithful newspaper helper took it to heart when kept away from the business. Out in Olds, in the early days, there was a newspaper run, so far as the machinery was concerned, by dog power. One night a fire wiped out The Chronicle. The editor felt sad, but he sent away for a new outfit, and settled down to the process of waiting, but the dog didn't understand and was but the dog didn't understand and was not consoled. The tale proceeds: "Knowing that this was the day on which the paper should appear, the dog went round to mount the treadmill and start the wheels. But he found no mill, no press, no typis, no nothin'—not even the editor, who was receiving the convoling attention of receiving the consoling attention of friends over a tall tumbler of liquid delight. The dog was heart-broken. He took a farewell turn round the town, curled up on the corner oppo-site the ruins of The Chronicle, and died." Trees By the Roadside.

Trees By the Readside.

The German province of Hanover owns 1,976 miles of highways, on which there are 175,794 fruit treespear, cherry, plum and apple—sufficient, if set out eighty to an acre, to form an orchard of more than 300 square miles. The fruit raised on these trees is a source of income for the province, which sometimes makes $40,000 a year by selling the products of this elongated orchard. The province maintains a nursery of 403 acres to supply young trees for roadside use and for promoting the interests of fruit culture. The profit on a tree is very small, but the Hanover people do not worry about that. Shade is afforded in summer, the roadbed is free from dust, the presence of trees retards the washing out of the soil from the banks into the roadside ditches, and the attractive appearance of the roadsides stimulates an interest in tree culture and benefits the protince in many other ways. They find it worth while.

STORY OF CINDERELLA.

Not a Fairy Tale, But Founded Upon Actual Fact-Her Father Was Homely Barof Grimm.

He needs Bu-Ju if he wants to enjoy health and his favorite drink for years to come. All Alcoholic drinks irritate the Kidneys. A man, who drinks regularly, is almost sure to have cloudy urine, brick dust deposits of Eisenach, in the seventeenth central factors and the favorable factors are the factors and the factors are the factors are the factors and the factors are the factors are the factors and the factors are the factor of Eisenach, in the seventeenth century.

The real Cinderella was the daughter of a Baron Grimm, whose homeliness was such that the reigning duke promoted him to a seat on the judicial bench, in order to compel him to surface the court for render his office at the court, for which he was not considered sufficient-ly ornamental. The baron, who mere-ly saw in his promotion an indicaly saw in his promotion an indica-tion of his sovereign's favor and con-fidence, was led thereby to imagine that he had a great future before him, and accordingly brought up his eld-est daughter, Leonora, in a way to fit her for the grandest of marriages. All sorts of pecuniary sacrifices were made in order to endow her with all the accomplishments and to furnish her with every feminine elegance and luxury.

Her sister Elizabeth was born about ten years later, and by the time she had reached her teens her father had become convinced of the fallacy of his hopes, and realized that his elevation the bench had been merely a method f shelving him, and that he had nothing further to expect from his sovereign. He considered, therefore, that it would be altogether wrong to educate Elizabeth above her station, and that it would be infinitely preferable to merely teach her those particular duties which would be useful in the wife of a man of modest circumstances. Accordingly, she received a most elementary education as far as the belles lettres and arts were con-cerned, and was forced to spend, most of her time in the kitchen, learning how to cook, and in the linen room engaged in sewing and darning. No was any money wasted on her dress. Every penny that could be spared was devoted to her elder sister, Leonora. The Baron and Baroness Grimm had come to the conclusion that their only hope of ever recovering any of the capital that had been spent on the bringing up of their elder daughter lay in her marrying some rich or powerful personage, and everything in the Grimm household was subordinated to this consideration. So pronounced was the difference in the treatment and in the appearance of the two sixers that the younger of the two reters that the younger of the two re-ceived the name of "Aschenbroedl" (Cinderella) on account of her being forever over the kitchen fire.

One day Cinderella was in her kit-chen when there entered suddenly a man of the name of Wilhelm, who had been a boyhood friend of the reigning duke, and who had acquired a good deal of influence over him— an influence of which the nobles and ministers of state were extremely jealministers of state were extremely leal-ous. Fearing to lose his place in the favor of his sovereign Wilhelm determined to induce his young mas-ter to wed—to marry a woman who would consent to become the ally and supporter of himself. Wilhelm rea-lized that no foreign princess, nor even any of the daughters of the nobles even any of the daughters of the hobbes and dignitaries at Eisenach, would be disposed to help him, deficient as he was in ancestry and in blue blood. Finally he bethought himself of the younger daughter of Baron Grimm, with whose story he was acquainted, and in her kitchen he formed an al-liance with her and in her kitchen he formed an alliance with her.

It was arranged between them that she should meet the duke at the next fancy dress ball at court. When Elizabeth explained that she had neither dresses, nor jewels, nor servants, nor carriages, Wilhelm at once told her that he would furnish everything that she needed of the kind for that evening, and added that if asked to explain her luxury she should insist that she owed it to a fairy godmother. Thanks owed it to a fairy godmother. Thanks to his clever manoeuvres the duke met Elizabeth von Grimm at the ball, calllot be said that he was much struck with her beauty. For truth compels me to state that Elizabeth, far from being the lovely creature de-scribed in fairy tales, was at the most merely pleasant faced. But she had far from being the lovely creature described in fairy tales, was at the most merely pleasant faced. But she had a phenomenally small foot, which was indeed her principal attraction.

Shortly after the duke left the side of Elizabeth Wilhelm approached and asked him who that "admirable creature" was whom he had just been honoring with his attention.

"It is the younger daughter of Baron Grimm," replied the duke. "She is a nice girl, but I do not see that she is so admirable."

"O." exclaimed Wilhelm, "then your highness has certainly not noticed her foot." "No, I did not," replied the duke. Whereupon Wilhelm exclaimed, "Why, she has the smallest foot in existence, and it is impossible for her to find any shoe which is not too large for her tiny extremities. Look at this slipper of hers, which I have just picked up, and which she lost owing to its being too big for her foot. She was so embarrassed by its loss that she has fled from the palace, leaving it behind." And with that he handed the duke at in white satin slipper. The duke gazed at the slipper in admiration ordered Wilhelm to give it to him and placed it in his pocket.

On the following day the duke sum moned Wilhelm to give it to him and placed it in his pocket.

On the following day the duke sum moned Wilhelm to give it to him and placed it in his pocket.

On the following day the duke sum moned Wilhelm to fis side, asked him more about Elizabeth Grimm, and finally announced his intention of marrying her. Wilhelm was shrewd enough to realize that there would be an immense amount of opposition to the manner as a mount of poposition to the manner as the girl was the average barnyard product; therefore it will pay you to try saving it this winter if you never have done and halter, a pair of tongs, a cross-bar, a cost of grey fur, a nightcape worth one halfpenny, a falcon, one good and one bad knife, and a silver needle for the royal tail, and one halfpenny, a falcon, one good and one bad knife, and a silver needle for the royal tail, and one of grey fur, a not a beauty. So he cleverly explained to the duke that it would appeal to the sentimental and romantic nature of the people of Eisenach if a proclamation were to be issued to the effect that the duke had found so tiny a white satin slipper at his ball, that he was determined upon wedding its. he was determined upon wedding its owner, convinced that there could be-but one person in the world who could boast of such small feet. There were quite a number of claimants for the slipper. But not one of them could show a foot small enough to justify any pretensions to ownership, until Wilhelm directed attention to young Baroness Elizabeth Grimm, who was found in her kitchen, where it was fitted on to her foot. The duke proclaimed her as his bride, and the match, while frowned upon by the nobility, was hailed by the people on account of the fascinating originality of the whole efficient of the whole affair.

Not long after the marriage Wilhelm was raised to the nobility and invested with the office of grand cup bearer, while Cinderella's father, Baron while Cinderella's father, Baron, Grimm, was appointed minister of public instruction, and as such has left some curious works on feminine education and training.

I am sorry to have to add that the marriage did not turn out as delightfully as in the fairy stay. The duch-marriage did not turn out as delightfully as in the fairy story. The duchess developed a degree of autocracy and extravagance that alarmed both the court and the people. When her ally, Wilhelm, ventured to remonstrate, she flew into a passion and caused him to be deprived of his offices. From that moment on he became one of her most bitter enemies and was the prime mover of an insurrection which compelled her husband to abdicate his throne in favor of his brother, and to seek refuge with: band to abdicate his throne in favor of his brother, and to seek refuge with her in London, where she died in relatively straitened circumstances. It is added, though I cannot vouch for the fact, that Wilhelm, when he turned against the duchess, found a useful ally in her chiropodist, who made public the fact that her foot, though phenomenally small, was so by reason of a deformity. Indeed, he actually went so far as to furnish pictures of her foot which convinced the people that a fraud had been practiced upon them. upon them.

The Grimm family is one of the best-

The Grimm family is one of the best known in Germany, and several of its members have made their homes in this country. One of them was tu-tor of Emperor Alexander II. of Rus-sia and of his brothers, while yet an-other was the author of the famous. Fairy Tales.

One very important point was touched upon at the Guelph Winter Fair, that is to say the state of the law in regard to dogs. Most city dwellers imagine that only in the city is the dog out of place, and that upon his native heath in the country he is easentially "man's best friend." But Mr. John Campbell, of Woodville, sweeps that away with one sentence, in which he states that for hundreds of dollars of wealth to the credit of dogs there are millions of dollars to the credit of sheep. Dogs and sheep are largely mutually exclusive, hence the agitation at the Winter Fair. It appears that while there is a law imposing a tax upon dogs, the proceeds of which tax are to go to compensate owners for sheep worried, the townships, upon a petition of 25 residents, may abolish this tax, and the poor man allowed to keep all the mangy, sheep-killing curs he desires. What sheep-raisers and the owners of valuable dogs desire is that this power to abolish taxes be taken from the municipalities and that a heavy tax, say $5 per year, be imposed upon the second dog where two are kept by Dogs In the Country. say $5 per year, be imposed upon the second dog where two are kept by one man. Evidently the city dweller who protests against useless curs has his allies in the country.

Quaint Gifts to Court. With whalebone at £3,000 a tong Queen Alexandra may well hope that one or two of the mightiest beasts may come to shore while the market is firm. Whales cast up on the shores of Great Britain are treasure-trove. The King is granted the head, the Queen the tail—this by an old statute. The purpose of including the Queen is that she may have the whalebone for the got into conversation with her, and was much entertained by her gaucherie, by her absence of pose, and by sic, literature, and of all the arts and accomplishments with which young girls are ordinarily endowed. NOTIGE TO GAS CONSUMERS

NOTIGE TO GAS CONSUMERS

Natural Gas will be turned into the mains of this Company on February 15th next, on and after which date no artificial gas will be supplied. In order to use Natural Gas it will be positively necessary for every gas consumer to have the piping in his house thortoughly tested with a pressure guage at twenty pounds pressure. This is necessary on account of the Natural Gas being delivered at about three times greater pressure than artificial gas.

Michements of the late James McLean here as a long the later of the later James McLean here as a long the later of the later James McLean here as a long the later of the later James McLean h artificial gas.

All stoves or ranges to be used for Natural Gas must have closed tops, and in every case a flue connection must be made from stoves to chimney.

While the manufacturers of gas stoves state that artificial gas stoves cannot be used for natural gas without being entirely rebuilt, it would appear from tests made at this Company's office that the artificial stove may be made serviceable with natural gas, by having a special closed top and flue connection made for the stove. A stove specially made for natural gas and one specially made for artificial gas may be seen by any consumer at this Company's office, both connected with natural gas, where any explanations necessary will be given by the Company's -officers. Any coal range or wood stove may be easily and simply connected by special burner to use natural gas at small expense.

To use Natural Gas for lighting, it will be necessary to use mantles on all jets, since natural gas has practically no illuminating value when used as an open flame.

All connections to stoves or Thot plates must be made with iron pipe, and in no case should rubber or other tubing be used for connections.

While this Company will look after as far as possible, any orders entrusted to its care for connections to stoves, furnaces, base-burners, etc., it will be impossible for the Company, to take care of all its customers, and the public will find all the local dealers and gas fitters ready to take orders.

Consumers are requested to haveltheir work done as rapidrly as possible, so that there will be as little inconvenience as possible when the Natural "Gas is turned on.

At this, the Clerk had objected to taking the position, on the ground that it would be impossible for him to make a report The speaker said that he had then inquired as to why the Council should not have a report from the Speciety. Hr had then asked if Judge Bell, Judge Houston and Crown Attorney Smith were not on the Executive of the Speciety. This was a piece of information he had been unplaced. able to get at. He had no desire to assail the Children's Aid Society.

TAKES NOTHING BACK.

Councillor Johns said that it Councillor Johns said that it was at this juncture that he had mentioned that he knew of a case of exglect. What he had said relative to it he was prepared to back up, and he had nothing to retract.

Mr. Johns claimed that a letter of complaint about the fallen weof complaint about the fallen woman in question, had been sent to the Crown Attorney. The gentleman who Dr. Eruy speke of as approaching him on the street relative to the matter was W. R. Hickey, of Echwell. The matter had been referred to Mr. Hickey to counsel with Dr. Bray, Judge Hou-ton and Crown Attorney Smith. Now it was a difficult ablug to get the sworn evidence Dr. Eray asked for. Fast young women g.t a lot of sympathy, and no one wants to testify against them. They generally have so many friends that it is dangerous to make any move against them, and this case was no exception to the rule.

HAD SHADY HISTORY. HAD SHADY HISTORY.

The girl in question had been accured of many crimes of a petty character. On one occasion she had walked deliberately into one of the hardware stores of the town, stepped behind the counter and extracted a five dollar bill from the till. She had been mixed up in several other shoplifting escapades, and there were other charges against her, in all of which it would be extended in the store of the charges against her, in all of which it would be extended in the store of the secure anyone to give sworn evidence in connection with.

Mr. Johns sajd that during a conversation, with Crown Attorney

Mr. Johns said that during a conversation with Crown Attorney Smith, in Eschwell, that gentleman had told him there was a course open for the securing of evidence against the wayward girl. This cour e lay in getting the Chief of Police of Bothwell, who was familiar with the datas of which she iar with the dates on which she did the pilfering, to tell what he knew, and Thior Googan would be assigned to by an information. M. Johns had afterwards spoken to the Johns had afterwards spoken to the Chief of Police of Enthwell about the marter, and that official had immediately "went up in the air." He wanted to know right off who was trying to "knife" him. The girl's care had even been taken up by some of the ministers of the town.

HAD DEGRADING INFLUENCE. The work of the Children's Aid Speiety, said Mr. John, was a laudable one, if fully carried out, but this was not the only case he could cite. He said that he could mention others, and he was prepared to do so if necessary. This girl's career had a Tegrading influence on the town. There were few other girls who could dress as she could, and it was with a view to preventing her was with a view to preventing her evil influence that, the agitation was started to have her removed. He had told the truth in connection with the affair, though not all the truth, but he could do so fater.

Dr. Bray said that he was never aware of the face, that any clears. aware of the fact that any clergy-men of Eothwell had interested, themselves in the case, and no com-plaint had been made to him by let-

Mr. Johns-I did not mention Dr. Bray's name in connection with the case, and I am not blaming him Furthermore, Mr. Johns said he was not responsible for the publicity which the newspapers had given the care. The Planet, The Banner and The Leadon Free Press had all made conspicuous news of the affair, but of course he was not accountable for what what sensation the papers made of it. It had been published broadcast all over the province, He was not looking for the publicity, nor desirous that the unsavory facts in connection with the affair should get into the public prints.

SOCIETY BLAMELESS.

SOCIETY BLAMELESS.

The Warden hisked if the Children's Aid Sciety did not receive a grant from the Government.

Dr. Bray-We receive no aid from the Government, I would like Mr. Johns to admit that the Society, under the circumstances, are not to blame in this case.

Mr. Johns-I don't think they are. I am sorry these things get out into the public priats, and I don't think that the papers should publish discursion on private matters of this nature. At the same time, I want to repeat that I take nothing back which I said.

On concluding his remarks Mr. Johns was given quite an ovation from his fellow-members at the Board.
